Protests Curbing Bowdoin Athletics

Judge Fogg Voices Opinion Of The Graduates

Alumni are not in sympathy with any plan to curb athletics at Bowdoin, Judge Sanford L. Fogg of the Kennebec Alumni association voiged the sentiments of the graduates when he declared that athletics of the past were the foundation of the splendid standing Bowdoin has today, and he should resist any attempt to sheck athletics at the Brunswick institution. Judge Fogg is an '89 man, the class of President William DeWitt' Hyde, Dr. Frank N. Whittier, Attorney, Little, and others. He constantly maintains a keen interest in all Bowdoin activities, whether in the class room or on the playing field.

Referring to the present day activities at the college while specifing before the Kennebec association this week he said that alumni had read propoganda to the effect that Bowdoin had entered into an arrangement with five or six other colleges whereby the athletic activities of the institution were to be greatly diminished.

"I don't believe a great majority of Bowdoin graduates believe athletics as they exist today and have existed, should be curbed," he declared, adding that it is largely through athletics that Bowdoin spirit has been brought up to the point where it glorifies the college and gives a thrill of pride to Bowdoin men everywhere.

Professor MacMillan On Western Tour

Professor Donald B. MacMillan, the Artic explorer is meeting with great success in his lecture tour through the Middle West. He has talked to 20,000 boys and girls in Detroit, and to capacity houses elsewhere. On March 20 the Chicago Rotary Club gave the explorer a large reception at which he spoke on "Unknown Baffin Land."

In one of the letters received from Professor MacMillan by George F, Carey '88 of Portland, treasurer of the MacMillan Artic Association he writes:

the MacMillan Artic Association he writes:

"Every night is taken up to May 15. Shall be glad to head the Bowdoin North again. I start back East April 2, and shall be glad to see old New England again and the good old State of Maine."

In another letter Professor MacMillan writes that he expects to get away early in June for the North and that he may go as far Etah in Greeland for a series of educational motion pictures.

Blake Will Contest

The contest over the will of the late Hon. Edward H. Blake of Bangor who bequeathed to Bowdoin the sum of $500,000 was settled out of court by the attorneys of the estate and of Mrs. Louis Curtis Smith of New York City, a cousin of Mr. Blake. The amount of settlement, $30,000, was made public on April 5 when formal entry in the case was made in the records of the April term of the Supreme court now in session in Bangor and before which the contest was scheduled to be heard.

Maine Intercollegiate Winter Sports Assn

From Bates came William L. Jarr, Henry A. Rich and Evan A. Woodward, Karl R. Philbrick and Gunnar Bergenstrable represented Bowdoin. Colby sent George E. Jash and Roland Payne, and from Orono came Lloyd G. Hay and Merle C. Niles to replant the relation of the association and Karl R. Philbrick of Bowdoin was selected to be the secretary and treasurer. The association and trained to the events in winter sports for intercollegiate competition and it laid down rules under which the events should be run.

BLANKET TAXES

It's the same old tune, accompanied by words perhaps more interesting this time! Here's the dope: In the Bowdoin Orient of Wednesday, April 18, Anno Domini 1923, will appear a list of names of those who have not paid their Blanket Taxes. This is not a threat—it's a promise. A Fraternity comparative table will also be published at that time. Sunday night, April 15, is the last chance to prevent your name from being published in said list.

N.B.—The stubs attached to the Blanket Taxes which were given out this semester having been all used up, on Thursday afternoon, April 12, new Blanket taxes will be given out at the Managers' Room at Gym from 1.90 to 4.00. Don't fail to replace your old one for the new one, for the new ones are of different color and shape. Presentation of the old one is not necessary at the time of exchange.

All of the lectures will be given in the evening, beginning at 8.15, with the exception of that of Dr. Boxman on April 25, and that of Professor Seymour on April 28, when afternoon sessions will be held. The segres will start Monday, April 16, and continue through Saturday, April 28, when some of the most momentous lectures of the course will be given. The program is as follows:

Monday, April 16—Professor Alfred F. Pribram of the University of Vienna. "Foreign Policy of Austria and Germany from 1986 to 1912."

Wednesday, April 18—Professor William L. Westermann, "Diplomacy of Austria and Germany from 1986 to 1914."

The team to debate Bates has recently been chosen. The debate will be held on May 10, at the City Hall in Lewiston. The subject will be announced later. Bowdoin will be represented by Theodore W. Cousens '23, George E. Hill '24, Athern P. Daggett '25, and Roy M. Fitzmorris '23, alternate.

Cast of Commencement Play Chosen

Trials for the Commencement Play, "Merry Wives of Windsor," were held in Memorial Hall on Wednesday, March 28. A large number tried out for the different parts, and it was with some difficulty that Professors Brown and Davis and President Karl R. Philbrick and Manager Langdon A. Jewett of the Masque and Gown selected the following cast:

BOWDOIN TEAM LOSES FOUR GAMES ON SOUTHERN TRIP

Cold Weather and Lack of Outdoor Practice Prove Costly to the White

With defeats by Fordham, Brooklyn Polytech, Princeton, and West Point, and the game with Columbia cancelled on account of wet grounds, should be said to have had an exactly successful southern trip. The loss of the Fordham, Princeton, and West Point games was due to a considerable extent to the poor pitching of Walker who has as yet been unable to hit his old time bace. In the Brooklyn game Southwick outpitched his opponent and kept the hits scattered. The trip should prove to be excellent practice for the state championship games in the near future.

The White lost its first game of the season to Fordham 6 to 4. The contest was limited to seven innings on account of the cold weather. In fact all college games in Washington were called off on account of the cold. The wildness of Walker, who pitched the first five innings really gave the game to Fordham. Walker gave five passes to first, hit six batsmen and deliered one wild pitch. His battery mate, Morrell, helped the Maroon cause along with three passed balls, On hits Bowdoin had a decided advantage with nine clean safeties to five for Fordham two of which were of the scratch variety. The work of Capt. Schermerhorn at the bat, and Landry in the field however, were no negligible features in Fordham's victory.

Defeat Non-Frats in Rubber 12-6

The Chi Rsis won the interfrateurity basketball championship when, after a fast game with the Non-Frats, they emerged victorious with the score of 12 to 6. The game started off with a crash and remained even to the end of the first half, when the teams were tied with 6 to 6. In the second half however, through superior speed and shooting ability the Chi Psis forged ahead and held the lead to the end of the orang, keeping the Non-Frats from scoring. The Non-Frats missed Needelman, who was not able to play. Burnard, York and Philbrick were the stars for the Chi Psis. Burnard played his usual speedy game, while Philbrick and York were the stellar lights in the shooting and passing end. For the Non-Frats Schwind and Fasso played the best game, Schwind at forward was in the game every moment, and Fasso at guard was largely responsible for stopping several Chi Psi attempts at baskets. Schwind had to temporarily leave the game when he collided with Butler in the second half, but in a few minutes came back as strong as ever.

The Public Service Of Edwin U. Curtns

Many small subscriptions are sought for the proposed Edwin U. Curtis memorial, to be placed on the Curtis memorial, to be placed on the Charles river esplanade on the axis of Clorendon street, in the belief that thousands of Bay state citizens will be giad to aid in honoring the late commissioner of police in Boston, former mayor and park commissioner.

A description, of the memorial, given by Guy Lowell the architect, says that in execution it contemplates the use of only such materials as are worthy and enduring, modeled potiently by hand to the delicate adjustment of proportions and profiles characteristic of the highest grade of architectural sculpture.

Foundations will be of stone correcte supported upon piles. The visible superstructure will be of handwrought light pink marble urn of imposing scale and and graceful sin turn surmounted by a marble urn of imposing scale and and graceful silhouette.

The pedestals are flanked by two generous exedrae, through which the path extending the northwesterly end of Clarendon street proceeds to the basin esplanade.

Appropriate inscriptions will decorate the approach faces of the pedestals, while carefully restricted plantations of shrubbery will form agreeable backgrounds where needed.

A good beginning has been made in securing the $40,000 fund needed to complete the memorial. It is the desire of friends and associates of Curtis, who have assumed the task of carrying the project to completion, that (Continued on Page 2)

Inability of High Schools to Give Proper Fit for College
In the old days the boy who was going to college took courses in high school that prepared him for college. He was given to understand that the academic highway he had elected to travel was a difficult one and that progress could be made only at the expense of hard intellectual labor. He got himself in the habit of working. Then when he entered college he was abie to keep on working. Today the high school course, even for those who have it in mind to continue their education in the higher institutions, has too many soft spots. The boy who have in sisted that almost any subject they teach shall be accepted for admission to colleges. And in varying degree the various colleges have acquiesced. But the colleges have acquiesced. But the colleges have acquiesced, thereby assigning to themselves a task not unlike that confronting a factory which tries to make $5000 automobiles out of the parts which belong in a Ford.

How Electrical Engineering began

T IS not enough to ex-periment and to observe in scientific research. There must also be in-tion. Take the cases of terpretation. Take Galvani and Volta.

One day in 1786 Galvani touched Oneday in 1786 Galvani touched with his metal instruments the nerves of a frog's amputated hind legs. The legs twitched in a very life-like way. Even when the frog's legs were hung from an iron railing by copper hooks, the phenomenon persisted. Galvani knew that he was dealing with electricity but concluded that the frog's legs had in some way generated the current.

Then came Volta, a contemporation

Then came Volta, a contemporary, who said in effect: "Your interpretation is wrong. Two different metals in contact with a moist nerve set up currents of electricity. I will prove it without the aid of frog's legs."

Volta piled disks of different metals one on top of another and separated the disks with moist pieces of cloth. Thus he gene-rated a steady current. This was the "Voltaic pile"—the first bat-tery, the first generator of electricity.

Both Galvani and Volta were careful experimenters, but Volta's correct interpretation of effects gave us electrical engineering.

Napoleon was the outstanding figure in the days of Galvani and Volta. He too possessed an active interest in science but only as an aid to Napoleon. He little imagined on examining Volta's crude battery that its effect on later civilization would be fully as profound as that of his own dynamic personality.

The effects of the work of Gal-vani and Volta may be traced through a hundred years of elec-trical development even to the latest discoveries made in the Re-search Laboratories of the Gansearch Laboratories of the General Electric Company.

At the end of his Junior year in High School, he tried most of the final examinations for College, and passed them, although some of the language subjects covered were much more advanced than he had ever taken. His father felt, however, that he was too young to enter College, so he kept him in High School to graduate with his class, but in the meantime, at the same time, he took a special course in Colllege and was on the Editorial Board of the Bowdoin Orient, thus serving one year longer on that board than any other editor ever did.

He was in the City Government for the City of Portland as a member of the Common Council of Ward Seven for two years, but declined re-election in order to enter the World War.

During the World War he received special taining in the Anti-Aircraft Branch and was in command of Battery Bof the 7th Battalion as Captain. He was exceedingly popular with his officers and men, and at the mustering out of the battery was presented a gold watch which he always treasured.

Before his service with the Industrial Accident Commission he was employed in the office of the Attorney General of the State for some months. He was one of the first members of the Bowdoin Alumni Council. In New York he was law clerk of Judge Hand of U. S. District Court.

Private services were held at his residence in Portland, March 10, Rev. H. S. Bradley. Flags on city hall, by direction of the Governor, on Portland Club and posts in Portland of American Legion and Veterans Foreign Wars were at half mast.

His brothers Clement F., of Portland (Bowdoin 1903) and Dwight S., of Dupont, Washington (Bowdoin 1907), also survive him.

PRINCETON GAME

PRINCETON GAME

Princeton won from Bowdoin 7 to 1 in a rather listless contest. Townsend who pitched for the Tigers held the Housermen to four scattered hits. It would appear that Princeton has some kind of perpetual jinx on Bowdoin because the score was the same as that of last year's game.

Walker started on the mound for Bowdoin but was sent to the showers after three innings of his wildness which resulted in three tallies. Johnson succeeded him.

Morrell scored the White's lone son succeeded him.

Morrell scored the White's lone tally in the initial frame when he walked, took second on an infield out and crossed home plate on Small's single to centerfield. In the first inning, three Tigers were walked and Captain Jefffries was hit, forcing in Gorman. In the second frame, a walk, error and safety filled the bags and Townsend was forced in when Smith walked and Barry was forced in when Captain Jeffries was hit by a pitched ball for the second time.

The Army won by a score of 14 to 11. The game was an exhibition of free hitting and numerous errors on both sides. In the opening stanza Stork of the Army drove out a homer over Needelman's head and scored two runners ahead of him.

Walker was replaced by Johnson, and Bowdoin began to pile up runs, taking the lead until in the sixth Stevenson of the Army scored Lancaster with the 12th run for the cadets. After this Bowdoin was unable to score, but the Army got two more counters in the eighth.

INSTITUTE OF HISTORY OPENS WITH ADDRESS BY DR. PRIBRAM

President Sills Explains Aims In Introductory Address Large Audience Hears Noted Historian

Artheopening of the Institute of Modern History marked the beginning of the first and only of the kind ever conducted by any American college or university. The lectures will continue until April 28.

In the opening of his address, President Sills read letters of endorsement from President Warren G. Harding and Secretary of State Charles E. Hughes, and messages of interest and approval of Lord Robert Cecil and the ambassadors of Great Britain and France. He said that through the presence of speakers from Greece and Austria-Hungary international relations were to be made stronger through the knowledge of each other. President Sills' address follows:

We are inaugurating our Institute of Modern History this evening not only with the endorsement of President Harding and Secretary Hughes, whose letters I have just read, but with cordial messages of interest and approval from Lord Robert Cecil and from the ambassadors to this country of the friendly nations—Great Britain and France. And these greetings with the presence at the Institute of speakers from Greece and from Austria-Hungary indicate the importance of international amity. As President Harding wrote in his letter—"Undoubtedly we shall have from this time forward a much more adequate conception of the essential unity of the whole story of mankind." Historians in colleges and universities have emphasized such a point of view for some time past; but it has not yet been sufficiently grasped by other teachers of history or by the public in general.

The Bowdoin Institute of Modern History has three main objects. In the first place it is an experime, it in education. Here are afforded opportunities in lectures and conferences conducted by men of international reputation to study some of the important problems now confronting the world. But there is no compulsion on the students to attend; no grades are given; no work is required. The fact that the opportunity to take part in the round table discussions has been most eagerly grasped by the undertaking the college

Lecturer Announced For Saturday Afternoon

K. P. Tholainos of New York, formerly private secretary to Verizelos when the latter was Premier of Greece, has been secured to give a lecture at the Institute of Modern History on April 21 in the afternoon, Hissubject will be "Greece and the Near East." Through his relations with the Paris Peace Conference which he attended as a member of the Greek delegation and with Premier, Venizolos, Mr. Tholainos is an authority on the Near East with especial reference to Greece. He has spent part of his life in Armenia, having graduates' from McGill University in Montreal and later taking a course at Columnia University.

Athletic Council Meeting

In the second place the Institute emphasizes the importance, so far as the undergraduates are concerned, of interest in what is going on in the world today. All of us who are older hope with all our hearts that the coming generation will solve some of the great international problems that we have botched. A college would not be true to its high mission did it not suggest that the study of international relations and of our national story is a necessary part of any formal education to the third place, in the Institute the College is endeavoring to make its contribution to the community at large and, to the building up of a proper public opinion in peace, an object as necessary as the defense of vital principles in times of war. The College is not, of course, responsible for the varied opinions and suggestions that will be offered here. They must be tested and assessed. But by opening these lectures to all who care to come, the College is calling the attention of the community to the need of a careful and intelligent study of international problems to the end that the United States backed by enlightened on the community of the need opinion may in our day and generation make its proper contribution to all efforts devised to promote peace, to outlaw war and to help in the progress of the world.

The letter read by President Sills at the opening of his address received from Secretary of State Charles E. Hughes, is printed in full below. The letter from President Harding appeared in a recent issue of the "Orient". Secretary Hughes' letter: My dear President Sills:

I have received your letter of March seventh and highly appreciate the invitation to give an address before the Institute of Modern History which you propose to conduct at Bowdoin College. I am in cordial sympathy with this undertaking and I wish that I could have the opportunity to meet with the members of the Institute but the my engagements for that time absolutely forbid. New System of Voting Suggested By Bowdoin

mes To Represent Undergraduates at Intercollegiate Conference— Student Body Vote On Blanket

By Bowdoin

"Resolved, that the proposal of President Harding that the United States should join the World Court merits the approval of this assembly" is the question upon which Bowdoin will debate Bates in the Lewiston City Hall on May 10th. Bowdoin will uphold the negrative side.

The members of the Bowdoin debating team are Theodore W. Cousens 23, George E. Hill '24, Athern P. Daggett '25, and Roy M. Fitzmorris '23, alternate. The Bates team which has been recently announced includes Edwin D. Canham '25 of Auburn, Theodore R. Pinchney '23 of Washington, D. C., and William E. Young '24 of Lewiston.

Bowdoin made a suggestion that a vote be taken in any suitable manner by the audience on the merits of the question before the actual debate. The audience should be grouped: those for the question, those against and those uncertain. Another such ballot should be taken after the debate. The idea of this plan, which is somewhat similar to the Oxford plan of judging, is to determire in some measure the effectiveness of the debate.

Masque And Gown legiate Conference on Undergraduate Activities at the University of Pennsylvania on April 27 and 28.

At this meeting the Council voted to enforce rigidly the provision of the constitution of the A.S.B.C. which reads that no man may represent the College in any activity of the A.S.B.C. unless he has paid his blanket tax. It was also voted to have the student body vote on the proposition that the blanket tax be placed on the term bill. In the opinion of the Council the football game which is scheduled with Norwich University next fall should not be transferred to Portland. The Council also recommended to the Faculty with regard to a possible elimination of final examinations for men obtaining a certain grade.

Masque And Gown

Large and appreciative audiences greeted the Masque and Gown in both Gardiner and Skowhegan during the past week end. Presenting "Her Husband's Wife," a sparkling farce in three acts and last year's Ivy Play, on April 12, under the auspices of the Gardiner Girls' Club and under the auspices of Skowhegan High School on April 13. The Masque and Gown scored two big hits and held up its past record. Those who made the trip and were in the cast were Langdon A. Jewett '24, Clarence D. Rouillard '24, George H. Coach Magee feels that such a large turnout is an excellent tribute to him and to his system of coaching and training. The men were divided into four groups according to their various specialties, and for three days had their training on the Maine street mall. By Friday, Whittier Field was in good enough condition to allow the men to work there. Because of the rather cold weather, however, Coach Magee, has not yet given any hard workouts. He feels that with proper amount of co-operation on the part of the candidates, the team will be ready and fit to give an excellent account of itself at the Maine Intercollegiate meet at Orono May 12. From now on the men will be given numerous time trials in their various events, and it will be from these trials that the track authorities will be able to secure much advance dope on the State Meet. The Freshman class has produced several promising athletes who can bearwatching. These boys have worked hard and have trained faithfully all winter and now the results of their work are becoming more and more apparent.

Because of the fact that Whittier Field has been covered with snow and ice, outdoor training has been greatly retarded this year. As a result, the squad has been forced to continue its indoor training of the winter. The outdoor track is now in fairly good condition, however, and intensive work on it will begin at once.

Meet Arranged With Holy Cross Final arrangements have been made with Holy Cross for a meet on May 5. This meet, held in conjunction with the Bowdoin-Maine baseball game, promises to be of great interest. It is not only the first meet of the year, but it is also, in a way, Bowdoin's final examination before the Maine Intercollegiates. In Holy Cross, Bowdoin weds a formidable opponent. Our runners will meet real competition in every event as Holy Cross, has some excellent dash men, several good quarter-milers, and some fast half-milers and milers. In the field events the outlook is indeed bright. Without doubt competition in t

The Institute of Modern History has started under particularly happy auspices which seem to argue well for its success. This is, without question, one of the greatest, if not the greatest undertaking upon which the college has ever set out. in the interest shown in it by the great political and diplomatic leaders of our country. Enthusiasm among the members of the college is evidently at a high point, if attendance at the lectures thus far, and enrollment in the Round Table conferences are criteria. We of the present college generation are unusually fortunate in being able to have a part in so great an educational program. One of the greatest difficulties of the college has always been to provide sufficient influences for broadening the viewpoint of the student. In a small college the faculty can not be sufficiently large in include more than two or three professors in each department, and thus, however fair the professors may be, the instruction can not but be rather closely confined to the viewpoint of the instructor. The fact is in no way a depreciation of the value of the work of the individual professor, but it simply shows the situation.

The field of modern history is a broad and intensely interesting one, opening as it does the whole question of present day diplomacy and governmental policy. It is difficult for the student to grasp from his general reading and experience the solid realities of what is going on in the world, particularly in foreign countries where he has no opportunity to know from actual investigation what the situations truly are. In addition to that fact, the student can not be expected of himself to attain all at ance to the thons truly are. In addition to that fact, the student can not be expected of himself to attain all at once to the possession of an international view-point unless his thought is directed to some extent by men who thoroughly know the trend of affairs of state in other countries, as well as the facts of the present inter-relations of nations. Bowdoin is to be particularly constituted as the facts of the present inter-relations of nations.

By Dr. Pribram

| Professor Bell encertained the undergraduate and faculty members of the last dechile. These men are entirely 'capable' to present the thoughtful viewpoints' of many different nations. Some of those viewpoints will of necessity clash with those of the men who attend the lectures and conferences, and this fact is one of the best of the Institute. Provincialism in modern society is a condition of mind almost insupportable. The world has so changed in the last generation or so, facilities of communication have been so tremendously increased, that the world is at our door. We have but to look about us by means of independent search, but by intinate participation in the great events which have made the history of the last decade. These

THE BOWDOIN ORIENT to realize this fact. Never before in the history of mankind were the peoples of the earth so closely associated in actual space association; never before were opportunities so great for the expansion of an international con-sciousness, yet even now trifling bick-erers hold the nations from closer as-sociation of mind and purpose, as well another. The world has expanded, grown small, and in so doing it come to present vast international blems. To meet those problems problems. To meet those p there must be developed among the people of the world, particularly among the educated young men who will in time be the leaders of the people, a broader conception of international relations. No better way has been yet suggested than that of so al-together splendid an educational pro-gram as the Institute of Modern History here at Bowdoin offers,

Communication

Editor of the "Orient":

May I request a little space in the "Orient" for the following communication. It has, I believe, an element of interest for all Bow doin men:

In the Harvard Union tonight, in a sociation of mind and purpose, as well as of mere geographical boundaries.

The time has come for the development of cordiality among the nations of all the world in their relations with distinguished and impressive talks I

Bowdoin scored twice, notably and nobly scored. It was one of the most the dided, it it it it was an extra-curriculum talk, yet the students fairly filled the immense hall of the Union Far as I sat from the platform, yet could I distinguish down front two Harward Deans and her former President. The speaker was Professor Bliss Perry.

It was a wonderful talk which I hope may be reported in full that every Bowdoin man may read, read for two reasons: that he may understand about teaching as a profession; but primarily that he may understand about teaching as a profession; but primarily that he may understand and appreciate how hallowed is the thought and pervasive the influence of Bowdoin and her men in the circles of humane and illutrious scholars. Twice Professor Perry, with the colleges of all America to draw on for two of Bowdoin's teachers: President Hyde and Professor Woodruff.

In touching on the practical aspects of the did teaching, Professor Perry recounted almost in detail President Hyde's findings from his circular to the Bowdoin alumni some fifteen years ago. Farther on in the speech, of the three examples of the ideal teacher, he mentioned our own Professor Woodruff as one; showed how Professor Woodruff as one; showed would every Bowdoin man, at the prominent position Bowdoin held in that dignified discourse.

I wish to make no homily of this communication; and a few observations which I am going to make, are, I trust, not impertinent here. Bowdoin has been a great little college; but her influence and glory are not all of the past. There are, doubtless, among her present teachers those who in years to come will be extolled no less fervently than many of her illustrious leaders of the past. You undergraduates are before them now. Comparisons are not only odious, but dangerous—we are unduly prone to set up one thing as a foil for the other,—yet we cannot help but make comparisons. I conceived a love for literature at Bowdoin; and I have come to the University most famed today for its literary instructions. It deserves its present fame, and more; but Bowdoin suffers not a jot by comparison. Take certain plays: here I study them as fine plays and superb poetry; at Bowdoin I studied them as the plays and superb poetry, but also as an interpretation of life. There is much to be said for the simplicity of treatment here; set the vital interest the presentation at Bowdoin provoked in me, here I somehow lack. This however; is but a detail; yet on the whole, Gentlemen, to put it bluntly, Bowdoin is not surpassed. Are you aware of it? Or are you indifferent to influences whose value, to your shame and regret, you will later learn from a distant stranger?

Albert Thayer '22

The Lafayette College varsity debating team, coached by Albert R. Thayer '22, recently received an unanimous decision in a three-cornered debate with Hamilton and Union Colleges. This victory is the most notable forensic triumph in the last college generation and the Lafayette teams set a new record in the Triangular Debate League founded four years ago. This victory has also caused a tremendous revival of interest in debating at Lafayette.

Editorially commenting on the debate "The Lafayette," the newspaper of Lafayette College, says, "The Lafayette-Hamilton debate last Friday night stands out as an epoch making event in the history of extra-curriculum activities at this college. Debating at last has come into its own at Lafayette. The event of Friday night ought to establish it firmly as an activity commanding the interest and support of the entire undergraduate body. In developing a championship debating team Coach Thayer has done a signal thing for Lafayette. Lafayette debaters have enterged from thes lump into which they fell some years ago. Lafayette stands at the dawn of a new day."

At a meeting of Pi Delta Epsilon, national honorary journalistic fraternity, held on Thursday evening of last week, plans were discussed for the coming year. The five men who have become eligible to membership through recent elections were voted into the club. The men are Blatchford '24, business manager of the Bowdoin Publishing Company; Watson '24, chairman of the Quill Board; Rouillard '24, editor-in-chief of the Bugle and member of Bear Skin Board; Tolman '25 and Perkins '25, managing editors of the Orient.

A report of the recent national convention recently held at Union College was also read.

Who Is My Neighbor?" Text Of President's Address

"Who is my neighbor?" Upon this text President Sills delivered the Chapel address last Sunday afternoon. This question, the President said, is very much akin to that other oft-repeated query of "Am I my brother's keeper?", a query that has been made the world over for centuries. And it has taken the people of the world centuries to understand that they are their brother's keeper and to find out just who their neighbors are. We can no longer, the President went ont to say, find any excuse for believing our neighbors to people in the uttermost parts of the earth. We must realize what is perfectly patent, that the world is growing smaller and smaller and that we cannot longer disregard the people of foreign lands, even though they may lie beyond broad seas. When we can sit quietly in New England and converse with other Americans in Texas, when we can relay messages across the oceans, we must realize that the whole world is our neighbor. Nowadays a man who has travelled over one hundred and fifty miles in an automobile in an afternoon can scarcely believe that his father, who had only journeyed one hundred miles from home, was looked upon in his day as a travelled man. Can there be longer any question as to who our neighbors are?

Although the physical neighborliness of the world has grown by leaps and bounds, although it is still growing hour by hour, we must be forced to concede that the spiritual neighborliness has not grown correspondingly. We will find, if we pause to consider, that human nature is still much the same as it was when Jesus Christ was alive, and that, in spite of the fact that mankind is being brought steadily closer together, men are no more concerned with the welfare of their neighborliness has not grown correspondingly. We will find, if we pause to consider, that human nature is still much the same as it was when Jesus Christ was alive, and that, in spite of the fact that mankind is being brought sevening the consideration of the problem in its application here. Tennis Schedule Announced Bowdoin Representatives

Dual Meets With Bates, Colby, And Wesleyan

The tennis schedule for the coming season has been announced and will undoubtly be played as follows:

May 7—Colby at Waterville.

May 10-11—State. Intercollegiate Tournament at Brunswick.

May 19—Wesleyan at Middletown.

May 21, 22, 23—New England Intercollegiate Tournament at Bston.

Arrangements are in progress for a match with the Augusta Country Club, which will probably be played May 1st.

With three veteran men in Captain which will probably be played May 1st.

With three veteran men in Captain Bishop, Lord, and Young, there is the nucleus of a team that should come through the season with more than average success. There is a large amount of material to pick the remaining one or two to fill out the team. From the prospects at present and with a fair amount of practice the team should be able to hold its own against any team in the State. Colby will undoubtedly furnish the hardest competition, having Captain Sackett and ex-Captain Gow both playing this year. This is the same pair that won the singles and doubles championship of the state last year.

Undergraduate Conference

At a meeting of the Bowdoin Publishing Company last week Blatchford '24 was elected chairman and Watson '24, secretary for the coming year. Rowe '24 and Blatchford '24 were elected delegates to represent the Bowdoin publications at the Second Biennial Conference on Undergraduate Affairs to be held on April 26, 27, 28, at the University of Pennsylvania. Eames '23 will represent the student body. The purpose of the conference is clearly seen in its title, that is to discuss and if possible arrive at some definite solution of the problems that are facing the undergraduate bodies of the American colleges. The first of this series of conferences was held at the Massachusetts Institute of Technology in 1921, and proved unusually successful. It is confidently expected that many of Bowdoin's undergraduate problems will find their final solution in this conference.

Dr. Gray Will Speak Under Auspices Of Y. M. C. A.

Auspices Of 1. M. C. A.

Dr. A. Herbert Gray, a famous minister of Glasgow, Scotland, will lecture under the auspices of the Bowdoin Y.M.C.A. in Memorial Hall on May 3 and 4. Dr. Gray is now on tour arranged by the Y.M.C.A., speaking at Harvard, Bowdoin and other leading colleges in the United States and Canada. The Bowdoin Y.M.C.A. is very fortunate in securing Dr. Gray because he is available to only a limited number of Colleges, He will speak on several of the following subjects: "Industrial Situation," "What's the Good of Religion?", "What are Fundamentals?", "The Secret of Power," "The Relations of Men and Women." A New York alumins has recently written to Pres. Sills, complimenting the College on the conduct of the base-ball team. He says:

"I can not resist the impulse which keeps coming back to me, to speak to you about our boys of the baseball team. The Bowdoin team has recently spent a week at the Hotel Westminster, where Mrs. M. and I are at present living. You would be very much pleased if you could have heard the favorable comments which were made by the ouests of the hotel. The boys were at all times quiet, dignified and gentlemanly in manner. Bowdoin To Be Represented Musical Clubs' Trip On Links By Golf Team

For the first time in her history, Many owdoin will have a golf team. Plans For the first time in her history, Bowdoin will have a golf team. Plans are being made to place a team in the field this spring to compete with other college teams and country club organizations, and already, due largely to the untiring efforts of the promoters of the scheme, an attractive schedule has been arranged which includes several trips to Boston and one trip to Hanover, N. H. A college tournament has also been planned for the purpose of selecting the men who will represent Bowdoin on the links. This tournament, scheduled for the 23rd, 24th and 25th of April, will be of the handicap variety,—the handicaps to be based on the comparative scores turned in by entrants before the play begins. A tentative handicap list has been posted on the bulletin board, but this is subject to change. All those who desire to compete in the tournament should hand their names to Harry Keany '23. The entry list is open to any man in college who hands in a score on which his handicap may be based.

There is no reason why, with the material at hand, Bowdoin should not cap may be based.

There is no reason why, with the material at hand, Bowdoin should not rightfully expect to be able to place a creditable team on the links. With such men as Pierce, Fasso, Richards, and others equally as good, the college has the nucleus of a respectable team, with the prospects of making a favorable showing in the majority of the matches.

The first townserve with the prospects of matches.

The first tournament will be Satury, April 21, with Martindale C. C. Brunswick.

at Brunswick.

The schedule, though it may seem at first glance rather pretentious, is an excellent one. Of special note are the matches which have been arranged with Massachusetts Tech, with Brown, and with Dartmouth. A match with Harvard also seems likely, although final negotiations on this matter have not been completed. Besides these colleges several country clubs appear on the schedule,—such as Brunswick, Augusta, and Portland.

Letters Of Praise Received After New York Trip

After New York Trip

The recent concert tour conducted by the Bowdoin Musical Clubs during the Easter holidays proved to be one of the most successful trips yet undertaken. Even the Boston trip, which took place earlier in the season and which was considered at the time to be anusually successful, was less noteworthy than the trip which has just been completed. At every concert in which the Musical Clubs appeared on this last tour, they were well received by large, appreciative audiences, all of which were unanimous in their praise of the quality of singing exhibited. The program at each of the concerts was essentially the same as that presented during the Boston trip. The popularity of the Musical Clubs concerts this year may be attributed in no small measure to the excellently composed program which they have chosen. Never before in the history of the Musical Clubs has there been an 'effort to present a program consisting of selections of such a high order, and the fact that the Clubs have succeeded so well this year argues well for future endeavors.

The first concert of the tour took place in Beverly on Tuesday evening, April 3. A joint program had been arranged with the Beverly Men's Singing Club, an organization which sang at Bowdoin in the fall. After the concert, there was a ball which was followed by the formal presentation of a scholarship fund raised by the Beverly Club for worthy boys at Bowdoin. On the next evening, the Clubs appeared in Newton Center, Mass. Like the first concert, this proyed to be very successful. The program was presented by the Big Glee Club and the Instrumental Club travelled on to New York, where the third concert of the trip was presented on Thursday evening at the Hotel Plaza under the auspices of the New York alumin and the State of Maine society. The program was carried of very well before a good audience. The concert in Philadelphia, which took place at the Hotel Adelphia on the following evening proved to be one of the season of the seaso

The last appearance of the Clubs was at the Crescent Athletic Club in Brooklyn on Saturday evening, April 7. The program took the form of a dinner concert, which was most favour ably received.

The Easter trip concludes the schedule of long tours for this year. There will be, however, a concert given on to one of the most successful seasons ever experienced by the Bowdoin Mussical Clubs. This concert will be followed by an informal dance in the gymnasium. The Clubs should be given the heartiest of congratulations and the greatest approbation for the excellent work that they have done this year,—work that has never before been done by any Bowdoin musical organization, and the college and the students should give their whole-the hearted support to these representatives of Bowdoin who are doing a substitution through the favorable impressions which they have created upon their various appearances. Perhaps the best way in which the favorable impression created by the Musical Clubs can be expressed is by quoting the following letter written by H. L. SECOND TEAM GAME

In a one-sided but interesting game he second team bowed to Westbrook Seminary last Saturday to the tune of 9 to 1. Bowdoin's lone tally came in the Isint inning after Bowker drove but I a two-bagger, went to third on Pettingill's single, and crossed the plate on Spear's sacrifice. The pitching of Holston, the seminary moundman, was the main obstacle in Bowdoin's way. For five innings he held lowdoin hitless. Although the field work of the second team surpassed that of the seminary boys, it must be admitted that the latter outclassed our stickmen in hitting. For four innings Bowdoin held their opponents to one run, but in the fifth frame, Westbrook started a rally which resulted in an addition of three runs to their credit. While both teams were making many errors, the team work was for the most part good. Both Stalford and Hildreth did creditable work in the box. Williams, at left field, perform-

Batting and Fielding Averages on Southern Trip

A recent tabulation of the batting and fielding averages of the White team on its recent Southern trip yields several interesting facts concerning the performances of many of the players during the trip. The records show that Small had the highest batting average, it being .375, while Needleman is second in the list with an average of .333. The men on the trip who maintained averages of .250 or over in batting are the following.

Masque and Gown To Play in Portland

Next Saturday evening, April 28th, the Masque and Gown will present, under the auspices of the Bowdoin Club of Portland, "Her Husband's Wife" in Frye Hall at 8 o'clock.

Before the play a reception and dinner to President and Mrs. Sills will be givent at the Congress Square Hotel at six o'clock. This is the final event of the Bowdoin Club's most successful season and at this time two precedents will be broken: For the first time ladies will join the club in a Bowdoin dinner, and also for the first time the Masque and Gown will appear in Portland, directly sponsored by Bowdoin alumni and friends. "It is righ time that both events occurred," says Don J. Edwards '16 of the Executive Committee of the Club.

Martindale Country Club

The Bowdoin golf team opened its season in most auspicious fashion last Saturday afternoon when it overwhelmingly defeated the Martindale Country Club by winning five out of the required six matches. Bowdoin experienced but little difficulty in coming out on top in the five matches which was lost only after Beals had given Bonney, his opponent, a hard fight which was carried to the ineteenth green. Beals was handicapped in his match due to the fact that he had been unable to secure as much preliminary practice as his teammates, and was therefore not playing his usual game. The remaining matches were as a whole rather one-sided, with Bowdoin taking all the honors. The results were most gratifying to those interested in seeing golf come into its own at Bowdoin, and such a splendid start argues well for the success of the team in future matches.

of the leading Austro-Hungarian statesmen had taken the direction indicated by geographical conditions.

In this Austria had to reckon the opposition of Russia, which with the pressing back of Turkish influences, had become her great rival in southern Europe. In order to maintain herself as a great power, make her frontier secure against hostile attacks, and suffer no restriction of her further development, she could not allow another great power to command the Danube and its estuary and arrogate to itself the hegemony of the Balkans peoples. This political and economic opposition between the Hapsburg monarchy and Russia was reinforced by rivalry of ethical and cultural nature. In view of this struggle against a competitor far superior in population and military strength, Austrian statesmen had sought an alliance or understanding with those European states whose interests appeared to run parallel with their own."

Professor Pribram's Second Lecture Professor Pribram took for the subject of his second lecture "Diplomacy of Austria and Germany during the War," which he divided into two questions: First, Was the European balance of power menaced by Germany before the outbreak of the World War; and What effect had the issue of the results of the war upon the system of European alliances and upon the continuance of the European balance of power.

He described the strength of Germany in army, fleet and commerce, backed up by the boastful utterances of Kaiser William and the Germany littles to their side. He concluded with the statement That no one European nations.

In the course of his lecture he referred to documents in the secret archives of the Austrian government to

The Quill.

A few weeks ago mention was made in the Orient of a new system of circulation to be used by the Bowdoin Publishing Company, which would combine the Orient and Quill for purposes of circulation. The plan has now gone into effect, since the last issue of the Quill, that for April, enjoyed a circulation more than louble its former mark. There has as yet been very little general discussion of the question heard on the campus, but it seems wholly advisable at this time that a complete explanation of the circumstances leading to the adoption of the scheme be made.

The Quill, after having presented a rather deplorable picture of decadency for the past several years, is at last renascent. The quality of the publications of the publication of the pub tion has been for months of a very ex-renascent. The quality of the publication has been for months of a very excellent character, so much so, in fact, that the doubts of those who feared for the continuation of this magazine have been largely stilled. From the standpoint of literary excellence, then, the future of the Quill is more than usually bright. Unfortunately, however, that is not the only standpoint from which the possibilities of the magazine must be viewed!

The nature of the keallege literary publication is traditionally such that its sole source of income is its subscriptions, paid either personally or through the general A.S.B.C. fund appropriation. There is, or at least has been, very little opportunity for adding to the income of the Quill by opening one or two pages to advertisers. This, of itself would augment the treasury but little, but two pages of advertising would be; a considerable help in relieving the burdent of heavy printing costs. If this plan is approved, it will be brought into use in the near future, to come to the assistance of the income from the subscription list. And it is the subscription list which is just now of greater interest.

During most of its history, the ex-

During most of its history, the expenses of the Quill, in excess of its income, have been paid fron the Publishing Company's funds. This policy has proved very expensive, and has accomplished little in adding the Quill to the independent financial basis toward which it should be trending. The present plan was suggested as a means of extending the subscription lists of both papers, with a view both to the present and to the future. The plan for the present is to adequately finance the publications, that for the future is to so successfully introduce the literary magazine that may eventually by its own appea extend its circulation. There is not desire on the part of the management to foist either publication upon an unwilling subscriber. In many instances, subscribers to the Quill have been for a long time subscribers also to the Orient, and vice versa, but this is not by any means true in all cases. The change in

6. In the Arab sector conflicting ambitions of France and England have rendered it ineffective. The hold which France and the British Empire have over the Arabs may reasonably be expected to remain into the near or distant future. Whether this will be to the good or to the harm of the Arab peoples depends upon the intelligent liberalism of the two powers in their administration of the vitiated mandates which they hold.

We live in a period of disillusion. Among those things which characterize our post war mood, is a mustrust of the diplomacy which permitted the Great War to arise and has been unable to minister successfully to the neweconomic and political ailments which the war left behind in various vital parts of the world's anatomy.

One must, in fairness to the diplomats, recognize that their task of readjustment after the war was much too heavy for their powers. The war, and the promises which war diplomacy has bred, had aroused a hundred diverse desires of freedom among peoples big and peoples little. Conflicting within themselves, many of these must of necessity be repressed. Some of them could be, and were, satisfied, and some partially satisfied. In Europe itself the boundary and territory decisions which have resulted from the Peace Conference and its Commissions have shown a permanency which is on the whole astonishing. Regarding the economic readjustment much less can be said. Diplomats do not heal it. The boundary decisions made in 1919 may be deceptive in their appearance of permanency. The exhaustion of forces brute force able to enforce such decisions. After the war the powers concerned had not the requisite internal strength to carry out their plans.

