BOWDOIN

ALUMNUS NOVEMBER

A Midwest Admissions Conference

ON WEDNESDAY AND THURSDAY, October 30 and 31, the Bowdoin Admissions Staff conducted a Conference on Admissions for a group of alumni in Chicago, Illinois. This meeting was similar to the conference held at the College in June of 1962. It was especially planned for Midwestern alumni who were unable to attend the earlier conference in Brunswick.

The Chicago area was represented by Albert Clarke '40, Dr. Daniel Callahan '41, James Dolan '43, Joseph Woods '47, Robert McAvoy '50, Peter DeTroy '51, Donald Buckingham '53, and Geoffrey Houghton '53.

Those attending from other areas were Harvey Stephens '55 (Springfield, Illinois), Stephen Rule '58 (St. Louis, Missouri), Donald Weston '57 (Cincinnati, Ohio), Richard Van Orden '51 (Grand Rapids, Michigan), John Charlton '44 (Minneapolis, Minnesota), and Peter Relic '58 (Cleveland, Ohio). Alumni representatives had also been invited from Denver, Detroit, Milwaukee, and Columbus but were unable to attend.

The first session was held jointly with the Bowdoin Club of Chicago at the Chicago Yacht Club, where twenty-four alumni, including the out-of-town guests, met for dinner and were addressed by Hubert S. Shaw '36, Director of Admissions, and Philip S. Wilder '23, Director of Student Aid and Assistant to the President. Mr. Shaw gave a general review of the Bowdoin admissions policy, and Mr. Wilder spoke about Bowdoin's program of financial aid, as well as the Bowdoin Plan for foreign students.

The following day the Conference group met at the Lake Shore Club. The opening session included a detailed discussion of financial aid by Walter H. Moulton '58, Assistant Director of Admissions. He outlined the method of computing a student's need, the method of review for renewing awards annually, and the exchange of financial aid information with institutions which have candidates in common with Bowdoin. Robert C. Mellow, Associate Director of Admissions, spoke about school-college relations and particularly emphasized the role that an alumnus may play.

Following lunch the Conference participants studied sixteen case histories of actual 1962 admissions candidates. They then made "decisions" as to whether to admit or refuse each of these sixteen candidates. Mr. Shaw summarized the decisions actually rendered, highlighting such special items as early decisions and the Bowdoin application form. He also answered questions raised by the alumni participants.

The success of the Conference and the enthusiasm with which it was received are gratifying. The Admissions Staff will continue to meet alumni in similar conferences to acquaint them with the work of the Admissions Office and to tell them how they may assist young men in becoming interested in attending Bowdoin.

In his Thanksgiving Day proclamation this fall, John F. Kennedy wrote, “. . . we must never forget that the highest appreciation is not to utter words but to live by them.”

Within the brief space of five days during November there died three people whose lives and actions rather than their words spoke for them. They were President Kennedy, Professor Frederic Tillotson, and my grandmother, Mrs. Harriet M. Cross of Augusta.

President Kennedy's name and memory will live on at Bowdoin as long as the College itself exists, through the President John F. Kennedy Book Fund, established the day after his death by an anonymous alumnus with an initial gift of $1,000. Income from the Fund, which is open to gifts from other people, will be used to purchase books for the Library.

Fred Tillotson's name and memory will also live on at Bowdoin. None of the thousands of alumni who in any way experienced his enthusiastic love of music, of people, and of Bowdoin can ever forget his warmth of personality, his gift for friendship, his effervescent spirit, his infectious Bravo! (The January ALUMNUS will carry an account of Tilly's life and a tribute to him.)

Grandmother Cross will be remembered by only a few Bowdoin men, but they will include all alumni who knew her during her 96 years of life, a life full of cheerfulness and optimism and doing for others, despite the loss of her husband when their four children were still young and despite many other hardships and tragedies in the Cross homestead on Riverside Drive outside of Augusta. Her children, her twelve grandchildren, and her twenty-nine great-grandchildren were all so precious in her mind and sight that she never once had occasion to forgive any of them for their sins because she never felt they had committed any.

President Calvin H. Plimpton of Amherst College, at the time of the death of Robert Frost H'26, quoted the lines of the Alexandrian poet Callimachus on hearing of the death of Heraclitus, his old Carian friend. These lines, taken from the current edition of the Oxford Book of Greek Verse, seem equally appropriate here:

They told me, Heraclitus, they told me you were dead;

They brought me bitter news to hear and bitter tears to shed.

I wept when I remembered how often you and I Had tired the sun with talking and sent him down the sky.

And now that thou art lying, my dear old Carian guest,

A handful of grey ashes long, long ago at rest, Still are they pleasant voices, thy nightingales awake, For death, he taketh all away, but them he cannot take.

— Callimachus R.M.C.

Some Good Sacred Memory — by John J. Pullen H '58

MAINE'S FAMOUS HUMORIST, Artemus Ward, once said of Jefferson Davis, "It would have been ten dollars in his pocket if he'd never been born." And yet at least one pleasant thing did happen to Jefferson Davis, as it did to me. Davis once received an honorary degree from Bowdoin College. This, of course, happened before the war, but even after the rebellion, when there was great pressure on Bowdoin to revoke the degree, the College refused to do so.

Since there is just a slight parallel between Jefferson Davis and me, particularly at this time of year when the football rivalry is on — I being a Colby graduate originally — I am greatly comforted and reassured to know that Bowdoin will stand behind its degrees no matter what or, I suppose, almost no matter what.

For some reason, the Civil War always seems very close to the people of Maine. I recall that I once wrote to a family up here asking for any available information about a member of that family who had served in the 20th Maine. I received a reply something to this effect: "Well, yes, he went away to war all right, but we can't tell you much about him. He wrote home once for money, and we haven't heard from him since." Just as though they are still expecting to hear from him again some day — when he runs out of money.

Yet this view of time past is not so odd after all. Time is a subject which has managed to elude our best thinkers. We can start with a primary symbol of time — the watch. Upon close examination we find that it is nothing more than a mechanism which changes its face at a uniform rate. And there is no reason to believe that what the watch might be thought of as measuring — a separate and continuously flowing entity we would call time — is there at all. Modern jet airline travel gives us additional reason for doubt. You can leave New York on a jet airliner at 7 p.m. and be in San Francisco at 9:40, Pacific Coast time. The mind is fooled but the body is not, for you find yourself waking up long before daylight and being hungry at the wrong times of day. As jet speeds increase, it is possible that we'll be leaving New York at 7 o'clock and arriving in San Francisco at 6 o'clock, an hour before we started. If, later on, we fly to Venus, we'll find that an average earthly lifetime there would be more than 100 years as measured in circuits around the sun. And a month on Jupiter will depend on which moon you choose.

As we find the familiar concepts of time falling away from us, we are even tempted to wonder if the measure of time we apply to the past — such and such happening so many years ago — is actually meaningful.

Yet, for want of a better word, "time" is a word we must use, and anyone who has engaged in historical research gets from it a new sense of what might be called the perspective of time past. I am sure that many of you, while poring through old letters written by people long ago, have suddenly felt that you have come very close to these people, or they to you. You have experienced a "right-here-now-ish" sensation that is perhaps more revealing in an intuitive sense than the most careful reasoning that scientists and philosophers have applied to this subject of time.

This is one of the most interesting aspects of the study of history, and this is undoubtedly one of the chief fascinations of the Civil War. It provides a vivid check point, for most of us, in our view of time past. We are made to feel that a hundred years is a much shorter time than we ordinarily think it is.

BUT WHY IS IT that the Civil War seems so vivid? For one thing, it was a very large war. More Americans lost their lives in the Civil War than died in World War II — and almost as many as died in the two World Wars combined.

Then, too, the Civil War was fought right here in this country, and we have many battlefields that still show its scars. I dare say that to those of you who went overseas in World War I or World War II, the memories of those days are dim and remote. Our overseas wars somehow have the qualities of dreams. But if you go to Gettysburg, the Civil War seems very real, although in my opinion it would seem far more real without the hundreds of stone markers and monuments that make it seem like a vast cemetery and thus deliberately consigned to the past. Much more impressive, to my mind, are some of the little, half-forgotten battlefields like Five Forks, Virginia, where the 20th Maine had its last big fight. Here the fields and forests are much as the soldiers left them, with the remains of a few old earthworks still visible but no marble or granite monuments to break the spell. No trampling tourists, throwing their orange-peels; they simply don't know the battlefield is there. Where the five little roads come together to make the Five Forks, stop signs have been put up to prevent collisions, but these are about the only markers to be seen, and somehow the Civil War seems closer as a result.

Besides these physical reminders, another reason why the Civil War seems so close is that most of us had a grandfather or grand-uncle or some other grand-relative in it. This brings about a feeling toward the war that many Americans, in both the North and the South, share.

Shortly after The Twentieth Maine was published, I received a letter that gave me a real start. On the envelope there was a picture of our friend Jefferson Davis. Underneath was a legend "Confederate States of America." And beneath that was a stanza which read,

"Stand firmly by your cannon
Let ball and grapeshot fly
And trust in God and Davis
But keep your powder dry."

The return address on the envelope was in Virginia and was that of a Southern colonel. The whole thing gave me an eerie sensation, and for a moment I feared that I was about to be challenged to a duel. But the letter inside was a pleasant one from a genial gentleman down south who said that he had liked the book but I would have to recognize that it had passed an acid test, because he was a member of the Sons of the Confederate Veterans (which explains the picture of Jeff Davis on the envelope), and he also wanted to inform me that on the afternoon of July 2nd, at Gettysburg, someone in the 20th Maine had shot a hole in his beloved grandfather, and he could remember seeing the scar. I replied that my grandfather, in turn, had suffered an injury at the hands of the Confederates. They had struck him on the head with a sharp object of some kind at Appomattox, thereby getting in the last lick, and so perhaps the two of us were even.

The Southern colonel agreed, and we continued a friendly correspondence for some time. I am sure that seeing our grandfathers' scars had made the Civil War seem very close to both of us.

The 50th anniversary of the battle of Gettysburg was in 1913, before I was born. But I recall hearing a radio broadcast of the 75th reunion of the Blue and the Gray at Gettysburg in 1938. Many of the veterans were still able to be present, and some of them were still full of ginger. I remember an unfortunate situation that a smoothly professional NBC announcer got into while interviewing an old Union veteran at the point where Pickett's Charge finally broke. The old fellow was saying in a quavery voice, "And when they got right up to here, they turned." The NBC announcer, foolishly seeking an elaboration, asked, "Now, what do you mean, they turned?" And the old fellow yelled, "Why, they run like hell!" This flustered the announcer and he tried to interrupt or cut off the old fellow, but he continued, "And anybody who says they didn't is a goddam liar!", going on to treat the network audience to some of the choicest profanity that had been delivered probably since Pickett's Charge itself.

So there were Civil War veterans still around and full of fire for a good many years during our lifetimes. The last veteran died only within the past year. He was, as might have been supposed he would be, a Texan, and the South, after all, had the last man left on the field. Within the past five years, I know, a widow of one of the 20th Maine soldiers was still alive in Maine, and perhaps she still is. But the Maine veterans themselves are gone, and I have always regretted that I had no real interest in the Civil War while they were still with us.

Even as late as 1935 one of the chief characters in The Twentieth Maine was still alive and in Pittsfield while I was attending Colby nearby. I could have talked with him personally. This was Colonel Walter G. Morrill, one of the three men who won the Congressional Medal of Honor while serving with the 20th Maine. He was over 90 in 1935, of course, but still active and still brave. A neighbor told me that Colonel Morrill was putting on storm windows the fall before he died, and he had a helper working with him who was 73 years of age. And Colonel Morrill did all the climbing himself because, as he said, he didn't want "that boy" up on the ladder where he might fall and hurt himself.

Because of memories and associations such as these, the Civil War should seem particularly close to the State of Maine and to Bowdoin. From a population of only around 600,000 men, women, and children, Maine sent 73,000 men to the Civil War.

BOWDOIN, with an enrollment of 144 in 1861, had 290 men in the Union service during the Civil War, these coming from classes all the way on from the Class of 1823. According to Hatch's History of Bowdoin College, this was more in proportion to the number of graduates and undergraduates than from any other college in the country.

But I must remind you that 14 Bowdoin men served in the Confederate Army. However, even at this late date I can testify that there are still Copperheads in Maine. At the time when The Twentieth Maine was published, a little nephew of mine was a devoted follower of a television serial known as "The Gray Ghost," in which the Confederates are portrayed as the "goodies," and he was not only thunderstruck but grief-stricken to learn that his own uncle had written a book about the "baddies." Somehow, on the field of song and story, the Confederates managed to win the Civil War after all. There are no "baddies" any more; the Blue and the Gray are all "goodies," so we need not reproach the memory of the 14 Bowdoin men who supported the Stars and Bars.

The State of Maine and Bowdoin entered the war with great spirit. We may wonder today what got them so excited and why they went off to fight their fellow Americans with such passion and dedication. It has seemed to me that their central thought was this: that if the South won, there would be no reason to expect a continuance of the United States of America. And they might soon have no country at all.

Simple as it sounds, that apparently was an intolerable thought. Just how intolerable it was, we probably can never fully understand unless, unhappily, we some day find ourselves in the same position. But judging by the efforts that Bowdoin men put forth and some of the thoughts they left behind, they were very much in earnest in their desire to save the Union.

This is borne out by the experience and recorded feelings of a man who must have been the oldest Bowdoin alumnus to enter the war, Luther Bell. Luther Bell was a contemporary of Longfellow and Hawthorne; in fact, he was two years ahead of them, graduating in the Class of 1823. At the age of 55 he was on active duty at the first battle of Bull Run as the surgeon of the 11th Massachusetts. After that battle he wrote to a friend, "The whole volume of military surgery was opened before me on Sunday afternoon with horrid illustrations. Sudley Church with its hundred wounded victims will form a picture in my sick dreams so long as I live. I have never spent one night out of camp since I came into it, and a bed and myself have been strangers, practically, for months. Yet I have never had one beginning of a regret at my decision to devote what may be left of my life and ability to the great cause. I have, as you know, four young motherless children. Painful as it is, to leave such a charge, I have forced myself into reconciliation by the reflection that the great issue under the stern arbitrament of arms is whether or not our children are to have a country."

Luther Bell died the next year while on duty with General Hooker's division. You can understand from what he wrote that he felt he was engaged in a cause of almost superhuman importance.

In the years immediately preceding the war, the tides of national emotion were running deep in Brunswick. It was from his memories of a Brunswick shipyard, so the story goes, that Longfellow got the inspiration for a poem, which expressed some of the feelings of the time, "The Building of the Ship," including the famous lines:

"Thou, too, sail on, O Ship of State
Sail on, O Union strong and great!
Humanity with all its fears,
With all its hopes of future years,
Is hanging breathless on thy fate."

There was concern about the Union and about slavery. A Bowdoin professor, William Smyth, made his home the headquarters of anti-slavery lectures, and the Smyth house was also the Brunswick station of the underground railway.

And at about that time Harriet Beecher Stowe was writing in Brunswick, living there as the wife of a Bowdoin professor. A Brunswick man, then a youngster, remembered in later years that she was a terrible cook; her pies and cakes were almost indigestible.

But the story she wrote in Brunswick was even more indigestible to the conscience of the nation. It was originally prepared for an anti-slavery paper under the title of "Uncle Tom's Cabin; or Life Among the Lowly." Its publication in book form in 1852 was, beyond a doubt, one of the factors that contributed to the emotional causes of the Civil War.

We may wonder whether or not some of Mrs. Stowe's anti-slavery fervor had its influence on the College at that time. Undoubtedly it did. And yet a vital concern for the union of the states seems to have been much more basic to the motivation of Bowdoin men — a feeling such as that expressed by Surgeon Luther Bell, entering the war at age 55 and leaving his motherless children behind.

A GREAT MANY BOWDOIN MEN served in the army as surgeons, which was to be expected because Bowdoin was then the seat of the Medical School of Maine, an institution justly famous in its time. Surgery and medicine were extremely important in the Civil War, since disease killed twice as many men as bullets.

And many Bowdoin men went as chaplains, which was also natural, for one of the chief aims of a college education at that time was to prepare men for the ministry. However, at least one Bowdoin-trained chaplain, George W. Bartlett, at times picked up a musket and joined in the strife, eventually perishing by the sword, or more specifically by a solid shot. Several other chaplains were wounded or killed. And many chaplains from Bowdoin performed an important service in caring for the wounded, including Joshua Chamberlain's brother, John Chamberlain, who was present with Joshua and still another brother, Tom Chamberlain, at the battle of Little Round Top. At one point the three brothers were riding abreast just before the battle when a bullet or shell fragment whizzed past their three faces. Joshua said they'd better separate or another such shot might make it hard for mother. It was a war in which chaplains were not as safe as they can be today.

Bowdoin got into the war early, and even the students who did not go off to war at once assumed a warlike attitude. At the outbreak of hostilities, according to Hatch's History, several seniors enlisted, and the Class of '61 Orator, George B. Kenniston, was wounded and captured at Bull Run and spent Commencement Day in a rebel prison. We can add to that the fact that he spent 13 months in prison but finally rejoined his regiment.

A month after the war started, the students of Bowdoin organized a company for practice in drill, known as the Bowdoin Guard. And a month later a second company, the Bowdoin Zouaves, was organized. The Zouave uniform was one that was extremely popular at the outbreak of the war. The original Zouaves were part of the French army, recruited in Algeria, and when on the march in full regalia they looked something like a parade of Shriners. The uniform was Oriental in style, brightly colored, with a broad sash at the waist, white leggings, baggy pants, a short jacket, and a tasseled cap. It later proved to be somewhat too conspicuous for comfort on the battlefield, and its popularity in 1861 indicates how unrealistically and romantically men were thinking about war. This Zouave company at Bowdoin was drilled by Thomas W. Hyde of the Class of 1861, who went on to become a Brigadier General in the war and to have the present Athletic Building named after him.

I am reasonably sure that Bowdoin men never actually went to war in Zouave uniforms. Otherwise, the casualty list would have been much longer than it was. The Zouave uniform is still popular among fancy drill teams; I remember seeing a drill team, so attired, on the Ed Sullivan Show a few years ago. As an observance of the Civil War Centennial, it's an idea for the present undergraduates of Bowdoin.

I have mentioned that there were many surgeons and chaplains from Bowdoin; yet most of the Bowdoin men entered the war as line officers. There were fewer enlisted men among the graduates and undergraduates than there probably would be today, and there were reasons why this was so. When the war broke out, there was a nominal militia in Maine of about 60,000 men, but it developed that they were in existence on paper only, and even the paper wasn't much good.

The militia system, which was a sort of continuation of the old minute man idea of military service, had fallen into disuse if not disrepute. A Bowdoin custom of many years' standing reflected this attitude. It seems that in 1836 there had been a law requiring all temporary residents — such as college students — to turn out for a general muster in May so that their military availability could be determined. Bowdoin men, who disliked the law but who were too law-abiding to disobey, turned out for the muster clad in grotesque and fantastic costumes. The obnoxious law was repealed, but the custom was kept up by the students for many years, the last of these burlesque musters being held a few years before the Civil War.

The militia being in this state of decay, the government authorized another form of military organization, the volunteer regiment. In recruiting as well as in commanding these new troops there was a real need for leadership by educated men, and Bowdoin men responded.

In later years one Bowdoin alumnus, Ellis Spear, recalled some experiences he had while recruiting a company in Lincoln and Sagadahoc Counties. One woman, when he called to recruit her son, chased him off the premises with a pitchfork. He found he had to be a salesman and get a company together before he could even be an officer. When he thought about it afterwards, he was astounded at his own audacity, for, as he said, he was just as green as the men he was trying to enlist, and he hardly knew a line of battle from a rail fence.

Also some of the men, even when sworn into service, were mighty independent. One of my favorites is the fellow in the 20th Maine who was reprimanded by his company commander for a lack of personal cleanliness while standing in inspection. And the fellow spoke right up and said that it was "cussed mean business to go around peekin' in other folks' ears."

But they were good Maine men, and Ellis Spear, thanks in large part to his Bowdoin training, went on to become a fine officer. I could go on at great length about another Bowdoin man, Joshua Chamberlain, one of the most remarkable figures of the Civil War. Chamberlain was a professor at Bowdoin when the war broke out. He had formerly been a divinity student, but this didn't seem to suit him exactly; or at least he had a great deal of warlike ability mixed in with his theological bent — like the Joshua who "fit the battle of Jericho."

His somewhat un-Christian desire to get into a good fight was illustrated when his regiment was kept out of the battle of Chancellorsville because the men had the smallpox. In indignant protest, Joshua Chamberlain went to the army chief of staff and urged that the regiment be put in. "At least," he said, "we could give the enemy the smallpox."

The answer was a firm no, but later, at Gettysburg, Chamberlain gave the enemy something worse than that when he and the 20th Maine saved Little Round Top and the left of the Union line and possibly the Union itself with a desperate bayonet charge after the regiment had run out of ammunition. This made Chamberlain famous and influenced the entire course of his life.

CHAMBERLAIN WAS REMARKABLE IN MANY WAYS. His physical courage was phenomenal. Leading an attack at Petersburg in June of 1864, he was shot completely through the body, the bullet going in one hip and out the other, injuring the bladder on the way. According to the detailed medical records, it was a frightful wound and one that caused him pain and embarrassment all the rest of his life. The examining surgeon said he was as good as dead on that June evening; yet by November he was back in action, although hardly able to sit on a horse. In March he suffered another terrible injury, and yet two days later he arose from a pile of straw, where he was nursing his wounds, and led a sensationally successful counterattack when the Confederates threatened to overrun the Union position.

Chamberlain is said to have been the only person in the war who received a battlefield promotion to general. He received the Congressional Medal of Honor for his defense of Little Round Top.

He also did some writing about the war in later years, and much of it was very fine, excluding a few passages which now seem over-written but which were probably acceptable in the style of the day. In his book The Passing of the Armies, now very hard to find, he succeeded in capturing the mood and spirit of the last days of the war in a way that has never been equalled. His description of Lee's surrender, for example, is a classic. Chamberlain was given the honor of commanding the troops that received the surrender of Lee's infantry at Appomattox. When the battle-worn Confederates marched up, tired and worn and in rags, but still holding their heads proudly erect, Chamberlain ordered his men to present arms, and the Confederates, seeing this, came to the same position of the manual, the two armies honoring one another in a final salute. Chamberlain's description of that moment: "On our part, not a sound of trumpet more, nor roll of drum; not a cheer, nor word nor whisper of vain-glorious, nor motion of man standing again at the order, but an awed stillness rather, and breath-holding as if it were the passing of the dead."

In Chamberlain, Bowdoin had a man of perception and culture who not only participated importantly in the war but who was also able to write about it in the most eloquent and moving terms. In The Twentieth Maine, which was the story of a military organization, I could not give Chamberlain all the space he deserved or include much about his pre-war and post-war career. These hitherto neglected parts of the Chamberlain story have just recently been filled in by a book which came out this summer, Soul of the Lion, a biography by Dr. Willard M. Wallace. A book of this kind on Chamberlain has been needed for many years. It is a mystery to me why Chamberlain was for so long neglected.

Returning to the battle of Gettysburg, where Chamberlain won fame, we can cite the contribution to that victory of still another Bowdoin man, General Oliver Otis Howard. Howard graduated from Bowdoin in the Class of 1850 and from West Point in the Class of 1854. He was in the Civil War from the very outset, losing an arm at the battle of Seven Pines. On the first of July, 1863, the day before Chamberlain and his 20th Maine arrived at Gettysburg, Howard came on the field as commander of the Eleventh Corps, at a time when the Union troops were being attacked north and west of the town by an overwhelming Confederate force. For several hours Howard was the senior officer present and, therefore, the commander of all Union troops at Gettysburg. One thing he did was important to the outcome of the battle. Before committing the Eleventh Corps, he held out one division and posted it on Cemetery Hill, south of the village.

When the Union line gave way in late afternoon, the troops fell back to this prepared position, where they were able to stand off further attack. If this hill had been lost at that time, there would have been no battle of Gettysburg on the 2nd and 3rd of July. There might have been a battle, but it would not have been at Gettysburg. Instead, fighting would have been resumed at some point nearer Washington. For his conduct of the battle Howard received a letter from the President and the thanks of Congress.

So Bowdoin men can with some justification — at least enough to start an argument — say that Howard secured the right of the Union line and Chamberlain the left, and if Bowdoin hadn't been there, the rebels would have been over our goal line at Gettysburg.

It should be noted that Oliver Howard, like Joshua Chamberlain, combined Christian virtue with martial ardor, with even greater weight on the Christian virtue. He was famous throughout the army for the strength of his religious beliefs and the kindness and charity of his actions when not actually engaged in smiting the foe. He served in important commands all through the war and became deeply interested in the welfare of the Negroes. The establishment by the United States government of Howard University at Washington especially for the education of Negroes came largely from General Howard's efforts, and the university was named in his honor. In 1895 he founded Lincoln Memorial University at Cumberland Gap, Tennessee, for the education of mountain people.

AT THE END OF THE WAR Bowdoin could count among its sons 24 generals, one rear admiral, and four winners of Medals of Honor. In 1865 there was a reception for Bowdoin men who had served in the war, and General Grant received an honorary degree.

At the same Commencement in 1865 there was the great pressure on Bowdoin that I have mentioned, a pressure to have the College withdraw the honorary degree it had given to Jefferson Davis in 1858, when he was a United States Senator. Davis had been Secretary of War under Bowdoin's own

President, Franklin Pierce, from 1853 to 1857. Bowdoin's Governing Boards refused to withdraw the honorary degree, stating that when it was conferred Davis deserved it and that his service as President of the Confederacy did not affect the degree, which, once given, would not be taken away. Considering the temper of the times, this was a courageous decision.

There is an interesting sequel to this incident. Burleigh Rodick of the Class of 1912 is now gathering material for a work on the Civil War entitled Appomattox — the Last Campaign. At the former home of Jefferson Davis he found a copy of a letter Davis had written praising Bowdoin for not rescinding the degree.

The old Chamberlain home, which still stands here in Brunswick, was a gathering place for great figures of the war when Chamberlain was here as President of the College. Through its doors, according to Dr. Wallace, came such men as Grant, Sherman, Sheridan, McClellan, Porter, Warren, Ayers, Griffin, and Howard to be entertained by their former comrade in arms. Edward Snow of Ardmore, Pennsylvania, who attended Bowdoin when Chamberlain was alive, says he remembers the house as having a big room filled with books, with an enormous American flag pulled tight across the ceiling, making a canopy for the room. In speaking of it recently, Mr. Snow said, "I never met General Chamberlain except once, when he paid me for delivering the Portland Evening Express. How sad it is that we do not grasp the opportunities of youth." Well, this is nearly half a century ago, and there are not many who have recollections of Chamberlain, but it would be a very fine thing if those who do have them would contribute their memories to the ALUMNUS as a special project for the Civil War Centennial.

On the tapestry of Bowdoin's tradition the figure of Joshua Chamberlain stands very large. It is worth remembering that he maintained a close, though intermittent, association with Bowdoin from the time when he entered in 1848 as a student until his death more than 65 years later. After serving as Governor of Maine for four years following the Civil War, he was President of Bowdoin from 1871 to 1883.

These political and academic years were not entirely happy ones as far as Chamberlain was concerned. Both in the capitol and in the College, he put forward ideas that were well in advance of his time, although they are commonplace now. And he stoutly resisted pressure groups that opposed him.

It has always seemed to me that at the seat of many of Chamberlain's difficulties in later years was the fact that he was a genuine storybook hero — a knight with plumes and shining armor — and civilian life offers very few opportunities for a demonstration of this capability. A politician, by the very nature of his occupation, must be politic. And although there undoubtedly are many examples of heroism on the part of a college president, they would, I imagine, ordinarily be of a lonely and inconspicuous kind.

Only once, in these later years, was the old brand of Chamberlain heroism called for. This was in 1880, when, as Major General of the Maine militia, he forestalled what promised to be armed conflict in the State of Maine over an election dispute. This affair General Chamberlain conducted with great wisdom and courage. Upon one occasion, in Augusta, he dared an angry mob to shoot him, and faced them down. In talking with Chamberlain's niece a few years ago, I learned that he took more pride in this achievement, which possibly saved the state from civil war, than in any of his previous accomplishments.

Yet military action always held a fascination for him. Chamberlain was never quite willing to admit, along with Sherman, that war is hell. He believed there are some things worse than war, even though following Appomattox there was a great revulsion of feeling against war and the belief on the part of many people that there would never be another great conflict.

Some of the feeling became evident in the colleges and universities. Veterans were attending Bowdoin until 1870, even without a GI Bill of Rights, but by the time of Chamberlain's administration beginning a year later, the veterans had gone and there was a new class of youth.

At that time the government was concerned about military training because the penalties for unpreparedness were still fresh in mind. Even after ten years, the first battle of Bull Run was well remembered. So the government was encouraging the formation of military training units in colleges, and Chamberlain was all for it. What happened is fully described in Dr. Wallace's new biography of Chamberlain and is worth a brief mention here. A training unit was established at Bowdoin in 1872, with an Army officer in charge. At first there was enthusiasm, but opposition grew, and one day in 1874 the Junior, Sophomore, and Freshman classes simply refused to go out for drill.

Once before in his life, in the course of his war days, Chamberlain had entertained a mutiny, when some soldiers of the 2nd Maine Regiment refused to be transferred to the 20th Maine and insisted on going home, under the erroneous impression that their enlistments had run out. Through a judicious use of force and persuasion, Chamberlain prevailed upon them to stay. But in the case of the Bowdoin mutineers he took the opposite course. He sent them all home and told them not to come back unless they were willing to comply with the laws of the College. The students came back; the affair blew over; but military training at Bowdoin was discontinued a few years later.

IN CONTRAST, the generation which had actually served in the war appeared to be more in sympathy with Chamberlain's views, and there continued to be a very strong feeling of patriotic solidarity among the veterans — a feeling unmatched by any subsequent group of veterans from any war. Perhaps it was because they felt that they had accomplished something valuable and definite. As Chamberlain and the other Civil War soldiers grew older, they were conscious of the fact that they had done uncommon things to save the union. It was a source of pride to them and I believe of sustenance in later life. The 20th Maine, for example, met in reunions up until 1924, when the last meeting of which I have any record took place in the Knights of Pythias Hall in Freeport. There are in existence photographs taken at these later reunions — of old, white-bearded men still standing straight, stalwart, and substantial. In several of these reunion photographs taken prior to 1914, General Chamberlain is seen standing or sitting in the center of the picture, very erect, very proud, like an aged eagle.

And later, too, the students of Bowdoin College could see Chamberlain in a somewhat different perspective. As related by Dr. Wallace, one Sunday afternoon in the spring of 1913, during memorial services at Vespers in the Bowdoin chapel, the students expressed their admiration of Chamberlain by a rising vote and asked President Hyde to write him to that effect. In his letter to Chamberlain, Hyde said, in part, "The students of Bowdoin College . . . have requested me to express to you and the brave men who fought with you in the great cause, their gratitude for the privilege of living in a country undivided by secession and unstained by slavery; and to assure you that your noble example will ever be an incentive to lives of patriotic service; in peace so long as honorable peace is possible; in war whenever unavoidable and righteous war shall call."

Chamberlain was greatly moved and gratified by this message. And it was well that it reached him when it did.

In July of that same year, Chamberlain attended the 50th Reunion of the Blue and the Gray at Gettysburg. And what a remarkable thing this was, when you think of it! As a parallel, for example, in England, try to imagine if you can, the Roundheads and the Cavaliers meeting in 1694 to celebrate the 50th anniversary of the battle of Marston Moor! I am not aware that any such thing had ever taken place before in the history of the world. Chamberlain apparently enjoyed this reunion, but the trip fatigued him. The years and his old Civil War wound were beginning to catch up with the old General. He died in Portland on February 24, 1914.

There were services in Portland attended by thousands of people; then the flag-draped casket was conducted in a military procession to Union Station, and Chamberlain came home to Brunswick for final services in the First Parish Church and interment in the cemetery in the pines.

The Brunswick unit of the National Guard, the G.A.R., and Bowdoin participated in the services, and there were military honors at the grave. The Bowdoin alumnus I mentioned previously, Ed Snow, told me that he remembers that February day very clearly, when he marched as a National Guardsman and a member of the honor guard over the heavy, wet snow to the cemetery. And he remembers firing the volley over the grave, which was, as he recalls, "not too ragged after all," in spite of the fact that they were civilian soldiers of the kind that Chamberlain had led to war.

BEFORE THE YEAR WAS OUT, World War I would begin — the war no one thought would ever happen — a war which would again call for the courage and leadership of the men of Bowdoin and which, again, would not find them lacking in these qualities.

And while veterans of the Civil War were still alive in Maine, the rumblings of yet another gathering storm were heard, as World War II came upon us.

At such times of stress, a sense of tradition becomes doubly important. Maine is a small state in population; Bowdoin is a small college. But so often the great and decisive actions of the world have been influenced by small numbers of men. We have seen how Bowdoin men influenced such events at Little Round Top and Cemetery Hill, and we are reminded that there are places where quality counts more than quantity.

Unfortunately, the world is still not a completely safe or easy place. It is hard to tell where the Little Round Tops of the future may be. They may be under the surface of the ocean, or a thousand miles out in space. Or they may not be of a military nature at all but in some critical area of our social or economic life where men may be called upon for difficult decisions and heroic actions. But wherever these Little Round Tops may be, it is quite safe to say that the traditions of the men involved, as they are conscious of them, will have some influence on their actions.

Joshua Chamberlain once said, "The fact that one is a Bowdoin man is credential enough to admit one to the highest position in the world." He might also have added that it is qualification for some of the world's greatest responsibilities. And to this qualification Chamberlain and other Bowdoin men who served in the Civil War did make an important contribution simply by enriching the tradition of this state, this community, and this college.

One way of looking at history is to regard it as memory — the memory of a people, a nation, a town, or a college.

A thought elaborating upon the importance of this, at least as applied to an individual, was the theme of one of Mary Ellen Chase's fine books entitled Mary Peters. In the front of the book Mary Ellen Chase stated this theme in a quotation from The Brothers Karamazov, which went as follows: "People talk to you a great deal about your education, but some good, sacred memory, preserved from childhood, is perhaps the best education. If a man carries many such memories with him into life, he is safe to the end of his days, and if one has only one good memory left in one's heart, even that may sometime be the means of saving us."

Many such memories are seated in the State of Maine and in Bowdoin.

BOWDOIN COLLEGE
CAPITAL CAMPAIGN
Getchell House, Brunswick, Maine

Bowdoin's decision to launch the $10,000,000 Capital Campaign was a bold venture in faith — faith that her alumni and friends would accept the challenge to work and give on a far greater scale than ever before. Now, eighteen months after the public inauguration of the Campaign, almost two-thirds of the goal has been attained and we are in the midst of an all-out effort to obtain the final one-third. At this stage we might ask ourselves frankly whether experience so far has or has not confirmed our initial faith. This message is my personal answer.

The response by members of the Governing Boards, unparalleled in generosity by any other similar campaign, is such a resounding demonstration of dedicated purpose that our question should be answered on the spot. This group has underwritten almost one-half of the total goal. Is it conceivable that the 8,000 and more other alumni, with their combined giving, cannot readily assure the other half if they have a real will to do so and contribute in proportion to their individual ability?

The final answer will not be available until proven by events at a later date, but at this stage it is appropriate to extend public credit and appreciation in particular to the younger alumni classes of the past dozen years or so. Perhaps their more recent undergraduate experience with the situation at Brunswick and with the ferment in the whole college education field has afforded them a stronger realization of the vital stakes involved in the Campaign. Whatever the reason, they have provided outstanding service in the local alumni committees, and in proportion to their means they have contributed on a scale of generosity that is a challenge to the older generations of alumni. The Campaign Committee is happy not only to extend this tribute to our younger alumni for their response to the Campaign but also to express its confidence that the future vitality of our alumni body is doubly assured as these younger alumni take over the responsible leadership.

As far as the older alumni generations are concerned, however, our efforts to communicate enthusiasm and determination to share in Bowdoin's program of advance have yielded a disappointing over-all result. While we are grateful for individual examples of generosity, they have been the exception rather than the rule. As evidence, the year and a half of effort, which has been focused on prospective major givers until this fall's mass Campaign, has obtained only $250,000 in individual gifts of $10,000 or more from all of the alumni outside of the Board members.

The key to successful completion of our Campaign task is amply plain. It lies in our ability to create a sense of urgency and challenge among our alumni and to raise their sights to a level far more in line with individual ability to give. While there are still promising possibilities of further support from outside sources, our own alumni must accept the responsibility for contributing a major share of the $3,000,000 gap still remaining.

Bowdoin's position of top excellence in the ranks of small colleges is at stake. Every one of us alumni must play his full part in this effort, upon the success of which Bowdoin's future depends.

This Campaign is not a comfortable charitable enterprise, but an urgent investment in a high and compelling opportunity. In our response to that challenge, we must take our stand on one clear test. Are we determined that Bowdoin shall continue to be the college where sons and grandsons and future youth can get the finest educational experience offered by any American small college? Our sister institutions are accepting their challenge and will certainly leave us behind if we stand still. The answer is in our hands.

1963 State Champions In Football

For years to come, whenever Bowdoin men anywhere are discussing sports, the 1963 football season is bound to be mentioned. And with mighty good reason! The Polar Bear varsity racked up the most successful season in a quarter of a century with 6 wins and 1 loss, and the freshman team piled up a 4 and 1 record.

But the sweetest memory of the season will be the varsity's stunning 7-0 upset of a Maine squad that was so heavily favored that New England sports writers openly speculated in advance of the game about what a "mauling" the Polar Bears would take.

That win over Maine in the final Bowdoin-Maine contest to be played at Orono was later described by one writer as a "something to remember us by" victory for a Bowdoin team that was outweighed by an average of 20 pounds per man in the line. It was the first time Bowdoin had won in Orono since 1949.

In the cliché-ridden world of sports, the word "upset" is often overused. But if ever the use of that over-worked word was justified, it was justified to describe Bowdoin's victory over Maine. Just how big the upset really was can perhaps be gauged by the words of veteran Portland sports editor Blaine Davis in his column the day before the game. Davis wrote that "a Bowdoin victory would relegate David's elimination of Goliath to second place on the list of alltime upsets."

The win gave Bowdoin the State Series crown and the best Polar Bear football season since 1938, when Coach Nels Corey '39 was an undergraduate and captain of the team and Adam Walsh was the coach. It was the only game of the season in which Maine was held scoreless, and the triumph convinced any doubters that Bowdoin deserved its high ranking in the United Press International New England small college poll.

Before playing its inspired game against Maine, the team defeated Tufts (28-6), Wesleyan (32-0), Williams (20-0), Colby (21-13), and Bates (14-7) and lost a heartbreaker to Amherst (0-3). The State Series crown was the second for Nels Corey since he became head football coach in 1959.

The 1963 Polar Bear squad, in allowing the enemy a combined total of only 29 points in 7 games, was the best Bowdoin defensive team since 1937. This year's players finished the season at the top of the list of New England small college teams in the defense department, allowing the opposition an average of only 143.9 total yards per game while piling up an average of 268.7 per game themselves.

There were plenty of heroes among the 33-man squad. Coach Corey was forced to use "iron men" for the full 60 minutes in several games. For example, against Maine four Bowdoin players were on the field from the opening kickoff to the final gun. They were Captain Frank Drigotas '64, an end, who caught a 40-yard pass that set up the touchdown; halfback Paul Soule '66, who threw the pass after a pitchout from quarterback Bob Harrington '65; tackle Dave Andrew '64; and guard Steve Ingram '65.

Bill Farley '64 couldn't play because of an injury suffered in the Bates game, so Bruce Alemian '66 drew the starting assignment at fullback. It was his first starting role, and Alemian caught a 7-yard touchdown pass from Harrington for the only score of a rainy afternoon. Barry Smith '66 came in to split the uprights for the extra point and that was all the scoring, although Bowdoin was on the Maine five and driving as the game ended.

Harrington had an outstanding season in the total offense department. Official statistics released by the Bowdoin News Service show that he completed 59 of 113 passes for 652 yards (including 8 touchdowns) and also gained 224 yards in 86 ground carries for a 2.60-yard average. That gave him a total net gain of 876 yards. With a new split-end (Jim MacAllen) offense, Bowdoin and Harrington took to the air frequently.

Soule led the individual rushers with 414 yards in 104 carries for a 3.98-yard average. Harrington was second, and Farley, who didn't lose a yard all season, was third with 158 yards in 39 attempts for a 4.05-yard average. Halfback Bob Hooke '64 posted the team's best rushing average — 5.54 yards per carry on 133 yards gained in 24 tries. Other leading ground-gainers included halfback Al Ryan '64 with 97 yards in 21 tries for a 4.62-yard average, halfback Bill Matthews '65 with 81 yards in 15 rushes for a 5.40-yard average, and Alemian with 26 yards in 7 carries for an average of 3.71.

End Jim MacAllen '66 had a sensational season, catching 23 passes for a net gain of 331 yards and 4 touchdowns. Other leading pass receivers included Soule, 11 catches for 106 yards and 1 touchdown; Drigotas, 6 catches for 90 yards; Matthews, 3 catches for 65 yards and 1 touchdown; Ryan, 4 receptions for 47 yards; end Fred Harlow '64, 3 catches for 46 yards; and Hooke, 4 catches for 20 yards.

The scoring honors were shared by MacAllen and Soule, with 26 points each.

Other members of a Bowdoin varsity team that will not soon be forgotten were, by position:

Ends — Wayne Burton '66, Tim Love '66, Dan Turner '65.

Halfbacks — Ed Bell '66, Jordan Shubert '66.

Nels Corey's assistants were Pete Kostacopoulos and Sid Watson, and the team's student manager was John E. Cartland, III '66.

Lettermen who will be graduated next June are Drigotas, Harlow, Andrew, Tarbell, Haddock, Hooke, Ryan, and Farley.

Named to both the Portland Sunday Telegram and Bangor Daily News All-Maine teams were Drigotas, Andrew, Harrington, and Soule. Winning positions on the News' second team were MacAllen and Ingram. Awarded honorable mention by the News were Minnis, Farley, Matthews, Tarbell, Zilinsky, and Hooke.

A significant tribute to Andrew, Harrington, and Soule came at the season's end from Amherst, the only team to defeat Bowdoin. The Lord Jeffs named all three to their all-opponent team.

The freshman football team was coached by Ed Coombs '42, assisted by Ray Bicknell. The squad defeated Worcester Academy (14-0), Bridgton Academy (19-8), Colby Freshmen (13-12) and Maine Central Institute (20-6), losing only the final game of the season, to Maine Freshmen (0-20).

Among the Class of 1967 backfield standouts were Dave Comeau, Dave McNabb, Maurice Viens, Bruce Burton, and Tom Allen. Showing lots of class in the line were Joe Titlow, Paul Newman, Max Willscher and Bob Doran.

All-Maine quarterback Bob Harrington '65 likes to run on the option play.

All-Maine halfback Paul Soule '66 gaining yardage against Bates.

All-Maine end and Captain Frank Drigotas '64 catches a pass against Colby.

Halfback Bob Hooke '64 off and running against Wesleyan.

Fall Sports

The 1963 fall sports season at Bowdoin was a highly successful one. Paced by the football team's outstanding performance (detailed elsewhere in this issue), the varsity football, soccer, and cross country squads compiled a combined record of 11 victories, 2 ties, and 9 defeats.

In varsity competition, the football team was 6-1, the soccer squad 3-4-2, and the cross country team 2-4. The freshman squads posted a combined record of 9 wins and 6 losses. The varsity and freshman sailing teams did not do well in scheduled competition but were successful in informal meets.

Coach Charlie Butt's varsity soccer players finished third in the State Series. Against out-of-state competition, Bowdoin defeated Lowell (3-1) and lost to Wesleyan (1-5) and Springfield (1-4). In State Series action the Polar Bears defeated Maine twice (3-1 and 6-1), tied Colby (3-3) in double overtime and lost (1-3), and tied Bates (2-2) in double overtime and lost (2-4).

The team's leading scorer was right wing Gerry Giesler '65, who registered 5 goals and 5 assists. Inside left Hans Hede, a Bowdoin Plan student from Sweden, scored 4 goals and had 2 assists. Scoring 3 goals each were center forward Cy Allen '66 and Bowdoin Plan student Carlos Ramos of Costa Rica. Defensive standouts included goalie Steve Siegel '65, who had 92 saves, Co-Captain Bill Horton '64, a center half, and Steve Weiss '64, left half.

Starting off the season with a victory, the squad never really hit its full stride because of lack of sufficient scoring punch and a variety of injuries. Allen missed several games, and Rick Copeland '63 didn't regain his top form after an early-season injury.

Named to the first team of the All-Maine college soccer squad were Hede and Horton. Co-Captain Steve Codner '64, Ray Bird '66, Copeland, and Weiss made the second team.

The reason for that gleam in Charlie Butt's eyes is the unprecedented all-victorious record posted by Professor Dodge Fernald's freshman soccer club, which swept through a five-game slate without even coming close to losing. The victims were Fryeburg Academy (3-1), Hebron Academy (5-3), North Yarmouth Academy (4-1), Colby Freshmen (3-1), and Kents Hill School (5-2). Among the freshman stars on whom Charlie is counting for next season are inside left Steve Mickle, center forward Tom Brown, left wing Tom Lorch, and center half Alex Salmela.

The varsity cross country squad, coached by Frank Sabasteanski '41, rebounded from last year's winless season, defeating St. Anselm's (25-31) and Colby (21-34). The losses were to Amherst (34-25), Williams (34-23), Bates (46-16), and Vermont (34-23).

It was a fair season for a squad that numbered only five men most of the time, and with the exception of the Bates meet the losses were by close margins. The pacesetters were Captain Bert Babcock '65, Dick Howe '66, and Tom Chamberlin '65.

The freshman cross country contingent lost all five of its meets — to Gorham (50-15), Maine Central Institute (32-21), Morse High of Bath and Waterville (52-42-30), Hebron Academy (47-16), and New Hampshire Freshmen (34-22).

The varsity and freshman sailing teams are hoping for success next spring as the result of experience gained this fall. Unfortunate circumstances in the scheduled fall meets and good conditions in the informal events produced poor results in the former and a fair amount of success in the latter.

High spot of the varsity season was a second place finish in the informal state championships at Maine. The varsity sailors also defeated Maine Maritime Academy in an informal meet at Castine. The freshman squad took second place in the unofficial freshman state championships and defeated North Yarmouth Academy twice in informal events.

P. Daggett '25 shared the spotlight at the Alumni Day lobster-stew luncheon in the Sargent Gymnasium. After the luncheon the football team took over the center of the stage, with a thrilling come-from-behind 21 to 13 victory over Colby at Whittier Field.

News of the Capital Campaign has been well covered in the monthly reports which alumni have received this fall, and most Bowdoin men know the results of the football season. But the majority of the alumni do not know that Professor Daggett received a special Bowdoin clock and a framed citation which referred to him as "the personification of the best of Bowdoin teachers." The citation described the man who, as William Nelson Cromwell Professor of Constitutional and International Law and Government, has the Faculty's longest title as "distinguished teacher, faithful fraternity adviser, conscientious counselor to pre-law students, chairman and member of important Faculty committees, and representative of the College at countless alumni gatherings."

First prize in the fraternity house display contest went to Delta Kappa Epsilon, with Delta Sigma second. The winning display, entitled "Clean Sweep," consisted of a huge Polar Bear standing next to a trash barrel into which he had stuffed a replica of the Colby Mule. The Delta Sigma display, entitled "Mule Team — the Yoke's on You," had a Polar Bear driving a simulated covered wagon, built on the porch roof of the Delta Sig House, and holding the reins hitched to six mules wearing yokes.

The Saturday festivities closed with a modern jazz program by the Ahmad Jamal Trio in the Sargent Gymnasium.

Hodding Carter Honored

On October 31 the College awarded the Bowdoin Prize to Hodding Carter '27, Editor of the Delta Democrat-Times in Greenville, Miss. He is the seventh alumnus to receive this distinctive honor, following Fred H. Albee '99, Harvey D. Gibson '02, Paul H. Douglas '13, Kenneth C. M. Sills '01, Donald B. MacMillan '98, and Harold H. Burton '09.

In his acceptance address Mr. Carter said, "Unless the Western white man can accommodate politically and economically to the pressures of the dark-skinned people and help lead the way now, we will certainly not lead a generation hence. Even elemental self-survival demands the white man's recognition of the aspirations of submerged and angry people and assistance in attaining the attainable."

"The most important gift I received from Bowdoin," Mr. Carter stated, "was not what I learned here but what I began to unlearn here. Unlearning is more difficult than learning and is useful to those of us — we are legion — whose minds

At its Fortieth Reunion in June the Class of 1923, the first class to spend its full four Bowdoin years under Paul Nixon's Deanship, feeling that a fitting memorial to his name and services should be included in the expansion and strengthening of the College, unanimously voted that the Class of 1923 Fund be renamed the Dean Paul Nixon Memorial Fund and authorized the appointment of a committee to prepare plans for and carry out the project.

This committee, composed of Class President Geoffrey T. Mason, Class Secretary Philip S. Wilder, Class Agent Frank E. MacDonald, and Reunion Chairman and former Class Agent Francis B. Hill, held meetings in August and September and makes the following report — not only to the members of the Class of 1923 but also to the members of all classes in college while Paul Nixon was Dean.

Because Paul Nixon was deeply interested in all aspects of the College, because he rarely missed important Bowdoin athletic events, because in his own school and college years he was a great athlete himself, the Committee felt, after considerable discussion of many possibilities, that a most appropriate memorial, one which would appeal to the greatest number of his friends, would be the building and dedication of the lobby of the new Gymnasium in his memory.

This lobby, costing approximately $75,000, will serve as an entrance to the new Gymnasium and as a trophy room. An appropriate plaque and portrait of Dean Nixon will be provided.

Many members of classes other than 1923 have expressed great interest in this memorial and have asked to be allowed to contribute to it. This is most fitting. Paul Nixon was a warm, personal friend of generations of Bowdoin men, and it is proper that all who wish to should be allowed and invited to share in this memorial undertaking, with proper credit to "other friends and students of Paul Nixon."

The officers of the Alumni Fund and of the Capital Campaign have agreed that any new Alumni Fund contributions and any gifts to the Campaign — past or future — in whole or in part — may be designated as contributions to the Dean Paul Nixon Memorial Fund. The committee, therefore, solicits such contributions, especially from members of the Classes of 1919 to 1945, but not excluding members of other classes.

All contributions to the Capital Campaign by members of the Class of 1923 will be so designated unless individuals specifically direct otherwise, and Alumni Fund contributors may mark their gifts for this purpose.

In future editions of the ALUMNUS, there will be progress reports on the Nixon Fund, which stands at $8,812.90, as of November 29.

have been clouded and whose hearts have been hardened by the old and accustomed prejudices."

Mr. Carter has won many honors for his eloquent advocacy of reason in seeking solutions for race problems in this country. In 1946 he received a Pulitzer Prize for his editorials. The committee that selected him for the Bowdoin Prize is composed of the President of Harvard, the President of Yale, and the Chief Justice of the Maine Supreme Court. The Bowdoin Prize for this year amounted to $5,700. It is awarded once every five years to the alumnus or faculty member judged to have made the most distinctive contribution in any field of human endeavor.

It was a busy day for Mr. Carter. Before the convocation he took part in a press conference in Sills Hall; after the convocation he was the guest of honor at a luncheon in the Moulton Union, was the guest of honor at an afternoon reception at the Alpha Delta Phi House, and at dinner that evening helped inaugurate a series of Senior Center Program events for members of this year's senior class. At the dinner he spoke on "The Role of the Moderate White in Race Relations of the South."

Faculty Matters

Lt. Col. William F. Vassar is the new head of Bowdoin's ROTC unit, having replaced Colonel Edward A. Ryan in September. The new Professor of Military Science had for the preceding three years been a staff officer in the Intelligence Division of the Army's European Headquarters in Heidelberg, Germany. During the three years before that assignment he was a battalion commander at Fort Dix, N. J.

A graduate of the University of Vermont, Colonel Vassar was attached to the 77th Division during World War II and took part in the battles of Guam, Leyte, Ie Shima, and Okinawa. He received his master's degree from Vermont in 1948 and for four years was Principal of and a teacher at the Barstow Elementary School in Chittenden, Vt. He re-entered the Army in 1951 during the Korean conflict.

Professor Alfred Fuchs of the Psychology Department has received a new research grant of $2,000 from the National Science Foundation to continue a project concerning the human memory that he began last summer at the University of Michigan with support from the NSF.

Professors John Howland '57 and Alton Gustafson.

His studies concern short-term memory — that is, memory for words over time periods of less than one minute.

History Professor George Bearce is one of fifty scholars from this country who will participate in the 26th International Congress of Orientalists in New Delhi, India, from January 4 to January 10. He will deliver a paper on "The Festivals of Mewar: the Interaction of India and the West in Early Nineteenth Century Indian Painting." An internationally known scholar in the field of South Asian history, he is the author of British Attitudes Towards India, 1784-1858, which received the American Historical Association's Waramull Prize for 1962 as the best book on the history of India published originally in this country.

On October 9 Nathan Dane, II '37 delivered his inaugural address as Winkley Professor of the Latin Language and Literature. In his talk, entitled "The Case for the Latinist," he said, "The world of the Roman stretches far with equal attraction and excitement from its legendary beginnings to the highly intoxicating experiences of an Augustine and thence down to our own day. Few if any cultures, save that of Greece, can challenge the magnetism of Rome. Modern nations, for all their technical advances, have yet to prove their comparative achievements, their lasting claims of fascination for other men."

By January Pierce Professor of English Louis Coxe will submit one of two new plays to the recently formed American Playwrights Theatre, which seeks to rejuvenate serious drama in the university and community theaters of the United States. He will offer the APT either a play he is now working on or his completed manuscript of House and Garden, a "sour comedy" laid in a "contemporary, rich, ex-urban community."

The APT plan is to select one play, preferably of "a large theme," to be performed on the stages of at least fifty university theaters in cooperation with civic or community theater groups. In order that the performances will be on a professional or semi-professional level, guest stars and guest directors will be provided by the American National Theatre

$148,900 in Grants

The Carnegie Corporation of New York has made a grant to the College of $100,000 in support of the Senior Center Program's visiting lecturers and fellows phase during its first three years. Professor William B. Whiteside, Director of the Center, will plan and administer a varied program that will include long-term visits by lecturers, writers, scholars, and other people for formal and informal meetings with students. Some of these visitors will live in apartments in the Center and dine with undergraduates.

The National Science Foundation has made a three-year grant of $48,900 to Bowdoin to support a biological-biochemical research project under the direction of Assistant Professor of Biology John L. Howland '57, who joined the faculty this fall after study at the University of Amsterdam in The Netherlands. This is the largest grant the College has ever received for an individual scientific study. In his research Professor Howland is probing the energy metabolism of living cells, studying the manner in which cells manufacture Adenosine Triphosphate, or ATP as it is more commonly known. This is the substance in which energy is stored in the cell. The NSF grant will allow the purchase of equipment necessary for the project. This includes a spectrophotometer, to measure the rate of enzyme reactions, and an oxygen polarograph, to measure the rate of oxidation by some of the components of cells.

Parents' Weekend

was raised over the College on Friday, October 4, James Bowdoin Day, the day set aside each year to honor the Governor's son, James Bowdoin, III, who was the College's earliest patron.

The flag was unfurled over the Capitol last August 7. It was given to Bowdoin through the cooperation of Maine Senator Edmund S. Muskie H'57 and Professor David B. Walker of the Government Department, who is on leave of absence as Staff Director of Senator Muskie's Subcommittee on Intergovernmental Relations.

Forty-two students were honored as James Bowdoin Scholars that day. The three men who had maintained a "straight A" record during 1962-63 — John Russell '63 of Brunswick, Timothy Hayes '63 of Cranford, N. J., and Steven Weiss '64 of Jenkintown, Pa. — received a copy of Homer's Iliad, illustrated by Leonard Baskin and bearing a replica of the James Bowdoin bookplate. John Van Nest '64 of Berkeley Heights, N. J., won the General Wallace C. Philoon ROTC Trophy, and the James Bowdoin Cup went for the second successive year to Geoffrey Chapman '64 of Boston.

The principal speaker at the exercises was Professor Charles S. Singleton, a Dante scholar from Johns Hopkins University, whose subject was "A Prescription for Cyclops." Charles Metz '64 of Freeport, N. Y., gave the student response, and Professor Edward Pols spoke at the luncheon that followed the exercises.

James Bowdoin Day was only one of the events of a busy Parents' Weekend program, which also featured class visits and campus tours, a Chapel address by Professor Lawrence S. Hall '36, a talk on the Senior Center Program by Professor William B. Whiteside at the annual meeting of the Bowdoin Fathers' Association, a Saturday luncheon, the Bowdoin-Wesleyan football game, a reception for parents Saturday afternoon, and Hal Holbrook's "Mark Twain Tonight" program that evening.

Lawrence B. Abbiati of Falmouth is the new President of the Fathers' Association, succeeding Turner McDowell of Glens Falls, N. Y., to whom President Coles presented a hand-colored engraving of the Bowdoin campus as it appeared in 1907.

Other new officers of the Association are as follows: First Vice President, Frank W. Black, Barre, Vt.; Second Vice President, T. Tarpay Schulten, Woolwich; Secretary, Edward E. Langbein, Brooklyn, N. Y.; and Treasurer, Herbert E. Mehlhorn, Brunswick.

The Fathers' Association voted at its meeting to purchase a piece of equipment for the Senior Center.

is one of the twenty-five winners of the Sports Illustrated 1963 Silver Anniversary All-America Awards. Other winners include Marshall Goldberg of Pittsburgh, Allie Reynolds of Oklahoma State, Bill Osmanski of Holy Cross, and Davey O'Brien of Texas Christian. However, judgment in this competition is made not on the superior quality of football a man played 25 years ago but on the nature and extent of his performance in his career and way of life. Nomination comes only from his alma mater, and the voting is done by a panel of nationally known figures, including this year former Army Coach Red Blaik, Pennsylvania Governor William Scranton, and Union Theological Seminary President Henry Van Dusen.

Dr. Hanley, who returned to Bowdoin and the Coe Infirmary in 1946, has done outstanding work in both the remedial field and the preventive field of athletic injuries. Recognition of his research led to his selection in 1960 as one of the physicians to accompany the United States Olympic team to Rome. He will also be a physician for the U. S. team at the 1964 Olympics in Tokyo.

In addition to his Bowdoin duties, Dr. Hanley is Executive Director of the Maine Medical Association and Editor of its Journal. He and Mrs. Hanley, the former Maria Benoit of Cape Elizabeth, have four children — Daniel, Sheila, Sharon, and Sean.

Council-Fund Conference

More than 100 alumni and wives attended the combined fall conference of the Alumni Council and the Alumni Fund the weekend of the Bowdoin-Bates football game, October 31 through November 2. The program included work and business meetings, numerous committee sessions, talks by President Coles, Executive Secretary Wolcott A. Hokanson, Jr. '50, and poet Wilbert Snow '07, an unconventional welcoming address by Professor Nathan Dane '37, and a very rainy football game with Bates.

The Alumni Fund Cup was presented for the third consecutive year to Edwin H. Blanchard '17 of Jackson Heights, N. Y. He has been Class Agent for three years, and he and 1917 have won the Fund Cup for three years. Last year 88.2% of the 68 members of the class gave a total of $36,847 to the Fund. During Mr. Blanchard's three years as Agent, members of 1917 have given the Fund a total of more than $82,500.

The Class of 1916 Bowl, awarded each year to the class which shows the greatest improvement over its performance of the preceding year, went to 1940 and Dr. Ross L. Wilson of Menlo Park, Calif., who, in his first year as Agent, brought the class from 58th place in 1961-62 to 21st place in 1962-63. Dr. Wilson was present to receive the Bowl in person, having flown from California, where he is a surgeon, to attend not only the conference but also the Alumni Day activities the preceding weekend.

Class Agent Samuel A. Ladd, Jr. '29 of Brunswick made the first presentation of the 1929 Participation Trophy to Richard H. Downes '60 of Worcester, Mass. The Trophy goes to that one of the ten most recent graduating classes which achieves the highest percentage of participation in the Alumni Fund. At 64% Mr. Downes and 1960 had the highest percentage of participation of any class back through 1942 and the second highest of any class back through 1930.

Winners of Decade Leader Awards in the 1962-63 Fund were S. Sewall Webster '10 of Augusta, Mr. Blanchard, Richard S. Thayer '28 of Marblehead, Mass., Frank F. Sabasteanski '41 of Brunswick, Robert Whitman '45 of Winchester, Mass., and Mr. Downes.

Fund Chairman Edward B. Burr '45 of New Vernon, N. J., who presided at the award ceremony, paid tribute to some of the Alumni Fund's veteran Agents — Emerson W. Zeitler '20, now in his 32nd year in that position; Wallace M. Powers '04 of Jackson Heights, N. Y., and Paul K. Niven '16 of Brunswick, both in their 31st year; Eugene W. McNeally '13 of Portland, in his 25th year; and Mr. Ladd, in his 22nd year.

In a surprise tribute Mr. Burr, on behalf of the Fund team, presented a citation and a special Bowdoin Chair with a plaque to Willard B. Arnold, III '51 of Waterville, who, as the first man in nearly twenty-five years to serve two consecutive years as Chairman, twice led the Fund to new dollar records.

The framed citation presented to Mr. Arnold reads as follows:

"To you, Willard B. Arnold, III, we, the Directors and Class Agents of the Bowdoin Alumni Fund, pay tribute tonight — for your love of Bowdoin and your enthusiastic leadership as Chairman of two successive record-breaking Alumni Funds.

"Son of a Colby father and a Colby mother, husband of a Lasell Junior College girl, one-time Williams College freshman, you might be forgiven if your college loyalties were somewhat divided. However, they are not.

"Husband of a staunch Democrat, recipient of the Franklin Delano Roosevelt Cup while a Bowdoin undergraduate, you might also be forgiven if you were a Democrat. However, you are not, serving, rather, as a Republican Kennebec County Commissioner.

"You were the first man in a quarter of a century to serve two successive years as Chairman of the Alumni Fund. In addition, you have been President of the Kennebec Valley Bowdoin Club, a member of the Alumni Council, 1951 Class Agent from 1954 to 1961, and a Director of the Beta Theta Pi Corporation. Caught up in the spirit of things, your good Bowdoin wife, Joan, displayed commendable patience and restraint, as well as good judgment, in not letting your daughter Elizabeth join your son Andy in this world until Father's Day of 1962, just one day after you announced a new Commencement record for the Alumni Fund.

"A faculty member once wrote of you, 'He is a young man of excellent character and of unusually pleasant personality. He is extremely courteous and friendly and has shown a good deal of initiative. He has impressed his fellow students with his integrity and character and has shown qualities of leadership.'

"For living up to all of this, Bill, and for much more as well, we are grateful to you, and, with thanks in our hearts, we present this Bowdoin Chair to you as a token of our gratitude."

The conference marked the start of the 50th anniversary year of the Alumni Council, which was established in 1914. Arthur K. Orne '30 of Wilmington, Del., is President of the Council during 1963-64, and Dr. John E. Cartland, Jr. '39 of West Hartford, Conn., is its Vice President. The Vice Chairman of the 1963-64 Alumni Fund is Morris A. Densmore '46 of Cape Elizabeth.

Debaters Start Fast

The debating team opened its season with an impressive clean sweep in a fifteen-college tournament at Middlebury College on October 24 and 25, when a four-man team took first place in debating, first and second places in extemporaneous speaking, and first and second places in after-dinner speaking. Peter Aranson '65 and Matthew Pincus '66 defeated teams from Emerson, Norwich, and Dartmouth and lost to Vermont. Robert Farquharson '64 and Philip Swan '64 defeated Williams, Wesleyan, City College of New York, and Massachusetts and then in a run-off debate received a unanimous decision over Vermont.

Farquharson and Aranson captured first and second places, respectively, in both the extemporaneous and after-dinner divisions.

Masque and Gown

Christopher Fry's verse play The Lady's Not for Burning was staged by the Masque and Gown on November 15 and 16 in the Pickard Theater in Memorial Hall. Jeff Huntsman '64 directed the production, and the leading roles were played by Bernard Ryan '64 and Mrs. Maria Parker of Brunswick.

On December 11 in the Chapel the Masque and Gown will present two

Musical Matters

"Nowell," a long-playing Christmas record by the Chapel Choir, the Meddiebempsters, and Professor Athern Daggett '25, is available at $4.00 at the Moulton Union Bookstore and at Gibson Hall of Music. The Choir sings traditional Christmas carols and English and American folk melodies, the Meddies join the Choir in five carols, and Professor Daggett reads the Christmas story from the Bible.

The Glee Club was to open its 1963-64 season with a concert at Hebron Academy on Sunday, November 24. Other dates through February are as follows: December 6, at the First Congregational Church in Braintree, Mass.; December 7, at Pine Manor Junior College in Wellesley, Mass.; December 8, in Brunswick with Pine Manor; February 13, at Sanford; and February 29, in Newton Center, Mass.

The spring tour this year, from March 27 through April 1, will include concerts in Fredericton, New Brunswick, Canada; Bangor; Plymouth, N. H.; and Boston.

The Meddies finished in a tie with the Whiffenpoofs of Yale at the annual "Fall Tonic" at Cornell University in October. There was no formal judging in the octet competition, but the selection of the winners was made by the audience of some 2,500 persons, who divided the honors between the two groups. Other contestants were octets from Trinity, Vassar, and Cornell.

The Meddies also have a new record available at the Bookstore. Pressed by RCA-Victor, it is entitled simply "The Meddies."

On November 11 the Curtis String Quartet presented its yearly concert at Bowdoin. One of the oldest such groups on record, the Quartet has given more than 2,000 concerts during the past thirty-five years, in this country and abroad.

The Rileys in Germany

Last summer, as an official representative of the College, Professor of German Thomas A. Riley '28 visited various Bowdoin men who are natives of Germany and Austria. In Vienna he and Mrs. Riley were welcomed by Consul Manfred Mautner-Markhof '51, who is advertising manager of his family's far-flung business enterprises, among the largest in Austria. Interested in modern trends in business, he is especially active in building better business connections between Austria and the United States. He is an officer in organizations that work toward this end, including the American Rotary Club in Vienna, the Austro-American Society, and the International Chamber of Commerce. The title "Consul" comes from his position as Consul for Lebanon, an im-

On October 17 the Bowdoin chapter of Kappa Sigma Fraternity honored the faculty "for its contributions to higher education in the State of Maine." Speaking at the dinner, Governor John H. Reed said, "It is always a pleasure to join with the future leaders of our country. It is very appropriate that you do honor tonight to the good people who are responsible for the high quality of the instruction here at Bowdoin."

portant government appointment. He is married and has four children. Bowdoin men attending the World's Fair in New York in 1964 should visit the Austrian Pavilion, which is being organized under his direction.

The Rileys also spent an afternoon with Klaus-Dieter Klimmeck '58 in (of all places!) Brunswick, called in German Braunschweig. After a dinner in the centuries-old Gewandhaus, he showed them the treasures of this city and its surrounding areas. He has passed his bar examinations and is working his way up through the involved structure of the German law system toward a judgeship.

Other Bowdoin men in Germany from whom Professor Riley heard were Werner Brandes '61, who was about to leave for further study in political science at Columbia University in New York, and Rainer Schoenhaar, who is working on his doctoral dissertation at Marburg University. Through him Karl Buenting '64, who is also at Marburg, sent greetings.

Placement Visits

During the month of December the following firms and organizations will visit the campus to interview seniors for positions next year: Arthur Young and Company, the Central Intelligence Agency, Mobil Oil Company, and the U. S. Information Agency.

During the month of January the list includes Carter, Rice, Storrs, and Bement Paper Company, Ernst and Ernst, Polaroid Corporation, American Insurance Group, Warner Brothers Company, American Optical Company, Scott Paper Company, Sylvania Electric Products, Guaranty Bank of Worcester.

Also United Shoe Machinery Company, the Civil Service Administration, National Life Insurance Company, Boston Gas Company, F. W. Woolworth Company, Ryerson Steel Company, Connecticut Mutual Life Insurance Company, Connecticut Bank and Trust Company, Humble Oil Company, Johns-Manville Products, and First National Bank of Boston.

Hawthorne Commemoration

The 1964 Biennial Institute next April will cover Nathaniel Hawthorne of the Class of 1825 and the American novel, in observance of the 100th anniversary of Hawthorne's death in 1864. Professor Herbert R. Brown is Chairman of the Institute Committee.

True Memorial Library

On Alumni Day, October 26, the Daniel Waterman True Memorial Library at the Alpha Delta Phi House was dedicated. Located on the ground floor of the recently completed addition to that fraternity house, the Library is named for a member of the Class of 1917 who died in 1951. A bequest from his sister, Miss Dorothy True of Alfred, made the Library possible.

Merit Scholarships to Continue

The Merit Scholarship Program, established at Bowdoin earlier this year, will be continued in 1964 with the award of eight new grants to freshmen entering next September. The Program is conducted with the cooperation of the National Merit Scholarship Corporation, which administers and provides the funds for the largest independently supported educational aid program in the country.

Some 1,700 scholarships will be given in 1964, compared with about 1,000 in 1963. Nineteen colleges, including Bowdoin, will sponsor more than 200 awards, with business corporations and other similar sources providing about 1,000 and the NMSC itself some 500. Because the colleges themselves select the scholarship recipients, they retain control of their admissions process while using the Merit Program as a nationwide mechanism for identifying talented students.

The NMSC, a non-profit organization, was established in 1955 through a grant of $20,000,000 from the Ford Foundation and a $500,000 grant from the Carnegie Corporation of New York. In 1962 the Ford Foundation announced an additional grant of $14,500,000 to continue the program through 1970. The total value of all awards made through 1962, including funds spent or committed by all sponsors, had reached $29,500,000.

Opening of College

Members of the freshman class (206 strong) arrived on the campus on Friday morning, September 20. Some of them were confident and ebullient and some of them shy and quiet, but all of them were eager to accept the offer of the College. The first day's program included lobster stew luncheons for freshmen, their parents, and faculty members, a parents' forum in the Pickard Theater, a freshman-faculty discussion group, and open season on freshmen beginning at 5 o'clock, when the fraternities started "rushing."

With practically all of the freshmen pledged to a fraternity by Sunday night, the Class of 1967 met with the ROTC staff at 8 o'clock Monday morning to talk over that aspect of a Bowdoin education. The rest of Monday's schedule involved registration, individual pictures (with jacket, tie, and collar), signing the Matriculation Book, French, German, and Spanish qualifying or placement examinations, various tests, and discussions in the fraternity houses.

These discussions covered three books on the general theme of revolution and social change — Joseph Conrad's Under Western Eyes, Herbert Muller's The Uses of the Past, and John Reed's Ten Days That Shook the World. All the freshmen (hopefully) read these books during the summer.

Recent Gifts

A painting of a Polar Bear by the late John L. Hurley '12 of Brookline, Mass., has been given to the College by Mrs. Hurley. A large, brilliantly colored oil painting, it hangs in the Alumni Office in Getchell House, across Bath Street from the main campus.

Leonard Baskin has given the Museum of Art the bronze relief "Thistle," which was one of the 84 Baskin works exhibited at the Museum in 1962. It is one of only eight casts made from the original mold. The Baskin exhibit, which drew the largest attendance in the history of the Museum, was the largest single display ever held of his work up to that time. Professor Baskin teaches printmaking and sculpture at Smith College.

The Nathan Webb Research Scholarship in English or English Literature has been established at Bowdoin through a bequest from the late Dr. Latham True of Palo Alto, Calif., whose wife, the late Mrs. Edna Webb True, was a daughter of Judge Webb. The first award will be made next spring for graduate work in English. Neither Dr. True nor Judge

Webb attended Bowdoin, although the latter received an honorary LL.D. degree in 1890. Dr. True, who died in 1945, was Dean of Music at the Castilleja School in Palo Alto. He selected the College to administer the scholarship fund because he felt that both Judge Webb and Bowdoin were "so eminently Maine products." An 1846 graduate of Harvard, Judge Webb was from 1882 until his death in 1902 Judge of the United States District Court in Maine.

Gerhard O. Rehder '31 has honored the memory of his father, a well known American botanist, by the establishment of the Alfred Rehder Library Fund, the income from which is to be used for the purchase of books in any field or for any other important need of the Library. For many years Curator of the Arnold Arboretum of Harvard University, Alfred Rehder is perhaps best known for his authoritative Manual of Cultivated Trees and Shrubs. He was an authority on woody plants. Both of his sons are graduates of the College. Gerhard is a member of the faculty at the Roxbury Latin School in West Roxbury, Mass., and Harold '29 is Curator of the Division of Mollusks at the United States National Museum of the Smithsonian Institution in Washington, D. C.

Winter Sports Preview

The 1963-64 winter sports season could be a good one for Polar Bear fans. Just how good depends on the answers to some questions:

1. Can Coach Ray Bicknell build a basketball squad which has as much smooth teamwork as the group which won Bowdoin's first State Series title in that sport last season?

2. Can Coach Sid Watson's hockey team overcome lack of depth and loss of last year's top scorers?

3. Can Coach Frank Sabasteanski's indoor track squad make up for the loss of such stars as Bruce Frost '63, and will "Sabe" find enough strength in the distance runs?

4. Can Coach Charlie Butt develop enough depth to ensure his swimming team's taking the important second and third places necessary to win most meets?

5. Does the surprisingly large initial turnout of some 30 candidates for the skiing team mean that the squad will probably do well despite a tough schedule?

6. Is the rifle squad's upset opening victory over Dartmouth a sign that Master Sergeant Marshall Bailey's team is going to have a banner year?

If you want the answers to those questions, stop here. We don't have any. But let's review the sports, one by one:

BASKETBALL — Only three lettermen are back from last season's state championship team. They are Captain Harry

Leonard Baskin's "The Thistle."

Silverman '64, a guard; Dick Whitmore '65, center; and Steve Ingram '65, forward. Other upperclassmen include Harley Schwadron '64, Art McDonald '64, Ned d'Entremont '65, Mike Napolitano '64, Bob Harrington '65, Dave Stockford '65, and Paul Lapointe '65.

Among the promising sophomores are forwards Howie Pease, who was the high scorer for last season's freshman team, and Chuck Coughlan, guard Brian Warren, and center Dwight Newcomb.

"We're hoping for the best, expecting the worst, and ready to take what comes," says Coach Bicknell. He notes that all nine of Colby's lettermen are back, that the Bates team appears to be small but well-balanced, and that Maine had the best freshman squad in its history last year.

HOCKEY — Coach Watson, who saw all of last year's top scorers graduate, must build his team around Captain Joe Tarbell '64, last year's All-East small college defenseman Dave Mechem '64, and six other returning lettermen. Key men in the build-up program will be seniors Dev Hamlen, Fred Filoon, and Tom Oliver.

The team includes only a handful of juniors. In the goal Coach Watson has junior Dave Coupe and sophomore Dick Leger, who did a standout job for the freshman team. Other sophomore potential includes Bill Allen, Ed Fitzgerald, Barry Smith, Ben Soule, Leo Tracy, and Frank Yule.

With the graduation of standout defenseman Bruce Parker and a strategic shift of Mechem to the front line, only Bill Matthews '65 remains of last year's defensemen. Smith, Tracy, and Yule, who played well on defense for the freshman squad, could develop, along with senior Bob Taylor. Lack of sufficient depth may hinder establishment of three good lines, almost a prerequisite for a winning team.

The hockey schedule is rugged, with such opponents as Harvard, Army, Brown, and Dartmouth. One of the few bright spots is the fact that 11 of the games will be played at home.

TRACK — There are eight lettermen including Captain Dave McDowell '64, the state broad jump champion. Sophomore Paul Soule, fresh from his football exploits, is expected to be a big help and could be used in the dash, hurdles, discus, pole vault, and shot put.

In the weights, sophomores Alex Schulten, Bill Minnis, and Dave Stocking are counted on. Return of junior Gil Ekdahl after a year's absence is expected to strengthen the high jump and pole vault events. Backing him up in the high jump will be sophomores Andy Seager and John Tarbell. The broad jump contingent includes McDowell, junior Mike Anello, and sophomore Pete Blankman. Hurdlers include sophomores Soule, Pete Good, and Tarbell.

Senior Bill Rounds, Soule, and sophomore Ray Bird will handle the sprints and will be key men in what looks like one of the best relay teams in a long time. Other potentials for the relay are McDowell, junior Charlie Kahill, senior Sherm Rounsville, and sophomores Dave Kohl and Tarbell.

The nucleus for a small distance contingent includes junior Tom Chamberlin in the mile and two-mile, Kahill in the 1,000, and Rounds and Rounsville in the 600. The distances would be helped significantly if Pete Seery '64 regains the top form he displayed before an automobile accident last year.

SWIMMING — There are seven returning lettermen, but the squad is a thin one. The lettermen include Dick Elliot '65 in the 50-yard freestyle; John Halford '64, holder of the Bowdoin record in the 200-yard butterfly; Hank Lawrie '64, a backstroker last year but concentrating on the individual medley this season; Shawn Leach '65, who holds the Bowdoin 200-yard breaststroke record; Bill Lynch '65 in the individual medley; Tim Robinson '65, New England champion and Bowdoin record holder in the 100 freestyle; and Captain Pete Seaver '64, who holds the Bowdoin records in the 200, 500, and 1,650 yard freestyle events and the New England titles in the 500 and 1,650 and is planning to add the individual medley to his arsenal.

The swimming team has a stiff schedule including Army, which perennially boasts a powerhouse squad among the nation's best.

SKIING — Four returning lettermen: Captain Charles Cary '65, Steve Barn-dollar '63, Randy Baxter '65, and Charlie Phillips '64. The squad competed in New England Intercollegiate Ski Conference competition for the first time last year and was placed in the second division.

In its four 1962-63 meets, the team won three and finished fourth in the other, meriting a promotion this year to the first division, known as the Osborne Division. Captain Cary and Barndollar can be counted on to do well in the cross country and jumping events, while junior Bill Hyde and sophomore Marc Freedman will back up Baxter and Phillips in the slalom and downhill events.

RIFLERY — The rifle squad whipped Dartmouth 1,370 to 1,331 in its opening meet and is hoping for a good season. There are six lettermen: Captain Phil Walls '64, Charlie Bates '64, John Hill '64, Steve Leonard '65, Steve Munger '65, and Peter Sapienza '65.

Munger was top man for Bowdoin against Dartmouth with a 281 x 300 score. Hill fired a 277, Walls had a 275, Andy White '66 had a 271, and Leonard had a 266.

D.U. House to College

The Delta Upsilon Chapter House Corporation has given its fraternity house to the College, and the house will be made available for continued use by Delta Sigma Fraternity, which has occupied it for the past twelve years.

President Coles said the College is hopeful that "some new corporation might be formed consisting of recent as well as older alumni which could, in turn, receive and hold title to the property."

Announcement of Delta Upsilon's gift was made by J. Henry Johnson '24, President of the Delta Upsilon Chapter House Corporation; Treasurer T. Maxwell Marshall '30, and Clerk Caspar F. Cowan '36, after a stockholders' meeting, at which an overwhelming majority of Delta Upsilon members voted their approval. Mr. Johnson said, "We are happy that we are able to donate the building to the College, and we are also happy that the historic structure which was the home of so many of us when we were students will continue to be used as a fraternity house."

President Coles expressed his personal gratitude and that of the College to Mr. Johnson, Mr. Marshall, Mr. Cowan, "and other officers and members of the Delta Upsilon Chapter House Corporation who have for so many years contributed their time, effort, and services toward the welfare of the undergraduates who have lived in the Delta Upsilon House, and to the welfare of the College."

Peter B. Morgan '64, President of Delta Sigma Fraternity, said, "All of us want to express our sincere gratitude to the Delta Upsilon Chapter House Corporation for its sympathetic and understanding attitude in this matter. We hope that all members of Delta Upsilon will always regard the building at 259 Maine Street as their home whenever they return to the campus. They will always be welcome to join any new corporation established to provide the alumni leadership we need and appreciate so much."

Bowdoin's Delta Upsilon chapter disaffiliated itself from the national organization in 1951, when students founded Delta Sigma. However, the Delta Upsilon Chapter House Corporation had retained title to the property through the years and had supervised its financial affairs.

White House Books

Last August selection of the first definitive list of books assembled for the White House Library was completed, under the direction of Yale University Librarian James T. Babb. Included are 1,780 titles in almost 2,600 volumes.

The collection has 32 categories of subjects. A quick once-through perusal by the Editor produced a Bowdoin list. It is not all-inclusive, and it does not include books by former Bowdoin faculty members who went on to teach at other institutions. Many other volumes in the collection, which is housed in a room on the ground floor of the White House, have Bowdoin connections or significance. By the middle of August, when the list of titles was made public, only about 400 of the books were on the shelves of the library. The collection is designed as a working reference library for Presidents and their families, Cabinet officers, and White House advisers. The list will be reviewed and revised over the years.

The Bowdoin list follows:

- The Complete Works of Nathaniel Hawthorne* (13 volumes)
- Nathaniel Hawthorne — The American Notebooks
- Henry James — Hawthorne
- Randall Stewart — Nathaniel Hawthorne
- Mark Van Doren — Nathaniel Hawthorne
- Henry W. Longfellow — The Complete Poetical Works
- Newton Arvin — Longfellow: His Life and Work
- Harriet Beecher Stowe — Uncle Tom's Cabin
- Harriet Beecher Stowe — Oldtown Folks
- Robert F. Wilson — Crusader in Crinoline, the Life of Harriet Beecher Stowe
- Robert G. Albion (with the collaboration of Jennie Barnes Pope) — The Rise of New York Port, 1815-1860
- Arthur H. Cole '11 — Business Enterprise in Its Social Setting
- Paul H. Douglas '13 — Real Wages in the United States, 1890-1926
- Edward C. Kirkland — Industry Comes of Age: Business, Labor, and Public Policy, 1860-1897
- Edward C. Kirkland — Men, Cities, and Transportation. A Study in New England History, 1820-1900

The Alumni Council — 1914-1964

This is the Bowdoin Alumni Council's Fiftieth Year. June of 1964 marks the anniversary, to be exact, for in June of 1914 Dean Kenneth C. M. Sills '01 called to order the first meeting of the Alumni Council, which set to work revising the Constitution of the General Alumni Association — later to be known as the Bowdoin College Alumni Association.

During the intervening years the Alumni Council has been instrumental in establishing many important aspects of the College: the Alumni Fund, the Placement Bureau, a separate Admissions Office, the Office of the Alumni Secretary, an office for development and public relations, the publication of the BOWDOIN ALUMNUS and a quadrennial alumni directory, the Alumni House, and Campus Career Conferences for undergraduates. As the executive committee for the Alumni Association, it is the medium through which alumni can work effectively for the College.

The 1963-64 Alumni Council is comprised of the following members:

EXECUTIVE COMMITTEE

Arthur K. Orne '30, President
John E. Cartland '39, Vice President
Glenn R. McIntire '25, Treasurer
Peter C. Barnard '50, Secretary

Much of the Council's work is done by the ten standing and three special committees. They meet before each regular session of the Council, and the Council then discusses and acts upon the suggestions and recommendations which develop from committee reports. Every Bowdoin alumnus — who may vote for Council Members at Large on the annual alumni ballot and for Representative Members from his local club— should feel free to write the Officers of the Council or the Chairman of any Council Committee if he has suggestions or questions. Letters addressed to Council Members in care of the Alumni Secretary, Getchell House, Brunswick, will be delivered as marked.

President Arthur K. Orne '30 has appointed the following Council Committees for 1963-64:

Standing Committees:

Alumni Awards for Faculty and Staff — Chairman: Mr. Orne.
Messrs. Burr, Cartland, Davidson, Willey.
Alumni Clubs — Chairman: Mr. Wiley.
Messrs. Bassinette, Chapman, Grant, Griggs, Hastings, Manning, Sargent, Scoville, Toole.
Alumni Day — Chairman: Mr. Cary.
Messrs. Lawrence, Redman, Sanborn, Sullivan, Swift, Toole, Verrill.
Alumni House — Chairman: Mr. Zeitler.
Messrs. Barnard, Emerson, Lawrence, Milne, Peakes, Rule, Walker.
Alumni-Undergraduate Liaison — Chairman: Dr. Reed.
Messrs. Briggs, Davidson, Knight, Lawrence, Porter, Putnam, Stoddard.
Awards to Alumni — Chairman: Mr. Sanborn.
Messrs. Griggs, Hanson, Ireland, Lincoln, McIntire, Shepherd, A. R. Thayer, Wilson.
Commencement Activities — Chairman: Mr. Walker.
Messrs. Cary, Dupuis, Hanson, Mason, Ryan, Swanson, Zeitler.
Nominations — Chairman: Dr. Cartland.
Messrs. Barnard, Cross, Morse, Porter, Reed, Smith, Stevenson, Willey.

Prospective Students — Chairman: Mr. Davidson.
Messrs. Bechtel, Dwight, Mason, Milne, Phillips, Roux, Rule, Shepherd, Wiley.

Special Committees:

Aid in Development Plans for the College — Chairman: Mr. R. S. Thayer.
Messrs. Bechtel, Burr, Dupuis, French, Ireland, McIntire, Phillips, Porter, Young.
Continuing Education for Alumni — Chairman: Mr. Mason.
Messrs. Briggs, Emerson, Nevens, Reed, Snelling, Stevenson, A. R. Thayer.
Senior Center Program — Chairman: Mr. Knight.
Messrs. Alden, Grant, French, Nevens, Putnam, Stoddard, Thalheimer.

Books With A Bowdoin Flavor

NATHAN C. FULLER, Editor, The Down East Reader — Selections from the Magazine of Maine: J. B. Lippincott Company, 1962; pp. 256; $4.95.

"Crosby Clobbers Culture Center" is the classic in this most enjoyable collection of short subjects. The trip from One Squeak Harbor, Maine, "up" to Boston proves to be too much for Mr. Crosby. Beset at every turn by modern conveyances and impatient city people, Crosby plunges gallantly on to arrive at a hilarious impasse.

Originally appearing in Down East, a regional magazine, the selections have been collected as a representative sample of the things that make Maine what it is. The Editor has achieved a remarkable continuity by grouping the selections according to their general idea. People, places, and things are related with a simplicity and a common sense that are like a breath of fresh air in the torrid pace of today's life.

EDWARD G. HUDON, Freedom of Speech and Press in America: Washington, Public Affairs Press, Washington, D.C., 1963; pp. xiv and 224; $4.50.

During the multitude of controversies involving free speech in our time the advocates of a wide freedom and the defenders of those who have been suppressed for its exercise have customarily resorted to three books. Chronologically the first of these is Milton's Areopagitica (1644). Essentially Milton argued that truth had the inherent strength to overcome falsehood if only the competition between them was untrammelled and fair. For a later generation the eloquence of this statement is perhaps more convincing than its faith. In the nineteenth century John S. Mill's On Liberty (1859) rationally calculated the benefits accruing to society from freedom of expression. In our own time Zachariah Chafee, Jr. in Free Speech in the United States (1942) wrote a passionate personal testament in freedom's behalf. Though injustice of restrictions imposed in hot or cold wars called forth this book, Chafee went back to his predecessors. "The real value of freedom of speech is not to the minority that wants to talk, but to the majority that does not want to listen."

The manner and substance of Mr. Hudon's approach differs from that of his eminent predecessors. His book does not rely on winged words or philosophizing by aphorism. Instead he seeks to explain the polarity of rights between the state and its citizens. He does this through a long historical narrative which traces the concept that the individual had natural rights which government could not infringe and remain just. The generation of the American Revolution divested these natural rights and "a higher law" of what had largely been their religious sanction. Not only did they thus secularize the idea; they also used it as a premise for the Declaration of Independence and the Bill of Rights in the American Constitution.

After this historical preliminary Hudon shifts gears into a discussion, somewhat more technical, of the decisions, particularly during this century, in which the courts have sought to define the limits of freedom guaranteed by the First Amendment and the tests they have used. He traces the doctrines of "prior restraint," "use and abuse," "clear and present danger," "a balance between public security and private rights," and others. Incidentally the discussion reveals how wide an area of American thought and action these judicial decisions affect. Times of peace as well as of war are at issue when cases cover peaceful picketing, refusals by school children to salute the flag or by professors to tell Congressional committees who their associates in a "Communist cell" were; or the showing of a film of Lady Chatterly's Lover.

Critical for American democracy as these pronouncements are, it is a little hard to treat them with excitement or drama. Sometimes the reader, buffeted by contradictions, reservations, reversals, majority and minority opinions, cries out for the absolutes of Mr. Justice Black, who believes that it was the intention of the Founding Fathers without any "ands, ifs, and buts" "to withdraw from the government all power to act in certain areas." But Mr. Hudon keeps his patience better and without polemics. He believes there is no danger as long as "the movement of the prohibition of the First Amendment as to speech and press is regulated by the natural law criteria that surrounded its adoption." Perhaps Black and Hudon are really in agreement.

Hudon has written an impressive book; it is dispassionate and systematic. To an historian it may seem somewhat surprising that changes in judicial doctrine always coincide so exactly with changes in decades and that a shift in judicial opinions, however startling verbally, often makes so little change in practical results. "Incitement or advocacy," for instance, seems a sister under the skin to "clear and present danger." But then historians, perhaps fortunately, do not have to prepare briefs for the Supreme Court or write its decisions.

RICHARD V. McCANN, The Churches and Mental Health: No. 8 in the Monograph Series of the Joint Commission on Mental Illness and Health: Basic Books, Inc., New York, 1962; pp. x and 278; $6.00.

One of the most striking developments in American church life in the past three decades has been the increased emphasis on the counseling role of the clergy. Ministers, priests, and rabbis have been called upon increasingly to provide help for persons with domestic problems, mental and emotional disturbances, and other personal difficulties. Theological schools have in many instances added course work in pastoral psychology. Mental hospitals have employed chaplains, who receive special training for the purpose, on their staffs. Church-sponsored counseling clinics have begun to appear. The otherwise-separate disciplines of mental health services and organized religion have, particularly at the level of therapy, been brought closer together.

Richard V. McCann, Study Director and Research Consultant with the Massachusetts Rehabilitation Commission, has recently completed a 15-month study of the role of the churches in mental health services. The concern of this study, in Dr. McCann's own words, is "religious faith as a source of mental health or illness, and the relation between the total religious life and orientation and total health." Recognizing the limitations of the study he made, and of this volume which summarizes his findings, the author has further narrowed his scope to scrutinizing "the church as a potential mental health resource."

Such a study inevitably leaves many dangling definitions. "Religion," in its diversity, and "mental health science," in its infancy, are designations on which there cannot be any great semantic agreement. Dr. McCann faces this difficulty frankly and offers a variety of definitions to suit a multiplicity of tastes. Generalizations are unavoidable. The author succeeds very well, however, in maintaining an objective spirit in his use of data and ideas.

Part One consists of an extensive collection of data drawn from actual situations where churches and synagogues are operating in the realm of counseling. The reader will be introduced to current practice at many levels: where the parish clergyman works; where theological schools attempt to develop a curriculum in pastoral psychology; where mental hospital chaplains (of whom there are now only 400) cultivate their specialty; where Protestant, Catholic, and Jewish attitudes toward counseling vary; and where church-sponsored mental health clinics function.

Part Two, entitled "Perspectives on the Church and Mental Health," contains the results of surveys made to learn how the mental hospital patient looks at the chaplain, how two typical communities view religion and mental health, how the clergy sees itself in relation to mental health services, and how psychiatrists regard the clergy. The findings in these studies support the proposition, which is central to the author's work, that the churches can and must play a greater and better informed role in the field of mental health.

Part Three, which is a summary of the entire study, contains some revealing statistics. Every available poll taken in recent years indicates that no less than 95 percent of the American population professes some sort of religious devotion. Church affiliation is claimed by over 100 million, or 62 percent, of the population. There is a marked and dramatic rate of increase in religious interest. Clergymen in this country, of whom there are estimated to be 235,000, outnumber psychiatrists by 35 to 1. Mental and emotional disturbances very often involve religious factors, or prove to be amenable to religious therapy. It is apparent that religion and mental health are related, and that practitioners in both fields must be in communication. If the clergyman is to continue to function as a counselor, his training in the psychological disciplines must be improved, and his role must be clarified. In effect, a game is being played for which there are as yet no ground rules established. Dr. McCann's study could serve to promote a serious quest for principles to inform the practice.

The definitive study of the churches and mental health has yet to be written. When it is written, more time and money and personnel than Richard McCann had at his disposal will have to be provided. But until such an enterprise is launched, this book will serve very well indeed as an impartial and detailed introduction to a subject of increasing interest.

Authors

NATHAN C. FULLER '35 is currently Managing Editor of Down East, after holding the same position with Maine Coast Fisherman and Outdoor Maine.

EDWARD G. HUDON '37 is Assistant Librarian of the Supreme Court of the United States. He has the distinction of holding five earned degrees — Bachelor of Science, Bachelor of Laws, Master of Laws, Master of Science in Library Science, and Doctor of Juridical Science.

RICHARD V. MCCANN '37 is Director of Research for the Massachusetts Rehabilitation Commission. He has taught at Andover Newton Theological School, has been on the staff of the Harvard Psychological Clinic, and in his "spare" time has conducted a weekly television series called "Our Believing World."

Reviewers

THOMAS C. CHADWICK, a graduate of the Taft School and Yale, is on the staff of the College as a Field Director for the Capital Campaign, covering Maine, New Hampshire, and Vermont.

EDWARD C. KIRKLAND H'61, distinguished lecturer, even more distinguished historian, and most distinguished teacher, is Frank Munsey Professor of History, Emeritus. He makes his home in Thetford Center, Vermont.

WILLIAM B. DAVIS, a graduate of Wesleyan University and Andover Newton Theological School, is the pastor of the First Parish Church in Brunswick and an eloquent preacher who pulls no punches in his sermons.

Notes

The Third Branch of Government — Eight Cases in Constitutional Politics, edited by C. Herman Pritchett and Alan F. Westin, contains a study of "The Portal-to-Portal Pay Case" by Richard E. Morgan '59. The studies show "how the judicial process relates to political life in America" by looking at representative cases "in depth." In examining Anderson v. Mt. Clemens Pottery Co., Richard Morgan goes from the genesis of the problem in the drafting of the FLSA in 1938 through the Portal-to-Portal Act of 1947 and finally to the refusal of the Supreme Court to consider challenges to its constitutionality. The book was published last spring as a Harbrace Casebook in Political Science by Harcourt, Brace, and World, Inc.

Richard C. Bechtel '36 is the author of an article entitled "Electronic Billing at Bell Telephone," which appeared in the August, 1963, NAA Bulletin, published by the National Association of Accountants. Mr. Bechtel has recently been appointed Assistant Vice President for Long Range Planning with the Bell Telephone Company of Pennsylvania.

Tragedy in Dedham by Francis Russell was published in England last July and in France in October. His next book, The Great Interlude, will be published in April of 1964 by McGraw-Hill. Mr. Russell is currently working on a biography of Warren G. Harding for McGraw-Hill and a book on the various president-makers.

Leonard N. Gilley '51 is the author of a poem about Maine that appeared in the October 19 New York Times.

Edward G. Hudon '37 is the author of an article entitled "Speech, Press, and the Supreme Court," which appeared in the September, 1963, issue of National Publisher. The article is a summary of important cases affecting freedom of speech and freedom of the press during the 1962-63 term of the Supreme Court.

James J. Wadsworth H'61 is the author of "The Most Urgent Step Toward Peace," an article that appeared in Redbook Magazine for August, 1963.

Paul J. Zdanowicz '50 is the author of an article entitled "The Meredith G. Williams Middle School," published in the Winter, 1962, issue of Educational Horizons.

Francis P. Bishop, Jr. '50 is the author of "For Management the Pendulum Has Swung to the Offensive," an article that appeared in the July-August, 1963, issue of Personnel magazine.

George H. Davis '60 served as Assistant Chief Historian for the recently-published volume Who Was Who in America — 1603-1898.

A Course in the French Language for Young Franco-Americans by Gerard J. Brault has recently been published. Designed for classroom use, the volume contains teaching materials developed at Bowdoin during Summer Institutes for Secondary School Teachers of French in 1961 and 1962, as well as data developed since that time. Both the Institutes and this publication were supported by the United States Office of Education through the Languages and Studies Program under the National Defense Education Act.

Dr. Brault was a member of the Bowdoin faculty from 1957 to 1961. He is now Vice Dean of the Graduate School of Arts and Sciences at the University of Pennsylvania.

Robert E. Knowlton '60 and Professor James M. Moulton of the Biology Department are the authors of an article entitled "Sound Production in the Snapping Shrimps Alpheus (Orangon) and Synalpheus," which appeared in Volume 125, Number 2, of The Biological Bulletin, the journal of the Marine Biological Laboratory at Woods Hole, Mass.

Alumni Clubs

AROOSTOOK

The Aroostook Bowdoin Club held its fall meeting on Friday, November 8, at the Northeastland Hotel in Presque Isle, where more than thirty alumni and wives gathered for a six o'clock social hour and seven o'clock dinner.

The following officers were elected for 1963-64: Philip A. Christie '36, President; Leland O. Ludwig, III '52, Secretary-Treasurer; and Albert P. Putnam '36, Council Member.

Professor Athern P. Daggett '25 was the principal speaker. "After the social hour and dinner," President Christie reports, "Professor Daggett did a really fine job for us. He even carried out for a bit the humorous theme 'Government and the State Series' that I tossed into his lap. 'Is Bowdoin the Same Today?' was his actual topic, with particular reference to answering the question 'Could I get into Bowdoin today?' which we oldsters are constantly asking each other."

BOSTON

The Bowdoin Club of Boston is beginning its fourth year of successful monthly luncheons. The group meets regularly, from October through May, at 12:30 p.m. on the second Tuesday of each month at the Union Oyster House, 41 Union Street, Boston. Reservations and further details may be had from Club Secretary Robert Delaney '55, c/o Goldman, Sachs, and Company, 75 Federal Street, Boston (LIberty 2-5430).

Last season concluded with these speakers: Leonard Pierce, Jr. '38, President of the Brown Company, on February 12; Basketball Coach Ray Bicknell on March 12; John Balfour '29, Vice President of the New England Merchants National Bank, on April 9; and Professor Lawrence Hall '36 (English) on May 14. The first luncheon speakers this fall were Professor Herbert Brown H'63 (English) in October and Dean Robert Morse '43 of Brown University in November. Football Coach Nels Corey '39 will speak on December 10 and Dr. Leonard Cronkhite '41 of the Children's Hospital Medical Center on January 14.

The Boston Club began another full season with a Tufts Game Rally meeting on Friday evening, September 27, at the International House in the Sheraton Building. Dr. Dan Hanley '39, College Physician, was toastmaster for the program that followed the social hour and dinner. Introduced by Club President John Morrell '52, Dan, in turn, introduced Director of Athletics Mal Morrell '24, who described in detail the plans now being completed for improved and expanded athletic facilities at Bowdoin, and Coaches Ray Bicknell and Charlie Butt, each of whom spoke briefly. The next day many Boston-area alumni and their families gathered at the Tufts Oval in Medford for a pre-game picnic. (Their enthusiasm was rewarded by a Bowdoin victory, 28 to 6!)

The Boston Club will hold its Annual Dinner and Ladies' Night on Friday evening, March 20, and it will sponsor its annual "Bowdoin Night at the Pops" Concert at Symphony Hall at 8:30 p.m. on Thursday, May 14.

BOWDOIN TEACHERS'

On Thursday evening, October 3, approximately thirty-five Bowdoin educators and guests gathered in the Skyline Room at Steckino's Restaurant in Lewiston for a meeting held in conjunction with the annual convention of the Maine Teachers' Association.

Alumni Secretary Pete Barnard '50 presided and welcomed all present, including Walt Moulton '58, Pat Quinby '23, Sam Ladd '29, Roy LaCasce '44, Athern Daggett '25, and Hendrick Gideonse of the Bowdoin Faculty. He reported that the Bowdoin Teachers' Club list now includes more than ten per cent of the 8,500 living Bowdoin men. He also outlined briefly some forthcoming alumni events at the College.

The principal speaker was Professor Dodge Fernald, Chairman of the Psychology Department and President-Elect of the Maine Psychological Association. He spoke informally about a variety of topics, including Professor Norman Munn and his family (who are now living in Australia), the research projects that have been instituted for seniors majoring in psychology, the recent grant given to Professor Fuchs, and the Psychology Department's studies with flatworms and rats. He also spoke of problems in mental health and mental retardation, social case work, Bowdoin's new tie-in with a local psychiatric setting, and his summer institute experiences at Beloit College in Wisconsin.

There followed a series of questions and answers, dealing with student counseling, psychiatric problems, and Russian psychology. Professor Fernald left the group satisfied with a good Bowdoin meeting.

The Teachers' Club will meet at the College on Saturday, April 25. Bowdoin educators are asked to save the day and to plan to attend. Reservations for meals and overnight accommodations may be made with Alumni Secretary Pete Barnard, who will be happy to furnish further information about the program.

CHICAGO

The Bowdoin Club of Chicago met on Thursday, May 16, at the Chicago Yacht Club. Professor Lawrence Hall '36 of the English Department was the special guest.

The Club met again at the same place on Thursday, September 12. Tony Antolini '63, recently graduated and on his way to the West Coast to begin graduate studies at Stanford, was the speaker. Secretary Harold Fish '25 reports, "Tony made his initial reputation singing for us with the Glee Club a year ago last spring, but we were totally unprepared for his professionally-delivered, personal travelogue. His illustrated account of Russian life, based on his 1962 summer trip to Russia, as seen through youthful eyes, was objective and a refreshing experience for our group.

"The question period that followed further demonstrated that Tony is a fine 'platform' speaker, as well as a sharp analyzer of the Russian scene."

Announcement was made of plans for an October 30 meeting with the members of the Bowdoin Admissions staff and alumni from other Midwest Bowdoin centers, who were invited to an admissions conference in Chicago on October 31.

KENNEBEC VALLEY

The new Roosevelt Motel in Waterville was the site of the fall meeting of the Kennebec Valley Bowdoin Club on Wednesday evening, October 23, when alumni gathered there for a social hour and dinner.

President Phil Bird '51 presided at the after-dinner program. He introduced Alumni Secretary Pete Barnard '50, who gave brief highlights of campus news and reported forthcoming alumni events, and Dr. Laurence Brown, Visiting Lecturer in Psychology, who presented some interesting observations on America, Bowdoin, and psychology.

Area Chairman Adrian Asherman '52 announced that pledges for the Capital Campaign are being actively solicited.

Football Coach Nels Corey '39, the principal speaker, reviewed the probable starting line-up for the Colby game three days later, spoke of Bowdoin's prospects for the remainder of the season, and showed the films of the Tufts game, which Bowdoin won 28-6.

LOS ANGELES

On Sunday, August 11, the Los Angeles Bowdoin Club sponsored a successful and unusually interesting meeting. Billed as "The Annual Bowdoin Lobster Boil" in a notice dated July 24 and signed by Head Lobster Marv Kaitz '54 (who also doubles as the Club's Secretary), the meeting attracted a record crowd of Bowdoin men and their families and friends for an afternoon and evening of recreation, relaxation, and fun at Paradise Cove, five miles north of Malibu. The Club's special guest was Karl Galinsky '63, recent honor graduate and Bowdoin Plan student from Germany, who was traveling about the country before beginning graduate studies at Princeton in September.

Secretary Kaitz reports, "The Lobster Boil was a huge success. About 120 Bowdoin people, including alumni, their families, and guests, had a great time eating Maine lobster, which some claimed was the best they have had since leaving Maine.

Los Angeles "Lobster Boil"

"In addition to guest Karl Galinsky '63, the meeting attracted Spencer Hodges '64, who worked in Los Angeles during the summer, and Michael Bennett '67, about to begin his freshman year in Brunswick. Bill Spinney '13, Area Chairman for the Capital Campaign, was the senior alumnus present. Several alumni drove more than 75 miles to attend the meeting."

Marv also reports, "A lobster raffle and beer donations made the Lobster Boil a financial success. We broke even and made $25 for the Club! The raffle was won by Jim Bassett '34, who took home the prize: two lobsters."

Of the same meeting Karl Galinsky wrote, "The Lobster Boil was quite successful (scores of people congregating on the beach), and the relaxed and informal atmosphere was just ideal for making the rounds and talking to as many fellow alumni as possible. The group is extremely well organized and justifiably proud of itself. Imagine 120 turning out — and in the middle of the vacation season! They were all overwhelmingly friendly to me, and it was one of the most delightful Sunday afternoons and evenings I've had for a long time."

MINNESOTA

Following two days of admissions visits to schools in the Minneapolis area, Associate Director of Admissions Bob Mellow and Assistant Director Walt Moulton '58 represented the College at the fall meeting of the Bowdoin Club of Minnesota. The meeting was held at the home of Bill Nightingale '51 on Tuesday evening, October 29, and included a six o'clock social hour followed by a catered supper.

Secretary Barney Barton '50 reports, "Bob and Walt visited thirteen schools in the Minneapolis area and interviewed thirty-four prospective admissions candidates. They feel certain that a good percentage of them will have Bowdoin as their first choice when they apply for college in the months ahead.

"John Charlton '44, Area Chairman for the Capital Campaign, reported receiving pledges totaling $3,100 toward the $9,000 goal for the area. He expressed confidence that the goal will be met.

"The meeting concluded with a showing of the films of the Bowdoin-Wesleyan game, which Bowdoin won 32-0. For many alumni present, it was the first game they had seen since leaving college, and it was a real hit."

Present at the meeting were Nate Cobb '26, Paul Ivory '37, Ed Simonds '43, John Cummins '48, and Colby Thresher '59, as well as the host, the Secretary, the Area Chairman, and the two guests from Brunswick.

The Club is completing plans for a Christmas-week meeting, when Minnesota alumni will entertain local admissions prospects.

NEW HAMPSHIRE

Despite a terrible rainstorm, about twenty-five alumni and guests gathered at the New Hampshire Highway Motel in Concord for a social hour and dinner on Thursday, November 7.

President Bert Moore '48 introduced Treasurer Dutch Morse '42, who reported the Club solvent. He also introduced two guests from the College, Capital Campaign Field Director Tom Chadwick and Alumni Secretary Pete Barnard '50.

Council Member Norm Milne '54 gave the Club a thorough review of the highlights of the fall meeting of the Alumni Council, which he had attended in Brunswick the preceding weekend. President Moore appointed a Nominating Committee, to report at the spring meeting; Zeke Martin '22, Chairman, and Fat Hill '23, Don Bryant '37, and Dick Steer '37. He also appointed Al Nicholson '50 and Skip Howard '54 as a two-man committee to complete arrangements for the spring meeting.

Dutch Morse '42 reported that, with $15,000 in unrestricted money now in from the New Hampshire area, the College qualifies for and will receive matching funds from the Spaulding-Potter Trust to provide scholarships at Bowdoin for boys from New Hampshire.

Professor William Whiteside, Director of the Senior Center, was the principal speaker. He described the special program that is being instituted for this year's seniors, in anticipation of the opening of the Center next fall. This includes special dinner meetings, a new graduate school study center, and informal meetings with recent graduates who will be invited back to Brunswick to talk about their graduate school and professional experiences.

Professor Whiteside reported that Bowdoin's plans for the Senior Center have attracted much favorable attention and read excerpts from a number of letters to illustrate his point. He also spoke of an impending report to the Faculty about specific Senior Seminar topics being planned by various departments at the College. The meeting ended with an interesting and extended period of questions and answers.

PITTSBURGH

Richard G. Davis '57, the new Secretary-Treasurer of the Bowdoin Club of Pittsburgh, reports a meeting of his group at 4 p.m. on Friday, September 13, at the Harvard-Yale-Princeton Club. Present were Fred Willey '17, Taylor Iams '59, Phil Boggs '56, Les Leonetti '57, Harold Ridlon '30, Ed Campbell '36, Phil Huss '50, Carl Cooper '49, Bob Colton '44, John Succop '45, Fritz Kleibacker '31, and the Secretary.

"President Succop called the meeting to order," Dick writes, "and conducted the election of officers. John Succop '45 was re-elected President, and Fred Willey '17 was re-elected Alumni Council Member. Dick Davis '57 was elected Secretary-Treasurer.

"Fred Willey, Area Chairman for the Capital Campaign, then discussed and emphasized the importance to Bowdoin of the remarkable campaign that is being carried on throughout the country. Fred gave us all a wonderful understanding of the purposes behind the Campaign and also outlined the provisions of the Ford Foundation matching grant.

"Our next meeting will be a dinner on Wednesday, October 9, when Admissions Director Bill Shaw '36 will be in Pittsburgh to interview prospective admissions candidates."

Alumni wishing to contact the Pittsburgh Club Secretary may write him at 6830 Meade Street, Pittsburgh 8.

PORTLAND

The Bowdoin Club of Portland is completing its fifth year of successful monthly luncheons. The following members of the faculty and staff have represented the College at recent luncheon meetings: Professor Robert Beckwith (Music) on March 6; Dean of Students LeRoy Greason on April 3; Development Officer Warren Ring on May 1; ALUMNI Editor Robert Cross '45 on June 5; Assistant to the President Philip Wilder '23 on July 3; Alumni Secretary Peter Barnard '50 on August 7; Assistant Director of Admissions Walter Moulton '58 on September 4; Professor Dodge Fernald (Psychology) on October 2; and Basketball Coach Ray Bicknell on November 6.

The group meets at noon on the first Wednesday of each month at the Cumberland Club. To make reservations or obtain information, alumni should contact Luncheon Chairman Albert Gibbons, Jr. '58, c/o F. S. Moseley, 465 Congress Street, Portland.

The luncheon speakers for the coming months are Professor William Geoghegan (Religion) on December 4; Professor William Shipman (Economics) on January 8; and Professor Thomas Cornell (Art) on February 5.

The Portland Club will hold two meetings at the College this winter. On Tuesday, January 14, it will entertain Portland-area subfreshmen, and on Saturday, February 8, it will sponsor a pre-hockey-game social hour and spaghetti dinner for alumni and wives at the Alumni House. The Annual Dinner and Ladies' Night will be held on Saturday evening, April 18, at the Eastland Motor Hotel in Portland. President Coles will be the principal speaker.

ST. LOUIS

Convener Steve Rule '58 reports an interesting meeting on Thursday evening, September 13, with recent graduate Tony Antolini '63, who stopped on his way across country to begin graduate studies at Stanford. "The meeting was held in the Pine Room at Busch's Grove Restaurant in suburban Ladue. Tony Antolini showed slides and presented a very interesting and well-prepared talk on his trip to Russia during the summer of 1962.

"The meeting began with a 6:15 social hour, followed by dinner at 7:45. Present were Bob and Dot Blake '47, Herman Dreer '10 and his daughter Mrs. Davis, Dave Fischer '60, Jack and Carolyn Goldman '37, the Ben Greelys '53, the Ray Littles '53, the Wally Philoons '45, Edgar and Nora Taylor '20, Don and Eloise Warren '26 and their two houseguests, Paul Laidley '05, Steve and Ann Rule '58, the Ed Earlys '49, and one undergraduate, Dave Lander '66. Special guests were Bishop George Cadigan of the Episcopal Diocese of Missouri (formerly Rector at St. Paul's Church in Brunswick), Mrs. Cadigan, and their son Rufus."

Plans are underway for a spring meeting on Wednesday evening, March 18, when Coach Ray Bicknell, who led Bowdoin's basketball team to its first State Series title last season, will be the guest of honor.

B. A. Sinkinson, died on September 24.

1903 Secretary, Clement F. Robinson
P. O. Box 438
Brunswick

After being laid up for eight weeks by a severe attack of angina pectoris, Dan Munro reports that he feels better now than he has for some time.
Dan flew to Boston from Texas with Mrs. Munro late in October. While she remained in Boston, he drove on to Brunswick to attend the Alumni Fund Campus Conference on November 1 and 2.
Despite the rain, he enjoyed himself thoroughly.

1904 Secretary, Wallace M. Powers
37-28 80th Street
Jackson Heights 72, N. Y.

Classmates and friends extend their sympathy to Class Secretary Jake Powers, whose sister, Mrs.
Doris T. Thomas of Rumford, died on October 11.

1906 Secretary, Fred E. Smith
9 Oak Avenue
Norway

David Porter attended Alumni Day on October 26, accompanied by his son, Bob '41. He continues to make his home in England, where his address is Frilford Heath, Abingdon, Berkshire, but he gets to the United States each year for a visit.

1907 Secretary, John W. Leydon
3120 West Penn Street
Philadelphia 29, Pa.

Dorothy and Ben Briggs celebrated their 50th wedding anniversary on September 6 at Westport Harbor, Mass., their summer home. They were the guests of honor at a surprise party attended by some 40 people.

The Briggses are spending the winter in Naples, Fla., where their address is R.R. 2, Box 1703.

Roscoe Hupper has been elected a Trustee Emeritus of Hebron Academy. A member of the Board since 1935, he was formerly its President.

In May Bill Linnell was replaced as President of the Portland Gas Light Company, after holding that position for 37 years. He continues to be a Director and General Counsel of the firm.

On July 30 Wilbert Snow read and commented on American poetry at Bowdoin's Oakes Center at Bar Harbor.

1908 Secretary, Christopher Toole
4884 MacArthur Boulevard #7
Washington, D. C. 20007

On October 8 President Coles conducted a memorial service in the Bowdoin Chapel for Dr. Carl Robinson, whom he described as "a fine example of those men who live active undergraduate lives at Bowdoin, taking what the College has to offer in full degree and giving of themselves and their energy to the College and the student community."

Mr. and Mrs. Karl Scates accompanied their son, John '49, and his wife on a trip through Europe early in the fall. John was on a business trip as head of the coffee operation of Anderson, Clayton, and Company's Lima, Peru, branch. They flew from New York to London, where they spent ten days, followed by visits to France, Belgium, Holland, Germany, Austria, Switzerland, and Italy.

1909 Acting Secretary, Jasper J. Stahl
Waldoboro

Tom Ginn has received an award from the American Personnel and Guidance Association, "for his dedicated service in the conduct of the 50th annual convention, held April 7-11 in Boston."

Ernest Pottle has moved to 51 Kellogg Drive, Wilton, Conn.

On October 12 our classmate Bud Rich was buried in the Evergreen Cemetery at Portland, after having passed his 77th birthday a fortnight prior to his death. Apart from many distinctions, honors, and responsibilities which had over the years fallen to his lot in his native city, he will be best remembered by his Bowdoin classmates from his long and generous association with the College. For 25 years he had served us as Class Agent and Secretary, and in this period rarely did he miss a Commencement or any other function at the College, where he served as the rallying point for his classmates.

As a man Bud was gentle, patient, understanding, friendly, full of charity and good will. As Judge Goodspeed has put it, "He was one of nature's noblemen, a true and loyal friend." Letters received from his classmates provide near-unanimous testimony of their affection, respect, and sorrow at his loss.

Alumnus Editor Robert Cross '45 has set November 1 as the deadline beyond which no material received can appear in the magazine. Hence there is little more than space for a confession that the response of the Class to our letter of October 9 has been amazing. In fact, it led Jake Stahl to say that he had experienced no reaction comparable to it since reading more than 50 years ago Henrik Ibsen's drama When We Dead Awaken. In fact, the climate in the 1909 Bull Pen is that of life, not death. In the January number of the Alumnus we shall offer our expurgated records of 1909 — in other words "All the news that's fit to print."

In the meantime we need to hear from a few more classmates, including the long-lost souls of Maurice Blair, Nick Carter, Jack Crowley, Dan Drummond, Art Hughes, L. Lombard, Bill Sparks, et alii.

Bob Pennell
Jake Stahl

1912 Secretary, William A. MacCormick
114 Atlantic Avenue
Boothbay Harbor

Elden Barbour has moved to Brunswick, where his address is Apartment N-4, Brunswick Apartments.

Jack Hurley's widow, Alice, has given to the Alumni Office at the College a painting of the Bowdoin Polar Bear which he did. It hangs in the first-floor hallway at Getchell House at 5 Bath Street, and members of the Class are invited to see it there.

Seward Marsh represented the College on October 25 at the dedication ceremonies for a new home economics and science building at Farmington State Teachers College in Maine.

Two articles in the Portland Press Herald early this fall described Squanto Wilson's interest in bird dogs. One of them said, "When a man takes on Hungarian Partridge when he is 75 years old and invests several hundred dollars in a bird dog, he has a lot of enthusiasm left. That is George (Squanto) Wilson, former major league baseball player, retired store operator, and a lover of all sports, especially hunting."

R.F.D. 2
Farmington

Maine Governor John Reed has appointed Sumner Pike Chairman of a 14-man committee to keep him advised concerning developments in the Passamaquoddy-St. John River power projects.

1914 Secretary, Alfred E. Gray
Francestown, N. H.

On October 25 Sam Chase represented Bowdoin at the inauguration of Robert I. White as President of Kent State University in Ohio.

House, 23 Third Street South, St. Petersburg, Fla.

1915 Secretary, Harold E. Verrill
Ocean House Road
Cape Elizabeth

On July 1 George Bacon retired from the Fordham University Law School faculty and is now Cameron Professor of Law Emeritus.

In connection with his retirement George was honored at a number of special gatherings. The Student Bar Association presented a plaque to him at the Tavern on the Green in Central Park. At a dinner on the campus Fordham's President presented to him an engraved sterling silver tray inscribed, "Presented by the faculty of the school of law to Professor George W. Bacon, with the admiration and affection of his colleagues on his retirement, May 8, 1963." He was also a guest of honor at the Class of 1932's reunion, the Class of 1953's reunion, and a meeting of the Westchester-Putnam Counties chapter of the Law Alumni Association.

Although retired from his teaching, George is Law Editor of the Law Digest Volume of the Martindale-Hubbell Legal Directory.

San Francisco's first "halfway house" for the rehabilitation of just-released prisoners is expected to be operating before the end of the year. It will be named for Spike MacCormick, Professor Emeritus of Criminology at the University of California in Berkeley. MacCormick House will probably accommodate between 25 and 30 ex-convicts.

1916 Secretary, Edward C. Hawes
180 High Street
Portland, Maine

John Baxter has been elected Chairman of the Board of the Snow Flake Canning Company, of which he had been President since 1939.

The Snow Flake Canning Company is one of two pioneering Maine food processing firms which received an industrial achievement award for 1963 from the Maine State Chamber of Commerce at its annual dinner on October 7 in Caribou. Snow Flake was selected in recognition of its pioneering efforts in the development of quick frozen French fried potatoes and the continuing contributions it has made to the economy of Maine.

Classmates and friends extend their sympathy to Ralph Glidden, whose sister, Mrs. Clara B. Kimball, died on October 16.

Class Secretary Ted Hawes is a Trustee of North Yarmouth Academy, which is engaged in a fund-raising campaign for $150,000.

In September Larry Irving wrote from College, Alaska, "This past year has been very busy but interesting as we organized our Laboratory of Zoophysiology, which with a present staff of 25 has developed faster than I anticipated. In addition, I am serving as Acting Director of the University's Institute of Arctic Biology, which involves planning and organization of a facility for which the electorate approved by a large majority a bond issue of $3,500,000. It is not always recognized that capital investments in research facilities turn out to involve in the vicinity of half the capital investment for annual operating expenses. Since this Institute is only a small part of the new developments for education in Alaska, its small population of taxpayers is taking on a great responsibility.

"Florence and I are building a home that we expect to enter in seven or eight weeks. I hope that permanent appointment of a Director of the Institute will soon allow me to concentrate again upon the research that most interests me."

Mr. and Mrs. Ray Pease have built a new home in Largo, Fla., and have moved there from South Portland.

1917 Secretary, Noel C. Little
60 Federal Street
Brunswick

Clarence Crosby has been elected a Vice President of the Maine Bar Association.

1918 Secretary, Lloyd O. Coulter
Nottingham Square Road
Epping, N. H.

On October 1 Shirley Gray relinquished his active resident position as Administrative Vice President and General Manager of Insulation Manufacturers Corporation in Chicago, one of the country's leading distribution companies dealing in electrical insulation products. He continues to serve as a consultant to IMC.

The reason for Shirley's shift of status was to enable him to concentrate more of his efforts on the management of the IMC parent company, The Macallen Company, Inc., of Newmarket, N. H., and Inmanco, Inc., in Chicago, another Macallen subsidiary.

The most recent of many achievement awards made to Shirley is the Marketer's Award, given at the 5th Electrical Insulation Conference earlier this year. He received the award for his application of modern marketing techniques and numerous other contributions to the electrical insulation industry.

1919 Secretary, Donald S. Higgins
78 Royal Road
Bangor

George Casey's daughter, Ellen, a student at the University of Pennsylvania, attended the 16th annual U. S. National Student Association Congress at Bloomington, Ind., in August.

On October 21 Principal Dan Mahoney's South Portland High School had an eight-pound chunk of ledge come hurtling through a skylight in a corridor. Another rock was sent through a window in the school's boiler room. It was all part of a construction program that is providing drainage and rough grading for the school's athletic fields.

1920 Secretary, Sanford B. Cousins
23 McKean Street
Brunswick

Class Secretary Sandy Cousins has been elected to the Board of Trustees of the Regional Memorial Hospital in Brunswick.

Emerson Zeitler was confined to bed for several weeks this fall, but he is making good progress. He expects to drop a few of his many time-consuming outside activities.

1921 Secretary, Norman W. Haines
One State Street
Boston 9, Mass.

Classmates and friends extend their sympathy to Harold Beach, whose stepmother, Mrs. Louetta S. Beach, died on November 9.

Don Clifford has been re-elected to a second term as President of St. Andrew's Golf Club, Hastings-on-Hudson, N. Y. The oldest golf club in the United States, it celebrated its 75th anniversary in November with a dinner at the Waldorf in New York City, at which Don was the toastmaster.

Harry Lyseth is a Trustee of North Yarmouth Academy, which is engaged in a fund-raising campaign for $150,000.

Classmates and friends extend their sympathy to Jock St. Clair, whose father, George L. St. Clair, died this fall.

Medical School

1895 Dr. Wallace Webber of Lewiston observed his 90th birthday on August 14. An account about his long career in the August 17th Lewiston Sun said, in part, "Dr. Webber still sees some of his long-time patients in his office and outside. Of great credit to him is his son, Wedgwood, who is a fine doctor in his own right practicing in Lewiston.

"Always interested in woodworking, Wallace Webber has made many items of furniture, including a mahogany bed in which he sleeps. He built a 27-foot cabin cruiser launched in Moosehead Lake in 1935, and a desk duplicating George Washington's, that stands in his office.

"In 1920 Dr. and Mrs. Webber and their children made what was then a very unusual trip, going to California and back with a camping trailer behind the car. They spent the months of July and August traveling, with an average of 120 miles a day over the unpaved roads in an open car."

1911 Dr. Carl Stevens has practiced medicine in Belfast for 50 years now. He was the subject of a feature article in the Bangor News for September 10. Dr. Stevens gave up surgery in 1950, but he still maintains an active medical practice.

In Memory

WALDO THOMAS MERRILL '99

Waldo T. (Tom) Merrill, a pioneer rancher in the eastern part of Montana, died on September 15, 1963, in Sidney, Montana, at the age of 87. Born on September 19, 1875, in Newport, he prepared for college at Maine Central Institute in Pittsfield and following his graduation became a buyer with a wool business in Boston. He traveled to the West to buy carload clips for this firm and came to know most of the sheepmen and many of the cattlemen in Montana and Wyoming. After a brief period in western Montana the Merrills moved to Minneapolis, Minn., and he was engaged in sheep feeding at New Brighton, Minn. In 1908 he returned to Montana, where he operated and later bought from his father a ranch in Fox Creek, which he quickly converted from sheep to cattle. In 1927 the Merrills retired from the ranch and moved to Sidney, Mont. In 1957 they moved to Fairview, Mont., to live with their daughter. Mrs. Merrill died about three weeks before her husband.

Mr. Merrill was a Mason, a Past President of the Sidney Kiwanis Club, and a member of the Sidney City Council, the Cemetery Board, and the Richland Homes Board of Directors. During World War II he served on the Selective Service Board in his county. He is survived by a son, Waldo T. Merrill, Jr. of Sidney; a daughter, Mrs. Ruth M. Alling of Fairview; six grandchildren; and fifteen great grandchildren. His fraternity was Theta Delta Chi.

He was a member of the New York Pathological Society, the Society of Experimental Biology and Medicine, the New York Psychoanalytical Society, and the Society for the Advancement of Science. A Mason, he is survived by his wife, Mrs. Muriel Coulson Youland, whom he married on June 23, 1919, in Richmond Hill, N. Y.; three daughters, Mrs. Mary Safford of Wantagh, L. I., N. Y., Mrs. Susan Sachs, also of Wantagh, and Miss Jane Youland of Boulder, Colo.; and two grandchildren. His fraternity was Delta Upsilon.

JAY LYMAN GRAY '08

J. Lyman Gray, a retired attorney, died on September 5, 1963, in Albany, Ga. Born on September 16, 1885, in Lubec, he prepared for college at Hebron Academy and was graduated from Bowdoin cum laude. During the next three years he studied at George Washington University Law School and was an assistant at the U.S. Library of Congress. He received his LL.B. degree in 1911 and practiced law in Westfield, Mass., and Springfield, Mass., for many years before retiring in 1956 and moving to Albany, where he was news director for a radio station.

Mr. Gray is survived by his wife, Mrs. Clara Hocker Gray; a son, James G. Gray of Albany, Ga.; and three grandchildren. He was a member of Zeta Psi Fraternity.

IRVING LOCKHART RICH '09

Irving L. Rich, Vice President of Jones and Rich, Inc., in Portland, died at Mercy Hospital in that city on October 9, 1963. Born on September 15, 1886, in Portland, he prepared for college at Portland High School and following his graduation became associated with his father in the funeral home of S.S. Rich and Son, which was established by his great-grandfather in 1838 and which later became Jones and Rich. He was for many years President and a Director of the Casco Homestead Savings and Loan Association and was also a Past President of the Maine Savings and Loan League, the Maine Charitable Mechanics Association, and the Maine Funeral Directors Association. A charter member and the first Secretary of the Portland Kiwanis Club, he was a Mason for more than 50 years.

Mr. Rich had been Class Agent in the Alumni Fund for 1909 since 1938. Under his leadership in the 1958-59 Fund, the Class won the Class of 1916 Bowl for improvement. He was also 1909's Class Secretary for many years. Surviving are his wife, Mrs. Mildred

Lang Rich, whom he married in Portland on June 9, 1914; a daughter, Mrs. Elizabeth C. Jones of Cape Elizabeth; and three grandchildren. He was a member of Alpha Delta Phi Fraternity.

KENNETH GEORGE STONE '17

Kenneth G. Stone, who for many years was General Manager at the Dana Warp Mills in Westbrook, died on October 1, 1963, in Portland after a brief illness. Born on July 22, 1895, in Newburgh, N.Y., he prepared for college at Wellesley (Mass.) High School and was graduated from Bowdoin summa cum laude. During World War I he served as a second lieutenant in the Army, and in 1919 he joined the Dana Warp Mills, with which he remained until his retirement in 1958. He was, successively, General Manager, Superintendent, and President of the company. A director of the New England Council and the Westbrook Community Association, he also served as a member of the Advisory Committee of the State Department of Vocational Education.

Mr. Stone was a Mason and a member of the American Legion and was active in the Westbrook Congregational Church. He served on the Westbrook City Council in 1921, 1922, 1935, and 1936 and for some years was a Director of the Cumberland County Tuberculosis Association and a Trustee of the Walker Memorial Library. During World War II he served on the rationing board in Westbrook and was Treasurer of the Westbrook Victory Chest from 1942 to 1946. Active in American Red Cross and other fund raising efforts, he was a member of the Decemvir Club. Surviving are his wife, Mrs. Helena Howe Stone, whom he married in Wellesley, Mass., on September 14, 1918; three sons, Kenneth G. Stone, Jr. '42, David E. Stone of Troy, N.Y., and Gregory H. Stone '50; one granddaughter; and two sisters, Mrs. Robert Beal of Needham, Mass., and Miss Lois Stone of Wellesley, Mass. He was a member of Theta Delta Chi and Phi Beta Kappa Fraternities.

ELLSWORTH WRIGHT HOLBROOK '19

Ellsworth W. Holbrook, proprietor of the Maine Beautiful Motel in Wiscasset, died on June 25, 1963, in Portland. Born on March 5, 1897, in Wiscasset, he prepared for college at Lincoln Academy in Damariscotta and served in the Army from 1918 until 1921. After his graduation from Bowdoin, he was a musician in Portland and worked for the Maine Central Railroad for some years.

A member of the Wiscasset Fire Society, he is survived by his wife, Mrs. Dorothy Huggan Holbrook, whom he married on September 10, 1923, in Bath; a son, Norman D. Holbrook of Wiscasset; two daughters, Miss Dorothy M. Holbrook of Wiscasset and Mrs. Marjorie W. Wentworth of West Palm Beach, Fla.; two sisters, Mrs. Charles Plumstead and Miss Mildred Holbrook, both of Wiscasset; and five grandchildren. He was a member of Zeta Psi Fraternity.

DUNCAN SCARBOROUGH '19

Duncan Scarborough, who had retired from the Prudential Insurance Company in August of 1961, died on September 19, 1963, at the Orange Memorial Hospital in New Jersey. Born on July 10, 1896, in Portland, he prepared for college at Dedham (Mass.) High School and after his graduation from Bowdoin was associated successively with the Boston Music Company, the American Library Bureau, and the New York Telephone Company. He joined the Prudential Insurance Company in 1923 and was with its home office in Newark, N. J., for 38 years. An excellent musician, he was for many years a church organist, choir director, and accompanist for concert artists in northern New Jersey. He also composed a number of semi-classical songs.

A veteran of Navy service in World War I, Mr. Scarborough was a member of the Organists' Guild of New Jersey. He is survived by a daughter, Mrs. Elizabeth Garrity of Chatham, N. J.; a sister, Mrs. Huldah Walsh of Red Hook, N. Y.; and two grandchildren. His fraternity was Delta Upsilon.

CLARENCE RALPH LINDNER '20

Clarence R. Lindner, for many years an executive with the New York Telephone Company, died suddenly on October 10, 1963, at his home in Jamaica, L. I., N. Y. Born on September 16, 1898, in Lawrence, Mass., he prepared for college at the local high school and following his graduation from Bowdoin joined the New York Telephone Company, with which he eventually became Traffic Supervisor for the Long Island Area, with an office in Brooklyn. He had retired on October 1, after 43 years of service with the company.

Mr. Lindner is survived by his wife, Mrs. Vernice Nicholson Lindner, whom he married on June 19, 1926, in Jamaica, L. I., N. Y.; and a sister, Miss Grace M. Lindner of Lawrence, Mass. His fraternity was Sigma Nu.

NORMAN CORNWELL CROSBIE '29

Norman C. Crosbie died on October 14, 1963, in Plainview, L. I., N. Y. Born on August 9, 1907, in Dorchester, Mass., he prepared for college at Milton (Mass.) High School and the Huntington School in Boston and following his graduation from Bowdoin worked for a while with the National Shawmut Bank in Boston and then went to New York City, where he was connected with a brokerage house and with the American Telephone and Telegraph Company. He was also associated with the Hathaway Baking Company, General Mills, Inc., and the Colgate-Palmolive-Peet Company. He was with the Bethlehem Steel Company for eight years and during the 1950's worked for the General Electric Company, Pratt and Whitney Aircraft, and Republican Aircraft. In recent years he was associated with Photocircuits, Inc., and Aeroflex Laboratories, Inc., in New York.

A Mason and a member of the Naval Architects Society, Mr. Crosbie is survived by his mother, Mrs. Angie C. Hendler of West Babylon, N. Y.; and two daughters, Carol A. and Sharon L. He was a member of Delta Upsilon Fraternity.

ALTON EUGENE FOSTER '29

Alton E. Foster died on October 13, 1963, in a Bangor hospital. Born on August 6, 1890, in Brewer, he prepared for college at Bangor High School and attended the New England Conservatory of Music, the University of Maine, and Hahnemann Medical College in Philadelphia before entering Bowdoin in 1926. A veteran of World War I, he graduated from Bowdoin in 1929 and then traveled and studied abroad. He worked for a newspaper in New York City, where he was also for some time an actor, and then lived in Boston until he returned to his mother's home in East Eddington late in the 1930's. In recent years he had taught music to the children of Eddington. He was well known and respected as a scholar in art, drama, music, and literature.

Mr. Foster returned to Bowdoin in June of 1952 to take part in the alumni production of Hamlet, staged in the Pickard Theater in Memorial Hall at Commencement time. He is survived by several cousins.