The post-war of the 'Allies is one reason for the complete brask down of the Treaty with Turkey, called the Treaty of Sevres and signed upon August 10; 1920. It has never received the sanction of the Turkish Parliament, a necessary stop in its ratificanation. This has expressed itself in the Tashkilat Milli, or Nationalist Organization. The guiding hand and the guiding mind of this organization has been one Mustapha Kemal Pasha. The Turkish Nationalist movement is only a manifestation of a number of symptoms. In as ense, therefore, it has never been a treaty. The second reason lies in the unsuspected strength which the Turks have found in a new feeling, the feeling that they were a free movement in the Near East, the last to appear and the most successful. It is in this setting alone that it may, be fully understood.

Almost any person who writes or speaks with authority upon the problems of the Near East will approach these from a definite angle and with certain preconceptions. The outstanding points of approach are four:

The first is that approach which justifies Western imperalisin on the plea that we of the West are the most highly civilized peoples of the world of today and have, in our Western Christian culture, goods of civilization which warrant us in ruline the peoples of the Near East, and making them accept these good things. In return for these boons, Western peoples dake the raw-products of the countries which are being civilized—at the lowest prices which it can get them for. This is the "commercial-imperialist" attitude.

The second angle of approach is highly idealistic. Its foundations lie in the same theory of the superiority of western culture. It has, in actual practice, necessarily been associated with the commercial-imperialistic attitude just described. It may be called the religious-educational approach. The work of its agents has been characterized by a high devotion of duty. And it produced, in Dr. Roward Bliss, former head of the Christian-Syrian College at Beirut, who died at Saranac Lake in May, 1921, one of the great Americans of the past generation.

The third attitude is one of Convinced Anti-imperialism on moral grounds and grounds of general advantage. This view is the one-held by the Socialist parties of Furope and, I judge, theoretically by the LaborParty in the British Isles and dominions.

The victory of Egyptian Nationalism seems to lie in these three causes: in the reality and strength of the new nationalist movement in the Near East; in the hazardous economic situation of Britain which checks the expensive luxury of imperial expansion, and in the strength of the more liberal elements in British governmental circles, as represented in men like Lord Robert Cecil and General Allenby.

The Nationalist Movement in Persia takes on a different color from that among the Arabs of Syria, Mesopotamia and desert Arabia, because Persia has had a long tradition of independence as a unified country broken only by three periods of subjection to foreign dynasties. The Nationalist Party in Persia took its stand upon a platform of hostility to foreign demination, though not the resistant accredited from the Persian government and strongly Nationalistic in its

of the American government that they they really did not have a look in. Negotiations were at the same tine going on with the British government at London which resulted in the AngloPersian treaty of August 9, 1919. It chant marine. One will easily understand then the appallingly large emigration of Greeks to Egypt, the United States and other countries.

The above two cardinal facts form the basist 100 years; they are the essence of Greek Irredentism. The first and paramount was the desire for national unification, a desire to extend the limits of the Greek State to include, so far as geographically possible, territories under Turkish rule, where lived compact Greek populations. The second fact was an economic necessity, the need for acquisition of fertile lands, inhabited largely by Greeks and historically pertaining to Greece, so as to make the country economically self-sufficient. The process of uational rehabilitation has been much slower and more painful in the case of Greece, than in that of any other Balkan nation. From 1830 to 1912, the Jonian Islands (cedled by Great Britain) and Thesally were the only acquisitions of Greece. On the other hand, Serbia, Rumania and Bulgaria almost at a stroke achieved independence for very large portions of their national heritage. The reasons for the slowness of the manipation of Greek territories from Turkish rule are chiefly the following two: (a) The Greek territories from Turkish rule are chiefly the following two: (a) The Greek territorial expansion conflicted more than any other with the intentions of the European Powers, especially with their policy of exploiting Turkey. Such is the fruit of two hundred years of policy, not always evil, but often bad enough to make the history of European Diplomacy in the Near East a dark story of the miseries of the weak and baseness of the strong. Thus it has gone on: thus it will go on, perhaps, until the Balkan nations, tired of being used as puppets, unite to keep a check on themselves and on exploitation by Great Powers. The Treaty of Sevres to the Lausanne Conference

Professor Westermann in his second and final lecture last Saturday evening explained the Turkish Nationalist movement, and how the wilty Turks, though defeated in the war, had played off England against France, thus accomplishing their ends in the Lausanne Conference. There follows a series of extracts from Professor Westermann's lecture.

The principles of Nationalism which motivate all the present demands of the new Turkish state are to be found in the Nationalist Pact. The American newspapers still remain dominated by the Venizelist enthusiasm engendered in this country by that most astute propagandist since the Balkan wars of 1912-1913. This pact has, therefore, been widely ridiculed as buncombe, emanating from a group of bumptious barbarians. Actually it is the expression of the will of a unified people. If the Turkish Nationalist movement goes forward to success it will rank as a twentieth century Declaration of Independence—against Western domination, by a people which desires to be free. To the Turks it is a creed, founded upon a thoroughly respectable, western formula—that of "self-determination." Among the Turks of today it is a more potent force than the Mosleum religion. The last of its six brief articles deserves quotation: "To the end of assuring our national and economic development and with the purpose of giving our country an orderly and more modern administration, the signatories of the present Pact consider the enjoyment of total independence and a complete liberty of action as a condition sine qua non of national existence."

Specifically the Turkish Nationalists have interpreted it to mean: 1. That the control of Turkish economic life by the Interallied Debt Commission and by railway and other concessions granted by the old Turkish regime must be modified to the point that the Turkish national state shall be free in its economic life.

Financial and economic control of the old Turkish government by the western powers was an undeniable fact. Its basis lay chiefly in the Ottoman Public Debt a Jurkish aftars the protection of these bondholders was an outstanding consideration.

After long negotiations a treaty was made in October, 1921, between the French government and the Angora National Assembly, which is called the Franklin-Bouillon or the Angora Treaty. By the fact of making this treaty the French Government acknowledged the Angora Government as the de facto ruling power in Turkey. It ceded to this Angora Turkish government a large slice of territory out of that held under the French mandate of Syria. This action belied every concept of a mandate or entrusted territory. It proved the contention of many suspicious persons, that the mandates of the Near East were spoiled goods from the outset.

set. Political circles in England were bitterly angry. The French had out trumped them in the Near East. The British contention was somewhat to the effect that the French diplomacy had pulled cards from up its sleeves. France was top hole in the Near East. But not for long.

France was top hole in the Near East. But not for long.

To the Angora rebel government this was a diplomatic victory, based upon actual military successes of the deepest and widest significance. The Tashkilat Milli, was recognized by one of the two greatest powers of Europe. It had a guaranteed position. It had obtained the specific right to transport munitions through the French mandated area of Syria. As British politicians immediately knew, and as actually happened during the following winter and spring, it meant that the French government would permit the Angora Turkish Assembly to buy munitions in France and would not hinder, at least, the establishing of the necessary financial credits in France for such purposes. This treaty wrote "Doomed" against the Turkish government of the Sultan at Constantinople. It wrote "Doomed" upon the great aspirations for Greece formulated by its Premier Venizelos. This Venizelosis: It was a vision of a denance of permanent success. It was a vision of a delirious people intoxicated by the deadly drink of Greek imperalism which Venizelos had brewer. The dead King Constantine is not to blame for it. His people were intoxicated with Venizelism when Constantine returned from exile in December 1920 and residence of their real freedom, freedom from western interference, was to come. It is in this spirit that Ismet Pasha and Riza Nur Bey entered into conference at Lausanne which opened upon November 20. The orders which they received from the "320 little Sultans" of the Anadolan peasants assembled at Angora were that they were to stand upon the Turkish Nationalist Pact. This they did. But, not to the complete satisfaction of the 320 little Sultans. For despite the labors of almost three months at Lausanne the Angora government refused, on March 4, to accept the treaty presented to them. It has asked for a renewal of the Conference. This new conference will soon begin and there is every reason for a successful arrangement of the differences still outstanding.

It is commonly believed that the long discussion of the first Lausanne Conference resulted in a failure. This is a great mistake. Many questions were settled, to the point that only three major problems are left. These are: the question of the complete abolition of the capitulations, as opposed to a compromise; recognition by the Allies that the control of the Ottoman Public Debt is an internal affair of the new Turkish National State; and the question of sovereignty over the territory about Mosul, that is the Turkish boundary abutting upon the Kingdom of Irak. It is unfortunate, from the Turkish point of view, that the Mosul area contains oil lands. Otherwise they would certainly have had it ere now. To the Turkish Nationalists the questions still remaining are vital. In their solution lies the complete rejection or the continuance of Allied control over their fate and the polluting effects upon the Allied commercial intrigue unless they themselves hold the reins.

Out of the long dull arguments of the Lausanne Conference, the pitiful diplomatic pettifogging, the many stereotyped appeals by Lord Curzon to the weary conscience of the civilized world, and all the other bluffling, four points emerge as of major international interest. The first is that the French government exactly reversed its Turkish policy as it had been established in the Angora Treaty of 1921. Instead of standing with the Nationalist Turks, they gave a free hand to British diplomacy. Lord Curzon was the outstanding figure of the Conference upon the Allied side. The consequence has been that the French have lost ground amazingly with the Turkish rulers of today. The Nationalists feel that the French have knifed them. They are not far wrong.

The second point is that the Turkish Nationalists do not want Russian control any more than the domination of western powers. This policy is the traditional Turkish idea of fear of Russia. It is wise, It became apparent in the Conference when Ismet Pasha, leader of the Turkish delegation, refused to follow the formula for the opening of the Straits proposed by the Bolshevist delegate Tchitcherin.

The third point is that the official policy of the United States with respect to Turkish affairs is determined by two factors, the commercial as well as the educational-missionary. Our government, and several private American organizations represented at Lausanne, showed an unusual interest in the economic problems there discussed.

The fourth point is that the Turkich at Lausanne, showed an unusual interest in the economic problems there discussed.

The fourth point is that the Turkish Nationalists have determined that the permanent seat of the Turkish government is to be at Angora. This decision seems to have aroused but little comment among the politically minded. Yet it occurs to me that it is one of the cleverest plays made at the Lausanne Conference and that it is of furreaching import, at least from the point of view of Turkish Nationalism. It arose after a long and heated argument upon the question of keeping the Straits open in time of war as well as in times of peace. The Turkish contention was that they should have the right to close the straits to all vessels on declaration of any war which would affect them. They accepted a defeat upon this point. But the next day they made the announcement that the seat of the Turkish government would henceforth be at Angora. No one can object to this. But it removes the Turkish government from under the guns of the Allied fleet, once and for all. The Nationalists have broken with the shady past of the old. Constantinople government, with its thousand rotten intrigues.

Tell your physics prof. that this cap defies gravity

SHAVING cream caps have an uncanny habit of chumming with gravity. That's why the Williams' Hinged Cap shown here is so remarkable. You can't persuade it to roll down a drain pipe. It refuses to go near the bathroom floor. In brief, it defies all previous laws governing the behavior of shaving cream caps.

Williams' Shaving Cream, in the same way, upsets all traditions about shaving. First of all, it exceeds every known speed limit for softening the beard. You can get your face ready for shaving in less time with Williams' than with any shaving cream you ever used.

In the second place, Williams' has a positive effect for good on the skin. Your face, with the wholesome care which Williams' gives, is kept in better condition and made more comfortable.

Test out these advantages which Williams' offers. Start with Williams' to-morrow and see what a time saver it is and how it helps make shaving more enjoyable.

tell you something about one of the important and not yet solved world problems.—the Turks.

Just as the proper study of mankind is man, so the proper study of the Turkish problem is the Turk. Those philosophers who trace the explanation of every national difficulty to national character find perhaps their most brilliant illustration in the descendants of Osman. If environment and opportunity can produce a highly gifted and prosperous people then the Turkish empire should have been one of the leaders in modern progress. The Turk possesses as his capital a city which for centuries was the headquarters of international commerce. In a commercial and in a strategic sense, Constantinople is one of, if not the most important city of the two great continents. Europe and Asia; its possession is the crux of the Near Eastern problem now as much as when Napoleon declared that the nation that possessed it could rule the world; the fact that the Germans, through their alliance with the Turkish and thus prolong the war three years. gora in Asia Minor. In this new region this parliament could function unobstructed by foreign interference. The secret Turkish-Italian treaty, signed at London, in March 1921, was the result. The terms are fairly well known. It is a pretty sordid affair. It brings back once more the discredited old opplomacy which was responsible for the world war. Italy agrees to withdraw her troops and not to fight any further against Turkey. Italy's grief at this mishap was undoubtedly sottened by the fact that her retirement from Asia Minor would probably result in the expulsion of the Greeks, the new cooperation with Turkey for this purpose was penhaps her greatest gain by this treaty, but there were also arrangements for "concessions," for "exploitations," for joint operation between Italian and Turkish capital in developing certain resources of the Osman empire. The net outcome was that Italy withdrew her troops from Adalia, leaving the Christian minorities to the mercies of the Turks, and that Kemal disposed of one obstacle to the realization of his programme. Italy incidentally left behind considerable stores of ammunition, at that time a particularly welcome gift to the Kemalist army.

Having disposed of Italy, the Kemalists now directed their attention to a more formidable enemy, the French, who had an army stationed at Cilicia, the sphere of influence which had fallen to France under the treaty of Sevies. The position of the French was not unlike that of the Italians in a sense, indeed, it was even more precarious. The French knew that they could hold this position only by fighting; and France had little desire in 1921 for a Turkish war. She still had to watch Germany; her military resources were needed on the Rhine; France had no desire to diminish her energies by maintaining a large military force in Asia Minor. Like Italy, therefore, she was not deeply depressed when compelled to withdraw from this Turkish adventure in a way that would not endanger her prestige and that might indeed result in something like an ad

decency, justice, and moral responsionity in the dearings between nations. We have had enough of secret treaties, land grabbing, of remorseless seeking of material advantage, of using nations as pawns in a game, of shirting peoples about in the interest of what is known as "foreign policy." That is what had brought the world to its present pass, and that is what will ploduce even greater calamities. Turkey is the most eloquent monument. I know, to the absence of idealism in European politics. For that very reason it presents the greatest opportunity. I am often asked what is the solution. To that I reply that there is no solution unless there is first a change in fundamental purpose. So long as the European powers regard Turkey as a held for the exploitation of their own seifish purposes, Turkey will continue to be a scene of unending misery and injustice.

Though Great Britain prevented the Turks from crossing the Dardanelles and invading Greece—she could not stop the furks from assuming the role of conquerors at Lausanne. What a pitiful spectacle the great powers made at that conference. They failed to present a united front and did not insist on applying the new standards of international law outlined in the Covenant of the League of Nations. The same old rivalries prevailed, the same greedy desire for concessions—and the wiley Turks were again permitted to play the various powers against each other. The encouragement given by the various powers was much or more attention to the division of the Christian minorities in Turkey,—while there are over one million shelterless, ragged, and starving refugees in Greece who have recently been notified by our State Department that after June 30th, 1921, that the American Red Cross would withdraw her support and leave them to shift for themselves and starve.

Professor Pribram of the University of Vienna met with the Government Ciub and ten members of the faculty Wednesday 'evening, April 18. He talked 'informally upon University Life in Vienna, and also told of the summer university held in Vienna, open to students and professors of all countries. Professor Pribram also commented a mong other subjects on the fact that there are no more geniuses in the world. He mentioned as one reason for this fact that other nations try to copy the German method of study which is excellent and do not attempt to work out individual systems of their own.

The next match on the schedule will take place this Saturday, when the Brunswick Country Club is met on the Brunswick links. The Country Club will undoubtedly put up a stiff fight, but if Bowdoin continues to play the way in which she did on Saturday, she should not fear the outcome. On the following day, the Augusta Country Club will come to Brunswick to meet the Bowdoin team, and this match, like the other, should prove unusually interesting. The college tournament, which opened on Monday, and which will conclude this evening, will, it is hoped, show up some men of ability of showing what they can do. There are, without doubt, men in college who have prospects of making the team, and this tournament is being conducted with the purpose of finding out just what the college, can produce in the way of golfers. If there are any men, therefore, who have not as yet played their matches in the tournament, they will be permitted to do so this afternoon. There will be an official stationed at the first tee throughout the afternoon, and all those wishing to play off their matches may pay their entrance fee of 25 cents to him and secure their official handicap upon turning in their scores.

TOOTELL BREAKS I. C. A. A. A. A. HAMMER RECORD AT PENN RELAYS

Record-Breaking Throw Less Than His Best-Bishop Barely Misses 12 Feet 6 Inches

Bowdoin has every reason to be proud of the athletes who represented her last Friday at the Penn Relay Carnival in Philadelphia. Although the college did not send a relay team, the three men who made the trip to the Quaker City did work of the most commendable sort. It is felt that had scholastic difficulties, not interfered in 18 gma Au house Thursday events.

the Quaker City did work of the most commendable sort. It is felt that had scholastic difficulties not interfered with the forming of a relay team, Bowdoin could have been represented by a team which would have spoken well for the college. As it is, the results of the performances of Capt. Tootell '23, Francis Bishop '24, and Malcolm Hardy '24, are sufficient to make the dopesters less dubious as to the outcome of the State meet at Orono, May 12.

Capt. Tootell became I.C.A.A.A.A. champion in the 16 pound hammer throw, before a battery of motion picture cameras. Impeded by a pair of trousers and a sweater, "Toots" heaved his hammer 174 ft. 5 inches, smashing the record which was previously held by John W. Merchant of the University of California who, last summer in the Harvard Stadium, threw the hammer 171 feet 2 inches. Through nervousness or stage fright Die gingt captain was not able to throw his sustomary distances, but it is rumored that while wantaing up he threw the hammer 193 feet. If this is true, Tootell has bettered the world's record established by Patrick J. Ryan on August 17, 1913 in New York; a heave of 189 feet 62 inches. As yet, nobody has fully substantiated the rumor, but it is hoped that in the neafuture the story will be backed by facts.

mor, but it is hoped that in the near future the story will be backed by facts.

In the pole vault Francis Bishop went 12 feet. This vault betters the record which he made in his freshman spear, by 4 inches. He vaulted 12 feet to inches but as he let go of his pole, his hand knocked the cross-bar from the standards. It is highly probable then, that he will break the state record at Orono. Such a performance as Bishop showed at Philadelphia deserves the highest praise, for it is only natural that the vaulter should be somewhat unstrung after having just finished a 450 mile train trip in addition to being forced to compete with so many cameras and eyes focused upon him.

In a heat the time of which was not once bettered during the meet, "Mal" Hardy placed fourth in the 120 yard high hurdles. The winner covered the distance in 15 2-5 seconds, 3-5 of a second better than the Maine Intercollegiate record. While Hardy may not break the state record on May 12, it is reasonably safe to assume that his work will not disappoint his fellow students.

Golf Handicap Tournament Brings Out New Material

The college handicap meet which was completed last week was even more successful than was expected, both in view of the new material discovered and in the number of men competing. The scores of the contestants show that the handicaps were much to big in many cases. This can easily be remedied, however, as in future meets there will be an actual, working basis from this year's score.

W. H. Gulliver '25, with a net score of 59, was the winner of the meet. His hadicap was 39. McGary '25 and Nelson '26 tied for second, each turning in a net score of 63. Rablin '26, 'Varney '23, and N. Wood '25, were next in order. The work of Wood was especially commendable, for, although his handicap was comparatively small, he won fifth place having a gross score of 85.

Business Building

HE selling of commodities is fundamental in every business, and selling life insurance affords the maximum of satisfaction and remuneration. For the life insurance salesman is a business builder and finds innumerable ways to serve the community and make himself indispensable in the conduct of modern affairs.

The life insurance salesman is not only a business builder but he is in business for himself, creating a competence permanent and continuous. It is the best paid work for those who are ambitious and willing to work, and who have the character and stamina necessary to stamp their individuality upon the business and on their community.

The traditions and practices of the Jons Hancock are such that the college graduate can take a peculiar pride in representing this company. You are liable to remain in the business you enter on leaving college. Before making a definite decision inquire into life insurance as a career. Write, "Agency Department."

A Splendid Success.

Vol. LIII.

There is but one real criterion by which we may judge the success of such an undertaking as the Institute of Modern History. That is the sustained interest it arouses. After observing the tremendous interest which the lectures have aroused at Bowdoin struct and maintain college controlled. There is but one real criterion by the lectures have aroused at Bowdoin and elsewhere, one can hardly ques-tion its complete success.

No more effectual mean, than those could have been offered the students as a test and a spur for the originality and mental alertness of the men. Sitting at the feet of some of the most already Sitting at the feet of some of the most eminent educators and public men of the day, they were furnished with material of so broad a nature and of such profundity and accuracy that they must have increased in mental stature if, indeed, there were possibilities of such growth. It is indeed a fortunate circumstance, though not an extraordinary one, that certain of the lecturers were unable to agree either as to conclusions or as to the fundamental facts from which they were drawn. No better stibulus could be offered to the active mind than that be offered to the active mind than that happy circumstances here at Bowdoin help to get us away from that atmosphere to some extent. But certain fixed curricula must be carlied on and in his working hours, at least, the student is given very little mental leeway. With such an opportunity for individual work as was given by the Institute, the student who enters it whole-heartedly cannot fall to increase both the breadth of his vision and the extent of his mental power. tent of his mental power

There is reason to believe that a large number of the students really found much value in the various lectures and discussion groups. There is good reason to hope that this may usher in a greater period of mental alertness, a period when the field of the student's mental activity may extend to the broad confines of the world, and not be limited to the petty provincialism that is, unfortunately, so characteristic of all too many in this country. We have heard and have talked with men who have been in the heart of affairs these last changing years. We have listened to the mesheart of affairs.

Tonight Professor Mitchell and Mr. MacCormick will represent the college at a dinner given by the Bowdoin Alumni Association of Providence, R. I., at Providence.

America and the world will soon be in the care of just such young men as sat at the lectures and conferences of sat at the lectures and conferences of the recent institute. The problems which those men will have to face will be world problems rather than those of a merely local character, and the college must prepare the men to meet those problems confidently and fear-iessly, if it is to perform its duty as a moulder of leaders. Bowdoin has again, from the standpoint of the student, taken a great and worthwhile step in the right direction.

College Tennis Courts.

There has long been a need on the campus for adequate provisions for the men who play tennis. It is a potent fact that the courts maintained by the several fraternities are quite inadequate for the real needs of the college. While these courts are for the most part ample for the members of the fraternities who provide them. of the fraternities who provide them, they offer no sufficient facilities for the varsity tennis team, for the nonthey aristy tennis team, for the non-fraternity men, nor for the members of the Faculty. And most of all, they are entirely insufficient for use in intercollegiate or interscholastic tourna-

It is no easy matter for the eight fraternities who have courts to keep them in proper condition, and it is indeed very seldom that any of the deed very seidom that any or the courts are in first-class condition. This is due partly to the lack of expert care, and more largely to the tremendous amount of playing that is done upon them, not only by the members of the groups who own the courts, but also by the tennis players among the hundred or more men who have no share whatever in them. Under presrers itself is this: let the college constructed and maintain college courts, as it has constructed and maintained such other athletic facilities as the athletic field, the gymnasium, and the hockey rink. It would be a matter of comrink. It would be a matter of comparatively small expense for the college to build several courts on land already belonging to the institution, and readily available. Members of the tennis team, after careful examination of possible sites, have expressed the unanimous opinion that the best site for such courts would be the space in the athletic field enclosure, west of the Hubbard grand stand. This plot of ground, hitherto used only once or the Hubbard grand stand. This plot of ground, hitherto used only once or twice a year as a parking space for automobiles, could easily accommodate three regulation doubles courts. The land has already been well graded, so that the only expense of that nature would be for the surfacing of the

Such an expense would cersuch a conflict of opinion is an indication that there must be two sides to the question, and the man who uses his mind will want to get at the right at the real according to the student. The modern American system of education has come perforce to be more of a "cramming" school than a place for developing originality and mental initiative. The particularly happy circumstances here at Bowdoin help to get us away from that atexcept for certain hours in the afternoon, when they should be reserved for the use of members of the tennis team. An attendant at the grounds could be detailed to see that all necessary regulations should be enforced.
Thus the college could provide for a great need in this field of activity.

Little need be said of the value of tennis as a sport, nor can there be much question as to the fact that Bowdoin's facilities for this sport are now far too limited. There is a just and insistent demand among the stu-dents and faculty members that such facilities should be greatly increased. In view of the demand and the evident ease with which that demand might be satisfied, it seems highly desirable that the college should take prompt steps toward the construction of real college tennis courts.

Prof. Charles Seymour

The Adriatic Problem

In opening his lecture on the Adriatic Problem, Professor Seymour discussed the peoples of the Adriatic region, the eastern Slovene Hinterland, the Italian regions of the north Adriatic, and the Italian municipalities of Dalmatia.

Taking up Italian aspirations, he spoke of the irredentist movement after 1870. The main objective was the Trentino, extended frequently to include the Aqualian coast and Trieste, an ancient Italian dream based upon the nationalistic factors. Economic ractors were the desirability of controlling the trade of Trieste and Fiume. Strategic arguments favoring Italian control of Dalmatia and the Hinterland of Trieste were outlined, the invasions of the past, and the disadvantages of the Italian coast, the lack of harbors and the difficulty of repelling naval raids.

Italy after 1882, gradually entered into cordial relations with the Entente Powers; in 1914 the Central realized that they could not count upon Italian participation in a general war. In December, 1914, Sonnino began negotiations with Austria for "Compensations" in view of Austria's attack on Serbia and as a basis for Italy's continued neutrality. Urged by Germany, Austria offered the Trentino and slight concessions in Trieste. Sonnino, accepting better terms from the other side, negotiated with the Entente. As a result, the Treaty of London was signed April 26, 1916. Under its terms, Italy was to secure the Tryol to the Brenner, Trieste and Istria, northern Dalmatia, and various islands. Fiume was left to Croatia.

As a result of the Treaty of London, the Jugo-Slavs were convinced that their interests were a matter of indifference to the Entente. The revolutionary movement was retayded and bitter hostility to Italy was aroused.

The Russian revolution and America's entrance into the war had marked effects. Professor Seymour next discussed the Italian Policy at the Peace Conference. The Italian victories over Austria in the fall of 1918 led to a revulsion in favor of full control of the Adriatic Problem but done in the Jugo-Sl

The Dismemberment of Austria-

Tracing the background, Professor Seymour showed the significance of Austria in history. Controlling the strategic paths, it assumed, after the break-up of the Carolingian Empire, a position of political importance. It served as a bulwark against aggression from the East. The extension and intensification of Hapsburg authority over different portions of the Empire during the sixteenth and seventeenth centuries proved a tranquilizing factor, politically and economically. In the eighteenth and nineteenth centuries, Austria must be regarded as an element of stability. Hence the phrase, "If Austria did not exist, it would be necessary to create her."

In the Hapsburg Empire there was a never-ending struggle between the factors of disintegration and union. The effect of the national movements of the nineteenth century was marked. The war against Serbia was desired by the Austrian government as a means of annihilating anti-Hapsburg movements outside of the Empire and thus of curbing elements of disunion within. The attitudes of France and Great Britain was not hostile primarily towards Austria. British and French statesmen recognized the political value of the Hapsburg Empire provided it maintained its independence from Germany. In the early days of the war, there was no definite plan for the dismemberment of Austria in case of an Entente victory; but it seemed necessary to secure the adhesion of Italy and Rumania in 1915 and 1916.

out against, and liquidated practically all the outstanding Polish boundary questions.

Polish diplomacy has also been rathers successful in building up useful connections with friendly powers. Poland now has treaties of alliance with France (1922) and with Roumania (1921); for the last two years she has acted in close harmony with the Little Entente (Czechoslovakia, Jugoslavia, and Roumania), and is likely soon to become formally a member of that group; and she has also built up around her a kind of Baltist Entente, including Finland, Latvia, and Esthonia. In short, Poland has attained a kind of pivotal position in the new political system of Eastern Europe; and as one of the chief allies of France, she is an important factor in the general equilibrium.

Poland has, of course, to face the permanent hostility of Germany and, presumably, of Russia, two nations inherently vastly stronger than herself. In this respect her position is not without grave dangers. It is possible, that she may be attacked and stripped of some of her present territory. But it seems inconceivable that she should ever again lose her independence, that the world'would permit Poland again to be erased from the map. And if fortune continues to favor her, her future may well be a splendid one. For the Poles, with all their defects, are an unusually gifted race; their country has magnificent natural resources of almost every sort; their population increases so rapidly that it may within a few decades equal that of France or Italy—in short, this new Republic, if it can consolidate itself and make the most of its opportunities, may become one of the great Powers of Europe.

SDAYY EXPERIMENTING WITH

The First Electrochemist

ITROUS oxide, according to the science of a century ago, was "the principle of contagion when respired by animals in the minutest quantities." Mere say-so.

Imaginative yet skeptical Humphrey Davy, who believed in experiment rather than in opinion, respired" it and lived.

It was this restless desire to test beliefs that made him one of the founders of modern science. Electricity was a new force a century Davy used it to decompose potash, soda, and lime into potassium, sodium, and calcium, thus laying the foundations of electrochemistry. With a battery of two thousand plates he produced the first electric arc—harbinger of modern electric illumination and of the electric furnace.

Czar Alexander I and Napoleon met on a raft to sign the Treaty of Tilsit while Davy was revealing the effects of electricity on matter 'What is Europe?" said Alexander. "We are Europe."

The treaty was at that time an important political event, framed by two selfish monarchs for the sole purpose of furthering their personal interests. Contrast with it the unselfish efforts of Sir Humphrey Davy. His brilliant work has resulted in scores of practical applications of electrolysis in industry and a wealth of chemical knowledge that benefit not himself but the entire world.

In the Research Laboratories of the General Electric Company, for instance, much has been done to improve the electric furnace (a development of Davy's arc) and new compounds have been electro-chemically produced, which make it easier to cast high-conductivity copper, to manufacture special tool steels, and to produce carbides for better arc lamps.

The Coffin Etchings

The Coffin Etchings

On April 22 the College received, through the great generosity of Mr. Charles A. Coffin of New York, a group of examples of linear art, carefully selected from the stock of Messrs. Frederick Keppel and Company, made up of the following works: Van Dyck, Portrait of de Wael; A. van Ostade, Dance in the Inn; Claude Lorrain, Dance by the Waterside; Turner, Woman with Tambourine; Millet, Man with Wheelbarrow; Corot, Sodvenir d'Italie; Lalanne, The Canal; Manet, The Guitar Player; Appian, A. Pond; Bracquemond, Flock of Teal; Pissaro, Sous Bois a l'Hermitage; Jacquemart, Cyrstal Vase; Zorn, The Old Soldier, and the Portrait of the Artist's Mother; MeBey, The Somme Front; Kenr Eby, Dawn: The 75's Follow up, and Constant; Benson, Nascaupee Indian; Pennell, St. Paul's, London; Childe Hassam, Tobey's, Cos Cob, and the Home of John Howard Payne; Piranesi, Exterior of the Colosseum.

These twenty-three prints (all etchings except the Turner, which is in part a mezzotint, and the McBey, which is a dry point) constitute a portion only of Mr. Coffin's munificent gift; the remainder is already on the way to the College, and the announcement of its arrival may be expected shortly.

way to the College, and the announcement of its arrival may be expected shortly.

Although print collections are nowadays frequently very extensive, yet an assemblage of even twenty-three examples, when chosen as carefully as are these, may serve no less effectively than a vast array—and less bewilderingly—to disclose the simple fact upon which rests and with which begins appreciation of the etcher's at—the fact, namely, that a linear medium is as expressive of the artist's vision, as subily or as saliently individual, as is a color medium. Van Dyck is not more himself in any oil portrait that he did than he is in his etched portrait of de Wael; Childe Hassam is nowhere in his painting more fully revealed than in these etchings of his. It is, of course, one of primary delights our new treasures afford that, by comparing and contrasting them, the student may range through a facinating diversity, not only of schools and periods, but of artistic individualities. Here he will find the dignity of Van Dyck, the Dutch boisterousness of Van Ostade, the romantic spell of Claude; here he may enjoy the delicacy, matching Japanese delicacy, of Bracquemond's touch, or the robust execution of Zorn; here he may dream of Italy with Crort, or watch the flicker of shadows with Childe Hassam. Here, best of all, await him discoveries and revelations personal to himself, such as contact with genuine art offers always to the genuine seeker after the rich rewards of art.

the new Successor States. The general responsibility laid upon the Peace Conference for the dismemberment of Austria-Hungary is thus not justified by facts—for that dismemberment resulted not only from any decision of the Conference itself, but from the force of preceding events. It was left to the Peace Conference merely to decide differences of opinion between competing claims of nationalities.

These problems were so complex and numerous that they could not be considered in detail by the leading statesmen. Hence, with the exception of the claims of Italy, they were handed over to special expert commissions, who should present recommendations to the Peace Conference. In the majority of cases, the recommendations of the commissions were accepted. The National principle applied to a large extent in the case of each state, but with notable exceptions. Thus in each case of the new States there is a dissident minority which creates one of the greatest dangers of the future. The nationalist's rivalries of the new States form an element of danger. The strength of national feeling excited by war has not been weakened, and where as before they direct it against each other.

In conclusion Professor Seymours aid that the problem of co-ordination is rightly recognized as that of supreme importance. He discussed the role of the League of Nations in tranquilizing and stabilizing the Danubian area, the possibilities of the development of the Little Entente, and of a Danubian League of the future.

Cushman could not get his stride at first and was defeated by Stanley of Bates, 6–4. He came back in the next set, however, and won, 6–2. In the rubber set, he found it rather easy to win, 6–4. Bishop, winning his first set 6–2, had an easy time of it, but his opponent tightened up in the next set and Bishop was forced to play a deuce set which he finally won 8–6. Following Cushman's example, Tolman lost his first set to Fairbanks 6–4. He walked away with his second set 6–1, but was forced to play a deuce set in order to win 7–5.

In the doubles, Lord and Bishop had no trouble in winning two straight sets, 6–4 and 6–2, from Roberts and Purinton. Cushman and Tolman encountered much difficulty in their first set, but finally won from Stanley and Fairbanks 11–9. Their last set was a surger of the summary:

The Bowdoin golf team won its second victory of the season when it defeated the team from the Dewitt Clinton school by the score of three matches to one last Saturday afternoon on the Brunswick links. The method of scoring used in the match was the "three point Nassau" type, one point for the leader in each of the four matches at the end of the first nine holes, one point for winner of the second nine, and one point for winner of the match. Debating Team to Meet Bates Tomorrow

Tomorrow evening in Lewiston City Hall the Bowdoin Debatino Team will meet Bates on the question, "Resolved, that the proposal of President Harding that the United States should join the World Court merits the approval of this assembly." Bowdoin will uphold the negative side of the question. The members of the Bowdoin team are Roy M. Fitzmorris '23, Theodore W. Cousens '23, Athern P. Daggett '25 and Richard H. Lee '24, alternate. Special notices have been sent to all Bowdoin alumni in the vicinity of Lewiston and a big representation is counted upon. Undergraduates should, if possible, go up to Lewiston and help the team towards a victory over Bates. The admission charge is 50 cents.

The Athletic Situation.

The gratifying successes of four of the Bowdoin athletic teams last week-end, coupled with the fact that ath-letics are occupying a very prominent position in the Maine college world position in the Maine college world this week, makes a survey of the situation seem advisable. Such a survey can, at best, be hardly more than a summary of the facts afready ascertained through competitive exhibitions of the several teams, but, fortunately for the Bowdom morale, the exhibitions thus far presented have furnished such an inspiring view of the several seed such an inspiring view of the several seed such an inspiring view of the several seed such an inspiring view of the several section. ed such an inspiring view of the several teams that their supporters seem fully justified in bodying for great things from them during the reder of the season.

Throughout the season the track and baseball teams have been hampered by the disability of certain of their members to compete, for scholastheir members to compete, for scholas-tic reasons. Whether dr not this cit-neutry is more marked than in former years is rather hard to say with any degree or precision, but it is certain that the dimentry is more marked at flowdom than at any of the three oth-er coneges with whose teams she com-putes too state champions in honors. er colleges with whose teams she competes for state championship honors, the extreme rigidity of the engionity rulings here seems the only explanation of this phenomenon. The question of keeping athletes, particularly, within the required limits of scholastic attainment is both universal and perfennial in its appropriation. The scylne of the faculty ruling on enginity makes its mark, but the broadseythe of the faculty juling on enginers of that mark at nowdorn this year makes necessary some laquary into the causes of such ineligibility as is present. These causes will be looked into at a later time, for the present, only the effects are ciearly visible, and it is to those that we must contine ourselves in discussing the situation are to with least to the cause of the continuous states of the continuous states

THE BOWDOIN ORIENT considered as of tremendous conseconsidered as of tremendous conse-quence, however, as in most depart-ments Holy Cross proved inferior to the men against whom Bowdoin will compete this Saturday. The track team has shown remarkable develop-the men against whom Bowdoin will compete this Saturday. The track team has shown remarkable development and a splendid spirit in fighting ahead regardless of all obstacles. Theirs is the spirit that will make Bowdoin again victorious over her rivals in the competition at the last of the week.

In tennis and golf, the Bowdoin representatives have again scored remarkable victories. The performances of the tennis team in defeating both Bates and Colby, who are considered their strongest rivals for the state championship, are most laudable, while the exhibitions of the newlyformed golf team have been quite satisfactory.

With her representatives showing so well in all departments, Bowdoin cannot but feel confident that victories will crown their efforts. The men have worked long and faithfully, with no other end in view than the glory of the college. Let members of the college show their appreciation by giving them their hearty support.

An Unfortunate Misconception.

There appeared in several newspapers of the state and of Boston, during the first part of the week, a statement of a speech made by President Clifton D. Gray of Bates College, in regard to the debate which is to be held between the teams from Bates and Bowdoin, at Lewiston tomorrow evening. The students by expressing the hope that it would be the fact that it was the first time that Bates had ever met Bowdoin in forensics, and startled the students by expressing the hope that it would be the staff of the college and substitute for it a more modern composition. The bowdoin beata as the representative song of discard time-honored Bowdoin beata as the representative song of the college and substitute for it a more modern composition. The Bowdoin beata as the representative song of the college and substitute for it a more modern composition. The Bowdoin beata as the representative song of the college and substitute for it a more modern composition. The Bowdoin beata as the representative song of the college and substitute for it a more modern composition sics, and startled the students by expressing the hope that it would be the last. He asserted that the entire Bowdoin faculty was assisting the Bowdoin representatives in the prepara-tion of their briefs. The president ex-pressed great confidence in the out-come of the contest."

When interviewed by the editor of the "Orient" Tuesday morning, Presi-dent Gray did not deny making the statement alleged by the papers, but gave to the Bowdoin newspaper a statement which he had prepared in explanation of his Chapel speech. In the interests of the truth, and in or der that no mis-apprehension may in jure the relations existing between the two colleges, the "Orient" is very glac to publish the statement at this time The statement follows: "Last week was asked by the president of the Bates Debating Council to emphasize the importance of the Bowdoin debate which is to come off next Tuesday eve which is to come off next Tuesday eve ning in Lewiston City Hall. My re marks were of a jocular nature in tended to stir up student interest an enthusiasm. I did not suppose they needed to be diagrammed, or tha whoever sent them to a Boston news paper ought to have a major sargical operation to restore his sense of humor.

"The spirit of what I said was en intimates that we at Bates think for a moment text.

The faculty cut was keenly felt by the baseball team when several candidates, one of them a man of exceptional ability and promise in an infield position, were declared unqualified to represent the college in any extracurricular activity. Not until last Saturday did the team begin to show that it is of a championship caliber, regardless of difficulties. The victory over Maine, the first victory of the season, is extremely gratifying, and gives ground for hope that the Bowdoin team may now continue to be victorious for the remainder of the season.

In no other field of activity has the eligibility played so disastrous a part as in the track team. Five men who were practically sure of winning points in the State meet have been removed from the squad. In spite of this depletion in the ranks, Bowdoin friends advenot fully kept the spirit and the letter of their contract in this debate has deliberately misplaced his onto-logical predicates. I hope that this melaters of their contract in this debate has deliberately misplaced his onto-logical predicates. MAINE GAME

In a game featured by excellent fielding, consistent hitting and superb pitching, Bowdoin defeated Maine in the second game of the state championship series on Whittier Field last Saturday afternoon. "Rupe" Johnson pitching the game of his baseball career at Bowdoin, allowed but four hits and whitewashed the Maine men, while the Houserites connected with ten safe hits, netting five runs.

The scoring began in the first inning when "Mal" Morrell, the first inning when "Mal" Morrell, the first man up, drove out a two-bagger. Asa Small brought him in a few moments later. Maine was unable to connect with the ball in the first five innings, but Bowdoin, not contented with one tally, went after more in the fourth. With two out Davis reached first on an error and MacLaughlin advanced him to third and landed on second himself. "Red!" Jones then-knocked out a single that scored both Davis and MacLaughlin. Bowdoin's defensive work was another feature of the game. Two double plays in the early part of the game stand out. "Joe" Smith in the first ining, robbed Dunham of a hit when he caught his line smash and Joe then doubled Stearns off second. George Davis in the third stopped a hot grounder and threw to MacLaughlin on second who immediately pegged to Aldred catching Repscha on first. Several other catchess brightened up the afternoon's playing; MacLaughlin, Morrell and Jos Smith all turned in spectacular catches.

Maine threatened but once during the entire game. This rally occurred in the eightn and for a time the final outcome of the game seemed in doubt. Taking advantage of a momentary weakness on Johnson's part, Maine gathered in three safe singles that filled the bases, with two out. Here, however "Rupe" tightened and pitched his famous brand of ball making Stearns ground out to Davis who threw to Aldred.