BERTRAM QUINCY ROBBINS '34

Bertram Q. Robbins died in a Bangor hospital on August 26, 1963. Born in East Millinocket on June 11, 1912, he prepared for college at Mattanawcook Academy in Lincoln and following his graduation from Bowdoin taught English at Stearns High School, was a technician with the Great Northern Paper Company in Millinocket, was a technical writer with the General Electric Company in Lynn, Mass., and was a technical writer with Link Radio Company and Cushing and Nevell (designers) in New York City. He became a Fuller Brush dealer in Fairfield in 1947 and moved to Bangor about ten years ago. This year he was to have taught English at Van Buren High School.

Mr. Robbins is survived by his mother, Mrs. Charles A. Robbins of Lincoln; his wife, Mrs. Arlene King Robbins; a son, Stephen of Bangor; three daughters, Miss Penelope Robbins of Jackson Heights, N. Y., and Miss Andrea Robbins and Miss Cynthia Robbins, both of Bangor; and two sisters, Mrs. Arlene Wolberg of New York City and Mrs. Lorna Gay of South Salem, N. Y. His fraternity was Kappa Sigma.

PETER SCHMALZER, JR. '57

Peter Schmalzer, Jr. died on October 9, 1963, at his home in Sheffield, Mass., at the age of 27. Born on May 22, 1936, in New York City, he prepared for college at New Canaan (Conn.) High School. At Bowdoin he majored in French, was a member of the Glee Club, and was librarian for his fraternity. He went on to do graduate work at Columbia University, from which he received a master of arts degree. He had also completed his general examinations at Columbia and last spring received notice that his dissertation outline had been accepted. He was to have taught French at Williams College this year, after serving as a member of the faculty at the Loomis School. Surviving are his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Peter Schmalzer of Sheffield, and a younger brother, Victor. His fraternity was Chi Psi.

Jeffrey J. Carre '40, formerly a member of the faculty at Bowdoin and now at Amherst College, wrote of Mr. Schmalzer, "He had been a close friend of ours — as a student in Italian at Bowdoin, as a visitor to our home at Brunswick and Amherst, as an enthusiast of Europe and art and people. I think of him as one of the most courteous and civilized of young men, and his courtesy in no way altered his independence of mind and values, which was quiet and fundamental.

"Peter had majored in French at Bowdoin. He had received his master's at Columbia in French, had passed his generals, and had been working on his dissertation during the spring and summer under the threat of his illness. He had the satisfaction of seeing the dissertation outline approved and the profound satisfaction of having pressed on until the end of his life."

GEORGE ROY ELLIOTT Honorary 1925

George Roy Elliott, well known Shakespearean critic and for 37 years a member of the faculty at Bowdoin and at Amherst College, died on October 17, 1963, at his home in Brunswick at the age of 79. Born in London, Ontario, Canada, on December 31, 1883, he prepared for college at the Collegiate Institute in London and was graduated from the University of Toronto in 1904, receiving a gold medal for general proficiency as an undergraduate. After two years in newspaper work and two years spent studying in Germany, he received his Ph.D. degree from the University of Jena in Germany in 1908. That same year he came to the United States and became an instructor in English at the University of Wisconsin.

In 1913 he joined the Bowdoin faculty as Henry Leland Chapman Professor of English Literature. When he left twelve years later to become Professor of English at Amherst, Bowdoin conferred upon him an honorary doctor of letters degree. The citation read at that time by the late President Kenneth C. M. Sills '01 described him as "a graceful writer of criticism, making his mark in that field in which so few Americans have distinguished themselves; inspiring teacher to youth of the ideals and spiritual forces found in the best poetry and prose."

Professor Elliott also received an honorary master of arts degree from Amherst in 1934 and an honorary doctor of humane letters degree from Tufts University in 1955. He was the author of The Cycle of Modern Poetry (1929), Humanism and Imagination (1938), Church, College, and Nation (1945), and three widely known interpretations of Shakespeare's tragedies: Scourge and Minister (1951), a study of Hamlet; Flaming Minister (1953), a study of Othello; and Dramatic Providence in "Macbeth" (1958), republished in 1960 with a Supplementary Essay on King Lear. He was also the editor of Poetry of the Nineteenth Century (1924), Complete Poetry of John Keats (1927), and Henry Wadsworth Longfellow in the Simon and Schuster Pamphlet Poets Series (1928). In addition, he wrote many articles on Shakespeare and other subjects for literary and scholarly journals and periodicals.

A founder and member of the American Group for Renaissance Studies, Professor Elliott was also a member of the Modern Language Association of America and the Guild of Scholars in the Episcopal Church. In 1950 he and Mrs. Elliott moved back to Brunswick, following his retirement from Amherst as Professor of English on the Henry Folger Foundation. During the summer months they lived in a farmhouse in the Bunganuc section of Brunswick; the winter months they spent in an apartment in town and in North Carolina. It was his habit to devote many hours to conversation with faculty members and students at the Moulton Union at the College.

His affection for Bowdoin led him to write this tribute to the College several years ago: "Bowdoin College has a place all of its own. I am fond of Amherst, where I taught for 25 years. It and Williams and Wesleyan are good institutions, but they are so near New York that they tend to be swayed more or less by what I call New Yorkism. And they have a certain sameness. But Bowdoin is all herself. She partakes of the individualism of Maine, and the students, as well as the Faculty, have a very attractive independence of spirit. Only by teaching elsewhere, as I have done, can one fully appreciate Bowdoin's special quality."

Professor Elliott is survived by his widow, Mrs. Alma Lee Wilkins Elliott, whom he married on September 20, 1910, in Milwaukee, Wis.; two daughters, Mrs. Jane Fischer of Zurich, Switzerland, and Mrs. Nancy Kleene of Madison, Wis.; and six grandchildren.

FREDERICK HALE Honorary 1931

Frederick Hale, a United States Senator from Maine from 1917 to 1941, died in Portland on September 28, 1963, at the age of 88. Born in Detroit, Mich., on October 7, 1874, he prepared for college at the Groton School and was graduated from Harvard College in 1896. He attended Columbia Law School for a year before reading law in the office of his uncle, Judge Clarence Hale of the Class of 1869, in Portland. He was admitted to the Maine Bar in 1899, set up practice in Portland, and was elected to the Maine House of Representatives in 1904. In September of 1916 he was elected to the Senate, in which he served four six-year terms. Known as an advocate of a large Navy, he became in January of 1940 the ranking Republican in the Senate, following the death of William E. Borah of Idaho. His retirement in 1941 brought to an end a family dynasty of 73 years in the Senate, a record never equaled. His father, Eugene Hale, served from 1881 until his death in 1911, and his maternal grandfather, Zachariah Chandler, was U. S. Senator from Michigan from 1858 until 1875.

The citation read at the Commencement exercises in 1931, when Bowdoin conferred an LL.D. degree upon Senator Hale, said, in part, ". . . bound to this College by many ties of kin and friendship; chairman of the Naval Affairs Committee of the Senate; able, conservative advocate of national defense, giving an admirable example to his colleagues in the Senate by his belief and practice of the efficacy of action as superior to the efficacy of talk; honest and straightforward in all his dealings."

Senator Hale also received an honorary doctor of laws degree from the University of Maine in 1940. He is survived by a first cousin, Robert Hale '10; another cousin, Mrs. Philip Clifford of Portland; and a niece, Mrs. Howland Chase of Washington, D. C.

HARRY SNOW PARSONS Medical 1891

Dr. Harry S. Parsons, a benefactor of the College and a dentist in Boston for more than 60 years, died in Winchester, Mass., on October 23, 1963, at the age of 96. Born on March 14, 1867, in Brunswick, he prepared for college at the local high school and following his graduation from the Maine Medical School in 1891 entered Harvard Dental School, from which he received a D.M.D. degree in 1892. He then established his practice in Boston, where he remained active until his retirement in 1954. For some years he was also a member of the faculty at Harvard Dental School. He was an honorary member of the American Academy of Dental Science.

A Past President of the Harvard Odontological Society and a member of the Massachusetts Dental Society and the Masons, Dr. Parsons is survived by his wife, Mrs. Florence Ripley Parsons, whom he married on September 28, 1909, in Winchester, Mass.; a son, Frank R. Parsons of Sutton, Mass.; two daughters, Mrs. Malcolm D. Bennett and Mrs. Bertram H. Dube, both of Winchester; eight grandchildren; and one great-grandchild. In 1956 he established the George Winfield Parsons Scholarship Fund at Bowdoin in memory of his brother, a member of the Class of 1887, and the following year he gave a painting to the Art Museum.

The New Admissions Application Form

GONE IS THE SIMPLE FOUR-PAGE ADMISSIONS APPLICATION FORM, familiar to almost every Bowdoin man. Of those still living who matriculated at Bowdoin, probably only a handful did not complete and submit the familiar old form. Now admissions applicants are presented several forms, each of which calls for much more information than was sought in times gone by.

The "Candidate Form," to be filled out by the prospect and returned to the Admissions Office no later than March 1, is a large white folder (two sheets or four pages). In addition to the usual personal data, it calls for other facts: the names, ages, and colleges of the candidate's brothers and sisters; the names of guidance counselors, college advisers, and those who are writing personal references for the candidates; an informal resume of academic record; academic honors and prizes; an itemized list of extracurricular activities; and a list of school offices held and community activities engaged in. In a general section, it also asks how the candidate plans to finance his college education, if he has ever been suspended or dismissed from any school, and if he has ever been treated for any mental or social disturbance. Putting the candidate on his mettle, it also asks for a self-appraisal, a 200-500 word essay on "a course, person, or experience which has contributed significantly" to the candidate's intellectual or personal development and which comments on a worthwhile contribution which the boy has made to his family, school, or community.

A second form, printed on gray stock and five pages long, is to be completed and returned by the candidate's college adviser. On specifically-marked scales, it asks for evaluations of the boy's intellectual ability and achievement and of his character and personality. Page 3 begins with the question "Do you have full confidence in the candidate's integrity?" and then provides a long space for the counselor to write "a summary appraisal of the candidate, assessing his quality and promise as a Bowdoin student." Significantly, the counselor is told, "We are particularly interested in evidence about character, relative maturity, independence, his values and the things he is enthusiastic about, and any special talent or quality he possesses. We would like to know about both his strong points and his weak points. If he is accepted, your description of him becomes a part of his permanent confidential college file and will help us in advising him." Bowdoin, like many other colleges, is seeking descriptive material that will identify individual characteristics and personality factors. These more than test scores determine the true nature of the candidate. At the bottom of the page, the adviser is asked to recommend the candidate (in terms of both academic ability and character) "without enthusiasm," "fairly strongly," "strongly," or "enthusiastically" — or to rate him "not recommended." The last page is devoted to a form for a complete transcript of the candidate's secondary school record, as well as his results on a variety of standardized tests. The counselor is asked to complete and submit this form as quickly as possible, although he keeps the inserted fifth page on which to transcribe and report the candidate's mid-year marks. (This is the same school report form now used by the eight Ivy League colleges plus Bowdoin, Haverford, Smith, Tufts, and Union.)

EACH PROSPECTIVE ADMISSIONS CANDIDATE is also given two tan reference forms, one to be completed and returned by his junior or senior English teacher and the other by a person well acquainted with the prospect. The candidate also receives an information sheet and check list to keep. This guides him in filling out his form, tells him that candidates are required to take the College Board's Scholastic Aptitude Test and the Writing Sample (the December tests are recommended), tells him to use the Parents' Confidential Statement of the College Scholarship Service if he wishes to apply for financial aid, and discusses interviews and campus visits. The check list helps him make certain he has handled all parts of the application completely and accurately, and it gives him a record of when he submitted his completed application.

One more small form is enclosed — in triplicate. This is to accompany the ten-dollar application fee. The Admissions Office retains the first copy, the second copy is returned as a receipt, and the Business Office keeps the third for its records.

Why, some might ask, has the Bowdoin application form grown so complicated? Isn't the old form sufficient? No, not any longer. With the number of bona fide applications to Bowdoin continuing to rise, with more students applying from schools farther away—where Bowdoin is less well known and which Bowdoin knows less well—and with the College about to expand by another 150 students—almost 40 additional freshmen each year—the Admissions and Financial Aid Officers must have more information, in greater detail, about admissions candidates. With approximately $100,000 committed each fall in prematriculation grants, loans, and jobs, and with two boys (often good and qualified ones) being turned down for every one admitted, the Admissions Staff must have the fullest information with which to make judgments, comparisons, and decisions.

The following exchange of correspondence concerning Bowdoin and the College Bowl may amuse alumni. J. Horatio Whipstock is Overseer Austin H. MacCormick '15 in thinly veiled disguise.

December 11, 1963

Dear President Coles:

I am writing you in my capacity as Dean of Higher Education (in charge of tuition increases) at Grind Hard College, after serving for many years as Dean of Freshmen at Sing Sing. I was a leading candidate for the Chair of Applied Electricity there when I resigned.

I have a request to make. We have no scholarships at G.H.C. and feel that we should have at least one in case a student with better than dull normal intelligence (i.e., in the Superior Dull Normal Group) ever enrolled. We saw your students perform on the College Bowl program last Sunday and noted that the take grossed $1,500. Now, President Coles, will you kindly send me 12 dozen packages of the breakfast food they eat, and we will make a start by feeding it to the faculty. We will gladly pay for it if you, as President of a rich College, insist.

Simply yours,
J. Horatio Whipstock

17 December 1963

Dear Dean Whipstock:

Since my Assistant in charge of correspondence with Deans is suffering from housemaid's knee, I am responding to your inquiry of 11 December, personally, so as to avoid delay. I fear that your mobility is such that any delay might find you experimenting with the Chair of Applied Electricity.

Without question the Superior Dull Normal Group is the most important group for you to work with in your institution. It is from this group that our College Bowl Team has been drawn; we wanted our showing to be modest rather than overwhelming. Unfortunately, we left the team unattended at its training table and they all had double rations of breakfast food before the first program.

This being the case, and with the new affluence of the College resulting from the second competition of the team, we are able to send you five score of packages of their training diet. (Unfortunately we could not spare twelve dozen packages, for we have had to reserve a part of this for the Faculty Red-Shirts who work out against the team.) I hope this reaches you in time to help you in your own development, as well as that of your Faculty.

Red Garters,
Wheadle R. Buste
Vice President for Deans

P.S. After beginning this letter, the President found the same housemaid the Assistant had met earlier.

According to President Coles, the Centralized Dining Service did ship 100 packages of a certain brand of breakfast food to Dean Whipstock.

FLASH

The latest word on the construction fire which damaged the wooden forms and crib work at the upper levels of the Senior Center on January 20 is that damage is not extensive in the building itself. The cost of the fire will probably be less than $200,000 to $250,000. This is fully covered by insurance. The greatest damage was done where the crane fell on the 15th floor slab. The Center will still be ready for occupancy in September, as originally planned.

College Bowl Champions

by Joseph D. Kamin

Director of News Services

"We just got the word up here. Congratulations!"

This eight-word telegram, addressed to President Coles, was signed "Longfellow, Hawthorne, and Pierce." It was received on the campus less than an hour after Bowdoin won its fifth consecutive game on the "G-E College Bowl" and retired as undefeated champion with a hatful of scoring records.

If there was any doubt as to the authenticity of this wire, there was absolutely none about the avalanche of other telegrams, telephone calls, and letters that descended on Massachusetts Hall in the wake of Bowdoin's brilliant performances. They came from members of the Governing Boards and other proud alumni from coast to coast. But they also came from public figures and ordinary people who have absolutely no connection with Bowdoin.

The nationally televised Bowdoin triumphs also touched off a rash of newspaper stories and editorials across the land. Without exception, the press comment boiled down to praise for Bowdoin and the scholars who represented the College in full view of 20 million Americans.

Bowdoin began its victory streak on December 8 by eliminating four-time winner Ripon College of Wisconsin 375 to 135. On December 15 Bowdoin crushed Butler University of Indianapolis 345 to 150. Then, on December 22, came a nip-and-tuck contest that had every Bowdoin man biting his fingernails.

The opponent was Duquesne University of Pittsburgh, and the regular game ended in a 190 to 190 tie. In the first "sudden death" overtime period in the six-year history of the popular program, Mike Bennett answered a tie-breaking question correctly and Bowdoin won the match 200 to 190.

As if to atone for the closeness of the Duquesne game, Bowdoin left little doubt of its superiority on December 29 against Westminster College of Missouri. The final score was 360 to 60.

At this point, after four appearances, Bowdoin's team had already piled up the seventh highest total point production in the history of the show, including even the five-game totals racked up by the handful of colleges which had gone "all the way." But there was many a record yet to be broken. And Bowdoin was there to break them.

The final opponent was Bowling Green University of Ohio. The score: Bowdoin 245, Bowling Green 85.

Bowdoin's five-game total of 1,525 points smashed all scoring records, breaking by 105 points the old five-game record of 1,420, which had been held by Lafayette College.

With an average of 305 points per contest, Bowdoin became the first college in the history of the question-and-answer game to average better than 300 points per match. Bowdoin outscored its combined opponents by a total margin of 905 points, and that, too, is a new record. Bowdoin is the only college or university which has won five games on the show this season and the only institution which has swept past the 300-point mark this season.

It was a proud moment for Bowdoin men everywhere when the program's moderator, Robert Earle, handed the championship trophy, a silver achievement bowl, to William C. Rounds '64, the team's alternate member.

Members of the squad and their coach, Instructor Daniel G. Calder '60 of the English Department, had beckoned to Rounds to join the team in front of the color cameras for the presentation ceremonies.

The team members, whose faces are now familiar to millions, included the captain, Kenneth C. Smith '64; Jotham D. Pierce, Jr. '65; Charles A. (Chuck) Mills '66; and Michael W. (Mike) Bennett '67.

Their impressive victories earned a total of $10,500 in scholarship grants for Bowdoin. This total will be supplemented by an additional $3,500 from the Ford Foundation under terms of the Foundation's $2.5 million matching grant to Bowdoin.

Appropriate personal gifts — inscribed copies of the new Columbia Encyclopedia — were presented to Mr. Calder and the team members by President Coles at Chapel on January 8. President Coles said the College decided to make special awards which would be "somewhat reminiscent of the encyclopedic knowledge which these men have displayed these past few weeks, and which might be helpful to them in their attempt to continue this display of knowledge in the years to come."

Earlier, after the Duquesne game, each member of the team had received an autographed copy of First Person Rural, the latest book by Overseer Hodding Carter '27, the 1963 winner of the Bowdoin Prize.

President Coles said the team's splendid record "has brought great credit to the College, and to every member of the College." Noting that "some people have congratulated us upon the accomplishment of the College," the President declared: "Any accomplishment of the College has not been one of a few weeks, but rather the accomplishment of the College has been one of years, and indeed decades, of effective liberal education. The accomplishment of the College has been based upon its continued emphasis on the intellectual quality, alert mentality, breadth of knowledge, and a lively and competitive spirit. The accomplishment of the College has been the accomplishment of many professors, many students, and many alumni over the years.

"The accomplishment of the College," the President added, "has been in past performances which make Bowdoin attractive to good students, and in a present atmosphere which sharpens their intellect and whets their desire for further knowledge. Successes such as the College Bowl, or recognitions of other sorts, can be represented as a short period of harvest, following many long years of continued planting and replanting, nurture and cultivation."

President Coles said the College Bowl fund of some $14,000 "will provide an annual endowment income for a scholarship award of about $600 a year to assist worthy young men in meeting their college expenses throughout the years to come and in perpetuity. And this is what these men have left for the College which will follow 50 years, 100 years, 200 years from now."

The enthusiasm displayed by alumni and friends of Bowdoin was more than matched by current undergraduates, who turned out hundreds strong for three spontaneous and spirited Sunday night "welcome home" rallies that attracted the attention of much of the nation's press. (The only reason there weren't five receptions for the team was the fact that two of the TV matches came during the Christmas recess.)

The New York Times sent a staff writer to Brunswick to cover the noisy reception accorded the team when it arrived at the Moulton Union after retiring undefeated. "Bowdoin Cheers Varsity Scholars" was the headline over his long account of the happy proceedings. "Brass Band Greets Winners of TV College Bowl Quiz" was the sub-headline.

Well over half the student body and many members of the Faculty and Staff turned out for the final rally, heralded by the ringing of the Chapel bell. As the Times reported, "The clamor brought a police car to the campus to make sure there was no emergency. The officers grinned and resumed their routine patrol duty."

There was nothing routine about the rally being held inside the Moulton Union. The band played and undergraduates cheered the team and coach until their voices were hoarse. Professor William D. Shipman of the Economics Department, chairman of the committee which helped make arrangements for Bowdoin's TV appearances, acted as master of ceremonies.

"Welcome, Bowdoin TV Champions" and "We're Proud of You, College Bowl Team" were some of the signs held aloft by enthusiastic students.

In the absence of President Coles, who was ill with a heavy cold, Dean Kendrick extended the official greetings of the College and presented to Mr. Calder and each team member a personal letter from the President. Dean Kendrick also presented to the team a huge Key to the College.

Dean of Students Roy Greason added his congratulations. Others who took part in the brief speaking program included Peter R. Seaver '64, President of the Student Council; and Frank M. Drigotas, Jr. '64, Captain of Bowdoin's state championship football team, who extended the greetings of one championship squad to another.

Each team member was introduced, as was Mr. Calder. Mrs. Coles and some 500 other persons who crowded every nook and cranny of the Union Lounge applauded each as the band punctuated the rally with spirited music. Don Lancaster and his crew were ready with hot coffee for all when the speeches were over.

mittee were Professors Herbert R. Brown of the English Department, William C. Root of the Chemistry Department, and William D. Geoghegan of the Religion Department and Marvin S. Sadik, Curator of the Museum of Art. Professor Athern P. Daggett '25 of the Government Department was among the Faculty and Staff members who rendered valuable service as consultants to the committee.

Professor Albert R. Thayer '22 of the English Department gave much technical assistance in preparation of the script read by Captain Smith during the showing of the Bowdoin campus film — a half-time feature of the first TV program. Philip S. Wilder '23, Assistant to the President, was among the many Faculty members and others who helped by supplying practice questions. Technician William Moody '56 designed and constructed for the team's many practice sessions a complicated buzzer system simulating the elaborate hookup used on the NBC-TV show.

As Dean Kendrick said, it was "a successful Bowdoin team effort."

The entire campus gave its enthusiastic backing to the College Bowl project from the start. When undergraduates were invited to take the preliminary written examination, more than 150 students turned out. From this large group, 24 quarter-finalists were chosen. The field was eventually narrowed down to the final four by a series of practice matches, during which careful records of who answered what questions were kept.

There is no common characteristic among the team members — unless it's an amazing ability to recall specific facts instantaneously. As President Coles has noted, each is an "all-around" student.

One of the major ingredients in Mr. Calder's successful training program was stress on the necessity for speed, even if it means guessing.

NBC officials and the program's staff are still chuckling over one guess made in a studio practice game by Joe Pierce, Bowdoin's unofficial "chief guesser." The moderator read a passage and asked for the title of the book from which it was taken. Pierce pressed his buzzer and replied, "The Age of Innocence." Doubling over with laughter, Earle retorted, "No! The answer is Lady Chatterley's Lover."

Well, outside of all the campus excitement, what lasting good did Bowdoin's College Bowl exploits accomplish? In the opinion of this writer, a good deal!

For one thing, as President Coles has noted, millions of Americans presumably now know how to pronounce Bowdoin. And these same Americans are not likely to forget for a long time the dazzling display of quick knowledge and instant recall staged by four personable Bowdoin students.

From a public relations viewpoint, Bowdoin's appearances on the program have resulted in some of the most significant publicity for the College in years. All across the land, editorial writers, television columnists, and others congratulated Bowdoin in print. Significant numbers of Americans who might have missed the programs had a chance to read about Bowdoin's record-smashing appearances.

In the words of an editorial in The Brunswick Record, it was "the personality, the image if you will, which the team left with some 20 million TV viewers each Sunday afternoon which brought Bowdoin College its finest television moments. . . . Throughout each performance, even though some scores became pitifully lopsided, the team conveyed such a sense of genuine modesty that it must have been communicated to every viewer."

Bowdoin "did exceptionally well," said The Boston Globe. "A smashing victory" for Bowdoin, said The Zanesville (Ohio) Times Recorder. "Accolades generally reserved for conquering athletic heroes were given to four brainy students from Bowdoin College," reported The Lawrence (Mass.) Eagle-Tribune. The Lewiston Evening Journal used the word "phenomenal" to describe the Bowdoin team.

"One of the most amazing teams to appear through the years" was the description of the Bowdoin squad in The Holyoke (Mass.) Transcript-Telegram. "Bowdoin College alumni can rejoice" said The Boston Herald. "A sharp team from Bowdoin College, Brunswick, Me., seldom let moderator Robert Earle finish a question before supplying the correct answer," said The Oshkosh (Wis.) Northwestern.

Writing in The Portland Evening Express, columnist Steve Merrill '35 said, "Bowdoin is a liberal arts college, and its showing also demonstrates the value of this kind of education." In her daily TV column carried by hundreds of newspapers, Cynthia Lowry of The Associated Press said the Bowdoin-Duquesne battle was "the most exciting non-sports event of the day." The Bangor Daily News said, "It is good to see recognition being given to scholastic skill as well as the athletic variety."

In a similar vein, The Boston Record-American said, "The heroes of the Bowdoin College campus in Brunswick, Me., these days are not sports luminaries but the 'brain team' students who won NBC-TV's College Bowl competition for five successive weeks and, hence, the title of retired undefeated champions." A "tremendous performance" by Bowdoin was lauded in The Fort Fairfield Review. "Yea, Bowdoin!" proclaimed an editorial in The Washington (D.C.) Evening Star.

"The varsity scholars of Bowdoin are to be congratulated for their accomplishments," said The Rockland Courier-Gazette. "Outstanding achievements" said The Lewiston Daily Sun of Bowdoin's performances. "Yea, Bowdoin; Yea, GE!" was the headline on an editorial in The Barre (Vt.) Times-Argus, which congratulated the College for its "intellectual achievement" and the General Electric Company for "its sponsorship of that excellent program." The Staten Island (N. Y.) Advance sang the praises of "that magnificent team of students from Bowdoin College."

The Kennebec Journal in Augusta said, "Higher education in Maine can preen itself in the wake of Bowdoin College's amazing five straight victories which set all-time scoring records. . ." and added "Of course, the glory is exclusively Bowdoin's. But the whole State can bask a little in the reflected glow."

In an editorial titled "Conquering Heroes," The Chicago (Ill.) Tribune told its one million readers about Bowdoin's exploits. "In five consecutive televised bouts, the Bowdoin brains defeated all comers," said the Tribune. The Portland Evening Express said editorially, "The brainy quartet of players, the alternate, and the coach brought great credit to their college and to the whole State of Maine. They put Bowdoin into the language and Brunswick, Maine, onto the map for many of the millions who watched their impressive triumph. . ."

The Piscataquis Observer of Dover-Foxcroft said in an editorial that "every alumnus of Bowdoin College, and in fact every present and former resident of Maine, can well be proud of the record made by a Bowdoin team in its five appearances on the TV College Bowl. . . The performance of the boys themselves, who were intelligent and alert but not conceited at the times of their rather overwhelming victories, must have created a good image of Bowdoin in the minds of the estimated 20 million viewers."

Writing in The Decatur (Ill.) Herald, columnist David Felts said, "Of all the college teams that have competed in General Electric's fine television program, College Bowl, the current champions representing Bowdoin College are far and away the most widely informed and the most mentally alert."

"True to Form" was the headline on an editorial in The Grafton (W. Va.) Sentinel, which noted that Bowdoin's alumni roll includes Hawthorne, Longfellow, and Pierce. "No conquering football team ever got a greater welcome," said the Sentinel. "It should be a precedent for other colleges and universities in giving recognition to scholarly attainments."

In Maine, Governor John H. Reed led the state in paying tribute to the team. The Governor, who sent the team members weekly telegrams of congratulations and invited them to lunch with him on January 22, said, "Maine citizens join me in congratulating the Bowdoin College team on having retired from the College Bowl undefeated and establishing a record without precedent."

Letters of congratulations were received from the local governments of Brunswick and its neighbor, Bath. "The publicity has been invaluable not only to the College but to the Town as well," wrote Maxwell D. Sawyer, Chairman of the Brunswick Board of Selectmen, and Brunswick Town Manager John P. Bibber. City Manager Harry E. Ring, Jr. of Bath wrote that the team members' showing "certainly reflects the fine teaching and associations they have at Bowdoin."

Brunswick town officials and the Rotary Club joined forces on January 20 to honor the team at a luncheon. Mr. Calder was the speaker, and he and each member of the team received an honorary citizenship award.

U. S. Senator Margaret Chase Smith H'52 of Maine wrote President and Mrs. Coles, "All of Maine is thrilled and tremendously proud of Bowdoin's superb and amazing performance in the TV College Bowl." Her Senate colleague, Edmund S. Muskie H'57, wired President Coles that "Team cooperation spelled the difference" and added that Bowdoin's "team served as an impressive advertisement for the College."

Which indeed it did!

John J. Audubon

by Joel Fine

of the College News Service

A present-day John J. Audubon, with a dash of Marco Polo in his makeup, who is still a student at Bowdoin College has won high recognition for his superb wood carvings of birds.

Robert E. Phinney, Jr., 21, a member of the Class of 1964, has had his work accepted by the Kennedy Galleries, one of the leading art dealers in New York, and purchased by the museum of the Glenbow Foundation in Calgary, Alberta, Canada, as well as by other institutions and collectors. The American Museum of Natural History in New York has also expressed interest in his work.

His Marco Polo propensities were indulged last summer, when he made a flying trip to Africa, where in the space of three months he took part in safaris and a 500-mile bush cattle drive. He ended his journey by traveling to Cairo, Athens, Paris, Rome, and London before returning to his parents' home in Arrowsic, some 10 miles from Bowdoin. He estimates he flew about 30,000 miles altogether.

Bob began to carve birds when he was 14, the desire growing out of his deeply-ingrained interest in wild life. Although he was untrained professionally, his talents impressed Clifford Russell, a well-known silversmith in Woolwich, who urged him to produce some bird carvings which Russell might put on display in his shop. Bob did so and realized his first income from his work — the birds sold for $1.50 each.

Today his beautifully carved and painted birds, so apparently real that the viewer expects them to wing off into the blue, bring prices more in keeping with their high professional quality. In fact, he has been able to finance his college education through the sale of his work.

Bob was fortunate enough to have the famous American sculptor William Zorach within neighborly distance in Robinhood. Mr. Zorach took a lively interest in him and encouraged him to pursue sculpturing in wood from life, which is a long way from what is commonly termed wood carving. Charles G. Chase, a prominent Brunswick sculptor of birds, also guided the youth in his early years of carving.

At 15, already an accomplished wood sculptor, he produced about 35 birds during the summer, including chickadees, seagulls, and various kinds of ducks and songbirds, all of which were eventually purchased by summer residents of the area.

Then he met a well-known painter of Maine seacoast scenes and portraits, Frank Mason of Small Point and New York, who, besides teaching him the craft of painting and drawing, "really opened my eyes to the values of the fine arts."

In 1959, when he was a senior at Morse High School in Bath, Bob's work was selected for an exhibition at Bowdoin's Museum of Art. The show, which had been arranged with the help of Leslie Z. Smith, manager of the Small Point Club in Phippsburg, ran for almost a month in the fall.

The following year he entered Bowdoin, "suppressing the desire to carve," he said, in order to devote all his time to his studies. However, in the summer of 1961 "I let myself loose," he said, completing a pair of Brants (small dark geese) in flight. The Brants, about one-third life-size, were put on show in a Wiscasset gallery, where they drew a lot of attention.

Then the Kennedy Gallery arranged a one-man exhibition of his work, which proved to be a big attraction and resulted in the sale of all his carvings.

The Gallery wanted more of his work, and under the pressure of professional recognition he was faced with a tormenting decision: whether to leave college for a year or two to devote himself to his work and to improving it, or to try to compromise with both his studies and his carving, "not doing either satisfactorily," as he put it.

To make one of his complicated bird replicas and paint it requires from two weeks to five or six months, depending upon whether it is a single specimen in a static pose or two birds mounted together in simulated flight, landing, or take-off. "And it means long hours of concentrated work, not just a few spare hours or moments to be stolen from my books."

He finally decided he must leave college for a time, and he did not return for the fall semester of 1961.

Bob then launched an intensive sculpturing effort, carving about a dozen birds and experimenting with various cutting techniques and methods of painting his models. He uses blocks of Maine white pine for the bodies and heads and thinner slabs for wings and details. For the legs of the birds he uses silver, which he says gives stronger support and allows him to mount one bird over the other in his paired carvings.

Although he has several kits of high quality carving tools, the young sculptor prefers small blades for detailed carving, a hunting knife for slicing larger areas, and a hatchet for roughing out the pine blocks.

In painting the models he follows the exact marking and coloring of the live birds, employing a paint mixed with beeswax to provide elasticity, without which the paint might crack. The beeswax mix is "an old master's technique" which Mason taught him.

The carvings he made during the two years he remained away from college were all sold to collectors or through the Kennedy Galleries to various clients.

Bob is now working on a pair of Canadian geese in the act of taking flight and on the watercolor painting of a partridge. The varieties of birds of which he has carved replicas include Squaw Ducks, Black Ducks, Golden Eye Ducks, Crows, Seagulls, Cormorants, Terns, Partridge, Wild Turkeys, Heron, Warblers, Chickadees, Nuthatches, Redwing Blackbirds, and shore birds such as Sandpipers and Snipe.

Needing a rest after more than a year and a half of concentrated work on his carving, Bob decided on a trip to Africa before coming back to Bowdoin last September. After landing in Dakar, West Africa, following a flight from the United States, he traveled and worked his way through the Congo and the Kalahari Desert to Johannesburg, South Africa, in a period of about two months. In Bechuanaland, South Africa, he took part in a 500-mile cattle drive "with an old Boer farmer and five Bushmen drovers." Then he went on fence patrol at a Bechuanaland game preserve with the District Commissioner to bring in game for prisoners.

In what he calls "the experience of a lifetime," Bob was employed on water safaris run by a famed African figure, John Seeman, who was formerly a crocodile hunter. Bob did "everything but pull the trigger" for the safari members in the three weeks he was with the hunting expeditions.

His African experiences and the pictures he took on that continent have enabled him to give illustrated lectures in communities of the Bath-Brunswick region.

The talented youth plans to complete his studies for a Bowdoin bachelor of arts degree, which he expects to receive in 1966. His ultimate aim is to develop further in the realm of the fine arts.

If he decides to continue his bird carving, Bob will have no trouble disposing of his works. "I know of nothing like them in quality and texture," says Mr. Rudolf G. Wunderlich of the Kennedy Galleries.

The Bethel Point Marine Station

Undergraduates studying marine biology and oceanography have the advantage of a salt water research station that few land-bound colleges in the country possess. It is the Bowdoin Marine Station at Bethel Point, located on a rocky promontory that juts into Quahog Bay, one of the tributary waters of Casco Bay, in East Harpswell — only a short drive from the campus.

The waters and inter-tidal shore zones of Quahog Bay and the deeps and broad reaches of its parent bay, are rich in the hundreds of species and sub-species of water-supported life, says Professor Alton H. Gustafson, Chairman of Bowdoin's Biology Department.

Biology Professors James M. Moulton and Alton H. Gustafson at the Bowdoin Marine Station at Bethel Point.

To list all the varieties of organisms, fish, other animals, and sea plants or algae, including such edible delights as lobsters, crabs, clams, and other seafoods, that inhabit the shore and the bays would require a pamphlet.

This wealth of sea life is due primarily to the frigid but fertile waters from the Arctic region that flow unceasingly beneath the surface from their sources in the northern ice, down along the Greenland shelf, past Newfoundland and Nova Scotia, skirting the shores of Maine and infiltrating its bays and coves, as the vast current passes south to eventual absorption in warmer seas.

The Arctic water, super-cooled in winter so that its temperature may be below zero degrees centigrade (32 degrees Fahrenheit), is the birthplace of countless billions of tons of plankton. Made up of hordes of miniscule animals and plants, the plankton is the beginning of the oceanic food chain, the immense circular process in which the eaters successively become the eaten, linking the smallest crustacean to the largest whale.

Scientific probing of marine fauna and flora of the shore and depths of Casco Bay and its tributaries goes back more than a century. Among the early collections of specimens taken in the area were the valuable ones destroyed in the burning of the Museum of the Portland Society of Natural History during the great fire of 1866. Two famous naturalists of their time, Addison E. Verrill of New Haven, Conn., and Professor Alpheus S. Packard, Jr., a member of the Class of 1861, were among the men who explored Casco Bay and the Gulf of Maine in cooperation with the United States Fish Commission, in 1873.

"The great fund of biological and hydrographic information that has been compiled from Quahog Bay and the adjacent waters," says Professor Gustafson, "gives our marine station the necessary background to pursue ecological studies of the numerous marine forms found there and to understand some changes taking place." These studies involve the relationship of organisms to their environment.

Since the College acquired the marine station site in 1961, it has become increasingly useful as a teaching and research "tool." Undergraduates can obtain live specimens with the station's boat and collection equipment and thus do not have to depend completely on "pickled" specimens, shipped in bottles from other sources, for their laboratory work.

Another developing function for the facility has been its use in Bowdoin's Summer Institutes in Marine Biology for secondary school teachers, the fourth of which was held last summer. A strong factor in drawing institute participants from virtually every state in the country has been the "salt water" attributes of Bowdoin, enabling the teacher-students to take part in field trips to the shore and on the water.

Thus the marine station became a valuable adjunct to the Institute work, both as a collecting headquarters for the specimens used in laboratory studies and as a demonstration site for techniques employed in oceanography and marine biology.

On a typical field trip aboard the station's 16-foot outboard-powered boat, usually skippered by Professor James M. Moulton, or in one of its two skiffs, participants would drag plankton, pick up algae and other specimens, or collect samples from the bay bottom. Those collecting hydrographic data could measure surface and sub-surface sea water temperatures, salinity, depth, current, and sedimentation rates.

Acoustical studies of fish and crustaceans, with a hydrophone and tape recorder, will be made here under the direction of Professor Moulton, who is an internationally known authority on this technique for the study of the biology and behavior of undersea fauna.

Research by Professor Moulton and Dr. Richard H. Backus of the Woods Hole Oceanographic Institution on the effects of man-made sounds on the movements of fish, published in 1955 by the Maine Department of Sea and Shore Fisheries, was recognized as a pioneering effort in a Soviet oceanographic book by A. I. Tarasov printed in 1960.

With recently acquired laboratory equipment for radio ecology studies, the marine biologists will be checking sea organisms for any signs of absorption of the radioactive fallout from nuclear bomb tests. They will do this by following a radioactive isotope through the food chain and metabolic processes of the animals. The radiation detection apparatus will also be used for normal metabolic studies of marine forms.

Facilities at the Bethel Point Marine Station include a 27-foot mobile laboratory, equipped with the necessary work counters, sinks, stoves, and refrigeration units for processing specimens, and two former lobster storage tanks and salt water pump for the keeping of live specimens.

The station site, which was the gift of Mrs. Harold T. Pulsifer of East Harpswell, is adjacent to the Little Ponds Wildlife Sanctuary, which was also established by Mrs. Pulsifer on the family estate. Thus both facilities are available for ornithological as well as marine and zoological research.

Although marine biology studies at Bowdoin are aimed primarily at the training of students, the Biology Department has a long history of cooperation with the fisheries departments of the state and nation. Both Professor Gustafson and Professor Moulton have worked closely with these agencies on such matters as shell fish population studies, hydrographic exploration to determine factors which affect the commercial fisheries, the growth and predation control of the round clam known as the quahog, and a life study of European oysters transplanted to Boothbay Harbor.

"With only two non-commercial marine research stations besides Bowdoin's along the entire coast of Maine," Professor Gustafson says, "there remains a great professional opportunity for students of both marine biology and oceanography. The resources of the seas and bays of Maine are virtually incalculable. To utilize them to their fullest food potential, as other nations are now attempting to do in the oceans of the world, will require the maximum development of scientific exploration and management of our waters."

A Report on Brunswick to Alumni

by Harry Shulman, Area Correspondent for the Portland Press Herald

This is a report on the town that served you as a home away from home through your undergraduate years at Bowdoin.

If you have been out of college ten years or longer and if your visits to Brunswick have been confined to infrequent brief stays on campus, you are probably unaware of the many changes that have taken place.

Interested in a brief inspection tour? Then let's go.

We start at the lower end of Maine Street, where the only remaining landmark is the multi-story mill. The rows of tenement houses along Mill Street and Maine Street have disappeared. The Route One by-pass, which eventually will route through traffic away from the Town and the College, has replaced the tenements.

The mill itself no longer manufactures textiles. A discount store and half a dozen small industries now occupy the rambling structure. In place of cloth, they turn out artist's supplies, shoes, dresses, and children's clothing.

The old town dump off Water Street has been cleaned up. The Maine Shoe Corporation, the Brunswick Publishing Company, the Brunswick Public Works Department, and the New England Telephone and Telegraph Company occupy new buildings adjacent to the new highway.

Along Maine Street there are new department stores, new food stores, new banks. The old Town Hall has been torn down. A new municipal office building is on Federal Street adjacent to the Recreation Center.

Brunswick has built more new school rooms during the past ten years than in the preceding two hundred. Even more important is the fact that its educational system has attracted and held fine teachers. It is rated with the finest in New England.

When the Maine Central stopped operating passenger trains, it sold its railroad station. In its place there is a mid-town shopping center, modest in size, housing the State Liquor store, a discount grocery store, and a hardware store.

The old Brunswick Hospital has been replaced by two modern institutions, which have attracted many new doctors to the community.

Brunswick has doubled its population. It has added several hundred new homes, improved its streets, modernized its water supply and storm drainage, and was one of the first municipalities in Maine to take steps toward eliminating river pollution.

Brunswick has retained its town meeting. But its business affairs have been entrusted to a professionally trained manager. A surprising number of its men and women are actively interested in town affairs. They serve on its planning board, its zoning and finance boards, and various advisory committees and commissions. The Town has a tax assessment system which has been copied by municipalities throughout New England.

But Brunswick has not grown so large that it overshadows the College. It is not likely to. A healthy, friendly relationship exists, not only between Town and College, but with Navy and Air Force installations as well. A Military-Community Council serves to anticipate and eliminate possible areas of friction.

Brunswick has become home for an increasing number of retired Bowdoin alumni as well as for many Navy and Air Force officers and enlisted men formerly stationed here.

Like every other community, Brunswick seeks to attract new industries. It has lots to offer—good schools, good people, fine homes, and the College, which welcomes the community to its art exhibits, its lectures, its concerts, its skating rink, and its athletic programs, and which is willing to cooperate with industry through its scientific facilities and in other ways.

Should there be any alumnus in search of a suitable location for a desirable industry, he might try contacting Paul Tiemer '28, at the Brunswick Area Chamber of Commerce, who may have an idea or two that would pay off handsomely.

Bowdoin's Football Schedule

by Director of Athletics Mal Morrell '24

After a considerable amount of discussion over a period of three or four years, the Governing Boards Committee on Physical Education voted on April 6, 1963, not to play Maine in football after the 1964 season. Athletic representatives of the University of Maine had been told confidentially some time in advance that this schedule change was being seriously considered.

Athletic relations between Maine and Bowdoin have been conducted on the highest possible level for many years. This friendly feeling has prevailed in the hundreds of business and schedule meetings as it has in the numerous undergraduate athletic competitions in all sports. The Bowdoin-Maine football game always seemed to be the highlight of the athletic year for both institutions. These things made it extremely difficult for Bowdoin to take action to end the football series, even though such action seemed to be in the best interests of the undergraduates.

Football is a game in which physical contact plays an important part. In competitions of this nature, in college ranks and in the professional world, it has long been recognized that it is advisable if not absolutely necessary to match competitors of comparable size. This is seen in the weight divisions in boxing and wrestling, for example, and in the organizing of 150-pound football teams as well as varsity teams in the larger institutions. This is one of the reasons why small colleges, particularly those of comparatively high standards of admission and retention, usually plan to compete with other small colleges in football.

Bowdoin does not have spring football practice or post-season practice or competition of any kind, and the freshman football players do not have very many days of practice during their season. This first semester in college is a period of difficult adjustment for many of them, and they cannot afford to spend much time on the athletic fields. Football is considered one of our best sports activities for those who play and for those who watch, and it has an important place at Bowdoin and at colleges of the same kind. However, it is definitely an extracurricular activity. These colleges do not have physical education majors.

Many colleges and universities plan to increase their student enrollments fairly substantially while Bowdoin expects to keep its numbers to a little over 900. Since winning the basketball championship, the football championship, and the College Bowl Championship within the past year, Bowdoin is better known than ever before. (This results about 99% from the College Bowl Championship.) In spite of this, however, not very many really top athletes will elect to come to Brunswick to attend college.

A football program should be conducted for the benefit of the undergraduates and not for the benefit of the coach, the College, the Alumni, or the general public. This is the only justification for having a program of physical education of which intercollegiate football is a part. A successful football team makes many friends among the alumni and the people of the town and the State, and this is all to the good as long as the desire for this friendship does not lead those in authority to forget the welfare of the young men on the squad.

The University of Maine has held a wide margin of victories over Bowdoin in football, but this was not considered too important because, although the games have been hard fought, they have always been clean and the competition has been on a friendly basis. In the past few years Bowdoin's football squads have been smaller in numbers and also, in comparison with Maine's squad, smaller in the actual size of the players. It did not seem fair to ask the men who play to compete year in and year out in a game in which the other team had heavier men and about twice as many of them ready for the game. This year's team of superbly coached and conditioned iron men upset a good, big Maine team. But no Bowdoin father could think well of the College if his son were continually asked to play fifty to sixty minutes of football a game against two or three men in the same game. This would not seem like a part of a good physical education program put on for the benefit of the undergraduates.

It seemed to all of those involved in deciding schedule policy for the College that those things which have tended to cause this football competition to be out of balance would be magnified in the future. The University of Maine people were told that Bowdoin regretted the end of this long football relationship as much as it possibly could. Their answer was that, even though they were indeed sorry that it had to happen, they fully understood the reasons. The fact that Bowdoin has been able to compete in football with the much larger University for so many years speaks well for the men in charge of athletics at Maine. It was agreed that the two institutions would continue to compete in other sports.

The Governing Boards Committee on Physical Education voted to notify Tufts that Bowdoin would not compete with it in football in September after 1964. For the reasons outlined above, it was believed that the Bowdoin team could not be ready to play so strong an opponent so early in the season.

The projected football schedule indicates commitments through 1967. By vote of the Committee, there are no football schedule commitments beyond 1967, although it is expected that most of the opponents listed will be the same after that date. Because college football schedules are usually made up for from two years to four years in advance, it is not always possible, when a change is made, to schedule the seven most desirable opponents immediately. Sometimes it takes three or more years for two institutions which wish to play each other to clear dates so that this is possible. The schedule for 1964 lists eight opponents, and it is possible that this will also be true in 1965 since the Committee voted to instruct the Director of Athletics to fill the September 25 date that year if a suitable opponent can be found. After 1965 the College will again have a seven-game football schedule.

On The Campus

Construction Timetable

Speaking before the Brunswick Rotary Club on December 2, President Coles outlined Bowdoin's plans for a gradual increase in enrollment to 925 students over the next few years. He also gave the following timetable for construction and occupancy of new campus buildings:

Senior Center, $3.1 million. Now under construction. Completion: mid-August of 1964. Occupancy: September, 1964.

New Library, $2 million. Construction to start in 1964. Completion: 1965. Occupancy: September, 1965.

New Gymnasium, $1.5 million. Construction to start in 1964. Completion and occupancy: 1965.

Expansion of Moulton Union, estimated cost between $300,000 and $400,000. Construction to start in 1964. Completion and occupancy: fall of 1965.

Renovation of Dormitories, $1.2 million. Construction to start in 1964. Completion and occupancy: 1965.

Some 80 percent of the $8.2 million which will be expended in the next few years on new construction and on renovation will be spent in the Cumberland County area.

President Coles said that Bowdoin will require about $35 million in new money by 1973. Of this total $10 million will come from the current Capital Campaign, $2.5 million from the Ford Foundation's matching grant, and the balance from gifts and bequests, business contributions, and government grants.

Alumni in Foreign Service

Last fall Professor Athern P. Daggett '25 studied the 1963 Biographic Register issued by the State Department and came up with the following list of alumni who have recently been in that Department, the Foreign Service, or some other Federal agency concerned with foreign affairs:

Timothy J. Adams '49, Media Liaison Officer, Division of Public Information, Peace Corps.

Arthur C. Bartlett '22, Information Officer, United States Information Agency (USIA), Washington, D. C.

William V. Broe '39, First Secretary and Political Officer, Political Section, U. S. Embassy, Tokyo, Japan.

Benjamin H. Cushing '38, First Secretary and Political Officer, Political Section, U. S. Embassy, Leopoldville, Republic of the Congo, Africa.

John G. Day '53, International Political Officer, State Department, Washington.

Charles B. Estabrook '45, Excess Property Utilization Analyst, Agency for International Development (AID), Washington.

Lewis P. Fickett '47, until recently International Relations Officer detailed to the AID in Washington.

James C. Flint '31, Assistant Director, AID, Amman, Jordan.

Robert B. Hill '42, First Secretary, Economics Officer, U. S. Embassy, Port-au-Prince, Haiti.

Mansfield L. Hunt '37, Foreign Affairs Officer, State Department, Washington.

Richard W. Lewis, Jr., '46, Geologist, AID, Rio de Janeiro, Brazil.

Ernest A. Lister '37, First Secretary for Civil Aviation, Shipping, and Telecommunications, U. S. Embassy, Paris, France; also Regional Civil Air Attaché covering Belgium, Switzerland, Spain, Portugal, and Italy.

Brewer J. Merriam '34, Chief of Functional Division and Senior Seminarian in Foreign Policy at the Foreign Service Institute, Washington.

Alden G. Smith '25, formerly Assistant Progress Officer, AID, in Phnom Penh, Cambodia.

William P. Snow '29, Ambassador Extraordinary Plenipotentiary, U. S. Embassy, Asuncion, Paraguay.

Kenneth P. T. Sullivan '40, Foreign Service Institute, Washington; formerly Chief of the Central European Branch, British, North and Central European Division, State Department.

Roger W. Sullivan '52, Language Area Trainee, U. S. Embassy, Taipei, Formosa.

T. Eliot Weil '28, Counselor for Consular Affairs and Consul General, U. S. Embassy, London, England.

James R. West '36, Information Officer, Organization for Economic Cooperation and Development, U. S. Mission to North Atlantic Treaty Organization and European Regional Organizations, Paris, France.

Joseph C. Wheeler '48, Deputy Chief, Peace Corps Division of Near East and South Asia Programs.

Already there have been changes in this list, and Professor Daggett does not claim that it is complete. However, it provides some idea of the role that alumni are playing in serving their country.

Graduate Study Center

Within the past few weeks a new Graduate Study Center has opened on the campus. Part of the Senior Center Program, it is an information, workshop, and conference center for students planning graduate work in any field. The Study Center has a library of information on courses given in graduate schools in this country and some foreign countries — catalogues, bulletins, special publications, entrance requirements, and so forth.

The Center also has a file of fellowships available in the many fields of graduate study. It supplements the work of faculty members, many of whom have for years spent a good deal of time advising students about graduate work.

A second phase of the new program, according to Senior Center Director William B. Whiteside, will be the bringing to the Study Center of younger alumni to discuss their graduate schools with seniors. There will be a series of weekend meetings during which these men, who are studying law, medicine, the arts, science, business, or other subjects, will give seniors a comparative view of a number of graduate schools.

This picture of the Senior Center was taken the day after the construction fire on January 20 which damaged the wooden forms at the upper levels of the Center. Students at the Delta Kappa Epsilon House discovered the fire at about 6:30 p.m., and it had pretty well burned itself out by 9 o'clock. It is believed that the building will still be ready for occupancy next September, as originally scheduled.

Pat Quinby Reports

Professor Pat Quinby '23 has returned to his position as Director of Dramatics after spending 1962-63 as a Fulbright Lecturer at the University of Tehran in Iran, where he also conducted a seminar for playwrights in the theater of the Iran-American Society. Several of the plays written in the seminar were produced by the students as class exercises.

With the aid of an interpreter, Professor Quinby also directed a cycle of Eugene O'Neill's autobiographical plays, translated into Farsi, the language of Iran. At the same time that he prepared an Iranian cast for O'Neill's Long Day's Journey Into Night, he directed an English version of the play. Performances in the two languages were alternated for eight evenings to inaugurate the use of the Society's new Cultural Center Theater.

Professor Quinby also directed Shakespeare's Taming of the Shrew for the Little Theater of Tehran, an English-speaking group, in association with the Tehran British Council. The play was performed in the British Summer Embassy's rose garden.

these busy weeks is given below, as being more expressive than any interpretation of his words.

"Was in process of directing O'Neill's The Straw (in Persian) and Shakespeare's The Shrew (in English) when hit by a motorcycle as I crossed the street in Tehran on June 10; result — a broken arm and a dislocated elbow. Saw The Shrew on opening night, just before we left to return across the Pacific; but The Straw appears to have been indefinitely postponed — an Iranian custom, I fear.

"Lectured for the Fulbright Commission at the U.S.I.S. hall in Taipei, Taiwan, on July 3 on the American Academic Theatre, after a couple of days in Hong Kong. Stopped in Taipei with Province Henry '50, who has collected an amazing batch of aboriginal Formosan art objects, most of them museum pieces, while engaged on some work for the government.

"Saw the Nakanes — father '22 and son '54 — and Ryo Toyokawa '21 in Tokyo and talked on the phone with Manning Hawthorne '30 and Bill Broe '39 between seeing five shows — all of different types — in five days; Ryo joined us for two of them. Our stay at Honolulu was made pleasant by Harry Forman '53 and Harry Rising '30; the former suffered a broken collarbone just before our arrival, but we met his charming wife. The new theatre at the University of Hawaii promises to be one of the finest in academic ranks — it is to open this fall.

"In California I was able to see three new theatre plants — at UCLA, Foothill College, and San Francisco State — where courses in acting, directing, design, and technical practice are offered even at the junior college level. They are less ambitious to develop playwrights. While in California, we were entertained by the John Ameses '30, by the Kip Smiths — Executive Officer for the Radar School — and by Patsy Means Castle, with whom we saw our second Chinese opera. In Denver we squeezed four performances of plays at different theatres and one dress rehearsal of a Shakespeare play into four days. At the last, on the University of Colorado campus, we caught up with Jeff Huntsman '64.

"Another ex-Radar faculty member — Bruce Hagemeister — entertained us in Nebraska and South Dakota, where we saw a performance by the University of South Dakota Players. Finally we caught a dress rehearsal of Green Grow the Lilacs at Denison University, where John Sweet was trained in drama. My broken arm slowed us down too much for us to follow Herbie Brown to the joys of the new Tyrone Guthrie Theatre at Minneapolis, but we stayed pretty well on schedule. All Bowdoin alumni are greatly interested in the changes being effected on campus."

Frederic Erle Thornlay Tillotson 1897-1963

Frederic E. T. Tillotson, a member of the Bowdoin faculty since 1936, died at the Maine Medical Center in Portland on November 25, 1963, after being seriously ill since September. His death added fresh sorrow to a campus already shut down to mourn the death of President Kennedy, and the Chapel bell, which had tolled for an hour that day during his funeral, took up once again its slow pealing.

Each of us has his own memories of Tilly. President Coles said of him that he brought to the College and to Brunswick "not only new insights and appreciation and tastes in music, but also widespread joy in music through personal participation. His spontaneous enthusiasm and his warmth of personality truly made Bowdoin 'A Singing College.' His artistry as a pianist brought new beauty to all who heard him play. His classroom teaching brought to hundreds of students an enjoyment and an understanding of music which were to be theirs always."

Professor Robert K. Beckwith, who became Director of the Glee Club two years ago, said, "Bowdoin without Tilly amounts to a paradox. A warm friend, a scholar, teacher, and musician, he will be mourned as he was loved by all who knew him. His loss is devastating."

The citation read at the time Tilly received an honorary degree from the College in 1946 said, in part, ". . . who in ten years building on sound foundations has brought that art forward as a most important part of a man's education at Bowdoin, giving to youth by his own beautiful piano accompaniments and recitals an example of excellence, and by his energy, industry, and initiative being an inspiration to his colleagues; generously sharing his talents with the community and the State; for many years though without a formal degree a master of his art, and now pro merito and Honoris Causa, Doctor of Music."

At the funeral service, held at St. Paul's Episcopal Church in Brunswick, hundreds of friends paid their final respects to Tilly, whose bubbling enthusiasm and charming effervescence made him a delight to have around on any occasion. Who can forget his shouted "Bravo!" at concerts in the Pickard Theater? Or his Chopin performances? Or the inimitable way — inimitable in both technique and zest — in which he conducted a concert?

As Bob Beckwith finished directing the Chapel Choir in a memorably beautiful rendition of "The 121st Psalm," many of us distinctly heard a soft and benevolent "Bravo," inaudible and unexpressed though it really was. (See outside back cover.) R.M.C.

New Boiler in Operation

The new 28-ton boiler in the steam plant easily passed its first full-load tests during the first cold days of the season early in December, when it was given the job of providing heat and hot water for all 22 buildings on the campus and six more off the campus. With the temperature in the 20's, it required less than half of the boiler's 35,000 pounds-of-steam-per-hour capacity to heat the buildings.

During the winter months the new boiler is supplying heat needed for the construction of the Senior Center. It is a water-tube, quick steam-generating model which operates at a 100-pound boiler pressure. The steam plant also has an older boiler with a 13,000 pounds-of-steam-per-hour capacity and a new 10,000 pound unit. When all three units are in full operation, various combinations can be used to meet various temperature conditions, giving the plant a good deal of flexibility.

McAbee Gets Hormell Cup

Edward A. McAbee, Jr. '66 of Wilmington, Del., received the Orren Chalmer Hormell Cup last fall for combining outstanding achievement in academic work in his freshman year with participation in athletics. The third-ranking member of the Class of 1966, he won freshman numerals in both football and golf and was a reserve guard on the 1963 championship football team. He is, of course, a Dean's List student and a James Bowdoin Scholar.

On October 25 McAbee also received the Scott C. W. Simpson '03 Award at the Zeta Psi initiation banquet as the top-ranking man in his delegation.

Recent Gifts

Recent gifts to the Capital Campaign include a $50,000 grant from the James Foundation of New York toward construction costs of the Senior Center and the establishment of the first endowed scholarship fund for students from New Hampshire.

The new fund, totaling $30,000, is the result of gifts of $15,000 from Bowdoin men in New Hampshire and a $15,000 matching grant from the New Hampshire Charitable Fund, which made its offer last April. Alumni beat the January 1, 1965, deadline by better than 13 months, with more money still coming in. Mayland H. Morse, Jr. '42 of Concord, N. H., led the successful effort.

Glee Club Concerts

The Glee Club, under the direction of Professor Robert K. Beckwith, will sing in Sanford on February 13 and in Newton Centre, Mass., on February 22. During the month of March the schedule includes the Campus Chest concert with Wheelock College in Brunswick on the 7th, an appearance in Boston with Radcliffe College on the 14th, and a concert at Cape Elizabeth on the 21st.

During its spring tour the Glee Club will sing at the University of New Brunswick in Canada on March 27, in Bangor on March 28, at Plymouth (N. H.) Teachers College on March 30, and in Boston with Wheelock College on April 1.

Another AYI Program

The National Science Foundation has granted the College $73,000 to support a fourth consecutive Academic Year Institute (AYI) for secondary school teachers of mathematics, to be held in 1964-65. The ten participants may become eligible for a master's degree after completion of the AYI work, which requires attendance in courses during the regular academic year, in addition to studies in an NSF summer institute on the campus.

Last summer twelve mathematics teachers received M.A. degrees from Bowdoin. Three completed the AYI program, and the other nine completed four summers of honors grade work in the Bowdoin-NSF program.

Career Conference

The third annual Campus Career Conference for undergraduates will be held on March 2. Sponsored by the Alumni Council in cooperation with the Placement Bureau, it will give members of all four classes an opportunity to discuss possible careers with alumni in those fields.

There will be five series of panel discussions, beginning at 9 o'clock in the morning and ending at 3:30 p.m. Panel topics are scientific research, engineering, government service (both foreign and domestic), psychology, investments, medicine, education, accounting, advertising, insurance, law, and banking.

There will be excused class cuts, a procedure that ought to result in increased attendance at the sessions.

The day's events will end with the Alumni Council's annual dinner for the senior class, at which Council President Arthur K. Orne '30 of Wilmington, Del., will preside and President Coles will speak.

Two New Appointments

C. Russell Crosby, Jr. '51 has joined the Faculty as Instructor in Music, following six years in Germany as a lecturer

Continuing Education for Alumni

Through its Special Committee on Continuing Education, the Alumni Council has for the past few years been looking into the activities of other college alumni groups. Programs to provide intellectual stimulation for alumni have ranged from a month-long Alumni College at the University of Wisconsin to single, brief lectures and discussions by various groups at commencement-time on other campuses. With varying degrees of success, Wesleyan University and Lafayette College have held so-called Alumni Colleges, lasting from a few days to a week and dealing with literature, foreign affairs, politics, economics, and other areas. Denison University has a single meeting at commencement at which there is a discussion of a year's assigned reading program. Alumni programs such as these are usually open not only to alumni but also to wives of alumni and friends of the colleges concerned. At Bowdoin the alumni programs have been limited essentially to a lecture at each Commencement and to one or two lectures and alumni gatherings each summer at the Oakes Center in Bar Harbor.

Some colleges such as Union, on the other hand, attempt to continue the alumni interest in education through special publications, generally quarterlies, containing articles in some way related to the institution, through authorship, historical connection, or otherwise. An investigation, under Alumni Council direction, indicates that a considerable amount of interesting material is published annually by the Bowdoin Faculty and by alumni. The suggestion has been made that the best of this material might be assembled in an annual publication, with relatively light cost in the way of royalties. However, there would have to be a part-time editor and necessary secretarial help for producing a magazine that would justify the relatively high expenses entailed in printing and mailing copies. The point has been urged that most Bowdoin alumni who desire intellectual stimulation are able to find it in the great number of literary and professional magazines now in existence.

Somewhat surprisingly, the reaction of the Alumni Council concerning organizing an Alumni College was unanimously negative. When asked at the 1963 fall meeting how many would be interested in attending a continuing education program at the College, not one Council Member raised his hand. The Committee, however, takes this opportunity of inviting the opinions of alumni as to desirable programs or an alumni publication. The next meeting of the Committee will be held in late February, and any comment, to be of use, should reach the chairman not later than February 25, 1964.

in music history and as choral director at the Munich campus of the University of Maryland. He has his master's degree from Boston University and has also studied at the University of Freiburg and the University of Munich in Germany.

Mr. Crosby has transcribed the complete works of Hans Leo Hassler, a 16th and 17th century German composer of church and vocal music, which are being published in twelve volumes in Germany. He has also completed research on a curious musical phenomenon of the 16th century, the Floetner Playing Cards. These are actual playing cards which have on their backs the words and music of twelve four-part songs. In 1962 Mr. Crosby received the Rudolf-Alexander Schroeder Gesellschaft Citation for his contribution to German music history and culture through publication of the Hassler works.

On January 1 Joseph Derbyshire joined the staff of the Bowdoin Library as Acquisitions Librarian. A graduate of the University of Utah, from which he also has a master's degree in English literature, he received a master of librarianship degree from the University of Washington in 1963. He had been a member of the staff at the University of Utah since 1954.

Modern Mathematics

Four mathematics majors are taking part in the Independent Study Program in Mathematics, which is supported by a grant from the National Science Foundation. It enables gifted students to advance as independent scholars through creative study under the minimal supervision of faculty members.

Edward C. Donahue '64 of Caribou is working on a project leading into homological algebra, William C. Rounds '64 of Portland is studying axiomatic developments in set theory, Steven K. Ingram '65 of Rehoboth, Mass., is studying differential equations for physics, and Clayton R. Lewis, Jr. '65 of Birmingham, Mich., is studying the theory of convex bodies.

Rounds was also the alternate on Bowdoin's College Bowl team and was selected as one of the two men to represent the State of Maine in the Rhodes Scholarship competition in December.

Art Exhibits

During the month of December the Museum of Art had on display an exhibition of prints and drawings, featuring a series of twenty woodcuts by Albrecht Durer. The seventy-five works are all part of the Museum's collection. Other artists represented were John Singer Sargent, Picasso, Whistler, Manet, Cezanne, and James Ensor.

During much of January the Museum is exhibiting the work of forty of England's most famous artists of the 18th and 19th centuries, including John Constable, J.M.W. Turner, and Thomas Rowlandson. The paintings are on loan from a private collection in New England and are on tour in this country under the auspices of the Smithsonian Traveling Exhibition Service.

Winter Sports Results

An impressive showing by the hockey team was the highlight of Bowdoin's winter sports record at the mid-January semester break.

The Polar Bear icemen had a record of 10 victories and 5 defeats. The basketball team had won 3 and lost 10, the swimming squad had a 2-3 record, and the rifle team had won 1 and lost 4. The indoor track and skiing seasons had not yet begun.

Coach Sid Watson's hockey club was the toast of the campus as it closed out the first semester with six consecutive triumphs, including Bowdoin's first hockey victory over arch-rival Colby since 1958. The team opened slowly but really began to roll as the season progressed. After losing to Brown 2-5 and Merrimack 3-5, the pucksters defeated Norwich 5-2 and American International 5-4 in overtime. This was followed by a 1-4 loss to Harvard and a 5-0 whitewashing of Massachusetts.

Next came the Invitational Christmas Hockey Tournament at Williams. Bowdoin finished second in the tourney, but it took an overtime period to deprive the Polar Bears of the title. In the first game they upset favored Williams 6-3, but Hamilton won the championship contest in a 2-3 overtime heartbreaker.

After losing to a strong Dartmouth club 3-5 early in January, the icemen began a winning streak that was still intact when sports action halted for mid-year examinations. They started the victory skein by taking a 1-0 forfeit from Pennsylvania when the visiting team's only goalie twisted his knee in the first period and was unable to continue. In a sportsmanlike gesture, Coach Watson permitted the visitors to have the services of Bowdoin goalies for the remainder of the informal game, which actually wound up in a 6-6 tie with no overtime.