In this same frame Bowdoin by constant hitting and one Maine error annexed two more runs bringing the total up to 5. Small, MacLaughlin and Jones knocked out singles, Aldred and Davis turned in sacrifices and Joh

GLEE CLUBS CONCERT

On Saturday evening, following the track meet and the baseball game, the Musical Clubs gave their first home concert of the year in Memorial Hall. Although the ranks of the Clubs were rather heavily depleted due to the scholastic difficulties of seven or eight of the members, the concert did not apparently suffer to any great extent. The program, though it was composed of numbers which were sung on the various trips this season, was shortered in order to permit the Instrumental Club to play at the dance held in the Hyde Gymnasium directly after the singing was, concluded. All the selections were heartily received by an appreciative audience, the solos by Turgeon and Black, which were so successful on the Boston and New York trips, being unusually good. It has been announced that the concert last Saturday evening would be he last of the season, but it has since been decided to conduct one or more in Bath during the last part of the most successful seasons experience by the Musical Clubs.

The program as presented in Memorial Hall follows: (a) "Rise, Sons of Bowdoin," (a) "Rise, Sons of Bowdoin," (b) "We'll Sins to Old Bowdoin," (c) "Rise, Sons of Bowdoin," (c) "Ri

Two New Prize Funds To Be Established

The college has received from the Hon. Sumner I. Kimball, of Washington, D. C., of the class of 1855, the sum of $3500, for the establishment of two prize funds: one fund of $2500 is for the purpose of awarding a prize to that member of the Senior class who, during his college course, has shown the most ability and originality in the field of natural science; the other prize fund of $1000, is in memory of Horace Lord Piper, of the class of 1863. This prize is to be awarded to that member of the Sophomore class who shall submit an original paper best calculated to promote the attainment and maintenance of peace throughout the world, or on some other subject devoted to the welfare of humanity, to be chosen by the Faculty. These prizes will be awarded for the first time in the next academic year, 1923-24.

Mr. Kimball, who is a resident of Washington, was for very many years a General Superintendent of the Life Saving Service of the United States. In college he was a classmate of the Hon. William L. Putnam.

Present Original Revue

At the Ivy festivities this June, the Masque and Gown plans to make a decided innovation in the variety of entertainment annually offered by them on Thursday evening of the Ivy week. Hitherto the performance has always been in the form of a play, which has also been presented in the various towns included in the road company's itinerary. The show this year is to be in the nature of a revus, including numerous clever acts by reembers of the college, with musical and dancing numbers supported by a farcial one-act play, and several original humorous skits.

Every effort is being made by the numbers supported by a larear material play, and several original humorous skits.

Every effort is being made by the committee in charge of arrangements to make this a really worth-while event in the history of the Masque and Gown, and a performance of leal merit and interest for the members of the college and their guests who attend. In view of this fact, and in the general interest of the welfare of this progressive campus organization, there should be thorough support of the revue with all, at least, who are attending the lvy party in attendance. To facilitate this, it is strongly urged that the respective committees at the several houses so arrange their plans as to provide for the fraternity men with their guests to attend en masse.

The Glee Club.

At this time, only a few days after the final concert of the Musical Clubs, it seems fitting that a few wordshould be said of the progress of the organization during the fast season. A here eulogy of the pafformances of the director, leaders, manager, and members would appear uterly futile. The splendid accomplishment of all who had a part in the work of the society is sufficient in itself to prove that the clubs this year fave certainly been equalled by few in the history of the college, and have been surpassed by none.

This season the management was successful for the first time in carrying out a program of long trips. Two extended trips well etaken, one in New England, the other to New York and Obiledablio. Everywhere the pro-At this time, only a few days

The financial ques-tion has long been the most urgent factor in deciding whether or not the musicians could appear in distant cities. It is not a small undertaking to provide for the transportation and entertainment of a company of thirty-five or forty men travelling hundreds of miles to appear before audiences of only two or three hundred, at best, in each place. But for the loyal support of the alumni who are always willing to underwrite the performances, such trips would be impossible. The alumni and interested friends in every city visited have supported the conceit loyally, with the result that the sea-son has proved to be a financial, as well as a musical, succe

The college songs have been retained of course, and have been received generally with the usual enthusiasm. They are worthily representative of the college, giving as they do the final touch of distinction to a program of high artistic merit. The new program afforded an excellent opportunity to display the ability of the club in the chorus work. Many of the selections were sung without accompaniment, and in these the perfectly balanced tone of the men showed to greatest alvantage. With remarkable facility the chorus showed its ability to change rapidly from the swift, dainty selections requiring the utmost in precision of tone, to the solenni, ponderous tread of mighty anthems and the powerful throb of triumphant choruses. It is a far cry from the old triling songs that have so long monopolized the

the custom of wearing caps and gowns during the morning periods of the last part of the senior year have been num-erous, and for the most part commendatory. It is a custom of considerable value to the college both for the atvalue to the college both for the at-mosphere it creates and for the touch of distinction it gives to the men who are nearing their academic goal, the bachelor's degree. An atmosphere of scholasticism such as this simple bachelor's degree. An atmosphere of scholasticism such as this simple change to uniformity of garb gives is highly desirable. The American col-lege in general, as well as Bowdoin in particular, has failed to take advantage of too many such salutary customs as this to be able to afford to continue the all too common practice. If the renewal of the custom by the class of 1923 is to mean anything, we, should have a renaissance of a splen-did tradition—a tradition that will should have a renaissance of a splen-did tradition—a tradition that will mean much to the increasing of the

The exhibition opened on May 14; it was held in the galleries of the Rue de la Ville-Eveque, and the proceeds are to go to the well-known war charity, "Oeuvre des mutiles de la race", to which the Ingres exposition held last year in the same galleries contributed about 130,000 francs. Student Council Passes Training Camps Measure

It will be remembered that some weeks ago Brigadier General Mark S. Hersey addressed the student body of the College assembled in Chapel upon the subject of the Citizen's Military Training Camps, and in an interesting lecture told the students of the anusually good work which was being done by these Camps and explained the benefits to be derived therefrom? It will be unnecessary here to go into the fletails stressed by the Gneral, as the enthusiasm evinced by the student body in general is proof that the points presented at that time were well digested. Subsequent to the General's address, Lieutenant Richadd T. Schlosberg of the Class of '18, visited Bowdoin with the object of further spreading information conceining the Citizen's Military Training Camps, Literature and application blanks have since been passed out and-considerable interest has been shown in the proposition by the Coliege. The fact that so many of the students are enrolled in the local coast artillery unit of the National Guard woutseem to indicate that they are not uninterested in military activities, and that many would welcome the chance to spend part of the summer in a Training Camp. The preparation which the students already enrolled in the bulletins which have been distributed on the Campus.

The enthusiasm which has been manifested by the student body in regard to this, proposition has come to the motitude and the carefully outlined in the bulletins which have been distributed on the Campus.

"Resolved: Inasmuch as we believe that attendance at the Citizen's Military Training Camps makes for better citizenship, improves the individual mentally, physically, and mobially makes for a better understanding of civic responsibility and strengthens the potential defensive strength of the Inited States,

That the Student Council of Bowdoin College believes that undergraduates who can do so should take advantage o development at a Criming Camp."

Track Meet

With a heave of 40 feet, 11 inches, Jackson, of Maine, won the 16 pound shot put. Capt. Tootell came second with 37 feet, 9 inches, while Schneck of Colby unexpectedly piaced third with 36 feet, 8 inches.

The finals of the running broad jump gave Bates, of Bowdoin, first place with a leap of 20,20 feet. Corey, of Bates, won second place from Small, of Bowdoin.

As might have been expected, Capt. Tootell broke the state hammer throwing record when he heaved his comet-like hammer a distance of 168 feet, 8 inches. The condition of the circle was so bad that it was almost impossible for the contestants to keep their footing. Had the weather conditions not been so unfavorable it is practically certain that the giant captain would have set the state record at an even higher mark than he did. Mason, although throwing several feet under his customary distance, placed second with a throw of 123 feet, 23 inches. Barrows, of Maine, came a close third, throwing a distance of 122 feet, 11 inches.

The absence of Tootell in the discust throw was glaringly apparent. He found it almost impossible to keep his footing in the slippery circle and so could not throw his customary distance. The event was won by Horseman, of Maine, with a heave of 111 feet, 11 inches. Parsons placed second with 110 feet, 5 inches. Barrows came third with 108 feet, 63 inches. The Bishop brothers contributed six points to Bowdoin's grand total by winning first and third places in the pole vault. Francis, the state champion, had only to vault 10 feet, 6 inches in order to beat Stearns, of Maine, who vaulted 10 feet, 3 inches. Harvey Bishop captured third place by crossing the bar at 10 feet.

Bowdoin Swimming Team Defeats Auburn Y.M.C.A.

The Bowdoin swimming team won its second victory over the Auburn Y. M. C. A. team at Auburn on May 7. The score was 35 to 25, and shows none too well the superiority of the none too well the superiority of the White swimmers over their opponents. Of the seven events, Bowdoin won five, including the relay. McLean was the high point winner of the meet scoring two firsts, a second, and swimming on the winning relay. Guick also displayed both speed in the dashes and fine form in the fancy diving. Gulick won the 160-yard swim and the fancy diving, placed third in the 40 yard breast stroke, also swam on the winning relay team.

In view of the fact that the Bowdoin team has had no facilities whatever for practice, the victory is even more brilliant and the Bowdoin team deserves the highest of praise.

Brunswick Choral Society Presents "The Holy City"

Last evening in Memorial Hall the Brunswick Choral Society presented its fourth concert of the year, under the direction of Professor Edward Hames Wass, of the department of music. The cantata, "The Holy City", by A. R. Gaul, was beautifully rendered by a chorus of sixty-five, assisted by an orchestra of thirty members. Twenty-two men from the faculty and college Glee Club were included in the chorus and orchestra. This final concert of the season was greatly appreciated by a good-sized audience.

Of the cantata itself, the program gives the following outline sketch: "The first part of 'The Holy City' was suggested by the passages of scripture, 'Here have we no continuing city,' 'Thy kingdom come,' and sets forth the desire for a higher life, as expressed in the words, 'My soul is athirst for God,' which desire is followed by other passages expressive of the perfection of the higher life, such as 'Eye hath not seen.'

"The second part was suggested by the words, 'I saw a new beaven and a new earth, for the first heaven and the first earth were passed away, thus realizing the desire and promises contained in the first part. With the exception of two hymms, a verse from Milton, and three verses from the Te Deum the words are entirely scriptural."

For the first time since 1899 a Bowdoin track team carried away first honors in the annual New England Intercollegiate Track Meet when last week end the athletes from Brunswick walked away with fi,ve first places, one second, one fourth, and one tie for fourth for a total of 29 1-3 points, outdistancing Massachusetts Tech by 51-3 points, and leading the sixteen other colleges contending for the championship by a wide margin. Bowdoin has a right to be proud of the men whom she sent down to Boston last week, and especially should she be proud of Frederic Toatell, her giant captain, who carried off unaided thirteen of the counters which went to make up the grand total for the White. Taking firsts in the hammer throw, and the discus, and a second in the shot put by the very narrow margin of 8 inches.

Mai Hardy brought joy to the hearts of the Towdoin followers when he shot put, 'Toots' was easily the high-point man of the meet, But it must not be imagined for a moment that Bowdoin sent a one-man team down to carry off the New England championship, for "Mal" Hardy's victory in the 120 yard high hurdles, Foster's stirring win in the half mile, and Francis Bishop's well-earned first place inthe pole vault, all contributed to the final decisive result.

True to expectations, Captain Tootell ran away with his favorite event, the hammer throw, without the slightest difficulty, his winning heave of 168 feet, 11 inches outdistancing the best attempt of his nearest opponent by over 34 feet. Unfortunately Tootell's longest throw, a clean fling of 174 feet, 9 inches, could not be officially record-results of the formulation of the first place in the solution of any runner in the world. Compete at Whittier Field

The annual Bowdoin Interscholastic Outdoor Track Meet will be held this year on Saturday, May 26, at Whittier Field. The meet, as at present planned, will open in the morning at 10.00 o'clock, and will continue until noon, when activities will be suspended till 2.00 o'clock, after which the events will be carried to their conclusions. Present indications all point towards one of the most successful meets that has yet been staged at the Bowdoin Field. The entry list will include seventeen different high and prep schools, exactly the same number as appeared in the meet last year. Of this number three will be found to be out of State institutions, Amherst High School, Phillips Exeter, and Dean Academy being the ones in question. Amherst High is the only entry which has not previously taken part in a Bowdoin Interscholastic Meet.

High Schools Win In Tennis Meet

Bowdoin Interscholastic Meet Big Success,

Out of a field of eleven preparatory and high schools from all parts of the State, Jordan High School won the scholastic tennis singles championship and Gorham High School the doubles in the big meet held at Bowdoin on Friday and Saturday of last week. Purington of Jordan had but little difficulty in carrying away the singles honors for his school, defeating Russel of Gorham by the score of 6-2, 6-0. Although the singles finals proved to be rather one-sided, the last match in thedoubles proved to be hotly contested. Russel and Parlin of Gorham, playing against Davis and Neal of Thornton Academy, had their hands full in disposing of the Academy boys. After winning the first set in rather easy fashion, 6-2, the Gorham High players were forced to extend themselves to win the second 7-5. The next two sets proved to be hard fought affairs, with the High School boys on the losing end, 4-6, 6-8. In the rubber set, however, Gorham was out for blood, and after a hard fought match, took the final by a 6-4 count. The doubles finals were undoubtedly the most exciting of the matches played during the entire meet, and the results proved to be an upset to the early "dope", for either Thornton Academy or Edward Little High of Auburn had been picked by many as the probable winner. Saturday afternoon, at Cambridge, six Bowdoin track men gave an exhibition of pluck and agtermination which was nothing short of epochal for our Alma Maken. Competing against institutions brand times our size, with scores of athletes to draw from, our track men gling through their events in perfect feem displayed an unquestionable subernicity. When the report was sent ut Friday evening that the Bowdoin feam had succeeded in placing eleved men in the trial events, it seemed probable that our representatives would easily take second place in the bee. But when on the following evening those of us who had been unable to teet to Boston for the event heard the flowdoin was the winner of the meet by more than five points, it seemed shoot impossible.

THE BOWDOI ORIENT have heard much said in the last few years of the men who make the coaching of athletic teams their life work. And a great part of what we have heard has been far from complimen-And a great part of what we have deard has been far from complimentary to the men. A very small amount of investigation will show that the team which last Saturday won the championship of New England in track is made up largely of men who have received their whole training in their branch of sport from the man who has trained Bowdoin track athelees for the past ten years. The man who, unless our expectations and beliefs are sadly unfounded, will become before long the greatest hammer-thrower the world has everknown, owes whatever he may have acquired of ability and skill in his chosen event to his entire co-operation with a coach who knows his business, As is the case with many splendid athletes who have made good in our track department in recent years, he came to Bowdoin with possibilities, assuredly, but with little else. For four years he has worked faithfully, following to the letter the instructions he has received from his coach, and he has won national recognition. There is nothing of the miraculous about the feat. It is simply the result of the conscientious training of a well-formed body, directed by a coach who bends his every effort for the honor of the college.

That is the way that Bowdoin has won her victories. And that is the way that Bowdoin will continue to win victories. As long as the men, of Bowdoin ave willing to put their best efforts into winning they will win. All honor to the track team and to their coach!

During the ly festivities next week, the Masque and Gown plans to present for the first time an original entertainment, in the form of a revue. There will be 57 examples in the complete collection. A catalogue thereof with short biographical sketches of the artists is being prepared by Mr. Coffin.

It is, of course, quite impossible in a little space even adequately to suggest the worth of this gift to the College—the most significant and delightful addition to the Bowdoin Museum of Art in recent years. Hitherto the College has possessed not a single specimen of the etcher's alluring skill; now, along with its notable array of drawings by old masters, it possesses a collection of etchings so carefully chosen as to command the admiration of connoisseurs.

drawings by old masters, it possesses a collection of etchings so carefully chosen as to command the admiration of connonsseurs.

To intrigue the connoisseur, however, was not Mr. Coffin's purpose in assembling the collection. Though it contains, he writes, a few examples by etchers of the 17th and 18th centuries, he has, acting upon his own impression and the advice of qualified judges, confined it very largely to works by modern etchers whose names will appeal more directly to the imagination of the average Bowdoin student today. Particularly interesting in this connection is the inclusion of Kerr Eby's "Dawn; the Seventy-fives Follow Up." "H. Kerr Eby," Mr. Coffin says, "is an American artist who has done much charming work. Upon America's entrance into the, war he enlisted and served in France until the end of the conflict. I thought that his etchings of war scenes would be of peculiar interest to the soldier boys of Maine, some of whom may possibly have come to know Eby in France.

This rich gift, then, is specifically dedicated to the Bowdoin student of today. Obviously it will remain for an enrichment of the mental life of Bowdoin students while the future continues its wonted self-resolution into successive todays, as it will remain a possession in which Bowdoin men of earlier years take pride when they return to the Campus. The College, past, present, and to come, owes a personal debt of gratitude to Mr. Coffin.

The Mutual Benefit Life Insurance Company TRADITIONS AND IDEALS

Mutual Benefit agents are men who have been drawn to the Company because of its traditions and ideals. For seventy-seven years the idea conveyed by the words "Mutual Benefit"—the good of the whole applied to the affairs of each one—has been the guiding principle in treatment of policyholders of this Company.

The appeal of the Mutual Benefit is to those who want pure life insurance, with the most liberal features and at the lowest cost.

It is interesting to note inta although California won the meet, she failed to place a man in any event but the 120 yard high hurdles. In this event, Becker took third; place. The field men, however, headed by Neufeldt, the individual point vinner of the meet who alone copped by Points, were unbeatable.

One Bad Inning, Netting Six Runs, Loses Game To Tufts, 9-5

By defeating Colby at Waterville last Wednesday afternoon in the second game of the season between the two teams, Bowdoin pulled out of the tie for second position with Bates in the State baseball series, and on Saturday went into first place when Colby was again defeated by Maine. The 10-5 count by which Bowdoin defeated the Waterville outfit offered some measure of revenge for the loss of the first game earlier in the season. Although the affair at Waterville proved to be a far better exhibition of baseball than that which hadbeen put up at Brunswick between the same teams, the playing was rather loose, a total of no less than 10 errors being recorded. The game was featured by heavy hitting, Bowdoin pounding out nine safe hits and Colby eleven. Although hit rather, hard, Johnson pitched a good game for the White, working effectively in the pinches and striking out five of the opposing batsmen. Callaghan, who had previously pitched his team to a victory over Bowdoin, took the mound in the hope of repeating his performance, but he was sadly disappointed.

The very first inning saw four runs cross the plate to Bowdoin's credit. Callaghan walked the first two men to face him, and the third. Needelman, singled. Morrell failed to get across the plite in safety when Small hit to Callaghan, but errors committed by Cutler at second base and by Callaghan, in the rors committed by Cutler at second base and by Callaghan, snabled the White to bring in four runs. In her half of the first, Colby made a good attempt to even matters, when Roval hammered out a home run with one man on base. Bowdoin's credit. At this point four runs, in her half of the first, colby made a good attempt to even matters, when Roval hammered out a home run with one man on base. Bowdoin came back strong in the second, however, noking out four clean hits, one of which was a double. These accompanied by a walk and a hit batsman. America and International Justice.

America has long been a leader in the furtherance of international law and in the amicable settlement of international disputes; Especially in the administration of Mckeinley, Roosevelt, Taft, and Wilson, she has directed her efforts toward abolishing war. To American jurists and international lawyers the world is in a great measure indebted for the conversion of an age-long dream into a heality when in 1899 the Permanent Court of Arbitration was established at the Hague. This was a great stepful the direction of forming a system of international jurisprudence. But it was merely a step, for the Hague Court is not a "court," nor is it "permanent." It is rather a panel of jurges from which certain ones are specified for service in specific cases. It is sadly lacking in the necessary qualities of cohesion, continuity, and independence. It is not a court of adjudication, but a court of arbitration. It bases its decision not strictly upon law, but tends to effect compromises for the purpose of placating in so fat as possible all litigants that come before it.

With a view to remellying these several defects, the American Delegation at the Second Hague Conference in 1907 proposed the Court of Arbitral Justice. For this sourt a very satisfactory constitution was drawn up, but failure to agree m Inne point—the method of electing juriges—precluded its adoption.

3. The Congress of the United States shall appropriate and pay our fair share of the expenses of the expenses of the Court.

4. The statute of the Court shall not be amended without our consent. Since the President's proposal was made, public opinion has been for the most part favorable; but certain objections have been raised and it is expedient that we here give some of the most important of them our attention.

Terhaps the most popular argument against joining the Court is that it would involve us in the affairs of the League of Nations. It is mysteriously widespread belief arises perhaps from a lack of understanding. The Court is in no sense a part of the League, nor is its membership or jurisdiction confined to that body. Our representatives, simply because they act in co-operation with the members of the Council and the Assembly, can by no means be considered members of the Council and the Assembly, can by no means be considered members of the Council and the Assembly, can by no means be considered members of the Council and the Assembly, can be considered members of the Council and the Assembly, can be considered members of the Council and the Assembly, can be considered members of the Council and the Assembly, can be considered members of the Court. In joining the Court to a faliaris, we assume none of the objections of the Coeque, we participate in none of its affairs, we assume none of the objections of the Coevenant, and this is expressly stipulated in the first of the four reservations.

There are some people who object to our participation in an organization, bounded in the other courts. The collection of which one of the next of the Courts of the

The Class Poem

By John Watson

Young gods of life. In silhouette against The trancient purple of the morning sky,
Yon stand upon the sunrise-tinted peak
Of youth. The stretching plane of tife extends Before, concealed from sight by morning's white.
Slow-drifting mists, while far beyond begins
The spaceless blue of death's infinity.

A few short fleeting years, too quickly sped, Will find you treading beaten, stolid paths. With firm and patient, never-yeilding steps, Your hearts intent upon the instant goal. Of your desires; attaining them, your eyes, Aglow with strong ambition's steady flame. With steadfast stare, will fasten on still more Ambitious ends. And on and on desire Will lead, until with weary, lagging feet You merge into the blue tranquilitity.

Into the softened, shaded memories
Of thousand yesterdays, in quiet hours
Your thoughts will drift away to dawn-kissed heights,

And conjure up again the glad clean face Of youth. So live your youth, that happy dreams

Will rise upon the wistful stillness of Those languid hours in pensive muse of it.

To you is given the priceless heritage
Of Adamantine courage, gift devine,
To do those thinge called unattainable.
By men whose seasoned faces bear the print
Of lost amhitions, ashy hopes, and dead
Cold dreams. Let this alone be forfeited?
Then all remaining virtues fail, and shrink
To shadowy subservience against The skepticism of a calloused world.
And all the glorious deeds that in you wait
The launching urge of courage strong, become ane nickering might-have-beens of futile dreams.

That after rise by hearth fires langorous glow. The sympathetic snile that old years give To youthful aspirations, holds within A trace of envy for the golden force That lends potentiality to all Desires. The courage to begin and terminate The things you want to do, though never done Before, this makes you true, young gods of life.

Dear old Bowdoin, cherished ever
By all thy true sons,
We throng here to strengthen
The ties that none can sever.
May we closer grow in friendship
As years onward roll,
Thy life make ours finer,
Thy spirit thrill each soul.

As we linger now and turning Look back o'er the years
We've walked in thy pathways
Our hearts within are burning.
By the walls we plant this ivy
That all men may see
A never dying symbol
Of the love we bear to thee.

Fasso Wins From Pierce In President Cup Tourney

In President Cup Tourney

The President's Cup, offered to the winner of the College golf tourney, goes this year to T. N. Fasso '25, who earned his right to the trophy by defeating H. H. Pierce in the final round held last week. The match proved to be one of the closest of the tourney, Fasso only taking the victory on the last hole by the count of one up. During the early part of the match, indications seemed to point to a decisive victory for Pierce, for on the sixth hole he stood three up. Fasso pulled himself together, however, and by playing careful golf turned seeming defeat into a well-earned victory.

Both players went through a hard group of players in reaching the finals, Fasso defeating Wood, Robinson, and Richards on his way up, while Pierce took into camp Aspinwall, Smith, and Vose. In the semi-finals, Fasso found himself matched against Richards, captain of-the golf team. Although the match looked like a hard one, Fasso was in fine trim and defeated his man 7 and 6. In Pierce's bracket of the semi-finals, Vose loomed up as an opponent, but the Freshman golfer went down to a close defeat by the count of 2 up.

The calibre of golf exhibited throughout the tourney was, in general, of a high calibre. The finals proved to he an especially fine exhibition of playing, Fasso turning in a medal score of 83 and Pierce an 84. The closeness of the medal score sives some idea of how evenly matched the two finalists were.

Reunion Classes Plan For Lively Commencement

Competition For Snow Trophy Will Be Keen

All signs at present indicate that competition for the Snow Reunion Trophy will be even more keen than usual this year. All the reunion classes are making special efforts to get their members on the list of the present and plans are being made if the usual and some unusual reuni activities.

The Fifty Year Class will have its headquarters at 8 Potter Street and its twelve members will be well represented. David W. Snow, Esq., is in charge of the arrangements. The members of the class are Rev. Hervey W. Chapman of Striling City, Cal., Nathan D. A. Clarke, Esq., of Lynn, Mass., Augustus L. Crocker of Minneapolis, Isaac L. Elder, Esq., Augustus F. Moulton, Esq., and David W. Snow, Esq., of Portiand, John F. Eliot of Hyde Park, Mass., Frank A. Floyd of Brewer, Hon. Addison E. Herrick of Bethel, Dr. William G. Reed of Southbridge, Mass., Dr. Daniel A. Robinson of Bangor, and Rev. Frederick A. Wilson of Andover, Mass.

The plans for '93's Thirtieth Reunion are in charge of H. C. Fabyan, secretary of the class. Their head-quarters will be at 86 Federal Street and it is expected that quite a number of the 22 members of the class will return for Commencement. Seven members live in Maine, eight in Massachusetts, two in New York, two in New Hampshire, and one each in Washington, D. C., Ohio, and Utah.

The Class of 1898 would have been short-handed for its Twenty-fifth Reunion if Donald MacMillan, a convert to that class from '97, had adhered to his plan to head the "Bowdoin". North on June 16. He will be with them, however, having delayed the date of sailing until June 23, and the class will go down to Wiscasset on Thursday afternoon to see the "Bowdoin" with her improved fittings and equipment and to wish Mac bon voyage.

Ninety-Eight's headquarters will be in Hyde Hall, where accommodations for the men and their families will be available. This is the first time that the College has ever given a reunion class the use of one of the dormitories as headquarters. The class will assemble there on Tuesday in time for Class Day exercises.

On Tuesday evening there will be an informal dinner at the Gurnet House. Automobiles will leave Hyde Hall at 5.30 p. m. On Wednesday evening the Class Dinner, for members and their ladies, will be held at the Portland Country Club at 6.30 o'clock. After the dinner several members of the class will speak, including the following: Governor Baxter, Dr. MacMillan, Prof. W. W. Lawrence, Judge Thomas L. Marble, and Hon. Guy H. Sturgis.

Automobiles will take the class to Wiscasset after the Commencement Dinner on Thursday and the reunion activities will close with a supperthere. The Reunion Committee*consists of John F. Dana, Chairman, Wendell P. McKown, Charles S. Pettengill, Guy H. Sturgis, Frank H. Swan, and Alfred B. White.

Plans for 1903's Twentieth will make Commencement a regular Old Home Week for that class. Their headquarters will be officially at Jack Magee's house, 10 Page street, but the real base of operations will be a the "Auburn Colony" at South Harpswell.

MEMORIAL PLANNED TO EDWIN U. CURTIS '82

PROPOSED CURTIS MEMORIAL

A committee of Boston citizens have been for some time raising the sum of $40,000 to erect a memorial to the late Edwin U. Curtis '82, police commissioner of Boston. An effort is being made to make the memorial as representative as possible by encouraging many small subscriptions. A large part of the sum has been raised, contributions having been received from persons prominent in public life and from those in the humblest circumstances.

The sketch herewith was made by Guy Lowell, the architect of the Charles River basin in Boston. The proposed memorial is to be placed on the Charles River basin esplanade at Clarendon Street. Simplicity, symbolic of a noble career, will be the dominating note. The memorial will be essentially a monumental gateway, expressed by two simply moulded and simply decorate pedestals, each surmounted by a marble urn of imposing scale and graceful design. Appropriate inscriptions will decorate the approach faces of the pedestal. The visible superstructure will be of hand-wrought light pink marble, resting on base courses of New England coast granite, while the steps and paving will be of similar material.

Of Mr. Curtis's memorable work during the Boston police strike, Vice-President Coolidge said, two years ago, "If it had not been for the clear insight of Edwin U. Curtis, the question that came to me never would have come. It was because he decided that question right in the first instance that I had the opportunity of supporting him in the second instance."

This issue of the Orient is published by and for the Alumni Fund. It is im-possible in this issue to do justice to the general alumni news or to the large amount of campus news in which alumni would be especially interested. It is hoped that during the next year it will be possible to publish one Alumni Orient or more.

A Message to the Alumni.

Bowloin is not a rich college. We have adequate grounds and very lovely buildings. We have generous scholarship funds and other restricted funds that would indicate to the person who is casually interested in colleges that we were wealthy; but we have a very expensive plant to maintain, and our interne from the students is not even enough to pay the cost of instruction. Moreover, these last two years when the alumni fund is being capitalized and pledges are coming in, we are losing the income from the alumni fund as being capitalized and pledges are coming in, we are losing the income from the alumni fund was so satisfactory a feature of the financial year 1920-21. There are t great many things that really ought to be done to make the college a first rate institution in every way, and all of these things require money. For example, we are not spending as much for books for the library as we ought to expend. We are not spending as much looking after the health of the students as we ought to expend. Many other colleges have a better ratio of percentage of teachers to students than we have. The college often would like to publish articles of interest by members of the faculty; but we have no publication fund.

Then again, the whole athletic program presents some grave financial difficulties. Last year, owing to a very favorable football season, the different departments of athletics were able to meet their obligations; but this year many of them are running far behind. The track which used to be the best in Maine is now probably the worst. We need a swimming pool. We need a fund to carry on outdoor winter sports.

Some day we appe to be able to have an athletic system whereby the coaches will be all year of the coaches will be al pool. We need a fund to carry on outdoor winter sports.

Some day we appe to be able to have an athletic system whereby the coaches will be all paid by the college and responsible to the college. In this way we can get rid of some of the evils when athletic necessarily depend upon gate respits. It may interest the alumnifo know that the coach of the track from the last two or three years; that his daties are assigned to him by the President of the college after consultation with the Athletic Council. What is possible in track may be possible in the other sports. But the college cannot take on any additional financial obligations at the present time.

If the alumni would rally to the support of the alumni fund and give annually in addition to their contributions to the endowment, an income of $15,000 or $20,000 would be available and we could do a great many things that we have been longing to do for many years.

that we have been longing to do for many years.

The greatest burden that rests upon the administration of the college at the present time is financial. We have a loyal alumni body, a splendid and hard-working faculty, and as fine a group of undergraduates as may be found in the country. But each year the cost of up-keer increases, and although the funds grow gradually larger they never seem to catch up with the necessary expenditures. And so Bowdoin College is a constant challenge to the loyalty of her sons.

In dwelling thus on the main characteristic of that period, namely, the conditions that prevailed throughout the mask and horn era of Rowdoin's social history—conditions, it should be said, that did not wholly disappear till the advent of President liyde and the modern Faculty type with a more humanly tolerant policy in the treatment of youthful transgressions: again, till the age when the better organization of manly sports opened another way to expend surplus energies—I have left no space for the more gracious memories that crowd when one begins to recollect. And if I seem to have written rather sympathetically of things now properly abhorred it is simply because no matter how makey years intervene the eternal boy unsign of the past gives him the chance.

Such was not all of Bowdoin life from 1866 to 1876. The other side is told in the record of the subsequent careers of the hundreds of ministers of the Gospel, college presidents and professors, jurists, lawyers and physicians of note, philanthropists, philosophers and men of large affairs who, under impulse of the prevailing college sentiment, participated with entusiasm in this sort of deviltry and tomfoolery.

1907—A volume of verse, "Maine Coast," by Wilbert Snow (C. W. Snow '07) has been published by Harcourt, Brace & Co., and is much praised for its dramatic realism in the depicting of a Maine fishing village. Mr. Snow is professor of English at Wesleyan. 1913 and 1915—The Oxford Press has just issued the important book for prospective Rhodes Scholars, "The Oxford of To-day," by Lawrence A. Crosby '13 and President Aydelotte of Swarthmore. A large part of the work is Mr. Crosby's, who is now a member of a law firm in Havana. Another Bowdoin Rhodes scholar, Robert P. Coffiin '15 (professor at Wells College and author of much magazine verse) contributes the chapter on "Social Life at Oxford," which Christopher Morley, the essayist and a Rhodes man, commends highly. 1916—Donald S. White has been appointed Special Immigration Agent in the U. S. Consular service, at Vienna, Austria.

1917—Erik Achorn has received a renewal of his Traveling Fellowship from Harvard and will study another year in Paris on the military history of France after the Empire.

1919—Bateman Edwards has been granted a Procter Fellowship, with large stipend, from Princeton, and leave for half of next year's graduate study in France. A research article of his on early French passion plays is soon to be published.

1920—Maurice W. Avery has been appointed Instructor in Classics at Williams for next year. Robert D. Leigh '14 joined the Williams Faculty last year.

The room in which Henry W. Orients vs. Obituaries

If a Bowdoin alumnus who does not live in your immediate vicinity does something to distinguish himself, you probably don't hear of it until you read his obituary. If one of your class-mates becomes a husband or father or a member of the firm or something else important you don't know anything about it until you come back from your tenth. Why not learn all these things through the Orient?

When you talk about Bowdoin to your friend or your boy or the neighbor's boy, are you talking about a college you knew twenty years ago, or one that you know today as well? Do you know what happens on the campus today? Can you tell your boy about the Bowdoin he is to go to, or are you trying to make an

What is the Bowdoin Alumni Fund?

What is the Bowdoin Alumni Fund?

1. A Fund, planned and controlled by alumni, to which Bowdoin men may give any amount at any time as an expression of their loyalty to the College, their ruccgnition of its service to them and their desire that the College may keep pace with the years.

2. A Bowdoin Club to which every alumnus can pay whatever annual dues he pleases.

3. A Fund that has already performed three big services to the College:

(a) Secured enough contributions to Income to cover temporarily the increase made in 1920 in salaries of the Faculty.

(b) Increased the Endowment of the College by $658,731.73 to provide permanently for the above increases.)

(c) Brought closer to the College alumni who have contributed to the Fund, as well as honorary graduates, non-graduates, a large number of contributors through the Society of Bowdoin Women, and several hundred other friends of the College.

What is its purpose?

1. To increase the endowment of the College by means other than bequests.

To increase the endowhent of the College by getting every alumnus to quests.
 To increase the income of the College by getting every alumnus to contribute something every year towards the current expenses of the College. Five dellars annually to Income is the equivalent of a gift of $100 to Endowment.
 To increase the interest and strengthen the loyalty of the alumni. This is invariably the result of a contribution.
 To strengthen class spirit. Individual contributions are credited to Class Funds, and class organization is stressed.
 To make every alumnus a sharer in Bowdoin's present and future.

- What is its organization?
- It was begun by a special committee of the Alumni Council. There is now a Board of D, rectors, consisting of alumni nominated by the Alumni Council and elected by the alumni. Three members are elected each year. Each class has a Class Agent and there are Regional Committees for various districts. The Alumni Secretary acts as executive secretary of the Fund.
- What is done with the money?
- Contributions to Endowment become part of the permanent invested funds of the Cellege.
 Contributions to ancome, unless a special purpose is designated by the donor, are generally used for the current expenses of the Cellege.

Why is it called the "Yale Plan?"

It is not so-called any longer. It is now the Bowdoin Plan. In Alumni Fund literature heretofore it has been referred to as the "Yale Plan," in order that the alumni might realize that the Fund idea is based on a reality, not on a theory. Yale has had an Alumni Fund since 1890. Since that time subscriptions to the Fund have added $2,183,807.28 to Endowment or Principal, and $2,575,788.65 to Iucome. It is the most important single factor in Yale's financial policy.

The Bowdoin Plan is patterned on the Yale Plan.

Why should I con ribute to the Alumni Fund?

I I am proud to be a Bowdoin man. That pride is based on Bowdoin's standing and her achievements. I wish to help maintain that standing and continue those achievements.

2. Somebody's gifts to the College in the past made it possible for me to get a Bowdoin education at 1-3 or 1-4 the cost to the College. My gift will help give the same privilege to future Bowdoin men.

3. Being a Bowdoin man means more to me than being a member of any other organization to which I belong. The other organizations exact dues; my dues to Bowdoin shall be my free-will offerings.

4. I know that other colleges of Bowdoin's size and standing have raised in the last few years five dollars for every one that Bowdoin has raised. I am not content to have my college unable to meet modern educational demands as others do.

5. I do not care for drives. I would rather contribute a certain amount every year than give to sporadic drives. For that reason the Alumni Fund appeals to me.

6. I am not wealthy and probably shall never be able to give or leave to the College any large sum, but I can give the interest on a fair-sized sum every year. The Alumni Fund makes this gift effective.

7. The Bowdoin way of doing things is to get everybody's shoulder under the load. My little bit isn't much, but 2,000 other little bits will make mine count.

What are some sample contributions or pledges?

What are some sample contributions or pledges?

1. "I will contribute $1,000 to Endowment in annual installments of $200. In the meantime I will contribute to Income the interest at 5% on the unpaid part of my pledge of $1,000, that is: $50 the first year, $40 the second, and so on."

2. "I am old, sick, and poor but will gladly give $1.00 a year to Income. I can afford no more than this but would not have Bowdoin undertake anything without my mite."

3. "Fifty dollars a year forever."

4. "$3,000 as a Memorial to my father; $1,000 payable before Sept. 30, 1923, the balance at will."

5. I have just graduated and have barely gone to work. I will, however, pledge $5 a year to Income until I can increase it."

6. "Let me know what I received in scholarships during my College course and I will subscribe that amount with full interest."

What are "Memorial Funds?"

Many gifts to Endowment have been in the form of memorials to Bowdoin alumni who were relatives of the donors. In some cases the memorials are in the name of other relatives, such as the mother of the donor. These memorials, with the names of the donors, are published annually in the College Catalogue, just as scholarships are. One donor of a Memorial Fund said, "My grandfather, of the class of —— would have wanted to do his share in the Alumni Fund. I am therefore establishing a memorial to his name."

Can contributions be made for special purposes?

Yes. One alumnus contributed to Income with the stipulation that the money be devoted to the upkeep of a hockey rink. Most gifts, however, are unrestricted.

How can the Alumni Fund eliminate "drives?

Given thorough support by the alumni, the Fund can pile up sufficient money in the Endowment or Principal to underwrite projects for which "drives" might be conducted. Other colleges have done this. In another way this can be made possible. Contributions to Income can reach a point where the College, receiving sufficient amounts for current expenses, can itself underwrite projects for which "drives" might otherwise be necessary.

Standing of Classes By Decades

The following table shows the relative standing of classes in the same decade according to the percentage of living members of the classes who have contributed to the Alumni Fund. As in the tabulation statement given elsewhere on this page, figures are given as of June 1, 1923.

It is, therefore, import-ant that as many pledges as possible be paid before June 30.

There are many pledges now overdue. These overdue pledges mean that the College loses the use of the money involved for a long or short period. They also mean labor and expense in sending out notices and follow-up letters.

with drawings of purple cows or pltramarine zebras."

There was no dramatic clpb at Bowdoin a quarter of a century ago, but in the spring of '96 the students gave a highly successful performance of the comic opera "La Mascotte" in the town hali. The glee club, under the leadership of Frederick E. Drake '98, and the mandolin and guitar club, led by Alfred B. White '98, were flourishing institutions.

The most daring achievement of our freshman year was the dimbing of one of the chapel spires by Charles D.
Moulton '98, who is now a practicing physician in East Orange, N. J. The freshman flag waved for a time from the top of the spire, but was removed later by Donald B. MacMillan, who was then a member of the class of '97.

The war with Spain gave a martial touch to the last few weeks of our life in Brunswick. For a white all Bowdoin became an awkward squad, drilling on' the old delta. Enthusiasm waned, however, whon immediate enliste in those days was somewhet primitive, but I do not envy the boys who have never had coal fires to tend, nor enjoyed the felonious thrill that came from making kindling wood of old Appleton's attic floor. Our lack of aesthetic background was deplored by at least one faculty member, who was instrumental in adoming South Appleton with window-boxes of red geraniums. It was said that a cynical colleague characterized this effort as casting pearls before swine.

But though our material surroundings left something to be desired, we were abundantly blessed with the quality of our instruction. Hyde, Chapman, Robinson, Lee, Houghton, Johnson, Little, Woodruff, and Files, gone to the life beyond; Moody, Hutchins, MacDonald, Emery, Whittier and Mitchell still living—I doubt if any college has had a finer corps of teachers. Masters of their subjects, vigorous and energetic, competent, kindly, and human, they gave us themselves. No words can adequately express our debt to them.