There was nothing tainted about the next five triumphs. Bowdoin downed New Hampshire 2-1 and then beat Army for the first time ever at West Point 7-5. A near-capacity crowd at the Bowdoin Arena went limp with excitement as the team defeated Colby 2-1 in overtime for Coach Watson's first victory over the Mules. M.I.T. was the next victim, by a score of 11-2, and Bowdoin trounced Amherst 7-1.

Leading the scoring parade for Bowdoin is Dave Mechem '64 with a total of 20 points, figured on the basis of 9 goals and 11 assists. Close behind him with 19 points is Devens Hamlen '64, who is first in goals with 10 and also has 9 assists to his credit. Fred Filoon '64 and Ed Fitzgerald '66 have 17 points each, Filoon with 8 goals and 9 assists and Fitzgerald with 5 goals and a team-leading total of 12 assists. Captain Joe Tarbell '64 has 16 points with 7 goals and 9 assists. Other Polar Bears in double figures are Bill Matthews '65 with 2 goals and 10 assists for 12 points, and Bill Allen '66 with 6 goals and 5 assists for 11 points.

The work of goalie Dave Coupe '65 has been nothing short of sensational, and his performance in the nets has earned him a spot among the leading goalies in the East.

Graduation of key men from last year's state championship basketball squad has forced Coach Ray Bicknell to make this a building season. Nevertheless, his team pulled off a major upset in winning the Downeast Classic at Bangor.

The hoopsters opened with a 60-84 loss to Harvard and a 69-76 defeat at the hands of New Hampshire. Then came a 74-77 loss to Colby, a 71-73 defeat by Bates, and a 43-69 decision to Maine. In the Bangor tournament, however, the team whipped Maine 85-80 in overtime and then copped the crown with a 76-73 victory over Colby.

The basketball team then lost to Colby 58-63, Maine 72-78, and M.I.T. 63-67. The club's first regular-schedule victory was over Amherst, by a score of 69-51. Just before the semester break, Bowdoin lost to Bates 68-76 and Wesleyan 57-85.

Dick Whitmore '65 is pacing the team in the scoring department, with 76 field goals and 46 foul shots for a total of 198 points. Howie Pease '66, the high scorer on last season's freshman team, has 51 field goals and 43 free throws for 145 points.

Mike Napolitano '64 has 121 points, with 51 goals from the floor and 19 charity tosses. Captain Harry Silverman '64 has 45 field goals and 25 free throws for 115 points.

Lack of sufficient depth has hurt the record of Coach Charlie Butt's swimming team. The club opened with a 49-45 victory over Connecticut but lost its next two meets — to Springfield 33-62 and to Amherst 37-57. The swimmers splashed to a 56-39 triumph over New Brunswick but then were defeated by M.I.T. 39-56.

Some of the Polar Bear swimming standouts have been Captain Pete Seaver '64, in the individual medley and 500 freestyle; Tim Robinson '65, who has set new Curtis Pool records in the 100 and 200 freestyles; John Halford '64, in the butterfly; and Shawn Leach '65, in the breaststroke.

The highlight of the varsity rifle squad's season has been an upset over Dartmouth 1,370 to 1,331. But M/Sgt. Marshall Bailey's team has been trying to find the range since that opening victory. The club has lost to St. Michael's 1,342 to 1,353, Nasson 1,361 to 1,374, M.I.T. 1,376 to 1,378, and Norwich 1,373 to 1,415.

Coach Frank Sabastanski's track team opens its regular schedule in February. The annual Christmas Gambol was won by Ray Bird '66, who scored 24 points by taking the 40, low hurdles, and 300, in addition to a fourth in the broad jump. Alex Schulten '66 was second with 18 points. The Class of 1966 walked away with the Interclass Meet, with double wins being turned in by Schulten, Paul Soule, and freshman Tom Allen. Dave McDowell '64 broke the meet record for the broad jump, Schulten set a meet mark in the 35-pound weight, also won the discus, and finished second in the high jump.

The skiing team was looking forward to starting its schedule with the arrival of more snow. — JDK

Three Summer Institutes

The National Science Foundation has granted Bowdoin a total of $132,700 to conduct three Institutes for secondary school teachers next summer. The programs will be in Chemistry, Mathematics, and Marine Biology, and about 120 teachers from throughout the country will take part in them.

The Institutes will open on June 29 and run for six weeks, ending on August 7. Professor Samuel E. Kamerling will direct the program in Chemistry, Professor Richard L. Chittim '41 that in Mathematics, and Professor Alton H. Gustafson that in Marine Biology.

The grants include $38,400 for the Chemistry Institute, $53,600 for the Mathematics Institute, and $40,700 for the Marine Biology Institute. The money will be applied to the operating expenses of the programs and to stipends for participants.

Winter Houseparty Play

A native Russian touch will be evident in the Masque and Gown's production of the 19th century classic Russian farce The Inspector-General by Gogol on February 13 and 15. The influence will be provided by Eugene Sherbakoff, a Russian-born actor and director who now lives in the Maine town of Richmond. He is advising Director of Dramatics Pat Quinby '23 concerning the staging of the play.

The second production of The Inspector-General will be presented as part of the Winter Houseparty weekend February 14 and 15. Count Basie and his orchestra will play at the Friday night dance in the Sargent Gymnasium. Other events of the weekend include a fraternity snow sculpturing contest, selection of a Houseparty Queen, an art exhibition, and a variety of athletic contests. The snow sculpture theme is "Comic Strip Characters."

Scholar Athletes

All four of the most prized fall sports trophies were awarded to Dean's List students who are also leading athletes. All-Maine football tackle Dave Andrew '64 received the Howland Trophy, which goes to the varsity football player who has made the most marked improvement and who best exemplifies the qualities of aggressiveness, cooperation, enthusiasm for the game, and fine sportsmanship.

All-Maine end Frank Drigoras '64 won the Reardon Trophy, presented to a senior who has made an outstanding contribution to the team and the College as a man of honor, courage, and leadership.

Ed Bell '66, a halfback on the football team, won the Philoon Trophy, presented to a non-letter winner who has made an outstanding contribution to the squad, and Bill Horton '64, co-captain of the soccer team, received the Levine Trophy for exemplifying the traits of sportsmanship, valor, and desire. He was named to the All-Maine soccer squad.

1963 Class Survey

Last summer 1963 Class Secretary Charles Micoletau conducted a survey of his class. 139 men responded, with just over half — or 70 — stating their intention of doing graduate work in 1963-64. Of the other 69 men 26 are in military service, 14 are in business, 15 are teaching, and 14 are engaged in other activities.

Of the 70 men in graduate or professional school, 19 are in law school, 14 in math or the sciences, 10 in business or economics, 8 in medicine, 3 in the ministry, and 16 in other fields.

In December members of Zeta Psi Fraternity invited the Faculty and Staff of the College to a buffet supper. Several hundred people partook of the sumptuous fare prepared by Zeta chef Pete Tenneson. Shown here are President and Mrs. Coles, Zeta President Dave Treadwell '64, Professor and Mrs. Athern P. Daggett '25, and Mrs. Samuel A. Ladd, Jr. '29.

On October 18 the Novio E. Bertrand Hall of Wildlife was dedicated at the Park Museum, Roger Williams Park, Providence, R. I. Mr. Bertrand, who accompanied Admiral Donald B. MacMillan '98 to the Arctic and who as a taxidermist prepared some of the animals in Bowdoin's Arctic collection, died on December 1, 1962. He was taxidermist for five years at the Park Museum, where he completed wildlife habitat groups of Rhode Island, Northern New England, and the Sub-Arctic.

FREDRIC KLEES, The Round of the Year: An Almanac: The Macmillan Company, New York, 1963; pp. 278; $5.95.

Described under the title as an almanac, this is a far cry from the dog-eared, yellow booklet that always hung in our farm kitchen when I was a child. Both books record the natural changes in earth, water, and sky relative to the seasons, but here the likeness ends. While records provide the framework for Mr. Klees' book, it is his personal observations and reflections from day to day that make it charming.

Any keeper of a diary will tell you that he keeps this record for himself. It is an instrument of introspection, harboring thoughts and feelings close to the heart. This book is a portrait of a contented person with a finely developed sensitivity to beauty — the kind of beauty that envelops each of us. Mr. Klees has recorded it in his almanac, and we are privileged to read it.

The author is a professor of English at Swarthmore College in Pennsylvania. He lives in an old stone house that stands beside the Crum. His almanac starts in March, when the year's round begins for him. He has seen the last snowfall and witnessed the first thundershower of the season. High water in the creek fills his home with the sound of the falls. The robins have come, and along with them the first crocuses. He digs dandelion greens and helps his stepmother prepare Easter baskets for the neighborhood children. There is hardly a day's entry without some reminiscing — sometimes about his childhood or places he has visited; sometimes a story he has heard. Bowdoin men will appreciate his references to his college days. Of the people he meets or has met the remarks are kind, as if to say, "Isn't human nature wonderful?"

The Round of the Year is the work of an artist. The pen and ink drawings on the jacket and those that follow on the first day of each month are the work of the author. They are well-executed and add to my appreciation of the book. A blind man having the book read to him would not miss the pictures because the words draw the pictures in equally fine detail. Virtually everything in the book has color. I particularly like an account of bird's-foot violets so thick that there were forty-four blooms between the spread of the fingers, and a description of wine-red maple buds against a chicory blue sky.

Seemingly anyone who reads this book would discover that he and Mr. Klees share common interests. His days are sparked with his enthusiasm for gardening, bird-watching, painting, swimming, walking with his dog, nutting, marketing, reading, hunting wildflowers, and writing.

One of the most beautiful hymns I know proclaims "All beautiful the march of days as seasons come and go. . . ." It is refreshing to recognize this thought anew in The Round of the Year.

HODDING CARTER, First Person Rural: Doubleday and Company, 1963; pp. viii and 249; $4.50.

How can the liberal arts tradition of the well-versed man be preserved in a time of increasing technical specialization?

This, says Hodding Carter, is one of the great questions which plague man of the machine age. In First Person Rural, the 1963 winner of the Bowdoin Prize pays his respects to the specialists ("Our civilization and our self-protection demand them") but adds this somber warning:

... a specialization that begins in the high school and continues unendingly to the specialist's rendezvous with his laboratory neither adds much to our national culture nor to the internal safeguarding of democracy. A nuclear physicist, if undisturbed, could conceivably adjust himself to the police state. A teacher of American government could not."

In an eloquent chapter entitled "The Liberal Arts and the Bill of Rights," Mr. Carter notes, "The liberal arts can flourish only in an atmosphere of intellectual freedom. One requirement for institutional freedom is a degree of financial security as a buttress against pressures political and ideological. The present hard-pressed condition of so many of our private, non-denominational liberal arts colleges is not reassuring. Greater alumni support and a broader concept of corporate giving appear the only practical alternatives to reduction of our liberal arts colleges in number, scope, and importance."

Mr. Carter has recorded for all the world to read what he learned as a 16-year-old Bowdoin freshman: "Never before had folklores, mores, inherited certainties been really challenged. And so it is that my greatest and lasting intellectual debt is to the faculty — and to some fellow students — of a small Maine college. They made me think. They introduced me to divine reason. In that school of Longfellow and Hawthorne and Coffin, a campus editor or even poet could rank with football captains. There, the heretic could have his say. . . . There I first discovered the humanities, the eternal, ever-identical struggle between good and evil. And the meaning of the Bill of Rights. . . ."

There are 26 chapters divided into four sections in First Person Rural, and much of the material is based on magazine and newspaper articles written by Mr. Carter during the past decade. There is something here for every reader, and all of it is written by the distinguished southern editor with charm, perception, kindness, and sincerity. There are comedy and nostalgia — his boyhood in Louisiana, summers in Maine. There is drama — hunting big game in South Africa and the Philippines. And there are unforgettable profiles — of Mr. Carter's father, who never shirked a dangerous task because "somebody had to do it"; of the young Negro doctor who came home from the war to Greenville, Miss., with an Air Force medal and doubts about his future; of William Faulkner, who "aligned himself at the last with the soul of the nation rather than with the meaner spirited in his own land" and "became for the majority of his Mississippi contemporaries a renegade in his homeland."

Mr. Carter writes with calmness and moderation of the problems which now disturb his homeland. Unlike some critics who can find only bad things south of the Mason-Dixon line, he recognizes some of the very real accomplishments of the South, which, he says, "is at long last entering the American mainstream." Gone forever, he suggests, is the romantic Southern image of "a never-never world of chivalry and moonlight and white pillars, roses, honeysuckle, dueling at dawn, and of gallant, chivalrous men riding off to war."

The author loves the South and loves his town of Greenville, where he plays a leading role in civic affairs. He rejects the notion that, as a newspaper editor, he might be improperly influenced by taking a vigorous part in town affairs. "I have no right to be the town scold without taking part in the town's life," he explains.

First Person Rural is a great book written by a great man. Every Bowdoin alumnus should read it.

REGINALD ROBINSON, DAVID F. DEMARCHE, and MILDRED K. WAGLE, Community Resources in Mental Health: Basic Books, Inc., New York, 1960; pp. xxvi and 425; $8.50.

This is a book which I seriously recommend not be read by all those citizens who prefer to wear blinders when it comes to considering the present state of community resources in mental health and who do not wish to be confused by the facts.

This volume is one of several now-famous reports of the Joint Commission on Mental Illness and Health. The authors surveyed the 3103 counties in the continental United States in order to obtain a quantitative statement of the supply of community resources. In addition, they conducted intensive field studies in fifteen counties representative of the different areas of the country. "Community resources" are wisely, realistically, and broadly defined by the authors; the definition is not limited to the local mental hygiene clinic (if any), as is the tendency of too many mental health associations. "Community resources" here refer to all those factors and agencies which do, or could, promote mental health either directly or through ameliorating social conditions which have a distinctly deleterious effect upon the self-esteem or security systems of our citizens. For example, over forty pages are devoted to recreation and group work, a realm many of us find it easy to overlook. With the anticipated increase in automation, it is clear that recreation will mean more than "fun" and that there is a community responsibility here which is not discharged by leaving the matter to individual, home-grown, do-it-yourself kits. It is equally clear that clinics and recreation programs are not the appropriate techniques for relieving the anxieties that are attendant upon economic hardship and unemployment.

In their field studies of the fifteen counties, Robinson and the others were able to examine the inter-relationships among the various facets of the community at the grass-roots level — or, more accurately, at the level of the barren plains and dismal swamps. The national picture is a horrifying mish-mash of variability ranging from minimal adequacy to positive promotion of mental disorder. The national scene is bad enough to please a state's rightist, or, worse still, a county's rightist.

Some specific findings are in order. Less than one quarter of the counties in the United States have any kind of a mental health clinic. Family casework agencies, a potentially important resource, are found in only nine percent of the counties. The same small percentage of counties has community welfare councils with executive staffs. Ten per cent of the nation's school children need special educational services. In thirty-seven per cent of the nation's counties there are no child welfare services of any sort. The italicizing of any gives a clue to the quality of some of the existent child welfare services. In some of the communities in our Elizabethan New England the town fathers still publish Paupers Lists. One of our New England states competes annually (and usually quite successfully) to be among the first five states with the highest suicide rate. Lest anti-provincialism be suspected on the part of your New Englander reviewer, let it be quickly added that tough competition for a place in "the first five" comes from the West Coast, among other places. In this report there is an appropriate focus upon the inadequate care for children; where such conditions are inadequate, we are sowing the seeds that will later blossom into the full flower of emotional disorder. "The demands of society — quite apart from humanitarian concern for the welfare of the individual — necessitate a strong, thorough-going public effort to provide comprehensive services that will meet the needs of children, wherever they may live" (p. 125). This obvious truth is not compatible with administrative decisions and legal rulings that foster desertion by the father so that the mother and children may receive Aid to Dependent Children benefits; and in some states the mother may not even apply for aid until her husband has been gone six months.

According to the Reviewer's Code and Handbook of Common Practice, the reviewer must find something to object to in each book. Accordingly, this reviewer, while holding his professional biases in check, takes exception to the following dreamy dictum: "Only clergymen with intensive training in clinical practice under expert supervision should ever attempt to counsel persons with mental and emotional problems" (p. 249). Let us hope for Robinson and his co-authors that they will not get a request for professional assistance every time a member of the cloth out in the bush — or even nearer by — finds himself confronted with a parishioner who might have "mental" or "emotional problems."

The book is characterized by good chapter summaries and by sets of realistic recommendations. The authors give due recognition to the genuine differences among the many communities in the United States, and it follows from this recognition that the more specific the recommendations, the more they must be tailored to the individual and unique community.

The book the authors have written is commendable; the conditions they have reported on are deplorable. We, as a nation, would rather deplore social problems than contribute the time, the money, the energy needed to attempt to solve the problems — until they hit us personally. We put up with untrained (and sometimes untrainable) probation officers, ante-diluvian judges, courts unintegrated with other community services, underpaid and undertrained teachers, understaffed mental health clinics with their universally long waiting lists — and so it goes, while we exercise our national birthright to complain and gripe.

To end on a less than completely sour note, let it be added that the book has been published; it would be helpful if all of our citizens would read, at least, the fourteen-page staff review at the beginning of the book. This might persuade some of them to read the chapter summaries; and who knows, maybe a few would. . . . For a final, and hopeful, note, it should be said that the federal government has now appropriated funds which in part, anyway, spring from, and may implement, the recommendations of this report; funds are now available for the several states to make their own even more detailed studies of their own needs for improving the mental health of their citizens.

JOHN GOULD, Monstrous Depravity: A Jeremiad and a Lamentation About Things to Eat: William Morrow and Company, New York, 1963; pp. 224; $3.50.

"Où sont les neiges d'antan?" Thus the fifteenth century poet Villon nostalgically bemoaned the gone-by.

And so today our man from Lisbon Falls would have it with things to eat of yesterday. Exploring the whole degeneration of food preparation — packaged cake mixes, instant coffee, sulphured molasses, smoke injected hams, machine made chicken pies, pasted on a foil dish, head welded by the Bessemer process — John Gould looks back fondly to the days when dining tables were of rived pine or spruce, covered with oil-cloth; when fare was salt pork, salt cod, beans, bread, johnny cake, molasses, and tea. In those halcyon days, when pasteurization was merely a process to retard and stop the fermentation of wine, the hardy housewife could favor her hungry swain with buttermilk biscuits made by churning the prime ingredients from farm-sweet milk, containing good bacteria.

Present-day wives, favoring agronomists' grapefruit carrying health bureau seals of approval, may tend to berate Mr. Gould's concepts of the delights of grandma's pantry, but there can be no argument with the good humor that pervades his amusingly written exploration of Good Old New England Edibles.

Bowdoin undergraduates and alumni alike can take heart from a historical review that points up the fact that grandpa was as often master of the skillet as grandma, and that it is more than likely that if good cooking is ever to get a foothold in these parts again, it will have to be as a result of our demonstrating to the little lady that cooking is an art.

Bountiful in recipes which I pray prove edible, the book is a tongue-in-cheek plea for more good talk about good things to eat — and I'm all for it.

EDWARD POLS, The Recognition of Reason: Southern Illinois University Press, Carbondale, Illinois, 1963; p. 256 and xi; $6.00.

This essay is a truly distinguished performance, remarkable both in style and in content. It is conceived in the great tradition of classical philosophy but includes frequent reference to the tangled context of contemporary theories. Despite his traditional orientation, Mr. Pols' thought is essentially original in the true sense of "authentic" or "autonomous." Certainly he well deserves the distinction of initiating Kimball Plochmann's series of Philosophical Explorations, which is dedicated to furthering new departures in philosophical research. Mr. Pols' line of argument may well, when its true importance becomes recognized, exercise a lasting influence upon American philosophy.

Mr. Pols has undertaken to reassert the authority of philosophical contemplation in opposition to recent positivist and skeptical movements. He thus undertakes to guarantee the validity of philosophical knowledge. His strategy involves merging two disciplines, namely, metaphysics and the theory of knowledge, which in his thought mutually involve one another. In developing his argument, Mr. Pols insists that philosophical thinking is a "first-order" operation. By this he means that the philosopher achieves a first-hand knowledge of his world; philosophical thinking is not limited to commentary upon the work of the scientist, the religious teacher, or the artist. Mr. Pols argues eloquently and cogently for the autonomy and independence of philosophical thought which is not to be confined to an ancillary status. Philosophy is neither the handmaiden of theology nor the press agent of science. It stands as the culmination of the intellectual enterprise. In assuming this attitude, Mr. Pols is well aware that, at least in this country and in England, he challenges the vested interests of a well organized and aggressive establishment that centers about the repudiation of philosophy as an autonomous discipline that may achieve a radical insight of its own. Thus he will have to meet the combined attacks of many positivists, analysts, and ordinary language philosophers, among whom we often encounter misologists disguised as rationalists or even as logicians. Such opposition is formidable; however, if we may judge by the quality of his present contribution, Mr. Pols will give a good account of himself in controversy. He has chosen a well considered position from which to meet the counterattacks of all those who refuse to recognize the possibility of a philosophy committed to a theory of Being.

Mr. Pols is to be commended for both his courage and his strategy. His position is not to be ignored or lightly dismissed.

In his account of human knowledge, Mr. Pols avoids a sharp distinction between reason and experience, between theory and practice. Here his argument lies close to that of Kant: concepts without percepts are empty; percepts without concepts are blind, even perhaps non-existent. Reason as the active or spontaneous energy of our awareness is present at the level of experience, including sensuous observation and the more elementary forms of introspection. Reason presides throughout the growth of experience, maintaining a creative autonomy of interpretation adjusted to the approach and interests of the observer. Thus, even sensibility is in its own way creative. This creative power is, however, not arbitrary: responsibility of factual reference must support spontaneity of interpretation. Our situation is always this rather than that, a fact which we may sometimes willfully ignore but only at our peril. This primitive objectivity is nonetheless always open to interpretation conditioned by the interests of the agent or observer. It can never be "given" as ready-made or finally definitive in content.

The interplay of autonomous interpretation and responsible acceptance of our position constitutes the life of reason upon which is based our orientation in the world. Reason is critical and self-corrective. The process whereby it seeks a coherent interpretation of its own activity and its place in the world is the matrix of philosophy itself. We move from the "non-systematic reflection of Everyman, who is quite aware that he lives in many dimensions, whose proper order and relation he cannot establish" (p. 17) into a growing but never final understanding of the meaning of abstract and concrete — that is, of appearance and reality as reason comes to recognize them. These arch concepts constitute the background against which reason apprehends and gradually characterizes more and more explicitly its own activity. The history of philosophy records the fortunes of this progress, and Mr. Pols has accordingly made frequent reference to the major concepts of such thinkers as Plato, Aristotle, Kant, and, among more recent writers, A. N. Whitehead. These references are often very illuminating, considered either as contributions to the history of philosophy or as illustrations of Mr. Pols' own theory. Thus his comments on Aristotle's ousia, interpreted as concrete and structured entity rather than as essence, are interesting and in accord with recent scholarship. Again, his interpretation of Kant's thing in itself as entity in the fullness of its concreteness is challenging and in line with many suggestions in Kant's later writings. The realm or the realms of appearance are perspectives or realms of discourse apprehended from the point of view of some special interest.

Being itself or Being qua Being is envisaged (or postulated?) by reason which recognizes its own basic commitment to do full justice to the reality of those things which are apprehended, now in one aspect, now in another, by the several groups of investigators that pursue in comparative independence the manifold objectives of specialized research. Here we are close both to Aristotle and to Whitehead. The notion of concretion, the full reality, the density and togetherness of things, is paramount. As Wallace Stevens once put it in a great philosophical poem, we must speak of the "res itself and not about it." Here the poet and the artist may supplement the scientist, since there is a nisus toward individuality dominant throughout their creative work.

Reality or concretion, the fulfillment of individuality, is the outward manifestation of what Mr. Pols boldly describes as "ontic power." Here we may be reminded of the poet Gerard Manley Hopkins, whose "in-scape" is an esthetic revelation of this energy. This idea also recalls the scholastic "act of Being" and Plato's "becoming toward entity," the genesis eis ousian of his most mature dialogue. In Mr. Pols' distinction between "ontic power" and causation, as we usually understand it, lies the heart of his argument. His development of this basic distinction is fascinating but all too brief. It offers, however, a central objective to the speculative philosopher and makes possible a reorientation of metaphysical research that has been in recent years, certainly since Whitehead's Modes of Thought, sorely, even desperately, wanting in British and American philosophy.

This is not the place to consider the many problems relevant to a full evaluation of Mr. Pols' contribution. There are, however, a number of points that await elucidation. Thus, from a historical point of view, I am not sure that Mr. Pols is quite fair to Kant, whom he accuses of subjectivism, and I would be inclined to make more central his discussion of the freedom of human will and its relation to an "open" future of alternative possibilities — but this is because I have never outgrown my undergraduate horror of Calvin's doctrine of predestination. Furthermore, Professor Plochmann in his admirable foreword has mentioned certain difficulties that deserve consideration. His questions arise from recognition of the fact that for most of us concreteness remains an ideal which our thought never quite realizes — or very rarely. Again, I should like to see some description of Heidegger's notion of Being as contrasted with Mr. Pols' theories. Mr. Pols' interest in Kant and in Plato has drawn him into a problematic situation in some ways very similar to that of Heidegger, for whom, also, Being escapes full realization — in our life and thought. But there is happily ample time for such discussion, and we may be sure that it will be rewarding since Mr. Pols' work is important for the problems that it raises as well as for the firm nucleus of its assertion.

In closing, let me refer to an amusing point of minor importance. I have in mind the anecdote about Whitehead and his baffled correspondent. "A correspondent who once taxed Whitehead (so the story goes) with some difficulty in the doctrine of Eternal Objects was infuriated to receive the tranquil reply that Whitehead had 'accepted the difficulties of the Platonic position'" (p. 223). Since I suspect that I am myself responsible for the presence of this anecdote in The Recognition of Reason, let me confirm its essential truth. Whitehead's correspondent, none other than Norman Kemp-Smith, the author of the famous commentary on the Critique of Pure Reason, was indeed profoundly disturbed by what he seemed to consider a certain irresponsibility in Whitehead's reply. I can well remember his rumbling comments made before his Edinburgh seminar during the winter of 1928-29. Perhaps "infuriated" is too strong a word, but in any case I am responsible for its use. My report of this incident was made on an occasion convivial as well as scholarly, but I recalled clearly at that time, as I do now, the great Kantian's dismay in the face of Whitehead's ready willingness to admit that no completely definitive answer to his challenging question was immediately to be forthcoming. The moral is an important one. Any authentic philosophical commitment involves us in "difficulties" with which we must live in the hope, humble and persistent, of achieving some resolution. Thus, I am quite willing to follow Whitehead's lead and to "accept the difficulties" of Mr. Pols' line of argument. Patience and fortitude are called for. After all, the prize at stake is a great one. It is none other than the achievement of a way of thought by which, if we may quote Whitehead once more, reason is "established in her domain supreme." To renounce this undertaking is a counsel of despair that would ultimately substitute emotion for insight, self assertion for understanding. At this juncture Mr. Pols is wise to recommend a fortitude, even a stubbornness, of the intellect and to interpret Whitehead's acceptance of "difficulties" as a recognition of the human situation, or we may say of the human predicament, within which reason must struggle toward an interpretation of its own place in the world. This struggle is the very life of philosophy. Mr. Pols has offered us a splendid introduction to philosophy as so conceived.

MARY ELLEN CHASE, The Prophets for the Common Reader; Norton and Company, New York, 1963; pp. 183; $4.50.

The history of organized religion has been a long contest between "the keeper of the temple" and "the voice crying in the wilderness." Traditionally, the priest symbolizes devotion to the status quo, while the prophet sets himself against convention and cries out in behalf of justice and truth.

The distinction between the two religious figures is, of course, less simple than the foregoing contrast implies. Every priest has his prophetic moments, and the prophet has only to win eventual acceptance before he begins to worry about his position. But the polarity implied here has some validity in understanding the ebb and flow of religious vitality, and any book which appears whose purpose is to define prophecy is bound to attract attention in religious quarters.

Mary Ellen Chase here makes an effort at making the prophet, and the religious phenomenon of prophecy, intelligible to the layman. This work, which comes as a companion volume to The Psalms for the Common Reader, does not purport to be a thorough study, but only an introduction to the subject. It is just that, and no more.

Miss Chase selects six Old Testament prophets for analysis: Amos, Hosea, Isaiah of Jerusalem, Micah, Jeremiah, and Isaiah of Babylon. Few biblical scholars would quarrel with her choices: these are, undeniably, the heroes of Old Testament prophecy. Her grounding in current biblical scholarship is evidently above average for a lay person, although she does display a certainty about some matters from which the typical Professor of Bible would shrink with dismay. Somewhat incongruously, while accepting in general the very latest scholarship, she at the same time reserves the right to ignore it where this discipline threatens to undermine the image she has of the prophet. Curiously, having made that reservation, she rarely exercises it.

The book consists in four parts. The first analyzes prophecy in the Old Testament period, and does so quite well. The second part attempts to bring the six named prophets to life, and probably is less successful. Too little is known of the men in question to permit portraits which are both vivid and intellectually honest. The third part discusses "Hebrew Prophecy as Literature," and the final section is a compendium of representative selections from the six prophets discussed. Parts Three and Four seem to move the book away from its initial direction: the study of a religious phenomenon suddenly gives way to an exercise in literary criticism.

Any effort at combining ancient history, biography, literary criticism, and an anthology of writings in one 183-page volume must inevitably deprive itself of the compliment of thoroughness. This book is surely a superficial study. It could not be otherwise, nor did the writer pretend that it should be. Nevertheless, this is an interesting book, with a generally engaging style, and it should prove useful as an introduction to an important facet of religious experience.

Notes

A memoir of the late Robert P. T. Coffin '15 was published last fall. The author is his sister Annie, Mrs. Harold Sanborn of Altou, N. H. Entitled The Life of Robert Peter Tristram Coffin and Family, the privately printed volume begins with the family's ancestry, which is traced back to the Norman invasion of England, and the arrival of five brothers on the island of Nantucket, Mass., in about 1666.

The book is on sale at the Moulton Union Bookstore on the campus.

Robert G. Albion '18 is the author of an article entitled "From the Shuttle to the Flag of Convenience — the Story of the American Merchant Fleet," which appeared in the November 23, 1963, issue of the Harvard Alumni Bulletin. The article is based on the final talk in a series of lectures which Professor Albion delivered on "The Great Seafaring Peoples" under the auspices of the Lowell Institute last fall.

The second revised edition of Practical Bank Credit by Herbert V. Prochnow, President of the First National Bank of Chicago, and Roy A. Foulke '19, retired Vice President of Dun and Bradstreet, Inc., was published recently by Harper and Row. The book deals with the operations of bank credit, analysis of financial statements, and the factors which enter into the extension of credit and loans. Procedures are illustrated by facsimiles of banking forms, tables, and Dun and Bradstreet materials.

Director of Dramatics George H. Quinby '23 is the author of "Shakespeare at Bowdoin College, 1912-1962," which appeared in the Summer, 1963, issue of the Shakespeare Quarterly.

The article describes Bowdoin's tradition of Commencement plays, which began with The Taming of the Shrew in 1912.

We recently received the following letter from our prolific scholar Willis Barnstone '48, a member of the faculty at Indiana University:

"We continue happily at Indiana University. Some books coming out are Solitudes by Luis de Gongora, tr. by E. M. Wilson, ed. by Willis Barnstone, Las Americas, spring, 1964; Poems of Sappho, in Greek and English translation, translated and with introduction by Willis Barnstone, foreword by Andrew Byrn, Doubleday Anchor Books, July, 1964; Medieval, Renaissance, and Baroque Spanish Lyric Poetry, in Spanish and English translation by Willis Barnstone, Introduction by Concha Zardoya, Las Americas, fall, 1964; Greek Lyric Poetry (2nd edition), tr. by Willis Barnstone, Indiana University Press, Bloomington, fall, 1964. Some poems have been published or taken recently by the Antioch Review, Greek Heritage, Arizona Quarterly, Chelsea Review, and Columbia University Forum."

S. Prescott Fay, Jr. '51 is the author of an article entitled "Skopje in Retrospect," which appeared on the Editorial Page of the Christian Science Monitor on November 9. Mr. Fay is a member of the faculty at Anatolia College in Thessaloniki, Greece. He knew Skopje well and had many friends there.

The November, 1963, issue of the American Journal of Physics contains a report of laboratory experiments in physical phenomena carried on at Bowdoin by Stanley R. Flagg '63 and James D. Rancourt '63 when they were undergraduates. The experiments involved studies on the physical principle known as the Hall Effect, using evaporated metal films such as are created by thin deposits of metal under vacuum. The Hall Effect was discovered in 1879 by Dr. Edwin H. Hall of the Class of 1875, and it brought him international fame. The discovery, which involves the relationships of electrical current flow and applied magnetic fields, is of fundamental importance in the electronic industry of today.

Professor David B. Walker, on leave of absence from the College this year, is the author of "Federalism in a Changing America," an article which appeared in the November, 1963 issue of The County Officer, the publication of the National Association of Counties. The article was adapted from a talk delivered on September 13, 1963, before the Executive Leadership Institute of the U. S. Civil Service Commission in Washington, D. C. Professor Walker is Staff Director of the Subcommittee on Intergovernmental Relations of the Senate Committee on Government Operations.

ANDROSCOGGIN

Coach Nels Corey '39 and three Bowdoin football players from the Androscoggin County area, Captain Frank Drigotas '64, Jim Haddock '64, and Tim Love '66, were guests of the Androscoggin Bowdoin Club on Tuesday evening, December 3. Alumni and wives gathered at the Hotel Dewitt in Lewiston for a six o'clock social hour and dinner at seven.

The Club presented a special plaque for the College to Nels and the players. Coach Corey then spoke and showed highlight movies of the 1963 season.

BOSTON

Approximately 50 alumni and guests met at the Waltham Charter House on Monday evening, December 9, for a "dividend" stag football smoker, which was not listed in the preliminary program sent to all Boston-area alumni last fall. The guest of honor at the 8 o'clock meeting was Coach Nels Corey '39, who showed movies of the highlights of the football season. The next day he was also the speaker at the Boston Club's monthly luncheon meeting at the Union Oyster House, where he showed movies of the Bowdoin-Maine game.

During January the Prospective Students Committee, under Chairman Dick Wiley '49, is holding a series of subfreshman meetings in various sections of Greater Boston. A large number of subfreshmen (most of whom have the clearance of the Admissions Office and their guidance counselors as acceptable candidates for Bowdoin) are being entertained in the homes of alumni workers. The College is being represented at these meetings by Admissions Officers, members of the Faculty, and members of the Athletic Department.

On Friday evening, March 20, the Club will hold its annual dinner and ladies' night. Overseer Hodding Carter '27, Pulitzer-Prize-winning author and editor, will be the principal speaker, and President and Mrs. Coles will also be guests of honor. The meeting is set for 6:45 p.m. at the Lexington Motor Inn, Exit 45 W, Routes 128 and 2-A. At 8:30 on Thursday evening, May 14, the Club will sponsor its annual "Bowdoin Night at the Pops" at Symphony Hall.

BRUNSWICK

On Wednesday, October 16, the Club sponsored its annual fall meeting for alumni and subfreshman guests. Nearly 40 boys from secondary schools in the Brunswick area, as well as guidance counselors and other faculty members from their schools, were invited to visit the College. A guided tour of the campus from 4:30 to 5:30 p.m. was followed by a social hour at the Alumni House. At 6:45 the group moved to the Union for a buffet dinner.

Dr. Bob Stuart '44, Club President, presided at the meeting which followed dinner. He introduced President Coles, who spoke briefly and welcomed the visitors to the campus. Secretary Pete Fortin '37 reported the Club solvent, and Dr. Stuart expressed regret that Emerson Zeitler '20, the Club's devoted Alumni Council Representative, was confined to his home and unable to make one of his usual good reports.

During the main part of the program Coach Charlie Butt described soccer and swimming at Bowdoin and outlined other aspects of the athletic program. Biology Professor Jim Moulton spoke of the sciences at Bowdoin and their place in the liberal arts curriculum. Professor Bill Whiteside, Director of the Senior Center and the principal speaker, described Bowdoin's new program and the facilities that are being built to house it. The meeting concluded with a period of questions and answers.

On Wednesday evening, May 6, the Brunswick Club will hold its spring dinner meeting and ladies' night at the Bath Country Club.

CHICAGO

The Bowdoin Club of Chicago held its fall dinner meeting on Wednesday evening, October 30, at the Chicago Yacht Club. Present were 18 alumni from the Chicago area, six others from other Bowdoin centers in the Midwest, and four representatives from the College: Director of Admissions Hubert Shaw '36, Associate Director Robert Mellow, Assistant Director Walter Moulton '58, and Philip Wilder '23, Assistant to the President and Director of Student Aid. (The next day many of them took part in an admissions conference at the Lake Shore Club.) Mr. Shaw spoke about Bowdoin's admissions policies, and Mr. Wilder outlined the program of financial aid and the Bowdoin Plan for foreign students.

On Tuesday evening, January 28, Chicago alumni and their wives met for a social hour and dinner at the Chicago Yacht Club. Special guests were Dr. and Mrs. Laurence Brown, on their way from Brunswick to Australia. Dr. Brown was Visiting Lecturer in Psychology during the fall semester and is returning to his duties as Senior Lecturer in Psychology at the University of Adelaide, where he is a colleague of Professor Norman Munn, formerly a member of the Bowdoin faculty.

Coach Ray Bicknell will represent the College.

CLEVELAND

The Bowdoin Club of Cleveland held its annual Christmas-week luncheon for sub-freshmen on Friday, December 27, at the Mid-Day Club. Ten alumni, three undergraduates, and 12 of the 18 subfreshmen invited attended the meeting.

President Cal Vanderbeek '49 reports, "I think the meeting was an outstanding success, and it looks as if Bowdoin prestige is growing in Cleveland. I have no doubt the remarkable success of Bowdoin's appearance on the College Bowl helped."

Undergraduates Jim Weidner '64, Tad Gaither '64, and John Ranahan '67 spoke about current affairs on the Bowdoin campus. The Cleveland Club plans to have more undergraduate speakers in the future and may also invite parents.

The Club will hold its next meeting on Monday evening, March 16, when Basketball Coach Ray Bicknell will be the speaker.

CONNECTICUT

The Bowdoin Club of Connecticut is in its second year of monthly luncheon meetings. The group meets at 12:30 p.m. on the first Thursday of each month at the Shoreham Motor Hotel, 440 Asylum Avenue, in downtown Hartford. Luncheon Chairman Robert Spencer '60, 111 Pearl Street, Hartford, will be pleased to add the names of interested alumni to his mailing list and to have luncheon reservations from any alumnus.

During the fall and early winter the following were the luncheon speakers: News Director Joseph Kamin (September 5); Ralph Keirstead '26, President of the Club and Consultant in Science Education for the Connecticut State Department of Education (October 3); Professor Dodge Fernald, Chairman of the Psychology Department (November 7); Dr. John Cartland '39, Hartford pediatrician and Vice President of the Alumni Council (December 5); and Philip Wilder '23, Assistant to the President and Director of Student Aid (January 8). Professor Albert Thayer '22 will speak on February 6.

On Tuesday evening, December 10, the Club met in West Hartford at the First Church of Christ (Congregational), where the Reverend Gordon Stearns, Jr. '54 is one of the ministers. The guest of honor was Coach Nels Corey '39, who talked informally and showed movies of the 1963 football season. The Club presented to Nels a Bowdoin Chair bearing an engraved brass plate with this inscription: "To Coach Nels Corey '39, in Warm Appreciation for His Services to the College, Its Students, and Its Alumni, from the Bowdoin Club of Connecticut, 10 December 1963."

Professor Athern Daggett '25 will be the guest speaker on Friday evening, May 1, when the Club holds its annual dinner meeting and ladies' night.

KNOX-LINCOLN-WALDO

President Andy Williamson '55 presided at the fall dinner meeting of the Knox-Lincoln-

Waldo Bowdoin Club, held at the Knox Hotel in Thomaston on Thursday evening, November 14. Sixteen alumni and one undergraduate entertained 28 subfreshmen from local schools.

Admissions Director Bill Shaw '36, Professor Nate Dane '37, and Dick Cobb '65 represented the College. Mr. Shaw outlined Bowdoin admissions and financial aid, and Professor Dane, the principal speaker, gave a vigorous talk in which he described the merits of Bowdoin.

The Club will hold its next dinner, a ladies' night, on Thursday evening, June 18, at the Knox Hotel.

LONG ISLAND

The Bowdoin Club of Long Island held its annual fall dinner meeting on Wednesday, November 20, at McLaughlin's Restaurant in Roslyn.

Alumni Council Member Bob Bassinette '44 reported on the fall meeting of the Alumni Council and the Alumni Fund.

The principal speaker was Assistant Treasurer Glenn McIntire '25, who discussed current happenings on the campus. Also representing the College were Assistant Director of Admissions Walter Moulton '58 and Coach Charlie Butt.

The spring meeting is tentatively set for Thursday, May 21, at Point View Inn, Bayside Drive, Point Lookout, Long Island.

LOS ANGELES

Robert Mellow, Associate Director of Admissions, who was in California for a week and a half of admissions visits, was the guest speaker at the fall dinner meeting of the Bowdoin Club of Los Angeles. Alumni and wives gathered at the Talk o' the Town Restaurant in Pasadena on Wednesday evening, November 6, for a social hour and dinner.

MINNESOTA

Secretary Barney Barton '50 reports a successful meeting of the Bowdoin Club of Minnesota on Friday, December 27: "This noon the Club entertained 27 high school seniors and juniors at a Bowdoin luncheon. Our guest speakers were Jon Hageseth '67 and John Scholefield '67, who gave the boys their impressions of Bowdoin after their first three months on campus. They discussed fraternity life, sports, the curriculum, and the Senior Center."

The meeting was held at the North American Life and Casualty Company in Minneapolis, where Club President Jim Scholefield '32 is an executive. Others who helped with arrangements for the meeting by inviting schoolboy guests and serving as hosts were John Charlton '44, John Cummins '48, Ed Simonds '43, Tom Fairfield '53, Bill Nightingale '51, and the Secretary.

The Club will next meet on Tuesday evening, March 17, with Coach Sid Watson as its guest.

NEW YORK

The New York Bowdoin Club began the current season with a victory party and hot-and-cold buffet supper at the Williams Inn in Williamstown on Saturday, October 19. More than 300 alumni, wives, and other guests gathered to celebrate Bowdoin's victory over Williams. Representing the College were

President and Mrs. Coles, News Director and Mrs. Joe Kamin, and Alumni Secretary Pete Barnard '50. (After the game, the Bowdoin Touchdown Club of New York City, in the persons of Co-Managers Dan Dayton '49 and Hal Sewall '51, presented a 40-pound granite polar bear to end Jim MacAllen '66 as a small token of their great esteem.)

Coach Nels Corey '39 and Football Captain Frank Drigotas '64 were guests of honor at a meeting at the Yale Club on Tuesday, December 17. More than 100 alumni and wives gathered from 5 until 8 p.m., refreshments were served, and Coach Corey spoke about the season and showed motion picture highlights of the Polar Bears in action.

On Friday evening, February 7, the Club will hold its annual banquet at the new Princeton Club, 15 West Forty-third Street, New York City. President Coles will be the speaker.

NORTHERN NEW JERSEY

On October 22, 18 alumni and three guests gathered at the Suburban Cocktail Lounge in East Orange for the annual fall meeting of the Bowdoin Club of Northern New Jersey. Officers elected for 1963-64 were Peter O. Grant '48, President; and John E. Sylvester '54, Vice President. Mr. Grant continues to act as Secretary.

The speaker from the College was Professor William B. Whiteside, Director of the

PENOBSCOT

Club Secretary Lew Vafiades '42 reports, "The annual fall meeting of the Penobscot County Bowdoin Club was held at the Penobscot Valley Country Club in Orono on Friday, November 8. Forty-two alumni and guests attended a social hour at 6:00 and dinner at 7:15.

"President John Conti '52 presided and introduced Director of Athletics Mal Morrell '24, Basketball Coach Ray Bicknell, and Swimming Coach Charlie Butt. Director of the Moulton Union Don Lancaster '27 was also present.

"Mr. Conti announced that the Glee Club will give a concert in Bangor on Saturday, March 28. Mr. Butt paid tribute to Bowdoin's football squad, reviewed the records of the varsity and freshman soccer teams, and spoke of the swimming team's winter schedule and the prospects of several outstanding swimmers.

"Alumni Council Member Malcolm Stevenson '50 reported on the fall meeting of the Council. Mr. Bicknell spoke of prospects for the approaching basketball season.

"Mr. Morrell gave an interesting report on Bowdoin's physical education program. He also reviewed the football season to date, noted significant statistics about the team, and spoke of football schedules for the future. Worcester Polytechnic Institute is being scheduled, and the Tufts game will become the last one of the season, a former Bowdoin tradition. He also explained the reasons for dropping the University of Maine from the football schedule after 1964, pointing out that people often overlook the prime reason for college sports — that an athletic program is designed for the students who participate. Bowdoin will remain a small college while the University of Maine will continue to grow.

“Mr. Morrell then spoke about Bowdoin’s physical education program and the great need for the new gymnasium.

“There was a brief intermission, and the very enjoyable meeting was rounded out with football movies, highlights of the 1963 games.”

PHILADELPHIA

Assistant Treasurer Glenn McIntire '25 was the speaker at a fall dinner and ladies' night on Tuesday, November 19. Secretary Stan Lawry '45 reports, “Twenty-six alumni and 10 wives attended the meeting, and it is possible that the ladies will be invited to all future meetings.” First Vice President John Hovey '55 writes, “We had a very pleasant and successful meeting. Glenn’s very interesting talk was different from the sort of thing we often hear.” The meeting also included a good report by Dick Bechtel '36, the Club’s Alumni Council Member.

A second meeting at the Presidential Apartments was held on Thursday, December 12, when alumni, wives, and other guests met for a social hour and dinner. Coach Nels Corey '39 showed movie highlights of the 1963 football season.

The annual dinner and ladies' night will be held on Saturday evening, February 8, also at the Presidential Apartments. President Coles will be the principal speaker.

PORTLAND

The Bowdoin Club of Portland held a fall stag dinner and sports night on Tuesday, October 29, at Valle’s Steak House on Brighton Avenue. Following the social hour and dinner, Club President Peter Bramhall '56 introduced Coaches Ray Bicknell and Nels Corey '39, each of whom spoke briefly. The principal remarks were delivered by Director of Athletics Mal Morrell '24, who described Bowdoin’s physical education program and facilities and then outlined the features of the new gymnasium. Movies of the 1963 football season were shown at the conclusion of the meeting.

On Tuesday, January 7, the Portland Club sponsored its second annual subfreshman meeting at the College. Eleven alumni hosts, 42 subfreshmen, and four undergraduate guides gathered at the Union at 3:00 p.m. for a tour of the campus. At 4 o'clock the group witnessed an exciting hockey game (Bowdoin vs. Pennsylvania) at the Arena and at 6:30 adjourned to the Moulton Union for dinner.

Club President Peter Bramhall '56 presided at the after-dinner meeting. He introduced three faculty speakers: Dean of Students LeRoy Greason, who welcomed the group to the campus; Swimming Coach Charles Butt, who spoke about Bowdoin’s athletic facilities and program; and Associate Director of Admissions Robert Mellow, who made some observations on Bowdoin admissions. Other members of the faculty and staff who attended the meeting were Assistant to the President Philip Wilder '23, Colonel William Vassar, Chemistry Professor Samuel Kamerling, Assistant Director of Admissions Walter Moulton '58, and Alumni Secretary Peter Barnard '50.

The alumni who drove the student guests to and from the meeting and who served as hosts were Herbert Bennett '50, Richard Boyd '33, Peter Bramhall '56, Roderic Dyer '57, Frank Farrington '53, James Flaker '54, Charles Hildreth '53, John Mitchell '50, Davison Osgood '53, John Philbrick '58, and Eugene Waters '59.

The Portland Club will hold another meeting at the College on Saturday evening, February 8, when alumni and wives gather at the Alumni House for a five o'clock social hour and six o'clock spaghetti dinner. The group will then move to the Arena for the Bowdoin-Williams hockey game.

On Saturday, April 18, the Club will hold its annual spring dinner and ladies' night at the Eastland Motor Hotel. President Coles will be the principal speaker.

RHODE ISLAND

On December 3 the Bowdoin Club of Rhode Island presented a Bowdoin Chair to the Providence Country Day School at a special school assembly. Club President Ed Lundwall '50, introduced by Bob Mulligan '59, a 1955 graduate of the school, made the presentation, which was accepted by Assistant Headmaster Gerald Woodruff. George Wood '26, Athletic Director and teacher of mathematics at the school, and Geof Mason '23, Member at Large of the Alumni Council and Secretary of the Bowdoin Club of Rhode Island, also took part in the ceremony. The Providence Country Day School also has Harvard, Yale, and Amherst chairs and hopes to receive chairs from other colleges to make a unique set for use in the Reception Room and in the Headmaster’s office.

The Rhode Island Club held its monthly luncheon on Wednesday, December 4, with Alumni Secretary Pete Barnard '50 as special guest. Present were Herb Hanson '43, Dr. Craig Houston '20, Geof Mason '23, Dana Swan '29, Frank Swan '36, Henry Swan '56, Marshall Swan '29, and Phin Sprague '50.

The Club’s luncheons are held on the first Wednesday of each month in the Turk’s Head Club on the 16th floor of the Turk’s Head Building in downtown Providence. Alumni wishing further information should contact the Secretary, Geof Mason, 24 Dalton Street, Rumford.

The officers of the Club are making plans for the spring dinner meeting and ladies' night, which will be held on Friday, April 24, at the Warwick Country Club. Professor William Whiteside, Director of the Senior Center, will be the speaker.

ROCKY MOUNTAIN

Club President Joseph Roberts '95 and other Rocky Mountain alumni welcomed Associate Director of Admissions Robert Mellow at an evening meeting in the home of Fred Malone '50 in suburban Littleton on Saturday, November 2.

The spring meeting will be held on Wednesday evening, March 18, when Coach Sid Watson will be the guest of honor.

SPRINGFIELD

The Storrowtown Tavern in West Springfield was the site of the fall dinner meeting on Thursday, November 7, when about 35 alumni and guests gathered to greet Professor L. Dodge Fernald, Jr., Chairman of the Psychology Department, a native of Springfield. President Ed Sample reports, “Dodge did a marvelous job, and his talk was well received. Enthusiasm was probably at the highest level I have seen at any Springfield meeting.”

The following are the new officers for the Springfield Club: President, Edwin Sample '49; Vice President, Paul Doherty '56; Secretary, Theodore Chambers '53; and Council Member, Lawrence Dwight '54. The Secretary’s address is 81 Roseland Terrace, Longmeadow.

TOKYO

In September, during their round-the-world sabbatical trip, Professor and Mrs. Ernst Helmreich represented the College at a meeting of alumni and wives in Tokyo.

“The Bowdoin group really put themselves out,” Professor Helmreich writes, “and treated us to a wonderful dinner at the best Chinese (sic) restaurant in town. Present were Mr. and Mrs. John Rich '39, Mr. and Mrs. James Whitcomb '48, Shigeo Nakane '22, Akira Nakane '54, Mr. and Mrs. William Broe '39, Shogo Moriyama '54, Taneshiro Yamamoto '62, and Euan Davis '37. We saw quite a bit of several of them afterwards, and the group did much to make us welcome in Japan.”

The fall meeting was held at the Hotel Vermont in Burlington on Friday evening, October 18, the night before the football game in Williamstown.

The College was represented by Alumni Secretary Pete Barnard '50 and Capital Campaign Field Director Tom Chadwick. Also present were Convener and Mrs. Bob Peakes '36, Mr. and Mrs. Bob Laffin '38, and Dr. and Mrs. Jim Stackpole '50.

The Alumni Secretary showed color slides of the campus, and he and Mr. Chadwick answered numerous questions about Bowdoin happenings and the progress of the Capital Campaign.

WASHINGTON

The Bowdoin Club of Washington is enjoying another full season. The monthly luncheons continue, with alumni meeting at 12:15 p.m. on the first Tuesday of each month, generally at the Sphinx Club. Nine attended the August 6 luncheon, and six were present on October 1. But on September 3, Club Secretary Bill Grove '54 reports, "Thirteen of the faithful gathered to wish a happy sailing to our Club President, Ernie Lister '37, who has taken up a new position at the American Embassy in Paris. Ernie was presented our traditional gift, a small polar bear carved by the Eskimos from walrus tusk. Present were Tower '30, Jaycox '29, Toole '08, Carson '53, Webster '57, Stetson '41, Buxton '37, Marsh '51, Bradford '38, Jensen '48, Martin '43, Thompson '10, and Grove '54.

"Between our September and October luncheons, the Directors discussed plans for the Club, including a constitution and by-laws, speakers for our monthly luncheons, the possibility of moving the luncheon to the speaker (such as up to Capitol Hill), holding a subfreshman smoker, and having a June lobster and clam bake. With the notice for the fall meeting, we mailed questionnaires to Club members, asking for suggestions and reactions to various types of programs."

The Washington Club has a new President, Edwin Stetson '41, and a new Vice President, David Marsh '51.

On Wednesday evening, October 23, Ed and Joan Stetson were hosts for the fall meeting of the Club at their home in Spring Hill. About 75 alumni and wives gathered for cocktails and a buffet dinner and met the guest of honor, Professor William Whiteside, Director of the Senior Center. Ed writes that the meeting was "a whizbang affair — Bill Whiteside was a smash hit, most enthusiastically received and listened to." Three Overseers, the Honorable Harold Burton '09, the Honorable Robert Hale '10, and Vincent Welch, Esq. '38, and Professor Reinhard Korgen of the Mathematics Department, on leave to work with the National Science Foundation in Washington, were also special guests.

The Club unanimously adopted the new constitution and by-laws at this meeting.

Eighteen alumni met for the November 5 luncheon, and on December 3, at the Touchdown Club, 19 alumni were present to greet Director of Admissions Bill Shaw '36. "His talk," reports Bill Grove, "centering on the work of the Admissions Office and how alumni can help, was well received. I feel certain that the Washington Club will undertake a subfreshman meeting after the first of the year."

On Friday evening, December 13, Don Bradford '38 was host to more than 30 alumni and guests at a stag night meeting at his home in Fairfax. Coach Nels Corey '39 showed film highlights of the 1963 football season.

The Club will hold its spring dinner on Wednesday, April 15, when President Coles will be the guest of honor.

WESTERN MAINE

On Thursday, November 7, the Bowdoin Club of Western Maine held its annual fall dinner meeting at Cross's Restaurant in Farmington.

Club Secretary Davis Burnell '50 reports, "Following an hour of sociability and an excellent meal, the 14 members who braved the rainy evening were privileged to hear Professor Athern P. Daggett '25 give an up-to-date description of Bowdoin's academic atmosphere. Noteworthy in Professor Daggett's discussion were the following items: the rate of attrition is now very small; competition for scholastic excellence is very evident; the records of the athletic teams are improving; the level of course content is rising because of improved preparation; and the percentage of graduates seeking advanced degrees is increasing."

YORK COUNTY

The Bowdoin Club of York County held its annual fall dinner meeting on Thursday, November 14, at the Oak Ledge Motel in Saco.

Warren Palmer '32, Carroll Clark '21, and Larry Staples '45 were appointed to the Nominating Committee to bring in a slate of officers at the spring meeting. After an effective speech by Vice President Ed Walker '36, the Club voted dues for the coming year.

The principal speaker was Mal Morrell '24, Director of Athletics, who outlined plans for the new gymnasium and the renovation of the Sargent Gymnasium. Also representing the College were Coaches Charlie Butt and Ray Bicknell.

Club members were reminded that on Thursday evening, February 13, the Glee Club will give a concert in Sanford.

News Of The Classes

1850 A sketch of the role played by Major General Oliver Howard during the battle of Gettysburg in the Civil War appeared in the September, 1963, issue of Civil War History, a quarterly magazine published by the State University of Iowa. It was written by Professor John A. Carpenter of the History Department of Washington and Jefferson College, whose full-length biography of General Howard will be published this spring by the University of Pittsburgh Press.

1898 On December 19 Percival Baxter presented to the State of Maine twenty volumes of handwritten data on the early history of the northeastern United States and a case of rare maps. The manuscripts were compiled by his father, James Phinney Baxter, who at one time spent two years in England copying records not available in this country.

Joe Davis and his wife were the subject of a feature article in the Portland Press Herald for August 20, 1963. It told of his experimental tree-growing at Cliff Island in Casco Bay since he was a young man.

The article said, in part, "Mrs. Davis has joined her husband in his tree growing experiments, and they have extended them to take in shrubs. Today the visitor approaching their gracious summer home sees blue spruces growing with unstudied posture and bittersweet curling about the base of a Norway pine. A tiny holly tree pokes its shiny dark leaves from its assigned corner in the doorway clearing; the wide, flat leaves of a tulip poplar stand in sharp contrast to a dark growth of shoreline firs; and a dogwood from the hills of Valley Forge has a tall hemlock as an unlikely neighbor."

Individuals and groups of people interested in trees come to visit the Davises during the summer.

Sturgis Leavitt was the subject of a short feature story in Pete Ivey's "Town and Gown" column in The Chapel Hill Weekly for October 23, 1963. It seems that as a ten-year-old boy he set out to sell tea from house to house and earn an air rifle. When the first potential customer said no and shut the door, he packed up the tea and sent it back to the tea company. Instead of becoming a tea salesman, he became Professor of Romance Languages at the University of North Carolina.

However, the story went on to say, "After his retirement from the University faculty, Professor Leavitt devoted much of his time to the North Carolina Society of Mayflower Descendants. He now has served as Governor of the Mayflower group in this state for the past several years.

"And last week he stood at Plymouth, Mass., and accepted a prize for salesmanship.

"The North Carolina Mayflower Descendants have scored first place in selling the most copies of 'The Mayflower Index,' containing the names of descendants of those who came to this continent on the Mayflower. Professor Leavitt conducted the North Carolina sales campaign."

Class Secretary Chris Toole attended the Alumni Council meetings at the College on November 1 and 2.

1909 Acting Secretary, Jasper J. Stahl Waldoboro

This is the 1909 word as received from Jake Stahl's hibernation headquarters in Waldoboro in January — "Such a survey as the Acting Secretary has been able to make of the surviving third of the Class of 1909 leads him to believe that there are few left who are living an active and gainful life. One of these is Dud Hovey, who writes of himself in delightful detail. He notes that 'come next March' he will have been 54 years in State Street. Over 30 years of this time was spent on the Boston News Bureau, Wall Street Journal, and Barron's financial weekly. Then he reverts to the memories of his school days — his Latin and his Math. We quote: 'Of course, I was a lousy Latin scholar. In fact, Libby, who was Principal of the Waldoboro High School, said to me one day: 'Hovey, you have to study this Latin: you can't just absorb it.' So, I did better in Lincoln Academy, but chucked it at Bowdoin and took Buck Moody instead, and he floored me.'

"Redoubtable Buck! Hovey is a grandfather, which is commendable, but not quite yet in the class with Col. Oramel Stanley, who reports a great grandson in his family line.

"Reed Ellis of Rangeley is another furnishing evidence of an undiminished vigour. Like Cornelia of old he regards his 'sons as his jewels.' Two of which have long since graduated from Bowdoin, '39 and '44, and one in '43 from the U. of M. In the perpetuation of a grand line, he must be now breathing pretty close down Col. Stanley's neck.

"Mrs. Harold N. Marsh, Dorothy, Hon. 1909, writes with vigour and good will from Washington. She is another who finds it difficult to divest herself of the harness, and who finds salvation (nota bene, St. Paul) in good works rather than faith.

"Good old Ernie Pottle has recovered his New England citizenship by moving recently back — new address is 51 Kellogg Drive, Wilton, Conn.

"There are so many more things to report that I dare go no further, for the Editor of the Alumnus is a Cross fellow and on occasion has been heard to say: 'No more of that stuff now, Uncle Jake' — but more, come later.

"Again I am reminding you that 1964 is our 55th anniversary year. Let the "thin gray line" (not referring to girth), says Hovey, assemble in force once more, but not for the last encampment. At the anniversary of 1959, I recall Ralph Brewster saying gaily: 'I'll be here for the 75th.' Good old Senator — one of the graces of a great class. We shall never cease to miss his sparkle and his wit."

1910 Secretary, E. Curtis Matthews 59 Pearl Street Mystic, Conn.

Bill and Viola Atwood celebrated their 50th wedding anniversary with appropriate ceremonies on June 26, 1963.

Clifford Little '46 has been appointed Henry J.

Colbath Instructor in Physics at The Hill School in Pottstown, Pa. This chair was given in honor of our classmate.

Dr. Clyde Deming is President of the Connecticut State Medical Society and also President of the Trustees of Kimball Union Academy in New Hampshire. He is the author of a three-volume textbook on urology.

Frank Evans drove his own car 16,000 miles last summer, covering most of the states in the Southwest and the West.

Merrill Hill, who taught German and French at English High School in Boston from 1918 until 1952, has for the past nine years been living at 1010 8th Street, St. Cloud, Fla. He is the author of Graphic German Grammar and Graphic French Grammar.

Harry MacLaughlin has lived on the same street in Pleasantville, N. Y., for 42 years. He is still with the First Investors Corporation. Harry and his wife have seven grandchildren.

Potter Marsh's good wife, Mildred, has had a slight shock. Potter himself says he is rather useless after an operation five years ago.

Classmates and friends extend their sympathy to Curt Matthews, whose wife, Beatrice, died on November 18.

Colby Morton and his wife made their annual visit to Maine last summer.

Clint and Alice Peters left for their winter home in Florida on November 15.

Sewall Webster has attended all but one of the Bowdoin football games, both at home and away, for the past 16 seasons.

1913 Secretary, Luther G. Whittier R.F.D. 2 Farmington

The Worcester (Mass.) Telegram for October 21 carried a feature article, complete with picture, concerning Winthrop Greene and his interest in music. The article said, in part, "Winthrop S. Greene admits to being a retired Army officer, retired U. S. diplomat, world traveler, and international correspondent for the Worcester Telegram.

"He denies being a musicologist.

"He denies it even though he has attended 10 symphony concerts in the past nine days.

"Even though last year he heard 205 operas and concerts.

"Even though this year the total will be close to 200, despite his traveling internationally for about half the year.

"Even though he can speak with a detailed knowledge of most of the major conductors and performing artists."

On November 1 Sumner Pike served as moderator for a symposium on the physical and biological sciences in regard to the role of the individual in the pursuit and use of knowledge, held at Bates College as part of its centennial colloquium.

On November 5 Sim was elected to fill an unexpired term in the Maine Legislature from the Lubec area.

Sam Chase, whose new address is 3358 Meadowbrook Boulevard, Cleveland Heights 18, Ohio, is Professor Emeritus of Histology and Embryology; Consultant in Orthopaedic Surgery, Joseph Treloar Wearn Laboratory for Medical Research, University Hospitals, Western Reserve University.

"A very enjoyable situation," Sam reports, "with a new laboratory, excellent assistant, splendid group of colleagues." Another activity: "on Editorial Board of Blakiston's New Gould Medical Dictionary, another enjoyable task."

Ruth Dixon of Norwich, Conn., wrote the Secretary last June that her daughter Diana had a baby girl born on August 9, 1962. There are two grandsons, David (9) and Richard (7).

Lew Donahue's new address is 321 Stevens Avenue, Portland 5. Two other new addresses are Alfred W. Newcombe, Presbyterian House, 23 Third Street South, St. Petersburg, Fla., and Frederick W. Thompson, RFD 3, Winthrop.

Elroy LaCasce's son Joseph '46 was married on November 22 to Miss W. Deanna Hatch of Boston, a summa cum laude graduate of Boston University. Before joining the staff of the Maine Coast Memorial Hospital in Ellsworth last July, Joseph was for a year attending physician and Director of the Medical Cancer Chemotherapy Program at the Veterans Administration Hospital in Boston.

Lucy Wilson retired last year as Postmaster at Gray, which office she held for about 17 years, subsequent to Earle's death in 1944. She is still active in the family funeral business, which Earle, Jr. '49 operates, along with a real estate business. The older brother, Ross '40, is a surgeon in Redwood City, Calif., and lives in Menlo Park. Their sister, Sarah Wilson Garrett, lives in Annapolis, Md., and is a lawyer with the Internal Revenue Service in Washington.

Ross has been active in the Capital Campaign in California and was in Maine last fall for two weeks in regard to it and the Alumni Fund. His class, 1940, won the Class of 1916 Bowl in the 1962-63 Alumni Fund for showing the most improvement over the previous year.

1915 Secretary, Harold E. Verrill Ocean House Road Cape Elizabeth

At its annual meeting on December 29 in Cleveland, Ohio, the American Society of Criminology gave Spike MacCormick the August Vollmer Award for distinguished service in penology and correctional administration. Following the presentation Spike spoke on "A Straight Look at Narcotic Addiction," based on his experience during the past year on President Kennedy's Advisory Commission on Narcotic and Drug Abuse.

Last June Spike received a similar award from the National Council on Crime and Delinquency for "distinguished leadership in correctional education and penal reform."

1916 Secretary, Edward C. Hawes 180 High Street Portland, Maine

The Chauncey Halls have moved back to Maine after 30 years in Massachusetts. Chauncey writes, "The house and grounds in Melrose got too big for us, so we bought a five-room ranch in Augusta, which is just fine. We are located very near the Route 95 exit and would be happy to see any Sixteener. Drop in at 47 Westwood Road, Augusta."

In Memory

EDWARD WARREN WHEELER '98

Edward W. Wheeler, Bowdoin's College Counsel from 1926 until 1952, died on November 1, 1963, in Portland at the age of 87. Born in Brunswick on April 12, 1876, he prepared for college at the local high school and attended Bowdoin from 1894 until 1897. After studying law in the office of Weston Thompson in Brunswick, he practiced law in the town from 1900 until 1922. He was a member of the Superintending School Committee from 1900 until 1914, served in the Maine State Senate in 1909-10, was a member of the Governor's Executive Council in 1913-14, and was Chairman of the State Parole Board in 1913-14. From 1917 until 1922 he was Chairman of the Board of Prison Commissioners of Maine.

From 1922 until 1946 Mr. Wheeler was Vice President and General Counsel of the Maine Central Railroad Company and affiliated corporations, and from 1943 until 1946 he was also General Counsel of the Boston and Maine Railroad. He became a Director of the Maine Central Railroad Company and the Portland Terminal Company in 1922, was elected a Director of the Union Mutual Life Insurance Company in 1942, and was named a Director of the First National Bank of Brunswick in 1932. He was also a Trustee of North Yarmouth Academy for some years. For fifty-three years—from 1902 until 1955—he served as Moderator for Brunswick town meetings, establishing what is considered a national record for this kind of service.

Mr. Wheeler was active in Masonic orders and held some of the highest stations in the country. He was second in command of all Scottish Rite Masonic bodies in the area bounded by the Mississippi River, the Mason-Dixon Line, the Atlantic Ocean, and the Canadian border, was Most Worshipful Grand Master of the Grand Lodge of Maine, and was Grand Lieutenant Commander of the Supreme Council, the national body. In September of 1963 he became only the eighth person to be awarded the Gourgas Medal of Scottish Rite Freemasonry, given for "notably distinguished service in the cause of Freemasonry, humanity, or country."

Mr. Wheeler was one of the few people in Bowdoin history to receive two honorary degrees from the College—a Master of Arts degree in 1923 and a Doctor of Laws degree in 1939. The citation for the latter degree said, in part, ". . . one of Maine's leading attorneys, who has lately been of great help to this State and to New Hampshire by serving as Master in bringing about the reorganization of one of our great industrial companies, a task that required extraordinary tact, patience, judgment, and ability, and that has been termed by an eminent authority as one of the most important examples of public service in New England since Curtis and Coolidge broke the police strike; Brunswick's first citizen. . . ; in his education and career and heritage binding closer together Brunswick and the College."

Mr. Wheeler is survived by his wife, Mrs. Mildred Shaw Wheeler, whom he married in Freeport on January 9, 1926; and two cousins, Boyd W. Bartlett '17 and Mrs. Nelson Glover of Boston.

The Piscataquis Observer in Dover-Foxcroft, whose Editor is Ora L. Evans '16, paid tribute to Mr. Hayes, in part, as follows: "Besides possessing a brilliant legal mind, Mr. Hayes was talented in other areas. As a musician, he played the piano, violin, saxophone, cello, and oboe, and for several years was a member of a local orchestra. In the field of art, he worked in the mediums of water colors and ceramics. Mr. Hayes was particularly interested in the Boys Band, sponsored about 25 years ago by the American Legion, and for several years devoted a good deal of his time to it in the capacity of adviser in both its musical and its operational aspects.

"His long professional career and his natural inclinations towards historical research provided him with a vast fund of knowledge of county affairs. Probably no one in the area was as well informed in that respect as he was. Not only was this knowledge of value to him in his profession, but he was frequently consulted on matters of a general historical nature.

"Quiet and reserved, Mr. Hayes nevertheless had a wonderful sense of dry humor and was a delightful companion, as many friends testify."

For many years he appeared with the Curtis String Quartet at its annual Bowdoin concerts. He performed twice in Queen's Hall in London and toured the eastern states with various groups playing chamber music.

Professor Tillotson wrote numerous piano compositions and songs and was the author of newspaper and magazine articles on music as well as of textbooks on harmony and counterpoint. Each summer from 1929 through 1935 he performed more than twenty major chamber music works as a member of the faculty at the Cunningham School of Creative Arts in Massachusetts.

During his twenty-seven years at Bowdoin music grew to a new dimension. He organized the Bowdoin Music Club and the Brunswick Choral Society and played an important role in the organization of the Meddiebempsters. Under his direction the Glee Club gained a reputation as one of the finest musical groups of its kind in the country. In 1961 he retired as the Director of the Glee Club after a typically triumphant season, which included the Club's fourth concert in New York's Town Hall and its fourteenth appearance with the Boston Symphony "Pops" Orchestra.

One of Professor Tillotson's most cherished dreams became a reality several years ago, with the establishment of a scholarship bearing his name and designed to assist students interested in a musical career. In 1960 the Glee Club presented a check for $100 to him, together with a statement that said, in part, "It is our hope that this fund will grow and flourish like Tilly's ever-widening circle of friends and admirers."

By 1954 most of the needs that he had outlined for the Music Department in 1946, at the end of his first decade at Bowdoin, had been met. That was the year in which Harvey Dow Gibson Hall of Music was dedicated.

Professor Tillotson is survived by his wife, Mrs. Marjory Goodwin Tillotson, whom he married in Boston on December 21, 1925; and a son, Clive Tillotson '53. He was a member of Zeta Psi Fraternity. (See page 14.)

Word has also been received of the death of the following alumni. Appropriate notice will appear in the March ALUMNUS.

A Field Guide to College Candidates

by Robert C. Mellow

DURING THE PAST DECADE PERCEPTIVE CONSERVATIONISTS have begun to report the frequent appearance of a new breed of bird which has now reached national distribution: the Roving Candidate (Liberalartensis Incognita). It was originally confined to the New England area, but annual migrations have been reported as far west as Palo Alto, California, and the general distribution of the species can now be considered to include the Middle Atlantic States, Ohio, and selected areas of Illinois, Wisconsin, and Minnesota. Although the preferred feed of the bird is ivy, he has shown remarkable adaptability in adjusting to forage opportunities and subsisting on such diverse feeds as stateweed and corn. Ivy is still his preference, however, and some enterprising midwestern conservationists have developed a hardy hybrid.

The migration pattern is confined to summer and early fall, although a few species have been known to appear on the feeding grounds as late as April. Because these birds are invariably undersize and have poor plumage, they need not concern private conservationists, large government preserves having been established for their care and feeding. Migration seems limited to the adolescent bird, although he may be accompanied by one or both parents (Parentis Solicitatis) and one or more fledgelings from the nest.

This paper does not purport to describe all the species and subspecies of the class but hopes to identify some of the types most frequently visible to the casual observer. From his experience any serious conservationist will be able to contribute many more varieties and to note some curious crossbreedings.

Two of the most common types, which are easily confused, are the Ruby Throated Wobbler (Adeptis Extracurricularis) and the Well-Rounded Thrush (Dux Studentorum). They have similar markings and both possess very bright plumage, but a little patient listening will easily detect the Ruby Throated Wobbler through his unusually brilliant song full of twitterings and glissandos coupled with a nervous hopping from bush to bush. The true Well-Rounded Thrush invariably has a lower and less articulated call, with a slower, more purposeful feeding pattern. A sharp ear can quickly distinguish between their calls:

Ruby Throated Wobbler: Lookatme! Lookatme! Lookatme!

Well-Rounded Thrush: Le-e-a-der! Le-e-a-der!

Another interesting type is the Craggy Nospeak (Ruralis Soliditaria). Invariably migrating from deep woods or farmland, the Craggy Nospeak is easy to overlook because of its dull plumage and rare calls. Although on first appearance it is undistinguished, a careful observer will soon discover the bird to be one of rugged strength and intelligence. When approached sympathetically, it responds quickly to training and will develop a prodigious appetite as an omnivorous eater. Unfortunately, with the centralization of rural preserves, the Craggy Nospeak is getting to be a rare bird and may be doomed to extinction.

Very similar to the Craggy Nospeak is the Narrow Sliderule (Inquisitive Scientia). Indeed, some ornithologists feel it to be a twentieth century adaptation of the nineteenth century Craggy Nospeak, and thus a sub-species. Superficially both birds have very similar markings, although the plumage of the Narrow Sliderule is often windblown. When the Narrow Sliderule lifts its head to sing, however, bright markings are immediately visible on its throat and breast. These markings can be brilliant (Selector Westinghousia), average (Triumphantes Sciencefairensis), or sham (Technicales Heathkit). Ornithologists have established special preserves for the Narrow Sliderule, although one subspecies (Inquisitive Scientia: 3-2) prefers a more diverse feeding ground.

THE LAST TWO SPECIES OF ROVING CANDIDATE I would like to identify are in many ways the least interesting, although they have been the longest established and have the widest distribution: the Suburban Gearstripper (Urbanis Ordinariensis) and the Ball Hawk (Alumnorum Grandissimis).

The most interesting thing about the Suburban Gearstripper is its parentage. Parent birds come from a wide variety of species and represent some interesting crossbreedings, although the most common male parents are the Baldpated Executive (Salesitor Millerenia) and the Shallow Tweed (Squirius Princetonia), while females are dominated by the Rosybreasted Matron (Uxor Tradentialis). Family migrations are invariably the rule, and the parents are very selective in feeding grounds, at least initially. Calls tend to be unusually dulcet and harmonious during early migration, but they become screeching and frantic near the end of the migration period, particularly from the female. Although migrations begin early and range widely, final feeding grounds are often the same generation after generation.

The most popular of all birds is the Ball Hawk (Alumnorum Grandissimis). Indeed, some conservationists have made a specialty of attracting this bird and have devised ingenious traps to insure its migration to their particular preserve. Special feeds, special caretakers, heated pens are all commonly employed to woo the Ball Hawk to one preserve or another. The intense competition among amateurs to add the Ball Hawk to their life list has led professional ornithologists to develop stringent laws about the banding and taking of these birds, but considerable poaching still exists. The popularity of the Ball Hawk is not understandable to most serious ornithologists and professional conservationists, however, since the bird quickly usurps most of the facilities of the feeding ground and contributes little if anything to the real purposes of conservation, although they admit that his flight is beautiful and often spectacular. Amateur conservationists frequently mistake the False Ball Hawk (Athleticus Scholariensis) for the real, and fortunately, if mistakenly, add him to their collection, for the False Ball Hawk is a valuable bird that gives balance to any preserve.

Let me end my paper with the best and rarest Roving Candidate of all, the True Candidate (Candidatus Matriculatiensis). A bird of bright plumage, trilling song, and graceful flight, it is the rarest bird of all and the center of any collection.

Although the author of this change-of-pace admissions article is a dedicated bird and people watcher, he was forbidden to take Latin IV at Phillips Exeter Academy, for fear that he would jeopardize his scholarship. Since July 1 Mr. Mellow has been serving as Associate Director of Admissions at Bowdoin.

Project 65

Seven undergraduates and one alumnus spent their spring vacation late in March and early in April visiting high schools in the Midwest and the South in an effort to attract Negro applicants to the College. One team of three men visited high schools in Chicago, St. Louis, and Louisville; another team of two men visited schools in Pittsburgh, Cincinnati, and Cleveland; two more men visited schools in Virginia, North Carolina, and South Carolina; and the eighth man went to schools in Indianapolis.

Project '65 was described recently in these words: "Project '65 is a student group of approximately 60 members representing nearly all of Bowdoin's 12 fraternities. The student-run project was formed to get more qualified Negro applicants into Bowdoin, primarily for two reasons: first, with only three Negro students presently at Bowdoin out of a total enrollment of 820, it is felt that the College should respond more effectively to the present national crisis of Negro higher education; second, it is felt that college life should as nearly as possible expose the student to the numerous beliefs and backgrounds of people he will be living with after college."

During Christmas vacation students in Project '65 visited high schools in their home towns and met some of the problems which constitute a basic obstacle to Negro advancement: lack of qualified students because of guidance to primarily vocational training, lack of motivation toward college by students and their families, and lack of finances.

The Bowdoin-Morehouse exchange of students, described on page 9 of this issue, has been valuable and eye-opening for all concerned. For example, Jim Rouillard '65 of Stoneham, Mass., who is at Morehouse this semester, wrote to the Orient in February, "Indicative, further, of Georgia's and Atlanta's concern for progress, I can offer any glances, shrugs, stares, and grimaces. We have eaten several times in mostly-white, integrated restaurants; many middle-aged women have glowered at me, looked me up and down with magnificent disdain, glanced from me to my black companion, and torn their regard away with splendid contempt. I have ridden in the Morehouse car and witnessed double-takes when people see a white man (coon, whatever) in the Negro college's car. I have witnessed the obsequious congeniality of a clerk in a would-be Brooks Bros. of the South turn to ice when I gave him my Morehouse address, and stay frozen even through the warmth of a twenty-dollar purchase."

A Library Is Books

by Librarian Richard Harwell

A LIBRARY IS BOOKS, books to be read and used, to act as catalysts in the creation of ideas. Books are a library, and a college library becomes one side of the magic triangle of students, books, and ideas.

A fine library is an essential part of the traditions of Bowdoin. Among the very first gifts to the College (in the years between the issuance of its charter and its opening to students) were volumes for the Library.

A Librarian new to the Bowdoin campus must necessarily be impressed by the care that has gone into the creation of wisely selected book collections for the College, with its magnificent files of irreplaceable periodicals, its distinguished special collections, its extensive holdings in nearly all fields included in Bowdoin's curriculum. He is also painfully aware of the deficiencies that are part of working — serving the students and servicing the collections — in a severely overcrowded building.

The need for a new library building can hardly be overstated. Bowdoin should have a home for its Library which is as fine by today's standards as is the Library itself.

It is such a fitting home that has been planned — a building in which books and students can be brought together as easily and efficiently as possible, a building which in the ease of use becomes a contributing factor in the creation of ideas.

— Richard Harwell in Students, Books, and Ideas, a New Library Building for Bowdoin College (Brunswick: 1962).

TAKE THE PICTURE of the new Bowdoin College Library and color it. Color the bricks red (a soft red to blend with the reds of Coleman, Hubbard, and Gibson). Color the stark vertical whites of the rendering the soft, off-white of limestone. Make the spandrels separating the floors the deep gray of Monson slate. Make the sky Maine blue and the auto whatever you like. Make the walkways red, the shadows and the tree trunks dark, the leaves and the grass green. (If you have any green stuff left over, send it along to the College to help pay for the new building.)

Set your version of the new building down in the southwest corner of the campus, directly south of the west wing of Hubbard Hall, stretching almost to Twelve Rod Road, and centering (in its northern exposure) almost exactly on the Memorial Flagpole. Now you have your mental image of the Bowdoin College Library's building in the fall of 1965.

A library building is but a home for a library. The Bowdoin College Library needs and deserves the new home planned for it. Its book collections are already distinguished, but the once spacious and impressive Hubbard Hall is no longer a spacious home for the Library. Remodeled for other academic purposes, it will continue to be one of the most impressive buildings on the campus.

Construction of the new Library building will begin this spring. The building should be ready for occupancy in the fall of 1965. Initially it will be shared with the college administrative staff. The space temporarily assigned for administrative offices is eventual expansion area (by one-third) for the Library. The present Rare Book Room in Hubbard Hall will be retained as a rare book room. The present library stacks will be walled off from the forepart of Hubbard Hall and will also provide room for expanded book collections.

Total book capacity of the new building will be 406,000 volumes. Expansion into the administrative areas can raise eventual capacity to 540,000 volumes. Use of the present stacks and the Rare Book Room will permit the housing of a book collection of 686,000 volumes — well more than double the present collection of just under 300,000 volumes and quite large enough to take care of the foreseeable library needs of any liberal arts college.

Seating will be provided for 538 readers. This figure includes a variety of types of seating — single carrels, double and quadruple carrels, single study tables, comfortable lounge chairs, and in private studies. It even includes some standing — in the stand-up newspaper room. A tentative count indicates that well over 80 per cent of the seating will be for individual study. There will be 192 carrels (study stations with shelving and some with lockable drawers), 68 individual study tables, seats for 76 readers at traditional library tables, and 29 faculty studies, each with two chairs. The remainder of the seating will be 64 lounge chairs, and a total of 56 of miscellaneous types in the listening booths, typing rooms, and so forth.

This seat count covers only the portion of the new building planned for initial occupancy by the Library. By use of the total, eventual library space seating can be provided for up to slightly over 700. Present library standards suggest that, in a college of Bowdoin's type, seating should be provided for 40 to 50 per cent of the combined student and faculty population.

THE NEW LIBRARY will be no architectural extreme — only extremely functional and comfortable. It is told that roads in Mississippi are among the best in the country, because the state so long had very bad roads and could profit by the mistakes of the rest of the states when it finally built good ones. So with the Bowdoin Library — no great expanses of windows floor after floor, no circular building, no escalators, very few architectural or decorative extras.

The building is designed for use and comfort. The College has had the best of help in planning it. Keyes Metcalf, Librarian Emeritus of Harvard College and the world's leading authority on library buildings, has served as a consultant in its planning. Its architects are Steinmann, Cain & White of New York. Scott Cherry of the Library Bureau of Remington-Rand has worked closely on the layout of library furniture and equipment for the building. And Tom Moore of the architects' staff has planned the layouts for the Librarian's office, the special collections areas, the conference room, and the lounge and has coordinated all the plans for decoration and design.

The accompanying diagrams do more than words to demonstrate the functions of the new building. Even so, some explanation of them is desirable. Floor by floor:

Level A: In the southeast corner is a series of rooms for staff work in the processing of materials for the Library — a mail room, a room for listing, checking, and recording orders and for plating new books, a room for the preparation of books and magazines for binding, and a room for photo-duplication. The bulk of the stack area is designed for the housing of periodical files. At the north side of the public area are shelving planned to hold bound newspaper files and tables made especially for the reading of bound volumes of newspapers. Between the newspaper area and the processing rooms is an area for the filing and use of microfilms and microcards. There are study stations dispersed throughout the stack area.

Main floor: The entrance to the building is accented by the use of glass. Bluestone will be the pavement immediately outside and inside the entrance. Beyond the vestibule, however, the Library will be carpeted except in the stair-wells and in the restrooms. Interior brick will carry the architectural dignity of the exterior of the building through its lobby. To the left of the lobby is a passage to the principal staff area of the library. The circulation desk will have a surface of Monson slate and will face a decorative fireplace area of brick and slate. To the right of the entrance a reader can progress to the stand-up newspaper reading room and to the area for the shelving of current periodicals.

In the center of this floor will be the card catalog. Just back of it will be shelves for new books. To its south will be the reference area. Extending from the main south wall is an informal reading bay. Reference books, bibliographies, and periodical indexes will be shelved near the card catalog. Another reading bay gives a vista of the campus to the north — between Hubbard and Gibson and looking past the flagpole through to Memorial Hall. At the west end of this floor are an office for the Documents Librarian and shelves for the principal collection of government documents.

Throughout the building ceilings are, by contrast to the monumental ceilings of Hubbard Hall, low. The architects have designed ceilings and lighting, however, in pleasant variety so that there should be no feeling of being hemmed in. The reading bays give a special feeling of openness to the main floor. Over the area between the circulation desk and the fireplace and over the card catalog there is no main floor ceiling. These areas are open to the ceiling of the second story.

Second floor: Around the wells opening to the main floor are museum cases for exhibits of books, manuscripts, and other library materials. West of the east well is stack area rimmed by carrels. East of it is an informal reading room comparable in concept to Hubbard Hall's Alumni Reading Room. Along the north passage by the well are places for magazines and newspapers for informal reading. To the south of the well are a small room for the housing of spoken recordings and a series of listening rooms for their use. At the southeast and northeast corners of the building are two series of faculty studies, each with a keyed entrance as well as keyed entrances to the individual studies to insure maximum privacy. Apparently within the faculty study areas, but with their own entrances directly from the principal second floor area, are two rooms for typing.

Third floor: The east end of the building is designed as a suite for special collections. This area also includes a map room, a staff and faculty lounge, and a conference room. The placement of the lounge and the conference room here will permit future expansion of the special collections by the relocation of these rooms when the Library has the occupancy of the whole building. Adjoining the special collections area is a caged section of the stacks for the housing of books suitable neither for open stacks nor for inclusion in special collections.

A portion of this floor is rimmed with carrels, and there are other carrels in areas that can eventually, if it is desirable, be converted into stack areas. There are nine additional studies on this floor. These will be assigned as faculty studies if there is demand for them as such, as studies for honors students if the faculty studies on the second floor are presently as many as needed.

The new library building is not perfect. It is as nearly what will serve the needs of the College as can now be foreseen by a combination of librarians, administrators, and well qualified consultants. Its design is the product of a series of intelligent compromises — compromises between luxury and austerity, between dream and budgetary potential, between architect and librarian. But there has been no compromise of the kind of library service intended for Bowdoin College students.

THE PRESENT IS A COMPROMISE BETWEEN PAST AND FUTURE. A library must be built for the present, and for the future. It was incised over the stack door to Hubbard Hall in 1902: "To preserve for posterity the wealth of the wise." That is still a primary purpose of libraries, but a more encompassing purpose characterizes the philosophy of libraries in the 1960's: to bring students and ideas together. It is assumed that students and ideas are brought together most often, most often at least after student-faculty contact, by books. But books are only one form into which ideas are coded. Information, ideas, "the wealth of the wise" can come in many forms.

We do not yet know what the library of the future will be. There are many who believe that information can be encoded in more efficient packages than the book as we now know it. There are many who believe that present-day libraries can be made more efficient by the development of automatic systems for the retrieval of books and for the retrieval of information in them. The Educational Facilities Laboratories, Inc., a corporation established by the Ford Foundation, says in its new publication, Bricks and Mortarboards (New York: 1964):

What stands between the library of today and this smoothly efficient, precision machined tomorrow?

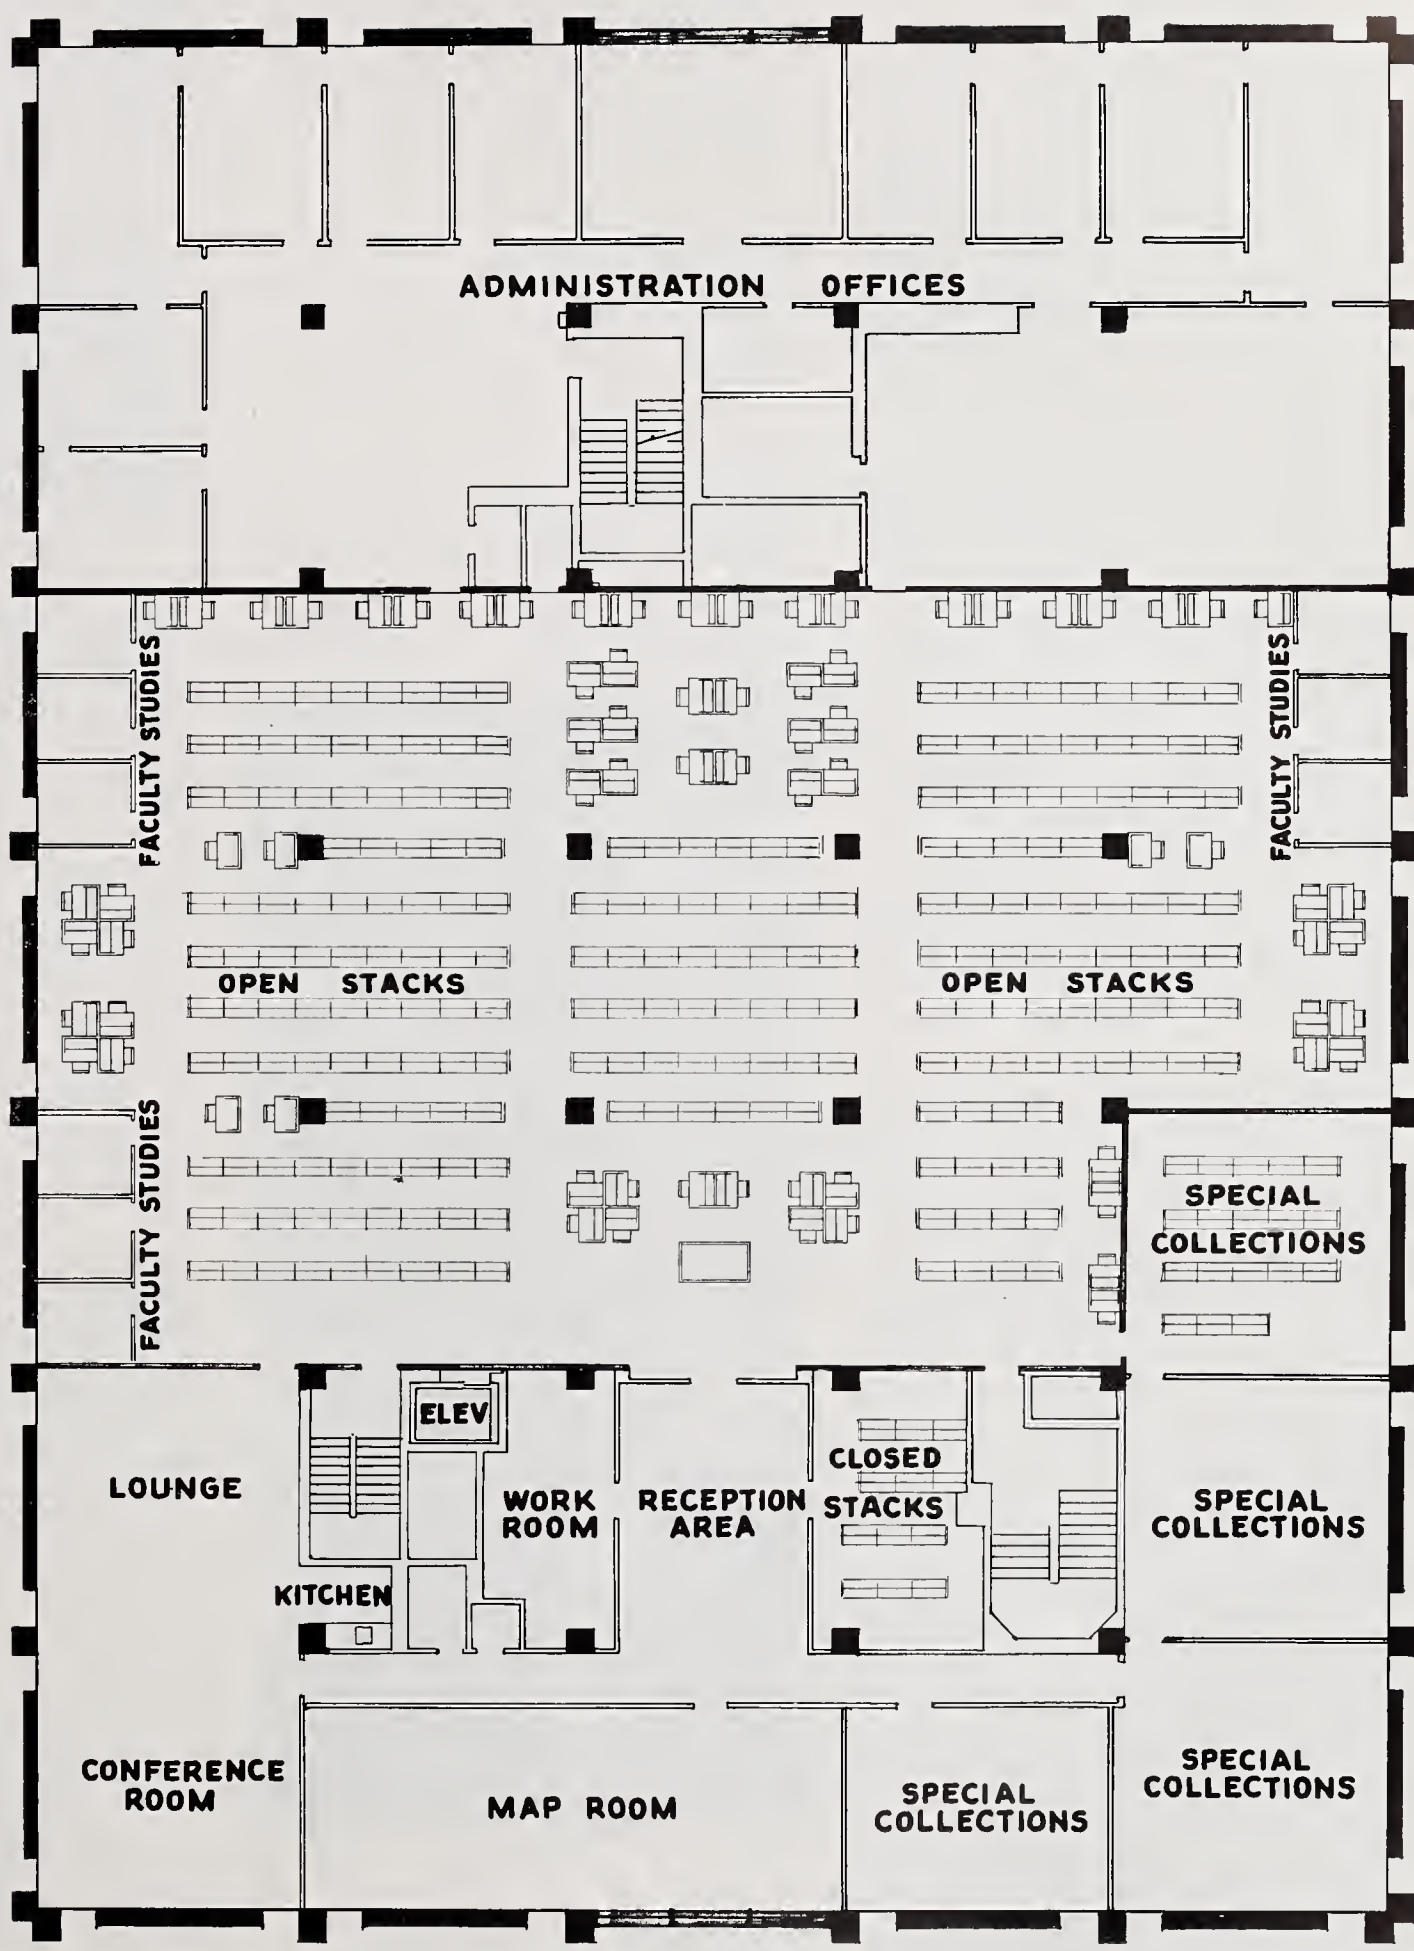

Plenty.

Before the library of the future can become a reality — if, indeed, we want it to — a number of towering intellectual, technological, and economic barriers must be hurdled.

Bowdoin builds for the present and for the foreseeable future, but Bowdoin builds its new library not unmindful that the library of 2002 may be even more different from the library of now than the library of 1964 is different from the library of 1902. It is difficult to believe that the Bowdoin student body will ever be a group of what the EFL report calls "the wired-in student." Such a concept does not fit with the kind of individuality that marks Bowdoin students or that gives its own quality to the teaching at the College. Neither can Bowdoin be indifferent to the development of teaching machines or to new methods of teaching.

The library of the future is still somewhere in the future. Bowdoin needs its new Library now. We cannot build for a putative, unpredictable future. We can build the best for now. The new library building will be no relic out of the past; it will be a simple, functional, flexible building, designed now to adapt itself to the College of the future and to college teaching of the future by emphasizing in its design simplicity, functionalism, and flexibility.

Fraternity News

Next fall Phi Delta Psi Fraternity will move into the former home of the late Professor and Mrs. Charles T. Burnett at 232 Maine Street. The College purchased the Burnett property and is turning it over to Phi Delta Psi in exchange for the fraternity's current quarters at 65 Federal Street, which will be sold. The Governing Boards have approved a loan to Phi Delta Psi to make possible extensive remodeling of the Burnett property for use as a fraternity house.

In other fraternity news, alumni of Delta Sigma and Delta Upsilon are forming a new corporation to accept title to the property at 259 Maine Street which the Delta Upsilon Chapter House Corporation gave to the College last November.

When President Coles announced these two developments, he said, "This new, central location will strengthen the Phi Delta Psi Fraternity, and in so doing we hope it will strengthen the entire fraternity system at the College.

"These acts are but two of many continuing actions by which the College undertakes to preserve interests of the fraternities at Bowdoin, recognizing their importance in the Bowdoin educational program."

Undergraduate Phi Delta Psi President James E. Corey '65 of South Portland said, "That the College has voted to lend Phi Delta Psi the funds necessary for effecting this move is, I feel, a significant indication of its continuing interest in and support of the Bowdoin fraternity system as a whole. As an individual fraternity and as a member of the Bowdoin community, Phi Delta Psi is most appreciative of that support."

Professor Burnett, who was Chairman of the Psychology Department, taught at the College from 1904 until 1944. He was one of the faculty members whose advice was sought when students founded Phi Delta Psi at Bowdoin in 1919. He and Mrs. Burnett, an accomplished cellist, made their home a cultural center that drew many musicians to Brunswick. Mrs. Burnett, who died in 1962, was hostess to the Curtis String Quartet and many other musicians who appeared in concerts here through the years.

The Burnett house was built in the 1860's as a home for the family of Captain Clement Martin, Jr., a retired seafarer, and was acquired by the Burnetts in 1920. After it has been remodeled for fraternity use, it will accommodate 30 students, with sleeping, study, lounge, and dining facilities for all.

Phi Delta Psi moved into its Federal Street quarters in 1922.

In still a third fraternity development Delta Kappa Epsilon is planning to build an addition 20 feet by 30 feet which will house a new kitchen. Basement quarters now occupied by the kitchen will be converted into a library and study room.

Gym and Library Authorized

On February 1 the Governing Boards authorized construction of the new gymnasium and the new library, two of the major objectives of the $10 million Capital Campaign.

The Boards also authorized officers of the College to apply for a federal grant to help finance construction of the library under terms of the Higher Education Facilities Act of 1963, under the provisions of which Bowdoin is eligible to apply for one-third of the construction cost ($2.5 million) of the library.

Ground breaking for both buildings will take place this spring.

Cecil Holmes to Retire

Professor Cecil T. Holmes, Chairman of the Mathematics Department, will retire in June after 39 years as a member of the faculty. Early in March, when this announcement was made, President Coles said of him, "Professor Holmes' career at

Professor Holmes

Bowdoin has been distinguished by excellence in teaching and scholarly work. Always humane, and with a delightfully wry humor, he has maintained the highest standards for himself and his students, and has expected the same from the rest of us who have associated ourselves with our common enterprise in education."

Cecil Holmes, who is Wing Professor of Mathematics, is the author of two widely used college textbooks, Calculus and Analytic Geometry and Trigonometry. A 1919 graduate of Bates College with M.A. and Ph.D. degrees from Harvard, he joined the faculty in 1925. Although he has served as a member of most faculty committees, he takes greatest satisfaction in having been chairman of a special committee which succeeded in abolishing some 15 committees, on one of which he had served for 30 years.

During the summer Professor Holmes will teach a course in intermediate calculus in an institute at Stanford University in California, where he also taught in the summer of 1962.

Glee Club Concerts

Under the direction of Professor Robert K. Beckwith, the Glee Club will present six concerts during its annual spring tour, as follows: at the University of New Brunswick in Fredericton, New Brunswick, on March 27; in Bangor on March 28; in Cambridge, Mass., on March 29; at Plymouth (N.H.) Teachers College on March 30; in Lynn, Mass., on March 31; and at Boston's Jordan Hall with Wheelock College on April 1.

The Glee Club will also sing with Lasell Junior College in Auburndale, Mass., on April 11 and present a solo campus concert on April 12. On May 14 the Boston Pops Concert will take place at Symphony Hall.

Much Ado

In observance of the 400th birthday of William Shakespeare, the Masque and Gown will present his Much Ado About Nothing on April 23 and repeat it at Commencement time — on Friday evening, June 12.

In a midwinter letter to members of the faculty and staff, Director of Dramatics Pat Quinby '23 wrote, "The Dramatic Club has produced a play by Shakespeare as a part of the Commencement festivities for over 50 years. This year I have suggested that it would be appropriate to celebrate the 400th birthday of the greatest dramatist by performing the Commencement play on April 23 and repeating it at the usual time. To do so, it would be necessary to overlap some of the rehearsals for Shakespeare with those for the annual student-written one-act plays, scheduled for March 20, and with those for the Ivy play, scheduled for May 13.

"Since a majority of the students normally interested in working with the Masque and Gown will be needed as actors or production men on the regularly scheduled offerings, the Executive Committee for the organization appeals to the Faculty and Staff and their families to join in the production of Much Ado About Nothing (an ironic title for the celebration which 'Gentle Will' would doubtless enjoy)."

In connection with the midwinter meeting of the Governing Boards on February 1, this oil portrait of Professor Herbert Ross Brown was presented to the College. The gift of Roy A. Foulke '19, Vice President of the Board of Overseers, it was painted by Sidney E. Dickinson, who also painted the official portrait of President Coles. The portrait of Professor Brown hangs for the present in the Alumni Reading Room in Hubbard Hall.

Morehouse Exchange

Six Bowdoin students and their counterparts from Morehouse College in Atlanta, Ga., are spending the entire spring semester in each other's college in an extension of the one-week program carried out last spring by the two institutions. The men will receive academic credit at their own college if they meet requirements established by the host college for the courses they take.

The Bowdoin group is made up of Ellis Boal '66 of Winnetka, Ill.; Gary Brasor '65 of Fairhaven, Mass.; Louis Fourcher '65, also of Fairhaven; Steven Kay '65 of Lawrence, Mass.; James Rouillard '65 of Stoneham, Mass.; and Charles Toomajian of Troy, N. Y. The Morehouse students are Reuben Brigety '65 of Daytona Beach, Fla. (chemistry major, eating at Zeta Psi Fraternity); Frederick Combs '65 of Fort Lauderdale, Fla. (physics major, Sigma Nu); Earl Guile '65 of Florence, S. C. Recent Gifts

Davis L. Burnell '50 of New Vineyard, an artist and an English teacher at Farmington High School, has given a large watercolor painting to the College. Entitled "Retired," the painting shows a Maine coast scene centered on an old sailboat hauled out on the shore. It hangs in the Alumni House at 83 Federal Street.

The Avalon Foundation of New York has awarded the College a $75,000 grant to aid in the construction of the Senior Center, which will still be ready for occupancy in September, despite the spectacular and exciting construction fire that damaged the wooden crib work and forms on the evening of January 20.

Smith, Kline, and French Laboratories of Philadelphia has made a $2,500 research grant to the College, for the use of Professor Dana W. Mayo of the Chemistry Department. The money will be used to support studies in the chemistry of natural products and will be applied toward student research and equipment purchase.

Nineteen-year-old Meg McGuirk of Albany, N. Y., the date of Jim Hindson '65 of Albany, was crowned Winter Houseparty Queen on February 14. Music at the Gym dance was furnished by Count Basie and his orchestra, with the Meddies singing at intermission. The snow sculpture contest had to be canceled because of the lack of snow — of all things!

Miss Lucy L. Adams of Louisville, Ky., has presented to the College and the Library a letter written by Henry W. Longfellow in 1879 to a young lady studying in Boston. The letter thanks her for a birthday gift of wine and offers her some advice about a reading course in English literature.

Phil Beam to Retire in Part

Professor Philip C. Beam, Chairman of the Art Department and Director of the Museum of Art, will retire as Museum Director on July 1 after 25 years of continuous service in that position. He will continue as Chairman of the Art Department and Henry Johnson Professor of Art and Archaeology.

Until 1936, when Professor Beam first arrived on the campus as Curator of the Art Museum, it — like most other college art museums during the depression years — was severely handicapped by lack of funds. In his first year as Director, the Museum had a total operating budget of only a few hundred dollars. This was insufficient even for painting the interior, to say nothing of defraying the costs of bringing in loan exhibitions from other museums and institutions.

Since he assumed the Director's post, generous donations and increased funds have allowed him to bring about many advances in service, including the following:

A program of temporary, or loan, exhibitions primarily in the contemporary arts field. The Museum has had an average of 10 shows per year over the past 25 years.

A program for the protection and care of the Museum's paintings by professionally trained conservators.

The student loan collection, which provides framed color reproductions of art masterpieces for a nominal rental fee for student room decor. This program has been widely used by Bowdoin undergraduates.

Introduction of a modern cataloguing system, which for the first time collated, through extensive research, the thousands of separate items in the Museum's collections.

Issuance of an illustrated handbook of the Museum's collections in 1958, and issuance of other publications related to special areas of ancient Greek and Roman works of art and the art of John Sloan.

An art lecture program in which Professor Beam has addressed community groups all over Maine, often with color slides of the Museum's art works.

The Museum Associate membership program, now in its third year, through which the public may participate in pre-

Mr. Cousins

Mr. Cary

Sanford B. Cousins '20 of Brunswick has taken over leadership of the final phases of the Capital Campaign from Charles A. Cary '10 of Wilmington, Del., to whom the Governing Boards, in a resolution adopted at their meetings on February 1, paid tribute "for his able, dedicated, inspiring, and effective leadership of the Capital Campaign of 1962-63, the success of which has assured preservation of, and indeed has enhanced, the position of the College as one of the outstanding colleges of the nation."

Mr. Cary retired in 1955 as Vice President of the Du Pont Company. He was elected to the Board of Overseers in 1947 and became a Trustee in 1951.

Mr. Cousins retired in 1963 as Vice President-Personnel Relations of the American Telephone and Telegraph Company. He was elected to the Board of Overseers in 1950 and to the Board of Trustees in 1959 and had been Vice Chairman of the National Committee of the Capital Campaign.

views of exhibitions and other activities centered in the Museum.

"Open House" coffees for students and their guests.

The annual Christmas Concert in the Museum, organized with the cooperation of the late Professor Frederic E. T. Tillotson.

The collection of thousands of color reproductions and lantern slides of art masterworks utilized in teaching art courses at Bowdoin and for public lectures. Professor Beam was one of the first college art teachers in the country to use color slides in classes. He has himself made nearly 20,000 slides, giving Bowdoin an outstanding collection.

The development of an art library, which now numbers several thousand volumes, for research in art history.

Institution of the Bowdoin Traveling Print Collection, which includes 200 framed examples of original works of graphic art sent free of charge to many groups and institutions in the past 10 years. A pioneering venture, it has enabled small isolated communities to see examples of fine art which otherwise would not have been available to them.

A program of inviting secondary school student groups to exhibitions at the Museum. Begun 15 years ago, this program has brought thousands of school children to view exhibitions of the best in American and foreign art.

Professor Beam is the author of The Language of Art. His principal research interest is in the life and work of the artist Winslow Homer. He is a graduate of Harvard, from which he also holds M.A. and Ph.D. degrees.

Financial Report — 1962-63

The College's annual financial report carries the good news that fiscal 1962-63 was a black-ink year for Bowdoin. Income exceeded expense by $9,278, in contrast to 1961-62, when there was a deficit of $99,255.

Income for current operations, including $132,058 of the 1962-63 Alumni Fund, totaled $3,261,961 (up $221,815 over the previous year), and expenses totaled $3,252,683 (up $113,281).

In terms of the College as an educational institution, with such items as board, room, and intercollegiate athletics eliminated, the income total was $2,873,682 and expense was $2,864,404. Government-sponsored research grants, contracts, and academic institutes totaled $266,798, compared with $393,624 the year before.

On the income side, student fees accounted for 42% of the total, gifts and grants 12%, endowment income 33%, the unrestricted portion of the Alumni Fund 4%, and other sources 9%. On the expense side, the division was as follows: instructional 31%, departmental research 9%, library 4%, student services 10%, student aid 10%, plant operation and maintenance 9%, general administration 10%, public services 6%, and other expenses 11%. This last category includes general institutional expense and the net expense of some educational opera-

Endowment income utilized during 1962-63, including $158,807 for student aid, amounted to $1,075,453.

The total assets of the College on June 30, 1963, were $32,105,303, an increase of some $3,118,268 for the year. Included in this total were $22,480,197 in endowment funds and $9,320,428 in plant funds.

Gifts and bequests received during the year, including the 1962-63 Alumni Fund and payments on pledges to the Capital Campaign, totaled $3,631,720, compared with $1,537,705 for the year before. Of this total $2,576,076 was additional endowment, $404,031 was Plant Fund receipts, and $109,050 was unallocated.

Bowdoin's investments at book value as of June 30 amounted to $22,366,259, of which $399,358 was earmarked for plant construction. The net return for 1962-63 was 4.84%, compared with 4.95% the previous year. On securities alone, the rate of return at average market value was 3.48%, compared with 4.01% the year before. At average book value, the return on securities alone was 4.96%, up from 4.78% the previous year. A lower return on common stocks was offset by an appreciably higher net rate of return on bonds and preferred stocks.

Interested alumni and friends of the College may obtain a copy of the complete financial statements by writing to or calling at the Business Office, 8 College Street, Brunswick.

Winter Sports

The sparkling play of Coach Sid Watson's sextet proved to be the bright spot on the 1963-64 winter sports scene. The Polar Bear hockey team finished high in Eastern College Athletic Conference ranks and showed itself to be the top small college team on the eastern seaboard.

The basketball team played its way through a frustrating season, in which it dropped seven games by three or less field goals, surrendering the State Series title to the University of Maine.

The swimming team, confronted with some of the stiffest competition in years, remained only one meet off a .500 pace. There were, however, several individual highlights at the Curtis Pool.

Coach Frank Sabastanski's varsity track team lost two dual meets, scored a season high in a triangular meet with Colby and Vermont, and went on to crush Tufts by more than fifty points in another dual meet.

The January ALUMNUS described the hockey season through the first semester, which closed with a six-game winning streak. This was extended to seven with a 7-0 shutout over Williams early in February. However, the streak came to an end on February 15, when Middlebury won a thrilling 6-5 decision in overtime. Then New Hampshire got its revenge 4-3, and a strong Northeastern team defeated Bowdoin 6-1. However, in the second Colby game the Polar Bears took a 4-3 overtime contest at Waterville for the first series sweep from the Mules in many years.

The final regular game of the year, against Merrimack, also required a sudden death overtime, the sixth of the season. Center Bill Allen '66 scored at 1:57 to end the season just as it had been played throughout — thrillingly, spiritedly, and successfully.

Dave Mechem '64 and Fred Filoon '64 set the offensive pace with 29 and 28 points respectively, while Bill Matthews '65, Frank Yule '66, and Leo Tracy '66 were the defensive workhorses.

The annual tradition of the Alumni-Varsity game rounded out the hockey season. The Alumni, with their best squad in the history of this contest, were paced by Lennie Johnson '63 with two goals. Newt Stowell '62, Bill Bisset '63, Ed Spalding '63, and varsity coach Sid Watson each scored once. Despite this scoring strength and the impressive speed of Ron Famiglietti '62, the Alumni lost 10-6.

After midyear exams the basketball team lost to Springfield 71-100, to Trinity 65-85, and to M.I.T. 62-70. On Winter Houseparty Weekend, however, the team defeated Tufts 87-77, with Captain Harry Silverman, sophomore Howie Pease, junior Dick Whitmore, and senior Mike Napolitano all hitting double figures.

In their next game the Polar Bears lost to Maine 69-84, despite Silverman's 27 points, but on February 22 they defeated Williams 83-70 and followed with an 87-77 win over Bates. In the final game Colby edged Bowdoin 82-80.

Whitmore finished the season as high scorer for Coach Ray Bicknell with 360 points and an average of 18 per game, followed by Pease with 251. Pease took the honors in the percentage departments hitting .461 from the floor and .735 from the foul line.

Coach Charlie Butt's swimming team defeated Trinity 50-45 to start the second semester but lost to Wesleyan the following day 33-62. A week later Williams defeated the Polar Bears 53-41, but junior Tim Robinson gained the spotlight by setting two New England records. He was timed in 1:51.7 in the 200 yard freestyle, five seconds better than the Curtis Pool record and three seconds faster than the New England mark. Then in the 100 yard freestyle he bettered the Curtis Pool record of 51.3, set by Curt Tilton '62, and his own New England record of 49.4 by turning in a

"You mow your grass . . ."

At the annual town meeting in Brunswick on March 3 Professor Emeritus Warren B. Catlin was honored as the 1964 Citizen of the Year. The citation honoring him for his services to his adopted town was prepared by a fellow member of the Faculty whose style will be readily familiar to many alumni. His name will be found at the bottom of page 1 of this issue.

The citation reads, in part, as follows: "You embody all our cherished Yankee virtues of thrift, practicality, industry, and idealism. You are a pillar of New England's oldest and best institutions — the School and the Church.

"A nationally known economist . . . you put your knowledge to work in your own community as a member of the Brunswick Housing Authority and of the Regional War Labor Board. An authority on Federal revenue and public finance, you also serve as Town Auditor. An expert on economic growth, you are never too busy to keep an eye on the planting and care of the trees on our own Mall. The author of an influential book on labor problems, you help solve some of them at home by digging the holes, watering and nurturing the town's trees with your own hands. A sociologist primarily concerned with the public welfare, as Chairman of the Davis Fund Committee for twenty years, you have added to the public pleasure and the common good.

"You are, Sir, a heartening symbol of all that is best in our New England tradition. With a character of granite and the humility of a Christian gentleman, you mow your grass, mend your fences, cultivate your garden, pay your taxes, attend town meeting, support your church, sing in its choir, contribute to all agencies of human welfare, and even bake your own pies.

"A poet once asked whether anything is lovelier than a tree. You have enabled your fellow citizens to reply: 'A human being who not only loves trees, but plants them and preserves their loveliness for generations yet unborn; a humanitarian to whom nothing human is alien; a public-spirited citizen who speaks the truth, fears no man, and does his job.'"

Louis M. Lyons delivered the inaugural lecture of the Charles Weston Pickard Journalism Lectureship on February 6. This new lecture fund was established by John C. Pickard '22 in memory of his grandfather, a member of the Class of 1857, who was owner and business manager of the Portland Transcript, one of the most influential weekly newspapers in Maine during the last half of the 19th century and the early 1900's. Mr. Lyons is Curator of the Nieman Fellowships at Harvard University and a leading critic of the American press.

48.8 performance. Captain Pete Seaver '64 also won two events and John Halford '64 took the butterfly, but Williams had too much depth.

Army's crack team swamped Bowdoin 69-26, but the Polar Bears came back to take Tufts 59-35, with firsts in every event except the opening relay and the backstroke. In dual meet competition the swimmers had four wins and six losses.

In track Captain Dave McDowell '64 finished third in the broad jump at the BAA Games in Boston on February 1 with a leap of 22 feet 11 3/4 inches. He set a new Bowdoin record of 23 feet 4 inches in a dual meet against Bates on February 8, although the Polar Bears lost 57-65.

The following Saturday Bowdoin rolled up 104 points to Vermont's 34 and Colby's 13. Paul Soule '66 equaled the Cage record of 5.5 seconds in the 45-yard low hurdles, and Alex Schulten '66 and Dave Stocking '66 dominated the weight events.

An 82-31 win over Tufts featured a Schulten toss of 57 feet 10 1/4 inches in the 35 pound weight, but on February 29 M.I.T. took a dual meet 84-29.

Kappa Sigma easily scored its sixth straight victory in the Interfraternity Meet on March 5. The Jack Magee Trophy for the outstanding single performance went to Schulten for his Cage record toss of 144 feet in the discus. Gil Ekdahl '65 of Chi Psi scored 17 points in five events to win the Whittier Cup for total points by an individual.

Skiing and riflery complete the winter sports picture. Charlie Cary '65 was outstanding on the slopes, with Steve Barnollar '63 and Dick Forté '66 also amassing points at the New England Intercollegiate Ski Conference two-run slalom at Mount Whittier, where Bowdoin placed fourth out of 11 teams.

Steve Munger '65, Captain Phil Walls '64, Steve Leonard '65, and Jim Blanford '66 were Master Sergeant Marshall Bailey's crack shots as the rifle team shot its way to a 2-4 record, defeating Colby by 150 points to close out the season.

Hawthorne Institute

The 1964 Bowdoin College Institute will be a series of five lectures in commemoration of the 100th anniversary of the death of Nathaniel Hawthorne (1804-1864) of the Class of 1825. Entitled "Hawthorne and the American Novel," the Institute will take place on April 7, 8, 9, 10, and 20, with the following program of lectures:

Tuesday, April 7 — "Hawthorne and Italy: The Marble Faun," by Harry Levin, who is Irving Babbitt Professor of Comparative Literature at Harvard University.

Wednesday, April 8 — "Hawthorne and Henry James," by Leon Edel, Professor of English at Washington Square College of New York University.

Thursday, April 9 — "Nathaniel Hawthorne: Art and Belief," by Hyatt Waggoner, Professor of American Literature and Chairman of the Program in American Civilization at Brown University.

Friday, April 10 — "Hawthorne: Novelist of His America," by Arlin Turner, Professor of English and Chairman of the Department of English at Duke University.

Monday, April 20 — "Nathaniel Hawthorne: Artist of New England," by Alfred Kazin, Professor of English at Long Island Center, State University of New York.

Professor Herbert R. Brown H'63 is Chairman of the 1964 Institute Committee. Professor Thomas Cornell did a drawing of Hawthorne's head and shoulders for use in a handsome announcement of the series of lectures, which will all take place at 8:15 p.m. in the Pickard Theater in Memorial Hall.

Academic Achievements

Some 210 students — more than 25% of the total enrollment — are on the Dean's List for the spring semester. Included are 74 seniors, 53 juniors, 40 sophomores, and 43 freshmen. Sixty-four of the men come from Massachusetts 49 from Maine, 26 from New York, 19 from Connecticut, and 9 from Pennsylvania.

To attain the Dean's List a student must have at least a B- average for the preceding semester, with no more than one grade below B- and no grade lower than C-. Freshmen on the Dean's List may take four cuts in their classes; other students are, in general, responsible for regulating their own attendance.

Steven Weiss '64 of Jenkintown, Pa., has the distinction of being the only straight "A" student during the first semester, despite the presence of 209 other men on the Dean's List. He also had a straight "A" record during the entire 1962-63 academic year.

Two seniors, Robert Frank of New York City and David Walker of Wiscasset, were elected to Phi Beta Kappa in February, thereby joining five other members of the Class of 1964, who were elected last June, as the seven Phi Betes in college.

Phi Delta Psi won the Student Council Cup for the first semester, with a scholastic average of 2.609, followed by Alpha Rho Upsilon with 2.471, Sigma Nu with 2.381, Delta Sigma with 2.311, Theta Delta Chi with 2.300, and Beta Theta Pi with 2.289. The all-fraternity average was 2.263 and the all-college average 2.278.

The Peucinian Cup, awarded to the highest-ranking freshman delegation, went to Alpha Phi Upsilon, whose 23 freshmen had an average of 2.674. Beta Theta Pi at 2.434 was second, followed by Delta Sigma at 2.146, Sigma Nu at 2.083, Chi Psi at 2.074, and Theta Delta Chi at 2.059. The all-fraternity freshman average was 2.136, and the all-college freshman average 2.148.

Deering High School of Portland has won the 1964 Abraxas Award, given to the school whose representatives (there must be at least three) in the freshman class maintain the highest academic standing during the first semester. Platt High School of Meriden, Conn., was second, Boston Latin School third, and Brunswick High School fourth.

Karl Philbrick Replaces Bill Farrar

William H. Farrar '14 of Brunswick has retired after 20 years as Secretary of the Board of Trustees of the College and has been elected an Overseer Emeritus. He has been replaced by Karl R. Philbrick '23 of Bangor.

Mr. Farrar was for 45 years associated with the First National Bank of Brunswick and was elected Senior Vice President of the First National Bank of Portland after the Brunswick bank merged with it in 1962. He is now retired.

Elected Secretary of the Board of Trustees in 1944, Mr. Farrar has served as Chairman of 1914's Reunion Committees through the years. In 1954 members of the Class presented a gift and scroll to him in recognition of his devotion and service. He is the only active charter member of the Brunswick Rotary Club and has served as Trustee and Treasurer of the Brunswick Sewer District, for which he helped draw up the charter.

Mr. Farrar has also been Treasurer of the Brunswick Chamber of Commerce, Treasurer of the Maine Cancer Society,

Mr. Philbrick

Secretary of the Maine Senior Golf Association, President of the Cumberland Seed Potato Company, Director of the Richmond Water Works, and Treasurer of the Brunswick Development Company.

Mr. Philbrick is Vice President, Secretary, and Trust Officer of the Eastern Trust and Banking Company in Bangor, which he joined in 1925. He has served as a Director of the Alumni Fund, as 1923 Class Agent for seven years, as a member of the Alumni Council, and as President of the Penobscot County Bowdoin Club.

Active in many civic, educational, and charitable causes, Mr. Philbrick has been Treasurer of the Bangor Public Library, Treasurer of the Central Penobscot County Heart Fund, Vice President of the New England Historic and Genealogical Society, Trustee of Maine Central Institute in Pittsfield, President of the Salvation Army Advisory Board, and Treasurer of the Bangor-Brewer Travelers Aid Society.

He has served as a member of the Bangor School Committee, as Director of the Penobscot Association for the Blind as Treasurer of the Penobscot County Red Cross Chapter, and as an executive of the Bangor-Brewer United Fund. In addition, he has been Treasurer of the Bangor Mechanics Association, President of the Corporate Fiduciaries Association of Maine, and President of the Bangor City Club.

Ancient Art at Bowdoin

The Walker Art Building contains one of the most comprehensive collections of ancient art in any American college museum. The principal one, the Warren Collection, is one of the best collections of classical antiquities in this country outside of the two major museums in New York and Boston.

On April 27 the Harvard University Press will publish Ancient Art in Bowdoin College, a descriptive catalogue by Kevin Herbert, who formerly taught at the College and is now Associate Professor of Classics at Washington University in St. Louis, Mo.

Priced at $6.95, the book provides the first full and detailed catalogue of the Warren Collection of Greek and Roman art, the Haskell Collection of large Assyrian mural reliefs, and the Estes Collection of Cypriot objects, chiefly terracottas of the archaic and classical periods.

Ancient Art in Bowdoin College will be reviewed in a forthcoming issue of the ALUMNUS.

BOWDOIN UNDER HYDE

Anyone possessing diaries, letters, notebooks, scrapbooks, or other memorabilia concerning Bowdoin under President Hyde is asked to contact Paul O. Johnson '60, a graduate student at Yale University, who is undertaking a history of the College during the period from the late 19th century through World War I. Mr. Johnson would also like to talk to as many graduates of that period as possible. His address is 19 Crawford Drive, Bath.

RUGS, PIANOS, BEARSKINS FOR BOWDOIN?

In connection with furnishing the Senior Center, which will open next fall, the College would welcome the availability of gifts of the following items, for use in the seminar and lounge areas: a large Oriental rug and several average or small ones, two baby grand or medium grand pianos, five sets of andirons, and a large bearskin rug — polar, brown, or black — preferably with head!

Anyone who knows of any of these items that might be available as a gift to the College is invited to write to President Coles at Massachusetts Hall or to Mr. Widgery Thomas '22, Canal National Bank, Portland, the Chairman of the Senior Center Building Committee.

ORIENT SUBSCRIPTIONS

As always throughout the long career of The Bowdoin Orient, its Business Manager is seeking subscriptions from alumni. Published weekly, when classes are held, during the fall and spring semesters by the students, the Orient costs $4 a year for a one-year subscription, $7.50 for two years, $10 for three years, and $12 for four years. Subscription communications should be sent to the Business Manager, Bowdoin Publishing Company, Moore Hall, Bowdoin College, Brunswick.

A Busy Midwinter Weekend

From Thursday, February 27, through Monday, March 2, the campus was an unusually busy place, busy not only for the students and teachers who normally work here but also for several groups of alumni and their guests. This was the occasion of the nineteenth Midwinter Meeting of the Alumni Council, the Council's Third Campus Career Conference, and the Council's Eleventh Senior Dinner, as well as several athletic events and two lectures. It was also a high point in the Alumni Council's observance of its fiftieth anniversary year.

On Thursday the Council's Nominating and Alumni-Undergraduate Liaison Committees met, and most members of the Council and their wives registered at the Alumni House. Beginning at 8:30 the following morning, there were meetings of eleven other committees, and the Fund Directors held a session at Getchell House. The ladies attended classes and had coffee with Mrs. Coles at 85 Federal Street.

President Arthur K. Orne '30 presided at the opening luncheon on Friday, and Dean of Students A. LeRoy Greason extended greetings on behalf of the College. The Council held its business meeting from 2 until 4:30 at the Alumni House. Afterwards members, wives, and guests assembled for a brief reception and then went to their respective fraternity houses for dinner and to the Arena for the final varsity hockey game of the season. The day's activities concluded with an informal social hour at the Alumni House.

Saturday morning Professor Albert Abrahamson '26 moderated a stimulating student panel discussion in the Council Room at 83 Federal Street. Walter Christie '64, Peter Seaver '64, Gerald Giesler '65, Edward McAbee '66, and David Huntington '67 told what each thinks is good — and what each thinks is bad — about Bowdoin. The discussion proceeded briskly, with the panelists covering, frankly, openly, and often wittily, among themselves and with the Council audience, a variety of Bowdoin subjects.

At the Saturday luncheon President Coles brought Council Members up to date on current Bowdoin happenings and thanked all for attending the meeting and displaying such interest in the College. Some then toured the Senior Center construction, and many witnessed the Alumni-Varsity hockey game immediately afterwards. For others the final event of the weekend was an illustrated Saturday-night lecture in Pickard Theater by Carl de Suze '38 entitled "Empires Revisited: The New Look of Europe."

The Council sponsored the Third Campus Career Conference on March 1 and 2. More than fifty alumni returned to participate as moderators (listed first) and panelists in twelve informal sessions in the following occupations and professions:

Following Sunday Chapel, at which the Venerable Donald H. Lyons '48, Archdeacon of the Episcopal Diocese of New Hampshire, spoke, these alumni participants registered at the Alumni House and then went to dinner at the Union, where they were greeted by President Coles. Later, back at the Alumni House, they held a general organizational session, and then each group of experts met separately to prepare for the following day.

Beginning at 9:00 a.m., there were five sets of concurrent panel discussions, so arranged as to involve a minimum of conflict for interested students. Undergraduates from all four classes were invited to attend, and they did, in numbers ranging from 20 to over 100 at each of the twelve discussions. Mayland H. Morse, Jr. '42, Chairman of the Council's Placement Committee, was the Chapel speaker, and later he described the Career Conference to members of the Brunswick Rotary Club at its weekly Monday luncheon.

The alumni panelists were entertained for luncheon in groups of four and five at the twelve fraternity houses. From 3:30 until 5:00 they met interested undergraduates informally at an Alumni House coffee hour, giving students a chance to ask more questions.

At six o'clock most of June's graduating Seniors and many Council Members and Career Conference participants crowded into the Moulton Union for the Senior Dinner. President Orne presided and introduced President Coles, who spoke for the College; Class President Frank Drigotas '64, who spoke for the Seniors; and Overseer Jotham Pierce '39, the principal speaker, who delivered a lively, witty, and entertaining talk.

The long weekend reached its climax when Dr. Donald W. MacKinnon '25, Professor of Psychology and Director of the Institute of Personality Assessment and Research at the University of California (Berkeley), delivered a public lecture at Pickard Theater. Mr. Orne presided and introduced Professor L. Dodge Fernald, Jr., Chairman of the Psychology Department, who introduced Dr. MacKinnon. The latter's Alumni Council-sponsored lecture, "The Identification and Development of Creative Potential," was very well received.

SAMUEL T. DANA and EVERT W. JOHNSON, Forestry Education in America — Today and Tomorrow: Society of American Foresters, Washington, D. C., 1963; pp. 402; $5.00.

In 1952 the Society of American Foresters, under a grant from the Old Dominion Foundation, initiated the study which, supplemented by Society funds, resulted in this excellent book.

Inside the jacket is this statement: "Through the publication of this book the Society of American Foresters provides a basis for self-evaluation by the schools of forestry, informs the profession about the quality of the education now offered and needed in the future, and finally, paves the way for further cooperation between the institutions offering forestry instruction, employers of their graduates, and the profession."

Part I, "Past and Present," contains ten chapters and presents the foundation for Part II, "Conclusions and Recommendations." Chapters 1 through 8 cover the following topics: Forests, Forestry, and Related Fields; Forestry as a Profession; Evaluation of Professional Education in Forestry; Current Programs . . .; Faculties; Student; Technical Training . . .; Other Educational Programs.

Chapter 9, "Forestry Education in a World Setting," was written by Hardy W. Shirley, Dean of the State University of New York College of Forestry.

Chapter 10, "Education in Related Fields," covers education in Range Management, Wildlife Management, Watershed Management, Outdoor Recreation, Conservation, Wood Technology, Interrelationships.

Chapter 11, Part II, is perhaps the most important chapter in the book. In order to understand better the recommendations for his education, the forester is described. He is "basically a practitioner — a manager or administrator — whose unique professional competence lies in his ability to utilize the sciences (biological, physical, and social) and the humanities in the planned management of specific tracts of land for the attainment of specific objectives. This ability is essential also in research and education."

To train such men, of whom the authors believe we will need 20,000 to 30,000 by 1980, they recommend a five-year program. To train the 40,000 to 60,000 technicians who will be needed they propose a two-year basic program. In the meantime, work at the technical level will be carried on by graduates of four-year curricula, but this "should be regarded as temporary."

Many leaders in the profession who are graduates of four-year curricula will not agree with this proposal for various reasons, partly financial, but the authors believe they answer this and other objections in argument and comment on pp. 312 to 316. They include a table entitled "Plans of Education in Professional Fields Covering Five or More Years of Study."

The so-called "core" subjects are at present taught in all accredited schools, although there are necessarily differences in emphasis. Core requirements are defined in the text as follows: "The subjects suggested . . . are those regarded as indispensable to give every forester a grasp of the basic principles and practices needed for the intelligent management of forests as communities. All of those parts are interrelated, together with an understanding of the economic, social, political, and historic factors influencing that management."

Further, "A single professional curriculum in 'Forestry,' with certain core requirements and reasonable opportunity for electives, will avoid misunderstanding and will help unify the profession."

The authors believe also that "it is far better for a school of limited resources . . . to concentrate on offering a strong program in one or a few branches of forestry than to offer weak programs in all branches." Words of wisdom!

Sam Dana's own philosophy of education is well expressed in the following: "Finally, one of the most important responsibilities of a school of forestry is to imbue its students with the professional attitude: Commitment to high standards of ethical conduct, to the rendering of useful service to society, and to enhancement of esprit de corps." Every forest school executive should memorize that quotation.

There is an excellent discussion of graduate study and especially of the doctorate in forestry and allied fields. Too great an emphasis on the doctorate as a prerequisite for teaching is deplored because of the "danger of bringing together a group of specialists whose outlook is narrow rather than broad, and whose effectiveness both as teachers and members of a team is correspondingly reduced."

The last chapter in the book is entitled "Program of Action." The authors stress the need for further studies and express the fervent wish that "the profession may have the wisdom and courage to put the education of its members on an even firmer foundation."

This book is an important addition to forestry literature. It charts the course for raising forestry to the high professional level which all foresters desire to attain.

E. FREDERIC MORROW, Black Man in the White House: Coward, McCann, Inc., 1963; pp. 308; $5.95.

As the first Negro in U. S. governmental annals to join a Presidential staff in an executive capacity, Bowdoin's Freddy Morrow appeared to have a golden opportunity for service, and for the enhancement of the cause of civil rights. Nevertheless, the period from 1955 to 1961 became, for Morrow, a terribly frustrating and occasionally humiliating experience, after such an auspicious start.

Morrow initially worked on the Eisenhower Presidential campaign in 1952. When the general advanced to the Presidency, Morrow was promised a Washington post "commensurate with (his) background and training."