I have tried thus briefly to comply with the alumni secretary's request for a short reminiscent sketch

The time old struggle of youth vs. experience in a baseball game between the classes of 1913 and 1918 celebrating their tenth and fifth re-unions respectively, will be one of the features of the coming Commencement Week. In addition to the diamond struggle, the 1913 committee have outlined a strenuous program of activities, Headquarters will be in the rooms owned by the College on the corner of Maine and Cleveland streets, opened the Sunday of Commencement week. By Wednesday morning hospitality will be raining from the hands of a caterer who will be in charge of the quarters. The annual danner at the Gurnet house will take place Wednesday afternoon.

Thursday will mark the "formal" spectacle of class antics with burlesque satire and a parade that promises to revive the memories of ancient Egypt.

The 1913 Re-union is being handled by a committee of which Lawrence W. Smith is chairman. A. P. Cushman is in charge of the finances, Paul C. Savage in charge of entertainment and Walter F. Eberhardt in charge of publicity.

The five year class will go into intensive training immediately on arrival in Brunswick for their baseball game with 1913 on Wednesday morning. Their line-up is being kept secret and they are determined that Youth shall triumph over Age and Craftiness in this bitter struggle. The 1918 reunion committee, consisting of Joe Clark, Red Gray and Heck Savage, state that the report that Babe Ruth is a Bowdoin 1913 man is grossly exaggerated.

The class headquarters will be at Mrs. George E. Cobb's, 6 Cleaveland Street. The class will march there on Tuesday afternoon and officially declare the latch string out. That evening they will have a class dinner at 6.30 at the Hotel Eagle. Costumes of which white flannel trousers (they can't be Egyptian, anyway) will form the base have been prepared.

The 1918 reunion committee is responsible for the idea of special cars for Bowdoin men from Boston and vicinity. These cars will be on trains leaving Boston at 12.50 p. m., June 19, and Brunswick at 6.09 p. m., June 21 (both Daylight Saving Time). Checks for parlor car seats ($1.13 each way) should be sent before June 15 to J. F. Clark, Brown Bros., 60 State Street, Boston, or to Alden F. Head, Temple Tours, 65 Franklin Street, Boston.

From 75th Commencement

All Bowdoin men will hear with regret that the oldest living graduate, Rev. William C. Pond '48 of San Francisco, will not be able to take the long journey back to the College for his Seventy-fifth Commencement. Mr. Pond is now 93 years of age. He was present at Commencement two years ago, but has recently suffered from an attack of pneumonia and cannot journey across the continent this year. Ill-health is not the only reason, however. His religious work so occupies his mind that he writes, "I would have felt, in all the days of my absence, that my duty was here."

With indomintable spirit he continues:
"But I will lay all my plans so as

With indomintable spirit he continues:

"But I will lay all my plans so as to have leisure for the journey at Commencement time in 1925, and if 75 would be good, why may not 77 be even better? Of course one cannot know what two years may bring forth, but I seem to feel sure that God will grant my prayers and that I will be with you, in better physical vigor than I now have—the debility which usually follows an attack of pneumonia will, I trust, exist with me no longer."

Busy and Lively Week With Many Alumni Back

Starting with President Sills' Baccalaureate Address in the Congregational Church, Sunday afternoon, the one hundred and eighteenth Commencement week came to an end with the Commencement Exercises in the College Church this morning. The past week at the college has been eventful and successful from every view point. This Commencement has been perhaps the best that the college has enjoyed for many yars.

The Alexander Prize Speaking Contest came on Monday evening in Memorial Hall. As in the past, the speaking was excellent and well worthy of high praise.

1923, the graduating class, held its Class Day evercises under the Thorndike Oak at 3 p. m., Tuesday and it further made merry and rejoiced over its college career at the Commencement Hop held in the gymnasium in the evening. Furthermore Tuesday was the day when the Trustees and the Overseers of the College met.

October 3, 1923. Vol. LIII.

Only a few days ago Bowdoin formally opened her one hundred and twenty-first year of existence. On this morning the college hastens to welcome the scores of newcomers who appear at the chapel exercises as new Bowdoin men. It is a joyous occa-sion, this opening of college, yet is it fraught with tremendous meaning.

There is little need to expatiate upon the requirements of college life to the initiated. To the freshman, however, a few works of friendly advice and admonition may not come amiss. Yearly the new groups come. eager, vital, full of a great ambition to make grout yearly the same old ineager, vital, full of a great ambition to make good. Yearly the same old influences of sloth and indifference work their ruinous effects upon a number of men, sending them out in disgrace from the halls whose walls should re-echo nothing, of discredit to the name of a son of the college. It is to be expected that a certain reasonable percentage of each class will not graduate but, under the conditions to percentage of each class with not grad-uate, but, under the conditions to which Bowdoin now adheres, there is no reason why that number can not be materially lessened. To that end let every member of the college strive, whether he is an upperclassman or a freshman.

It is often very difficult to impress upon the first year man the necessity for scholarship. Few indeed are the freshmen who cannot understand the freshmen who cannot understand the need for them in extra-curricular activities, but the same men who appear to be the backbone of student activities are often lamentably far from leadership in the scholastic field. And the worst of it is that these leaders not only do not lead in the activities of the class room, but are all too frequently forced to abandon all the leadership that is justly theirs because the pressure of outside activities drives them to inferiority in their studies.

In a small college like Bowdoin the burden of campus functions falls of necessity on a few versatile men. This condition is not pernicious in itself but it does give rise to scholastic conditions which are unfortunate. There is no reason why the men who take the lead on the athletic field and in the many non-athletic activities should be so pressed for time that their scholastic performance suffers. There is a remedy for the situation. A committee on limitation of activities was elected by the students of the college last spring. On this committee devolves the duty of seeing to it that no man is overbuidened by outside activities. Freshmen especially will be required to restrict the time which they may put into student af-In a small college like Bowdoin the

If any bell was ever heard around the world, Joseph Henry rang it in his famous experiment at the Albany Academy. The amazing development of the electrical industry traces back to this schoolmaster's coil of insulated wire and his electro-magnet that lifted a ton of iron.

Four years later when Morse used Henry's electro-magnet to invent the telegraph, Henry congratulated him warmly and unselfishly.

The principle of Henry's coil of wire is utilized by the General Electric Company in motors and generators that light cities, drive railroad trains, do away with household drudgery and perform the work of millions of men.

There is little need to expatiate upon the requirements of college life to the initiated. To the freshman, however, a few works of friendly advice and admonition may not come amiss. Yearly the new groups come, eager, vital, full of a great ambition to make good. Yearly the same old influences of sloth and indifference work their ruinous effects upon a number of men, sending them out in disgrace from the halls whose walls should re-echo nothing, of discredit to the name of a son of the college. It is to be expected that a certain reasonable percentage of each class will not gradbe expected that a certain reasonable be expected that a certain reasonator percentage of each class will not graduate, but, under the conditions to which Bowdoin now adheres, there is no reason why that number can not be materially lessened. To that end let every member of the college strive, whether he is an upperclassman or a ties drives them to inferiority in their studies.

In a small college like Bowdoin the burden of campus functions falls of negessity on a few versatile men. This condition is not pernicious in itseff but it does give rise to scholastic conditions which are unfortunate. There is no reason why the men who take the lead on the athletic field and in the many non-athletic activities should be so pressed for time that their scholastic performance suffers. There is a remedy for the situation. A committee on limitation of activities was elected by the students of the college last spring. On this committee devolves the duty of seeing to it that no man is overbundened by outside activities. Freshmen especially will be required to restrict the time Morrell, Walter S., Boston, Mass. side activities. Freshmen especially will be required to restrict the time which they may put into student af-fairs.

For this reason, each entering man must carefully select the activities for which he is best fitted, and confine himself to striving for pre-eminence in those alone. With reasonable cooperation, every man should find opportunity to excel under this system, and the usual scholastic difficulties should be greatly lessened.

Let every man go out for some activity apart from his courses. Let

THE BOWDOIN ORIENT him enjoy the broadening influence of working hard with other men for single purpose. Let him know the pleasure of representing Bowdoin in a worthy manner, but, above all, let him work.

Jackson, George S., Portland,

It was with a distinct shock that Bowdoin men received the news of Kate Douglas Wiggin's death in London last August after a short illness, and it is with deep sorrow that they mount the loss of this wonderful woman who has meant so much to the College in years past. The passing of such a figure in the literary world is a cause for national concern, but to have been concerned with the College, that feeling of concern holds a far more personal note. Kate Douglas Wiggin, or Mrs. Riggs, as she was conferred upon Sarah Orne Jewest, in 1504 upon Mrs. Riggs, and in 1911 upon Annie Crosby Emery. Mrs.

along the lines of our successful experiment in modern history' last April; and the press has been cordial in reminding the public of the debt which American letters oves to Bowdoin. We proudly include in that list an adopted daughter of the college, Kate Douglas Wiggin, whose death in England last August was a great loss to American literature. She was/given the honorary degree of Dector of Letters in 1904; and ever since has been a most loyal and zealous 'upporter of the college. As President of the Association of Bowdoin Women she gave freely of her time and means and influence. Bowdoin is glad to share with the State of Maine in gratitude for her wholesome stories and for her own gracious personality. We mourn also the recent death of a yoringer writer of real promise, Charles Boardman Hawes, 1911, whose stories of adventure on the sea had already made him the rival of Sabatine and gave hope that he would prove the American heir of Stevenson. The extablishment by the Atlantic Monthly Press of a prize in his memory is a very unusual tribute—and well deserved since few younger men had shown, more literary power than in his all too brief career he had displayed. 'A college is judged not only by its daily work but by its product; and we are glad to have the measure of an education in the liberal arts at Bowdoin assessed by creative literary work of such promise.

In beginning the collegiate year the college can wish for you all nothing ignorant. The world is a pretty dull place to people who are ignorant and pretty flat and stale and unprofitable to the loafers. What we need in our colleges as in the country at large is a return to industry. The American is probably the busiest person in the world; but he does not know how to work. There is a great difference between being busy and working hard. In the does not know how to work, try to avoid work, wish to escape from the drudgery and persistence of work and take refuge in merely being busy. It is popularly supposed that the American business man works very hard indeed; but if you follow him through; the routine of a day, you will find that he very seldom concentrates; he goes from one thing to another and expends a great deal of nervous energy and disagreed to the loafers.

If in popular parlance you know what you are talking about, you can be better outlet for the expression of your own individuality, like all other colleges Bowdoin expects you to learn how to think for many works very hard indeed; but if you follow him through; the routine of a day, you will find that he very seldom concentrates; he goes from one thing to another and expends a great deal of nervous energy and disagreed to the loafers. Another advantage of working hard that it gives you a right to express an individual stand, in a word to be the views about things, to take the gives your own theories with the work out your own theories with work out your own theories with work out your own theories with work out ever thinking hard or having them based on solid grounds, you are talking about, you can be better outlet for the expression of your own individuality. Like all other colleges Bowdoin expects you to learn how to think for outlet for the expression of your own individuality. Like all other colleges are deal of nervous energy and dissipates his time. The American laboring man too often tries to get out of doing hard work. No liberal minded person would object to high wages and short hours provided there is honest, thorough work, But of that all too little exists.

No one institution can do much to stem the tide by itself. But when a college sets reasonably high standards of accomplishment and tries to live up to them, it is performing a real national service. Our colleges are insisting today on better intellectual work, not from any narrow point of view, not because college teachers do not realize the complexity of modern life, but because we believe in the ethical as well as the mental value of hard work.

There are many satisfactions in thical as well as the mental value of hard work.

There are many satisfactions in college life; friendships, athletic rivalries, generous co-operation for common ends, varied loyalties, growth in body, mind and spirit. But a good many college men never experience the satisfaction of working hard. There ought to be periods of intellectual training as of physical training for athletic contests. "Work hard and behave" was the laconic and spartam message recently sent to a school by President Coolidge. It does not of course comprise all the duties of men. But hard work and appropriate moral behavior go a long way. In addition to that rather prudential advice we need also to remember the ideal and romantic side of college life. It is not only good to work hard; it is fun to know things. It is a great bore to be ignorant. The world is a pretty dull place to people who are ignorant and pretty flat and stale and unprofitable to the loafers.

Another advantage of working hard is that it gives you a right to express fessors will not want you to believe anything because they say it is true but because you have found it to be true. In the same way you ought to hold your own opinions about college affairs and not accept current popular views unless they agree with your own convictions. Because men in college who are prominent as captains of teams, or popular men, or members of the student council say this or that is no reason for you to follow unless you yourself are convinced that their leadership is wise. If you let others impose their views on you in college, you will be less likely to be independent in after life; for the characteristics you show in college you will be pretty sure to exhibit later on. Properly considered, college is a training school for moral and intellectual courage, and of that rare virtue the world can never have too much."

If any bell was ever heard around the world, Joseph Henry rang it in his famous experiment at the Albany Academy. The amazing development of the electrical industry traces back to this schoolmaster's coil of insulated wire and his electro-magnet that lifted a ton of iron.

Four years later when Morse used Henry's electro-magnet to invent the telegraph, Henry congratulated him warmly and unselfishly.

The principle of Henry's coil of wire is utilized by the General Electric Company in motors and generators that light cities, drive railroad trains, do away with household drudgery and perform the work of millions of men.

He either deliberately and willfully steals the book or he carelessly forgets the rights of others to gater to his personal convenience.

There is little that we can say to the man in the first sategory. Words alone will not suffice to cure the man who persistently dissignands the rights of others or who is a mere kleptomaniac. We believe that the mer in that class are fortunately few at Bowdoin. But it is certain that the men in the latter class are for at least have been, all too numerous. To these men, careless but fair-minded, a simple explanation of the president conditions should be sufficient.

Bowdoin offers fully and freely the vast resources of due to fit finest college libraries in this dountry. Every member of the college is privileged to enjoy the unlimited dee of all the facilities that the library commands. No effort has been sparent no task left un-

The college goes the limit, through the medium of the library, in playing fair with the student! Everything is free and open, that the greatest good may come to the greatest mumber. Under such circumstances, the man who will take unfair advantage of his liberty is not a true Bowdoin man, and there is but one way of showing such a man that he is in the wrong. That is through the pressure of popular, or college option. Deferred Initiations.

The whole question of deferred initiations has been explicitly discussed among the undergraduates of the college, with the resultivation that the country has been published by the State auditor and sent to all Maine cities and towns.

THE BOWDOIN ORIENT nitely decided to adopt a change in their system of initiating new men into membership. The change is, in into membership. The change is, in brief, a deferring of initiation until the first of the second semester, with the requirement that the neophyte must have attained a satisfactory scholastic standing before he is eligible to membership.

With the regular time for initiations fast approaching, now is the time for the various fraternities to decide whether or not they will follow along the old system, or adopt the new. The arguments have been well new. The arguments have been well worked out pro and con, as well in the editorial columns of the Orient as in the classroom and in the inevitable in-formal argumentatively conversational

Those who favor a system of de-ferred initiation claim that it will furnish a greater incentive to the candidate to excel in his class work, and that it will alleviate the difficulties occasioned by initiating unworthy men, men who flunk out before the year is half over, and go back to prep school, perhaps, wearing the insignia of a college fraternity. Opponents of the system maintain that such a change is inexpedient, and that it aims to remedy non-existent difficulties. Regardless of who has the right of

Regardless of who has the right of the matter, it is a question of vital present importance. Every fratern-ity on the campus should decide defi-nitely, and at once, what action they will take.

While students from Maine still predominate in the enterin; class and the Massachusetts men coine second, the percentages have changed somewhat. Last year 61 per cent of the Freshman class were from Maine. This year the percentage has dropped to 53 per cent. In last year's freshman class the percentage of Massachusetts men was 28 per cent.
This year it is nearly 32 per cent.
These figures are even more interesting when compared with the percentage for the whole student body last year, which was 62 per cent from Maine and 22 per cent from Massachusetts. The freshman figures for the last year and this year indicate the steady increase in the number of men from the Bay State.

Of the students from foreign countries in the freshman class there are 2 from China. although one of these men is listed from Massachusetts.

Mexico is represented by one student and there was one student from Japan, Fumio Okado of Tokio. Okada left college soon after the opening of the term on receipt of news from his nome that his mother had been injured in the Tokio disaster.

Fall Tennis Tournament

Tennis showed its first signs of activity this fall with the beginning of the Fall Tennis Tournament last Thursday. About seventy men were registered in the preliminaries which were completed Monday night and on Tuesday the second round was started. In view of the fact that this is but the second meet of the kind that has ever been held in the college, the large number of entries was unusually gratifying and clearly shows the growing interest of the student body in the sport.

As early as the preliminaries many of the matches were both fast and interesting, and brought to light much new material. Among the men showing well in the tournament so far are Preble 25, Spear 25, Tolman 27, McGowan 27, and Whitcomb 25. Many of the men who have been rumored to be of championship ability won through default and were not able to show as yet their worth. From the start of things it looks as though the meet would not only be a success but also as though it would accomplish its primary object: to stimulate interest in the sport, and to bring to light any possible varsity material.

Lord '25 Tennis Captain

At a meeting of the varsity members of the tennis team last June, Phillips H. Lord '25 was elected to captain the team for the 1924 season. The election was entirely logical and to be expected in vigw of the fact that Lord is the only member of the team who has played two years with the varsity. Lord's brilliant victory over Gow and Sackett of Colby in the State Intercollegiate meet last May resulted in his capturing the State intercollegiate singles tennis championship, which had been held the two preceding years by Gow of Colby. Since that time Lord has captured the singles and doubles titles at the Meriden, Conn., city championships. It is understood that the new captain has changed his style of play radically since his victory in the State meet, when his game was almost entirely cutting and accurate placement.

With Captain Lord, Tolman, and Cushman as a nucleus for a team for the coming year the prospects are bright. It is understood that there are several men in the entering class who, with experience and time, should develop into varsity calibre.

William B. Clymmer '22 visited the llege last week.

Funio Okada, a Japanese student who entered College this fall, left soon after College opened on receipt of the news that his mother was injured in the Tokyo disaster. He will return next year.

Successful Season

oads Show New Material Old Men Still in College

With plenty of material in College to form the nucleus of an excellent team, Bowdoin is already making plans for golf for the coming season. Having lost only two men who held a regular position last year, Captain Stewart Richards and Al Beals, and with good prospects in the incoming class, the team should have little difficulty in running through its schedule in pleasing style. Although last season marked Bowdoin's first appearance on the links, the new squad carried off its series of matches in fine style. Against the country club teams which occupied the majority of the dates on the schedule. Bowdoin showed up in fine style, while against Brown and M.I.T., the only two colleges appearing on the card, the White golfers put up an equally good game, tying the former and losing; to the latter only after a hard fight. This year, Bowdoin hopes to place its team in the field against at least five college aggregation reserving only a small place on the schedule for country club matches. In this way the golf team should be better able to find its place in inter-collegiate circles. Plans are also being made to enter the team in the national intercollegiate matches next spring.

Remaining in college from last year's team are the following men: Fasso '25, who played number one position, Keany '24, Williams '25, P. Smith, Aspinwall, Robinson, all '26. Captain Stewart Richards and Al Beals were both lost to the team during the greater part of last season due to scholastic requirements has left College this year. To take the places of these men, however, are a number of good prospects in the Freshman class. Under the leadership of Fasso, the Freshman golf squad has been going around the links almost daily during the past week, and several men have shown ability to date.

Plans are already going forward on a schedule for the coming year. It is hoped to arrange matches with Amherst, Brown, Boston University, Massachusetts Tech, and possibly Dartmouth. Country Club matches will probably include Brunswick, Augusta, Portland and

Student Council Holds Rally For Blanket Taxes

On Tuesday night a mass meeting was held in Memorial Hall by the Student Council for the purpose of putting before the students of the college the 1 voposition of raising the Blanket Taxes from fifteen to twenty dollars and for discussing the question as to what was the best date to hold Ivy on this year. Miguel '23, president of the Student Council, presided over the meeting and briefly stated the question and its importance.

Mr. MacCormick then spoke as representative of the Athletic Council stating that he had a double interest in the proposition in that his position as Treasurer of the A.S.B.C. made it possible to realize the real significance of the deficiency and that as member of the Athletic Council it was possible for him to predict the result of a failure to pass the measure. Mr. MacCormick said that when the blanket tax was voted in 1912 the amount was the same, fifteen dollars, in spite of the fact that the athletic expenditures were but a small per centage of what they are at present. Everything has increased since that time, the size and calibre of the various contests are far greater, the costs of coaches and supplies have practically doubled, and the number of men taking part in the sports has greatly increased.

Last year baseball had a deficit of thirteen hundred dollars while track had a deficiency of fifteen hundred dollars. This was in spite of the fact that the college contributed four thousand dollars to athletic and the alumni twenty-seven hundred dollars. This year it is hoped and planned to carry on the same number of anthetic contests, but it will be with difficulty even now the measure is passed. Since 1916, when the athletic expenditures were fourteen hundred dollars. A mere surface examination of the fraternity situation at Bowdoin shows the need of some regulative organization to settle once and for all the general policies of internal affairs, as well as those of guest import to the college at large. Rasning and initiation, with all the varied subjects that come under those two general heads, are plainly mattern pertinent to the internal organization of the fraternity. But they are duestions the solution of which must be as generally agreed upon as is the policy of condemning political agreements. A change of some sort must come. No college, however liberal, will forever tolerate a system under which a man may be pledged to a fraternity three years before he ever comes to college, nor will it long endure the system under which the noophyte is made a fraternity man almost entirely on trust, before he has had opportunity to show his real worth, and before he has earned the right to enjoy the privileges of full membership. Still another plan has been proposed. This third offers a combination of the principles of the two preceding, but proceeds along lines which would hardly change the status of the existent student legislative body. The idea is to have an independent advisory committee of the fraternities elected by the fraternities to discuss all pertinent questions of fraternity welfare, and to give expert advice to the student council, which would retain its position as ultimate arbiter. This plan would afford an opportunity for equal representation of the fraternities, at the same time keeping the balance of power in the committee at large, elected to look out for the best interests of the whole college, and not for any particular group or groups Still another plan has been for any particular group or groups within the whole.

An Inter-fraternity Council.

The question of creating and maintaining amity and concord in interfraternity relations has long been an urgent one Var'ous plans have been offered, but friction still exists to a greater extent than is strictly unavoidable. There is a real need for an organization within the college to provide for the annical and effective settlement of all questions of interfraternity policy. So far as is known to the writer, no such organization has ever existed at Bowdoin.

In questions relating only to the fraternities, and lating only to the fraternities, and touching only incidentally the whole body, the committee would find the approval of the student council as readily obtainable as a rubber stamp. But in the event of a conflict between the interest of the fraternities per se and that of the larger body which supports them, the student council would be in position to provide for the

and that of the larger body which supports them, the student council would be in position to provide for the greatest good of all.

Bowdoin needs some such organization, and needs it badly. The writer has no desire to obtain for himself the unsavory reputation of a "calamity howler," but he does wish to present to the attention of the men he represents the needs and the opportunities of the college. As long as the fraternities are run on a basis of what is colloquially known as throat cutting, so long will they fail to do all they well may for the college. Bear Skin will make its first appearance this year at the Bowdoin-Bates game when the Football Number will be placed on sale. It is understood that the new board has made an unusual effort to improve this is sue of the Bear Skin in an attempt to give new life to the publication. The material which is to appear in this is-sue is on a far higher plane than that of previous numbers and contains of previous numbers and contains many original articles which should add greatly to the reputation of the magazine. Among the outstanding articles is "Spike" MacCormick's "Customs, Manners, and Dress." The editorials by Jack Watson should prove to be both humorous and interesting.

prove to be both humorous and interesting.

Men who have subscribed to the Bear Skin for the year will receive their issues on Friday night before the game, although positively no copies will be on sale that night. This is a much improved method over last year, when the magazine was not issued until the game. The board now plans to have subscribers' copies delivered several days before the game, thus giving subscribers an advantage over men without subscriptions.

Sophomores Easily Defeat Freshmen Interclass Golf

The Sophomores experienced but little difficulty in the first of the interclass golf matches last Tuesday afternoon in defeating the Freshmen team by a decisive score, winning three out of the four individual set-to's, and running up a score of 7-3. The three point Nassau system of scoring was used, the winner of the first nine holes in each individual match receiving one point, and the winner of the total eighteen one point. The play resulted in several interesting contests, of which the one between Robinson '26, and Kelly '27 was perhaps the best. In the latter match, Kelley finished the first nine with a lead of two holes, taking one point, but in the second nine holes his Sophomore opponent hit his stride and quickly pulled down the lead, finishing the match three up and one to play. Smith '26, had but little difficulty in winning his match, while Vose, also of the Sophomore team defeated his opponent by a wide margin. McGuire was the only first year man to win his match, efeating Aspinwall in a close contest, two up, after the first nine holes had been halved.

The purpose of the interclass contests in golf, which are taking place for the first time this year, is to create as much interest as possible in the sport, and at the same time to secure a line on possible material for the team next spring. Several good prospects have been discovered in the Freshman class, and with this new material to fill up the vacancies in the team caused by graduation, the outlook is very optimistic. Aspinwall '26, at present acting-manager, is already at work on the schedule for this spring, and should be able to announce several definite dates in the near future. phomores experienced but ulty in the first of the inter-

Tufts Withdraws From Meet At Last Moment—Foster Strong Second In Race With Cutcheon

Harvard defeated the Bowdoin cross-country team 24 to 31 last Friday at Cambridge over the Soldier's field course in what was to have been a triangular meet until Tufts withdrew at the last minute. The race, a battle to the very finish, narrowed down to a personal contest between Cutcheon, Harvard's crack two-pinier, and Bob Foster. The Harvard man nosed out Foster by a bare 35 yards after the lead had changed hands several times. Allan Howes, finishing second for Bowdoin, placed fifth in the race. Captain Plaisted, who had cramps shortly after the start of the race, put up a game fight throughout. Purely through fight and nerve he finished eighth and tenth respectively. Juniors Defeat Seniors Interclass Golf Tournament

As a result of the matches played last week, the Juniors now hold the inter-class golf championship of the College, by virtue of their recent defeat of the Seniors. The latter team won the right to meet the Juniors in the final match of the championship when it took over the Sophomore team, previously victorious over, the Freshmen, by a 5½ to 3½ score last Monday afternoon. Although the Sophomores were handicapped to a considerable extent by the loss of several of their best players, they put up a good fight, with the result that the Seniors were forced to fight for every point they gained. Kirkpatrick, playing the number one position for his team, added three points to the Senior's score by defeating Vose, while Keaney, playing number two, accounted for two points, after dropping one on the first nine. The latter match proved to be one of the best of the day. Goodhue, Keaney's Sophomore opponent, opened the contest by winning the first five holes in par figures, and then proceeded to maintain a decisive lead to the end of the first nine for one point. In the second nine, however, the Senior staged an amazing comeback, winning the last five holes in a row and taking the match. The only Sophomore to win his match was Aspinwall, who defeated Jewett in a twenty hole contest, taking two points on the second nine and the match, after the first nine holes had been halved.

The final inter-class contest was staged on Friday between the Seniors match, after the first line holes had been halved.

The final inter-class contest was staged on Friday between the Seniors and the Juniors. Fasso, playing number one for the Juniors, had little trouble in polishing off Kirkpatrick, this picking up three points. It may be interesting to note that Fasso's score for the 18 holes was a flat 73. In the other two matches, Nichols '25 defeated Keaney '24, and Williams '25 defeated Jewett '24.

Lectures On Near East

Last Sunday night the Reverend Chester B. Emerson of Detroit, Michigan, spoke in Memorial Hall on the situation in the Near East.

He received an invitation from a New York society to be a "paid guest" on a tour of inspection in the Near East. He received an invitation from a New York society to be a "paid guest" on a tour of inspection in the Near East. He went with a party of about eighteen young people, many college graduates, to shores of the Adriatic. "I wouldn't give two cents for any part of the Mediterranean east of Italy," remarked the speaker. The boat which carried them across the Adriatic to Armenia had previously been used as a refugee-carrying steamer and was terribly infested with fleas. On the shores of Armenia over one hundred thousand people stood massed "waiting for them."

Every public building is being used to accommodate refugees. The dirt, filth and squalidness is terrible. In one corner of the king's palace, now used to house refugees, a play, given in English, was shown for their benefit. Speaking of the refugee situation there, the speaker stated, "The problem of the world today is either the elenched fist or the open hand."

The boys and girls of Corinth are fed and drilled in perfect order. Each has a box to hold things which it can call its own. Corinth is filled to overslowing with refugees.

Greece has a population of only five or six million natives, yet when the crisis came in Asia Minor, the Greeks took over one million Armenians into Greece to aid them. Maine Beats Bates By One Touchdown—Tufts Hands Defeat to Wesleyan

Maine 12, Bates 7. This score should indicate that we will face two teams of about the same calibre in the two coming football games. While Bates, our immediate rival, was the loser, it has by no means a weak team, Rutsky, a half-back and Charlie Ray, the dusky full back, will prove very dangerous while Kempton, the little substitute quarter, is a wizard at forward passing and Rowe flashing on the wing. If we can judge by statistics on paper, the White has something to think about in its next game.

The University of Maine, only winner in the State series, is undoubtedly a powerful team. With such a group of backs as Blair, who made a gain of thirty-five yards through the whole Bates team, the slashing line plunger Gruhn and Captain Small, no team is weak. But more than this, the light blue has a veteran line which is heavy and powerful. All in all, last year's champions have no team to ignore.

Tufts beat Wesleyan fourteen to six. Although it entered the game on the short end of the betting, the Medford team opened an heretofore concealed attack and pushed the ball over for a touchdown very early in the game. Coach Eddie Casey has built un a team that is primed with football knowledge besides being strong and speedy. Van French, the left half who made a ffty-four yard run, and Chandonett with his ability to haul down passes and his powerful line plunges, and Perry the flashing quarterback, who showed both good geheralship and accurate passing. These men form the nucleus of a well rounded team, a team which has all ot of fight.

Both Dunnack and Mathers failed to gain and Jones nailed Tarpey for a three yard loss. Millett kicked to the ten yard line and Malaran it back to the thirty-five. Farrington failed to gain while Peacock stopped Jones short. Mal was forced to punt to the twenty-five yard line to Tarpey who was stopped at the forty mark. Millett made first two and then five yards on line plunges while Tarpey made two off tackle. Millett kicked offside at the twenty and Jones and Garland made six yards and Morrell again punted. Carson-went in for Dunnack and Garland nailed him in his tracks. Colby was off side. Carson stumbled and failed to gain and Millett punted to the White's forty-eight yard mark. Morrell lost five yards but on the next play he tossed a long pass and a Colby man interfered with the catcher thirty-five yards down the field so it was our ball there. Two rushes by Jones netted four yards and a truck play by Garland made first down. McGary was substituted for Mathers on the Waterville team. THE BOWDOIN ORIENT men have every confidence in their team to win. We have watched the team to win. We have watched the team surmount great obstacles before and we know that they can do it again. It is that great confidence that again. It is that great confidence that lends the hearty ring of sincerity to the songs and cheers that roar from the stands this year. Student support is stronger than ever, student confidence in our team is unlimited, and best of all, the team deserves it all. "Got get Bates!"

In the "Orient" of October 17th I find the statement that "in next week's Orient' the list of names of men who have not paid will be published." This list is published on the assumption that the men, whose blanket taxes are unpaid, are disloyal to the college. Here is displayed a wanton disregard of the motives and reasons of these men for not paying their blanket taxes. With no reservations whatsoever, disloyalty to the college is assigned to each and every one of them as the cause of the failure to pay. But what proof is there? Is their disloyalty so incontestable that the extreme measure of proclaiming it to the college at large is taken? Is there not one among them whose reason for his unpaid tax is that he cannot possibly afford to pay it? Some of them may deserve such arbitrary measures, but to those whose motives are other than pure disloyalty a rank injustice is done. The very act of making public such a list savors of blackmail. I cannot believe that it is representative of the student body. It is a blot upon the good name of the college. Surely the men who resolved on such a course could not have given in any but the most superficula consideration, for had they thought of it at all seriously they could not help but have seen that it was an action one might expect from a cal but never part of the property of the pure of the pure of the property of the pure of th of traveling the whole world round and of meeting anybody with a clear conscience. Just as the slip of a hand might cost a man so much in money that he could not repay and he would never dare enter the stock exchange again, so might a slip of the tongue cause a man so much shame that he might want to live in exclusion during the rest of his life.

Courage is what a man needs mostly, according to Dr. Emerson. The men who are always playing safe, as do most people nowa-adays, do not get very far. Too much stress is being laid on keeping on the safe side. In his opinion, a person is not safe until he knows he can face anything unshudderingly and then he is courageous. "A fish," he said, "swims up stream. A piece of, dead wood drifts down."

Too many men of fifty fail to see, as they look back on life, just why they haven't made more of themselves. They have been always on the jump, yet now they are nothing. Dr. Emerson compared them to a top which when spinning looks entirely red but when stopped. In closing, Dr. Emerson compared them to a top which when spinning looks entirely red but when stopped is only partially so. Now they are stopped. In close to Jesus Christ.

Maine's defeat came as a result of a Colby touchdown early in the first quarter. Colby, profitting from its lesson in the Bowdoin game opened up its full attack from the very start of the game, scored a touchdown in the first five minutes of play. This proved to be the only scoping of the eaties. its full attack from the very start of the game, scored a touchdown in the first five minutes of play. This proved to be the only scoring of the entire game. Each team exhibited a versatile and at times spectacular attack. The flashy end runs of Small and Blair of Maine, the powerful line-plunging of Gruhn and Repscha. the brilliant forward passing and kicking of Small were the outstanding points in the attack of the Orono team. Colby's game from the start was opened, being filled with end-runs and forward passes. A short pass over the goal line from MacDonald to Tarpey brought the first six points of the score, while Soule was successful in the try for goal after touchdown. Maine tried several forward passes in its futile attempt to score but did not have the punch to put the ball over. The Orono team came close to scoring just before the close of the first period when a 30-yard pass from Small to Elliott was complete and which brought Maine to Colby's 10-yard line. Small made five yards around the end and Repscha added one prome on a skin tackle play. Small then tried to duplicate Colby's performance of passing over the goal line but was unsuccessful.

In the last three minutes of play, with the score 3 to 0 against them, the Tufts team brought victory to their side by opening up a series of forward passing. With five minutes left in the second half, Perry went in at quarterback for the Medford team and immediately started an open game. After having advanced the ball once, only to lose it on a bad pass, the losing team started again at micheld and completed two successful passes. Van French received a forward pass on the Middlebury 35-yard line and dashed to a touchdown before the defense of the Vermont team could reach him. Perry missed the try for extra point by inches. This is Tufts' fifth victory of the year and enables her to meet Harvard this coming Saturday with a clean slate.

Fasso '25 Showing Well

Last Saturday Bates outpointed Bowdoin 12-7 in an exceedinly close and interesting game. It was a bright, and interesting game. It was a bright, sunny day with a slight wind blowing cross-field towards the grandstands. The heavy Bates team jumped into the game and took a lead at the start. The flashing speed of the Maroon back-field, which opened a bag full of trick plays seemed to dazzle the White warriors, and it was not long before a twenty-five yard end run by the little colored baffbeck Pay and an addit a twenty-five yard end run by the little colored halfback Ray, and an addition of fifteen more yards by Woodman put the ball on the Bowdoin three yard line. It took two more plays, however, before the fighting home team could be penetrated and Ray carried the ball across. The goal failed. In the second period almost the same thing happened and the Bowdoin team held on the two yard line only to have Mal Morrell's punt hit the goal posts and a long pass from Kempton to Woodman gave the Lewiston team its final score.

Proves Great Success

Harry Keaney's football song, which the Orient prints this week for the benefit of those who have not been able to get a copy, has met with an enthusiastic response. The need for a fighting football song has long been felt and this one more than fills the bill. When the song was first sung at the Colby rally Dean Nixon expressed his opinion that it was something very much needed and complimented it highly. It has become popular with the students and is sure to go big when everyone learns it.

The words are as follows:
Fight on dear old Bowdoin Put the ball across the line Fight for dear old Bowdoin Here it goes across this time The good old White we're with you And we're cheering for your men For it's FIGHT FIGHT dear old Bowdoin Fight on again

Hurrah for dear old Bowdoin Fight on again

Hurrah for dear old Bowdoin Fight on again

Hurrah for dear old Bowdoin Fight on again

Bates won the toss and chose to de-fend the south goal and Bowdoin kick-ed to Rutsky who was stopped on his forty yard line. After several vain attempts at line bucks, Rutsky kicked outside on our thirty yard line. Bow-doin could not gain so Mal punted out side on Bates forty-four marker. Once again Rutsky was forced to kick and side on Bates forty-four marker. Once again Rutsky was forced to kick and after making one first down the White captain sent a spiral to the thirty-five yard line. Bates then advanced forty five yards towards our goal on end runs by Ray and Rutsky and line plunges by Woodman. Here Horace Hildreth came to our rescue and intercepted a pass on our twenty yard line. Frank Farrington made first down but Mal was forced to punt to the forty-Mal was forced to punt to the forty-five yard line. From here Ray raced through for twenty-five yards and Woodman brought the ball within our five yard line. It took the Lewiston team two rushes before Ray could register the first score of the game. Rutsky's goal failed. Bowdoin again kicked off and Ray ran it back twenty kicked off and Ray ran it back twenty yards to the forty yard line. The Maroon failed to gain and Rutsky punted to Mal on the fifteen yard line. Farrington ripped off twenty-five yards through tackle. Phillips went in for Kohler and made a nine yard end run as the quarter ended with the ball on our forty five yard line. our forty-five yard line.

Tommy Fasso, Bowdoin's golf captain, has been making an exceptional showing lately. Within the last week he has tied the amateur record of 75 at the Portland Country Club and has come within two strokes of the amateur and professional record at the Augusta Country Club.

This augurs well for the success of the golf team this year. Not only is Fasso an exceptional player himself but he is a good instructor and should be able to do a lot in building up an excellent team.

Loyalty.

A few days ago, and as a direct aftermath of the Bates game, the editor had a rather extended discussion on Bowdoin spirit with an alumnus of the college who has been intimately associated with the students for a long period of years. When we touched on the evident lack of heal enthusiasm in the cheering at the game, the alumnus nearly squelched us with a socratic query: "After all isn't that sort of thing merely the froth of the strong spirit of loyalty that lies beneath the

My friend of the alumn speaks from much experience, I realize, but I fear that he may not have grasped the full significance of what he said. To a certain degree the organized cheering at Bowdoin, as at all trially American colleges, is artificial. That appears in the fact that one cheer leader may be able to urge a greater volume of noise from the crowd than another. So far the English idea of American, and by only by the youth in the stands, but also by the youth on the playing field, and there the psychologic of the thing

For concrete examples, in the negative, Bowdoin men may recall the funeral silence that fell upon the ranks of our supporters when Bates jushed the ball down the field for gain after gain during her periods of dominance. They may they recall the may then recall the a most unestrain-able tunuit that broke forth to drown the calling of the signals when Bow-doin took the ball and started rushing recall spontaneous admonions to "get that coot," and the bursts gapplause, not of sympathy but of sportsmanlike relief, that went up ten time was called to allow for rejis on the injured freepher of an oping half back whose skin happened be of a somewhat duskier shaden that of the cheerers. Who sympathizes with such people when they are deprived of their freefrom the crowd than another. So far the English idea of American, and by American we mean Bowdoin, cheering holds good. But there is a larger aspect to it. The American youth's attitude to organized cheeting is inbred. For years he has been laught to believe that that form of applause and exhortation is the one effective one. Unfortunately for the justition of the English adherents the idea is held not only by the youth in the stands, but he cannot find some honest way to get he cannot find some honest way to get ten dollars between September and ten dollars between September and Christmas? No matter how hard he may be working to earn his way, he may be working to earn his way, he can toil a bit harder for the privileges of being square with the A.S.B.C. If he can't do it he is not worthwhile, and may as well get out of college now, for he will find many harder difficul-

Unless the writer has been monstrously deceived by the many athletes with whom he has discussed this subject, he is correct in saying that the team desires and feels the need of appreciation of difficulties as well as triumphs from its grand stand members. Such appreciation does not mean that the men in the stands must "yell their heads off" from the beginning of a game to the end of it. It does mean, however, that they must stay with their players in those heart rending moments when the tide of battle turns against them. Furthermore, it means mester of residence in college who thinks he can get out of paying the final installment of the tax, simply because he will soon be going away and his bluff may not be "called"!

Will some member of the Student Will some member of the Student Council duly request a referendum on the question "Resolved, that the College authorities hereafter place the Blanket Tax upon Term Bills." published in the "Orient" of October 24th prompts me as a member of the Board of Managers to write a few words supporting the managers' stand on the Blanket Tax situation.