Thus began the first of Morrow's many annoying brush-offs, shuntings-aside, and downright rejections.

Certainly he had the qualifications of a good White House adviser, and more, to this reviewer's knowledge, than some of those who promptly joined the Presidential staff. He had worked on the CBS public affairs staff; he was an honor student at Bowdoin and Rutgers University School of Law; and he was an honored spokesman for his race on the national scene.

But suddenly, once Eisenhower's victory was assured, the new President's aides found it difficult either to assign Morrow a position at a proper staff salary or to find a suitable spot at all.

Morrow's FBI clearance had been "swift and sure." He had proven his ability during the 1952 campaign, and his GOP political record was good.

"The only remaining possibilities" for his rejection, says Morrow, "were the personal ones such as prejudice or jealousy."

Finally, however, he was given an adviser's post in the Commerce Department — "a pioneering job" — concerned with business affairs. And two years later, having acquitted himself well there, Morrow got his long delayed summons to the White House — "on the double."

He wept, literally, for joy.

Presumably, Morrow, again pioneering, was to advise the Administration on civil rights matters at a time when this whole delicate field was opening up, following the historic Supreme Court desegregation rulings.

But, he recounts, "there seemed to be complete fright when civil-rights action was suggested," and Eisenhower staffers (Morrow says) actually suggested that he stop being such an eager beaver. "Walk softly and ask fewer questions regarding race," they urged.

Despite this, despite his awareness of the personal risk he faced from the disillusioned Negro community, Morrow bravely stayed on — to face more frustrations.

Granted the author's built-in bias on this touchy issue, and his bitterness in retrospect, what happened to Freddy Morrow in Washington is illustrative of the dismaying failure to tackle the racial question in those days, and of a general sweep-it-under-the-rug attitude on the part of those in high places.

When he joined the Nixon Presidential campaign in 1960, there was no improvement in his lot. His advice continued to be ignored; the Republicans continued to make errors of omission upon which their Democratic opponents gleefully capitalized.

Perhaps Morrow's intimate diary will serve to spur future Administrations into better appreciation of the problem, and into smarter action for solving it. Slogans, lip service, "petitioning at the bar" won't do the job, he writes.

"Without the tacit agreement, help and conviction of his party, no presidential candidate can deal out the great treasures that American Negroes have longed for and sought for over 300 years," Morrow concludes.

JAMES BASSETT '34

LAWRENCE S. HALL, How Thinking Is Written: An Analytical Approach to Writing: D. C. Heath and Company, 1963; pp. 312; $3.30.

"Language," writes Professor Hall, "is alive with choices." Yet all too often when we commit ourselves to words we do not realize that we are choosing and we have no full awareness of the possibilities open to us. It is the aim of this instructive book to make conscious and resourceful writers, masters of language as men are masters of vessels, who know how forces in themselves largely uncontrollable may be used together for human ends.

In his analysis of language Professor Hall avoids, on the one hand, the "old vocabularies and strictures" of the traditional grammarians and, on the other, the "wholly new vocabularies and ingenuities" of the modern linguists. One sign of his skill in this ticklish endeavor is his use of grammatical terms. When he uses an old term, he sharpens and clarifies its meaning, often by examining its etymology, and when he uses a new one, it is presented not arbitrarily, like a rabbit out of a hat, but as the fruit of the process of analysis through which he has been leading us. Definition thus becomes discovery.

The book is divided into three major parts, concerned, in order, with grammar, rhetoric, and semantics. This reader found the first section the most enlightening. Many of us learned our grammar a long time ago and by rote, so all that is left of it now is a lot of habits and a few "rules," most of which we are unable to defend logically. It is, therefore, both startling and comforting to be shown a grammar that makes sense in every particular.

It would be a mistake to regard How Thinking Is Written as only a textbook for college classes in composition; the most knowing writer can benefit from it. Indeed, the book's limitation is the excess of its strength: its rigor and sophistication demand a reader with more than ordinary knowledge of and sensitivity to language. An average student would often be left behind. American education has often been accused of spending too much time and effort moving students from one level of mediocrity to another and too little helping good students achieve excellence. It is the latter progress that Professor Hall's book is designed to assist.

Honorary

MARY ELLEN CHASE, Victoria: A Pig in a Pram: W. W. Norton and Company, 1963; pp. 59; $2.95.

In this book, written for children with great affection and humor by Mary Ellen Chase, we are introduced to a most endearing young pig which became a much-loved and respected member of the household during a summer of Miss Chase's childhood in Maine. A pig for a pet was only slightly unique, considering the fact that this household also included a cat named Dolly Moses; James G. Blaine, the crow; a red setter called Captain Kidd; Samson, a Newfoundland; Jeremiah, a collie; Ezekiel, a rat terrier; and two reliably prolific rabbits named Admiral Dewey and Clara Barton. There are also father, who "learned a great many odd things at Bowdoin College" and who continually added to the menagerie by his habit of bringing home "one of God's neglected creatures"; a remarkable mother, who somehow endured it all with complete serenity; and eight lively children.

Victoria, brought into the home after an injury suffered in the somewhat over-populated pig sty, regains her health and responds joyfully to all the love and attention offered her by the Chase family, taking uncharacteristic delight in her daily baths and fetching wardrobe of muslin pinafores, crocheted bonnets, and pink booties. It is Miss Chase's distinctively intuitive Aunt Sophie who provides the English pram for Victoria's outings, and the picture of the charming pig, clean and sweet and beruffled, nestled blissfully in her elegant pram, is one that the reader — along with the minister's wife in the story — will find "utterly entrancing."

Written for children, this book will be equally appealing to all adults fortunate enough to have the opportunity of reading it aloud to young listeners.

Philosophy and History: The Ernst Cassirer Festschrift, edited by Raymond Klibansky and H. J. Paton, contains a bibliography of Cassirer's writings by the late Professor Walter M. Solmitz and Mr. Klibansky. This new edition was published in 1963 by Harper and Row as a Harper Torchbook.

Milton M. Gordon '39, Professor of Sociology at the University of Massachusetts, is the author of Assimilation in American Life, a book which will be published by the Oxford University Press in April. An article by Professor Gordon entitled "Recent Trends in the Study of Minority and Race Relations" appeared in the November, 1963, issue of The Annals of the American Academy of Political and Social Science.

"Time's Arrow," a poem by Professor Louis O. Coxe, appeared in the February 8, 1964, issue of The New Yorker.

David R. Anderson '55 is the author of "A Model State Wrongful Death Act," an article which appeared in the January, 1964, issue of the Harvard Journal on Legislation, published by the Harvard Student Legislative Research Bureau at Harvard Law School. This article is a condensation of a thesis which Mr. Anderson prepared for a Personal Injuries Compensation Seminar at Harvard Law School, from which he was graduated last June.

Orville Z. Tyler, III '56 is the author of two poems, "Flanders — Tomorrow" and "The Ice Bucket," which appeared in Quatrains, published earlier this year by the Crawford Publishing Company in Jacksonville, Fla. A book of family poetry, Quatrains also contains poetry written by Mr. Tyler's father, his grandmother, and his great-grandmother.

On April 16 The Dial Press in New York reissued The Hound of Earth by Vance Bourjaily '44, first published in 1955 as his second novel.

Indian Thought Through the Ages: A Study of Some Dominant Concepts by B. G. Gokhale has recently been published by the Asia Publishing House. Professor Gokhale was the Tallman Professor at Bowdoin some years ago.

Alumni Clubs

BOWDOIN TEACHERS' CLUB

The Bowdoin Teachers' Club will hold its annual meeting on Saturday, April 25, at the College. Bowdoin educators from the six New England states and New York and New Jersey will receive letters of invitation early in April. Any other alumnus in education who would like to attend is invited to do so and to make inquiries and reservations by writing to the Alumni Secretary.

The meeting will begin with registration and a coffee hour at the Alumni House. Dr. Hendrik Gideonse, Instructor in Education, will be the Chapel speaker, and Dean Robert Morse '43 of Brown University will be the principal speaker at a 10:30 general session. His subject will be "The Crisis in the Undergraduate College."

After luncheon the educators will meet in smaller groups to discuss common subject-matter problems in English, mathematics, social studies, foreign languages, and the sciences.

NEW YORK

The new Princeton Club on West 43rd Street was the site of the 95th annual dinner meeting of the Bowdoin Club of New York on Friday, February 7. More than 140 alumni and guests gathered for the 5:30 social hour and dinner at 7.

Club President Edward Tevritz '26 introduced those at the head table: Overseer Austin MacCormick '15, Trustee Emeritus George Burpee '04, Trustee Benjamin Shute '31, President Coles, Overseer Leland Goodrich '20, Past President Weston Rankin '30, Overseer William Pierce '28, Overseer Roliston Woodbury '22, and English Instructor Daniel Calder '60, coach of the College Bowl team.

Treasurer John Stalford '52 reported the Club solvent. Secretary Daniel Dayton '49 stated that the Club carries about 1150 Bowdoin men on its mailing list. More than 130 made reservations for the dinner, and 161 replied to a question about future meetings: 80 want to include wives, and 81 voted to maintain the stag format. Mr. Dayton also reported that the Bowdoin turnout at New York dinners exceeds the percentage of dinner turnouts for other alumni groups, such as those of Amherst and Williams.

As a token of the New York Club's high regard for the College Bowl team, Mr. Tevritz presented to Mr. Calder a specially engrossed and framed certificate (which now hangs in the Alumni House at the College). Mr. Calder introduced three of the five undergraduate members of the team, Kenneth Smith '64, Jotham Pierce, Jr. '65, and Michael Bennett '67, and then explained how the team had been formed, how it trained, and what went on behind the scenes during its exciting five-week competition on television.

President Coles, the principal speaker, announced that the Governing Boards had appropriated the funds to begin construction of the new library and the new gymnasium. The Capital Campaign has passed the seven-million-dollar mark and will continue until the ten-million-dollar goal is achieved.

The President outlined plans for enlarging the Moulton Union and for renovating the older dormitories and reported that Phi Delta Psi Fraternity will soon move from Federal Street to the Burnett House, between Alpha Delta Phi and the Mustard House. The College has accepted the deed to the Delta Upsilon House from the alumni corporation and will soon turn it over to a new corporation, which is being formed to operate it as the Delta Sigma House. Plans for the Senior Center Program are proceeding. The Center will open next September, Senior Seminars will be instituted, and formal dedication will take place as part of the Alumni Day (October 17) Weekend.

John Hupper '50 read the necrology for the twelve members of the Club who had died since January 1, 1963. Nominating Committee Chairman Weston Rankin '30 reported, and the following were elected unanimously for the coming year: President, William Pierce '28; Vice Presidents, Kenneth Rounds '28, James Blunt '31, John Shute '36, Stevens Frost '42, Roscoe Ingalls '43, and Dexter Foss '45; Secretary, Harold Sewall '51; Assistant Secretary, Alfred Schretter '59; Treasurer, Gordon Linke '50; Assistant Treasurer, Frank Whittelsey, III '58; Council Member, George Griggs, Jr. '44; Alternate Council Member, Dexter Foss '45; 1965 Dinner Chairman, Mr. Pierce; and Chairman of the Nominating Committee, Mr. Tevritz.

Mr. Tevritz then turned the meeting over to Mr. Pierce, who presented to the former an engraved silver plate in recognition of the Club's appreciation for his leadership. Mr. Pierce adjourned the meeting at 10:00 p.m.

PENOBSCOT

The Penobscot County Bowdoin Club held a "High School Student Meeting Night" on December 26 at the Tarratine Club in Bangor.

President John Conti '52 presided at the informal meeting, attended by the following alumni: Peter Anderson '60, William Georgitis '42, John Hess '44, Mal Morrell, Jr. '49, Fred Newman '38, William Newman '10, Ed Stone '48, Lew Vafiades '42, Henry Van De Bogert '34, Allan Woodcock, Jr. '44, and Dr. John Woodcock '44. Also present were undergraduates Jay Shubert '66, Paul Newman '67, and Wally Hess '67 and seven subfreshmen from Bangor-area schools.

Coach Nels Corey '39 talked informally about the College and showed movie highlights of Bowdoin's 1963 football season.

Secretary Lew Vafiades reports, "All who were present were in agreement that the meeting was the finest of its kind sponsored by the Club in many years. Enthusiasm was evident, and the Bowdoin prospects seemed most interested in hearing about the College."

PHILADELPHIA

On Saturday evening, February 8, nearly 100 alumni and guests gathered at Williamson's Dining Room in the Presidential Apartments for the annual dinner meeting and ladies' night.

Club President John Ryan '44 introduced those at the head table: Professor A. R. Thayer '22 and his daughter, Mrs. Joan Thayer Hupper, Mrs. James Coles, Executive Secretary Wolcott Hokanson, Jr. '50, President Coles, Club Vice President John Hovey '55, Mrs. Stanley Lawry, Alumni Secretary Peter Barnard '50, and Club Secretary Stanley Lawry '45.

Alumni Council Member Richard Bechtel '36 reported on current Council activities: the Alumni House, the Alumni-Undergraduate Liaison Committee, the Prospective Students Committee, and the Third Campus Career Conference. He noted that Arthur Orne '30, also present at the meeting, is President of the Alumni Council during this, its fiftieth, year.

Chairman Orne reported for the Nominating Committee, and the following were elected officers: President, John Hovey '55; First Vice President, Campbell Cary '46; Second Vice President, David Crowell '49; Secretary-Treasurer, Ronald Golz '56; and Assistant Secretary-Treasurer, John Malcolm '54. Richard Bechtel continues as Council Member, Leroy Knight '50 is Program Chairman, and Channing Zucker '59 is Chairman of the Prospective Students Committee.

Mr. Ryan turned the meeting over to Mr. Hovey, who called upon John Leydon '07, one of the founders, to report how the Club was started fifty years earlier, in 1914. Mr. Leydon traced the growth of Bowdoin activities in the Philadelphia area following that first meeting at Kugler's Restaurant.

President Coles, the principal speaker, said that the College is indebted to loyal alumni for their continued interest and support, a good example of which can be found in the Philadelphia area. He spoke of Bowdoin's recently completed "Banner Year," 1963, and then outlined the high points anticipated for 1964: the construction of the new library and the new gymnasium, the completion of the Capital Campaign, the renovation of the older dormitories, the enlargement of the Moulton Union, and the opening in September and dedication in October of the Senior Center. He reported details of the Senior Center construction fire, as well as those pertaining to Bowdoin's College Bowl team. He concluded by posing a question recently put to him: "How does the College go about teaching the Four Freedoms?"

President Hovey adjourned the meeting following a vote of thanks to Mr. Ryan.

PITTSBURGH

The Bowdoin Club of Pittsburgh held a subfreshman meeting on January 9 at the Harvard-Yale-Princeton Club. Secretary Dick Davis '57 reports that 12 alumni, 14 high school seniors, and two high school football coaches were present.

Coach Nels Corey '39 showed films of Bowdoin's championship football team. Following the films he and Fritz Kleibacker '31 spoke to the subfreshman guests about academic and athletic life on the Bowdoin campus.

ST. PETERSBURG

The Bowdoin Club of St. Petersburg held monthly luncheon meetings in December and January at the Hotel Pennsylvania in St. Petersburg. Six alumni were present at the meeting in December.

Convener Doc Lincoln '91 reports that the following attended the January luncheon: Seth Haley '07, Sewall Webster '10, Alton Pope '11, Ray Kennedy '13, Alfred Newcombe '14, Colonel Jim Tarbox '14, Dr. Nahum Pillsbury M'15, Warren Barker '22, and the Convener.

SPRINGFIELD

On Tuesday evening, January 21, Club President Ed Sample '49 was host at his Longmeadow home for a meeting of alumni and subfreshmen. Alumni Secretary Pete Barnard '50 showed colored slides, talked informally about life at the College and admissions, and answered a number of questions.

Eleven subfreshmen (juniors and seniors), one subfreshman father, and the following alumni were also present: Ted Chambers '53, Charlie Bergeron '53, Shep Fein '49, Paul Doherty '56, Kirby Thwing '40, and Sid Brown '27.

The spring dinner meeting and ladies' night will be held on Wednesday, May 7, when Professor William Whiteside, Director of the Senior Center, will be the guest speaker.

Seldom does a letter go forth or is a Bulletin issued without a word of appreciation, interest, and good-will from our Class President, Justice Burton, from his home in Washington.

Col. Stanley figures once more on the outer periphery of the retired life. He was recently elected a Director of the Pejepscot Historical Society in Brunswick.

The Class of 1909 has set a few records in its time. Here is another of which we are justly proud and which is perhaps without precedent in American Academic History. On the 55th anniversary of his class our Vice President has a son who will have completed his Junior year at Bowdoin — William Pennell, a Deke, an honor student, recently engaged to Miss Virginia Lawrence of Cape Elizabeth, a senior at the University of Maine.

And now we are compelled to point out that our supply of raw material for notes for the Bulletin diminishes. It needs replenishing. In consequence, the Acting Agent feels moved to announce that he will add $5.00 to the kitty to be credited to the first member of the Legion of the Long Absent, the Long Lost, and the Long Silent who will send us some notes or a brief resume of what he has been doing in the past fifty years.

1910 Secretary, E. Curtis Matthews
 59 Pearl Street
 Mystic, Conn.

A report from Class Secretary Curt Matthews in late January says, "Your Secretary thought Harrison Chapman was giving him some exciting news about an addition to his family, but on second reading it turned out to be a 100-year-old parrot, a gift from Chap's sister, with $500 a year for the parrot's care. Chap hopes the parrot will live another 50 years.

"Tommy Thompson writes that he retired in 1957 and is living in Washington, D. C., going to the library (his old job) only when he feels like it and not because duty calls.

"Merrill Hill, now retired in St. Cloud, Fla., has spent most of his life in Germany, studying, and teaching. He has composed and published both German and French grammars. Over 8,000 copies have been sold, on which Hillie gets royalty, not a bad idea.

"Our two preaching classmates are going strong — Al Stone, pastor of Prospect Hill Congregational Church in Somerville, Mass., and Herman Dreer, pastor of King's Way Baptist Church in St. Louis, Mo. Al is trying to get time to publish a book of his poems. Herman gave an address last October at Virginia State College in Petersburg on the progress of the Negro in St. Louis from 1863 to 1963. The Class is certainly proud of these two devoted men in their chosen profession, or 'sky pilots,' as we might call them."

Curt is still awaiting replies from those classmates who have not answered his appeal for news.

Herman Dreer is teaching courses in English literature and freshman composition during the spring semester at Illinois College in Jacksonville, Ill.

Classmates and friends extend their sympathy to Henry Hawes, whose sister, Miss Ellie K. Hawes, died on February 10.

HUGH McCURDY, who was the founder of soccer at Wesleyan University and coached that sport there for more than 40 years, has relinquished his coaching position, following a 6-3 season last fall. He made the decision because of his increasing responsibilities as Chairman of the Wesleyan Athletic Department. He continues to coach the varsity swimming team.

Mr. McCurdy joined the coaching staff at Wesleyan in 1922, after graduating from Bowdoin in June of that year. His soccer teams won 10 Little Three championships over Amherst and Williams, and his 1940 team won the New England soccer championship. He also coached tennis for 17 years before World War II and golf for 10 years afterward. He was Director of Athletics at Wesleyan from 1955 until 1958 under a rotating chairmanship plan. However, his present term as Director began on July 1, 1961, and will run for an indefinite time.

Mr. McCurdy played center on the Bowdoin varsity football team for three years, in 1919, 1920, and 1921. When he joined the coaching staff at Wesleyan, he faced a difficult situation, one of the ramifications of which is discussed in the following newspaper account, with an October 12, 1922, dateline from Bowdoin College and with a headline stating "Wesleyan Man Says McCurdy No Traitor to Bowdoin Eleven."

"There has been some criticism that Hugh McCurdy, who played center on the Bowdoin eleven last year, and who is now a member of the coaching staff at Wesleyan, knew enough of the Bowdoin system and plays to help the Wesleyan team to a victory over Bowdoin last week. It is a fact that the Wesleyan eleven had Bowdoin's offensive pretty well doped, and knew just about how to go at it to break up their plays and forward passes.

"A letter received yesterday by Dean Paul Nixon, from Professor Joseph W. Hewitt of Wesleyan, in regard to this matter is of interest. Professor Hewitt is a graduate of Bowdoin College and is now a member of the Wesleyan faculty, and thoroughly conversant with the whole athletic situation there.

"A quotation from Professor Hewitt's letter to Dean Nixon follows:

"There was, however, a good deal of talk against McCurdy for teaching Wesleyan the Bowdoin plays. If he had done so, I, for one, would think the severest strictures justifiable. But the fact is that he did nothing of the sort. I hold no brief for the scouting system, but it is in use and one of our coaching staff was present at Bowdoin's crushing victory over Amherst. Of course, he observed the Bowdoin plays and the team was coached last week to meet those plays. Mac is only the fourth member of our staff, and his work is largely devoted to teaching the fundamentals. Last week he spent a great deal of time working the men on the dummy and worked a marvelous improvement in the tackling. I am informed there was an item in the Boston paper to the effect that he was teaching the team the Bowdoin plays. He was asked to do nothing of the kind, and I am sure he would have refused if he had been asked.

"Mac is a very loyal Bowdoin man. He has been consistently blowing for the Bowdoin team, and has scouted the notion that Wesleyan had a dead man's chance to win against his old college, and he was particularly sure that Ostergren's forward passes could not be solved."

Mr. McCurdy received a master of arts degree from Wesleyan in 1938 and was promoted to the rank of full professor in 1954. His coaching career — 42 years at one college — must be one of the longest in the annals of education in this country.

the Textile Banking Company in New York, with which he has been associated since 1922. An article in the Daily News Record for January 23 said of him, "During his credit career, Woody has become one of the best-liked figures in the trade. A true New England gentleman, he has always given the same courtesy to an office boy as to a bank president.

"Woody used his influence and prestige — both of which are considerable — to help others. A credit man out of a job would get more than sympathy from Woody, who would help search for a new connection.

"Typical of his standing in the credit community is the fact that he is guest of honor annually at a dinner given by the Woodbury Alumni — a group of credit executives who got their training under Mr. Woodbury.

"Among the honors he has received are the Toppers Credit Club Award for Meritorious Achievement in Credit in 1957, the 475 Club Medallion of Merit in 1952, and the Achievement Award of the Textile Veterans Association in 1962."

Woody will take a long vacation in Maine before deciding on his future plans.

Dennison Company in Boston. In 1912 he returned to Portland and became a partner in the Gilman Company.

Mr. Lewis also served as President of the Calais Water and Power Company, as a Trustee of the Portland Savings Bank and Portland Academy, as Vice President of the Home for Aged Men, and as a member of the advisory board of the Home for Aged Women, the Children's Home, the Eunice Frye Home, the Clark Home, and Opportunity Farm. A 32nd degree Mason and a member of the Sons of Colonial Wars, he is survived by his wife, Mrs. Ella Burlingame Lewis, whom he married in Exeter, N. H., on September 3, 1910; two sons, Weston Lewis '36 and William B. Lewis of Auburn; a sister, Mrs. Theodore E. Emery of Winter Park, Fla.; and three grandchildren. His fraternity was Psi Upsilon.

HENRY PHILLIPS BOODY '06

H. Phillips Boody, who for many years taught speech and drama at Ripon College in Wisconsin, died on January 23, 1964, in Markesan, Wis. Born on April 2, 1881, in Jackson, he prepared for college at Coburn Classical Institute in Waterville and following his graduation from Bowdoin cum laude taught English and was submaster for a year at Norway High School. From 1908 until 1915 he was head of the English Department at the Maine Wesleyan Seminary in Kents Hill. He left that position in 1915 to accept a full professorship at Ripon, where he taught until his retirement in 1946. One of his students was the actor Spencer Tracy.

At Ripon Professor Boody was in charge of college publications and organized the Mask and Wig, a student drama group. He published a textbook entitled A Laboratory Course in English Composition and wrote pageants for the 75th anniversary of Ripon College and for the 75th anniversary of the Republican party. In 1921 he received his master of arts degree from Columbia University. He was a supply pastor in Wisconsin churches over the years and after his retirement became an agent in the C. H. Tinkham Insurance Agency in Ripon. A Past President of the Ripon School Board and a Mason, he was Lieutenant Governor of the Kiwanis Club in Wisconsin-Upper Michigan in 1932-33. He is survived by his wife, Mrs. Myrtle Blackwood Boody, whom he married on August 1, 1913, in Westbrook; a daughter, Mrs. Howard Blodgett of Fairwater, Wis.; a granddaughter, Kathryn A. Blodgett; and a sister, Mrs. Ada P. Stimpson of Madison. His fraternity was Kappa Sigma.

An editorial in the January 30 issue of The Ripon Commonwealth-Press said of Professor Boody, ". . . he was a scholarly, kindly gentleman who always found time to serve, and because of his character, leadership, and gift to teach he helped mould people — for the better — and because of him the community received a cultural uplift and much to enjoy. His was a quiet kind of glory that many people will remember for a long time."

EDWARD LONGWORTH MORSS '12

Edward L. Morss, retired Ginn and Company executive, died on February 5, 1964, in Winter Park, Fla. Born on April 27, 1893, in Milton, Mass., he prepared for college at Medford (Mass.) High School and was graduated from Bowdoin cum laude. He immediately joined the Editorial Department of Ginn and Company in Boston and remained with the company until his retirement some ten years ago. He was with the Editorial Department until 1930, when he joined the Manufacturing Department, of which he became the head in 1952. He was for some years Plant Manager of Ginn and Company's Athenaeum Press in Cambridge, Mass., and was elected a Director of the Company in 1947.

Mr. Morss served in the Army for two years in World War I and as a captain with the 8th Machine Gun Battalion of the Third Division saw seventeen months of action in France. During the 1920's he was for five years a member of the Needham (Mass.) Finance Committee. He was the co-author, with David E. Smith and others, of numerous textbooks on mathematics, from arithmetic to college mathematics. Surviving are his wife, Marion, and a son, Philip B. Morss. His fraternity was Alpha Delta Phi.

THEODORE EVANS EMERY '13

Theodore E. Emery, President of the Emery Institute of Stammering and Stuttering, died on January 26, 1964, in Winter Park, Fla. Born in Randolph on October 4, 1888, he prepared for college at Gardiner High School and Hebron Academy and following his graduation from Bowdoin was engaged in farming in Pharr, Texas, and was agent for the Texas Oil Company in Lewiston. He later served as President and Treasurer of the Kennebec Oil Company, wholesalers of petroleum products, and as proprietor of Cove Manor in Gardiner, where he was elected an alderman and later a member of the School Board. He organized the Maine Independent Oil Dealers Association and became its President in 1927. In 1930 he organized the Emery Company, which dealt in heating specialties and air conditioning.

In 1935 Mr. Emery moved to Winter Park, where he and his wife set about helping people who stammer and stutter. In 1940 he became President of the Emery Institute, a non-profit organization, which from 1961 to 1963 conducted a research project in Florida to evaluate scientifically the Emery method for correcting stammering and stuttering. A standardized procedure for correcting these speech handicaps is expected to be the result. During the years 1943 to 1948 and 1950 to 1952, when Mr. Emery worked in the Orange County schools in Florida, a total of 346 stuttering cases were reported. Of these, 207 stutterers were completely corrected, 77 showed much improvement, 56 had no final reports, and only six failed to improve.

A member of the Winter Park University Club and the Masons, Mr. Emery served as an ensign in the Navy from 1918 to 1920. He is survived by his wife, Mrs. Eleanor Lewis Emery, whom he married on October 6, 1919, in Gardiner; three sons, Theodore, Jr. of Winter Park, Weston of Tunis, Tunisia, and Carleton of Satellite Beach, Fla.; a brother, Frank of Pinellas Park, Fla.; and ten grandchildren. He was a member of Psi Upsilon Fraternity.

CLARENCE EUGENE ROBINSON '15

Clarence E. Robinson, a retired executive of E. I. du Pont de Nemours and Company, died on December 20, 1963, in Clearwater, Fla. Born on July 14, 1893, in Warren, he prepared for college at Thomaston High School and following his graduation from Bowdoin joined Du Pont, with which he remained until his retirement several years ago. Until 1925 he was a control chemist and supervisor in New Jersey. After two years at the Brandywine Laboratory in Delaware as Chief Chemist, he returned to New Jersey as Chief Chemist. In 1929 he became Area Superintendent; during World War II he served for five years as Assistant Plant Manager; and in 1946 he returned to his position as Area Superintendent at the Carney's Point plant in New Jersey. Following his retirement he moved to Clearwater, Fla., in 1959.

Mr. Robinson was a 32nd degree Mason and a Past Master of the Penns Grove (N. J.) Masonic Lodge and had served as a Director of the Du Pont Community Y.M.C.A. and as Treasurer of the Methodist Church in Penns Grove. He was also a member of the Penns Grove School Board for thirteen years and a life member of the Army Ordnance Association. Surviving are his wife, Mrs. Jennie Haines Robinson, whom he married in Penns Grove on November 10, 1921; two sons, C. Leigh Robinson of Cherry Hill, N. J., and James H. Robinson of Pennsville, N. J.; a daughter, Mrs. Helen R. Zeigler of Middletown, Md.; three brothers, Ralph and Bryan of Warren and Chester of Pleasant Point; a sister, Mrs. Ruth McLain of Thomaston; and seven grandchildren. He was a member of Beta Theta Pi Fraternity.

KENNETH WHIPPLE McCONKY '22

Kenneth W. McConky, a retired executive of the Goodyear Tire and Rubber Company, died on October 15, 1963, in Clinton, Conn. Born on May 23, 1898, in Portland, he prepared for college at Deering High School and attended Bowdoin for two years. He joined Goodyear in 1920 as a member of the company sales school in Akron, Ohio, and during the next few years worked as a counter salesman and adjuster in New York and as a general line and truck tire salesman in Hartford, Conn. In 1930 he began an assignment in Boston handling national account sales. Six years later he was transferred to the Akron sales staff, and in 1937 he became New York account executive for the Manufacturers' Sales Department. He retired in the spring of 1963 and moved to Clinton, Conn.

A member of the Yale Club in New York City and the Wykagyl Country Club in New Rochelle, N. Y., Mr. McConky is survived by his wife, Mrs. Helen Bradley McConky, whom he married on January 16, 1929, in Meriden, Conn.; a son, W. Bradley McConky '59; a daughter, Mrs. Joanne Durcan of Binghamton, N. Y.; and two grandchildren. His fraternity was Delta Kappa Epsilon.

EDMOND PARKER LIBBY '23

Edmond P. Libby died in Biddeford on February 16, 1964. Born on June 17, 1897, in Saco, he prepared for college at Thornton Academy and served in the Navy for a year during World War I. He attended Bowdoin during 1919-20. For more than 15 years he was employed at the Saco-Lowell Shops before his retirement about two years ago.

A member of the American Legion and a former soloist with Painchaud's Orchestra, Mr. Libby is survived by his wife, Mrs. Alma Hartford Libby; a son, George T. Libby of Saco; a sister, Mrs. Maude Tuttle of Saco; a brother, Warren S. Libby of Biddeford; and four grandchildren. His fraternity was Theta Delta Chi.

FREDERICK WHITCOMB MOSHER '27

Frederick W. Mosher died in Peterborough, N. H., on January 17, 1964, following a long illness. Born on July 25, 1904, in Roslindale, Mass., he prepared for college at Goddard Seminary in Barre, Vt., and attended Bowdoin from 1923 until 1926. For several years he was Treasurer of the Dimick-Mosher Products Company in Boston.

Mr. Mosher moved to Amherst, N. H., in 1944. Because of failing health he was inactive for many years. A member of the Masons, he is survived by his wife, Mrs. Anna Harrington Mosher, whom he married on June 1, 1929, in Worcester, Mass.; and a son, Allan W. Mosher of Amherst and Honolulu, Hawaii. His fraternity was Theta Delta Chi.

JOHN BENJAMIN MYERS, JR. '32

John B. Myers, Jr. died on November 21, 1963, in Fort Lauderdale, Fla. Born on July 6, 1910, in Hamilton, Ohio, he prepared for college at the Pingry School in New Jersey and attended Bowdoin during 1928-29. From 1929 until 1942 he was a bond underwriter in Newark, N. J. During World War II he served for three years in the Army as an enlisted man, and in 1945 he became Manager of the Bond Department with the Manufacturers Casualty Insurance Company in Newark. In recent years he had been associated with Cohen Rambler, Inc., in Fort Lauderdale.

A member of Kiwanis, he is survived by his wife, Mrs. Ruth Thiel Myers, whom he married in Poughkeepsie, N. Y., on February 14, 1942; and a son, John B. Myers, III, a student at Florida State University. His fraternity was Beta Theta Pi.

ALBERT PIERPONT MADEIRA '33

Albert P. Madeira, Assistant Professor of English at the University of Massachusetts, died at his home in Amherst, Mass., on January 14, 1964, following a heart attack suffered while shoveling snow. Born on May 31, 1911, in Washington, D. C., he prepared for college at Phillips Academy in Andover, Mass. Following his graduation from Bowdoin he studied for a year at Harvard Law School and spent two years in theatrical work in Cambridge, Mass. In 1936 he joined the faculty at the Emerson School in Exeter, N. H. From 1942 until 1948 he was a master at St. Paul's School in Concord, N. H., and for the next three years, until 1951, he taught at Smith College. In 1949 he received a master of arts degree from the University of New Hampshire, and in 1951 he joined the University of Massachusetts faculty. In 1959 he taught a course in Russian at Mount Holyoke College. He was the coach of the Massachusetts team that won its first appearance on the General Electric "College Bowl" television program on January 26.

For ten years Professor Madeira was 1933's Class Agent in the Alumni Fund, and he was also for some years 1933 Class Secretary and a member of its Reunion Committees. Last spring he was honored as the first recipient of the Metawampe Award at the Student Leaders' Night at the University of Massachusetts, in recognition of the generous and unselfish help he had given to individual students, organizations, and clubs there.

A Trustee of St. Anne's Church in Kennebunkport, he is survived by his wife, Mrs. Beatrice vom Baur Madeira, whom he married on June 7, 1941, in Arlington, Mass.; two daughters, Marsha T. and Carol P.; his stepmother, Mrs. Lenore Madeira of Northampton, Mass.; a brother, Nicholas of New York City; a sister, Mrs. Stanley MacConnell of Concord, N. H.; a half-brother, John J. Madeira of Wilbraham, Mass.; and two half-sisters, Mrs. Lindley Hosford of Swarthmore, Pa., and Mrs. William Wallwork of Fargo, N. D. He was a member of Theta Delta Chi Fraternity.

CHARLES HOWARD NEWCOMB Medical 1907

Dr. Charles H. Newcomb died at his home in Clinton on January 7, 1964, at the age of 83. Born on September 8, 1880, in South Newburgh, he attended Hampden Academy and was graduated from the Castine State Normal School before entering the Maine Medical School at Bowdoin. He received his M.D. degree in 1907 and practiced for two years in Brownville Junction before moving to Clinton in 1910. During World War I he served as a first lieutenant in the Army Medical Corps. He took courses at the New York Eye and Ear Infirmary in 1923 and the New York Post-Graduate Hospital in 1924.

A member of the Masons, the Odd Fellows, the American Legion, the Maine Medical Association, and the American Medical Association, Dr. Newcomb was for many years School Physician and Health Officer in Clinton. He is survived by his wife, Mrs. Elizabeth Moore Newcomb, whom he married on July 24, 1912, in Dexter, and several nephews and nieces.

Word has also been received of the death of the following alumni. Appropriate notice will appear in the May ALUMNUS.

A Pre-Commencement Letter to All Alumni and Their Ladies from The Society of Bowdoin Women

"Musick and women I cannot but give way to — whatever my business."

Samuel Pepys — Diary — March 9, 1666.

Traditionally impervious to the blandishments of co-education, Bowdoin's business, like the above, "cannot but give way to women" on occasion, particularly on the occasion of Commencement. Bowdoin cherishes its traditional family Commencement, and the Society of Bowdoin Women cherishes its traditional part in it.

This year, as always, we are grateful to the ALUMNUS for this opportunity to invite every lady planning to go to Commencement to share our fellowship and our program of activities. For those who know the Society well, it is enough to say that come June we plan to be doing business as usual at the old stand. Our Commencement schedule is the familiar one:

Friday, June 12:

10 a.m. Annual Meeting. Gibson Hall of Music.

Noon Ladies' Luncheon — Sargent Gymnasium.
Chairman in Charge: Mrs. Merton G. Henry '50.

Saturday, June 13:

Luncheon at the Sargent Gymnasium following the Commencement exercises. Mothers and wives of the graduating class are cordially invited, free of charge, as our guests. Chairman in Charge: Mrs. F. Burton Whitman, Jr. '35.

Prices for the luncheons will be in the usual range, not exceeding a total of $5.00 for both.

Those who are not so familiar with the Society may welcome an interpretation of "business as usual." Three words from the New Testament perhaps summarize it best: "Given to hospitality." (Romans 20:21).

Sensing the need for an organization in which women with a common bond of Bowdoin loyalty might join forces in friendly service to the College, a few remarkable "Bowdoin Women" founded the Society of Bowdoin Women in the early 1920's. Their motivating thought was that this service would find yearly expression in helping the College give a warm welcome and a happy time to all its feminine visitors at Commencement. To this day this is our chief business, and Commencement is our busiest season. In a fine article in the Portland Sunday Telegram of last September 29, the Bowdoin Director of News Services, Mr. Joseph D. Kamin, noted that the Society is "believed to be the oldest organization of its kind."

Every year on Commencement Fridays and Saturdays the Society is "at home" to visitors at its Headquarters in Gibson Hall. Hostesses are there to greet them and to be of service in any way possible. Attractive and centrally located Gibson Hall has become a popular meeting place. Except for voting at the Annual Meeting, which is reserved for members, the events on the Commencement schedule earlier outlined are open to all visiting women. We especially treasure the opportunity of having the mothers and wives of the graduating Seniors as honored guests at the Saturday luncheon. We try to make the luncheons and the Annual Meeting rewarding occasions for getting better acquainted with Bowdoin, with the Society, and with one another.

Although this sort of hospitality is still our main business, we have developed other fields of service as the Society has grown and prospered. This year we are sponsoring a lecture at the College on April 27, when Dr. Hannah Arendt of Barnard College is scheduled to speak at 8:15 p.m. in the Pickard Theater. Our Honorary President, Mrs. James S. Coles, will entertain her at dinner, and our two Vice Presidents, Mrs. F. Webster Browne '25 and Mrs. Philip S. Wilder '23, will arrange for the Society's reception for her after the lecture. This is part of a long-continued project of the Society to help the College with its lecture program by providing a public lecture by an outstanding woman every other year. The cost of these lectures has always had to come from our current income, but we hope it will eventually be taken care of with income from our recently-created Edith Lansing Koon Sills Lecture Fund, honoring Mrs. Kenneth C. M. Sills H'52. We are bending every effort to build up this fund, and we welcome specific individual donations to it.

From time to time, with dues and donations, we have been able to make gifts of articles which we feel have added graciousness to the life of the College. On the financial side, a continuing contribution is represented by the Society of Bowdoin Women Foundation, an endowment fund in the hands of the College, to which we like to add a little something each year. Its income goes to the general expenses of the College.

Our joy and usefulness as a Society depend on keeping our old friends and making new ones. Dues, gifts, and workers keep us going. The more of these we have the better we can carry out our stated purpose — "to serve the College in every possible way."

Membership in the Society is open to all interested women, be they grandmothers, sisters, wives, or friends of Bowdoin men, or simply friends of Bowdoin, on payment of the annual dues of one dollar. If you are not on our regular mailing list and would like to be, drop a line to our Secretary, Mrs. Samuel A. Ladd, Jr. '29, 7 Longfellow Avenue, Brunswick, and she will send you our mid-May letter with application blanks for membership and luncheon tickets. If you fill these out and return them with the proper remittance to our Treasurer, Mrs. William H. Clifford, 886 Shore Road, Cape Elizabeth, you will receive a 1964 membership card and any desired luncheon tickets, ahead of the Commencement rush. If you prefer to wait, these can be obtained on the campus at Commencement. But early applications are always appreciated by these busy officers.

With all good wishes for a Banner Commencement, a fitting climax to Bowdoin's Banner Year of achievement in so many fields of endeavor.

Cordially,
Helen A. Bartlett, President
Society of Bowdoin Women

Admissions Questions and Answers

The Editors are pleased to print some admissions questions and answers that may be of interest to Bowdoin men and their families. Richard A. Wiley '49, Member at Large of the Alumni Council, President-elect of the Bowdoin Club of Boston, and Chairman of the Boston Club's Prospective Students Committee, sent the questions in January to George T. Davidson, Jr. '38, Chairman of the Alumni Council's Prospective Students Committee. He submitted them to the Bowdoin Admissions Staff, which supplied the answers.

Question 1: Influencing the Prospect's Decision

Just how "intensively" should an alumni admissions aide (or any alumnus) "follow up" a prospect? Will too much attention cause over-optimism in a boy who may in the final analysis not "make the grade"? Should emphasis differ depending upon whether the boy has filed an application or not, whether he has been interviewed or not?

Answer

An alumnus should follow up a prospect as intensively as seems to be indicated by the desires of the prospect. The alumnus should be sensitive to the attitude of the candidate toward Bowdoin and should be well acquainted with the admissions status of the candidate. Obviously we should not follow up a candidate if he desires to be left alone, nor should we follow up a candidate and give him encouragement if he has little prospect of admission.

The alumnus should regard his job primarily as one of affording accurate information about Bowdoin to the prospective candidate. He should view his role — as an interpreter of the College to the candidate — in terms of the candidate's desires and the realities of the Bowdoin environment. Overselling a boy on Bowdoin may cause over-optimism on the part of the weak candidate regarding his admission, or it may result in unselling a strong candidate. Alumni should consider the best interests of the candidate, not necessarily the securing of a desirable candidate for Bowdoin. Many factors operate in a boy's final decision to attend a college. Only one of these factors is the enthusiasm of an alumnus about his particular college. The choice of a college remains with the candidate. Alumni should be particularly sensitive to the obligation of an early admission request to another college by the candidate. In other words, if a boy has clearly indicated that he is asking for an early decision at another college, the alumnus should respect his wishes. While it is proper to show a friendly interest in the boy in the event that his early decision request is not successful, the alumnus should generally cease trying to sway him toward Bowdoin.

There is no established procedure in developing an effective relationship with a prospective candidate, but it is generally true that as the boy comes closer to his final decision, the alumnus should exert less pressure. If the boy has decided to apply to Bowdoin, he has made at least an initial decision toward the College, and the same kind of enthusiasm need not be shown as when the boy is still considering applying to colleges in general. An alumnus must be sensitive to all the factors affecting a boy's decision and must gauge his counseling accordingly.

Question 2: Early Admission

Just what is Bowdoin's early admissions policy? How "early" can a boy receive early admission? Does he simply receive a "letter of intent" or a final admission certificate at the time of early admission? Is a boy who requests early admission required to withdraw all applications elsewhere before being granted early admission? Will the College spontaneously offer early admission to a truly outstanding candidate, or must the boy first make a request for early admission?

Answer

Bowdoin's Early Decision policy gives assurance of acceptance to a candidate who has declared that Bowdoin is his first-choice college and that he will attend if admitted. A boy may apply for an Early Decision at the beginning of his senior year and if acceptable will receive notification of admission within two weeks following the receipt of his application, personal reference forms, and school transcript and recommendation. This can be as early as the middle of October. At that time he receives a letter of intent, which states that he will be admitted and will receive a formal Certificate of Admission on April 15. This letter of intent is a binding admission on the part of the College and will not be rescinded if the boy continues to do the same level of work which he has done prior to his admission.

A boy who requests an Early Decision is not required to withdraw all applications elsewhere before being granted admission. He must state to Bowdoin, however, that he will withdraw all applications if he is admitted. In some cases, early assurance of financial aid is given at the same time as admission. If a scholarship candidate is admitted but is not given assurance of financial aid, he is permitted to continue his other applications pending final favorable financial aid decision.

The College does occasionally spontaneously offer early admission to a truly outstanding candidate by assuring him that he will be admitted if he applies and by encouraging him to apply on a one-application basis. This information is communicated either directly to the candidate or to his high school guidance counselor. However, in order for the boy to take advantage of this offer by the College, he must then initiate an Early Decision request in writing, stating that Bowdoin is his first-choice college and that he will not apply elsewhere. He knows that, having asked for this, he has been previously assured that his admission request will be honored.

Question 3: Geographic Distribution

Is there a deliberate Bowdoin policy in the area of admissions to allocate the time, energies, and attention of the admissions officers to areas of the country other than the College's traditional sources of students — Maine, Massachusetts, and the rest of New England?

Answer

Yes, there is. However, there is no deliberate policy favoring geographical distribution of matriculating candidates. Admissions criteria are academic excellence and personal promise, regardless of the residence of the candidate. An exception to this is a slight favoring of State of Maine candidates, toward whom the College feels a particular responsibility because of our tradition and our unusual financial aid resources. It is correct to say, however, that the Admissions Office is increasingly interested in visiting schools outside Bowdoin's traditional areas and in encouraging applicants from beyond New England. Such visits will grow in the future. As our freshman class increases from 200 to 240, we can broaden our geographic base without changing our New England representation.

Zeit and the Common Good

On May 6 the Bowdoin Club of Brunswick and Bath paid tribute to Emerson W. Zeitler of the Class of 1920. Because this tribute to Zeit is in a sense also a tribute to every other Bowdoin man who serves the College, we reprint here the framed citation which he received that night.

TO YOU, EMERSON W. ZEITLER, we, the members of The Bowdoin Club of Brunswick and Bath, pay tribute tonight for your decades of service to Bowdoin, Zeta Psi, the Class of 1920, Brunswick, and your fellow man.

You are the senior Alumni Fund Class Agent, with 32 years of unbroken service; you are Life President of the Class of 1920; you are completing your 39th year as Treasurer of the Lambda Chapter House Corporation of Zeta Psi Fraternity; you are a Capital Campaign worker and a former Director of the Alumni Fund; you are our representative on the Alumni Council.

In non-Bowdoin service you have held many local, state, and national offices in the American Red Cross; you are First Vice President of the Board of Trustees of the Regional Memorial Hospital; and you have served many other groups in many other capacities. In addition, you have been a good friend to hundreds of individuals, both in Brunswick and elsewhere along the Maine coast as a traveling investment man for many years.

Your high school principal thought so highly of you that in 1916, with prophetic insight into character, he wrote to the College in these words: "He has ideas of responsibility and loyalty to whatever he undertakes, far in excess of most boys of his years. . . . It is as a mixer, an enthusiastic and skillful baseball player, a loyal supporter of class and school, and an indefatigable worker in the furtherance of all the finer qualities of character and manhood that he has been, with us, so tremendously and deservedly popular."

In our opinion, Zeit, you come about as close as a man can come to living up to the words which Bowdoin's first President, Joseph McKeen, spoke at the opening of the College in 1802: "It ought always to be remembered that literary institutions are founded and endowed for the common good, and not for the private advantage of those who resort to them. It is not that they may be able to pass through life in an easy and reputable manner, but that their mental powers may be cultivated and improved for the benefit of society."

We honor you tonight for many good and sound reasons — but most of all we honor you because you have used your Bowdoin education for "the common good" — the good of the College, the Town, Zeta Psi, and the innumerable people who are proud that you are their friend.

A Footnote on the Zeitlers

Zeit's hobbies include gardening and farming. As he says, he likes "to grow things and distribute them among my friends." This sort of generosity led one alumnus to write recently, "When I was a young married student at college and subsisting on extremely little, we used to find bundles of groceries, eggs, and butter at our front door, which were contributions to the larder by the Zeitlers."

It gives one a thrill to drive down the Mere Point Road in the late afternoon or early evening and see the flag flying at the Zeitlers' home, Spawell Creek Farm. In the spring the fragrance of lilacs is heavy in the cool air, and the sun lights up the lawns, fields, and gardens. The setting, the beauty of nature, the lovely New England home, and, most of all, the warm hospitality of Sarah and Emerson Zeitler all combine to make Spawell Creek Farm the sort of place that most of us dream of all our lives without ever quite achieving.

The New Gymnasium

by Malcolm E. Morrell '24

Director of Athletics

SARGENT GYMNASIUM was built in 1912 for a college of about 300. Within a very few years Bowdoin will have three times that many undergraduates.

In this period of more than fifty years the concept of a college physical education program has changed considerably. For many valid reasons the academic demands on all students will be even greater in the years to come. During this same time it is of great importance that we develop and intensify programs for our young people that will stress the value of physical activity, team play, competitive spirit, sportsmanship, and self-reliance to help them lead useful and satisfying lives.

Time, space, and leadership factors are of vital importance in organizing and conducting a physical education program because there can be no serious conflict with an undergraduate's academic class work.

Bowdoin has been committed to an "athletics for all" policy for many years. For a number of reasons this ideal has not been reached, and perhaps has not been very closely approached. With the new facilities and an enlarged staff it should be possible to do better along these lines than ever before.

As we see it, an "athletics for all" program is one that 1) offers intercollegiate competition on a team and individual basis in a wide range of different sports; 2) offers much the same on an intramural basis, using some of the same sports as well as some that are different; 3) includes a required system of classes of instruction and play in team and individual sports which can be used in later life; 4) encourages free recreational play for those who have passed the requirements as well as for all other undergraduates. Under "3" above, body building and corrective exercises would be included in cases where they seem to be needed or where they are desired by the undergraduate himself.

All phases of this program should be carried on in fall, winter, and spring in intramural games, physical education class activities, and intercollegiate athletic contests. All members of the sophomore and freshman classes are required to participate, and many of the upperclassmen take part in intramural and intercollegiate games and in free recreational play.

This all takes time and space and leadership so that it may be effective. All facilities have to be used on an organized basis to be of the greatest use possible.

For example, at various times the squash courts will be available for the following types of activity:

1. Free recreational play.
2. Physical education classes.
3. Intramural competition.
4. Varsity and freshman teams — practice and play.

This means that the eleven squash courts, some of which will be marked out also for handball, will be in use all hours of the day and in the evening too.

There will not be as much free recreational play in the weight lifting room and the wrestling room, although a surprising number of students are interested in working out with the weights. But there will be physical education class work and varsity and freshman teams and possibly some intramural competition as time goes on.

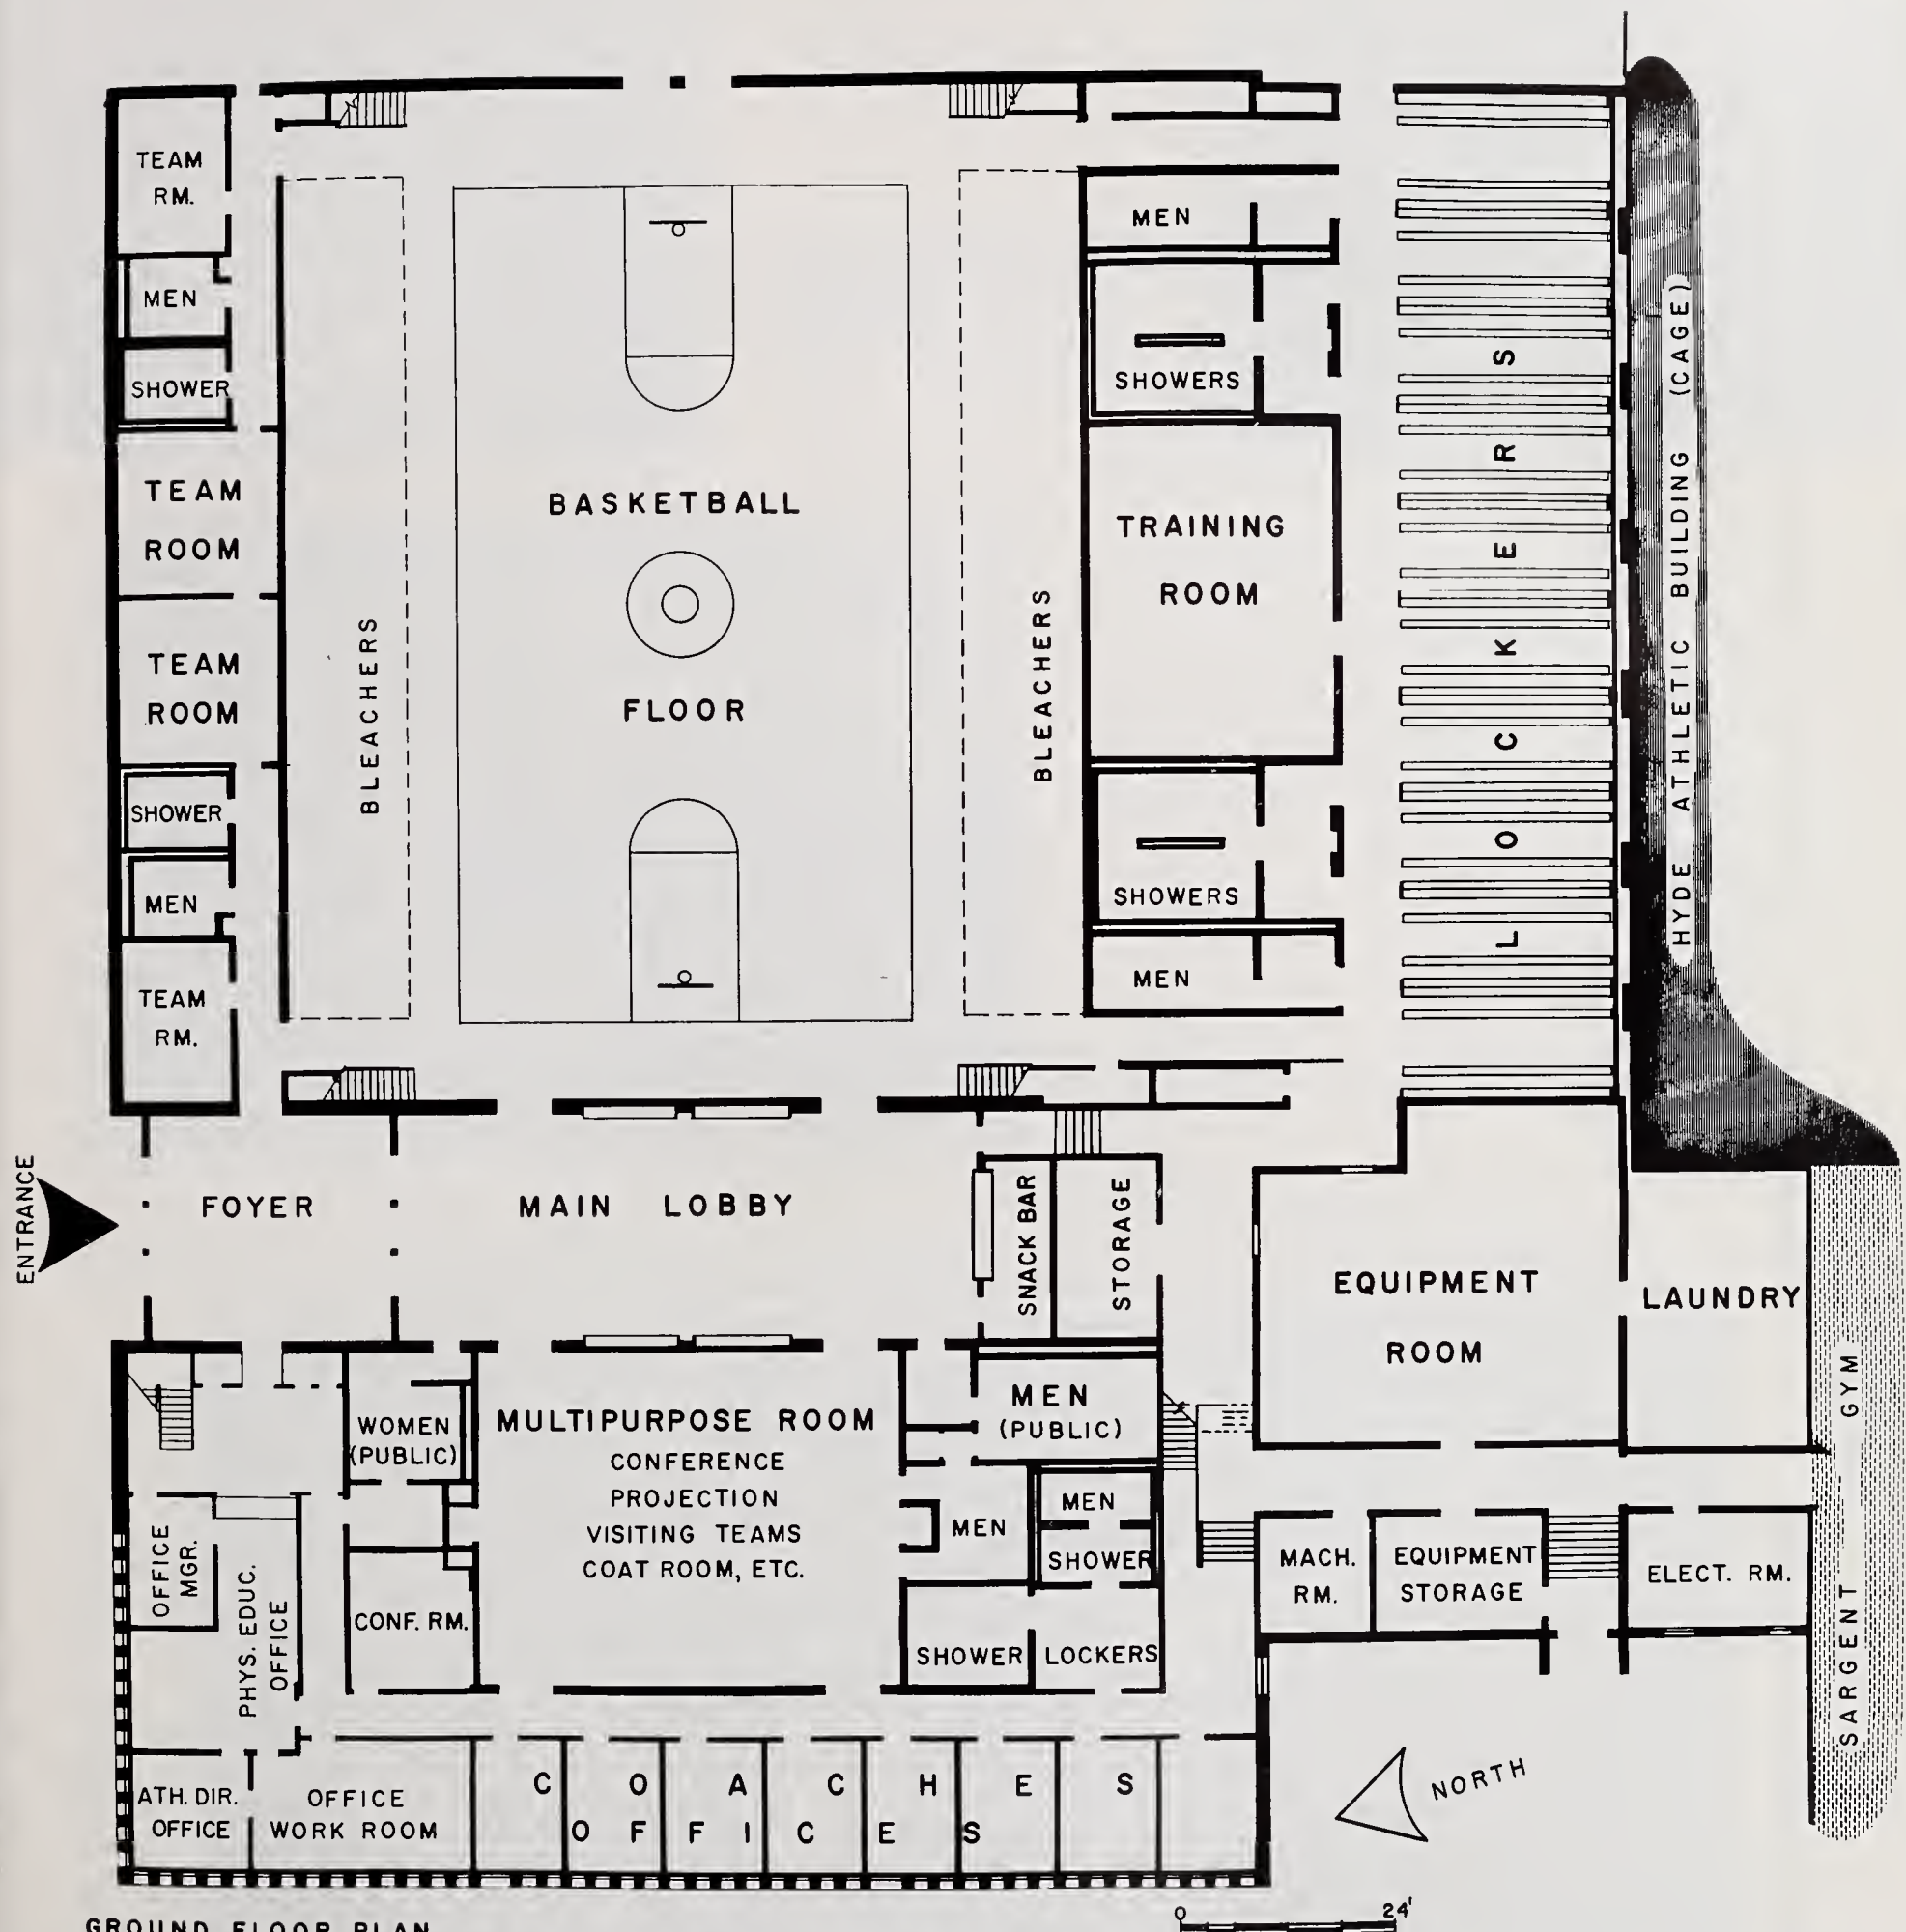

MANY LONG-STANDING NEEDS WILL BE SATISFIED with the new facilities, which will include:

1. 500 new student lockers.
2. Four visiting team rooms with showers.
3. Four special exercise rooms — one equipped for weight lifting, one for wrestling, and two for body building classes and other special groups.
4. A new gymnasium floor, with seats for about 1800 spectators.
5. Eleven squash courts — ten singles and one doubles.
6. An enlarged and well-equipped training room.
7. An enlarged equipment stockroom.
8. A laundry.
9. A combination conference, projection, and trophy room.
10. Two dressing rooms for officials, with lockers and showers.
11. Coaches' offices.
12. Adequate janitors' room and a storage room.

The present gymnasium floor will be marked out for volleyball, badminton, and tennis as well as for basketball. It will be used for physical education classes, interfraternity competitions, and free play.

With the completion of the new gymnasium and the renovation of the old one, Bowdoin's indoor athletic facilities will at long last be as outstanding as the outdoor facilities have been for some years. It will be possible for the first time in many years for the College to offer a worthwhile physical education program for all of the undergraduates.

The new gymnasium will be a fine building, but it will be a practical one without frills. It will have 500 student lockers, so that it will no longer be necessary to have two and sometimes three students using one locker. It will provide basketball facilities that will make it possible for the first time for Bowdoin to admit alumni and friends of the College, as well as undergraduates and faculty members, to see the college team play. It will have 11 squash courts so that undergraduates can learn, enjoy, and benefit physically from a game that can be played for many years in later life. This very essential new construction should serve the College well for years to come.

GROUND FLOOR PLAN

BOWDOIN COLLEGE

New Gym Started

Late in April construction was started on the new gymnasium, which is scheduled for completion by September of 1965. The architect is Hugh Stubbins and Associates of Cambridge, Mass., the firm which designed the Senior Center, now nearing completion, and the builder is Consolidated Constructors and Builders, Inc., of Portland.

The gymnasium is being constructed on the north side of the present Sargent Gymnasium, to which it will be connected. It will contain 50,000 square feet of space and will increase the total indoor athletic area to approximately 67,000 square feet. Together with installation of equipment and alteration and renovation of Sargent Gymnasium, it will cost an estimated $1.4 million.

Upon completion of the building, Bowdoin will once again have about the same indoor athletic space per student that it had when Sargent Gymnasium was opened more than 50 years ago for a student body of some 300 men.

During an average winter sports season more than 200 students take part in varsity and freshman competition in six different sports, 325 participate in physical education programs, and 460 are active in intramural contests.

The building committee for the new gymnasium is Bowdoin's Governing Boards Committee on Physical Education, of which William D. Ireland '16 is Chairman. Other members are Paul K. Niven '16, Dr. Allan Woodcock '12, Rolleston G. Woodbury '22, William P. Drake '36, Gilbert M. Elliott, Jr. '25, and Paul Sibley '25. Faculty members of the Committee are Dean Nathaniel C. Kendrick and Professors Albert Abrahamson '26 and William D. Geoghegan.

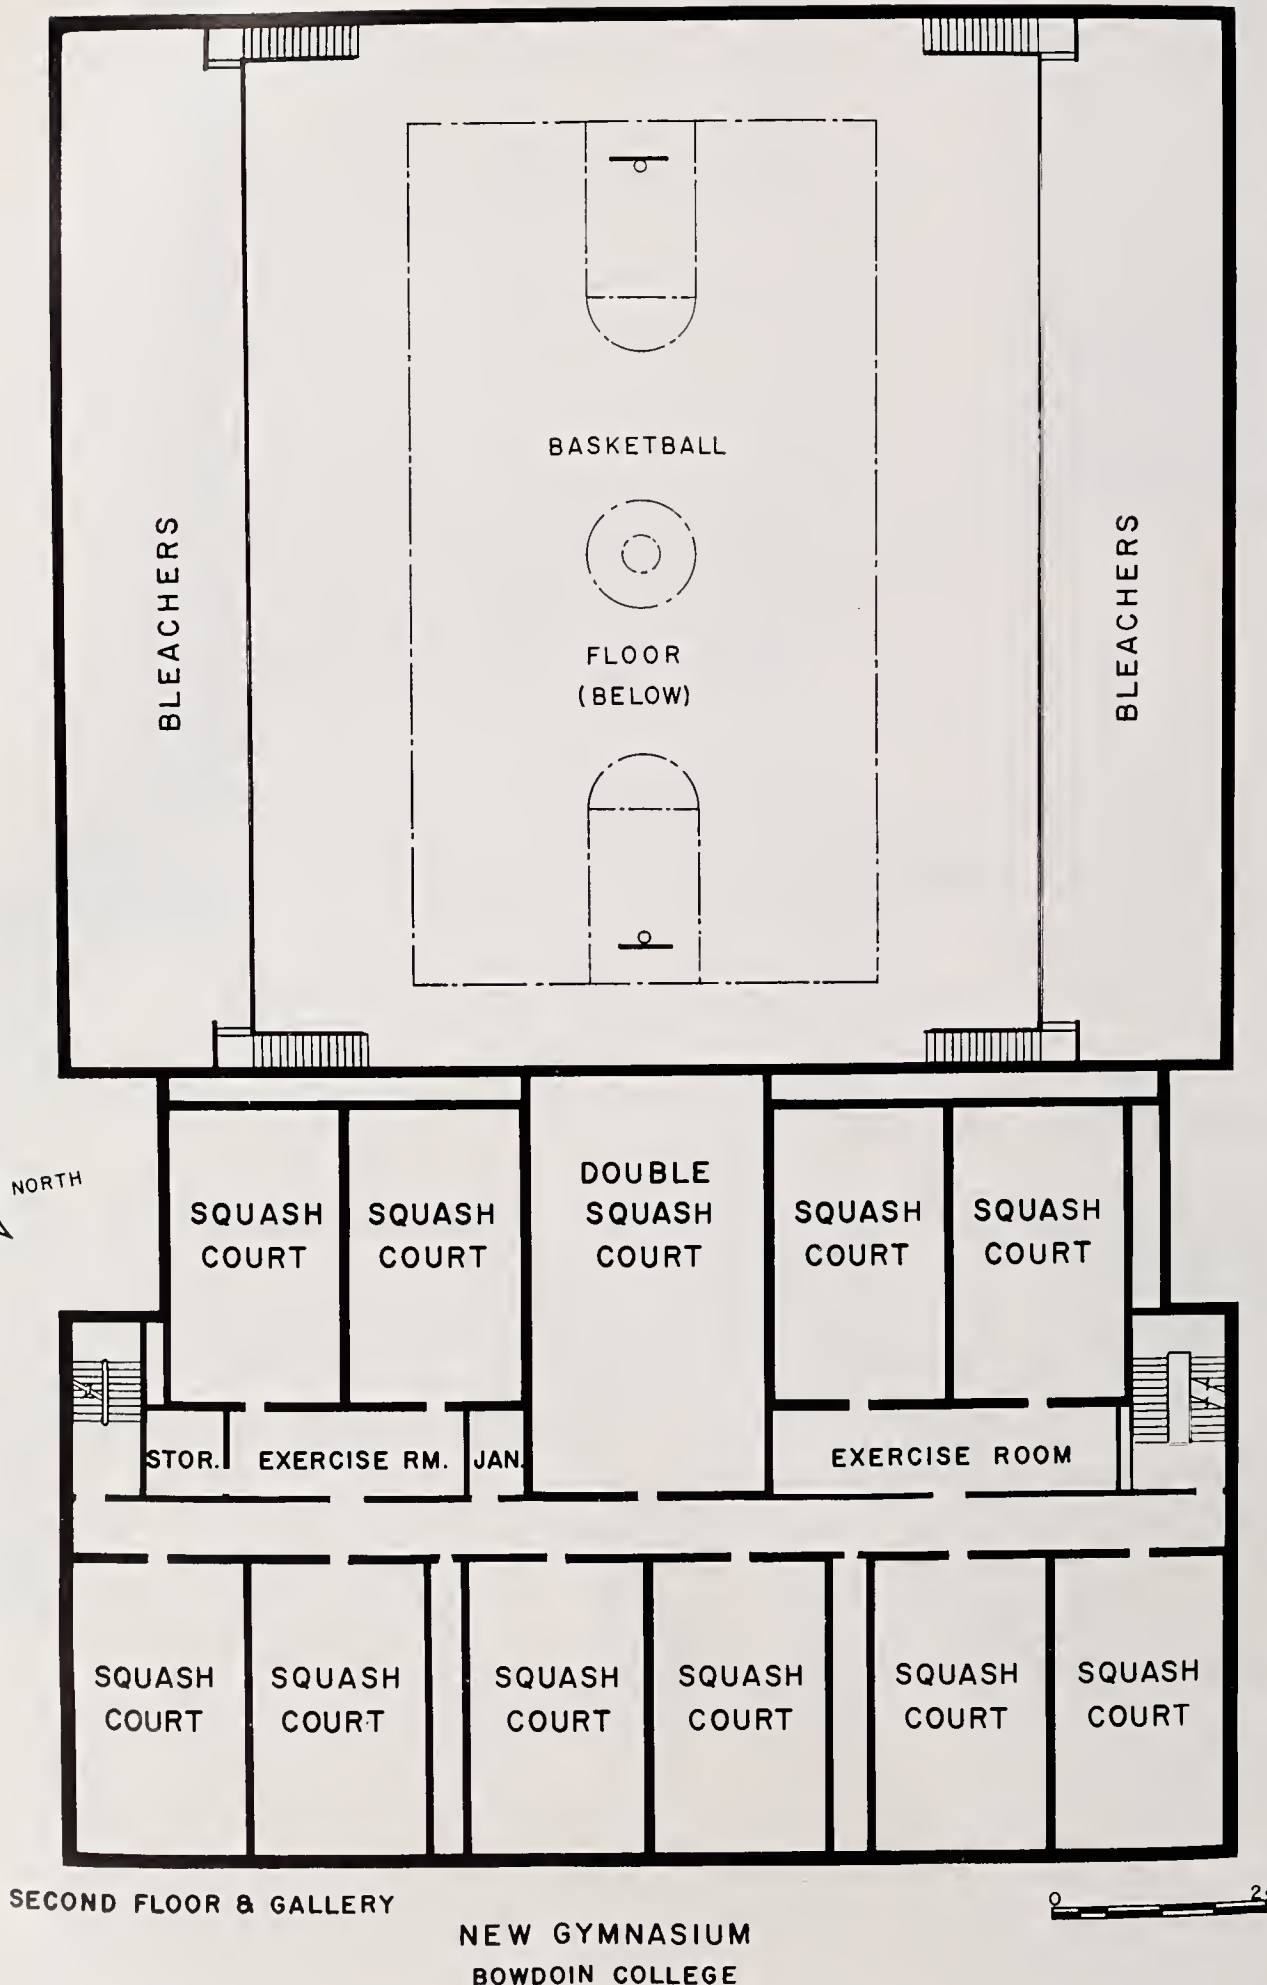

Coaches Honored

Recent honors have come to three members of Bowdoin's coaching staff.

Nels Corey, whose 1963 football team compiled a 6-1 record and won the State Series, finished in a third-place tie for New England Small College Football Coach of the Year in a United Press International poll.

Sid Watson, whose 1963-64 hockey squad had a 13-8 record and was recognized as the best small college team in the East, was second in a UPI poll for New England College Hockey Coach of the Year.

Swimming Coach Charlie Butt has been elected Vice President of the New England Intercollegiate Swimming Association.

Lucius D. Battle, Assistant United States Secretary of State, presents an Institute of International Education-Reader's Digest Foundation Award of $1,000 to President Coles, in recognition of Bowdoin's outstanding contribution to international education through the Bowdoin Plan.

Gifts to the College

*Me but count with the bards - those of the lyric strain -
I will rise to the stars, lifting my head with pride.*

A condensation of the inaugural lecture delivered on October 9, 1963, by Nathan Dane, II '37, Winkley Professor of the Latin Language and Literature

THE WINKLEY PROFESSORSHIP came into being at a time when the basic disciplines of Classics and Mathematics at Bowdoin underwent the first shocks of new educational movements. Mathematics, instead of being required of Sophomores, became an elective, and within a few years, at the insistence of President Hyde, Greek was dropped as a requirement for admission. But it was to be a full half century before the "Latin-Math-or-Greek Requirement" for the Freshman year was to come to an end.

During the years 1878 to 1880 Henry Winkley, a Philadelphia importer of china, generously donated funds for educational purposes to several colleges in the East. To Bowdoin he offered $40,000 to endow the professorship in Latin. The terms of this gift included specific reservations about the denominational beliefs of not only the professor but also the President and the majority of the Governing Boards. These conditions of Congregational or Presbyterian orthodoxy were initially accepted by President Chamberlain, but some thirty years later President Hyde successfully sought from Mr. Winkley's sole heir a release from such denominational restrictions in order that the College might participate in the Carnegie non-denominational grants for faculty retirement.

In the same year, 1907, Professor Kenneth C. M. Sills, an Episcopalian, was appointed to fill the Winkley vacancy created by the stormy "resignation" of Professor Houghton. The meeting of the Governing Boards to settle the matter of Professor Houghton's status unbelievably held up the Commencement procession for two hours. This interlude must have tried the patience of sweltering Seniors and alumni to the breaking point, if the temperature of most recent Commencements is any indication of conditions prevailing at that time.

Prior to 1907 Professor John H. Wheeler, the original appointee to the position, had left after one year, and although Professor George T. Little assumed the duties of the chair for the next three years, he was not so designated with the title — probably because it had already been determined that his ultimate position would be that for which he was far better known, namely Librarian of the College. Next to succeed were Professors Ernest M. Pease and William C. Lawton, the latter of whom departed within a year for Bryn Mawr because of his keen disappointment over the absence of the fair sex from Bowdoin's monastic halls, a path of action which the present incumbent is not tempted to emulate, whatever his coeducational views may be! Professor Pease after several years' tenure had moved on to Stanford, where he might fulfill his desire to devote his time almost exclusively to research.

Of the dedication of President Sills to the title of Winkley Professor one need be reminded only that he proudly retained the appellation for forty years. I am sure that Professor Brown's forthcoming biography will reveal fully the seriousness with which the President regarded the position. Countless alumni of "Casey's Lit" can likewise confirm the claim that that course too was pervaded, nay dominated, by the Latin spirit from Ennius to Dante. Writing to me in 1954, President Sills remarked that he was "always glad to have the Classics upheld — (not defended — they need no defense)."

The memories of the sixth Winkley Professor, Paul Nixon, are so indelibly stamped in the minds of Bowdoin men with the picture of the Dean of Deans that the majority forget that his profession of sparkling Latinist outstrips at either end his tenure of the Deanship, and he richly deserved the Winkley title which President Sills relinquished to him during his final years at the College. One can only be astonished that in the crowded years Dean Nixon was able to produce his prodigious five-volume translation of Plautus plus those refreshing volumes on Martial. The glittering humor of these works is in complete keeping with the inimitable wit of the man, his excellence, and his enthusiasm — all of which I can personally attest.

IN EDUCATIONAL CIRCLES TODAY the tendency is to lump all classical scholars together. Included in this conglomeration, for better or for worse, are philologists, archaeologists, historians, and anthropologists, to name but a few. These groups, in turn, are further divided into specialties ranging from prehistoric dialects to Byzantine eichons, Etruscan bronzes to Christian hymns. But leaving specialties aside, of considerably greater moment, but too often ignored, is the schismatic tendency among classicists themselves to separate Greece from Rome — often resulting in a downgrading of the significance of the Eternal City and unconsciously, therefore, the Latinist as well.

My present purpose, then, is, in President Sills' words, to "uphold — not defend" the position of the Latinist.

Today the number of Hellenists and Hellenophiles is legion, some drawn by the beauties of art and literature, some by halcyon visits to the Aegean, many of them professional Latin teachers who secretly or openly prefer the world of Pericles to that of Caesar. The accident of Latin in the schools instead of Greek would seem to have produced this situation. Whatever the cause, I recall so vividly Professor William A. Oldfather summing up for me some twenty-five years ago the simple fact that good Latinists are few and far between. The superiority of things Greek should not be a sufficient reason for this state of affairs. Actually a large share of the blame rests squarely on the shoulders of the teachers of the Classics themselves and in particular on teachers of Latin.

Those who anticipate that I shall here join those misguided defenders of Latin studies who prate of the disciplinary values of the study of Latin, its concomitant benefits of improving one's English, and all the other alleged pious virtues of treading the Appian Way will be sadly disappointed by my stand. Many more resentful pupils have bitten the dust wrestling with Caesar's indirect discourse or his abominable bridge across the Rhine than Gallic soldiers fell before his legions. The theory that "the medicine is bitter and therefore good for you" is not the stuff of which good Latinists are necessarily made. Of course, the ascent to the Palatine is rugged, but it is also thoroughly rewarding. The approach to the Acropolis is no different, but today the beckoning light shines from Athens' hill, whereas someone forgot to illuminate Rome's palace.

Limiting myself to literature (knowing full well that the attractions of Roman law and history hold equally great charms and could inspire a Gibbon to Olympian heights) let me cite just a few samples of the too often overlooked beauties and powers that are at hand for the Latinist to grasp with a pleasure that measures well beside that produced by the immortal monuments of the Greek genius.

While few will claim that Vergil is better than Homer (although the late Professor Coffin did so vehemently!), even the most grudging will admit with Quintilian, the Roman critic of the first century, that Vergil is nearer first than third among epic poets. Likewise Hellenists are likely to grant admission into the Company of the Elect to Catullus, whose echoes of Sappho and Callimachus make him both Hellenic and Hellenistic, but whose roots and agonized Farewell to his brother are far more Italian and Roman than is generally noticed in a Latin writer. These two authors are not isolated examples to be explained away in terms of Latin imitation of the Greek spirit.

NO ONE BUT AN UNAESTHETIC DRONE could ever prefer to read the crabbed Greek prose of Epicurus to allowing himself to be engulfed by the vibrating hexameters of Lucretius:

Suave mari magno turbantibus aequora ventis
e terra magnum alterius spectare laborem, non quia vexari quemquam iucunda voluptas, sed quibus ipse malis careas quia cernere suave est.

Sweet it is, when winds upheave the sea,
From land to watch another toil the deep;
But not because another's grief brings joy,
But rather to lack pain yourself is sweet.

Or again:

Avia Pieridum peragro loca nullius ante trita solo. Iuvat integros accedere fontis atque haurire, iuvatque novos decerpere flores insignemque meo capiti petere inde coronam unde prius nulli velarint tempora Musae.

Pierian pathless ways, untrod before,
I now traverse. Such joy to drink fresh springs
And drench my thirst; to pluck away new blooms;
To seek there for my head a noble crown,
Whence never Muses garlanded a man.

Such a voice belongs not to a slavish expounder of someone else's treatise on physics. The source may be Greek, but the feel and force are those of Rome.

Fond as I am of Hesiod, the didactic poet whose Works and Days have rivaled the poems of Homer in their appeal to serious readers of Greek literature, it would be utter folly to suppose that his Theogony was of greater importance as an influence on Western vernacular literatures than the Metamorphoses of Ovid, who is still a delight to while away the pleasant hour with. Ovid may be regarded by some as a second-rate poet, just as Seneca is looked on as a closet dramatist, but without these two Shakespeare might have been quite different indeed. Gone would be Pyramus and Thisbe, perhaps too Romeo, Juliet, even Hamlet's ghost.

The world of the Roman stretches far with equal attraction and excitement from its legendary beginnings to the highly intoxicating experiences of an Augustine and thence down to our own day. Few if any cultures save that of Greece can challenge the magnetism of Rome. Modern nations, for all their technical advances, have yet to prove their comparative achievements, their lasting claims of fascination for other men. The Rome I speak of is not cordoned off by the eccentricities of the ablative absolute or the horrors of its Colosseum. It is alive to currents of conviction, change, and the search for truth.

Professor Dane

Readers of Bowdoin catalogues of the last fifty years might well be struck by the seeming static quality of Bowdoin's offerings in Latin. Conscious of earthshaking changes in Mathematics, the Sciences, and other modern fields, they might entertain the thought that Latin must be really dead, whereas in fact it is Latin that retains a perennial vitality — one which any good Latinist worthy of the name must feel compelled to communicate or at least partake of for its own refreshing sake.

Close scrutiny of those catalogues, plus statistics drawn from the reports of the Presidents, Deans, and Registrars for the eighty-odd years under consideration, reveals that indeed undergraduates of the then and now have been immersed in identical readings; the amount of work covered was much the same; and the number, though not, of course, the percentage, of students electing to throw in their lot with Classical readings was very nearly the same in the nineteenth century as it is today. One might justly wonder how the atomic theory of Lucretius' great poem could have appealed equally to that older generation of students as it does to those of the post-World War II era, or again how wartime historians of the past along with poets of pacifism could maintain equal pace during the twentieth century changes of attitude, which have run to the extremes of nationalism and cosmopolitanism, opulence and depression, ruralism and industrialism, individualism and bureaucracy, but the actuality is proof in itself of the transcending and eternal appeal of the great personalities of Rome — sometimes in spite of the attitude of the professional Latinist, sometimes because of the adaptability of his presentation.

MENTION OF THE PROFESSIONAL LATINIST obviously invites a question concerning the amateur Latinist. If professionalism were the sole goal of Latin studies, the inevitable ludicrous result would be one generation of Latinists teaching another generation of Latinists to be Latinists to teach a succeeding generation. Such a possible state of affairs led me hastily to examine the interests, aims, and ultimate activities of some fifty students, who by their choice of majors since 1946 might be considered "undergraduate" Latinists. Of these, only eleven can now be classed as "professionals" — that is, currently engaged in teaching Latin. Statistically this leaves a far more impressive thirty-nine "amateurs" for whom Latin was a major part of their undergraduate careers by their own choice and whose choices of major authors read like an anthology of the interests of man. Where are they now? I can hardly account for them all, but at least two are in medicine, five in law, three in the ministry, two in the Armed Services, three in insurance, and one each in a brokerage, a bank, and a library, not to mention other areas of earning a living. For these thirty-nine and the several hundred others exposed to Bowdoin Latin to a lesser degree, their "amateur" experience with the world of Rome opened doors that led to a more complete knowledge of themselves, of insight into poetry of all languages, of appreciation of man's progress in history, art, science, and philosophy.

To this will be raised the expected objection that such experience can be far more easily and broadly attained via the use of translations, known as the Pony Express. Witness the far more numerous enrollments in the course in Latin Literature in Translation. Surely this is the way to gulp the culture of Rome without linguistic agony. It is at this point that all linguists alike must meet and answer the question "Why in the original?" The answers are commonplace but often not convincing. Of course, literature loses something in translation, and rare is the rendering that equals or surpasses the original. Searchers for mere thoughts or facts rest content the loss is not great enough to bother with. Yet it is at precisely this point that the Latinist, be he "professional" or "amateur," enjoys that aesthetic advantage, so easy to feel but so hard to explain, of direct contact with the artist. A translation is a black and white copy of an original whose strokes consist in addition of a richness of sound, complexity, or arrangement fully as much as the thought. This is particularly true, of course, in poetry, the very soul of literature. For years I have tried to capture the elusive spirit of the Roman elegist Propertius; yet no matter how acceptable my renderings may prove, they must still be "versions," appropriate for the present, but unable to equate the perennial identity of the poet himself. Approximation to this very elusiveness via the language of the original is a truly worthwhile reward, no mere pedant's exercise.

Horace, in his opening Ode of Book I, summarizes the callings of men. He enumerates the athlete, the politician, the importer, the farmer, the sailor, the merchant, the Epicurean, the soldier, and the hunter as typical laudable occupations. He allows to each group its peculiar attraction, be it glory, monetary gain, or leisure. For himself he prefers the aristocracy of the poet's position and closes his address to his patron Maecenas with these two lines, which might equally express the aspiration of the Latinist:

I will rise to the stars, lifting my head with pride.*

Quodsi me lyricis vatibus inseres, sublimi feriam sidera vertice.

Honor System

At a referendum held in April, following many months of discussion, the students approved an Honor System 483 to 265, with four votes ruled invalid and 32 men not voting. The plan, first proposed by the Student Council, had gained faculty approval earlier.

The Honor System, which will take effect next fall, will apply to all academic work, including both papers and examinations. Class quizzes and exams will be unproctored, and teachers who remain in their classrooms will not do so as proctors. A student who observes any violation of the system is pledged in advance to "take such action as he believes is consistent with his own sense of honor."

Friends, Tutors, and Advisers

An unusual program is described in the following paragraphs from the Brunswick Record for April 9: "Ten Bowdoin College students have become friends, tutors, and advisers to an equal number of Brunswick Junior High School boys in a new example of college participation in community life.

"All but one are members of Chi Psi Fraternity, which voted to share members' advantages of education and experience with younger boys who might need a helping hand either in school studies or in adjustment to school life.

"During the two months the program has been in operation, 10 new friendships have ripened. Each of the Bowdoin men spends at least one hour a week at the school with his young friend and as much additional time as the boy wants. All 10 BJHS boys have been at the Chi Psi Lodge for dinner, followed by a hockey game, but most of the contacts are on an individual rather than a group basis."

CALL 725-8731

On June 20 a new all-college telephone switchboard will go into operation at Bowdoin. It will take care of all incoming campus calls, providing 24-hour-a-day coverage seven days a week.

The central switchboard, which will be located in the Moulton Union, will connect with some 350 campus telephones. Anyone wishing to reach any department of the College will be able to do so through the switchboard operator. There will be switchboard-connected phones in each faculty office, in each dormitory, and in the Senior Center, which will open in September. The 12 fraternity houses will not be connected with the switchboard.

The new telephone number — effective June 20 — is 725-8731. The Area Code for all of Maine is 207.

Professor Eugene Royster of the Sociology Department, a Chi Psi faculty adviser, provided the idea for this program in a talk at the Lodge in which he mentioned that the interested friendship of some students at Yale years ago gave the impetus for him to work for a college education.

$525,000 in Financial Aid

More than 300 of the 800 students on campus have received over $300,000 in direct scholarship grants during the current year. An equally large number of men, many of them the same individuals, have borrowed close to $150,000 from the loan funds of the College, and almost half of the student body have earned some $75,000 in campus jobs.

No student can hope to "work his way" through college today, Director of Student Aid Philip Wilder '23 said in a Chapel talk on April 21, "but thanks to individuals and institutions who have set up scholarship funds, to alumni and others who give annually to support scholarship grants, and to the donors of loan funds, including the Government of the United States, a student whose family resources are small can make his way to a college degree without assuming so great a burden of debt that he has mortgaged his future beyond right and reason."

Civil Rights Speakers

Bayard Rustin and Martin Luther King, Jr., two of the country's most prominent leaders in the Negro civil rights movement, spoke at Bowdoin on May 5 and 6 at the Spring Issues Conference, sponsored by the Political Forum. Mr. Rustin, who was Deputy Director of the 1963 "March on Washington," discussed "Goals and Strategies Necessary in the Achievement of Equal Rights." Active in race relations work since 1941, when he became the first Field Secretary of the Congress of Racial Equality, he was in charge of last February's New York school boycott, and in 1947 he participated in the first "Freedom Ride."

Following his formal talk, which received the tribute of almost complete attention from every person in the Pickard Theater, he answered questions at the Moulton Union Lounge from 9 o'clock until 3 the next morning, for an audience ranging up to about 100 people.

Mr. King was named "Man of the Year" in 1963 by Time Magazine, which described him as "the unchallenged voice of the Negro people and the disquieting conscience of the White." He spoke to an overflow audience of more than 1,100 people at the First Parish Church, to which his talk was moved after it became obvious that the Pickard Theater would not accommodate the numbers wishing to hear him.

Debating Results

A debate squad of 19 men, including 10 freshmen, won 55 of its 87 intercollegiate contests this year. In the New England Tournament Bowdoin placed third, as it did in 1963, after taking the Sweepstakes Trophy in this meet in both 1960 and 1961. Philip Swan '64 placed third in persuasive speaking and Robert Farquharson '64 third in extemporaneous speaking. Next year Bowdoin will be host to the New Englands.

At the Middlebury College Tournament Farquharson, Swan, Matthew Pincus '66, and Peter Aranson '65 made a clean sweep in all events, taking first in debate, first and second in extemporaneous speaking, and first and second in after-dinner speaking.

At the American International College Tournament Bowdoin defeated five of the six colleges it met, placing second in a field of 12 institutions. Farquharson and James Dowgialo '67 finished second and third respectively among the 24 negative speakers. At the Norwich University Tournament freshmen Brian Hawkins, Sheldon Krems, David Huntington, and Tommy Walz defeated seven of the 10 colleges met. In the same tournament Hawkins was first in persuasive speaking and Krems first in extemporaneous speaking.

Phi Delta Psi won the Wilmot Brookings Mitchell Debating Tournament this year by defeating Delta Sigma in the finals in April.

Bowdoin Merit Scholars

Eight boys have won Bowdoin College Merit Scholarships as part of the program of the National Merit Scholarship Corporation (NMSC). They are Warren Beckwith of Glen Ridge, N. J., John Geary of Portland, Scott Johnson of Rock Creek, Ohio, David Kimport of Newcastle, Wyoming, John Marler of Englewood, Colo., Thomas Rounds of Portland, Robert True of Framingham, Mass., and Kenneth Walters of Arlington, Mass.

These scholarships are supported by the College. Ranging in amount up to $1,500 and renewable annually, they are awarded by NMSC, which conducts the largest independently supported scholarship program in the history of education. Of the more than 700,000 secondary school students who took the qualifying test this year, some 13,000 were eventually designated as Finalists. Of this number about 1,625 were selected for scholarships.

During the current year seven members of the freshman class have been studying at the College as Bowdoin Merit Scholars, and four other freshmen and one senior are National Merit Scholars.

Interfraternity Sing

Alpha Delta Phi Fraternity won its third consecutive championship in the Interfraternity Sing on April 30 and retired the Wass Cup, established in 1935 by Dr. Alfred Brinkler H'52 in memory of Bowdoin's first Professor of Music, Edward Wass.

Zeta Psi finished second, as it often has in recent years, after its "golden era" in the Sing, and Beta Theta Pi and Delta Kappa Epsilon shared the Graham Improvement Cup, given in memory of the late George Graham '55. Only eight houses competed this year, with Alpha Rho Upsilon, Kappa Sigma, Theta Delta Chi, and Sigma Nu choosing not to sing.

Ten Weeks in Russia

Instructor in Russian Maurice I. Levin is one of 30 Americans who will take part in a summer exchange of language teachers between the United States and the Soviet Union. He will leave Brunswick early in June to spend ten weeks in Russia in an intensive program of classes, discussions, and lectures relating to the teaching of the Russian language.

Mr. Levin and his companions will spend as many as six hours a day, six days a week, in classes and lectures. They will be housed in typical student facilities at Moscow University and will eat with Soviet students. His travel expenses will

The Distinguished Bowdoin Educator Award

Each year since 1932 Bowdoin has presented to one of its distinguished sons the Alumni Service Award. The presentation has become one of the high points of each Commencement.

In 1964-65 Bowdoin will also honor some presently unknown alumnus with a new award — the Distinguished Bowdoin Educator Award. This is good news to all alumni in the field of education. Similarly, it should be good news to the rest of us, in being able to give some recognition to a Bowdoin educator who we feel is deserving.

The new award is an idea sponsored by the Alumni Council and approved by the Governing Boards at their midwinter meeting on February 1, 1964.

What are the criteria for the Distinguished Bowdoin Educator Award? First of all, it is open to alumni in all fields and levels of education, with one exception: alumni on the Bowdoin faculty are not eligible. All Bowdoin teachers elsewhere are potential candidates — whether in colleges, preparatory schools, or public schools. Similarly, a man in sports, guidance, library work, or administration is eligible.

The award will be $500 and an appropriate certificate. No more than one award will be made each year.

What are the mechanics for selection? The initial choices will rest with the local Bowdoin Clubs. Each club should have a standing committee for this purpose — to screen alumni in its area. Data submitted for nomination should be (a) a short biographical sketch, (b) outline of educational background, (c) statement of length of service in various schools, (d) statement of contributions to community, state, or nation in and outside the candidate's field, and (e) personal comment. Final choice will rest with the Alumni Council Committee on Awards to Alumni, together with the Faculty Member of the Alumni Council, the Director of Admissions, and the Chairman of the Department of Education.

The Award will be presented by the Bowdoin Club nearest the home or teaching location of the recipient on or before April 1st. Additional recognition will be given at the annual campus meeting of the Bowdoin Teachers' Club in April.

A group of Russian teachers of English will participate in a similar program at Cornell University.

The Negro in American Painting

The Museum of Art opened a major exhibition, "The Portrayal of the Negro in American Painting," on May 15. To continue until July 15, the show includes 80 paintings from the Colonial period through the present. Sixty artists are represented, and 52 lenders, including many of the country's leading museums, contributed to the show, which has drawn praise from numerous educators, artists, government officials, and Negro leaders. The Reverend Martin Luther King, Jr., who had a preview of the show during a visit to the College on May 6, said, "This has been a breath-taking experience. It is a magnificent collection which will have a powerful impact on anyone who sees it."

Marvin S. Sadik, Curator of the Museum, says that the paintings "cover a remarkably wide range of time, place, school, subject matter, and medium. The period spanned is from the earliest known American painting in which a Negro is depicted, Justus Kuhn's 'Portrait of Henry Darnall III' of about 1710, to Jack Levine's 'Birmingham '63,' done last year. Nearly every section of the nation is represented, from Jeremiah Hardy's portrait of a Bangor barber, 'Abraham Hanson', to Christian Mayr's 'Kitchen Ball at White Sulphur Springs' to Frederic Remington's 'Leaving the Canyon.'

"Among the early nineteenth century portraitists whose commissions included Negro sitters are Charles Willson Peale and Thomas Sully. In the area of primitive painting there are works by both anonymous masters and such well-known artists as William Matthew Prior.

"Several important genre painters, including William Sidney Mount and James Goodwyn Clonney, executed paintings with Negro subjects. There are also examples by such landscapists as Thomas Moran and George Inness. Certain artists, William Aiken Walker and Eastman Johnson among them, occasionally depicted Civil War incidents in which Negroes were participants. And one need hardly call attention to the brilliant studies of Negro subjects by Winslow Homer and Thomas Eakins later in the nineteenth century and by Andrew Wyeth in more recent years.

"Two visitors to our shores in the mid-nineteenth century, Eyre Crowe, the Englishman who traveled with Thackeray, and the Swiss, Frank Buchser, are known for their paintings of American Negroes. Several important artists, themselves Negroes, also should be mentioned: Joshua Johnston and Robert Duncanson in the nineteenth century; Eakins' pupil, Henry O. Tanner; and, in our own time, Horace Pippin, Jacob Lawrence, William H. Johnson, and Edmund Archer, to name but a few."

"The vision of the great American painters of the last two and a half centuries has seldom succumbed to a stereotypic notion of the Negro," Mr. Sadik said. "Whatever the circumstances in which these artists painted the Negro, they have in the main portrayed him as an individual of inherent dignity and, often, of remarkable beauty. These paintings constitute a singularly revealing pictorial record of the manner in which the American Negro has enriched the life and art of this nation."

An adjunct to the show is a 144-page catalogue designed by Leonard Baskin, whose own art was the subject of an outstanding exhibition at Bowdoin in 1962. It has a foreword by Mr. Sadik, an introductory essay by Professor Sidney Kaplan of the University of Massachusetts, who is an authority on the Negro in American culture, and photographs of all the works in the exhibit.

New Museum Director

Effective July 1, Marvin S. Sadik, Curator of the Museum of Art, will become Director of the Museum, succeeding Professor Philip C. Beam, who is retiring from that position after holding it for 25 years. Professor Beam, who will continue to be Chairman of the Art Department, said of Mr. Sadik that he "has shown a high degree of effectiveness" in all phases of his work, including "the acquisition of works of art by gift and purchase, the care and conservation of items in the permanent collections, and the proper storage, display, and cataloguing of the collections."

Mr. Sadik, who was appointed Curator of the Museum in 1961, will continue in that position. He is a magna cum laude graduate of Harvard, from which he also received his master's degree in 1961. Before coming to Bowdoin he was Assistant Senior Tutor at Leverett House at Harvard from 1959 to 1961 and Resident Tutor at Leverett in 1958-59. He was a Teaching Fellow in Fine Arts at Harvard from 1958 to 1960 and Assistant to the Curator of Drawings at the Fogg Art Museum in Cambridge, Mass., during the summer of 1959.

Two New Book Funds

An anonymous donor has established the Class of 1825 Book Fund with an initial gift of $1,000, in tribute to a class whose 39 graduates included not only Longfellow and Hawthorne but also four members of Congress, two state legislators, and a Chief of the Navy's Bureau of Provisions. The new fund is open for contributions from any interested persons.

A. H. Benoit and Company, which operates retail clothing stores in five Maine communities, has established the Benoit Library Book Fund, the income from which will be used to purchase books for the Bowdoin Library.

Grant for Plastics Research

Professor Robert A. Walkling of the Department of Physics has received a $5,760 grant from the United States Office of Naval Research to continue his plastics research. The one-year grant will provide funds for the purchase of equipment.

Dr. Walkling joined the faculty last September. He is a graduate of Swarthmore College and received his doctorate from Harvard in 1962. His thesis was entitled "Dynamic Measurement of the Hardness of Plastics," a project which was supported in part by the Office of Naval Research.

Art Prize to Cornell

On May 20 Professor Thomas B. Cornell of the Art Department received a top award of $2,500 at the Joint Annual Ceremonial of the National Institute and the American Academy of Arts and Letters in New York. Once cited by the publication Art in America as "the most promising young print-maker in America," he was one of 20 American writers, artists, and composers to receive prizes this year.

The works which were the basis of the award will be shown at the Museum of Art at the College next October in a one-man show.

A graduate of Amherst College, Professor Cornell received a Louis Comfort Tiffany Award in 1960. His work is included in the permanent collections of the Museum of Modern Art in New York, the Princeton University Library (Panofsky Collection), and the Lessing J. Rosenwald Collection.

New Music Chairman

Professor Robert K. Beckwith is the new Chairman of the Department of Music, replacing the late Fred Tillotson H'46. A successful research chemist with the Standard Oil Company of New Jersey before turning to a full-time career in music, he has been a member of the faculty at Bowdoin since 1953 and has directed the Glee Club since 1961.

Following his graduation from Lehigh in 1943, Professor Beckwith joined Standard Oil, for which he did research on additives to increase the octane rating of gasoline and on the manufacture of ethyl alcohol and butyl, a synthetic rubber. During this time he sang with the Collegiate Chorale under Robert Shaw in New

Professor Beckwith

York and at Mr. Shaw's urging decided to make music his career. He received a master's degree at the Juilliard School of Music in 1949 and then studied at the Manhattan School of Music under Hugh Ross and Julius Herford. He taught for a year at Marymount College and for three years at Amherst before joining the Bowdoin faculty.

During 1964-65 Professor Beckwith will present a series of lectures in Portland on the history of music, under the sponsorship of the Portland Symphony Orchestra.

Undergraduate Research

The National Science Foundation has granted the College $8,400 for the support of an undergraduate research and independent study program in chemistry, which will begin in June under the direction of Assistant Professor of Chemistry Dana W. Mayo. The grant will support four students as undergraduate "Research Participants." They will pursue independent studies in a number of areas of chemical research currently being investigated by members of the Chemistry Department.

Bowdoin also maintains its own Undergraduate Research Fellowship Program. Established in 1959, it assists up to 10 seniors each year in working with faculty members who are pursuing independent research projects. The Fellowships are awarded in all three major divisions of the curriculum: the Natural Sciences and Mathematics, the Social Sciences, and the Humanities.

Senior Awards

Three members of the Class of 1964 have received national awards. Two of them, Geoffrey W. Chapman of Boston and William C. Rounds of Portland, joined some 1,500 other students as Woodrow Wilson Fellows. Their awards, which go to high-ranking seniors and graduates who are seriously considering a career in college teaching, include full tuition and fees for the first year of graduate study, a living stipend of $1,800, and dependency allowances.

Philip H. Hansen, III of Bridgton is one of 60 seniors from throughout the country to receive a Rockefeller Brothers Theological Fellowship, which will enable him to take a year of graduate study at a theological school. The award provides room, board, tuition, school fees, and a book allowance, in addition to a fund for miscellaneous personal expenses.

Winter Sports Distinctions

Six winter sports teams have elected captains for next season. They are as follows: Dick Whitmore '65 of Braintree, Mass., in basketball; Dave Coupe '65 of Harrisville, R. I., and Bill Matthews '65 of Berwick in hockey; Tim Robinson '65 of Glens Falls, N. Y., in swimming; Gil Ekdahl '65 of Providence, R. I., in winter track; Steve Munger '65 of North Scituate, R. I., in riflery; and Dick Forté '66 of Weston, Mass., and Bill Hyde '65 of Portland in skiing.

Whitmore scored 360 points in 20 games this past season. Coupe was the leading small college goalie in New England, allowing only 2.8 goals per game and averaging close to 30 saves a game. Matthews is a rugged defenseman who scored 14 points and is also a letterman in football and baseball. Robinson is the Bowdoin record holder in the 100 and 200 yard freestyle events. In March he finished third in the 100 and sixth in the 200 in the NCAA College Division championships at Grove City, Pa.

During the winter Ekdahl broke the pole vault record of 12 feet 7 inches set by Dave Rideout '37 and became the first Bowdoin man to clear 13 feet in that event. Munger had an average of 278 x-300 to lead the rifle team, and Hyde (the great grandson of President William DeWitt Hyde) and Forté did well in the various skiing events.

The four winter sports trophies went to Mike Napolitano of Augusta (the Paul Nixon Basketball Trophy); Fred Filoon of Brockton, Mass. (the Hugh Munro, Jr. '41 Memorial Hockey Trophy); Dave McDowell of Glens Falls N. Y., (the Elmer L. Hutchinson Memorial Track Trophy); and Pete Seaver of Leominster, Mass. (the Robert B. Miller Swimming Trophy). All four men are seniors.

Wilders to France

Philip S. Wilder '23, Assistant to the President and Foreign Student Adviser, will visit French universities in June and July as a guest of the French Ministry of Education, along with 24 other American foreign student advisers selected by the Professional Development Committee of the National Association for Foreign Student Affairs.

The program, in which Mrs. Wilder will also participate, will include one week in Paris and two weeks at provincial universities. The Wilders will fly to London as members of a Harvard alumni group travel flight on June 17 and will return on July 18. They hope to see a number of Bowdoin alumni in France, both former Bowdoin Plan students and others, as well as former teaching fellows in French.

In addition to a grant from the French government, Mr. Wilder will be assisted in financing his trip by a Reader's Digest Foundation grant of $1,000, described elsewhere in this issue. The Wilders were last in France more than 40 years ago, when Mrs. Wilder, then Elisabeth Clark, was a volunteer relief worker with the American Committee for Devastated France, and Mr. Wilder was a Bowdoin undergraduate.

WILBERT SNOW, The Collected Poems of Wilbert Snow: Wesleyan University Press, 1963; pp. 280; $7.50.

Listen to this:

Let us study how spruces grow old:
The texture of bark, and the rings
In the grain, and the straightness that sings.

I have already made a half-dozen false starts to this comment on Mr. Snow's Collected Poems, and I am through false-starting. I am also finished, fed up, with the nagging sense of cowardice which is responsible for those tentative simperings of apology now littering the carpet around my chair. It has been as if I were ashamed to like these poems — but I do like them, most of them, and it is high time I admitted it. Listen to this:

Inside, gray smoke curls up;
Outside, white flakes troll down
Against bare maple trees
In an old New England town.

And, if you haven't been lured away by the stridencies of the television, just listen to this:

Deeper still, autumn is the spirit's true mood in New England.
It appears in the souls looking out from the eyes
Through lids piped about with brown pigment,
Of her most patrician women. . . .

Isn't this — and forgive me for poking an elbow at you — isn't this a graceful, modest voice for a poet to speak in? I think it is, and I am pleased to respond to it — not to say relieved to make, finally, a "true" start.

Each of these small excerpts is from a lyric of Mr. Snow's; I have picked them at random (though not entirely arbitrarily) from three of the five books he has published over more than forty years, all five gathered together to form this collection. The first is from a poem entitled "Spruces," in the volume Down East. The second opens "New England," from Inner Harbor. The last is in the poem "Autumn's Country," in Maine Coast. (The other two books are Maine Tides and Sonnets to Steve.)

Without intending to suggest that every line of Mr. Snow's work finds in me the perfect, uncritical audience, these brevities illustrate, I think, the directness of statement and gentleness of language the poet best succeeds at. I mustn't create the impression that the Collected Poems is primarily of this lyrical sort; most of the poems are narrative and long, and so the book is a chronicle of a lot of years and places, a lot of men and women whose like we have lost while we have aspired to civilization. But the small lyrics, the renderings of ocean and shore, the attentions to details of light and shade, and the subtle liaisons between men and their prolific natural world — these are memorable. I for one lament the passing of this kind of poem in our mid-century.

We are conditioned nowadays to the rather different poem of mind and politics, of acutely-conscious compression of the idea, of the single metaphor worked and worked and worked until it is perfect but worn exceedingly small, of ambiguity in the place of statement that dares not equivocate — of lines which melt in the head but not in the heart. I find Mr. Snow a relief, and — all my flawed beginnings aside — a good poet.

I am assuming that one among the variety of functions a poem performs is to confirm the reader's own experience of the world. This is a risky business; most of the poems here concern New England, and I am a New Englander. Riskier still, I have spent six tideless years in the Midwest — but I think I am being not merely nostalgic. Not all of Mr. Snow's poems are successful, and I grant his shortcomings. Sentiment often overpowers technique. I remark a tendency to substitute bare history for the artistic response to history. I deplore the clumsy abuse of the pathetic fallacy; fair shudder at rhymes either reached-for or too predictable; regret the pieces that do not quite join into a whole poem.

Yet after I have turned a few indifferent pages, and have felt an uneasy sensation of sinking (as I believe one does with anyone's collected works), I come upon a poem like "Cove at High Water":

Green is the cove, the fresh green shade
Of alders when the sun is clear;
And green the spruce tree branches laid
Over the cove that lean and peer and I feel that this is the poet's real voice, and I know the exciting pleasure of being borne up by a song of absolute clarity. I can forgive a considerable catalog of incidental flaws when I am confronted with a green so faithful and so substantial. And I can think of few men who have transformed a life so full as Mr. Snow's into an art so honest.
On dark green pollock. . . .

HODDING CARTER, Doomed Road of Empire: The Spanish Trail of Conquest: American Trails Series, edited by A. B. Guthrie, Jr.: McGraw-Hill, New York, 1963; pp. 408; $8.95.

The writing of Western American history imposes special demands upon the historian who would inform the specialist without losing the interest of the general reader. It would be difficult to say whether pointless antiquarianism is more prevalent in studies of westward expansion or in military histories of the Civil War. In order to avoid pointless antiquarianism, the writer of Western history has a number of alternative courses. He can explore a special topic, as E. S. Osgood did in writing The Day of the Cattleman. He can give intensive study to a crucial year, as Bernard DeVoto did in choosing 1846 for his Year of Decision. He can focus upon a significant career, as Francis Parkman did in writing his magnificent LaSalle. He can interpret the special character of a region, as Walter Prescott Webb did in writing The Great Plains.

Or he can choose a trail along which the heroic stories of westward expansion have been enacted. Parkman himself did this in his Oregon Trail. Hodding Carter's latest book is part of an "American Trails" series in which this is the assignment given various historians: Stewart Holbrook for the old Boston Post Road, Jonathan Daniels for the Natchez Trace, Hodding Carter for one of many Spanish trails between Mexico and the western portion of what is now the United States.

The "Doomed Road" ran from Saltillo in Mexico, northward to Monclova, then eastward across the Rio Grande and across Texas to San Antonio, Nacogdoches, and finally Natchitoches on the Red River, not far from the Mississippi Delta country where Mr. Carter has made his home and has engaged in his distinguished career as a journalist.

The difficulties of the study are numerous. As Mr. Carter properly observes, "the Spanish trail never was. The buffalo course, the war-path and the blazed trees which were the wilderness signposts of the Spanish west and southwest were metamorphosed into rude thoroughfares upon which rode the friar and the conquistador." His study, dealing with seventeenth-century beginnings and carrying the account down to the Mexican War, treats a borderland to which Spain, then France, then Mexico, then the independent Texas republic, and finally the United States made claim.

Among the most fascinating themes is that of the "woman in blue," supposed to have appeared as a Christian missionary among the Texas Indian tribes in 1625. "Dead since 1665, as legend or miraculous truth, she drew fresh bands of Franciscans to the New World, where they would be as useful as the adventurer and the soldier to the spread of the empire and the building of the Spanish trails."

Mr. Carter shows the tension between French and Spanish agents of empire by relating the tragic end of LaSalle's endeavor to claim for the French crown the vast Louisiana country, to which he gave the name of the Sun King, Louis XIV.

The account reaches its climax, and justifies its title, in the bloody and brutal events associated with Mexican, then Texas, independence. The Alamo episode is dramatically retold. The American troops are portrayed in their advance upon "The Halls of Montezuma" and the subsequent cession of the Texas portion of the "doomed road," plus vast additional territory, to the United States.

"The camino real of the viceroys is no more. But many roads to friendship lead across the broad Rio Grande, not the least of which should be respect for a common heritage along an ancient trail."

The research by Mr. Carter in the company of Mrs. Betty Carter, who shared the labor with him and to whom the book is dedicated, was extensive. Obviously it was also fun.

The writing is vivid. The scope of the study perhaps accounts for the incomplete attention to many themes. LaSalle's final tragic journey to Texas, for example, is not clearly related to his total career in the Great Lakes country, Illinois, and the Mississippi valley. Other maps are needed to supplement that presented as the frontispiece. The reader will do well to have an atlas at hand as he reads.

The author has made a significant contribution to popular history of a major theme in western American history.

WILLIAM F. FRY, JR., Sweet Madness: A Study of Humor; Pacific Books, 1963; pp. ix and 178; clothbound $3.95, paperbound $1.95.

Sweet Madness is, in the author's terms, meta-communication; that is, it is communication about communication. It is a metaphorical description of humor intended for the general reader rather than for the social science researcher. Its content is the "thoughts and findings" derived from research on humor in particular and communication in general.

The nature of "Humor's Anatomy" (Ch. 8) is seen as paradox. Paradox is illustrated by the author in terms of Epimedes' statement "All Cretans are liars." Since Epimedes was a Cretan, a paradox is apparent: if the statement is true, then it is untrue; if untrue, then it is true. In humor, the paradox arises out of a "frame" provided for the "joke." (The author distinguishes among "spontaneous" jokes, which arise from an ongoing interpersonal process, "canned jokes," which are intruded in such a process with little obvious relation to it, and "practical jokes," which combine elements of both canned and spontaneous jokes.) The "frame" for such jokes may be a smile, an arched eyebrow, or the familiar "Have you heard . . ."; whatever the implicit or explicit signal that a joke is to be communicated, the signal constitutes a "frame," like a picture frame (whence the term), which sets off the humorous event. The paradox generated concerns reality: certainly the experience of the joke of whatever category is "real," in the sense that it is experienced; on the other hand, because of the frame, it is different, apart from the rest of reality, hence unreal. Perhaps the point is best illustrated by the play of animals. The author points out that animal play frequently involves responses characteristic of fighting or sexual behavior; that which sets play off from such behavior is the information conveyed by implicit communication that the bared fangs, for example, are "in fun" and, hence, "not real," although the fangs are ominously present.

Humor is not, however, merely play (although play is basic to it); neither is it merely a single paradox. The unconscious implications of a joke (e.g., Freudian symbolism) provide bases for essentially infinite paradoxes beyond the most obvious one. Play seems not to have this possibility of multi-leveled abstraction, and it does not possess that sine qua non of a joke — the punch line. "The punch line precipitates internal paradox specific to the joke content, and stimulates a reverberation (pp. 153-154) of the paradox generated by the surrounding play frame." Presumably, the punch line serves to reverse the implicit and explicit, real and unreal; in short, it is the punch line which makes manifest what has been latent in the joke up to the punch line.

The essence of humor, then, lies in the paradoxes of human communication. Humor is, therefore, a cognitive phenomenon. In contrast, for example, is the Freudian theory of humor, which is best described as a conative or motivational theory. In essence, the theory holds that humor is a socially acceptable means of gratifying socially unacceptable impulses (e.g., aggressive or sexual impulses). Such impulses are inhibited (repressed) and, as a result of this damming up of energy, psychic tension is created. The joke, actually or potentially rife with phallic, Oedipal, or other juicy symbols, permits the expression of these repressed unconscious impulses, and tension is released. This theory, whatever its essential value and ultimate status, has at least the merit of accounting for the satisfying, drive, or tension-reducing characteristics of humor — it accounts for the "belly laugh," so to speak. It is difficult to see, in the context of a cognitive approach, how the paradox leads to the laugh, or, to put it in another way, why the cognitive reversal provided by the punch line is indeed humorous. The author is not entirely unaware of this difficulty: ". . . it is not yet possible to demonstrate the electrochemical events that are stimulated in human physiology and result in the subjective experiencing of humor." (p. 131) It is possible that the author intends his theory of paradox as an extension and elaboration of Freudian notions, since he applauds and uses the ideas of unconscious symbols, but if so it is an implicit rather than explicit intention.

While the point of the criticism is that the theory doesn't explain enough, in the larger sense it explains too much. Paradox is shown to be an inherent part of all communication and assumed to be of the very fabric of the ongoing process of life. If true, then paradox generates far more than humor — if indeed a paradox can "generate" anything in any sense. And while it is true that the term "generates" is used metaphorically, as is "anatomy," the metaphor never descends, save for specific illustrative jokes, to the "findings" of research (i.e., empirically derived data) alluded to in the preface. The usually illuminating view of the relation of theory or inference to the data from which they derive is, thus, unfortunately lacking.

The focus of this review has been upon the theory of humor offered in the book. While this focus is true also for the book, the theory occupies only the final chapter. What comes before contains much that is of interest. However, these chapters are discursive and often marred by the frequent usage of "I" (or an awkward circumlocution to avoid its use), by a sometimes pedantic, instructive tone, and by lengthy, somewhat confusing sentences: "(In the interests of brevity and simplicity, I am comprising [sic] with the principles of rigor and using 'reality' to refer to that crude but practical distillate of perception which is generally agreed as making up the world: 'that which has objective existence — not merely an idea.')" (p. 152).

Perhaps the basic problem of this book lies in its laudable attempt to elucidate the significant problem of humor in all its manifestations in a modest volume of 174 pages, particularly since humor is ephemeral and difficult to "pin down." "When you put a butterfly on a pin, he soon is dead." (p. 174) This may help to explain the paradox of a largely humorless book on humor.

Dr. Fry is at his best when presenting informational material, as in describing the theoretical background of his study, or in speculating on the origin of the phrase "punch line" in relation to a discarded hypothesis that the key to humor is its communication about the social hierarchy ("pecking order"). Sweet Madness is generally both thoughtful and informative. The specific dissection of humor's anatomy would perhaps appear less vulnerable in the setting of a more formal research report, wherein the study's methodology and specific findings might serve as a firm foundation to the metaphorical description.

ROY A. GALLANT, The ABC's of Astronomy; illustrated by John Polgreen; Doubleday and Company, 1962; pp. 121; $3.95.

A collection of tables and a dictionary of chemical terms comprise The ABC's of Chemistry. This book combines an economy of words with a richness of knowledge to make an excellent reference book. The first sixty-seven pages are devoted to definitions of chemical materials and terms, many accompanied by pictures and diagrams. The remaining pages contain tables, lists, and a variety of chemical information. One list is of the Nobel Prize winners in chemistry, with each winner's nationality, the year he won, and the area of his research. Another list gives the common name, the chemical name, and the chemical composition of familiar substances.

It is an unusual household that would have reference materials to answer all of the questions that school children bring home to their parents. This book would cover all of their questions related to chemistry.

The ABC's of Astronomy could correctly be called a do-it-yourself book. It contains all of the tools for the pursuit of astronomic knowledge. The book is in four parts: a dictionary of terms, maps of the north and south circumpolar stars and seasonal sky maps, eighteen reference tables, and, finally, a section dealing with the mechanics which govern the efficiency and construction of telescopes.

While its wealth of information makes The ABC's of Astronomy a valuable family reference book, it is the grouping of information so that it is easy to find and use that makes this book outstanding.

CHICAGO

Chicago Secretary Harold Fish '25 reports, "The Club has been fortunate this year to have three meetings somewhat different from the usual format. On October 30, at the Chicago Yacht Club, twenty-four alumni attended a Bowdoin conference on college admissions.

"Special guests for our second meeting on January 28, also at the Chicago Yacht Club, were Dr. and Mrs. Laurence Brown, who were returning to Australia after a semester as Visiting Lecturer in Psychology at Bowdoin.

"A dozen alumni met at the Lake Shore Club on March 17 to greet Basketball Coach Ray Bicknell. Following an excellent dinner, the group enjoyed a movie review of the highlights of the 1963 football season. The professional display of gridiron tactics was viewed with enthusiasm by the group, who remembered some of the 'lean' years of the past."

WILLIAM B. WHITESIDE, Associate Professor of History at Bowdoin, is the Director of the new Senior Center.

ALFRED H. FUCHS came to Bowdoin in 1962 as Assistant Professor in the Department of Psychology. He is a graduate of Rutgers and received his doctorate from Ohio State University. Professor Fuchs is a frequent contributor to psychological journals and is at present working on the problem of "Short Time Memory" for verbal materials.

JEANNETTE S. CROSS, the wife of our Editor-in-Chief, graciously consented to contribute again to our Books column.

Notes

ALFRED C. ANDREWS '26 is the author of "Plant Symbolism on Greek Coins," an article which appeared in the October-December, 1963, issue of Economic Botany. Another article, entitled "The Genetic Origin of Spelt and Related Wheats," will appear in the next issue of Der Züchter, published in West Berlin.

On August 1 Dr. Andrews will become Professor of Classics and Chairman of the Classics Department at Florida Atlantic University in Boca Raton, Fla.

STANTON I. MOODY '57 is the co-author of "Lead Salt Film Detector Parameters," an article which appeared in the December, 1963, issue of Infrared Physics. He is with the Computer Service Center of the State Street Bank and Trust Company branch in Newtonville, Mass.

PROFESSOR JAMES M. MOULTON of the Biology Department is the author of a chapter entitled "Acoustic Behaviour of Fishes," in Acoustic Behaviour of Animals, published recently by the Elsevier Publishing Company of Amsterdam, Holland. Six years in preparation, the book covers the new science of bioacoustics, a field that opened at the end of World War II.

The volume, to which a total of 24 international scientists contributed, includes sections by anatomists, zoologists, psychophysicists, entomologists, engineers, physicians, and other specialists, all of whom are finding value in the study of animal sounds.

Dr. Moulton is also the author of "Acoustic Orientation of Marine Fishes and Invertebrates," a chapter in Advances in Biology, Volume 26, published last year by the Springer Press in Berlin, Germany. The chapter was based on an article which Professor Moulton presented at the Symposium on Animal Orientation at the University of Munich in Germany earlier in 1963.

AUGUST C. MILLER, JR. '27 is the author of "Prognosis for the Panama Canal," an article which appeared in the March, 1964, issue of the United States Naval Institute Proceedings. He is Admiral Milton E. Miles Professor of International Relations at the Naval War College, Newport, R.I., where he has been teaching in the Naval Command Course since 1956. News Of The Classes 1899 Mrs. Edith D. Churchill, the widow of Preston Churchill, died on February 26 in Meriden, Conn.

1903 Secretary, Clement F. Robinson
P. O. Box 438
Brunswick

Class Secretary Clement Robinson has been elected a lifetime member of the Brunswick Village Improvement Association, in recognition of his many years of service to and interest in Brunswick.

1904 Secretary, Wallace M. Powers
37-28 80th Street
Jackson Heights 72, N. Y.

George Burpee represented the College on April 10 at the inauguration of John C. Bennett as President of Union Theological Seminary in New York City.

1905 Secretary, Ralph N. Cushing
10 Knox Street
Thomaston

Arch Shorey reports from Albany, N. Y., that he is "still hopping around."

1906 Secretary, Fred E. Smith
9 Oak Avenue
Norway

In March Jack Winchell reported, "This member of the Class of 1906 is now happily settled with his new wife, Rebecca, in our new home at 96 Pleasant Street, Brunswick, where any and all of our Bowdoin classmates and friends are most welcome."

1907 Secretary, John W. Leydon
3120 West Penn Street
Philadelphia 29, Pa.

Wilbert Snow is the author of a poem entitled "J.F.K." which appeared in the Hartford (Conn.) Courant on March 15 and which will be printed in a forthcoming John F. Kennedy commemorative anthology.

Bill and President Kennedy were third cousins on his mother's side.

In March Tom Winchell wrote, "Here I go again! Jeanette and my twenty-year-old Margo and I boarded a freighter in New York for Lima, Peru; flew to La Paz and Lake Titicaca (13,500-foot elevation) in Bolivia and then to beautiful Santiago, Chile. There Jeanette had to leave us and go home, so Margo and I are on this beautiful freighter headed for Punta Arenas in the Strait of Magellan, the most southern city in the world.

"Then we go through the wonderful lake country, work our way up the east coast, and to Manaus, 1,000 miles up the Amazon.

1908 Secretary, Christopher Toole
4884 MacArthur Boulevard #7
Washington, D. C. 20007

During the winter Harvey Ellis visited Chris and Reta Toole in Washington, D. C.

Waldoboro

As your Acting Secretary thumbed recently through a folder, scraping together the scanty notes on 1909, he was reminded that a people is supposed to be happy that has no annals. He had always thought that this was an observation of some ancient Greek historian and was surprised to learn that it was Carlyle who, in his Frederick the Great, had said: "happy the people whose annals are blank in history books."

For the men of 1909 this would seem to mean that the rushing tides of Fortune have already carried some to the goal of their boyhood dreams, that others have paused at spots along the shore where they have been content to linger, while a few others are still burning with the hot fevers of life.

Such a one as this latter seems to be Thomas Davis Ginn. To be sure, professionally he is retired but as yet not permanently benched, for we hear of him as husily supporting at State House hearings the cause of retired teachers. Again we hear he is in his second semester at the Diocesan School (preparing for orders perhaps?) that in the curriculum German metaphysics puzzles him a bit, but, as he says, he "staggers along." We do not hesitate to nominate him (apologies to Reed Ellis) as the most durable man of 1909.

We regret to report that again Death is no stranger in our midst. On the fifth of February, Mrs. Cara Baxter Hughes, wife of Arthur W. Hughes, died unexpectedly at Birch Knolls, their home in Cape Elizabeth. Among survivors is a daughter, Mrs. Carl W. Spring of Sausalito, California, and an uncle, former Governor Percival P. Baxter '98 of Portland. After a lapse of fifty-five years death has become an experience common to each of us, enabling us to share in such a loss and to sympathize most sincerely with a classmate.

Indirectly we hear that friend Hovey is putting the memories and experiences of his fifty years on State Street in book form. Over the years we have heard enough of his contacts with the moguls of finance to predict a colorful and fascinating volume.

The past four winters in Florida have apparently pretty well shattered Paul Newman's notions of a land of perpetual summer. He is now back in Chicago, a metropolis in no need of myths about weather. His address is P.O. Box 224, Chicago 90, Illinois. Perhaps he is wondering if the time may be close at hand when, weary of fabricating its weather fictions, the fabulous Floridians may be reviving the legend of Ponce de Léon and his magic fountain, for they have learned that there is more gold in myths than the wandering Spaniard ever uncovered.

We of 1909, looking forward now, can behold a future peopled by our third and in some cases by our fourth generation of descendants. This observation is prompted by the fact that the granddaughter of one of our best beloved and most distinguished classmates, Owen Brewster, Betsey Brewster Case, will be graduating from Wellesley (Dorothy's alma mater) on June 8, 1964. But this is not all. On the fifty-fifth anniversary of his own graduation from Bowdoin, Justice Harold H. Burton's grandson, James Burton Weidner, of Cleveland, Ohio, will be receiving his bachelor's degree from the College.

1910 Secretary, E. Curtis Matthews
59 Pearl Street
Mystic, Conn.

Rodney Ross, who is retired, as most of our illustrious class are or ought to be, is a member of the Advisory Board of the First National Bank of Portland and a Trustee of the Bath Institution for Savings. Curt writes, "Rodney leads a tough life, shooting and fishing in various parts of the United States and Canada — salmon, partridge, woodcock, and wild geese are always in his freezer."

Ray Tuttle is a retired jewelry salesman living in Attleboro, Mass., with a summer home at Harwich Port on Cape Cod. He has four children and eight grandchildren.

Herbie Warren, who is retired and living in Fairlee, Vt., spends most of his time counting the number of cars on long freight trains. He and your Secretary, Curt, started their careers as brakemen on the Boston and Maine Railroad.

Cony and Virginia Weston spend the winter months each year at the Princess Martha Hotel in St. Petersburg, Fla., and return to Augusta for the summer months.

The Class Secretary is always looking for more items about members of 1910 for the "Hall of Fame" in the Alumnus.

114 Atlantic Avenue
Boothbay Harbor

In March Meredith Auten reported, "I stopped off in Wilmington, Del., to see Fred Hart, with whom I roomed in 1913 at Harvard. Hadn't seen him since. When I approached his house, he exclaimed, 'Good gosh, Meredith Auten.' How's that after 50 years?"

Classmates and friends extend their sympathy to Class Secretary Bill MacCormick, whose sister Winifred died in March.

Mrs. Loring Pratt (Marie) has had a long siege of it recovering from the broken leg that she suffered more than a year ago. However, she remains cheerful at her home on Casey Key, Nokomis, Fla.

On January 1 Ellison Purington was elected a Fellow of the Institute of Electrical and Electronics Engineers, which came about two years ago through the merger of the Institute of Radio Engineers (founded in our graduating year) with the American Institute of Electrical Engineers (founded in 1884). This is a world-wide organization, with about 150,000 members, of whom only one percent are Fellows.

Nifty was elected with the citation "For contributions to circuit design, radio control, and communication systems." On March 15 he and Catherine went to a party put on by the Boston Section of the IEEE.

R. F. D. 2
Farmington

Classmates and friends extend their sympathy to Carleton Greenwood, whose wife, Marie, died on March 8.

On May 15 Bill Spinney represented the College at the inauguration of Franklyn A. Johnson as President of California State College at Los Angeles.

1914 Secretary, Alfred E. Gray
Francetown, N. H.

After 20 years as Secretary of the Board of Trustees of the College, Bill Farrar has retired and has been elected an Overseer Emeritus. He was for 45 years associated with the First National Bank of Brunswick and was elected Senior Vice President of the First National Bank of Portland after the Brunswick bank merged with it in 1962.

Bill was in the hospital in Portland for an operation in December. He has, we are glad to report, made a good recovery.

Phil Pope has been asked by his successor at Whitman College to set up the Biology Museum in the new Science Building and take charge of it while Dr. Rempel goes on sabbatical leave next year. Phil says, "Everybody is cooperative, and cordial in welcoming me back to the campus."

Ed Snow expects to finish his work at the Philadelphia Planetarium in June. He reports that he has had eight good years on the job.

Ocean House Road
Cape Elizabeth

Classmates and friends extend their sympathy to Spike MacCormick, whose sister Winifred died in March.

Apartado Postal 138
Chapala, Jalisco
Mexico

Classmates and friends extend their sympathy to Eudore Drapeau, whose wife, Sophie, died on March 19.

Larry Irving was pictured in Life Magazine for March 27 in an article entitled "How to Milk a Seal." He and some colleagues had succeeded in getting milk from mother elephant seals on Guadalupe Island, 200 miles off the west coast of Mexico, where these rare animals spend a few weeks of family life each year.

The Providence Sunday Journal for February 16 carried a feature article of more than a full page in length concerning Paul Ladd, who retired in 1960 as Manager of the Providence Chamber of Commerce. Written by A. Russell Didsbury, the Home and Real Estate Editor of the Journal-Bulletin, the article said, in part, "In addition to collecting antiques, with which they have completely furnished the house, Mr. and Mrs. Ladd have accumulated a fine collection of lamps. Lamp collecting, primarily, is the hobby of Mr. Ladd and the reason he began after retirement to take color slides of lamps in foreign countries as well as in this country.

"As the hobby of lamp collecting grew, he joined the Rushlight Club of America, a group of lamp collectors whose objective is: 'To shed light on the lights of the past.' He eventually became its president and still remains an active member.

"After retiring and ending 31 years of service with the Chamber, Mr. Ladd went on a tour of Europe with Mrs. Ladd. Since it virtually was impossible for Mr. Ladd to collect all the lamps that caught his fancy during the trip, he began photographing them on street corners, doorways, inside museums, or wherever else he found them.

"The collection of slides has grown as he added pictures of unusual lamps found on doorways of residences, on gateways, and on public buildings in this city and elsewhere in the state. A second trip to Europe last March also has helped to increase the collection."

The article included six handsome pictures from Paul's collection.

Warren Weatherill '53, son of the late Phil Weatherill, is engaged to Miss Frances B. Hume of Andover, Mass., a graduate of Mount Holyoke College and the Columbia University School of Occupational Therapy. Warren is a research engineer with the Boeing Company in Seattle, Wash.

On April 11 Henry Wood represented Bowdoin at the inauguration of Lawrence C. Wanlass as the first President of the College of the Virgin Islands.

1917 Secretary, Noel C. Little
60 Federal Street
Brunswick

In March Walter Fanning wrote, "Still working hard at retirement. Last summer, I took a three-month, 15,000-mile auto trip through our National Parks and the Canadian Rockies. This summer plan a trip through eastern Canada — Quebec, the Gaspé Peninsula, the Maritime Provinces. Hope to make it through Brunswick on the way back." Walter's home address, when he is there, is 570 Dalton, Port Charlotte, Fla.

The Charles Spaldings were featured in the Portland Press Herald for March 10, together with their 16-room home in Fryeburg, which they have made over into three apartments, one for "living," one for renting, and one for "guesting." They have been living in the house and working on it since Charles' retirement from his work with paper making machines at the Beloit Iron Works in Wisconsin.

1918 Secretary, Lloyd O. Coulter
Nottingham Square Road
Epping, N. H.

Bob Albion has been presenting a series of 30 television lectures in modern history for the Harvard-Navy extension program for the Polaris submarine crews, to keep them occupied during their two months submerged. They take exams when they get back to Groton, Conn., and can get university credit. These same lectures will be on Channel 2 next year.

Bob has retired from active service as Gardiner Professor of Oceanic History and Affairs at Harvard University.

On February 25 Lloyd Claff left for six weeks of research at the Lerner Marine Laboratory, Bimini, the Bahamas, where he continued his work on perfecting the Pulsatile Membrane Oxygenator, of which he is co-inventor with thoracic surgeon Dr. Armand A. Crescenzi.

Lloyd has spent more than seven years of research on this device, which shows great promise as a means for resuscitation of premature and newborn babies and as an extracorporeal method of oxygenation of blood during open heart surgery. It can also be used as an artificial kidney.