Concerning the publication of the st of names of men who have not aid their tax Mr. Klees wrote in list of paid th part: "Such an action is utterly out of accord with the Bowdoin tradition of fair play, with the Bowdoin tradition of fair play, with the American tradition of justice." To me the exact opposite is true. Is it fair play and justice that certain men, perfectly able to pay their taxes, be allowed to enjoy the benefits of the Associated Stu-dents of Bowdoin College and mingle with their fellows with the complacent feeling that their business laxity will be unobserved? There are a very few men in college that are truly un-able to pay their blanket tax. Recog-nizing this fact the Board of Managers excuses such men and that is the end of it as far as they are concerned. But it is the altogether too large class of men that are perfectly able to pay but won't. Liberal credit extension are given for the mere asking. It is indeed an extremely regrettable fact that so many Bowdoin men are com-objection, except the sustained lack funds, to paying a blanket tax. Th nominal sum is just as legitimate bill as his tuition or Fraternity bill. Since we cannot bar him from colleg classes or deprive him of the Fratern ity privileges, it seems the least that we can do is to let his fellow students know that he is a slacker. The effi-ciency of this system is demonstrated by the fact that 97 per cent of the men in college have paid their tax or signi-fied their intention of doing so. Since it is obvious that some stimulus is nec-essary to collect the money, it seems evident to me that the publication of the list of delinquents in the "Orient is as mild and yet as effective a legiti-mate method as any we could employ.

To the Editor of the Orient:

To the Editor of the Orient:
Dear Sir:

As a member of the Bowdoin College football squad I wish to protest against certain remarks which have been made by some of the alumni, student body, and others interested, concerning the Bates game of last Saturday. There seems to be a desire on the part of these aforementioned people to place the blame for our defeat on Fred Ostergren, our splendid coach.

Edwards '16, and Emerson W. Zeit, ler '20.

Governor Baxter called attention to the remarkable influence which Dia Whittier has held over many generations of young men. After paying further tribute to the father of Bowdoin athletics, he turned to the Doctor and said: "As Governor, I want to say that the people of the State of Maine, not only Bowdoin men but others, appreciate the work you have done for thom, and they wish you long life and happiness, and love you from the bottom of their hearts."

Mr. MacCormick spoke briefly of football plans for next year and then speaking of Dr. Whittier said: "I consider him the cornerstone of Bowdoin do and their spirit. It is men of his spirit who make Bowdoin atontinuous proposition, who tie done period to another. There is no man in all the long list of Bowdoin alumin to whom I can pay a more heartfelt tribute."

President Sills dwelt on the nonathletic activities of Dr. Whittier, He takes of the Doctor's late against firm and the past.

President Sills dwelt on the nonathletic activities of Dr. Whittier. He spoke of the Doctor's late aoustin unceasing service. He said: "Bowdoin feels that in his service it has something which in the very vital sense of the word, is a precious thing."

Dr. Dudley A. Sargent "55, who was unable to be present on account of his physical condition, sent a letter justing tribute to Dr. Whittier's service. He said "No one has done more to use hold the fundamental principles of physical training than the Doctor and Bowdoin may well be proud of ham."

Phillips received the kick off and made a twenty yard run lead, but Bates intercepted Kempton, who was in at quarter for a long pass from Kempton to Rowebrought the ball to the six yard line where Bewdoin got the ball on downs and Phillips made three yards as the half ended.

The second half opened when Farrington ran back the kick-off twenty-five yards to the forty yard line. Several passes failed and Mal punted to the twenty-five yard line where Hildreth nailed Rutsky in his tracks. Bates was forced to kick and Mal soon returned it but Bates again punted and Mal received on the thirty-five yard line. Kohler made four yards and a pass netted four more. Frank made first down. Bates was penalized fifteen yards and kohler and Blake made another first down through the line. Mal made six yards and Kohler made nine more through the line. It was Bowdoin's first down with goal to go. Farrington and Blake made through for a touchdown, Mal got the goal on an offside by Bates. Rutsky ran back the kickoff firen yards but Ray was stopped dead three successive, times. Farrington received Rutsky's punt at about mid-field but he and Mal fell short of first down and Bates took the ball. Ray made eight yards but dropped two of them on the next play. It was a fast race over a difficult five and a half mile course, and Captain Payne of Colby lowered the course record, held by Buker of Bates, intercollegiate two mile champion, by twelve seconds, finishing in thirty-two minutes, twenty-five and two-fifths seconds.

Hillman and Raymond of Maine fin-Hillman and Raymond of Meine finished second and third respectively, and Captain McGinley of Bates beat out Bob Foster for fourth position. Captain Frank Plaisted followed Bob to the tape a few yards behind! Other Bowdoin men to score were Howes, twelfth; Small, seventeenth, and Eastman, nineteenth. Ham, a freshman, finished twenty-first just failing to score.

All of the Bowdoin team were in good condition at the finish, which showed how carefully they had been trained, because the race grind was too much for many of the starters and a few collapsed. This is the beventh victory for Maine while Bakes has three to its credit. Bowdoin and Colby have yet to register a victory.

Paul Blanshard Speaks

Paul Blanchard, field secretary of Paul Blanchard, field secretary of the League for Industrial Democracy, speaking last Thursday evening in Adams Hall under 'he auspices of the Economics Club, presented a platform upon which labor and the college men might agree.

College men, who as a rule are from the capitalist class, can agree with organized labor on the right of collective bargaining. The industrial Radio Station WNP

The third point which Mr. Blanchard made in his platform was the abolition of injunc. point which Mr. Bianchard made in his platform was the abolition of injunctions in strikes. The injuncton he characterized as a vicious and unjust tool of the capitalist. The last plank dealt with the closing of the gap between rich and poor.

Mr. Blanchard expressed himself as in favor of the closed shop principle and as opposed to the check-off system. Absentee ownership was characterized as far different from the old relationship between employer and employee. The public, and college men in particular, demands that labor as

We demand no unnecessary strikes; and we demand that neither labor nor capital shall dodge an honest day's work. The laborer who shirks, Mr. Blanchard said, does it because he sees the capitalist doing it.

Mr. Blanchard is a charming and interesting speaker despite his radical tendencies. He is a graduate of the University of Michigan, and has studied at-Columbia and Harvard. He wears a Phi Beta Kappa key. The League for Industrial Democracy, which he represents, is a national organization committed to a program of "education for the new social order based on production for use and not for profit." It was formed by college alumni. Its officers are largely college men who have had labor experience.

Caul Blanshard Speaks
On Labor And College Man

Last Saturday, before a crowd of about six thousand, and on an ideal day, the powerful Maine eleven beat day, the powerful Maine eleven beat the lighter Bowdoin team 28-6 at Orono. The up state team got the jump at the first and gained a lead that the heroic attempts of the White could not overcome. Almost at the first, Lunge, the Maine left tackle broke through and blocked Garland's punt and the Bowdoin star could not recover the ball till it was over his own goal line. Then a series of line plunges brought the Blue to our twenty-five yard line, and a long pass from Merritt to Small nut the ball over and planges brought the Blue to our twen-ty-five yard line, and a long pass from Merritt to Small put the ball over and the 'goal failed. Maine again received the kick-off and consistent but not spectacular gains by the whole University back field coupled with another long pass brought the pig-skin to the four-yard line. It took the Maine four-yard line. It took the Maine team all four downs, however, to push over another touchdown, for Garland then sent a long kick to Taylor who made a beautiful run back and started Maine on another slashing offensive and Small and Blain gained consistently until the Blue sent another one of those passes to Merritt who was stopped on our twenty yard line and a couple of plunges by Gruhn gave him his second and Maine its third touchdown. Blair kicked the goal. Maine kicked off to Farrington this time but after making one first down, Capt. Small of the Orono team in-Capt. Small of the Orono team in-terupted one of Mal's passes on our forty-five yard line, Maine again star-ted a march down the field but the plucky White line refused to allow the plucky White line refused to allow the severest of the Maine plunges to pentrate beyond its three-yard line and again when the Blue tried to score the Bowdoin team held on the fifteen yard line. Maine again got that far but the whistle blew as the half ended. The second half was a different story, altho it started with a Maine onslaught resulting in a touchdown by Gruhn and a goal by Blair. Bob Philips then received Small's kick and ran it back fifteen-vards and Mal punning the several second s Gruhn and a gwa ... Philips then received Small's kick and ran it back fifteen-yards and Mal punted. The White then gained, the ball on downs fifty-seven yards from the goal line. Giving its very best and showing undying spirit, Bowdoin began its first great offensive. Time and time again, Joe Garland, despite his injuries, ripped through the heavy Maine team and with the help of his injuries, ripped through the heavy Maine team and with the help of Frank Farrington finally pushed the ball over in the first play of the last period, Joe himself made over forty of these fifty-seven yards. Mal's try for the extra point was blocked. Joe then kicked off to Maine and the fighting White gained the ball on downs on its forty-five yard line and started a drive with Garland leading only to on its forty-five yard line and started a drive, with Garland leading, only to be stopped by a fumble on the five-yard line. From then on, it was mostly exchange of punts with each team making a few first downs. Outplayed thirteen to two on first downs, the invincible Bowdoin spirit gave us an advantage ten to nine in the last half.

The Game
Small kicked-off over the goal line and it was Bowdoin's first down on the twenty-yard line and Joe Garland kicked to Maine's forty-yard line. After failing to make much gain, Small punted to Mal who was stopped on his twenty-yard line and when Joe tried to kick Lunge broke when Joe tried to kick Lunge broke through and blocked it. The College has reason to be proud of the numerous additions to her campus during the past year. A memorial gateway of remarkable beauty; a bulletin board which, in replacing the old unsightly litter on the Chapel door, lends a harmonious touch in the ultilitarian arrangement of things collegian; these are visible tokens of the affection of our alumni for the College. And to these beauties of sight which greeted us as we returned to college in the fall must now be added a newer beauty still—this one of sound. The College has reason to be proud in the fall must now be added a newer beauty still—this one of sound.

Through the manificence of two members of an old Bowdoin family, the Paysons, the college now enjoys a musical distinction which enhances its already well established reputation as a leader for the finer things of life. It is most appropriate that a memorial to the Paysons and Martins who have been connected with Bowdoin since its incention should take the form of inception should take the form of its inception should take the form of chimes.

Ancient in its organ, the music of chimes has played an important part in the history of ausis. In the old world, in monastery, eathedral, and college, the sweet-kone chimes have worked their way into the hearts and lives of the people, affording them a musical tradition with in its dignity. A few weeks have suff, ed to make the Bowdoin chimes a real, part of the life of the college. Early each morning they send out their successions for the chapel service, and a intervals of some days extended concerts furnish a source of pleasure to all the inhabitants of the community.

Around the chime's will grow a lasting tradition, a tradition which should have a larger part is forming the characters of Bowdoin men in the college generations to cone. The inspiration of their music will be one of the characters of bowdshi the in the lege generations to cone. The inspiration of their music wil be one of the great things which the alumnus will remember of his undergraduate days. Eternal as true priemiship, and as strong as its impression, the music of the Bowdoin chimes has begun its long career of inspiration to Bowdoin men.

Red Cross Roll Call Starts November 11-29

There is probably no word harder worked in the colleged and universities today than "vision." And it is because of this quest of vision that students are thinking with a clarity, a degree of penetration, an inclusiveness, and an earnestness of purpose which did not characterize preceding generations. Underneth a certain surface lightness engendered by the healthful give-and-take of present day campus life, there is developing a fibre which will stand the test of the epoch upon which the world is entering.

The Red Cross, national and international, recognizes the fact that in the American colleges and universities of today is to be found its leadership for tomorrow, in a work which pre-haps more than any other is inter-preting to the world at large the full scope and meaning of the ideal of the Brotherhood of Man. Consequently it two years, graduating in February of the second year following their entrance.

During the past summer applications from 443 men for admission to the School in September were received. From this number only 332 could be finally accepted and enrolled. A comparison with corresponding figures for last year of 302 applications received and 247 men admitted, shows the growing demand for the training given by the school.

It was in order to meet this increase.

It was in order to meet this increasing demand for admission to its courses that the recent announcement was made.

It is expected that this opportunity will prove attractive to those men desirous of entering the school who will have completed the requirements for their college degree at Midyear and who would, therefore, under the more usual program, lose at least five months before beginning their professional career. It should also be of interest to those men who, having graduated in June and gone into business, have found their training inadequate for an effective grasp of business conditions.

The following men from Bowdoin College are among the successful applicants now registered in the school: Second year men: Cobb, R. W.; Eldridge, D. S.

First year men: Bishop, H. P.; Miller, N. F.; Philbrick, K. R.; Wetherell, J. H.

"O That Israel Might Live Before Thee" Text of Rev. Ashby's Address

The Reverend T. E. Ashby, pastor of the First Congregational Church, conducted the chapel services last Sun-day. His text was taken from the book of Genesis, "O that Israel might book of Genesis, o that state inight live before thee."

He appealed to college men to be courageous in carrying out the ideal of their youth. It has been said that of their youth. It has been said that the college man is the most pessimistic man in the world. It is college men who have seen vision. World progress is the result of the realization of dreams. History has shown that the nation which risks itself for a cause is the better off. There are always perils when a man dedicates his life to the dreams of childhood. We should be courageous in so dedicating our lives. He said that one should not content himself with things as they are in the world today but should strive to work out his ideals of progress and advancement of civilization, even though it cost him all his time and strength. If hundreds of great men had not given their lives for their convictions of right, civilization would not have reached the high plane which it has attained.

THE BOWDOIN ORIENT

William Rowe '24 Editor-in-Chief Frederick P. Perkins '25 ... Assistant Manager Byron L. Mitchell '25... ... Assistant Manager Byron L. Mitchell '25... ... Assistant Manager Samuel H. Williams '25. Speaks On Rome And Italy

Last Thursday evening Dr. Charles Upson Clark, prominent in classical and diplomatic circles, and former professor at Yale, lectured in Hubbard Hall. The subject of his lecture was Rome, past and present and what it has meant to modern civilization.

In opening his lecture Dr. Clark spoke of his former visit to Bowdoin, when he lectured on Roumania. He then turned to the topic of what Rome has meant to our modern civilization.
He spoke of the Roman Laws which still live as the basis of the laws of most Christian countries and have scarcely been improved upon throughout the centuries. He called attention to he importance of the Roman language in forming the foundation of all the Romance languages and the English to a large extent. Rome, according to Dr. Clark, is particularly interesting to the Christian nations because Rome was the cradle of Christianity in its early days and the seat to power of the only church for many hundreds of years. Dr. Clark spoke of his researches in the Ambrosian Library at Milan and, in connection with this, of his acquaintance with the present Pope, then the librarian there.
This led to the subject of modern Rome and Italy. Dr. Clark described graphically how the Italian troops withstood the great German offensive.
This spirit of bravery and perseverance against odds was, he felt, the true spirit of Rome, ancient and modern.

Dr. Clark next turned to his exhibition of lantern slides. This program glowed while a nearby Pluecker tube was "What did you think?" an in action. "I did not English scientist asked him. think; I investigated," was the reply.

Roentgen covered the tube with black paper. Still the cardboard glowed. He took photographs through a pine door and discovered on them a white band corresponding to the lead beading on the door. His investigation led to the discovery of X-rays.

Roentgen's rays have proved an inestimable boon to humanity. In the hands of doctor and surgeon they are saving life and reducing suffering. In the hands of the scientist they are yielding new knowledge - even of the arrangement and structure of atoms. The Research Laboratories of the General Electric Company have contributed greatly to these ends by developing more powerful and efficacious X-ray tubes.

Bates Defeats Trinity 7-0, Ray Injured -Boston University Triumphs Over Colby 18-7

The cross country team lost to New Hampshire State last Monday, October 29, by seven points, the final score being 24 to 31. It is safe to say that Bowdoin's defeat was due to the fact that Captain Frank Plaisted was troubled by a bad side, and could do no better than get twelfth place, when if he had been in first class condition he would have doubtlessly been able to have finished among the first three.

The feature of the meet was the individual race between Bob Foster of Bowdoin, New England half mile champion, and Captain Snow of the New Hampshire team, which was finally won by Foster, although he was forced to extend himself by Snow. Another remarkable performance for the Bowdoin team was that of Ham, the freshman flash, who finished fifth, in the time of 23.09, which is remarkably good for a first year man. This was the first race that Ham has run with the varsity. The New Hampshire team finished 2, 3, 4, 7, 8; while the Bowdoin team came in 1, 5, 6, 9, 10.

The order in which the men finished and their time is as follows: First, Foster, Bowdoin, 21.55; second, Snow, New Hampshire, 21.57; third, Gray, N. H., 22.14; fourth, Hawes, Bowdoin, 23.09; sixth, Zazakowiz, H. N., 23.10; seventh, Coughlin, N. H., 23.10; seventh, Coughlin,

President Sills Speaks At Armistice Day Service

Honor Roll of World War Read— President Urges More Faith in Country and Leaders

The annual Armistice Day chapel service was held last Sunday afternoon. The services were opened by the singing of the "Star Spangled Banner." President Sills read the list of those alumni who had made the suof those alumni who had made the supreme sacrifice during the World War and then he made the chapel address. He took, as a text, a portion of the forty-fourth chapter of Eccesiastes. In opening, he mentioned the fact that nearly every nation has dopted the custom of setting aside certain days, in which the people, even in the midst of festivities, may be reminded of some great event. The interesting thing about Armistice Day, however, is that it is the only day which is internationally celebrated. This is indicative of the fact that, as time goes on, we must withdraw more and more on, we must withdraw more and more from national isolation.

Five years ago, we were overjoyed at the thought that the war was over, at the thought that the war was over, and that the boys were coming home, that we almost believed that peace and prosperity were restored to us at a single coup. Time has shown us, however, that it is as easy to carry on war as to establish that happy state of affairs. Many mistakes were made in establishing peace. Indeed it almost seems as if to make a lasting peace among men and nations were impossible. In regard to re-establishing prosperity, it is a naturally slow process, and this slowness has caused, among the people of the world, much process, and this slowness has caused, among the people of the world, much synicism. This is expressed by many by intimation that the nations of the world always have had their first and last interests at home and that they pay no attention to the rest of mankind. It is the plain duty of every intelligent and patriotic man to protest these statements.

Many people say that they have these statements.

Many people say that they have heard too much idealism in the last aftew years, but President Sills asks us to consider the situation from a point of view of individual derency. No decent man goes through life considering only himself. He likes to build up a spirit of good fellowship emong his neighbors. "We in this country," said Mr. Sills, "have not followed the steadfast resolution of Washington or the sublime faith of Lincoln." There has been a marked decrease in our has been a marked decrease in our faith in our country and its leaders. A day like this recalls us to our better A day like this recalls us to our better selves. It commends us to the sup-port of such things as the Red Cross and the Cancellation of Allied Debts. We should cooperate whole heartedly with the other nations for the betterwith the other nations for the better-ment of the world and pray that some-thing of the character of Abraham Lincoln descend upon us. Lincoln even believed that the Civii War was the will of God. "He who made the world still protects it" he said. "That," said President Sills, "should be the spirit of Armistice Day."

-Cobb Cobb '26 and Thompson '2 Assistant Managers — Hockey Budget Approved

The Athletic Council held an important meeting last Thursday after-The most pressing matter was to solve the problem of the track de-partment. C. C. Adams, the manager, felt obliged to resign and the Council accepted his resignation with great ge-gret. It was agreed that some system gret. It was agreed that some system must be devised whereby there will be two assistant managers of track. This will be submitted to the student body by referendum later. The best proposal made was that in the annual posal made was that in the annual election of a track manager, the can-didate receiving the highest number of votes should be manager of Track, the second highest to be manager of the second highest to be manager of Cross-country.

The Council exercised its right of appointment by appointing as manager Charles S. Bradeen '26, the assistant manager, and by appointing as assistant managers two former candidates, Nathan A. Cobb '26 and Porter Thompson '26.

Roland H. Cobb '17 was elected assistant graduate manager. The graduate manager and the assistant were authorized to establish at once a central supply office for all spoyts, for the purchase and issue of athletic supplies.

Prof. Cushing was requested to pre-purchase and issue of athletic supplies.

Prof. Cushing was requested to prepare a uniform accounting system for all sports and to submit it to the Council at a later meeting.

The hockey budget was approved, contingent on an increase of the A. S. B. C. appropriation for that sport.

Alumni Council Meeting

The fall meeting of the Alumni ouncil was held Saturday morning in oston at the office of Ripley L. Dana 701. The members present were President Frank H. Swan '98, of Providence, Roy L. Marston '99 and Sherman N. Shumway '17, of Skowhegan, Philip G. Clifford '03 and William D. Ireland '16 of Portland, Ripley L. Dana '01 and Felix A. Burton '07 of Boston, and Austin H. MacCormick '15, alumni secretary.

Particular interest was shown in the report of the committee on undergraduate activities, of which Col. Shumway is chairman. There was also interesting discussion of how alumni associations can stimulate interest in the College so that any limitations project adopted may be based on a large number of eligible candidates. The members present were Pres

The second half, however, told a different story. We had a decided edge in all departments of the game. For instance, out of thirteen attempts at asses, twelve were futile for the Mediovilies.

There was a large Bowdoin cheering section on hand, comprised of fellows who made the trip and of alumni and enthusiasts around Boston, and they made enough noise to keep the ova echoing with cheers for the White.

A rather marked increase in interest and performance in mass singing has been noticed in college this year. This improvement is indicative, we hope, of an implication on the part of the undergraduates that I lowdoin is to take its place in due season as a singing college. For many seasons the musical organizations on the campus have enjoyed a very favorable reputation throughout much of the Atlantic season's college. For many seasons the musical organizations on the campus have enjoyed a very favorable reputation throughout much of the Atlantic season's clear, bold strokes, like the w. k. signature of J. Hancock. The latter showed the power that had been hoped for in him, both on the offence and showed the power that had been hoped for in him, both on the offence and showed the power that had been hoped for in him, both on the offence and defense. His driving tackles did a great deal to limit Mr. French's widenyadvertised end runs.

Those two gallant warriors, Joe Garland and Charlie Hildreth, were post, and deserved, crashing ovations from the Bowdoin stands.

By the way, the Bowdoin cheering and rineds and a fair number of undergraduates, were vastly to the way, the Bowdoin cheering and many friends and a fair number of undergraduates, were vastly was there to lead, with Vic Whitman, a former cheer-leader, in reserve.

The Orient will review the season propounded with a greater or the first propounded with a great propounded with a great part of the first propounded with a great propounded with a great part propounded with a great propounded with a great part propounded pression of our spirits through proxies.

For example, we seek amusement at the theatre and praise or condemn the performance as it expresses or fails to express our particular mood, we go to church for the purpose of worshipping God, but if we go at all thought-fully we go to that church from whose pulpit we may expect to hear our sentiments propounded with a greater or less degree of accuracy, and we let the preacher do the propounding; we go to college, and all soo many of use the expression of our spirit of scholastic enterprise to those who stin the professional chairs—all these we do, generally speaking, but thanks to something or other there appears to be a real revival of the Bowdoin spirit that sets Bowdoin men singing their own songs with a luxly vigor that stirs the emotion; and funishes—the spark to motivate the great mathine of imagination.

A singing college is a loyal college. It is a loyal college because it expands its lungs and cooperates in the expression of tist after for all that the noble traditions of its airder for all that the noble traditions of its airder for all that the noble traditions of the failth of the common for love of the college. is a loyal college because it comprises they vainly adore the harmonious strains of their own voices, but because they sing, whether talented or not, for love of the college. It is a loyal college because it sincerely and spontaneously sings the college songs for love of them in their faithful portrayal of the filial loye to the well-loved mother of our scholastic lives. Such a college, we happily believe, is Bowdoin. And of such loyal men is Bowdoin composed. They have shown it at rallies and other student assemblies, they have shown it, in fact, wherever opportunity has offered, in the warm glow of victory or the dark chill of defeat.

The singing this full have been used.

The singing this fall has been real. It has held the elements of a splendid movement forward, and for its very movement forward, and for its very success it must not be allowed to languish. It is the duty of every Bowdoin man to know and sing his college songs. It is his great good fortune to be able to sing them as a Bowdoin man, and to sing them with his whole enthusiasm. The opportunity is ours to grasp. If we want to make Bowdoin's fame ever greater, we have a worthy contribution rearly in our hand. Are we to withhold itythrough sheer indifference or are we to see to it that Bowdoin is henceforth known as a singing college?

Idler's Column

For some time the Orient has considered running a column which can publish matter of the sort usually found in such sections of college papers and in the daily press. Contributions mailed or handed in to the editor of the Orient by alumni or undergraduates will find their way to the column conductor. Light material will be welcomed, but contributors are not urged to send in the glad news that M. Balm is an undertaker in Woohoo, Oklahoma or that Robert Bacon and Minnie Egg have entered a matrimonial union in Swampy Village, Iowa. We consider this sort of thing screamingly funny, but it hardly seems fair to offer too much sidesplitting stuff to the student body. That sort of humor has its proper place in the Bear Skin. The column will appear only from time to time. Campus affairs may be discussed,—kindly, we hope, but frankly. ASSOCIATE EDITORS

The monarchists instituted one worth-while innovation. The press reported that when meetings were held the chairman fired his revolver in the air for silence. This idea seems adaptable. Could more perfect silence be obtained at the opening of an art lecture by firing a shotgun? A proper choice of arms, from a pop-gun for Math. 7 to a French 75 for Senior Gym, should ensure speedy silence in any course.

Perhaps we should not have commented on international affairs in a student publication. But the campus intelligentsia must be pleased, and next week we will write something for the Andy Gump crowd. (Second thought: this is too caustic. After all, the War IS over, isn't it?)

The Church On The Hill

The Boston Transcript recently had an interesting article under the heading "The Church on the Hill," which will touch a responsive chord in Bowdoin graduates and attendants at that famous church. It is written by Edgar O. Achorn, graduate of Bowdoin in the class of 1881. He is a inative of Newcastle and has an attractive summer home at Christmas Cove. For years he was in the diplomatic service being connected with an Embassy at St. Petersburg. He is now the senior member of the well known law firm of Achorn & Bates of Boston. He has been an overseer of the college since 1909, and few of her sons are more interested in her welfare.

A son, Erik, who graduated from Bowdoin also, a few years ago with high honors, is now taking a post graduate course in Paris.

The article follows:

No Congregational church in Maine and few in New England are clothed with greater dignity or authority than the "Church on the Hill" at Brunswick, Maine. And the reason for this is not far to seek—its association with Bowdoin college, covering a period of 120 years.

I do recall, however, on one occasion that a minister who was on exchange had so far wandered from the lighten path, or perhaps was simply seeking to point a moral, as to call attention to the fact that the price of whiskey had recently fallen, whereupon the floor of the transert range with applause, in which the cowhide boots of even those who slept and were awakened by the glad news, addet the weight of their approval.

And now after forty-five years the setting was the same; but the vested choir, the beauty and dignity of the service, and to the same and attendances at that us church. It is written by Edgar chorn, graduate of Bowdoin in lass of 1881. He is a native of astle and has an attractive sumhome at Christmas Cove. For those ancient disquisitions on the man.

With an earnestness, with a sincerity, with a force and persuasion, with an authority that reminds use forcibly of Dr. Gordon of the Old South, the Rev. Thompson E. Ashby talked on the challenge of the Christian purpose, on the duty of the church to inspire in the hearts of all men a desire to live the life that Jesus taught, to do his work in the world in the spirit of the Master and in the love of his fellow man.

In appealing for membership in this church, Mr. Ashby, among other things said:

more interested in her welfare.

A son, Erik, who graduated from Bowdoin also, a few years ago with light honors, is now taking a post graduate course in Paris.

The article follows:

No Congregational church in Maine and few in New England are clothed with greater dignity or authority than the "Church on the Hill" at Brunswick, Maine. And the reason for this is not far to seek—its association with Bowdoin college, covering a period of 120 years.

The minister who fills this pulpit must preach to a congregation dominated in part by intellectuals—the college faculty—and he has the opportunity, the responsibility, the privilege, shall 1 say the challenge, that the prosence of a large body of young men creates: and it must not be lost sight of that Bowdoin. Ithe resister denominational colleges in New England, was founded as a credle for the ministry.

The traditions of this church are rich in the memories of the eminent men who have filled its pulpit and its work. It was under the aegis of this church that Harrie the molin of his class.

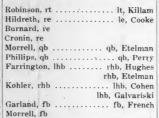

The gothic architecture of the church itself, differing so greatly from the New England meeting house, inparts an ecclesiastical, a dim, religious light, to the interior that seems to harmonze with its intorical associations; at least so it inpressed me as I entered the church last Sinday morning and was ushered to a sent midway up the aisle.

Sitting there during the few minutes of silence before the service began, mythoughts wandered back to the forty-five years ago when I, under the eministry whose pews were on the broad aisle below.

Austin H. MacCormick '15 was the last speaker. He reviewed the football season and outlined next year's schedule. He spoke of the spirit which the team had displayed throughout the year, and called on the alumni to show that they are interested not only in "winning Bowdoin teams," but in "Bowdoin teams," saying that he believed a period of defeat does more to develop a sound College spirit than a long period of victory.

The fact that none of the speakers seemed hopeful of a victory over Tufts made Saturday's upset all the more pleasant.

Tufts Rally Held At Whittier Field Thursday

Prof. Copeland, Luther Dana '03, Austin H. MacCormick '15 Speakers

About ninety members of the Bowdoin Club of Boston met Friday evening at the University Club for a dinner and a Tufts game rally. A large number of recent graduates added to the enthusiasm. Cheers were practiced under Vic Whitman's leadership and King Turgeon '23 lead the singing, with Don Eames '23 at the piano. As a result, both singing and cheering at the Tufts game were excellent.

Prof. Melvin T. Copeland '06 of Harvard, president of the club, presided over the post-prandial exercises. He first called on Coach Ostergren, who reviewed the past season, analyzed the team's faults and his own frankly, and spoke of his plans for next year. The next speaker was coach Magee, who spoke of last spring's track team and of the material now in College. He made several cheerful predictions which received enthusiastic applause.

Luther Dana '03, chairman of the Athletic Council, then spoke. He urged the alumni around Boston to interest men who were scholars as well as athletes in Bowdoin, stating that in no other way could Bowdoin compete with institutions whose requirements are less rigorous.

Austin H. MacCormick '15 year the language and the distributions whose requirements are less rigorous.

Austin H. MacCormick '15 was the language and the path through the path through the prince to the college where the men broke ranks and dispersed.

beackward land, a backward of civilization, a country of mediatal tendencies trying to live in the advanced age.

This is not so. It is one of the most democratic. Its classes are clear-cut. The King of Spain. Dodor Adams said, thinks nothing of walking unattended down the main thiroughfares of Madrid. He had just as soon ask anyone, beggar or merchant, for a light for his cigarette. The austerity and fortitude of the people are two great characteristics. The Spaniard cares nothing for the comberts of life. He has a better sense of comparative values than anyone else. He keeps out of politics which he regards as dirty business. He is perhaps the most courteous man in the world. Even at the sacrifice of his own time, he will escort a stranger who asks.

Doctor Cram spent six, months in Spain, where he lived with, his family in a Spanish villa, employed Spanish servants, and lived in the Spanish wanner. He was therefor in a position to judge at first hand, the life of the Spaniard.

The first impression which the visitor gets, said Doctor Cram, is of the enormous antiquity of the people. Their civilization goes tack to the Moors in medieval times, end back of them the Visigoths and the Romans. The next impression which the visitor gets is the extraordinary quality of their democracy. The greatest impression perhaps is of their religion.

Doctor Cram said that the Spaniard goes to his purish church whether he goes to his business or not. The people enjoy preaching, which is nearly always simple and direct in its appeal. Their service is simple and without ostentation.

Spain is not a decaderi country in the least. Although she has not sold the proper decaders to the service is simple and without ostentation.

Ralph Adams Cram, Litt.D., L.L.D., delivered the Annie Talbot Cole lecture for 1923 in Memorial Hall last Thursday eyening at 8.15. Doctor Cram spoke on "Spain and Spanish Art." In introducing the speaker President Sills said that although the Cole lectureship was founded to "foster an appreciation of the beautiful as severaled through nature, poetry, music, and the fine arts" this was the first time that any lecturer had been chosen to speak on art.

Doctor Cram said, to tell about the arts of a country without telling a great deal of its history.

New Rule on Elections Passed—Honor System and Team Voting Discussed

At a meeting of the Student Council at the Sigma Nu House last Friday evening a law was passed to take ef-fect in all A.S.B.C. elections from now on. The captains of the four college football teams in the State have picked the players that are in their opinions, the best in the State. The Portland "Telegram" has taken these and combined them into an All-Maine team of thirteen men, on which Colby has five, Bates has four, Maine three, and Bowdoin L. There were tie votes in the selection of left guard and right tackle, thus making it necessary for thirteen men to be placed on the first team.

This committee, after careful consideration, and after consultation with alumni, friends of the College, and professional advisers, submitted a report at Commencement in 1919. In this report various suggestions for a memorial awer reviewed, and certain definite principles of procedure recommended. The endowment of a professorship or of one or more fellowships was rejected, in the conviction that "the graduates will in general feel that no memorial will be satisfactory which is not visible and tangible as well as permanent." A new organ, new chapel doors, or additions to Memorial Hall were not favored, on account of the general feeling that "the memorial now to be creeted should, if possible, be a separate, independent and distinct structure and not a mere addition to something already existing." The appropriateness of a swimming-pool as a war memorial was seriously questioned, and the erection of a fence around

Just Distribution.

In the present era of industrialism, when the supply of labor is carefully arranged and the employment divided equitably to take care of the demand for human hands, it seems strange to find a place where wisdom, or at least learning, is supposed to reign supreme encountering difficulty in supplying ment of fill positions of responsibility. Only a few days ago this problem was presented to us quite foreibly when a man who has shown real executive ability as manager of one of the major sports found it necessary to resign. The pressure of carriging on his classion work, certain amunerative work outside, and an actife part in the college dramatics in another to his managerial business was really too much.

It is the old farsilar story, seen from a stightly different aspect. The parable of the talents, "I nto him that hath not even that, while he hath shall be given, but from him that hath not even that, while he hath shall be taken away? has a particular bearing on the participation in college activities. There we see, as every-whom a stightly different aspect. hath not even that, which he hath shall be taken away? has a particular bearing on the participation in college activities. There we see, as everywhere else, how certain it is that the marr who shows abifty in one line is sought after in another, and another, until he finds nist time so filled with a maltitude of dutres that in can doreal justice to none of them. The successful athlete, the efficient managery the popular journalist, dramatist, or musiciam, if he allows the urging of his friends or his ambition for prominence to override his judgment, finds himself, soon or late, in an embroglio difficult to escape. On the other hand, it is not at all unusual to find a man in his Junior or Senfor sear completely on the outside of all activities, but of some ability, who is anxious to find a place where he may be of service without experience.

Men' in the second class can meet their difficulty by sturting to look for a niche in their freshman year. It is for the men in the arst category that the problem assumed annoying proportions. A marked tendency to concentrate all authority and honor in the who attain to achietic or executive renown may have something to dowith augmenting the problem, since it works in a vicious circle. This change, providing that two managers shall do the work hitherto loaded on one, should be salutary if accepted by the undergraduates. Last year a committee on limitation of activities was elected to attempt an even distribution of activity. This is all very well, but any system of distribution fails when you cannot find the distributees. As long as men who are perfectly well able to play a part in the work of the college beyond the classroom refuse to do so, the activities will suffer from insufficient attention, and a few men will be burdened with duties too onerous for them. The architect in general charge, the senior member of the firm of McKim, Mead and White, Mr. William M. Kendall, who has shown great interest in the harmonious development of the campus, and upon whom the College conferred a degree at last Commencement, strongly recommends placing the lost-rum upon the axis formed by the Art Building and Appleton Hall, about half way between the two walks running parallel to the dormitory, but facing the Art Building. This location is illustrated in the accompanying cut. The path leading directly across from the Art Building would be continued either up to the Memorial, or stop just short of the further/cross path. "This seemed the only site in the whole campus," writes Mr. Kendall, "which afforded a direct relation to some other important construction, and that seemed to me of paramount importance." One of the advantages of this site is that the audience would not have to face the afternoon sun, as they would if the rostrum were located between the '75 Gates and the Science Building. Many alumni have expressed a desire to have the memorial situated beneath or near the Thorndike Oak. Professional advice is against this, for two reasons. In the first place, it is unwise to locate a permanent structure with refevence to a tree, the life of which is limited. A stone memorial built near the tree would probably shorten its life considerably. In the second place, the general effect of the campus will not be improved by a structure in the center, unrelated to the general plan of the buildings and grounds. This whole question remains to be decided; no conclusion in regard to the location of the rostrum has yet been made.

Dr. Ralph Adams Cram Delivered Annie Talbot Cole Lecture Thursday

Spain and Spanish Art" Subject of Interesting Address—Large Crowd Attends

Ralph Adams Cram, Litt.D., LL.D., delivered the Annie Talbot Cole lecture for 1923 in Memorial Hall last Thursday evening at 8.15. Doctor Cram spoke on "Spain and Spanish Art." In introducing the speaker President Sills said that although the Cole lectureship was founded to "foster an appreciation of the beautiful as revealed through nature, poetry, music, and the line arts" this was the first time that any lecturer had been chosen to speak on art.

Doctor Cram said in the beginning that his lecture would deal more with Spain than with Spanish art. It is impossible, he said, to tell about the art of a country without telling a great deal of its history.

Art cannot be made out of nothing. It is an expression of the people themselves, in their past and in their present. A country's history is revealed in the art and architecture which at leaves for future generations. The great things in a country life are shown by its art.

Spain is a much misunderstood land. It is one of the countries of which the world in keneral knows little. The mention of Spain immediately connotes in one's mind the thought of bull flights, of the Inquisition, and of men in broad sombieres playing their guitars to some dark-skinned beauty. Spain is thought to be a brackward land, a backwater of civilization, a country of medieval tendencies trying to live in this advanced age.

This is not so. It is one of the most topotent countries, and one of the most topotent countries, and one of the most backward land, a backwater of civilization, a country of medieval tendencies trying to live in this advanced age,

This is not so. It is one of the most democratic. Its classes are clear-cut. The King of Spain, Doctor Adams said, thinks nothing of walking unattended down the main thoroughfares of Madrid. He had just as soon ask anyone, beggar or merchant, for a light for his cigarette. The austerity and fortitude of the people are two great characteristics. The Spaniard cares nothing for the comforts of life. He has a better sense of comparative values than anyone else. He keeps out of politics which he regards as dirty business. He is perhaps the most courteous man in the world. Even at the sacrifice of his own time, he will escort a stranger who asks.

Doctor Cram spent six months in Spain, where he lived with his family in a Spanish villa, employed Spanish servants, and lived in the Spanish manner. He was therefore in a position to judge at first hand the life of the Spaniard.

The first impression which the visitor gets, said Doctor Cram, is of the enormous antiquity of the people. Their civilization goes back to the Moors in medieval times, and back of them the Visigoths and the Romans. The next impression which the visitor gets is the extraordinary quality of their democracy. The greatest impression be had ever seen. Their acceptance of religion is frank and simple. Their relation is from man to God directly. The race was run over the peat their victories of the past two years. The race was run over the Franklin Park course of five and one half miles, starting from the clubbouse of the Scarborough Golf Club. The victory was due to a well balanced team than to individual runners. Four of the five men entered qualified by being within the first ten men to cross the tape. H. W. Raymond and A. S. Hillman were the two first team men to break the tape, Raymond leading, However the next U. of M. runner, A. G. Patten, finished in the fifteenth place and the two remaining members finished nineteenth and twentieth.

John Doherty of Tufts, the only representative of that college, was the star of the meet. He obtained a lead early at the start which he held to the finish although closely pressed by Hilman at the halfway mark. Soon after this Hillman was obliged to fall back and Doherty maintained his lead to the finish undisputed. Just before reaching the nome stretch Raymond, who had been running steadily in the seventh position without visible effort, passed Hillman and trailed boherty to the tape. George W. Larmond of Boston College finished third in the team totals.

R. J. Foster of Bowdoin was the fifth man to finish, running the course in 29 minutes and 14 seconds. Doherty's time for the run was 28 animetes, 40 seconds, which is 4 and 2-5 seconds faster time than was made last year. The scores of the teams were as follows:

In the present era of industrialism, when the supply of labor is carefully arranged and the employment witided espatiably to take cane of the demand for human lands. Men in the second class can meet their difficulty by starting to look for cive a niche in their freshman year. It is look for the men in the first category that the problem assumes annoying proportions. A marked tendency to concentrate all authority and honor in the few who attain to athletic or executive renown may have something to do with augmenting the problem, since it works in a vicious circle. The one criterion of ability is performance. In all branches of activity ability counts as the requisite to leadership. And leadership places heavy burdens on the leader.

We carry on a good many activities wholly outside the curriculum here at Bowdoin. We have certainly enough men to conduct all these activities, and to conduct them well. But the men do not seem to realize either duty or opportunity until it is too late to be of any use. The result is, as stated before, that a comparatively small group of fairly versatile men perform the functions of the whole college of more than four hundred. Small wonder that dissatisfaction arises at the conduct of one or more bodies—the wonder is that they are not all smothered.

The college, through the Student Council and the Athletic Council, is doing what it can to distribute on a fair basis the responsibilities of the

THE BOWDOIN ORIENT campus activities. To this end a change has been suggested for the managership of track. This change, providing that two managers shall do phoviding that we managers shall do the work hitherto loaded on one, should be salutary if accepted by the undergraduates. Last year a commit-tee on limitation of activities was elected to attempt an even distribuelected to attempt an even distribu-tion of activity. This is all very well, but any system of distribution fails when you cannot find the distributees. As long as men who are perfectly well able to play a part in the work of the college beyond the classroom re-fuse to do so, the activities will suffer from insufficient attention, and a few men will be burdened with duties too men will be burdened with duties too onerous for them. The activities now existent are important. They must be carried on. But a handful of men cannot carry them on properly. The situation demands the concerted effort of all men of Bowdoin to the goal of booming campus activities that are truly representative, not the product of a few overworked zealots who doggedly insist on keeping things going support or no support. There is a real oportunity here; are we going to grasp it? men will be burdened with duties too

'27 Show Well

The fall handicap meet has been under progress for the last week or so. There has been some very keen competition, and many fast times have been turned in. Several freshmen have showed up exceedingly well. On his first day out for track Frank Farrington easily won his heats in the trials and semi-finals of the 150 yard dash. Ham, the freshman cross country star, won the 660. Albert Ecke and David Sellew performed creditably in the shot put and 300 yard dash respectively. One of the closest and most thrill-ing races of the whole meet was the two mile. Frankie Plaisted and Boy Foster, both starting from scratch, were neck and neck the whole dis-'tance, with Plaisted barely beating out

Any structure of this sort, which fulfils an aesthetic rather than a utilitarian function, must necessarily arouse some differences of opinion. MacCormick And Osborne Survey Colorado Prisons

Austin H. MacCormick, alumni secretary, left last Friday evening on a two weeks' leave of absence for Colorado, where he will assist Thomas Mott Osborne in a survey of the prison system of Colorado. Governor Swett of Colorado recently requested the National Society of Penal Information to make a study of the prison system of his state, and Mr. MacCormick and Mr. Osborne were requested by the society to make the survey. Mr. MacCormick has had considerable experience in this line, as in 1917 he and Mr. Osborne made an investigation of the conditions at the Naval Prison in the Portsmouth Navy Yard. Previous to this Mr. MacCormick had made an investigation at the Jails of Maine and of the State Prison at Thomaston.

Professor Crook's Sermon

The Chapel address last Sunday was given by Assistant Professor Crook, the new member of the department of Economics and Sociology. The text was taken from the thirteenth chapter of the Book of Deuteronomy beginning with the tenth verse: "I have set before thee this day life and good, and death and evil; therefore choose life, that both thou and thy seed may live."

Science, as we term it today, is not more than three centuries old. One must multiply this length of time by one hundred to reach the period when man was beginning to be a social animal. Out of the ice age came a totally different man than had existed before,—man with the tool of language.

and Mankind Subject of Crook's Sermon

Thirty thousand years is a small time compared with that which it took man to come from the animal stage. To get that period of time we should have to multiply three centuries by three thousand.

Each member was present with one guest.

President K. C. M. Sills, Professors Elliott, Means, and Dewing were the guests of the society. Professor Dewing read an excellent paper on the Greek Standard.

The Greek Standard, an ideal of perfection, is perhaps best expressed by the motto "Nothing in Excess." It is illustrated in the fields of government, mode of living, literature, constructive and plastic arts. In government it is expressed more in the moderation of the individual than in the government as a whole. This conditions was made possible by the Athenian type, one which would doubtless never recur. Moderation in food; clothing, and manners, is apparent in their mode of living. Grecian literature is famous for its drama, comedy and philosophy, while as for the constructive art, altho the buildings were not impressive because of size, like the Colesium, yet their beauty and harmony of line have won for them anoteworthy distinction. The same that the express perfection of form.

The reading of the paper was followed by an interesting discussion which brought out Professor Dewing was a Professor of Classics and dean of Robert's college, Constanninople. Magee Is Selected As A Coach For Olympic Team

gh Honor Paid Bowdoin College rack Coach by Head of the Amateur Athletic Union

John J. Magee, the Bowdoin track coach, has been recommended as one of the assistant coaches of the United States Olympic track team by President William C. Prout of Boston, head of the Amateur Athletic Union of America. Recommended as head America. Recommended as head coach is Lawson Robertson of the Unicoach is Lawson Bobertson of the University of Pennsylvania, with the following other assistants: Steve Farrell, of the University of Michigan; John F. Moakley of Cornell; Keene Fitzpatrick of Princeton; Harry Hillman of Dartmouth; Thomas F. Keane of Syracuse; Elmer Oliphant of the Army, Harry Gill of Illinois; Ed Farrell of Harvard; A. A. Stagg of Chicago; George Bresnahan of Iowa; Walter Christie of California; and Dean Cromswell of University of Southern California.

The fact that the Bowdoin coach was among those selected is a fine tribute to the ability of the man, who has always been recognized as one of the leading track instructors in the East, and a bigger tribute in as much as all of the other coaches have been recommended from the large universities.

The entire Freshman team is made up of veteran speakers while Reid is the only Sophomore who has as yet shown his ability in debating. The honors in the last two Amherst debates have been even, Bowdoin winning the first, and Amherst, last year. The Class of 1925 team debated against Amherst both years. The debate this year is at Amherst and should furnish a great incentive for both teams to win.

Sophomores Win Over Freshmen In Football Game By Score of 3-0

Wiseman's Field Gcal Wins For Sophomores—Morrell and Ecke are Freshman Stars—Underclassmen Outplay Opponents

Last Saturday on a field thick with mud and in the midst of a continued torrent of rain the Freshman football team was humbled by the accurate toe of Wiseman, the Sophomore left half-back, 3-0. Out playing their opponents in almost every department of the game, the lower classmen seemed to lack the punch to push the ball across though they got within scoring distance several times and were al-most always dangerous. Wiseman was by far the out-standing star of the game, while Morrell and Ecke played good games for the Freshmen with Acegan's defensive work for the Sophs.

The Sophomores received the kickoli and made a first down but then fumbled to the Freshmen in mid-field.

In three rushes they went twelve yards and then kicked, the second year men punted back to their oppofield on the forty-five yard line. A series of line plunges by Morrell and Murphy put the bail on the three yard line where the Sophs held for downs.
Just as they punted out the period ended.

The second period had just started.

The second period had just started when the riesamen fumbled the slippery ball and an exchange of punts resulted. Shortly after this Morrell threw a pass to Lavine who fairly dove into the air and just barely caught. The ball was then on the tweive yard line. A drop kick by Morrell failed and the Sophomores punted out of danger from their one yard line where the ball was stopped. The Freshmen again tried a pass and Wiseman intercepted on the ten yard line. The haif ended when the Sophs were held for downs on the twenty yard line. line.

He is known as a developer of track stars and it was through his tireless efforts that ex-Captain Tooell, the American hammer champion and record holder, réached fame. In addition to Tootell, Magee has developed many other stars.

Intellectual Honesty.

Almost every basic problem we meet in life may be solved by a judicious reference to common sense. At the present time, and here in Box-doin, there arises the inevitable question of intellectual honesty. Here too, the common sense solution is most practicable, for the problem is certainly a division of a very decidedly fundamental question of ethics.

It is indeed unfortunate that it should become necessary for attention to be called to this question. It should become necessary for attention to be called to this question, it should become necessary for extending the no problem at all in a college where the stamma of the men is for the most part very high, and where the students have been prepared for college in exhould expected the student that something is lacking in our ethical system, and that we must find, the root of the evil in order to exterminate it. An invitation has been received by college authorities from Harvard to participate in a meet June 7. Owing to the fact that the final examinations start June 5, it will not be possible to accept. However an attempt will be made to change the date to May 10. The opening game of the football season next fall will be with St. Stephens College of Annandale-on-Hudson, N. Y., September 27. Although St. Stephens is a small college it has a very good standing. It is a college of the type of Trinity, with which Bowdoin had athletic relations for several years. The football team had a splendid record this year, defeating Hamilton, C.C.N.Y., Worcester Tech, Dresel, and holding New York University to a 14 to 6 score. The scheduling of this game is in the policy of the colbard with colleges of the same type as Bowdoin.

Choice of a Career

THE NINETY-FOUR

Someone, probably an insurance agent, was quoted recently as saying that from the mass of one hundred college graduates one individual only rose to the Polo and butler class, perilously near the top of the financial ladder. Five others became comfortably off and found themselves after twenty years at the small yacht and chauffeur stage. The other ninety-four presumably congregate in the great section of the American people who drive their own Buicks to the golf club. In other words, dreaming about being a rich man is one thing, and making the grade is "something else again."

Yet the ninety-four presumably work just as hard as the sumptuous six. Their business is the axis on which a small and uninteresting world revolves. They have become devotees of the dollar and when that fickle deity deserts, have nowhere else to turn. Jammed in a dull, straight rut of business they can never leave the road and jump the fence into finer fields of life. This, then, is the portion of ninety-four men out of every hundred now on the campus.

The answer to the problem lies in the proper choice of a career.

"The Republic has no need for savants," sneered a tool of Robespierre as he sent Lavoisier, founder of modern chemistry, to the guillotine. A century later the French Government collected all the scientific studies of this great citizen of Paris and published them, that the record of his researches might be preserved for all time.

Lavoisier showed the errors of the theory of phlogiston-that hypothetical, material substance which was believed to be an element of all combustible compounds and to produce fire when liberated. He proved fire to be the union of other elements with a gas which he named oxygen.

BOWDOIN'S VARSITY FOOTBALL LETTER MEN OF 1923 SEASON

Seventeen Men Are Awarded Letters

Malcolm Morrell, captain and quarterback of the White team, has played in the varsity backfield three of the four years he has spent at Bowdoin. He made his "B" in his Freshman year, playing right halfback. He did not play during his Sophomore year, but staged a comeback last year and played a wonderful game in the full-back position. His performance in the Harvard game was extrenely creditable, both to Bowdoin and himself. In the Tufts game of last year Mal was partially responsible for Bowdoin's almost superhuman comeback which netted the White team a 13 to 12 victory in the second half. After having led this year's team through a rather distinguary to the work of the was a member of the freshman and sophomore for the was an amender of the baseball team for two years, and of senior year he was captain of the football team. At Bowdoin he was on both the freshman and sophomore football team. At Bowdoin he was on both the freshman and sophomore football team. This is his first year as a member of the varsity. Last spring the backfield, performing very creditably at both positions. He is a fine was unable to play in many games during the last football season. Because of his outstanding work as a linesman, however, he received such a serious injury that he was unable to play in many games during the last football season. Because of his outstanding work as a linesman, however, he received his letter the played throughout the Colby game with great success, in the Bates, game his shoulder was so severely injured that it put him out of football for the rest of the year. The quality of his work is well known on the rink and on the diamond. Berry is a member of the Delta Upsilon fraternity. John Cronin '25 won his football letter this year by playing through a season in which he measured up to the situation every time that he was captain of the Colby game with great success, in the Bates, game his shoulder was so severely injured that it put him out of football for the rest of the year. heartening series of defeats, he was rewarded by seeing his men outplay and outpoint the powerful Tufts team which up to the time of the Bowdoin game had been defeated only by Harvard. That game was the last that he will ever play for Bowdoin and in it his reputation as a fleld general was made. In spite of the many reverses that his team met, Mal worked and fought with undying confidence in his men and deserves to be rated as one of Bowdoin's big captains.

Manager Ross, of this year's team, has filled his position in a way that is beyond question worthy of praise. He deserves much credit for bringing the financial and managerial end of the team through the season so successfully. As this is the season that the Maine game jwas in Orono, it was thought early in the fall that football would, as is usual for seasons corresponding to this, turn in no surplus funds— To the surprise of all concerned, Manager Ross has not only turned in a far larger surplus than was expected by the most optimistic, but he has paid expenses that the alumni have handled in seasons past. He is a member of the Delta Kappa Epsilon fraternity.

Robert Phillips has completed his third season with the team and will be available to Coach Ostergren for still another. Despite his size, he is the lightest man on the team, Bob has given some wonderful exhibitions of football during his career at Bowdoin.

His ground gaining was not only consistent throughout the entire season, but it was spectacular. Time after time he would smash through the opposing line for gains until compelled by injuries to be carried to the sidelines. After the Colby game, Joe was never in condition physically to play football. His ribs constantly bothered him. It was just cold not play last year on account of the one-year ruling. FOOTBALL TEAM COMPLETES SEASON OF UNEARNED DEFEATS AND UNEXPECTED VICTORIES

Triumphs Over Amherst, Norwich, and Tufts More Than Offset Wesleyan, Bates, and Maine Defeats—Colby Tied

Though many have labeled Bowdoin's football season as being decidedly unsuccessful on account of the unfortunate outcome of the State series, close followers of the team can note many bright spots in its career. Finishing in the cellar position here in Maine, the White went down to Medford to play Tufts. The olds were giving them only slight backing, yet they played the game, fighting as only a Bowdoin team knows how, and the result—a glorious seven to three victory over the team which held Harvard to an exceedingly low score. In addition to this, we recall the game with Colby, State champions. Here certainly was a team that did not deserve to te the White. Twice did the Bowdoin team score only to have an official take the points away from them, yet they kept on fighting, giving their best to break the dead-look in vain. With such creditable performances as this, to say nothing of the valiant stand and touchdown made

Football in 1923.

We who are interested in football at Bowdoin, and, above all work for limits and that means all of us, can review dispassionately, now that the 1923 season is ended, the events that made up that season. In another pair of this is sue all the games are well-reviewed. With that portion of the season's history the writer will not meddle. meddle. Rather let us consider here some analysis of the game as played by Bowdoin men, presumably for the glory of Bowdoin in the past months. An analysis of a season not replete with magnificent triumphs is no easy task for an undergraduate. A prevalent fallacy of collegiate thinking seems to demand that the college journal shall devote its valuable time and space to the praise of college representatives with any criticism so heavily sugar-coated as to make it ineffective. We have nothing but high praise, not that of the damning sort, for the men who went out all season and worked hard for the portion of success that was theirs. To the men who made up our cleven is due honor not so much for what they accomplished in total points gained, but for the admirable efforts they made against heavy odds.

In total points gamed, but for the admirable eltorits they made againsheavy odds.

Bowdoin football, like everything else Bowdoin, is likely to get in a bad way when the great number of students he back and allow a few mer to carry on all the work that is accomplished. The fact is that Bowdoin is attacked by the virus of self-complacency. Infortunately, but none the less surely, there are men who profess to be Bowdoin men yet who legards that the teams of the college in much the same light as the Roman segarded inter trained galatiators. To such men, the winning or lossing of contexts is considered as entirely "up to" the team. As a matter of fact, it is not. Football, one of the most effective "nurturers of men," gets a grant team opened the game is not. corrupt system of obtaining athletic material? Shall we simply sit down and hope that chance will bring us a list of good candidates, or shall we go out and make sure of that list?

The point is this: the whole college, not the team alone, is the responsible party in the games of a football season. If defeats face us, they are but a challenge to do better at the next meeting, and to a man or a college with the right stuff inside a defeat is the finest stimulus in the world. No jejune "good loser," but an honest, fair-fighting sportsman, Bowdoin can profit much by the lessons of the past. We have a fine nucleus returning for the team next fall. Only one letter man, Captain Mal Morrell, is graduating this June, and the team that to let the ball beyond its three yard in and fought fields. That means that our chances are good, provided every last man in college will get behind the team and push with all the spirit and intensity in him. We can't expect the team and push with all the spirit and fight when the majority of the men in the bleachers have hardly a suspicion as to what the phrase means. The realization comes with appreciation. Think Bowdoin, talk Bowdoin, dream Bowdoin, and, above all work for Bowdoin—the spirit will come.

The Fire Danger.

The great prevalence of cigarett smoking in the lecture buildings is, according to the college authorities, liable to result in a disastrous fire if not wisely restricted. There is no objection to smoking in these buildings, as long as the men are careful about extinguishing the butts before dispossing of them. With a little consideration and cooperation from the men, the thing should assume no serious proportions as a menace.

Student Reforms.

The Student Council attempts to keep its ear to the ground to seek out the improvements desired for the beterment of the college in its student affairs. Unfortunately this method does not seem to cover the field with all due accuracy. Recommendations from any student are cordially received and seriously considered by the Council. Such recommendations are highly deired, as most surely emanating from he men concerned. Without such guideposts for direction, the Student Council can but grope rather blindly long the way.

Then a series of line plunges brought the ball to our twenty-five yard line and a long pass, Merritt to Small, scored, but the goal failed. Maine again received the kick-off and consistent but not spectacular gains by the whole University backfield coupled with another long pass brought the ball to our four yard line. This time the White defense strengthened and it took our heavy opponents four tries to push the ball over as the goal again failed. Garland then kicked off again and once again did Maine start another offensive, Small and Gruhn gaining consistently, until a long pass to Merritt brought them to our twenty yard line. Two plunges put Gruhn across for his second and Maine's third touchdown. Blair kicked the goal. Bowdoin received the kick-off but Small intercepted a pass and another march was started. But this time, fighting, invincible, the White refused to let the ball beyond its three yard line and twice again Maine got to the fifteen yard only to lose the ball on downs.

Richard "Red" Jones started off the season in a fine manner, playing a wonderful brand of football in all the early games of the season. He gave every exidence of being one of the best defensive backs that ever wore a Bowdoin uniform, and he was almost equally good at carrying the ball. In the first half of the Colby game he was playing one of the best games of his football career at Bowdoin, but in the second half his knee was very badly hurt, and he was not able to play for the remainder of the season. He is an Exeter man, where he was prominent in athletics, being a member of the football team three. He made his letter in baseball and football here at Bowdoin both his freshman and sophomore years. He was a member of the former U.Q. Freshman honorary society, and of the Sophomore society, Phi Chi. This year he is a member of the Junior Owls, His freshman and sophomore years he was vice-president of his class and is president of the Junior Class this year. Julius "Jo" Kohler, ex-captain of Newton High school's grid team, was the only other freshman to make his letter in varsity football. He has shown unusual ability all fall as a defensive back, especially in the Tufts game when he stopped Capt-elect "Van" French of Tufts, the widely heraided Tufts back. His offensive work was demonstrated in the Bates game whene he was an important factor in off-tackle plays. Kohler did not show his full ability until the Tufts game when his playing showed him to be a fighter with skill and assurance. Ostergren expects much from this hard-working freshman who will be a valuable addition to next year's team.

Interfraternity Council and Senior Class Endowment Plan Discussed

A meeting of the Student Council was held last Thursday evening at the Deke house. The major part of the meeting was taken up in a discussion of the proposed class endowment for the Seniors. The plan is for every member of the class to insure himself for a certain amount, at the end of 25 years the accumulated money goes to the College, or if he should die in the meantime the College receives the amount for which he is insured. Harvard, Yale and Princeton make use of this plan. The matter was brought up four years ago, but at that time the trustees of the college were not in favor of it, as they wanted the money immediately. A representative of an insurance company was present. Nothing definite was done in regard to the matter, as the Student Council has no authority to act in regard to such a matter, but it will be brought up at a meeting of the Senior class. years the accumulated money goes to

Zeta Psi Wins In Worst Man Football Game

Psi U Claims Moral Victory Although Score is 12-6 Against Them

Last Saturday the Zeta Psi and the Psi Upsilon fraternities held a worst team football game on Whittier field. The training consisted of staying ual night before the game. Those who dozed off to sleep were quickly brought tack into training by a wholesome shake by a representative of the opposing team. The following writeup contained in the Boston Post of last Sunday gives a good description of the mighty battle:

The Worst Man team struggle culminated happily for the Zeta Psi's, Saturday, when after a terrific battle lasting 10 three-minute periods, they wiped the mud from their faces and announced to the world that a score of 12 to 6 wasn't so bad.

Captain Stringer of the Psi Upsilon showed true sportsmanship. He shook Captain Burley's hand vigorously and opined that the worst man had won.

The Psi Upsilons claim a great moral victory. Meacham, the Psi Upsilon steward, when last seen was headed for the First National to negotiate a loan with which to feed the Zetes, who immediately after the game, started clamoring for food.

The game with 10 three-minute rounds was more like a prize fight. In the first round the Zetes grabbed the pill on the kickoff, and Porter, the Zete Mercury, streaked down the side-line for a touchdown. Captain Burley gave them a lot of moral encouragement from the sidelines.

In the seventh round Wood, the Psi Upsilon hope, feinted with a foroward pass and ran 30 yards. He tried the real thing the next time, but Nichols of the Zete crew intercepted it and ran across again. The Psi Upsilon halfback, Wood, who threw all his weight 105 pounds) against the line, plunged through for the only touchdown for the losers.

The summary:

Psi Upsilon halfback, Wood, who threw all his weight 105 pounds) against the line, plunged through for the only touchdown for the losers.

A wireless message was received from Donald B. MacMillan at the Prince Rupert, B. C., station. Nov. 28, In this message Captain MacMillan said that news, of the world was received every evening from two European wireless stations. It is believed that the Bowdoin's wireless made a world's lecord for short wave stations when Mix, the operator recently talk-ed with amateur station "G" EU in Hawaii, a distance of 5000 miles. Messages have been received from stations in England, Holland, Germany, Mexico, France, Norway, Italy, Japan, and Spain.

The final figures on geographical distribution show that Maine students number 296 and comprises nearly 59% of the total. Massachusetts is the second state with 132 students, or 26% of the total. These figures compared with those of last year show a decrease of 17 in the number from Maine and an increase of 20 in the number of Massachusetts men. New Hampshire is third with 16. Connecticut has 15 representatives, New York 10, Pennsylvania 7, Illinois 5, and Rhode Island 4. The following are represented by one student each: New Jersey, Vermont, Georgia, District of Columbia. Idaho, Indiana, Kansas, Louisiana, Michigan, Missouri, Ohio, Utah, Washington, Japan. Mexico, and New Brunswick. China has two.

Louisiana, Michigan, Missouri, OhoUtah, Washington, Japan, Mexico, and New Brunswick. China has two.

That the Bowdoin student body is predominantly of New England derivation is shown by the fact that the number from the New England states is 464, or 92% of the total.

At the opening of the college year there were four foreign students in the entering class, and one from across the border in New Brunswick.
Of the four the two freshmen from China are still in college. The representative from Japan was called home to Tokio immediately after the college year opened by the Tokio disaster, but will return to Bowdoin next year. He is the son of Vice-Admiral Okada of the Japanese Navy. Probably the first Mexican student to enter Bowdoin was Ignacio Herrerias, a freshman from Mexico City. Soon after college opened his guardian, then the Mexican Secretary of State, announced his candidacy for the Presidency and Herrerias left college to assist him in his campaign. He too will return to college next year. One of the Chinese students, Chi Hai Fong of Canton, China, has also lived in Mexico City, his father having been for three years the Chinese minister to Mexico, Quincy Queen Shan Sheh comes from northern China, his home being in Tientsin. He was educated at Phillips Andover.

MacMillan Keeps in Touch with the World Through the

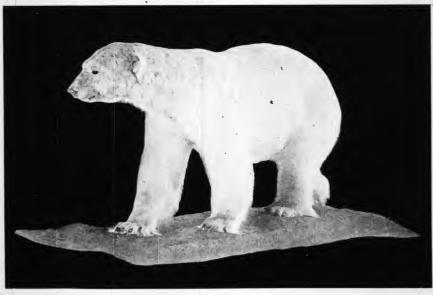

Zenith Long Distance Receiver

Dr. Donald B. MacMillan, the Arctic explorer, who has been sojourning in the land of ice for the last 16 years, before starting out on his 1923 expedition, mentioned at a dinner given him by a number of friends in Chicago that the true hardship of the Arctic is not the cold, not the lack of food, but the awful solitude, so terrible indeed that men go mad because of it.

Two months later, the idea of radio communication had made such appeal to the explorer that he arranged to take with him not only a standard ZENITH receiving set, but also a ZENITH transmitter. This equipment is now in the schooner Bowdoin, back in Eskimo Land, "frozen in" for the probable duration of 10 months. The antenna wires reach from the mast of the Bowdoin to the cliffs. Dr. Mac-Millan and his crew, now "frozen in" within 9 degrees of the north pole, have "tuned in" with several hundred stations, some as far away as Los Angeles, Mexico, and the Hawaiian Islands.

This is the first time an Arctic exploration party has kept in touch with the rest of the world. It a matter of much concern to Dr. MacMillan to get the best radio. He selected ZENITH exclusively.

Clearness of tone-freedom from distortion-is a second important feature of the ZENITH. It reproduces faithfully with volume the voice and music as it is sent from the broadcasting station.

The ZENITH receiver is kin to WJAZ, the Zenith-Edgewater Beach Hotel Broadcasting Station where President Sills broadcasted to Dr. MacMillan on December the fourteenth.

Thompson's Music Store has been fortunate in securing the agency for the Zenith Long Distance radio receiving set and will have them on demonstration at 146 Maine street.

Reverend Harry F. Shook Takes 139th Psalm as Text

The Reverend Harry F. Shook, pastor of the Universalist Church of Brunswick, who is leaving to take up a new pastorate in New Hampshire, spoke at the Sunday Chapel service. Mr. Shook took his text from the 139th Psalm.

There are three revelations of the Divine Life: the physical life, the human being, and the Book. The increasing knowledge of the being of the world leads to the doubting of the Book.

It seems reasonable to believe that long ago God looked ahead and fash-ioned nature accordingly. God saw certain effects. Some ask why God did not have everything perfect. If He had He would see man in peace, no trouble, no struggling. But as He looked down He would see the same thing one thousand, ten thousand, a hundred thousand years after. The monotony of it made Him pause and

But as He looked down through the ages He saw all this. He decided on a slow development. Thus He looks down and sees bright examples of ingenuity, He sees the joy of achievement following struggle. All this He saw in the beginning and thus ordered it. He knew that there would be selfishness, arrogance, and lust for power, But too He saw ultimate triumph which would justify this method.

Bowdoin Club Of Portland Fourth Annual Dinner Proves Great Success

Speakers—Four Hundred Present
The fourth annual dinner of the Bowdoin Club of Portland, held on December twenty-second at the Falmouth Hotel, provided a general good time and pleasant class and fraternity reunions for about three hundred alumni and students. Early in the Four compe in a sort of informal social. President Dana presided at the dinner and hisopening address was a masterpiece of witty references to campus life. He introduced Dean-Nixon as toastmaster. Among the speakers were Arthur, G. Staples of the Lewiston "Journal," President Sills, who addressed a group of sub-freshmen from various high schools and preparatory schools, throughout the state, and captain-elect Charley Hildreth '25 of the football team.

Charley Hildreth '25 of the football team.

Adding zest to the affair were a number of very clever entertainments put on by some of the alumni and students. During the dinner a telegram, supposedly from President Coolinge, arrived and in it he stated that he could not endorse the candidacy of Hiram Johnson. Later a mummy of King Tut was wheeled in and was frought to life by Dr. Daniel M. Mannix 15. Carl K. Ross '17 was the mummy. After that, Austin H. MacCormick '15, taking the part of Henry Flever, candidate for the presidency, in partnership with Avel Fliever (Clarence A. Brawn '14), gave a long take-off on Henry Ford which was highly amusing. Perhaps the stunt which roceived the biggest ovation was that of Chester G. Abbott '12, who gave an impersonation of Professor, Mondy queryioning a sub-freshman, Philip G. Wilder '23 was the student and Adelbert H. Merrill also took part. president Sills Speaks on Undergrade unter Discontent unt

At present it looks as though three and possibly four meets would be at-tended in addition to the interfratern-ity meet. These are the winter carni-vals at the University of Maine, Wa-terville, and Lewiston. The interfra-terrilty meet will be some time during the last of February.

The last of February.

From the prospects at present Bowdoin should be able to put out a team that will equal last year's in quality. Only one letter man was lost by graduation. Bergenstrahle, who will of course be greatly missed. There is much good material in the incoming class, which in addition to the nucleus already available, should make the team unquestionably the second strongest in the State. An invitation has been received to participate in a carnival at Rumford sometime the last of this month, but it will probably be impossible to attend on account of final examinations.

impossible to attend on account of final examinations.

The Club hopes to be able to have some sort of ski jump built this winter. This cannot be done, however, without the aid and cooperation of some interest outside of the college, The location will probably be on Standpipe Hill, as this is the only possible place within a reasonable distance of the campus. Several members of the faculty are actively interested in the matter, and if a large membership can be attained, the project will undoubtedly be successful.

The same system of renting out to-boggans will be used this year, that is, any fraternity having a membership of twelve or more will have a toboggan for its private use during the winter.

This represents the first real effort of the Maine colleges to compete in creative literary work. If successful, it is not unlikely that the competition in these fields may be followed by those in the fields of dramatics, music, essays on economic and sociological subjects, and possibly undergraduate cientific research.

The Athletic Council met on Wednesday, December 20, to award letters to the members of the varsity cross country team. Those who received them were: Captain Frank H. Plaisted '24, Robert J. old F. Eastman '25, Joseph I. Small '24.

The team has had some hard reverses this year which crippled the team for practically the whole season. Captain Plaisted has been handicapped from the start with appendicitis and was unable to do the fine work that was expected of him and which he would undoubtedly have done had his condition made it possible. At present he is recovering from an operation in the hospital. It is expected that he will soon return to college. He is a varsity hockey letter man of the first class and a member of track team for two years.

Bob Foster '25 has completed a season of wonderful running in spate of the many schacks received by the team. In the Harvard meet he finished second to the Harvard aptain and did equally well in the other meets. Foster's work was the mainstay of the team in every meet and great things are expected of him next spring and next year in both track and cross country. He is a present New England half mile champion. He is a two year letter man in track and cross country.

Student Council Urges Undergraduate Interest

The Student Council would like the undergraduates of the College to show more concern in the matters of general interest to the College that are being taken under consideration by the student council. It especially desires that the students should realize that the meetings of the student council the meeting of the Athletic Council on December 20, a rule for preventing the college in athletics during the first semester was adopted. The rule will greatly affect football and cross-country, as well as hockey. Fullbeing taken under consideration by the student council. It is very hard for the student council to make decisions on matters of importance unless there is some interest and feeling expressed on them by the students. All students are cordially invited to make suggestions and express their opinions in regard to all affairs of moment to the members of the student council, either in person or in writing. The student council will be very glad to take these matters under consideration. surance as to its justification—since the best models are but imperfect hints of the final result—I venture to pre-ent. These figures produce the impression of being caryatides—an impression that persists because of their resemblance to the caryatides of the Erectheum. The impression is more than misleading—it is infelicitous in that the figures appear, as caryatides, too stoutiy proportioned for the slight pedment above them. Some modification of their height and robustness might correct this impression. As to their expressiveness, their significance, one can scarcely form a just judgment from the model; but it may be said that the simplicity of their draperies and of the emblems they carry promises, again, an effective result in granite.

John E. Chapman '77 Dies On Christmas Eve

ook Active Interest in the College For Many Years a Member of the Board of Overseers

Speaking in Chapel Wednesday

.Late on Christmas eve there died at his home in Brunswick, Mr. John E. Chapman of the class of 1877. He had been all his life deeply interested in been all his life deeply interested in the College, having served as the ideal secretary of the famous class of '77 since graduation, and having been a member of the Board of Overseers for several years. He was loyal to the College and loyal to his fraternity, the Alpha Delta Phi. Having lived for some years in Bos-ton where he was for a while on the ton where he was for a while on the editorial staff of the Youth's Companion and afterwards for some time the trustee of important estates, he came to Brunswick to make his home a few years since. He was, I believe, the most beloved man in Brunswick. Few people have left a deeper impression upon their community. One of his classmates wrote of him as follows:

'He was a fine, lovable man. He didn't seem to have any of the rough corners that so many of us carry around. He was always patient and tolerant. I knew him, of course, many years, and was extremely fond of him. I can't pose as authority on what constitutes a Christian, but there has always been a vague notion in my mind that John Chapman more than any man I ever knew seemed to me to be what a Christian ought to be,"

Mr. Chapman did not acquire great wealth, nor fame, nor a position of all walks of life have been under his sweet influence. He was in deed and in truth a Christian gentleman. When your own life story is ended you can wish for no higher tribute than has been paid to him.

By bringing electricity down from the clouds over a kite string, it was a simple thing to prove that lightning was nothing more than a tremendous electrical flash.

For centuries before Franklin flew his kite in 1751 philosophers had been speculating about the nature of lightning. With electrified globes and charged bottles, others had evolved the theory that the puny sparks of the laboratory and the stupendous phenomenon of the heavens were related; but Franklin substituted fact for theory — by scientific experiment.

Roaring electrical discharges, man-made lightning as deadly as that from the clouds, are now produced by scientists in the Research Laboratories of the General Electric Company. They are part of experiments which are making it possible to use the power of mountain torrents farther and farther from the great industrial centers.

There has recently been issued by the State a volume written by Henry S. Burrage, State historian, that should be of great interest to Bowdoin men. Its title is "Thomas Hamlin Hubbard." It gives much in formation concerning the Hubbards in Readfield and Hallowell as well as the military career of Thomas Hubbard, shout whom Hallowell people really know less than of his brother, John Barrett Hubbard, for whom the local G.A.R. Post was named. John Barrett Hubbard, for whom the local G.A.R. Post was named. John Barrett Hubbard, for whom the local G.A.R. Post was named. John Barrett Hubbard, was the elder son, but was killed early in the Civil war at Port Hudson, and it remained for his younger brother to carry on the honor of the family name. Mr. Burrage gives the ancestry of the Hubbard's semphasing particularly Thomas Hubbard's grandfather, Dr. John Hubbard's grandfather, Dr. John Hubbard, scome length the career of John Hubbard, Hubbard's grandfather, Dr. John Hubbard, Thomas Hubbard's father, who settled in Hallowell and became State senator and twice governor. Interesting descriptions of Hallowell of that day are given.

Thomas Hamlin Hubbard, second son of the governor, like his brother, was educated at the Hallowell Academy, then famous throughout the State. Both graduated from Bowdoin. He enlisted somewhat later than his brother, but was at once made adjutant of the 25th Maine Volunteers, Mr. Burrage in his book describes his military career in full and his various promotions. It also gives his later legal career and his various interests, one of which was his assistance to Pearly in the latter's explorations. Much is made of the honors paid him. The book is one that should be read by all Hallowell people. General Hubbard's record should be a matter of pride.

Thomas Mott Osborne Lectures On Prison Reform in United States

Illustrates Lecture With Moving Picture Showing Prison Conditions

Thomas Mott Osborne, world famous exponent of the prison reform movement, spoke in the Cumberland theater last Thursday night under the auspices of the Saturday Club. While theater last Thursday night under the auspices of the Saturday Club. While he was in town he was the guest of Mr. and Mrs. Austin II. MacCormick who gave an informal dinner in his honor on Tuesday evening. In his address, Mr. Osborne first explained why the "Smiller" was innocently executed in the moving picture which he showed despite the fact that the director wanted him aved, in real movie style. The incident, he said, was based upon fact. He then told about several innocent men whom he had had to execute during his term as warden of Sing Sing prison. He also told about a man who had come within fifty-five minutes of paying the supreme jenalty, who was saved by the confession of another prisoner. He then discussed the type of discipline which depended upon force and which didn't train the prisoner for the problems he was to face when he was liberated. He described the Mutual Welfare League, the system of self government which he inoner for the problems he was to face when he was liberated. He described the Mutual Welfare League, the system of self government which he instituted ten years ago in the prisons of New York state. He told of the way in which it had worked out, especially at the Xaval Prison in Portsmouth. New Hampshire, when twenty-five hundred men, some of them serving life sentences, conducted their own affairs very largely and managed discipline without any guards what so ever inside the prison. He spoke briefly on the Xational Society of Penal Information which has been organized to keep the public informed as to prison conditions. It is this society for which Mr. Oshorne and Mr. MacCornick will make a study of the penal system of Colorado early in February. After the lecture, a large number of students stayed and talked with Mr. Oshorne.

her of students stayed and talked with Mr. Osborne.

The moving picture which Mr. Osborne presented in connection with his lecture was the story of a product of the East Side in New York and the son of a wealthy family, both of whom landed in prison. The old type of prison was first shown with its effect upon the New York gunman. The prison under a new warden was then shown and its effect upon both prisoners. One of the most dramatic parts of the picture was the story of the "Smiler," a typical New York crook convicted of a murder of which he was innocent. The prison seenes in the picture-was exceptionally fine, having been actually taken in prison, and there was a minimum of studio scenes.

Kate Douglas Wiggin and Mary C. Spaulding Benefactors of College

During the past month it has become known through the filing of the wills of Kate Douglas Wiggin and Mary C. Spaulding that Bowdoin will receive legacies-amounting to $7,500. Miss Wiggin (Mrs. Riggs) has left $5,000 to the college unconditionally, while Miss Sapulding left $2,500 which is to be known as the "Joseph W. Miss Wiggin's death occurred last summer in London, but her will was not filed until last month. Her fame as an authoress was world wide and although she was not born in Maine, she was considered as being a Maine authoress. She has long been identified with Bowdoin College, in 1901 she received the degree of Litt.D. from the college, being one of three women to have received that honor. She was also the founder and first president of the Society of Bowdoin Women, which took such a prominent part in the campaign for the Endowment Fund, and which has given lunches and provided headquarters for the women during commencements. It will not be known for what purpose the money will be used until the next meeting of the governing boards of the college, which will be next February.

The death of Miss Spaulding occurred last December, and the will was

Bates and St. Dominique to be Played at Lewiston This Week

A poorly prepared Bowdoin hockey team opens its season at Lewiston mext Wednesday afternoon when it plays Bates. Lack of practice, owing to the useless condition of the rink, will be the White's greatest handicap. To date, the team has never played together, despite the fact that all the last year letter-men are on hand with the exception of Plaisted, who has appendicitis, Young and A. W. Tolman, Jr. Still another obstacle in the road to hockey success is the team's lack of a coach. It is expected, however, that as soon as the ice is good enough to make practice possible, a coach will be chosen.

The Parvard match is almost a college tradition, as one is held practically every year. Matches with M.I.T. have not been so frequent, the last one centring three years ago, when Bowdoin won five to four. Owing to Harvard's superior coaching and equipment, there is not nuch chance of a win over her, although it is hoped to make practice possible, a coach will be chosen.

No. 23 Jan. 16, 1924.

It is a strange thing that the most flagrant violation of law should come from the people in the land who claim to be the most intelligent. College men, yes, and college women, too, have men, yes, and conege women, too, have been notoriously lax in their attitude toward the portion of our Constitution which prohibits the trafficking in al-coholic beverages. In the college, the intellectual anteroom of the world, we intellectual anteroom of the world, we find conditions in regard to prohibition enforcement certainly no better, often, unfortunately, worse than those in the least savory parts of the land.

If social responsibility means anything more than a term to the college man, if the man is willing to face facts honestly, if he wishes first of all to present his college to the world in that is college to the world in the proper light, then he must realize that he owes, more than any other man, a considerable debt of loyalty to man, a considerable deot of loyalty to the nation. For the four, six, eight, or perhaps more years during which the rest of the world assumes our share of production, we have no means of pay-ment except as we shall render ser-vice to the world. That means true etticonship.

Our citizenship is real, even though many still do not vote, although we are fairly well removed from the conflicting currents of politics. Not the least demand of citizenship upon us is that of absolute fairness. gard all the fundamental principles of fair play when we play at hide-and-seek with the officers of the federal government engaged in enforcing the prohibitory laws. College Law Observance Publicity

Believing that "as go the college: Believing that "as go the colleges today so will go the nation tomorrow." the Intercollegiate Prohibition Association, Washington, D. The series will cover, in turn, every phase of the movement, respect for law, athletic, economic, scientific and international. For the present it will stress the observance of the 18th Amendment. Forceful statements of Presidents Coolidge, Roosevelt, Taft and Harding, carrying fine portraits, appear on the first four, now ready. The idea has struck fire. Over 100 institutions are "signed up." League of Youth Subject of President Sills' Address

President Sills addressed the college in the Sunday afternoon chapel ser-vice. He took for his text a part of the twelfth chapter of the First Book of Kings. In connection with this the President referred us to one of the most interesting movements in the world, the League of Youth. This world, the League of Youth. Whis movement, an outgrowth of the recent war, started in Europe and is now pushing itself forward in this country. It is quite natural that the youth of the world, those upon whom the of the world, those upon whom the burden of responsibility and suffering was placed during the war, should feel that the older generation must have been negligent not to forsee the great world wide catastrophe and to try to avert it. They feel that they should take the reins of the world into

There are many good points in the League. Sir James Barrie, the great English playwright and poet, urged it, saying that the world is becoming so small that the youth in our country has more in common with that of oth-er countries than age and youth them-

In the first place, as President Sills pointed out, no body or class of people, religious, racial, or grouped according to goods, ractai, or grouped actoring age, can now-a-days work absolutely by itself, independent of all other groups. He advised that all the men of Bowdoin look up facts about the League and form an opinion one way

League and form of the other.
The second danger which might threaten the League of Youth is advice in favor of intolerance, that evil which is now showings its hideous head in a more frightful manner than ever before. In Russia, at present, a man who in any way has any connection with a church, no matter what its denination, is no longer a Communist and a man who does not hold this status is as well dead. Here is a government in this educated world taking such an intolerant stand towards re-ligion as even a Czar would refuse to take. Some of our modern magazines, such as the "New Republic" and the "Nation," preach intolerance. Cer-tainly it was this which caused such a disruption in the various churches dur-ing the last month.

February 22 the freshmen will compete against Portland high at Brunswick in a dual meet. Later on there will be a contest with Hebron, and this will be followed by the Freshman-Sophomore and Interfraternity meets. The meet with Portland will be an especially hard one, as Portland has a veteran team, and Coach Magee will have to build an entirely new one. This means that he will almost have to perform miracles, as with the exception of three or four men there are no men out for track from the freshman class who have had any previous experience in track.

The indoor track schedule for the winter, as completed up to the present date, is as follows:

Athletic Management Reorganization Brings Greater Efficiency

eps Taken During Last Semester Will Put Bowdoin Athletics on a Firmer Basis

With the mounting of athletic expenditures everywhere since the war and with the expansion of an athleticfor-all policy at Bowdoin, the athletic authorities at the Brunswick institu-tion have been busy perfecting a sys-tem of athletic control and financial management which will co-ordinate the activities of all athletic organiza-tions and govern expenditures so as to benefit the largest number possible. bent the fast few months steps have been taken that have been under con-sideration for several years. The re-sult is a system established on sound business principles but allowing for the flexibility which must always be retained in athletic matters.

The chief developments at Bowdoin

this year have come with the centralithis year have come with the centralities aging of the responsibility in the graduate manager, who acts as the executive representative of the Athletic ball of Council. The office was created two takes years ago, Prof. Thomas Means servang as the first graduate manager. The meet position has been held for a year now by Lyman A. Cousens '02, of Portland, hand for reveral years chairmen of the Ath. Lat. for several years chairman of the Athletic Council. His term of service has seen the atlictic management centered seen the athletic management centered more and more completely in the graduate manager.

Inefficient System Gone

Inefficient System Gone
His responsibility has been increased in many cases by taking duties from the student managers. The old system, under which mexperienced undergraduates handled comparatively large sums of money with rather general supervision, has gone for good from flowdom. Now student managers handle funds under strict supervision of the graduate manager. They are taught good business methods and are held to striet account for the management of the funds in their charge.

A uniform system of accounting for all sports has been installed. An essential element in the system is that all athletic funds pass through the graduate manager's office. All student managers' accounts are kept under his direction and all bills are paid by him after they have passed through the managers hands.

The accounting system was set up the beef forward of the student was set up to be preferationally street in the system was set up to the preferance of the system was set up to the street of the system was set up to the sy after they have passed through the managers hands.

The accounting system was set up by Professor Morgan B. Cushing, who has had practical experience in banking and who came to Bowdoin from the University of Pennsylvania, to conduct courses in Money and Banking and Corporation Finance. Professor Cushing was recently elected to the athletic council.

To take the mass of details off Mr. Cobb and the council this fall elected Roland H. Cobb 17 assistant structor in physical education at Bowstructor in physical education physic

New Department Organized

New Department Organized Under Mr. Cobb's supervision a new department has been organized for the purchase, storing and issue of all sorts of athletics equipment. In the stockroom at the Sargent Gymnasium the lowdoin athlete can now get on requisition anything from a ron of abhesive tape to a complete football uniform, but he must sign a receipt for it and the equipment has to be turned in again at the end of the season, either entire or in woin-out remnants.
When Jack Magge's track small when Jack Magee's track squad numbers over 100 men, who report for duty even before the 60 or more men out for football put their togs in motiballs, and when Ben Houser's baseball men start operations in the Hyde Athlete Budding about February first, and the hockey squad turns out in warm woolens and expensive gloves and starts breaking two-dollar sticks—the equipment item in Bowdom's athletic budget mounts up.

Under a system where each man-

Under a system where each manager buys for his own sport and often loses equipment in the rush of other duties, there is bound to be waste. But the new Bowdoin equipment system, centralizing, purchase, storage, issue, repair, and so on, is expected to save a great deal.

a great deal.

The ...an who assists Mr. Cobb in the stock room is Brooks Savage '24, former manager of basehall. Savage is also an overseas veteran and he understands the army equipment system from real experience. The only thing ever issued him in the army without his giving a receipt for it was a dose of shrapnel that he still carries in his leg.

The Student's Place.

The Student's Place.

It is of considerable interest to notice the tendency of the undergraduate in recent months toward the critical attitude. The President has remarked on several occasions in Chapel addresses the prevalence of this attitude, and he, with many others, construes it as a good omen. No great amount of analysis is necessary to discover that, the place of the undergraduate in college is an important one. Noah Webster, in his well known work, defines the college as "a body of persons engaged in common pursuits, or having common interest," and farther on, "a society of scholars or friends of learning incorporated for study or instruction, especially in the higher branches of learning." Thus, by the very nature of the college, we cannot get away from the fact that the undergraduate, as one of the "friends of learning" is centainly." cannot get away from the fact that the undergraduate, as one of the "friends of learning" is certainly a member of the incorporated college, and, as such, vitally interested in the way in which the college performs its member of the incorporated college, and, as such, vitally interested in the way in which the college performs its functions.

Although it may not always be evident, the undergraduate does take a great interest in the curriculum, the first essential of the college, and in the way that that curriculum is taught. Hembers of the Faculty doubtless wonder often-times whether this is true, and they have reason to do so, triego and they had are found among students as among the members of any other group, but the policy of the college should be to work for the bettement of the good, to reform the bad. It is, therefore, not a little thing when a representative number of intelligent undergraduates, after a caneful study of conditions from their treatment of the good, to reform the bad. It is, therefore, not a little thing when a representative number of intelligent undergraduates, after a caneful study of conditions from their treatment. The good and the bad are found among students as among the members of any other group, but the policy of the college should be to work for the betterment of the good, to reform the bad. It is, therefore, rot a little thing when a representative number of intelligent undergraduates, after a careful study of conditions from their viewpoint, present the results of their invest gations, along with their recommendations, to the governing body of the college. Such a program is embolied in the latter portion of this editorial. It is the compilation by one man of the ideas of a large number of man of the ideas of a large number of his fellows, if not a majority at least very nearly so.

The undergraduates do not believe that the college is in a bad way, but they do believe that it is not in the best way it might pursue. That, in a word, is the reason for the numerous criticisms of the college policy which arise from all sides among the undergraduate group. The men are spending a considerable amount of money, four years of the formative period of their lives, and all the loyalty of their personalities to the college can give. In the desire to have the best possible, it is not strange that progressive men, men with ideas, seeing means by which the college could be improved, should desire to let their views be known to all who compose the college. Such expressions are made in a whole-hearted effort at friendly cooperation. undergraduates do not believe Such expressions are made in a whole-hearted effort at friendly cooperation between the students and the Faculty for the best interests of both. They are made only after fair and thorough Such expressions are made in a whole heatted effort at friendly cooperation between the students and the Faculty for the best interests of both. They are made only after fair and thorough consideration, and are presented in a spirit of helpfulness.

The suggestions embodied in the following outline have been compiled, as previously stated, by a member of the

THE BOWDOIN ORIENT undergraduate body who wants to see Bowdoin, his Alma Mater, unsurpass-Bowdoin, his Alma Mater, unsurpass-ed by any college approaching its class in this country. The men who are re-sponsible for these resolutions want to see the college move toward the lofty goal of real liberality in education, to get away from the less worthy methods of instruction as far as pos-sible, in order that the college, instead of being a mere intellectual water-spout may be a strong and steady curspout may be a strong and steady cur-rent, carrying its men out to the sea of life properly prepared to navigate it, with the cool capability of acknowl-edged responsibility and breadth of vision. That is the mission of the colssion which the undergradante is fully as anxious to see well fulfilled as is the administration.

On Friday evening the Delta Upsion fraternity held an informal smoker for the non-fraternity men of which there are a large number in college, The evening was most pleasantly spent with cards and mah-jongg, a buffet lunch being served about 10:30, Among those present were President Sills, Dean Nixon, Mr. MacCornick, Professors Means and Crook, and about fifty non-fraternity men. This was the, first smoker of its kind ever given at Bowdoin and is one which meets with the hearty approval of the faculty. It has been suggested that the other fraternities would do well to follow this example. Great credit is due to the committee in charge of the affair, J, Henry Johnson '24, Shurtleff' 26, and Winter '26.

refused to stop this nefarious propaganda. The Soviet has made no attempt to repay the debts which she owes the United States. These debts were loans from money raised from Liberty Bonds in the United States and therefore if the debts are not payed, the American people themselves must pay for Russia's policies. The Soviet propaganda is and has been spread broadcast over America in an attempt to "t the red flag over the Stars and Stripes. The Soviet desires to ruin the American government, cause a universal working men's strike, and make the United States a Socialist country. policy which would aid this Bolshiviki propaganda."

The second affirmative speaker was Edward T. Tevriz '26. Mr. Tevriz opened his speech by showing the strong doubt which existed as to the authenticity of documents which Secretary Hughes states have come from the Soviet government to stir up disorder in the United States. Recognition will stop propaganda, Russia is a spoiled child. We should not refuse to recognize it but treat with it and pursuade it to stop its bad practices. Italy considered complaining of the effects of Russian propaganda after recognition but decided to refrain. Therefore we must suppose that the Soviet stopped sending propaganda out after recognition. Mr. Hughes is interfering in the internal affairs of Russias—a thing which President Jefferson and President Monroe have both repeated must not be done by any foreign country. Moreover, Secretary Hughes is fostering a revolution in Russia itself. Another proof of interference.

to the economic advantage of the United States to recognize the Soviet. First because it is not possible to dobusiness with a government which refuses to guarantee sanctity of contract and moreover, that if it were possible, very little material advantage would acrue to America as a result of recognition. The Soviet discouraged foreign merchants doing business in Russia, they prevented foreign trade by swindling the peasants and strangling progressive business enterprises. Also, the Soviet policies have ruined production, transportation, and distribution in Russia, to such an extent that there is comparatively little trade in Russia today.

A short intermission was allowed between main speeches and rebuttal to allow the speakers to arrange their material. McGuire of the negative opened the rebuttal. He was followed by Griffin, then Jones, Tevriz, Hewett, and Read. The remarks of Tevriz concerning propaganda was one of the high spots of the evening. Hewest took up the affirmative points in regard to recognition of international law and removed them in rapid succession. His closing summary was the best single feature of the negative case. In a brilliant, witty, closing address, Read 26 showed the inevitable weaknesses of the negative and concluded his, speech by summarizing the reasons which lead them to uphoid recognition.

At the recommendation of its Committee of Athletics, the Bates faculty last work adopted the one-semester rule. After the beginning of the fall term of 1924, no member of the freshman class will be eligible for varsity athletics until he has completed one-inal year of college work.

Dean Fred E. Pomerov stated that

He is an honor student, a champion collegiate debater, in addition to being the leading athlete in track work in every school and college he attended, and later in world's Olympic games. During his last year in Pasudena High School he enlisted in the Field Artillery and was commissioned Second Lieutenant at Camp Zachary Taylor. He went to France for the Intervalled Service Championship, and his record there is history in the athletic world. In 1920 he went to Europe and won the Far Western and National and World Championship honors in the sprints. But his brilliant career in these past five years has not been allowed to interfere with his Sundayschool class in Pasadena, where the blond-haired athlete resides.

Dr. Henry Carmichael, inventor and chemist of note, and former professor at Bowdoin, died recently at his home in Malden, Mass. His health had been gradually failing since he suffered a stroke of paralysis last July. He was born in Brooklyn in 1846, the son of a prominent inventor. He graduated from Amherst College in in 1867, and later studied at the University of Goetingen in Germany. In 1869 he accepted the chair of chemistry at lowa College. A year later he became professor of chemistry and allied sciences at Bowdoin, where he remained fourteen years.

During his residence in Brunswick, Professor Carmichael invented the machines for manufacturing hollow ware from wood pulp, a ware including the fibre pail. He was the inventor of the Carmichael process of copper mining and of the method of automatically charging water with carbonic acid, the process making it possible to manufacture soda water in stores. Lately he had been working on a process to convert pulp into lumber. The process has been perfected, but not yet put on the market.

The Spirit of Kindliness.

The Spirit of Kindliness.

In our particular generation, as in nearly every Bowdoin generation since about 1810, I, fancy, there has been raised a great hue and cry over the relation of the alumni to the activities of the undergraduate. If we can philosophically believe in "original sin" we can readily concede that the attitude of a number of undergraduates on the subject is entirely natural. As an undergraduate, as a prospective an undergraduate, as a prospective alumnus, without hope of ever attain-ing to the lofty plane of membership in one of the administrative boards, the writer views without rancor the attempts of discontented—more often attempts of discontented—more often disgruntled—members of the College to revolutionize the policies of their Alma Mater in such affairs as most closely concern them. Such attempts are surely not confined to members of any one of the three main groups which make up the College; viz. the administrative department, the alumni, and the undergraduates.

The three and a half years in which the editor has been a member of Bowdoin have seen marked changes in almost every department of our college life. First, and most important, of these is the great change in the scholastic field. With enlarged opportunities with broadenad vision, the young lastic field. With enlarged opportunities, with broadened vision, the young men of our land have found the call of the College increasingly strong. The result is that Bowdoin, like all other reputable institutions of the kind, has found herself in a better position to select quite on her own terms the men who shall be known as her sons. This charge in encourants is the principal strong the select of the s who shall be known as her soles. The principal cause for a marked raising of the standards for matriculation and graduation. We have seen the coming of the high admission standard and the major examination with some qualms, but for the most part with pleasure at their unquestioned benefit to the College

The athletic and social departments of the campus activity have been influenced in a like manner, and pretty thoroughly by the direct action of the change in administrative policy. In the athletic organization there has been the athletic organization there has been a general remodelling of the financial system to bring that important part of the work up to a worthy standard of business efficiency. For this improvement we are directly indebted to the painstaking, unselfish efforts of capable alumni and faculty men. There is now a considerable agitation for a change in the coaching system, which may lead to radical departures in that line. The rule debarring freshmen from participation on varsity teams in their first semester at college has been adopted and has already had the sincere flattery of imitation by one of our rivals in the State. Here, as elsewhere, changing circumstances call for and bring forth changing customs or policies.

Changes in social customs, which are strictly undergraduate, come hard. But one fraternity group has carried out the policy of deferred initiation, but its success will doubtless elicit a like action on the part of all the others, in time. There is yet much to be done; much which can be accomplished only

THE BOWDOIN ORIENT by thorough and intelligent cooperation. We look forward to halcyon days when Bowdoin shall be in truth near that goal of perfection toward near that goal of perfection toward which we strive.

It has been the good fortune of the writer to know most of the undergrad-uates of his time, and to view under-graduate opinion from the inside. More of the undergraduates. Such support is given not because we happen to be so fortunate as to produce invariably the very best results hoped for, but because all these activities are carried on to the glory and the benefit of the college. We do not claim to be superlatively good. We realize that there is always large opportunity for improvement. We seek criticism that builds, that attempts to raise our standards in a spirit of goodwill.

There has been, during the year, a good deal of comment in support of the spirit of toleration. Why not go good deal of comment in support of the spirit of toleration. Why not go still farther than toleration? Why not strive to maintain a spirit of kindli-ness in all our inter-related activities? ness in all our inter-related activities? It is only by such a spirit of cooperation that we can hope to establish a well-knit organization of our three parts in one. We want a better Bowdoin, do we not? Then let us in a kindly, considerate way move on to helpful coordination of our interested parties, and that means all of us—administration, alumini, and undergraduates. uates.

Editor of the Orient:

Thanks to Mr. Hale's recent note, I must no longer think of the rostrum as an inevitable War Memorial. For Bowdoin men. whose lives were so useful to our Motherland, why should we not have a Memorial useful to our Alma Mater?

Without reflecting ungratefully on the zeal and painstaking of the committee in charge, why not canvass all the alumni for their preference, be it a rostrum, a Bowdoin Union or what else? Should not every alumnus who, when the time comes, is asked to give, be asked to vote, the sooner the better? Why take as final only one hundred and forty votes of four years ago? Since it has taken five years to get so far, we might well wait five years longer rather than rush into a project which creates so little enthusiasm as the rostrum.

I know several alumni each of whom is far more ready to give the Union one hundred dollars than to give the rostrum five dollars, Since the committee desire more "modest subscriptions given by a larger" number of memorial determined has the support not only of "representative alumni," but also of the majority of all alumni who care to vote?

To the Editor:

The pamphlet of Mr. Lee, cleverly satirizing the one gotten out by the "Bolsheviki," has given me the occasion to write this letter which I hope will illuminate and show the real purpose of the latter pamphlet. I am forced to write this without consulting and getting the official sanction of my five colleagues due to the disconcerting effect of examination week and the lack of time that it allows for united action:—so, with this as an excuse, I hope that I shall be accused of bumptiousness in expressing singly my individual views, nor be charged with displaying merely the attitude of one man and not reflecting somewhat the opinion of the group. I feel it important to write this letter, because, while it is admitted that the original pamphlet contained a good and worthwhile idea, it is also averred that through over-eagerness, and some slight tincture of personal opinion, the attempt was somewhat mishandled. Nevertheless, it is not right to let a good idea (Continued on Page 3)

Athletics and Limitation of Member ship of College Discussed

A special meeting of the governing A special meeting of the governing boards of the College was held Friday, February 1, at Hubbard hall. Most of the business was of a routine nature, without public interest, but many im-portant matters were considered. The portant matters were considered. The revised college laws were accepted and adopted. These make many changes in the college business, particularly by giving more power to the executive committee. The committee appointed to look into athletic matters reported to look into athletic matters reported that the athletic council as at present constituted has control over athletic sports in so far as that control can be delegated by the faculty, students, and alumni. The boards have, undoubtedly, paramount authority over athletics; future developments may make it seem advisable for the boards to undertake a more direct and active control, but for the present no action is expedient.

The report of the committee on limiting the membership of the college was received, and the boards voted to limit the freshman class for the present to about 150, and to announce that beginning with the fall of 1926 the college will give preference to candidates who offer for admission the subjects required for the A.B. course, and to those candidates for the B.S. course who offer for admission the college's regular and approved subjects only, with no so-called free margin points and who present the largest proportion of those subjects which demand two or more years of study and receive two or more units of credit. Other matters connected with the report of this committee were laid on the table for additional discussion at the June meeting. A buffet luncheon was served at Hubbard hall for the members of the boards and the members of the faculty.

The Students of Hamburg

On my first morning in Hamburg I bought a newspaper for 150,000,000, holo Marks. On the front page there appeared a rather startling article, It was the story of a pale-faced man with large spectacles covering overworked eyes who had stood in the early morning in Monckebergstrasse. It had been a chilly misty morning and as he stood there snow began to fall. Simply and directly enough, the article stated that was a "member of the great society of hatless and coatless," He was a begar, and around his neck a great red sign was hung. "Please, please, please, give me something," it reads that he was a "member of the great society of hatless and coatless," He was a begar, and around his neck a great red sign was hung. Villiams is as much better to shave with as the Hinge-Cap is better than other caps: The lather is heavier and holds the moisture in against your beard. Quickersoftening results. Also, Williams lather lubricates the skin. There is noticeable absence of irritating razor friction. And Williams takes good care of the skin. Though you shave daily, your face remains smooth and feels comfortable, Williams is a pure, natural-white cream absolutely without coloring matter. Try it!

Now one can agree with all this without denouncing the present system, for while it may be true that the student should be admitted free of charge, if there is not enough money without his paying an extra fee, he must be made to come across. After all, must he? Instead of him being made to pay the difference between what the treasury needs and has, should not the expenditure be made to keep within the means of the treasury? If we agree that this should be the case, and indeed, it seems the most elementary type of economy, what is case the management has been inefficient, or is it something of both; the second being the cause of the first?

The figures in the original pamphlet quite conclusively prove that we are spending more than we have a right.
These figures themselves have not been denied but instead have been admitted true. These figures are the children of the present system, hence we have a right to call this method inefficient even though we have no doubt that the members of the council are well meaning; and not only well meaning but hard working. Despite the theory, from the nature of its organization it is inevitable that most the work and most the influence should belong to small group. This has happened, and the group is composed of the alumni. While these men endeavor in all earnestness to work for the good of Bowdoin, they very often work to her detriment simply through the fact that their businesses do not give them sufficient time to know thoroughly either the particular needs of Bowdoin or the general trend of collegiate athletics. Also, since they have mostily been educated only at one college or under one system their general knowledge of athletic viewpoints is insufficient for the most progressive and efficient asystem of faculty control, as suggested in the pamphlet, this condition would not exist. Many students think that this would mean a considerable restriction of activity, the opposite is probably true. Under a proper system of faculty control there would be more athletics within the college, better opportunities to see the varsity teams play, and it is also possible that these—contests would be more fortunate.

It is regrettable that the one way to accomplish this reform is not to pay

For this he was sent to prison

Roger Bacon may not have invented gunpowder, as has been claimed by some biographers of the famous Franciscan friar, but he exploded some of the outstanding errors of thirteenth century thought. Because of his advanced teachings, Bacon spent many years of his life in prison.

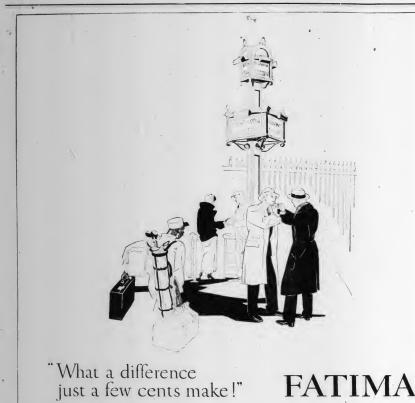

In an age of abstract speculation he boldly asserted the mathematical basis of all the sciences. But even mathematical calculation, he showed, must be verified by experiment, which discovers truths that speculation could never reach.

In the Research Laboratories of the General Electric Company, Bacon's principles are followed in every experimental investigation. The gas-filled electric lamp and the electron tube were worked out on paper, but it was experimental verification of the underlying mathematical theory that made electric illumination, radio broadcasting and X-rays what they are today.

Hockey Team To Meet Maine At Orono Friday

eam Strengthened by New Men— Handicapped by Lack of Practice

The Musical Clubs appear for the first time this year, Saturday February 9, at Auburn Hall, Auburn, under the auspices of the Alton M. Gaybuck chasers at Orono. This game will be a part of the Maine winter carnival. The chances of the Bowdoin team are very problematical. If Jim Berry and Charlie Cutter are able to get into the game the possibilities for a win over the Orono team are fairly good. At present it looks as if both men would be eligible. The Maine team will have several advantages over Bowdoin. In the first place it will be playing on its own rink, which is always a distinct advantage for any team. Then again it has played several more games than has the White; the last one was Saturday, when the Boston University sextet was defeated. Bowdoin's last game was played over two weeks ago, when the team was defeated by the Saint Dominique team of Lewiston. In addition to this the team had hardly any practice during the week of mid-year examinations. The only game other than the one with Saint Dominique that has been played was with Bates. Both of these games were played with but very little previous practice. Maine has played two games with Colby and one or two games with small hookey clubs, in addition to the one with Boston University. From this it can be seen that the outcome of the game rests almost entirely on this week's practice, and the chances of Cutter and Berry playing, for with these two men in the game the team is considerably strengthened.

Elliott of Maine Scores Five of Six Goals—Berry Does Creditable Work at Goal

With the aid of its stellar captain, Elliott, Maine beat Bowdoin six to one in a hard-fought hockey game last Friday. The White put up a good fight but the Maine team's superior passing game and knowledge of stick handling to say nothing of its excellent defense left Bowdoin quite powerless. If we did manage to break through and get a shot, Baxter, the Maine guard, maintained an almost impregnable goal. Judge Johnson was one of Wilson's personal friends. Much has already been written and said has already been written and said about our recently deceased War President for he stands out, in a period of great diversity of opinions, as a truly great man. He was the exponent of many things for which the world seemed unprepared, but he believed that the great verdict lay in mankind in general. The son of a Presbyterian minister, he was, like other boys, fond of sports of all kinds. But he showed intellectuality early in life. He was graduated from Princeton University in 1879, and for a short time he practiced law but he found it uncongenial. Then he took a post-graduate course in politiral science at Johns Hopkins. In 1883 he published his first book entitled 'Congressional Government in the United States." It was an amzing piece of work, showing the unbounded pile. Undergraduate Literature.

A very desirable and interesting form of intercollegiate competition is being attempted this year as an innovation to most of us. This is the literary competition inaugurated by The Granite Monthly, the literary magazine of the neighboring University of New Hampshire, and seconded by a gow like plan for the colleges of Maine. The former contest is open to all college students, men and women, in the three northern states of New England; the latter is divided into groups to provide competition for the men and College.

The purpose of the contest in both instances is to recognize and reward comparative excellence in the writing of the short story, presumably chosen as the most widely used medium of unstances where the literary composition. dere duate literary composition These competitions are an expansion of the system of encouraging literary effort by the award of prizes for all effort by the award of prizes for all the varied types of production in the belies lettres. We are familiar with the numerous opportunities of this sort at Bowdoin for comparison of effort in almost every branch, from the lyric to the oration. We welcome, then, from a standpoint of intercollegiate interest, such trials of skill as are now under way, firm in the belief that they may be an evidence of healthy interest in bringing forth more and better work in this important field of learning.

As we pride ourselves on being members of a liberal college, anxious to further interest in the study and practice of the arts, we cannot but find a distinct challenge to take up the gage in this new joust of pens. Even the strong incentive of the liberal prizes offered should not be necessary to elicit numerous entries from Bowdoin. We have talent of a high order in the college. A worthy representation. We have tuent of a high official in the college. A worthy representation in competitions is quite as essential to the maintaining of our high reputation for creative work as is a worthy representation on the athletic field.

The issue was a clean-cut one between two factions which are present in nearly every small college in New England at the present time. One favors seasonal coaching by a highly trained specialist and the other believes in faculty coaching with as much emphasis placed on intra-mural sport as on intercollegiate activities. Because this is true, the small colleges in New England were watching the Westleyan situation with great interest.

Dr. Fauver withdrew his resignation after pressure had been exerted on him by the faculty, the trustees, the student body, and an appreciable part of the alumni.

The feeling was that much of the ground which has been gained would be lost if Wesleyan should revert to the so-called seasonal coaching.

The heavier lather, the greater thoroughness with which it softens the beard, make a hit at once. Then, Williams lather lubricates the skin so that the razor fairly "glidas" the hairs off. Choice of a Career Someone, probably an incurance agent, was quoted recently as swing that from the mass of one bundred college graduates one individual only rose to the Polo and butler class, perilously near the top of the financial ladder. Five others became comfortably off and found themselves after twenty years at the small wabt and chauffeur stage. The other ninety-four presumably congregate in the great section of the American people who drive their own Buicks to the golf club. In other words, dreaming about being a rich man is one thing, and making the grade is "something else again."

Yet the ninety-four presumably work just as hard as the sunspruous six. Their business is the axis on which a small and uninteresting world revel res. They have become devotees of the dollar and when that fickle deity deserts, have nowhere else to turn. Jammed in a dull, straight rut of business they can never leave the road and jump the fence into finer fields of life. This, then, is the portion of ninety-four men out of every hundred now on the campus.

The answer to the problem lies in the proper choice of a career. THE NINETY-FOUR Between now and Commencement we shall have something to offer on the subject of "Careers." The members of the Bowdoin team were Eastman, captain, Lavigne, Stubbs, Andrews, Oliver, Spear, Nelson and Collett, manager. The team had only one or two days of practice before the carnival, and consequently it could not be expected to make a strong showing.

Harold Eastmam was second in the hundred and fifty yard snowshoe dash, while his brother won first place for Maine. Stubbs was third in the ski jump, which was not bad when the fact that he had had no previous practice this winter is taken into consideration. The ski relay team trailed the Bates team, with Maine third. The Bates team, with Maine third. The started in training for the university for they cannot afford carfare. If Bowdoin wishes to make a better showing in the Auburn and Augusta carnivals it will be necessary for more men to try out for the team. There were only seven men out for the Maine carnival team, while at Bates there were 45 out.

Ray Collett, president of the Bowdoin Outing Club, and Harold Eastman attended the meeting of the Maine Intercollegiate Winter Sports Association. At this meeting it was voted to limit the number of the winter sports team to eight men.

The summary of the carnival follows:

Friday the Relay team will run against Williams at the American Legion Games in Boston. It is expected that this will be an exceptionally good game, and from the showing made in the B.A.A, games, Bowdoin will at least be on an equal standing with Williams.

After, pluying three overtime periods in one of the closest hockey games ever seen on the Delta, the Bowdoin and Colby teams had to be content with a four to four tie in their game of last Wednesday. The teams were very evenly matched, as the score that this will be an exceptionally good in dicates, and after the first few minutes of the third period neither team was able to score.

No one expects that the men so favored will take advantage of the system by cutting classes regularly for foolish or unworthy reasons. On the other hand everyone expects that these men will accept their added responsibility to do some real work for the College.

Owing to the fact that the collection of the Blanket Tax now due is absolutely necessary to carry on the sports of Hockey, Track and Baseball for the rest of the College year, a few figures of expenditure and income over the past two College years might give some light on our situation, and show that only by the student contribution through the Blanket Tax can these sports be carried on.

In expenditures I have included all speaking of some of the relation produced by the sport I consider only in arriving at percentage of income produced by the sport I consider only the gate receipts and gluarantees and have not included any contributions by alumni or by the student body through the Blanket Tax appropriation.

To the Editor of the Orient:

At a recent meeting of the Athletic Council held in Portland I was instructed to draw up a detailed statement of the Athletic Situation from the financial aspect due to the feeling even among many of the students who cheerfully pay the Blanket Tax that they were entitled to more information as to where the money goes. This I hope to do in a later number of the Orient or at a meeting of all students interested whichever seems advisable.

Track and Baseball and each Department is co-operating in every way with my office to keep within the budgets where the expenditures are based on the estimated income so that if the students pay the Blanket Tax in full and as cheerfully as any one can pay any Tax, we should complete this College year without any deficit in any sport. All depends on the income and the main source of the income is the revenue from the A.S.B.C. It is impossible for the Athletic Council, efficient or in-efficient to stretch the "dollar,"

High praise for Williams Shaving Cream is contained in this suggested slogan for the Hinge-Cap. Yet truly, the combination of faster beard-softening, elimination of razor friction through lubrication of the skin, and the extraordinary care of the skin which Williams gives, has never been equalled by any other shaving cream. And Williams is a pure product, absolutely without coloring matter! Begin on a tube—compare it in every way.

The Best Business Career

Is what every ambitious senior is thinking about at the present time. Life insurance is one of the best, one of the most desirable, and one of the most satisfactory as a permanent calling.

In assets and volume of business, life insurance is one of the three leading businesses of this country, yet the field is comparatively underdeveloped. Only 7 per cent of the economic value of human life in the United States is covered by insurance. This gives an idea of the big field still to be worked, especially business insurance for firms and corporations.

As to remuneration: Reports of college graduates who have entered business indicate that life insurance is at the very top as a source of income. Bowdoin Freshmen Win Over Portland Track Men In Dual Meet By 64 to 31

Four Meet Records Broken and One Tied—Farrington, 1927, and Etter, Portland, Double Winners

For the third time in the three years that the annual dual meets have been held the Bowdoin Freshman

Fortington was high point man of the meet taking two firsts, a second, and a third for a total of fourteen points. Etter took first place in the 1000 yard run and first in the mile one was tied. In the 300 yard dash, Farrington clipped the previous record held by "Kack" Hamilton by one second flat. Etter of Portland set a new record of four minutes fifty-five and one-fifth seconds in the mile which was eight and two-fifths seconds better than the previous mark made in 1922 by Howes of Bowdoin. In the 12 pound shot put, Buker of Bowdoin broke the record, made by Charles of Bowdoin in 1922, when he put the shot forty-five feet four inches. The former record was forty-three feet two inches. Willey of Bowdoin took the pole vault at a height of ten feet three inches which broke the former record of nine feet nine inches made in 1923 by Robinson of Bowdoin. In the 45 yard high hurdles, Clines of Bowdoin equalled the record made by Littlefield in 1923 by covering the distance in six and two-fifths seconds. The mile run furnished the thrills which the relay race failed to provide. Etter of Portland, by making a spurt which brought every spectator to his feet, nosed out Ham, Bowdoin's crack distance man, by the narrowest of margins. So close was the finish that no one could be sure of the winner. When the gun was fred Ham had the pole and Jennison of Portland took the lead with Coburn of Portland second, Jennison of Portland third, and Etter of Portland. From the rest of the pack which was being led by Austin of Portland. From the ninth lap until the finish, the race became a personal struggle between Ham and Etter. On the last time around both men sprinted, with Ham one or two feet ahead until within twenty yards of the finish when Etter cut loose and with a terrific burst of speed crossed the line a fifth of a second ahead of the Bowdoin man. Austin of Portland placed third.

In the 1000 yard run, Etter, fipishing with a wonderful sprint, had little difficulty in beating Boynton of Bowdoin. Whittier placed third for Bowdoin.

Bowdoin was never in danger in the relay. Kohler immediately took the lead over Currie of Portland. Cuter difficulty in beating Boynton of Bowdoin. Whittier placed third for Bowdoin.

Bowdoin was never in danger in the velay. Kohler immediately took the lead over Currie of Portland. Cutter and Wood increased the Bowdoin lead and when Farrington, the Bowdoin nachor man, took the baton, the Freshmen were fifteen yards to the good. Farrington walked away from his Portland competitor and finished well over a quarter of a lap in advance.

Bowdoin took all the points in the hurdles, the shot, and the pole vault, and all but one in the 40 yard dash. In the trial heats in the hurdles, Portland failed to place a man. Portland gave the Freshmen little trouble except in the broad jump, where the high school boys were distinctly superior, and in the mile.

The summary follows:

Four Maine Colleges Will Put Rule Into Effect This Fall—Movement Rapidly Spreading have successfully passed one semester of their college work.

Colby's action closely follows that of Bates and completes the list of the four colleges in Maine which have adopted the rule. The announcement was made by Dr. George F. Parmentof the tor chairman of the executive comter, chairman of the executive committee in charge of affairs at the college, in the absence of President Ar-heige, in the absence of President Ar-thur J. Roberts who is on a four months' tour of Europe. Agitation for the adoption of the one semester rule by all the colleges in New England was begun as a result of the meetings and conferences of New England College Presidents held at Springfield, Mass., at the instance of former President Meiklejohn of Amherst.

Amherst,
Further impetus was lent to the proposal in Maine when the presidents of the four colleges within the state met at Waterville last fall. Previous to this meeting the University of Maine had adopted the rule, and soon after Bowdoin announced its adoption of the rule. Bates and Colby have followed suit within the last month.

Bowdoin increased the prestige which she enjoys around Boston when Jack Magee's crack relay team defeat-ed the Williams' aggregation and when Bob Foster, New England halfmile champion, placed second in the Colonel Gaston "600" at the American Legion games held in the East Arm-ory, Boston, on Washington's Birthday.

In the relay, Williams drew the pole.

Not only did Littlefield wipe out the Williams' lead, but he handed Foster ten yards besides. Bob Foster, New England champ in the half-mile, added nive more yards to Bowdoin's lead when he walked away from Perkins, also a crack half-miler.

For that reason it becomes increasingly difficult for us, infected with the bacteria of conflicting propagands spread by the press, to see with a clear eye just what conditions are prevalent abroad. It would be necessary to enter into a long and involved discussion of politics, economics, and sociology to explain with any lucidity the causes of our vast misinformation. Outing Club Completes Carnival Competitions

Organization Has Great Possibilities and Deserves More Support—Many Plans for Expansion During Next Vear

This winter the Outing Team has competed in three winter carnivals with varying degrees of success. At the University of Maine Carnival the White snowbirds were able to come away with third place only. At the Aubrum Carnival they met with still more meager success, taking last place with a total of only three points. A grand total of eight points gave them a very poor second place at the Augusta Carnival last Saturday. To say that the Bowdoin ski and snowshoe athletes are inferior to the members of the other Maine college teams is to say too much, however, for in competition with Maine and Colby the Bowdoin team did very well. When Bates entered the arena the men from the other colleges were forced to battle among themsetves for the honor of winning a poor second place. It is this continued excellence of the Lewiston aggregation which should spur the other colleges teams to still greater effort next winter, thus assuring the other colleges were forced to battle among themsetves for the honor of winning a poor second place. Cap puts an end to an ancient nuisance.

Williams Shaving Cream is just as much pleasanter to use as is the Hinge-Cap. It softens the beard with uncanny speed. The thicker lather holds the moisture in against the skin where it is needed. This lather lubricates the skin, too, so that painful razor friction is eliminated. And when your shave is done, that famous ingredient in Williams which helps the skin, leaves your face cool, soothed and refreshed. No coloring matter is used in Williams—it is a pure, natural-white shaving cream. white shaving cream.

Major George H. Putnam Lectures On Relations Of England And America

ds for World Court and League of ations—Reviews Past Associations and Need for More Cooperation

"Let us have peace" was the sub-ject upon which Major George H. Put-nam spoke last Sunday evening in Memorial Hall. These were the words Memorial Hall. These were the words of his old commander, General Grant. He related his opinion that the next war would destroy civilization due to the many new barbaric munitions that were discovered during the last stages of the World War and those since that time. There has been only one plan presented to prevent such destruction, and that is to have all nations come together into one family regardless of the name that it shall bear. The English speaking people are the logical ones to advance such a system. It is the duty of the most representative government to promote such a system. But where does the United States stand in this matter? Unfortunately, it is the only large country in the world which has not entered this family. Prejudices have played an imand that is to have all nations come together into one family regardless of the name that it shall bear. The English speaking people are the logical ones to advance such a system. It is the duty of the most representative government to promote such a system. But where does the United States stand in this matter? Unfortunately, it is the only large country in the world which has not entered this family. Prejudices have played an important part in our isolation.

King Albert of Belgium in creating the World Exposition, brought about a closer relation between countries, but there is still greater work to be done. We should get out of the habit of "brick throwing" towards the foreign nations. The British have been considered our enemies in the past due to the stress by faculty text books and the mistakes of a few English leaders. Of late this tendency has been cast of late this tendency has been cast aside. The intermingling of the Brit-ish and American soldiers, fighting side by side, has aided in bettering our relations.

At the time of the Revolutionary War, King George the Third, was really Prussian in blood. Major Putnam pointed out the fact that we were not fighting the English people, but a selfish government led by a monarch and politicians. Even Burke, one of the foremost statesmen of that time, pleaded for us. Such great leaders as Colonel Barre and John Wilkes refused to fight against us, giving up their careers because they felt that the cause was unjust. Parliament did not represent the people because many of the nobility then held office. Only sixty per cent of the people of England had free utterance, and this gave a much different aspect upon the conditions.

In the War of 1812 we were hasty in entering on the side of France because the seizing of our ships was only the result of the stupid actions of a few foolish English statesmen. But on the contrary, where the reasons were justifiable as in the last war, he would have joined the French army against Prussianism if he were younger. In fact, Major Putnam was offered a commission of Adjutant-General in Roosevelt's division in 1918. This is very remarkable because of Major Putnam's some 82 years.

England's attitude toward the Confederacy was also due to the mistakes of a few men. They had sent munitions and food supplies by the appeals that the Southern leaders made. This breach of law was eventually smoothed over at the Genoa Conference when England agreed to pay an indemnity of fifteen million dollars. Gladstone later admitted his mistake in a speech before Parliament. These were personal misdemeanors, not national ones. Woodrow Wilson had great ideals but his methods were likewise faulty. Bryce made a wonderful survey of the English speaking people's conception of government on a Fourth of July celebration held in England—at which many Americans were present. Lord Cecil then extended King George's Meet Friday Evening of government on a Fourth of July celebration held in England—at which many Americans were present. Lord Cecil then extended King George's congratulations for the success of the American Revolution. Then Major Putnam addressed the gathering taking as his text the need of interdependence upon which the English Speaking Union was founded. In connection with our Decoration day services for our fallen soldiers, he was greatly impressed by the sympathy that the English extended as they gathered to pay tribute to our men buried in the Winchester cemetery. Major Putnam then told an interesting story about a review of some of our soldiers at the close of the war. The bandmaster wishing to please the king asked the representatives of the Americans from what state the first regiment came. As it happened, it

The fraternities started the corruption in campus politics. It devolves upon them to stop it. A means has been suggested by one of the fraternities which has adopted it and carried it out successfully, for a year. The suggestion is that each fraternity incorporate within its bylaws a provision forbidding combination with any other fraternity for the purpose of winning elections. Looking at the situation as the majority of men in college now do, it takes courage to vote for such a step in support of fair play. We believe that the undergraduates of Bowdoin want to see their leaders elected by a decent system, and we believe that they have the courage to inaugurate such a system.

Logic and common sense, which formed the basis of Bowdoin's argument were effectively offset in this debate by the negative's use of points of great emotional significance. The Bowdoin speakers were unusually skilfull and well informed, and they gave an admirable presentation of the case which they had prepared. The hospitality and fairness of the Tufts team and the considerate approval given by the large audience to both sides made the visit to Medford a pleasure, notwithstanding the defeat.

"What's the use of it?"

Michael Faraday saw the real beginning of the age of electricity nearly a century ago when he thrust a bar magnet into a coil of wire connected with a galvanometer and made the needle swing.

Gladstone, watching Faraday at work in his laboratory, asked, "What's the use of it?" The experimenter jestingly replied, "There is every probability that you will soon be able to tax it." The world-wide use of electricity that has followed the Faraday discovery abundantly justifies the retort to Gladstone.

Faraday's theory of lines of force is constantly applied in the Research Laboratories of the General Electric Company in devising new electrical apparatus of which Faraday never dreamed. Every generator and motor is an elaboration of the simple instruments with which he first discovered and explained induction.

Discussion on Noted Game Bird

A meeting of the Biology Club was held the evening of Feb. 26, at the Biology lecture room, followed by refreshments at the A.D. house. At this meeting Mr. C. G. Weymouth '24 gave a most interesting lecture on the Ruffed Grouse. The lecture was illustrated by a large number of lantern slides which were made by Mr. Weymouth. A short summary of the lecture is as follows. From the time when the early pilgrims discovered what a pleasing delicacy the flesh of the grouse constituted, down to the present day, the grouse have deservedly are natural enemies, and that to come under any such agreement with her would be detrimental to our national interests. The men who spread such propaganda as this can naturally be classed as nothing but stupid and selfish. No firm foundation for a permanent World peace can be established pist. No firm foundation for a permanent World peace can be established pist. No firm foundation for a permanent World peace can be established pist. No firm foundation for a permanent World peace can be established pist. No firm foundation for a permanent World peace can be established pist. We would not be presented to the world have refrained from taking a part in such any agreed fist. We should take our at hach in overcoming the bullying attitude with England and the other members of the White race in the struggle to overcome for ever the fear of impending war. If such an agreement had been in the minds of men at the time of the war of 1812, there would have been no war. We haven ow reached a period where we must be careful to elect men to the Senate who are willing to cast aside their personal prejudices and act for he best interests of the World as a whole. Let there be protection for the smaller nations of the World and may America do her share in bringing about the stable formation of a compelial community of nations.

1915—Announcement of the marriage of George A. McWilliams to Miss Mary Rose Reddy of New York in New York last week has reached Maine. McWilliams is also a graduate of the Harvard School of Business Administration, and served during the war as an interpretor. He formerly lived in Bangor but is now connected with Brown Brothers, private bankers, in New York City, where he is handling all French, Spanish, Portugese and Italian correspondence.

1916—Alfred H. Crossman has moved to Southern California to join the forces of the Southern Sierras Power Company. His address is 455 Cover Street, Riverside, California.

1917—Lieutenant-Colonel Sherman H. Shumway, of Skowhegan, is being urged for collector of revenues in the Port of Portland by the temperance element of the state. Following the recent liquor trouble in Aroostook County, these people feel that a competent and fearless man is needed to undertake this task. Lieut.-Col. Shumway seems to fulfill these requisites. At the outbreak of the war he joined the Second Maine Infantry as a private, and went overseas as a 2nd lieutenant. While across he saw a great deal of action and his work was so good that he came back as a Lieutenant-Colonel. The appointment is made by President Coolidge upon the County Y. M. C. A. Boys'

Third: An epidemic of some disease. The questionnaire of 1917 reported the principal cause foxes, bad nesting season, and hawks. Both these reports were natural and not the result of scientific investigation. Dr. Allen of Cornell University has been carrying on a scientific investigation as to the causes of the scarcity of the ruffed grouse in different parts of the state of New York. Of the various diseases which cause the death of the grouse, he has laid greater stress on the newly discovered Dispharagus. This disease is caused by a stomach worm. In order to preserve the ruffed grouse and to solve the problem which causes so many deaths is to send the stomachs of the birds to Bowdoin College or to Dr. Allen at Cornell. By this method we could find out the conditions in every state and be able to predict when the next great scarcity of ruffed grouse will appear.

Four records were broken, and one was tied in the twelfth annual Indoor Inter-Scholastic Track Meet, as the Medford High School team from Mas-sachusetts won easily piling up forty-four points. Hebron Academy took second place with Lowell High third, scoring twenty-five and twenty points respectively. Moore of Medford was the individual star of the meet with a tespectively. Moore of Medford was the individual star of the meet with a total of eleven and a quarter points, accumulated by a win in the broad jump, a second in the forty yard dash, a third in the shot put, and running anchor man on the winning relay team. His team-mate, Hormell was second with a first in the three hunter of the second with a first in the three hunter dired, a third in the forty yard dash, a fourth in the broad jump, and a member of Medford's relay team, a rotal of nine and a quarter points. Although many of the afternoon's events brought many surprises, the greatest one of all, probably, came in the very first one, the forty yard dash. After three exceedingly fast semifinal heats, Moore and Hormell of Medford, Daley of Lowell, McCarthy of Portland, Rogers of Somerville, and Rowe of Hebron had survived. Moore, by virtue of his win in the New Engle land inter-scholastics, was the heavy favorite but the done was decided. favorite, but the dope was decidedly upset when Daly led him at the tape in the fast time of four and three-fifths seconds. Lowell later proved that his victory was not a flash in the pan, for its four man team proved to be the dark horse of the meet when every one of its men took a first. The next event on the program was cheduled as the trials in the six hunscheduled as the trials in the six hundred yard run, but so many men dropped out, that the coaches agreed to run it without the preliminaries. Once again the Lowell team showed its mettle when Pearson led the field and won handily winning in the record breaking time of one minute and twenty and one-fifth seconds. Surette of Medford and Johnson of Somerville were second and third respectively.

In the first heat of the forty-five yard high hurdles, Parksley of Medford broke the record by a fifth of a second, winning his heat in six and one-fifth seconds. The other heats served to qualify Burrows and Currie of Portland, Paul of Thornton, Pomeroy of Jordan, and Flint of Hebron. In the final, Parksley took first, with Flint, Currie, and Burrows in the other three places, in six and two-fifths seconds.

Objectives

We have removed ourselves from the productive life of the world for four years of seclusion in the college. The world is willing that a certain number of her young men should be so removed and that willingness is founded on certain excellent and tangible reasons. The impression of the youth entering college is rather frequently that, so long as his financial quently that, so long as his financial condition and his intellectual or social inclinations will permit his spending nations will permit his spending years in life that is not immefour years in life that is not immediately productive, he is entitled to spend that time in college quite as he pleases. It takes time and some experience to remove this impression, with the result that not a few of our esthe result that not a few of our es-teemed colleagues, never having eith-er the time or the experience to appre-hend the truth, get through college somehow or rather with out coming to a full realization of what the college and college education mean to the world as well as to the men who benefit by them.

The stern edict of the wolf-pack, "Eat or be eaten," may apply to people of the average intelligence and culture expected of the college-bred person, but we doubt it. It does apply, however, in some measure if the col-lege, and by the college I mean the higher institution which devotes itself to instruction in the distinctly cultural to instruction in the distinctly cultural branches of learning, consistently fails to produce citizens whose minds are broad enough to appreciate the opportunities, to work for the good of human kind, the world will most certainly destroy the college as a member which has ceased to perform its function. Whether or not we find the control of understanding and symptomic of understanding and symptomic of understanding and symptomic of understanding and symptomic of the control of the coat of arms that this method is should be the coat of arms that is should be about a should be also be a coat of a should be are also be a coat of a should be are also be a coat of a should be are also be a coat of a should be are also be a should be a should be a function. Whether or not we find penury of understanding and sympathy among the men who have graduated from our colleges we do find an appreciable lack of these qualities among the undergraduates. If this is due merely to youth and inexperience, well and good; if it is due, as we think it is, to indifference and selfishness, we must remedy it. st remedy it.

All that we can expect of the under-graduate is that he will stop to think a moment and analyse his position in relation to the other millions of peo-ple who inhabit the earth. If we can obtain such thought from every un-dergraduate in every college or uni-versity in the land we shall come versity in the land we shall come pretty near the millennium in higher education. Unfortunately the difference and antagonism to constructive thinking cannot be routed out by a resolution or a "drive." But there are a sufficient number of men who are willing seriously to consider their objectives in life to give us hope that in time the greater number of college men will realize that they are privileged not because they are intended to be given an advantage which will enable them to heap up more money than their less fortunate opponents in to be given an advantage which will enable them to heap up more money than their less fortunate opponents in business but because the welfare of the community demands the services of citizens who have breadth of vision and appreciation of the opportunities for making the lives of all people more nearly happy. When we realize that the opportunity for service is

Bresident Silla Gelever the Sunday Chapet and Students

Fresident Silla Gelever the Sunday Chapet and Students the aim of his speech. He began by giving us an idea of what the college was like one hundred and eight years ago when the Reverend William Allen was president. There were four other members of the Library, William J. Curtis, of the Class of 1875, suggested that it might be a good thing if the Librarian kept the Library and through the publication in the Orient of brief notes on its needs, its resources, its history, and its hopes for the future. It is surely a pleasant task for the Librarian to write you three intimate letters and he believes that a better acquaintance will result; in the advancement of the Library.

The courteous Editor of the Orient has given this plan his hearty approval and agrees to give the Librarian such space as he is able, from the time to the content of the Corent of the C

American history, and included almost everything in print on Mineralogy.

In each of these books was a bookplate bearing the coat of arms at the head of this letter,—the coat of arms at the head of this letter,—the coat of arms of the Bowdoin Family. The original plate from which these book-plates were made is still in the possession of the Librarian.

Many years ago Dr. George T. Litte had a book-plate made carrying the Bowdoin coat of arms as the central feature. This was not satisfactory and was abandoned. Somewhat less than ten years ago the Librarian succeeded in having made a fine copy of the old coat of arms. Since then he has used it on all letter-heads and postal cards, and many of the bookplates of the Library, and it has come to be recognized as the mark of the Library.

It is fitting that the Library have a distinctive mark of its own, and it is especially fitting that this mark should be the coat of arms that is still to be seen in all parts of Hubbard Hall in the old Bowdoin books. When you see this mark, think of the Library.

Foster of Beta Theta Pi handly won the mile run. The second man, Small of Alpha Delta Phi, was fifteen yards behind Foster and nearly ten yards ahead of Ham of Zeta Psi. Berryo of Delta Upsilon lost what seemed like a certain fourth place when his sprint proved less substantial than that of Mushroe of Chi Psi.

The 45 yard high hurdles were easily won by Hardy of Beta Theta Pi. Littlefield of Sigma Nu, who placed second, was considerably pushed by McInnes of Zeta Psi. Hull of Chi Psi took fourth.

Hamilton of Theta Delta Chi took the lead at the start of the 440 yard run and kept it throughout the race. Tarbell of the Beta Theta Pi, who got a very poor start, furnished the thrills in the event when he went from last to second place. Webster, record holder in the event, finished fourth.

President Sills has recently been appointed chairman of a national committee on studies of the English Speaking Union of New York.

Professor Mitchell gave a lecture on "A Yankee in England" at the Universalist church Sunday evening at half past seven. The lecture was held under the joint auspices of the Universalist Associates and the Men's Club of the first parish.

Professor Cram is at present in Cambridge, England, where he is engaged in research in the chemical laboratory of Sir William Pope. Sir William Pope is well known as a chemist in England and is past president of the English Chemical Society. It is a compliment not only to Professor Cram but to the College that he has given Professor Cram an opportunity to work in his own laboratory.

with the present system, under which the undergraduate plays a game of hide-and-seek with the faculty, and it is quite as evident that no substitute thus far offered is meeting with the hearty approval of the men in college. "The Quadwrangler," writing in the Boston Transcript for March 14, comments on a recent editorial in the Orient, in which the editor suggested Orient, in which the editor suggested a solution of the campus political difficulties by a system of fraternity honor, in which the honor was intended to replace most of the system. In the same column, the Boston writer devotes considerable space to the recommendations of Dr. John Crawford, a professor at Lafayette, in regard to the honor system in examinations. The statement of the case is so concise and should be taken down, overhauled and set up again. Moreover, while the job of reassembling is going on, no great harm will be done if an assistant or somebody loses, throws away or otherwise disposes of much of the so-called system. Then the chief mechanic will be in a position to concentrate on the honor part of the business.

"The programme suggested in the Lafayette Weekly by Dr. John Crawford, professor of the classics in the college, marks a step in the right direction. Under his plan there is no call for the services of a student council to administer the system. Nor is the student required to make any sort of written pledge, either that he will himself refrain from cheating in examinations or that he will report others he sees cheating. This latter part of the arrangement appeals to the Quadwrangler as it will doubtless appeal to many college men. Most students have fairly well defined notions of what their attitude toward their fellow students should be. 'Live and let live' is perhaps the rule of conduct that the majority follows. Above all things they have no inclination to serve as bearers of tales, to become what Dr. Crawford describes as something between a low order of detective and stool-pigeon.

"In spite of much pretty talk to the contrary, the honor system as now commonly in effect is not a thoroughgoing success. They say that it re-amount of cheating that the authorities know about. Even in colleges where the honor system prevails students are still taking notes to examinations and they are still copying from their neighbors' papers. With the instructor staying out of the classroom their task is very much simplified. Their only worry is that some other student will report them and that really can't be called a worry because they are among friends and the very least that one friend does for another is to turn his head when he sees some shady performance going on. It some shady performance going on. It may be good ethics or it may be bad ethics, but it is a fact that Americans have been brought up to have a hearty dislike for the man who tells on somebody else. They may think, when they sign a pledge, that they are going to live strictly up to its terms, but in the end human nature triumphs. Besides, it isn't a great deal of work to close one's eyes or look the other way.

What we don't see doesn't hurt us.
"Under Professor Crawford's plan most of the system has been thrown overboard. Students would be given square buttons and when they wore them to an examination they would thereby serve notice that they were willing to be on their honor. They rould be free to wear them to one ex amination and not to another. Men who did not play fair would not be subject to any discipline through ex-We have been discussing for some time the attitude which the undergraduates should take in regard to the so-called honor system in class-room work and in examinations. Arguments have been vigorously adduced on both sides, but with little effect. It is clearly evident that something is wrong with the present system, under which be built up."

"The Quadwrangler is making no rash promises but this is as good a place as any to say that if they keep on tinkering the honor system the immay some day come when he will find it possible to approve that method of student government. Considerable tepair work, however, is still necessary. And it must go below the surface. I hope I may be pardoned for the following "outburst," but it represents the attitude of a good many Bowdoin Alumni, I know.

Although some time has passed since the "Don't Pay Your Blanket Tax" leaflet was broadcasted, continued reference to it has kept it con stantly in my mind. When I first read it, I tried to dismiss it from my mind, considering it a childish prank, engineered by small boys who didn't know what they were talking about. The more I think of it, however, the madder I get. If it had offered a bit of constructive criticism, and had been signed, showing that the writers were at least not cowards, and had quoted authority for their statistics, it might be excusable.

My advice is for poets to stick their poetry, and keep out of athletic

My advice is for poets to stick to their poetry, and keep out of athletic controversies until they know something about them, or can present a case based on the whole truth, and nothing but the truth. That pamphlet could be picked all to pieces, but it is so obvious, what's the use of starting? Without dwelling on the merits of coaches, or dealing at all in personalities, I think it is a shame to denounce a man who thinks more of Bowdoin College than of his "job." He is sincere, which is more than can be said of the writers of that propaganda. To make goats of members of the Athletic Council, who are true Bowdoin men, giving freely of their time and money to help the College, not themselves, these students laud an inferior coach, and try to make a fool of his successor. Might it not be well on consider all conditions? I speak as one who has been in close contact with all parties concerned.

I am glad to hear that the blanket taxes are coming in better than ever before, and the writers of the paper were ostracised by their own efforts.

Very truly yours, R. G. WOODBURY.

He opened by telling of the notable ceremony which is to take place this week at Harvard University, a ceremony at which our country will be represented by Chief Justice Taft, and the educational world by President Angel of Yale University. The significance of this affair goes much farther than the walls of Harvard.

There are certain qualities of the man himself which make him what he is to Americans, but in order to understand these, it is necessary to look into the life through which he has passed. A Class Distinction

The Hinge-Cap is the insignia of Williams Shaving Cream and of Williams only. You'll notice three things about Williams every time you shave. 1. Williams lather is heavier and holds the moisture in against the beard. Quicker and more thorough softening takes place. 2. Williams lather lubricates your skin — your razor actually seems to "glide" the hairs off. 3. Williams lather leaves the skin in marvelously fine condition. No matter how frequently you shave, your face stays cool, smooth and comfortable.

You'll enjoy every shave with Williams. It is a pure, natural-white cream without any artificial coloring whatsoever.

Brunswick High Wins Interscholastic Debate Bowdoin College Football Association

The championship debate in League B, Bowdoin Interscholastic Debating League, was held in Hubbard Hall, last Saturday evening, March 15. The debate was one of the most informing and spirited high school debates ever held on the campus. The negative represented by Brunswick High school clearly excelled in thoroughness of information and analysis, and to some extent in vigor and effectiveness of presentation, and was awarded the unanimous decision of the judges over the affirmative, represented by Jordan High school of Lewiston. Notwithstanding competing attractions the audience in attendance crowded Hubbard Hall.

Their opponents, Jordan High school of Lewiston, were the Misses Clara Parnell, Grace McCarthy, Beatrice Libbey with Queenie Ferguson alternate, and they were coached by R. Justin Saunders '24. In the preliminary debates Brunswick had defeated Morse High of Bath, and Jordan had obtained the decision over Edward Little High of Auburn. The Brunswick team will meet Deering High in the finals sometime in the near future.

The two cups offered by the College for the league championships will shortly be awarded. That for League A to Deering High School, and that of League B to Brunswick High School, thus ending the most successful year yet in Bowdoin Interscholastic debating.

Cumberland County Boys' Conference Held Here

in Rallies, Dinners, Athletic Contests, and Inspection of College

The Cumberland County Boys' Conference was held here at Bowdoin over the last week end. A large group of boys from all parts of the county assembled here in town and were given some very interesting entertainment. After they had been taken to all the points of interest here in town, especially those places related to the history of the college, they went to the Hyde Athletic Building where, under the direction of Coach Jack Magee and Physical Training Instructor Roland H. Cobb, a track meet was conducted. Before the events were run off, Captain Francis Bishop gave an exhibition in the pole vault in which he cleared twelve feet, and Horace Hildreth gave one in the high jump, leaping over five feet eight inches. Then the boys themselves competed, and gave a very good demonstration of athletic skill throughout it all. Rancour of Brunswick was probably the best runner there, winning firsts in the Junior forty yard dash, and the junior three hundred yard run. After the meet, all the boys entered into a hard fought tug-of-war.

In the evening, the gathering went to Memorial Hall, where they heard two very interesting speakers in Professor A. O. Gross, and Y.M.C.A. head Horace Hildreth. The latter spoke on his trip through Europe taken last summer when he went over to study conditions among the common people and students in the countries left destitute by the war. He painted a very vivid picture to the boys of the awful conditions existent there. Professor Gross then gave a talk on birds, principally about the gulls of the Maine coastline, and he illustrated his talk with stereopticon views taken on Great Duck Island. He also told the interesting story about the nest of night hawks built upon the roof of the Brunswick High school, and said that it was almost time for them to be returning for their fourth year to this habitation.

With Vaux, Ranney, and strong candidates for places on the team the class of 1927 will be well represented in the makeup of the team, and it is equally apparent that the makeup hinges on the results of the review of classes. If Mal Morrell should have to catch a change in the infield would be necessitated. Fourteen men will make the trip, two catchers, five pitchers, four infielders, and five outfielders.

The first game will be March 29 with the Navy at Annapolis; March 31 the team will play Georgetown at Washington; April 1, Columbia at New York; April 2, Princeton at Princeton; April 3, New York Athletic Club at Traveller's Island; and April 5, the Army at West Point:

Southern Baseball Trip Begins On Saturday With Navy at Annapolis

Team Will Leave Friday-Has Had Out-of-Doors Practice—Many New Men on Squad

The baseball team leaves Friday on its annual Southern trip, playing its first game Saturday with the Naval its annual Southern trip, playing its first game Saturday with the Naval Academy at Annapolis. The men who will probably make the trip are, Mal Morrell, Les Blake, catchers; Larry Southwick, Red Robinson, Clif Gray, Wayne Sibley, pitchers; Jake Aldred, first; Don Lancaster, second; Captain Rupe Johnson, short stop; and either Dave McLaughlin or Barrett Nichols, third; both of these men will make the trip, as one will act as substitute infielder. The only outfielder who is absolutely sure of going is Fat Hill, although Lawrence Ranney will undoubtedly be with the team if he is up in his studies. The other place is a toss-up between Williams, Fish, Daggett, and H. Smith. One of the men who is showing a great deal of promise is Rodney Bartlett, a freshman south paw. Last fall he was troubled with a bad arm, and so he did not go out for fall baseball. During the winter his arm has improved greatly, and now he appears to be an extremely promising pitcher. He has an excellent curve, very good control for a left hander, and fairly good speed.

This week will be spent in smoothing up the work of the team before the trip. It is hoped that it will be possible for the team to practice out doors once or twice before leaving on the trip.

As all the teams to be played have been practicing out doors for a long.

As all the teams to be played have been practicing out doors for a long time, the Bowdoin sine will have a severe handicap against them. As this is practically a new club, it is naturally not to be expected that there will be only victories won over the experienced teams to be played. However, much experience will be gained which will be of great value in the spring series. With a fair number of the breaks and with no injuries or sickness, Bowdoin men may well look forward to a reasonably successful trip. Of the team Southwick is the only experienced pitcher. What the others will do is extremely problematical, especially Gray, who has been changed from a catcher to a pitcher. Robinson and Sibley pitched several games last year for the second team, but they have not had the experience of playing against first class teams, and their work will naturally be watched with keen interest.

The team will leave Friday morning for Boston, going to New York from there by boat. It will leave New York Saturday morning for Annapolis, where it plays in the afternoon.

Pedagogical Course To Hear Interesting Lecturers

The work of the seventh week of course in pedagogy at Bowdoin conducted Tuesday and Thurs-of last week by Mr. Josiah W.

The work of the smaller high school. The work of the smaller high school. The work of the smaller high school are date has proved very interesting. Superintendents Cone of Brunswick and Jack of Portland have each conducted a week's work, Principal Moulton of Edward Little High School a week's work, and Principal Wing of Deering High School had charge of the work for three weeks. This week Principal Kimball of Brunswick High School will give a lecture and conduct a conference on the subject "Planning the Curriculum."

After the Easter vacation Dr. Augustus O. Thomas, State Commissioner of Education, will lecture to the class on April 8th. On April 10th Professor McDonald, Professor of Education at Bates, will conduct a lecture and conference. The remainder of the course will be devoted to the technique of teaching special subjects such as History, Science, English, the Classics, Modern Languages, and Mathematics. An innovation will be tried on May 15th when the lecture and conference will be shared by two recent graduates now teaching. These the pitfalls that await the novice. Bowdoin Athletes Show Possible Olympic Material

Tootell '23 Sure of Making Team-Both Bishop '24 and Fester '25 Strong Contenders for U.S. Team

On the team which will represent United States at the Olympic games next July there is sure to be at least one Bowdoin man. He is F. D. Tootell '23, track captain last year and least one Bowdoin man. He is F. D. Tootell '23, track captain last year and one of the greatest athletes ever developed in Bowdoin. "Toots" not only holds the American intercollegiate record in the South officially broken world's records in these events. In the coming spring, the former Bowdoin captain should officially break the world's record in the hammer throw and the weight events.

Captain Francis P. Bishop of this year's track team should also be a strong contender to represent the United States in the pole vault. Bishop is rated as one of the four best pole vaulters in all American colleges at the present time.

Bob Foster '25 is the third Bowdoin man who stands a very good chance of being chosen for the American team. Foster is the New England champion in the half-mile and is recognized as one of the greatest middle distance runners in college circles.

With Coach Magee already chosen as one of the six assistant Olympic coaches, Bowdoin should be well represented at the big games in July.

My dear Mr. Eliot:

By formal vote of the Faculty of Bowdoin College I am asked to convey to you the very warm regards of the members of the Faculty and all good wishes on your ninetieth birthday. Here at Bowdoin your name has long been held in high regard. Your picture hangs in our college office, the only picture of a person not immediately connected with Bowdoin that has that distinction. Throughout the long administration of our late President William DeWitt Hyde we heard much of your policies and felt your influence. We desire you to know in what honor you are held, and that as teachers and students we appreciate what you have done for American education.

Faithfully yours,

Faithfully yours, KENNETH C. M. SILLS, President.

Schedules and Freshman Coache Discussed — Fenc. Awarded Fencing Letters

At a meeting of the Athletic Council held last Saturday afternoon it was voted to award letters in fencing to Davis '24, Clough '25, and Perkins '25. The track and baseball budgets were discussed in detail, and plans were made for erecting bleachers during the baseball season, and additional bleachers during the baseball season, and additional bleachers during the football season. It was voted not to sanction the changing of the Tufts game to Portland next fall. The question of a coach for freshman football next fall was discussed in detail. for a total of 94 linches.

Easily the feature of the meet was the 880 yard run, an event which brought forth howls of encouragement from the supporters of both teams. Fanning '26 nosed out Ham '27 in as exciting a race as is seldom seen. At the start, Ham, who less than a half-hour before had won the mile run, had the pole. Fanning '26 took the lead, with Robinson '26 second, Ham third, Genthner '26 fourth, Whittier '27 fifth, and Rosen '27 sixth. On the second lap, Whittier and Rosen who were running side by side passed Genthner. On the third time around, Ham passed On the third time around, Ham passed Robinson and took second position. Whittier advanced to fourth. Whit-

On the fifth lap Ham started out in earnest to take the lead from Fanning. The last two laps were almost a sprint, with Fanning always a few feet in the lead. At the tape Ham made one desperate attempt to win, but his effort in the mile run had tired him and his fresher opponent took first place by a small margin. The thrilling finish brought every spectator to his feet.

In the 440 yard run the Freshmen failed to place a single man. The race was won by Tarbell '26, with Spinney '26 and Claff '26 in second and third places respectively. Wood '27 gave Claff a hard race for third position. At the start Wood had the pole, with Tarbell in second position. Connor '27 took first place when the gun was fired, with Tarbell second, Spinney third, Claff fourth, and Wood fifth. On the second lap Connor dropped to fifth place. The men ran in the same order to the finish. On the last time around Wood made Claff fight his hardest to win third place.

Connor '27 took first place in the forty yard dash. Spinney '26 and Claff '26 took second and third respectively. Claff was hard pressed by Ham '27.

Vol. LIII.

With the present issue, Volume LIII of the Orient passes into history. We have no desire to turn our final contribution to this column into a vaulttribution to this column into a vaulting "Moritari Salutamus," an inane review—of matters of which our readers must already have heard more than enough, nor a bit of maudlin sentiment to tell to our portion of the world how infinitely displeased we are at coming to our last opportunity to sway the public mind by our effusions. There is little doubt in the minds of any of us that the Orient will go on. any of us that the Orient will go on through the next and many more volthrough the next and many more vol-umes, surviving changes in personnel and continuing to represent the life of Bowdoin not only as a bearer of tidings of joy and wee but as the spokes-man of those spirits in the College who have ideas which they wish to disseminate. It has been the good fortune of the Orient, during the past year, to bear an active part in a good many discussions of subjects ranging from the comparative spirituel ability of two burly gentlemen whose busiso it is to instruct youths in the in-cacies of football, to the precise tif of such a work of art as would suitable for the further decoration our fair campus. The Orient has enjoyed these controversies immense-ly and it hopes that its enjoyment has not been entirely unshared by its enjoyed these controversies immensely and it hopes that its enjoyment has not been entirely unshared by its readers.

No person who has followed the story of the college during the last months can deny with any real basis in fact the contention that there is a spirit of progress manifesting itself in the undergraduate life. The men in college are in the throes of a Bowdoin reformation which may mean much or little, but which assuredly exists. Notwoorthy steps have already been taken toward the amelioration of interfraternity conditions, toward the raising of scholastic and akhletts standards, toward the happy solution of our numerous problems by the application of intelligent methods. It is unnecessary to reiterate at this time the principles which have guided the student reform movements of late, nor is it, necessary to repeat the story of the reforms which have actually been accomplished. What we want to get at is the fact that the college is really progressing and that the men in college seem to be proud of that progress. True, there has been little enough sympathy shown for some of the less popular movements, despite the fact that the college is really progressing and that the men in college seem to be proud of that progress. True, there has been little enough sympathy shown for some of the less popular movements, despite the fact that the college is really progressing and that the men in college seem to be proud of that progress. True, there has been little enough sympathy shown for some of the less popular movements, despite the fact that the college is really progressing and that the minds of Bowdoin are set upon more solid ideals, however shakily those ideals may seem to be followed at the present. We look upon the past with satisfaction, as upon a period of productive turmoil. We look upon the future with optimism, as upon a period of productive turmoil. We look upon the future with optimism, as upon a period in which the turmoil may possibly become less the dominant note, and the productivity the more doin has much to attain, much that is within its grasp if only it will make the little effort of closing its fingers upon it. This, we have no doubt, Bow-doin will do, but it had better do it soon than late. And with that, adieu.

Editor, the Orient:

I have had a lot of enjoyment reading the Orient this year. The large number of contributions indicates that the fellows in college and the Alumni are taking very active parts in regard to all the college activities.

I have thought recently that some sort of a memorial seat could be placed at the end of the concrete walk from Hubbard Hall. This would be about half way between the Art Building and Appleton Hall. This seat could be of granite and in an appropriate shape, either round or four cornered. If four cornered, the seats could be concave. The granite seat would act as a base for a flag staff and could have bronze designs or letters as desired. The present flag staff on Memorial Hall could be used to fly the college flag on gala days, and the proposed staff for the National colors. As I see it, this sort of a memorial would appeal directly to the patriotism of all who would see it and in this way would be a fitting memorial for the Bowdoin Men who served in the World War. The matter of the design could be settled by the present committee.

This may not appeal to any memitance.

This may not appeal to any members of either the college or Alumni, but I feel that it is at least a suggestion. If I recall, there was an appeal for suggestions published in the Orient this winter.

Communication

Editor, the Orient:

This afternoon I had the undiluted pleasure of watching the new almamater, Trinity, proceed to a comfortable victory over University College and thereby won the Rugby football championship among the Oxford colleges. This evening the "rugger super" was held with due ceremony in the Trinity hall. I believe many Americans would discover unexpected movelty and relish in contemplating for the first time the Englishman at play.

Toasts exchanged everywhere about the dining hall, commons (bread) and banans skins flying with unremitting regularity, done here and there vaguely dignified, and a din of voices that many askins flying with unremitting regularity, done here and there vaguely dignified, and a din of voices that means are toasted, the tables are cleared away, and the rest of the evening is devoted to a furious gents-only dance. An orchestra renders the back porch plaint, and the Barney Google melody of delicious memory, not to mention Hortense and Eliza Jane, over and over again. Not the least feature of the dance is provided by our Trinity faculty—three of them work nobly tonight. Our reverend chaplain forgets it is Ash Wadnesday remainded.

significant occasion that I shall have the good fortune to attend during my stay at Oxford. Most of the great figures of today in England who have been at Oxford were among the speakers. The names of Mr. Asquith, the Manquess Curzon, the Earl of Birkenhead, and the Archbishop of Canterbury, will probably be the most readily respected.

I found my seat between the pro-provost of Queen's and an aristocratic looking M.A. from Magdalen of some fifteen years' standing. The pro-provost quite justly deplored the atrocious standards of our American state universities and of our high schools,—but I spare you a detailed account of our feelings in these matters.

After the lengthy meal, the king was toasted, and with the toast to the University began the series of seventeen speeches. The meeting (of over 500 men) seemed to me much like a glorified Commencement dinner, except that its date was February 29. Sir John Simon only intensified that impression when he lavished praise and affection upon Oxford with the utmost grandiloquence imaginable. His toast to the University was responded to by Lord Curzon, who holds the honorary position of Chancellor of Oxford.

At this point I might add that Lord Birkenhead holds the honorary office

At this point I might add that Lord Birkenhead holds the honorary office of High Steward of the University,—and according to the ancient statute, receives a yearly salary of five pounds. The actual head of the University is the Vice-Chancellor, listed in the books after the Chancellor and the High Steward. All through the evening the majority of quips were directed at Lord Birkenhead, with not a few allusions to him as F. E. Smith in undergraduate days.

ning the majority of quips were unrected at Lord Birkenhead, with not a few allusions to him as F. E. Smith in undergraduate days.

Lord Curzon offered the most polished, facile, and precise speech of the evening. Only the Earn of Birkenhead rivalled him in wit. Lord Curzon seems the perfect example of a shrewd, sharp politician possessed of a most winning suavity. Let me give the following excerpts from his remarks, which went to make up the best speech of the evening.

"If I may whisper a word in the ears of the Right Reverend Prelate who sits on my right, I would sooner be Chancellor of Oxford University than I would be Archbishop of York. I might even extend the compliment to his Grace of Canterbury, and, if I may throw a bouquet in the direction of Mr. Asquith, I would sooner be Chancellor of this University than I would be an ex-Prime Minister of England whose chances of returning to that exalted office are alleged to be of a very speculative character.

"This society has no official existence in the University itself and is not even mentioned in that monument of literary style, the Oxford Calendar. Its president is not prayed for on Sundays, much as, I am sure, he stands in need of that arbitrary assistance to continued existence. We could dispense with the professors, or, at any rate, with some of them; we could get on very well without the proctors; it would not be a difficult thing to disestablish the Chancellor, but the Union,—no.

"I sometimes used to think that it (the Union) resembled the House of

So much' for Lord Curzon. The Archbishop of York answered Lord Cecil's toast to the church and among other things told how at Oxford, "I nad dreamed of some day becoming prime minister of England,—and in my more chastened moments I had thought of being Lord Chancellor,—but I confess I never dreamed of becoming Archbishop of York. I wonder if F. E. Smith ever entertained visions of becoming Archbishop of Canterbury." After the more serious part of his speech, the archbishop said, "I want now to strike a deeper note, but I promise Lord Birkenhead it will not be a discourse on idealism in public affairs."

I shall allude to only two more

I shall allude to only two more speakers, passing over even Hilaire Belloc and the Earl of Midleton, who gave the assemblage ample opportunity to display the unrestrained restlessness of which an English audience is capable.

Sophomore-Freshman Meet

Mr. Asquith responded for the House of Commons. Incidentally, it is just fifty years since he served as president of the Union, and yet Lord Curzon, who succeeded him but six years later, looks thirty years his junior. The leader of the weakening Liberal party seems quite too feeble for continuing much longer in active political life, let alone bearing the responsibility of the prime ministry again. His delivery seemed almost halting at times. To me he had the most attractive and pleasing personality of all the speakers.

After receiving a marvellous ova-

the speakers.

After receiving a marvellous ovation from the gathering, Mr. Asquith reminisced concerning the jubilee banquet of the Union fifty years ago, spoke of the many distinguished people there,—"they had all been presidents of the Union, and it might not have escaped the notice of those among them who were, as I am, an academic antiquary, that a substantial majority of them had emerged from the walls of Balliol."

Mr. Asquith went on to say that majority of them had emerged from the walls of Balliol."

Mr. Asquith went on to say that "there is nothing arrogant or exclusive about Balliol"; he was puzzled about certain "spasmodic recrudescences of Wadham, disorderly phenomena which baffle the calculations of the most expert seismologists—perhaps My Lord Birkenhead may give us some light on this academic problem of long standing."

Alluding to the House of Lords, Mr. Asquith was "inclined to think that many of its members wished at times that they were back in the bourgeois House of Commons. My learned friend, Lord Birkenhead, must have moments when he aspires to be once again where he has been so redoubtable, and I am not at all sure, if such a thought is not a disrespectful hypothesis, that a similar yearning does not from time to time visit the august solemnity of our Chancellor."

When the toastmaster bellowed out in a vast and far-reaching voice. "Mr. President, Your Grace, My Lords, and Gentlemen—pray silence—for the Right Honourable the Earl of Birkenhead," an ovation followed which equalled the one for Mr. Asquith. His speech was the most scintillating of the evening. No other was so entirely extemporaneous—Birkenhead selected all the main witticisms of the nine orators before him and handed back fitting rejoinders. In manner he was a fair opposite to Curzon's "classical grace," but is intellect appeared quicker, more alert, and more agile than that of any of the others.

(Ruskin once moved the resolution, That in the opinion of this House intellectual education as distinct from moral discipline is detrimental to the interests of the lower orders. A motion in my time, That this House desires to be cremated, was carried by a majority of three. But I am sorry this House life is not worth living, was, for reasons which I am quite unable to fathom, ruled out of order. "I recall—as of interest to Mr. Asa, quith—that about the time I was at Oxford, a resolution was moved and carried with immense enthusiasm at the Union, That Liberalism is in Theory a pestilential heresy, and in practice a typical flusion." That the advent of a dictator would be a blessing to the French people, Why contine beatitude to the French, Why ontaine beatitude to the French, Why contine beatitude to the French, Why contine beatitude to the French who come here, and with the slightest of the commission is problem and learned lord were to one here, and with the slightest specend of the course of his demonstration he indicated that in the High Steward of this University, in an ex-President of the Course of his Genomal training style, and that in the course of his demonstration he indicated that in the High Steward of this University, and in an ex-President of the Course of his demonstration he indicated that in the High Steward of this University, in an ex-President of the Course of his demonstration he indicated that in the High Steward of this University, and in an ex-President of the Course of his demonstration he indicated that in the High Steward of this University, and in an ex-President of the Cunion Society, and in an ex-President of the Cunion Socie

In closing, I mention the Centenary debate of the preceding evening only to say that the motion was That civilization has advanced since this society first met,' that Professor Gilbert Murray opened the debate in light entertaining style, and that easily the brightest speech of the evening was given by Father Ronald Knox, a priest of brilliant reputation who served some years ago as president of the Union. Two other speakers of note were Philip Guedalla, the keen and dazzling Jewish historian, and John Buchan, the novelist.

To expatiate further on the merits of the centenary celebration or on the influence of the Union in the public life of Great Britain would be, on my part, merely platitudinous. That you may fully appreciate the significance of the occasion, let me call to mind once again the galaxy of famous men who were its brilliance,—need I say more?

The way to get the finest shave

The Hinge-Cap is a sure way of identifying Williams Shaving Cream. And Williams, besides giving you the convenient Hinge-Cap, will improve your shave in three ways:

First, the lather is heavier and holds the moisture in against the beard. Quicker and more thorough softening of the beard results. Second, the razor glides more easily through the Williams-softened beard because Williams lather lubricates the skin. Lastly, an ingredient in Williams keeps the skin in good condition no matter how heavy your beard nor how frequently you shave. In addition, you'll enjoy because it is a pure, natural white cream without coloring matter of any kind.

Alumni Notes

Dr. George F. Libby, of Denver, a graduate of the Medical school in the class of 1891, and president of the Western Alumin Association, has had placed in the University Club of Denver a Bowdoin shield. This shield occupies the most striking position of all the college shields used in the windows of the building. Dr. Libby was the first man to present a shield of his college, and in consequence the Bowdoin shield occupies a position of honor. Dr. Libby designed the shield, which is an elaboration of the college seal done in black, white, and gold glass.

Bowdoin Club of Portland Holds Annual Meeting

A meeting of the Bowdoin Club of Portland was held last Thursday evening at the Congress Square Hotel. Over 50 members attended. The meeting was presided over by John F. Dana, president of the club. President Sills was the principal speaker of the evening. In his address he told the members of the club of the needs and conditions of the college at present. An interchange of telegrams was made with the Harvard Club of Maine, which was meeting at the same time at the Falmouth hotel. President Sills also payed a fine tribute to President Emeritus Charles W. Eliot, stressing the background of New England tradition which had helped to create his greatness. The oldest alumnus present was Cyrus B. Varney '63.

President Sills Blames Lack of Will for Nine-Tenths of Failures in College

Nine-tenths of the failures, sch Nine-tenths of the failures, scholastic and otherwise, at Bowdoin College are caused, not by lack of mental ability or previous training, but by weakness of will, said President Sills at the Chapel service last Sunday.

Ninety-nine per cent of the men at Bowdoin have excellent intentions. They don't want to hurt those who are

Ninety-nine per cent of the men at Bowdoin have excellent intentions. They don't want to hurt those who are sending them here, they don't want their college life to amount to naught, yet their good intentions are frustrated by weakness of will.

We know that there is a task which has to be done tonight in preparation for tomorrow. A group of fellows will congregate in some room, the time slips by unnoticed. The result is that nothing is done that should be done. The next morning we are not ready for the test which comes. It is easy to cheat. We do. That is the beginning of a serious habit.

Those in charge of the administration of the College feel that a great evil with which they have to contend is the increasing number of men who come to college with undisciplined minds. Excellent advice to younger fellows who are planning on coming to college is to train their wills to stick to a task until it is done.

The application of this lesson to the moral field is obvious. We forget our religious duties. Most of us come from Christian homes, most of us have been brought up in a Christian atmosphere. On our first Sunday mornings here, we are too tired to go to church. Then we are told that it isn't the thing to do, that the college doesn't stand for religion.

The kind of person we are in college is the kind of person we are in after life. Many a fellow who can never say "No" has wrecked his life as a result. Many a fellow who follows the path of least resistance makes a mess of his life before middleage. It is a weak subterfuge to believe that we are the objects of our environment, of birth, and of circumstance.

Failures are caused in nearly all cases by weakness of wilt; and nine-tenths of the things done right are so done because of strength of will. The real way out is by the paths of religion. Most of us have religion whether we show it or not.

Faculty Notes

Dean Nixon is contributing a volume to that notable series, "Our Debt to Greece and Rome," published by Marshall, Jones & Co., of Boston. The title of the book is "Martial." Just half a hundred books are planned for, authoritative but non-technical, written for the general reader of cultivated tastes. About a dozen of these volumes have already appeared.

Alumni Secretary Austin H. Mac-Cormick will be the principal speaker at the annual dinner of the Ad Club of Springfield, Mass., April 16. During the last year he has spoken at similar dinners in Lowell, Hartford and Providence.

The paper read by Professor Davis at the annual convention of the National Association of Teachers of Speech at Cincinnati last December is published as the leading article in the Quarterly Journal for Speech Education for February, 1924. The paper presents methods employed in English 6.

During the last week Alumni Secretary Austin H. MacCormick spoke at Church Men's Clubs in Augusta, Rockland and Portland.