A Research Associate in Biology at Boston University Graduate School, Lloyd is also a Fellow of the New York Academy of Sciences, a Fellow of the American Society for the Advancement of Science, and a member of Sigma Xi. His trip to the Lerner Marine Laboratory was made under the auspices of the Single Cell Research Foundation.

In March Arch Dean reported, "Upon my retirement next December 31 (as Regional Health Director) at the age of 70, after 40 years with the New York State Department of Health, my wife and I plan to travel around the world by freighters for 16 months. We will visit our married daughter, Sylvia Sampson, in Honolulu, and her twin brother, Archie, Jr., who is in Hong Kong with Tourists International, before returning to see our son Donald '56, who is in New York City with I.B.M., and our son David '52, who is a doctor in Buffalo, N. Y."

Jack Sloggett is doing two closely related jobs. He is Port Warden for Portland and the Surveyor for the National Cargo Bureau for Portland. This means that he inspects all dry cargo ships arriving and departing. Jack finds this work a welcome relief from full retirement.

1919 Secretary, Donald S. Higgins
78 Royal Road
Bangor

Class Secretary Don Higgins has been re-elected a Director of the Merchants National Bank in Bangor.

John McClave has voluntarily stepped aside as Chairman of the Board of Lewis and Gilman, Inc., in Philadelphia. He remains with the advertising and public relations firm as a Vice President and Treasurer. John joined Lewis and Gilman in 1944 and has been Chairman and Treasurer since 1954. He is a member of the Racquet Club, the Poor Richard Club, the Merion Golf Club, the Seaview Country Club, and the Philadelphia Advertising Golf Association. He and Irene live at 415 Charles Lane, Wynnewood, Pa.

1920 Secretary, Sanford B. Cousins
23 McKeen Street
Brunswick

In June of 1963 Mortimer Crossman retired from active work. He and Mildred then went around the world on a freighter — 31,000 miles in five months. Mort went as a good-will ambassador for the City of Sacramento, the County of Sacramento, and the Port of Sacramento to bring greetings to the heads of the seaports of the world and tell them about Sacramento's new deep-water seaport.

Mort writes, "After five years with American Tel and Tel, I spent a year in and out of hospitals and in the Oregon woods, 15 years in the investment banking business, and another series of duties with the Navy, until I finally retired as a Commander, eight years with the U. S. Veterans Administration (Manager for Northern California), and nine years as Civic Affairs Manager for the Sacramento City and County Chambers of Commerce.

"My daughter, Virginia, is married to Mr. Thor Johnson, who is with Kaiser Aluminum in Oakland, Calif., and has three children. My son, John Alden, is married, is a pilot with American Air Lines, has one son, and lives in New York."

Mort's address is 1058 43rd Street, Sacramento, Calif.

Henry Davies retired in 1961 after 21 years as Head of the Civil Service Department in Long Beach, Calif. (population 350,000), and as Chief Examiner for the city's Civil Service Commission. He reports that he enjoys the change of pace. Henry's address is 3831 Myrtle Avenue, Long Beach.

Harold LeMay and his wife were in St. Petersburg, Fla., from January until early May. They attended an Airstream Trailer Rally in South Miami late in January and spent 10 days in the Everglades before returning to St. Petersburg, where their youngest daughter and her family are living for a year. Their oldest daughter and her family are also living in St. Petersburg, after having to leave Panama because of the riots.

In February Hal Curtis reported, "We are living at 1345 Haloa Drive, Honolulu 18, Hawaii. I am out here working for the Lincoln Laboratory of the Massachusetts Institute of Technology as Manager of the Airborne Measurements Program of Project PRESS. PRESS is a large-scale experimental and theoretical study of the re-entry of missiles into the atmosphere. We have two jet aircraft, a Navy A3D and an Air Force KC-135, instrumented with a variety of visible and infra-red measuring instruments. They are based and our offices and laboratories are at Hickam Air Force Base.

"The actual re-entries with which we are concerned occur over the Kwajelein Atoll of the Marshall Islands, so the aircraft stage from Wake Island in the case of the KC-135 and Eniwetok for the A3D. Airports with long runways are not too plentiful in the South Pacific. It is as if the aircraft were based in Boston, staged in Seattle, and made measurements over Los Angeles. I normally go along on the KC-135 operations and I must have flown 100 hours or so since Christmas.

"The family has grown. Elizabeth Susan is now nine months old and well on her way to becoming the most spoiled child in history — certainly the most loved. Kathy is 13, John 11, Mike 9, and Cynthia almost 7. We are living in a housing development called Foster Village, which is close to Hickam but not to the beaches. We are to be here for about two years, which I think will be very valuable for all of us. To learn forcefully and dramatically that physical differences in people are of little importance is in itself worth the price of admission.

"All of us have snorkels, fins, and masks, and on a given Sunday I think we must resemble a family of ducks — heads down, tails up — looking at the little fish at Hanauma Bay, which must be among the world's most beautiful beaches."

Captain Ron McDonough reported in March, "I returned from Viet Nam in December of 1962. 1963 was a banner year — I was married on January 5 to Beverly M. Wilkinson of Groton, Conn.; on October 10 I was promoted to Captain in the U. S. Army; and on December 20 our son, Michael Edward, arrived. We are presently stationed at Fort Lewis, Wash., but have orders for France in July. We hope to see as many of our Bowdoin friends as possible when on leave in June."

Al Marz represented the College on April 5 at the inauguration of Ralph C. John as President of Simpson College in Indianola, Iowa.

A letter from Whitney Mitchell to Steve Rule this past winter said, "I left for Europe on January 6. Our first stop was Brussels, where I had an hour's lay-over before Paris. The flight to Leopoldville (from Brussels) was long — 11 hours. At 7 a.m. we arrived in Leopoldville, where we were met at the airport by some military personnel with official passports and then were driven to our hotel in the center of the city."

"The hotel? Well, there are few better that I have stayed in in the U. S. — room is large and air-conditioned — full-sized bath with shower (but no shower curtain) — looks across the Congo River to Brazzaville. The cost of living is prohibitive in Brazza, reflected by the Army's policy of granting an $11 per day diem for those in Congo-Leo, but $25 for Congo-Brazza. The room costs $2.75 a day, payable in U. S. currency. The U. S. Embassy rents the entire sixth floor and a few other rooms. There is a critical housing shortage in Leo.

"Other American personnel live in whatever apartments are available and in a number of houses in a rather exclusive section. Americans seem to constitute the largest foreign colony now, save for the Belgians.

"We who are going to Luluabourg have had to acquire a special paper for that purpose from the Ministry of Mines. Since Lulu is located within the diamond mining district, the Congolese want to be assured that we are not going there for illegal purposes. While on the subject of Lulu, let me tell you what I know about that place. First, it appears that we three will be the only Americans there. After the U. S. troops pull out, we will be pretty much on our own. There is no way of communicating with the Military Mission in Leo, but our colonel is trying to find a two-way radio so that we won't be completely isolated. One of our group went on to Lulu to test out the situation and promptly wired back that we should not attempt to come since there were no housing facilities to be had. The school where we will be teaching is about 15 miles from the city, so now we have the problem of transportation. Cars are not easily found in the Congo. The school itself is in a state of semi-readiness. The laboratory has been installed, but the electricity fails on an average of five hours a day. There is a chronic water shortage. The question of who our students are going to be has not yet been resolved. General Mobutu wants to approve each candidate personally. Early March will be about when we will start, if then."

GEORGE EDGAR CARMICHAEL '97

George E. Carmichael, founder of the Brunswick School in Greenwich, Conn., of which he was Headmaster Emeritus, died in Wolfeboro, N. H., on March 23, 1964. Born on August 22, 1875, in Rockville, Mass., he prepared for college at Medway (Mass.) High School and was graduated from Bowdoin magna cum laude. After teaching in Philadelphia and in Connecticut until 1902, he founded the Brunswick School, which he headed until 1933, when he retired to Milton Mills, N. H. He was elected Headmaster Emeritus in 1946. A Past President of the Connecticut Headmasters Association (1923-24) and the Country Day School Headmasters Association of the United States (1931-32), he was also a Past Vice President of the Schoolmasters Association of New York (1920-22). He served as President of the Greenwich Chamber of Commerce, as a Trustee of the Frisbie Memorial Hospital in Rochester, N. H., as a Director of the Rochester Trust Company, and as a Deacon of the Second Congregational Church in Greenwich. He was also a member of the Greenwich School Committee, President of the Board of Trustees of the Greenwich Library, the first President of the Greenwich Rotary Club, and a member of the White House Committee on Child Health and Protection in 1930.

In 1951 the study hall at the Brunswick School was dedicated to Mr. Carmichael, and his portrait hangs above the entrance to that room. At the Commencement exercises in June of 1927 Bowdoin conferred upon him an honorary master of arts degree, the citation for which said, in part, ". . . who has sent many boys to Bowdoin and to other colleges, and who has instructed them all in character as well as in scholarship."

Mr. Carmichael is survived by his wife, Mrs. Helen Fox Carmichael, whom he married in Milton Mills on December 25, 1912; a daughter, Mrs. Robert B. Emerson of Wolfeboro; a son, Douglas Carmichael '44; and seven grandchildren. He was a member of Kappa Sigma and Phi Beta Kappa.

CLARENCE JOEL FERNALD '07

Dr. Clarence J. Fernald, for more than 40 years a physician in Washington, D. C., died on April 8, 1964, in St. Petersburg, Fla. Born in the Maine town of Winn on June 17, 1881, he prepared for college at Hebron Academy. He received his A.B. degree from Bowdoin in 1913 as of 1907 and then entered the Maine Medical School, from which he was graduated in 1916. After practicing briefly in Van Buren and doing post-graduate work in eye, ear, nose, and throat diseases in New York City, he established his practice in Washington in 1918.

Dr. Fernald's interests included the Boy Scouts, the National Memorial Baptist Church in Washington, and the Columbia Heights Citizens Association, of which he was a founder and later President for many years. A Mason and a member of Lions International, he also spent much time visiting prisons in the Washington area and conducting Bible lessons with the Central Union Mission. In 1948, after the death of his first wife, he decided to travel and spent 33 months abroad, visiting Mexico, Canada, Africa, France, Italy, Switzerland, Austria, Belgium, and other countries. Upon his return to this country he resumed his medical practice, specializing in chronic conditions and geriatric medicine. He remarried in 1957 and retired in 1960, when he moved to St. Petersburg. He is survived by his wife, Mrs. Frances Wells Fernald; three sons, Clarence R. of Falls Church, Va., Fred M. '40 of Silver Spring, Md., and Llewellyn K. of Fort Lauderdale, Fla.; two stepsons, C. F. Wells of Jacksonville, Fla., and Philip Wells of Washington, D. C.; six grandchildren; and four great-grandchildren.

HENRY WILLIAM LAMB '20

Dr. Henry W. Lamb, a retired orthopedic surgeon and the first President of what is now the Pine Tree Society for Crippled Children and Adults, Inc., died on April 19, 1964, in Portland. Born on April 16, 1899, in Tilton, N. H., he prepared for college at Portland High School and following his graduation from Bowdoin entered Johns Hopkins Medical School, from which he received his M.D. degree in 1924. After interning for two years at Boston City Hospital, he became an orthopedic surgeon in Portland in 1926. In addition to founding the Pine Tree Society for Crippled Children, Inc., of which he was an honorary Vice President, he was a Director of the Cumberland County Infantile Paralysis Chapter and a member of the Maine Infantile Paralysis Committee, the Boston Orthopedic Club, and the Johns Hopkins Surgical Society.

Dr. Lamb was an orthopedic consultant to ten hospitals in Maine. A veteran of Army service in World War I, he operated the Gray Gull Gift Shop in Portland in recent years. Surviving are his wife, Mrs. Helen Lord Lamb, whom he married in Portland on August 24, 1938; a daughter, Mrs. Nancy Corning of Rowley, Mass.; his mother, Mrs. Frank W. Lamb of Portland; and a sister, Mrs. Nathaniel W. Wilson of Hallowell. His fraternity was Psi Upsilon.

JOHN MAURICE GARLAND '22

John M. Garland, who attended Bowdoin as a member of the Naval unit of the Specialized Army Training Corps in the fall semester of 1918-19, died on January 14, 1963, in New Castle, Del. Born on July 13, 1898, in Conway Center, N. H., he prepared for college at the local schools and was employed as a post office clerk in Conway for more than 27 years. He was a charter member of the Ralph Shirley Post of the American Legion.

Surviving are his wife, Mrs. Lurena Carlton Garland; a daughter, Mrs. Mary Turgeon of Manchester, Conn.; two brothers, Robert Garland of Hartford, Conn., and Lloyd Garland of Keene, N. H.; a sister, Mrs. Helen Currier of Lexington, Mass.; and three grandchildren. His fraternity was Chi Psi.

WILLIS GILMAN PARSONS '23

Willis G. Parsons, a lawyer for nearly 40 years, died at his home in West Hartford, Conn., on March 30, 1964. Born in Foxcroft on December 10, 1900, he prepared for college at Foxcroft Academy and following his graduation from Bowdoin entered Harvard Law School, from which he received his LL.B. degree in 1926. He joined the firm of Gross, Hyde, and Williams in Hartford, Conn., that same year and became a partner in 1935.

A Mason and a Past President of the West Hartford Exchange Club, Mr. Parsons was also a member of the City Club of Hartford, the Avon Country Club, and the West Hartford Board of Tax Review. He is survived by his wife, Mrs. Alma Petersen Parsons; two sons, Willis G. Parsons, Jr. of West Hartford and John G. Parsons of Providence, R. I.; a daughter, Mrs. Marilyn P. DuPuy, III of Boston; and three grandchildren. He was a member of Zeta Psi Fraternity.

LAWRENCE FAIRMAN SOUTHWICK '25

Lawrence F. Southwick, General Sales Manager of the Plymouth Cordage Company, died in Boston on April 23, 1964, after a long illness. Born on February 12, 1903, in Uxbridge, Mass., he prepared for college at Reading (Mass.) High School and following his graduation from Bowdoin worked for a year or so as a salesman with Bird and Son in San Francisco, Calif. After four years as a textile agent in New York City with Wellington, Sears, and Company, he joined the Plymouth Cordage Company in 1930 as a salesman in the Boston office. He became New England District Manager in 1945, Assistant General Sales Manager in 1951, and General Sales Manager in 1955.

Mr. Southwick is survived by his wife, Mrs. Frances Symonds Southwick, whom he married on October 12, 1928, in Reading, Mass.; two sons, David L. Southwick of Durham, N. H., and Peter A. Southwick '52 of Hartford, Conn.; two daughters, Mrs. Sara Benevento of Duxbury, Mass., and Mrs. Nancy E. Westland of Weymouth, Mass.; two sisters, Mrs. Esther Johnson of Barrington, N. H., and Mrs. Dorothy Day of Worcester, Mass.; and ten grandchildren. He was a member of Zeta Psi Fraternity.

CLIFFORD RUSSELL SNOW '30

Clifford R. Snow, Cost Control Assistant in the Advertising Department at Lever House, died suddenly while at work in New York City on February 18, 1964. Born on October 1, 1907, in Cambridge, Mass., he prepared for college at Newton (Mass.) High School and following his graduation from Bowdoin worked for S. S. Kresge Company and Socony-Vacuum Corporation before joining Lever Brothers Company in Cambridge in 1936. During the years that followed he was Office Supervisor, Field Service Supervisor, and Administrative Assistant with Lever Brothers.

Mr. Snow was for nearly four years a corporal in the Army during World War II and was awarded the Bronze Star. He is survived by his father, Ernest C. Snow of Cambridge, and a sister, Mrs. Eleanor Lukes of Newton, Mass. His fraternity was Alpha Delta Phi.

DONALD MCRUER SMITH '34

Donald M. Smith, Treasurer of the Concord Lumber Corporation, died in Carlisle, Mass., on March 13, 1964. Born in Concord, Mass., on February 8, 1913, he prepared for college at the local high school and at Phillips Andover Academy and following his graduation from Bowdoin was a steamship agent in California until 1941. During World War II he served for nearly five years in the United States Merchant Marine as a lieutenant. After the war he helped organize the Concord Lumber Corporation, of which he was Treasurer and a Director.

A. Mason and a member of the Concord Rotary Club, Mr. Smith was active in the Concord Players and served the town of Concord as Chairman of the Board of Public Welfare. He was also a member of the Concord Independent Battery and the Concord Rod and Gun Club. He is survived by his wife, Mrs. Evelyn Dawson Smith, whom he married in Concord on February 20, 1944; two sons, Timothy and David; two daughters, Mary and Constance; two brothers, Benjamin L. of Concord and Farnham W. of Carlisle, Mass.; and two sisters, Mrs. Hilda Hollis and Mrs. Elizabeth Johnson, both of Carlisle. His fraternity was Delta Kappa Epsilon.

Word has also been received of the death of the following Alumni. Appropriate notice will appear in the July ALUMNUS.

PAUL PURINTON WHEELER '39

Paul P. Wheeler, who was associated with an architectural firm in Auburn for the past 16 years, died on April 28, 1964, at his home in that city. Born in Brunswick on August 8, 1916, he prepared for college at Edward Little High School in Auburn and attended Bowdoin in 1935-36. He later studied for three years at the Portland School of Fine and Applied Arts. He was represented in the Society of American Etchers' annual exhibition for five consecutive years, beginning in 1938. He was also represented in "One Hundred Best Prints from Society of American Etchers Annual, 1939"; the New York World's Fair "American Art Today," 1939; the Portland Society of Art Annual (Watercolors), 1941, 1942, and 1943; and the National Academy Annual, 1941.

Mr. Wheeler had varied experience in architectural and advertising fields, with two years in the engine drawing room of the New England Shipbuilding Corporation in South Portland and two years with Stanley Merrill, Architects, before he joined Alonzo J. Harriman, Inc., in 1946. He is survived by his wife, Mrs. Maxine Crooker Wheeler, whom he married on March 4, 1940; two sons, Allen C. Wheeler and William H. Wheeler, both of Auburn; and a brother, Francis A. Wheeler of Canton. His fraternity was Alpha Tau Omega.

HORACE ABBOTT THOMAS '40

Horace A. Thomas, who was for some years associated with the Merchants National Bank, died in Boston, Mass., on March 17, 1964. Born in Falmouth on August 13, 1918, he was the son of William W. Thomas '94 and prepared for college at Deering High School in Portland. Following his graduation from Bowdoin, he worked for a year with the Merchants National Bank in Boston before entering the Army, in which he served during World War II for more than four years, earning the Silver Star, the Bronze Star, the Combat Infantryman's Badge, seven campaign stars, and the European Theater Ribbon with arrowhead. He was overseas for two and one-half years with the 36th Infantry Division, saw action in North Africa, Italy, France, and Germany, received the Purple Heart, and rose to the rank of captain. He earned the Bronze Star for action in the Italian campaign on January 21, 1944, when he crossed the Rapido River three times under enemy fire, to direct the supporting fire of his company.

After the war Mr. Thomas returned to Portland, where he was engaged in real estate management for three years and then in insurance. He was Treasurer of the Greater Portland Junior Chamber of Commerce in 1948-49 and at the same time was Vice President of the Maine Junior Chamber of Commerce. He also served as a Director of the Portland Boys' Club and as First Vice Chairman of the Portland Chapter of the American Red Cross. About ten years ago he returned to Boston to join the Merchants National Bank. Surviving are his wife; two daughters, Martha C. Thomas and Ellen F. Thomas, both of Concord, Mass.; a brother, Widgery Thomas '22; and four sisters, Mrs. Charlotte T. Whitehill of Portland, Mrs. Mary T. Jenney of Concord, Mass., and Mrs. Helen T. Lovett and Mrs. Elizabeth T. Soule, both of Falmouth. His fraternity was Delta Kappa Epsilon.

ERNEST DAVIS HUMPHREYS Medical 1910

Dr. Ernest D. Humphreys died at his home in Pittsfield on March 15, 1964. Born on December 22, 1883, in Brownville, he prepared for college at Higgins Classical Institute in Charleston and was a special student at Bowdoin for a year before entering the Maine Medical School, from which he received his M.D. degree in 1910. After a year as an assistant surgeon for the Canadian Pacific Railroad, he set up his practice in Jackman in 1911. In 1939 he moved to Pittsfield, where he remained in active practice until two weeks before his death.

Dr. Humphreys was President of the Sebasticook Valley Hospital Staff and had served as Chief of Staff at the Scott-Webb Memorial Hospital in Hartland. For some years he was a Somerset County Medical Examiner and also served as School Physician for Maine Central Institute. In Jackman he was a Trustee of the Congregational Church, Treasurer of the Library Association, and a member of the school committee for almost twenty years. He was a charter member of the Pittsfield Kiwanis Club and a 32nd degree Mason. Surviving are his wife, Mrs. Elizabeth Rowe Humphreys, whom he married in Milo on July 26, 1911; a daughter, Mrs. John W. Crosson of Exeter, N. H.; a sister, Mrs. Charles Eastman of Auburn; and a grandson, Martin E. Bunker of Pittsfield.

More Admissions Questions and Answers

Printed below are the remainder of the admissions questions and answers begun in the May ALUMNUS. They complete the list submitted by Richard A. Wiley '49, Member at Large of the Alumni Council and Chairman of the Boston Bowdoin Club's Prospective Students Committee, to George T. Davidson, Jr. '38, Chairman of the Council's Prospective Students Committee. Bowdoin's Admissions Officers supplied the answers.

Question 4: Independent School Applicants:

Are independent schools in any way at a disadvantage in the Bowdoin admissions process?

Answer

Independent schools are not at a disadvantage in the Bowdoin admissions process in any way. Since their main function is college preparation, a qualified graduate of a good independent school is prepared to undertake work at Bowdoin. Our admissions statistics show that year after year the number of independent school matriculants in our freshman class is proportional to the number in our total candidate group.

Question 5: The Ideal Admissions Prospect:

Just what is the image of the student Bowdoin is seeking? What qualities are sought? Is there a preference for leadership, for intellectual excellence, or for creative talent?

Answer

This question is virtually impossible to answer, since there is no one image of the student that Bowdoin is seeking. Certainly we give preference to the qualities of leadership, intellectual excellence, and creative talent. It is easier to define two kinds of students Bowdoin is not looking for. First, we are not looking for the student who, although extremely strong in one academic area, has virtual incompetence in another. He cannot or will not undertake the broad program of liberal arts which is mandatory under the distribution requirements of the College. Secondly, we are not looking for the student who requires special psychiatric counseling to become an effective member of society. This does not mean, however, that we are seeking only ideal people; we recognize that all human beings have problems. What we do feel strongly about is this: if a student's maladjustment is serious enough to inhibit his academic work, we do not have the special facilities to help him overcome such personal problems.

The College is a community of diverse interests and natures, including the intellectual, the athletic, the creative, and the social, and we are looking for people who have these interests.

A variety of students interested in a variety of pursuits gives us the well-rounded student body we seek.

Question 6: Selection of Schools to be Visited:

On what basis does the Admissions Office determine the schools which will — and will not — be visited? Does failure to schedule a school for a visit mean that it is less desirable?

Answer

The Admissions Officers determine the schools which they will or will not visit largely by past history of successful candidates from a school and general knowledge of the quality of the school in preparing college candidates. The fact that a school has not been scheduled for a visit does not necessarily mean that it is less desirable. It may mean that the school has been visited recently, that another school can be more fruitfully visited at this time, or simply that the Admissions Office is not aware of the academic excellence of the school involved. This is particularly true for schools in areas far from Brunswick and in rapidly-developing suburban areas. Because of the rapid growth of public school systems, it is difficult to keep track of the establishment and character of all new schools. Alumni can be of great help in pinpointing new or improved schools of quality that should be added to the Bowdoin visiting schedule.

Question 7: The Bowdoin Approach:

Just what is the Bowdoin "approach" to admissions work? Is the prospect expected to take the initiative in interviews? Does the College ever attempt to "go after" highly desirable boys? If not, are we perhaps assuming (somewhat smugly) that everyone knows about Bowdoin and its advantages? Are we assuming too much sophistication on the part of high school seniors?

Answer

The Bowdoin approach is simply that the best recruiting of candidates lies in a factual, objective, and sympathetic interpretation of the opportunities at Bowdoin. An interview is generally a discussion of the student's qualifications and professional and academic aims — the interpretation of these factors in view of the competition for admission to Bowdoin and the opportunities at the College for study in various fields. If, during the interview, a candidate clearly emerges as highly desirable, he is so informed and is encouraged to apply on a one-application basis if Bowdoin is his first choice. In any case, all candidates who are interviewed are given a clear picture of their admissions status in the light of available information. Weak candidates are not encouraged; strong candidates are clearly informed of their desirability.

Some Thinking on Fund Matters

The 1963-64 Alumni Fund wound up on Tuesday, June 30, with a total of more than $223,600 from 52.8% of the alumni. Although these figures are down from the $241,843 and 54.2% of the 1962-63 Fund, the Secretary of the Alumni Fund assures the Editor of the ALUMNUS that, as far as he is concerned and all things considered, this is the best Alumni Fund in Bowdoin's history — in both dollars contributed and percentage of participation. At the beginning of the year the Fund Directors would have been happy to settle for $200,000. But the Class Agents were not willing to settle for that figure, and all Bowdoin men should be grateful to them for another demonstration of the priceless quality of the determination to serve their college which is an integral part of Bowdoin alumni and particularly of Class Agents and Fund Directors.

It is an inspiration and a privilege to serve such men and to work with them — an opportunity that comes to but few men.

For the fifth time in the past five years the Alumni Fund has received an award in the private men's colleges category in the Alumni Giving Incentive Award Competition for "distinguished achievement in the development of alumni support." Executive Secretary Wolcott A. Hokanson, Jr. '50 accepted the $125 cash award and the Honorable Mention certificate at the American Alumni Council's 49th General Conference at the Denver Hilton Hotel in Denver, Colo., on July 14.

This competition was inaugurated by a grant from the United States Steel Foundation and is administered by the American Alumni Council. Bowdoin's latest award is based on the 1962-63 Fund's record-breaking total of $241,843. John G. Johnson, Executive Director of the AAC, wrote to President Coles that "the notable record in alumni support registered by your former students has brought another mark of distinction to your institutional family." President Coles, in turn, extended his congratulations to "all who have helped keep the Bowdoin Alumni Fund among the top-ranking ones in the country."

If the AAC or any other group had a competition based upon the success of capital funds campaigns, Bowdoin and its alumni would have earned another award — on the basis of having raised more than $9,760,000 in the first two years of the Capital Campaign. This is a tremendous achievement, and all who have helped in any way to bring it about have earned the gratitude of the College.

This is a time for basking briefly and happily in the reflected glow. It is not, however, a time for sitting on either our hands or our laurels. By Alumni Day, October 17, the Campaign must be pushed over its $10,000,000 goal. By June 30, 1965, the Alumni Fund must attain its goal of $250,000, sought now for four years in a row.

The officers of the Alumni Council are ex-officio the officers of the Bowdoin College Alumni Association. The Council Members at Large, the Directors of the Alumni Fund, the Faculty Member, the Treasurer, the Secretary of the Alumni Fund, and the Alumni Secretary serve as the Executive Committee of the Council and of the Association.

The 159th Commencement

The star attraction of Bowdoin's 159th Commencement program was President Coles' announcement that Mr. and Mrs. Henry Q. Hawes '10 of Kenwood, Calif., have given the College more than $2,100,000 in the form of real estate. This magnificent gift and other contributions sent the Capital Campaign total to $9,650,382 — less than $350,000 short of the goal of $10,000,000.

A native of Westbrook, Mr. Hawes was valedictorian of his class at Westbrook High School and was graduated from Bowdoin in 1910 summa cum laude before earning a master of arts degree at Columbia University. After two years as Superintendent of the Mechanics Institute in Rumford, he joined the advertising agency which later became McCann-Erickson, Inc. He remained with the company from 1913 until his retirement in 1959, serving much of that time as Vice President in charge of its Pacific Coast offices in San Francisco.

Since 1959 Mr. Hawes has been raising registered Herefords on Kinnybrook Farm, a 1,000 acre cattle ranch 50 miles north of San Francisco. Interested in beef cattle for some 20 years, he has led an effort to bring down the cost of beef by breeding back to the larger size of the original Herefords.

210 NEW ALUMNI

A total of 195 A.B. degrees were awarded at the Commencement exercises on Saturday morning, June 13. The College also conferred eight Master of Arts degrees and seven honorary degrees. Sixty-four of the new alumni are from Massachusetts, 43 from Maine, 20 from New York, 15 from Connecticut, 11 from New Jersey, and the rest from 12 other states and Canada, Norway, and the Virgin Islands.

ELECTIONS

The Board of Overseers elected two new members: Robert N. Bass '40 of Wilton, Treasurer and a Director of G. H. Bass and Company; and Nathan I. Greene '28 of Weston, Mass., President of the Newton-Waltham Bank and Trust Company.

Dr. John E. Cartland, Jr. '39 of West Hartford, Conn., is the new President of the Alumni Council, and George T. Davidson, Jr. '38 of Conway, N. H., is the Vice President for 1964-65. Newly-elected Members at Large are Richard C. Bechtel '36 of Philadelphia, Jeffrey J. Carre '40 of Amherst, Mass., F. Erwin Cousins '24 of Portland, and Roscoe C. Ingalls, Jr. '43 of Bronxville, N. Y.

Gordon C. Knight '32 of North Haven, Conn., is a newly-appointed member of the Board of Directors of the Alumni Fund, to serve a five-year term.

NEW HONORARY ALUMNI

Six retired members of the faculty received framed certificates at Commencement as honorary members of the Alumni Association. They are Professor of Mathematics Cecil T. Holmes, Professor of Biology Manton Copeland, Professor of Economics Warren B. Catlin, Coach of Track John J. Magee, Professor of French Charles H. Livingston, and Coach of Swimming Robert B. Miller.

FROM 1888 TO 1964

Bowdoin's senior alumnus, with respect to both class and age, Albert W. Tolman '88, sent the following message to President Coles, who read it at the Commencement Dinner: "Heartfelt thanks from the Class of '88 to all the Classes and particularly the Class of '64. Sincere congratulations to President Coles and to the Faculty for the completion of another year of enduring accomplishment. May Bowdoin's torch of knowledge continue to light the way for future generations."

Mr. Tolman is in his 98th year. For many years, until recently, he had the honor of leading the traditional Commencement procession of returning alumni. This year Dr. Charles S. F. Lincoln '91 and Francis S. Dane '96 led the way. All three men are members of Psi Upsilon Fraternity, a fact which may have significance for anyone interested in geriatrics.

SENIOR HONORS

Five seniors were graduated magna cum laude and 24 more cum laude. The magna men were Geoffrey Chapman of Boston, William Hughes of Freeport, William Rounds of Portland, Steven Weiss of Jenkintown, Pa., and John Welwood of Brookline, Mass.

In addition, 40 graduates received special recognition for outstanding work in their major subject, with two men earning Highest Honors, 11 High Honors, and 27 Honors.

DISTRIBUTION OF MAJORS

Twenty-nine seniors majored in Economics, 28 in Government, 25 in History, 22 in Psychology, 18 in Biology, 17 in English, 13 in Chemistry, 9 in Mathematics, 9 in Physics, 7 in Sociology, 4 in Art, 4 in French, 3 in German, 3 in Philosophy, 2 in Latin, and 2 in Music.

1914'S 50TH REUNION GIFT

Edward H. Snow of Ardmore, Pa., announced at the Commencement Dinner that members of the Class of 1914, in observance of the 50th anniversary of their graduation, had given or signified their intention of giving to the College through the Alumni Fund and the Capital Campaign a total of $130,629.14.

Of this amount $15,091.64 has been set aside as the Class of 1914 50th Reunion Fund. $10,000 of this amount is to be used for the Librarian's Office in the new library, and the other $5,091.64 is to be used to establish the Class of 1914 Book Fund, the income from which will be used for the purchase of new books.

Members of the Class of 1939 took great delight, through their spokesman and Class Agent, Robert D. Fleischner of Springfield, Mass., in breaking the 25th Reunion Gift record of $31,200, set by 1938 a year ago. Members of 1939 gave or had signified their intention of giving through the Campaign and the Alumni Fund a total of $39,300, with $33,129 of this amount set aside as the Class of 1939 25th Reunion Fund. The use of this Fund will be determined later this year.

THE 1963-64 ALUMNI FUND

Alumni Fund Chairman Edward B. Burr '45 of New Vernon, N. J., reported a Commencement total in excess of $207,000 and predicted that by June 30, when the Fund would close officially, there would be new records set in the total number of contributors and the number of alumni contributors. He estimated that the percentage of participation would exceed 53% — this in the year of general solicitation for the Capital Campaign, proving that Bowdoin men will support the College generously on both the capital fund and the annual giving levels — simultaneously.

SERVICE AWARD TO ZEITLER

Emerson W. Zeitler '20 of Brunswick continued his "grand slam" of honors in 1964 by being the recipient of the Alumni Service Award at the Commencement Dinner. The citation read by Alumni Council President Arthur K. Orne '30 of Wilmington, Del., said, in part, ". . . a former Bowdoin athlete and student leader who has given years of energetic leadership to the College, Town, State, and Nation; adopted son of Maine who exemplifies those virtues usually associated with State of Mainer: honesty, integrity, and diligence — to you, Zeit, we happily and proudly present this day the Alumni Association's highest honor, the Alumni Service Award. In your faithful service to the College, you personify the devotion of Bowdoin men."

" . . . FOR THE BENEFIT OF SOCIETY."

In Kenwood, Calif., as in Brunswick, Maine, the devotion of Bowdoin men was personified on Commencement Day, as alumni from Albert Tolman '88 down through the years to Peter Seaver '64, winner of the Haldane Cup this year, gave evidence through their lives and their actions that the words of Bowdoin's first President, Joseph McKeen, spoken at the opening of the College in 1802, still ring true and hold true for alumni today: "It ought always to be remembered that literary institutions are founded and endowed for the common good, and not for the private advantage of those who resort to them. It is not that they may be able to pass through life in an easy and reputable manner, but that their mental powers may be cultivated and improved for the benefit of society."

Project '65: The Sociology of Opportunity

by Robert C. Mellow

Associate Director of Admissions

ONE OF THE CRITICAL TASKS facing the newly-rejoined Union in 1865 was the future of the thousands of freed slaves, who had become free citizens. At the end of the war the Freedmen's Bureau was established to handle the myriad problems of assimilating a virtually illiterate, unskilled segment of the country into an increasingly technologically-oriented civilization. The man selected to do this job was General Oliver Otis Howard, a member of Bowdoin's Class of 1850. As Commissioner of the Freedmen's Bureau, he realized that educating the Negro was among the first tasks he must face. Through his efforts Howard University was founded in 1867, and from it a steady stream of Negro leaders has come for the past 90 years.

As this article is written, shortly after the centennial of the Emancipation Proclamation and one year away from the centennial of Howard's appointment as Commissioner of the Freedmen's Bureau, the social and educational disadvantage of the Negro remains acute. Despite 100 years as a freed man, the Negro still retains second-class citizenship. Although Negroes represent 13% of the population, they form less than 1% of inter-racial college graduates. The problem of improving this percentage is not an easy one. Lack of motivation from ghetto living, combined with inability to support the expenses of a college education, complicated by generally inferior elementary and secondary school facilities in ghetto areas, has seriously affected the incidence of Negro students aspiring to college.

Some responsibility for the present educational disadvantage of the Negro must be placed directly on colleges, particularly on the more selective and traditional colleges, which have been content to attract students largely from a small group of independent and well-to-do suburban high schools, with the result that the percentage of Negro students in such colleges is not only below that in the general population but also below the average for college-going Negroes in the nation. For instance, Bowdoin, with only three American Negroes in a population of 820, has less than .04% of its student body Negro. It is apparent that Bowdoin is not now serving an important national need to the degree it should. It is appropriate to say that there should be about a dozen Negro students in each graduating class, rather than three in the College.

The task of attracting and admitting Negro students to the College in significant numbers is complex. First, it would be unwise, as well as unfair, to lower admission standards significantly to favor Negro candidates. Such a concession would mean either academic difficulty and a high drop-out rate for such admitted students or a double grading standard by the faculty, both of which alternatives are obnoxious. A case can be made for "reverse discrimination" favoring Negro candidates, but certainly not to the extent of admitting unqualified students.

Secondly, because of the social, economic, and educational problems suggested above, the incidence of Negro high school graduates who are capable, motivated, and educated to do Bowdoin work is less than the incidence of such students in the white high school population. Therefore, the problem of recruiting a sufficient number of qualified candidates to have a dozen Negro matriculants in a given class is insurmountable with the present manpower of the Admissions Office. Because of housing and school attendance patterns forced on Negroes by economics and real estate practices, it is apparent that, at present, substantial recruiting must be accomplished through Northern central city high schools or segregated Southern high schools on a special basis. Such recruiting by the Admissions Office is unrealistic in terms of the yield of qualified candidates in relation to time and cost to the College.

It was against this background that seniors Foster Davis and Michael Ince approached the Admissions Office last December with this question: "What can Bowdoin undergraduates do to attract more qualified Negro candidates to the College?"

Out of this discussion and a series of student meetings, Project '65 was born — a student-implemented and admissions-coordinated school visit program by student ambassadors to predominantly Negro high schools in the East, the Midwest, and the South.

DURING THE SPRING VACATION (March 27-April 7), Project '65 got under way with a week of campus visits to high schools in Pittsburgh, Columbus, Cincinnati, Chicago, St. Louis, and Louisville, and in Virginia, North Carolina, and South Carolina.

The first team (Chicago, St. Louis, and Louisville), consisting of Kermit Howe '64, Michael Ince '64, and Edwin Bell '66, visited 29 schools, where they talked to 62 juniors and sophomores and 14 seniors. The second team (Pittsburgh, Columbus, and Cincinnati on a three-day trip) of Brian Rines '63 and Richard Bamberger '67 talked to 55 juniors in 19 schools. The third team (Virginia, North Carolina, and South Carolina) of Foster Davis '62 and Andrew Seager '66 visited 13 schools, where they talked to 56 juniors and sophomores and 15 seniors. In all, the three teams visited 61 schools and talked to 173 sophomores and juniors and 29 seniors: a total of 202 students, plus many guidance counselors and principals. It should also be noted that as no students were seen in 24 schools, the 202 students interviewed came from 37 schools.

In addition to the Project '65 teams, Charles Toomajian '65 and Steven Kay '65, Bowdoin-Morehouse exchange students, talked to 12 juniors in four schools in Memphis and Nashville to make a grand total for the Project '65 spring vacation school visit program of 65 schools and 214 students.

Following the return of the school ambassadors to Bowdoin, a report meeting was held, after which the Admissions Office sent a letter of thanks to each of the guidance counselors with any additional material about Bowdoin which had been requested. Each of the juniors received a letter on one of three bases: (1) a letter encouraging his application if he seemed qualified to consider Bowdoin from the information available; (2) a letter requesting further information if we were uncertain about his academic qualifications; (3) a letter suggesting that he should not consider Bowdoin if he seemed clearly unqualified by reason of academic performance or program.

Encouragement letters were sent to 63 juniors, letters requesting more academic information to 83, and discouragement letters to 55; 13 sophomores received a special letter encouraging their continued good academic work.

The 29 seniors who wanted to apply to Bowdoin for admission next September posed the most immediate problem.

The schools do not have sufficient information about college opportunities, because colleges do not communicate with them; colleges do not communicate with or visit them because the schools do not have enough college-bound students. Project '65 was one step forward in trying to break this cycle.

Although Bowdoin's deadline for September, 1964, admission (March 1) had passed, we reviewed their qualifications and selected 14 men who appeared to be reasonable candidates. We then reviewed our admissions status — applications this year had increased 12.3% — and not only had the admissions decisions been made for the Class of 1968, but we had committed our financial aid.

At this point we secured permission from President Coles for the 14 seniors to apply to Bowdoin if they had no prior commitment for admission and financial aid to a comparable college. For this purpose we defined a comparable college as a four-year, residential, private, degree-granting, liberal arts or engineering institution. We excluded state universities, commuting situations, and non-degree-granting institutions of higher vocational and business training. We also secured a special fund to underwrite financial aid for two or three of the late applicants, depending on the need of the successful candidates.

After securing this authorization, the Admissions Office contacted each of the guidance counselors involved. We were most concerned that a candidate not be unduly optimistic. We felt strongly that every applicant should know just where he stood in competition for admission and in the assurance of financial aid. Of the 14 students we encouraged to apply, 10 applied. Four had already secured a commitment of admission and aid from a comparable college.

Who were the candidates from this late application group?

Let us look briefly at the background of two. The first is from a large, blighted-area St. Louis high school, from which he graduated last January. Since then he has been working as a clerk, since he has no money with which to go on to college, and is living with his married sister because the whereabouts of his parents are unknown. He graduated first out of 93 in his class and was president of both the student council and his senior class. Although he does not have the financial ability to go on to higher education at this time, he is working toward saving the money while supporting himself. After initiating his Bowdoin application, he received a full scholarship at Washington University of St. Louis and was one of the four applicants who withdrew. Incidentally, our experience was that schools and candidates were completely honest in keeping us informed of opportunities at other colleges. There were a strong reciprocity of our feeling that late admission should not interfere with prior college plans and a distinct concern on their part that they did not want to jeopardize an opportunity for another candidate.

The other candidate was first in his class of 270 in a good-sized, segregated Southern high school. His mother, a nurse and the main support of the family, died last year, and he had to abandon his college plans. The boy who ranked second in the class of 270 secured offers of admission and financial aid at Harvard, Princeton, and Duke, as well as other institutions. As a result of our Project '65 visit, the first-ranking boy applied to Bowdoin and will be a member of the Class of 1968.

IF WE DO NOTHING BUT LOOK at the number of qualified seniors who had no college plans, Project '65 demonstrated a real need for communication about college opportunities to students in schools in segregated Southern and deprived urban areas.

What other positive results has Project '65 had?

As far as alleviating the crisis in Negro higher education is concerned, the results have been negligible. Out of 29 candidates, 14 were encouraged to file applications, 10 did, and three have been admitted to the Class of 1968. The flood of Negro matriculants to the College hoped for by the liberal and feared by the conservative friends of the College has not materialized.

On the other hand, Project '65 has demonstrated that a significant amount of talent exists in Southern segregated and Northern ghetto schools which is not now being identified and encouraged toward college. At the heart of the lack of identification and encouragement is a lack of communication between the secondary schools and selective liberal arts colleges which, as noted before, traditionally recruit in schools which have a large college-going population. The schools do not have sufficient information about college opportunities, because colleges do not communicate with them; colleges do not communicate with or visit them because the schools do not have enough college-bound students. Project '65 was one step forward in trying to break this cycle.

Lack of knowledge of college opportunity adversely affects counseling. Without the strong likelihood that their candidates can attend college, guidance counselors are rightfully conservative, and a number of capable students are not put in college preparatory programs but are encouraged to take a vocational training program, which will at least secure them a livelihood after their graduation from high school, although even this is limited by discriminatory trade-union practices. When progressive college counselors attempt to encourage students with outstanding academic talent to pursue a college preparatory program, they are often frustrated by a lack of motivation in the student and lack of family support for aspirations beyond wage earning. The horizons offered by Southern caste and Northern ghetto culture are limited indeed. One of the contributions of Project '65 has been to publicize the availability of college opportunities in at least one college and to offer the possibility of higher horizons.

Project '65 demonstrated that if a program is carefully planned and administered, student ambassadors can be welcome and effective school visitors. In contacting the guidance counselors about the 14 senior candidates, we universally received comments from them that they were pleased with the kind of person who had visited their school. We have also received letters to this effect.

Project '65 pointed out the tremendous amount of financial aid which will be required if there is to be any significant encouragement of students from deprived or segregated environments. As mentioned above, resources available to students are either non-existent or, at best, extremely limited. We can expect to find a median family income of less than $4,000; a candidate will need virtually absolute financial aid to attend Bowdoin or a comparable college — financial aid which presently does not exist. It was largely lack of financial aid resources which limited our Admissions Committee to accepting only three candidates, although at least three others were also highly qualified. The Admissions Office undertook a little extraordinary follow-up in the case of these latter candidates by contacting Oberlin College, where, we are happy to say, two men have been accepted with financial aid.

Here is one of the great paradoxes posed by Project '65: not to be able to offer admission to such a worthy candidate seems the grossest injustice, but to admit him and force him to leave in January or at the end of the freshman year is a travesty of opportunity.

In awarding financial aid, we must face the problem of whether these candidates should be considered with our regular candidates or whether they should be considered a separate group. There are difficulties posed either way. If we consider them as regular candidates, they may not be able to meet the competition for awards. Their total high school program will frequently be weaker than that of our regular financial aid candidates, and, in some cases, their academic performance in the program will also be weaker despite their best efforts. Their College Board and standard test scores will usually be lower than those of other candidates. (There is strong evidence of a cultural effect through which students from urban and well-to-do schools score significantly higher on College Board and similar tests than students from deprived environments.) Yet their need for financial aid will be greater. If we consider them as a special group — as a domestic Bowdoin Plan — we open up a Pandora's box for all special groups. Why should we not consider rural Maine boys as a special group? Why should we not consider under-achievers as a special group?

THIS DIFFICULTY SUGGESTS THE WHOLE PROBLEM of assessing the academic credentials of students from deprived or segregated environments. Where a college preparatory program has been available, it has been a limited one in most cases. As mentioned above, standard test scores are usually low. (Of the 1,100 scholars selected through the National Merit Scholarship tests last year, only seven were Negroes.) Can we justify the admission of low testing, limited-program students to Bowdoin, worthy as they may be, in view of the academic requirements of the College? How far can we go in helping students with such backgrounds bridge the gap between their secondary school education and the challenges of Bowdoin? It would be unjust to diminish the rigor and quality of a Bowdoin education seriously in order to accommodate such students. On the other hand, we have a moral obligation to make the College available to as wide a cross-section of the population as possible, as well as a distinct educational obligation toward our own student body that their peers represent as wide a spectrum of society as possible.

This whole situation raises the very, very difficult question of interpreting who a "qualified" Negro student is. There is now little objective evidence to help us beyond a ten-year report by the National Scholarship Service and Fund for Negro Students which indicates that College Board tests are not a valid indicator of academic success for Negro students in inter-racial colleges. Not enough work has been done in this area for many reasons, the chief among which is the fact that there simply have not been enough Negro students from deprived areas in highly selective colleges.

Let us look at the problem of interpreting adequate academic program and performance. One candidate whom we had apply in our Project '65 group had had no foreign language; he carried three senior courses, the limit available in his school, rather than four; on an H, A, B, C, D, E, F system, he had a few A's, mostly B's and C's; yet he was sixth (out of 195) in his school, where roughly 60% of the students drop out during their high school career. Furthermore, his was a ghetto school which had been fused during an urban renewal project with another school, with consequently aggravated overcrowding. If we were to admit him to Bowdoin with financial aid, the financial aid he would require to study and live at Bowdoin would exceed his total family income during the past year. He has been working 40 hours a week as a bagger in a food store after school and on weekends to help support his mother. Despite this fact, he is president of the National Honor Society of his school, president of the senior class, and captain of the track team (one of the outstanding hurdlers in his city and anchor man of a state record-setting 880 relay team) — in short, he is a very worthwhile person.

But what if he were to be admitted to Bowdoin? With the best spirit and will in the world, in view of his academic program and performance in high school, does he have enough preparation to come to Bowdoin and do the work? Here is one of the great paradoxes posed by Project '65: not to be able to offer admission to such a worthy candidate seems the grossest injustice, but to admit him and force him to leave in January or at the end of the freshman year is a travesty of opportunity.

Yet it seems that Bowdoin should be in a very favorable position to make a significant contribution to recognizing and fostering such talent. We are a small college and should be able to give individual counseling and program. In a small Maine community with a non-discriminatory fraternity system, the social adjustment of a student should be effective — as has been demonstrated, of course, in the case of our Bowdoin Plan students, who come from all over the world and from many different cultures.

PROJECT '65 CERTAINLY HAS NOT BEEN A PANACEA for the terrible problem facing us in the identification and encouragement of talent from deprived areas. Indeed, the Project may well have raised more problems than it has solved, many of which have been suggested above. It has been a beginning, however, toward having Bowdoin continue to meet the obligation which is the hallmark of a truly liberal college — the obligation that as an educational institution it implement the highest ideals of our society by making its facilities available to the widest possible range of mankind.

ACKNOWLEDGMENTS

It is impossible to acknowledge everyone who has helped make Project '65 a success. The student ambassadors have been identified above; Samuel Allen and Daniel Levine of the faculty early gave their encouragement and advice to the Project; the Preparatory Schools and Admissions Committee of the faculty gave its official sanction, and the Blanket Tax Committee allowed funds to be used; all the fraternities contributed funds, as did many individual students, faculty members, alumni, and friends of the College, without whose support Project '65 would have been an impossibility.

The Alumni Council's Fiftieth Anniversary

by Peter C. Barnard '50, Alumni Secretary

ON THURSDAY, JUNE 11, THE BOWDOIN ALUMNI COUNCIL marked its Fiftieth Anniversary with a celebration at the College. Members of the Council or their Alternates, Members-elect, Past Presidents, the three surviving members of the original Council, the three former Alumni Secretaries, the President of the College, the Executive Secretary of the College, their wives, and the members of the Alumni Office staff were invited to attend, and many of them did.

A six o'clock reception at the Alumni House was followed by a seven o'clock banquet at the Moulton Union. Almost 150 were present. Council President Arthur K. Orne '30 presided and introduced those at the head table, including Council Vice President John E. Cartland, Jr. '39, Council Secretary Peter C. Barnard '50, Council Treasurer Glenn R. McIntire '25, and ALUMNUS Editor and Fund Secretary Robert M. Cross '45. He also introduced nearly twenty Past Presidents who were present.

President James S. Coles spoke on behalf of the College, especially in appreciation of the Council's work during its first fifty years. Philip S. Wilder '23, Alumni Secretary from 1927 until 1942, spoke of Council Members who went on to later service on the Governing Boards and said of President Kenneth C. M. Sills '01: "It may not generally be remembered or known that he saw himself as the founder of the Alumni Council, but such is the case. He received the largest number of votes of those members initially elected, as reported exactly fifty years ago today, and called the first meeting to order. I am sure that the establishment of the Council would have ranked high on the list had he been asked to recount the many good things which he had done for Bowdoin College." Seward J. Marsh '12, Alumni Secretary from 1942 until 1959, told several of his inimitable stories and paid tribute to those who had preceded him as Alumni Secretary and Secretary of the Council.

The principal speaker was Austin H. MacCormick '15, Overseer of the College, Executive Director of the Osborne Association, Inc., Professor-Emeritus of Criminology at the University of California (Berkeley), and Bowdoin's first Alumni Secretary (1921-27). He delighted his audience with an interesting and often humorous three-part speech. First he praised many others who had worked on the Council during its first fifty years, and last he kept the group in a state of extended laughter over the time he played football for Bowdoin against Hebron. His principal message, however, was contained in the middle part of his talk: "Many older alumni, with no lack of loyalty to what they call the New Bowdoin, look back with nostalgic affection to the Old Bowdoin. Most of us in my day and before that were Maine boys. Many of us had no money, had graduated from small-town high schools, and had hard-scrambled our way academically and financially into Bowdoin. . . .

"To newly arrived freshmen in those days, Bowdoin looked like a combination of Harvard, Oxford, the University of Athens, and Barnum and Bailey's Circus. Our required courses were things to arouse wonder and terror: coming to grips with the mysteries of commas and semi-colons in Mitch's English I, the nerve-racking and knee-knocking experience of reciting a half-memorized oration in English II, learning in Doc Whit's Hygiene I what a mess our insides are, facing Buck Moody's cold glare in Math I (not knowing until later what a warm heart he had and what a great teacher he was), slipping and sliding through the irregular verbs (the regular ones were bad enough) in Flunker Brown's French I.

"What kept us from giving up in that first year? One thing was the fact that to most of us Bowdoin had been the Promised Land since early boyhood, and we knew we would find the milk and honey some day. Moreover, if we had flunked out, we could never again have faced our parents, who saw in their callow and pimply sons some future doctors, lawyers, businessmen, clergymen, and professors of distinction, if not future Presidents. And, finally, we were being taught by professors and instructors whose background was about the same as ours. . . . They were not merely our teachers, but our counselors and friends and, sometimes, our nurses. They recognized our potentialities, if we had any, and patiently guided our slow development, as someone had guided theirs. . . ."

After affectionately referring to a number of Bowdoin faculty "greats," Mr. MacCormick continued, "I want to drive home my conviction that there is only one Bowdoin and that its life span, since the doors of Massachusetts Hall opened in 1802, has not been divided in any such earth-shaking way as, for example, the change of a country from a dictatorship to a democracy. Its student and alumni bodies and its faculty are larger than they were fifty years ago. It has more applicants for admission, and they have to meet higher standards. It is richer in endowment and income, in buildings, and in the scope and quality of its curriculum. It offers a more interesting and more stimulating life to its students. Is it, then, a better college than our Bowdoin of a half century ago? I think it probably is, and I hope it is. But I do not know how to measure such things and consider it sounder to think of it as the same Bowdoin, brought up to date in the time and the world in which we live.

"If we older alumni persist in thinking of the Old Bowdoin and the New Bowdoin, and especially if we bewail the passing of the Old and feel reluctant to give our loyalty and financial support to the Bowdoin of today, I suggest that we focus our thinking rather on how to preserve the best of the Old in the New. My discussion of promising students who had to hard-scrabble their way, and of faculty members who were interested in helping them develop and knew how to do it, has been leading up to this point.

"We alumni cannot pick the faculty, and it would be unwise to trust us with that responsibility. . . ."

"We alumni cannot pick the student body, and, again, it would be unwise to let us. With the present high standards for acceptance and the impartial screening done by the Admissions Office, one sometimes cannot get his own son into the College unless he is a lot smarter than the Old Man. This is a sound policy, except when it affects one's own boy.

"The alumni, however, can and should help to a much greater extent than we do now in building the kind of student body we want at Bowdoin. This means discovering good candidates, interesting them in the College by individual and alumni club approaches, encouraging them to apply for admission (even if they apply to other colleges, too), securing information about them that will be helpful to the Admissions Office and forwarding it, taking them to visit the campus on some special occasion, and so on. In short, if the alumni bring to the point of wanting to go to Bowdoin candidates for admission who are fully qualified, the present high quality of the student body will go steadily higher and higher. . . ."

CITING SEVERAL GOOD EXAMPLES in the present student body, Mr. MacCormick added, "If we wish to preserve what was one of the most distinctive features of the earlier Bowdoin, we shall beat the bushes tirelessly to discover the boys in this category: the ones who have superior intellectual capabilities, who are attending poor schools, and whose families have limited means. The College can find some of them; we

The Alumni Service Award

First established in 1932 as the Alumni Achievement Award and changed in name to the Alumni Service Award in 1953, this award is made annually to the man who, in the opinion of his fellow alumni, as expressed by the Alumni Council, best represents the alumnus whose services to Bowdoin most deserve recognition.

The recipients from 1932 through 1964 have been as follows:

alumni can find more. For obvious reasons, I would focus most directly on the State of Maine, but they are to be found everywhere, and there are few parts of the country nowadays where we do not have alumni.

"Having found these superior prospects, we have to interest them in Bowdoin and, a more important and more difficult step, find some way to make it possible for them to finance a Bowdoin education. If I were a multi-millionaire I would set up a special scholarship fund for this purpose, with provision for full four-year scholarships for carefully selected candidates, and provision also that grants could be made to finance a year or two at a good secondary school to prepare for Bowdoin. This is not an idle and impractical dream. Very substantial scholarship and fellowship grants are made all over the country to seniors and graduate students by corporations as well as colleges and universities, when intellectual equals or superiors of their recipients are making a living digging clams.

"If we alumni wish to develop one of Bowdoin's finest potential assets, we must seek out not only prospective students whose social and economic situation as well as their native ability and education are superior but also those with equal capabilities that are hidden in a poor home and a small-town school. This subject is not discussed with such fervor because I was a barefoot boy from Boothbay. Some of the finest stock in America is crumbling in dry rot because of lack of the opportunity for an education. Bowdoin's history is full of examples to support my thesis. We must never forget that much of its eminence is based on the achievements of hard-scrabblers who found its doors open and its hearth warm."

The Alumni Council further observed its semicentennial by sponsoring two special Commencement Weekend features — a program of "Bowdoin Information" on Thursday afternoon, June 11, and a special Hospitality Center at the Library on June 12 and 13.

At the Council's Annual Meeting on Friday morning, June 12, Members, alternate representatives, and Members-elect heard reports from the ten standing and three special committees and discussed a variety of topics of Bowdoin interest. Professor Athern P. Daggett '25, the special guest speaker, reported on and answered questions about the Senior Seminars to be inaugurated next fall. At the conclusion of the meeting, Council President Orne announced that the College was then presenting to each Council Member Professor Herbert Ross Brown's new Sills of Bowdoin, each copy individually inscribed by the author and bearing a special fiftieth-anniversary bookplate.

The Golden Anniversary celebration was climaxed at the annual luncheon and meeting of the Alumni Association at noon on June 12. President Orne presented specially printed and framed certificates to four new Honorary Members of the Association: Professors Emeriti Warren B. Catlin and Charles H. Livingston and Coaches Emeriti John J. Magee and Robert B. Miller. Two others, who could not attend the Luncheon, received their certificates in absentia: Professor Cecil T. Holmes and Professor Emeritus Manton Copeland.

Mr. Orne outlined some high points of the Council's current year and introduced Mr. Wilder, who spoke in special observance of the Council's anniversary. He outlined the beginnings and the early years of the principal alumni organizations the Council and the Fund, and read from an article in the ALUMNUS in 1931 by the then-President of the Council, Leon V. Walker '03, who wrote, in part, "It should be understood that while the Council, as the Executive Committee of the Alumni Association, primarily represents the Alumni, it has conceived its duty to be not to deal merely with matters concerning the alumni as a distinct group but rather to interest itself in any subject which. . . would benefit the College as a whole. It has felt that the alumni are not seeking any undue voice in the control of the College or in shaping its policies, but that they are sincerely desirous of rendering to the College all possible assistance. . . . After all, the Council is the instrumentality of the Alumni. Through it, in many matters, they can work for the College most effectively."

Mr. Wilder concluded with reference to the report written by President William DeWitt Hyde in 1915, when the Council was just reaching its first birthday. What he wrote then might almost have been written now: "We are grateful for the increasing interest shown by our alumni in the conduct of college affairs, and the constructive criticism of college policy. The colleges have always stood for culture: they are fast becoming a cult. Their thousands of loyal alumni more and more identify their own sense of honor and satisfaction with the life and work, the victories and achievements, of the undergraduates who continue the traditions which they helped to form. Bowdoin College will endeavor to be worthy of her precious traditions inherited from an honorable past and the growing interest of her alumni, which is so inspiring for the present and so full of promise for the future."

On The Campus

Spring Sports

The best baseball record (9 and 4) in years, including an unprecedented eight-game winning streak and the first clean sweep of the "Little Three" in many a moon.

The first winning season (7 and 6) since Bowdoin began playing full lacrosse schedules.

An impressive record of 16 victories and 2 defeats, and the State Series championship, in golf.

A tie for the state title and an overall 6 and 4 slate in tennis.

A 2 and 2 record in dual track meets plus some outstanding individual performances and the crowning of a new Bowdoin All-American.

These were some of the highlights of a successful spring sports season at Bowdoin.

Coach Danny MacFayden's baseball team, perhaps the biggest surprise of the season, started with a spring trip which was abbreviated by cold weather but included victories over Baltimore (6-4) and Upsala (10-1). Bowdoin then defeated Springfield (6-3), Trinity (9-2), Williams (4-1), Wesleyan (9-8), and Amherst (1-0). Next came a 4-1 triumph over a Maine team that went on to reach the finals of the NCAA national tournament.

The Polar Bears then lost four games — to New Hampshire (4-6), Bates (3-6), Colby (3-7), and Bates again (4-5), but ended their season in winning form with a 4-3 victory over Colby.

Ned d'Entremont '65, a southpaw, who was elected next year's captain, paced the pitching department with a record of 3 wins and 1 loss and an earned run average of 1.45. Shortstop Dave Bayer '64 and second baseman Bill Matthews '65 led the batters with averages of .310 and .300 respectively. The captain was outfielder Dave Fitts '64.

Bayer and pitcher Bob Butkus '66, who won 2 and lost 1, were named to the All-Maine team.

The lacrosse squad, coached by Nels Corey '39, dropped its opener to Stevens Tech (8-13) but then posted three consecutive victories—over Lehigh (5-1), Adelphi (8-5), and Lafayette (9-3). Injuries, including one to Co-Captain Tom Oliver '64, hurt the Polar Bears at this point in their schedule. They lost to C. W. Post (6-12), Massachusetts (3-7), New Hampshire (4-13), and Wesleyan (4-12).

The Bowdoin stickmen then walloped Nichols (21-4) and lost to M.I.T. (2-8). They closed their season with three straight wins—over New England College (16-1), Worcester Tech (7-5), and Tufts (6-3).

The other lacrosse co-captain was Don Handal '64. Next year's captains will be Fred Bail '65 and Brian Murphy '65. Pacing the attack this year was Pete Downey '65 with a total of 24 points.

The golf team, coached by Ed Coombs '42, defeated Boston College (4-3), Harvard (5½-1½), Tufts (5-2), and Brandeis (6-1), losing to Williams (2-5) and New Hampshire (0-7). In State Series play the Polar Bears finished with 78 points, 9 more than second-place Maine. Co-Captain Bob Osterhout '64 and Fred Filoon '64 took second and third places, respectively, in the individual state intercollegiate championships.

The team's other 1964 co-captain was Grant Kloppman '64. Next year's captain will be Phil McDowell '65.

Alex Schulten '66

opened its season with losses to Tufts and M.I.T. by 3-6 scores and to Amherst 1-5 in a match shortened by rain. Then the netmen did an about-face and romped over Brandeis 9-0. In State Series play Bowdoin defeated Colby twice by 7-2 scores, took Bates twice by scores of 8-1 and 6-3, and split with Maine, winning 6-3 and losing 3-6.

Captain Art McDonald '64 won the state college singles title. The state doubles crown also went to Bowdoin, McDonald teaming with Steve Hecht '65, who was elected next year's captain.

The track team, coached by Frank Sabastanski '41, finished with a dual meet record of 2 wins and 2 losses in a season that saw the club plagued by a rash of injuries. The two defeats were by a combined total of only 6 points. Bowdoin crushed Amherst 116-24, lost to Vermont 69-71, edged New Hampshire 73-71, and lost to M.I.T. 70-74. The team finished third in the State Meet.

There were some sparkling individual performances both during the regular season and afterward. Alex Schulten '66, who was elected next year's captain, was named to the All-America track team after winning the hammer events in both the small college division and university division NCAA championships on the West Coast in June. His best distance was 191 feet, 6 inches. Earlier Alex smashed a 39-year old Bowdoin record by scaling the discus 153 feet, 10 inches. Gil Ekdahl '65 set a college pole vault mark of 13 feet, 3 inches.

Dave McDowell '64, this year's captain, was awarded the Leslie A. Claff Track Trophy as the outstanding track and field athlete. He was an outstanding broad jumper for three years and holds the Bowdoin indoor record of 23 feet, 4 inches. Dave suffered a broken ankle in the M.I.T. meet.

The sailing team, whose adviser is Professor Elroy O. LaCasce, Jr. '44, finished 6th out of 14 in the Boston Dinghy Cup race and third in the Friis Trophy event, which it won last year. The Commodore was Charles Vaughan '65.

Faculty Matters

Professor Cecil T. Holmes, who retired in June after nearly 40 years as a member of the faculty, has been elected Wing Professor of Mathematics, Emeritus. During the summer he is teaching a course in intermediate calculus at Stanford University in California.

Nine members of the faculty have received promotions. With their new grades, they are Associate Professor of Biology Charles E. Huntington, Associate Professor of Economics William D. Shipman, Associate Professor of Romance Languages Gerald Kamber, Assistant Professor of Romance Languages Robert R. Nunn, Assistant Professor of Psychology Haratune H. Mikaelian, Assistant Professor of Biology Noel S. Nussbaum, Assistant Professor of Mathematics Albert F. Gilman, III, Assistant Professor of Russian Maurice I. Levin, and Assistant Professor of English Reginald L. Hannaford.

New Faculty Members

During the winter and spring months the College announced the appointment of twelve new faculty members.

Anthony L. Bascelli, a graduate of Rutgers University in 1959, will be an Instructor in French. He has his M.A. degree from Rutgers, where he has been a teaching assistant.

Jerry W. Brown will become Assistant Professor of Religion. A 1958 graduate of Harvard, he received a bachelor of divinity degree from Eastern Baptist Theological Seminary in Philadelphia in 1961 and an M.A. from the University of Pennsylvania the same year. Last month he received his Ph.D. from Princeton.

Samuel B. Butcher, a graduate of Albion College in Michigan, with M.A. and Ph.D. degrees from Harvard, is a new Assistant Professor of Chemistry. For the past two years he has been a Post-Doctorate Fellow with the National Research Council in Ottawa, Canada.

Herbert R. Coursen, Jr., who will be an Instructor in English, is a graduate of Amherst and has his M.A. from Wesleyan. He has taught at the Choate School, Newark Academy, and the University of Connecticut. From 1955 until 1958 he was a first lieutenant in the Air Force, serving as a fighter pilot and a personnel officer.

Kenneth P. Freeman is a graduate of M.I.T. and has his M.A. from Yale, where he is completing the dissertation for his Ph.D. He will be an Instructor in Philosophy.

Roger Howell, Jr. '58 holds bachelor's and master's degrees from St. John's College, Oxford University, England, where he studied from 1958 until 1960 as Bowdoin's most recent Rhodes Scholar. After a year at Johns Hopkins, he returned to Oxford in 1961 and expects to receive his D.Phil. this summer. He will be Assistant Professor of History.

Fredric M. Litto, who expects to receive his Ph.D. from Indiana University this year, is a 1960 graduate of the University of California at Los Angeles. Since then he has been doing graduate work at Indiana. He will become Acting Director of Dramatics and Instructor in English.

John L. McEntaffer will become an Instructor in Economics. A 1961 graduate of Iowa State University, he received his M.A. from Boston College, where he is a candidate for his Ph.D.

David T. O'Donnell, a former captain of the tennis team at the University of Maine, from which he was graduated in 1962, will be an Instructor in Mathematics. He has his M.S. from Rutgers.

Elliott S. Schwartz will become Assistant Professor of Music. He is a graduate of Columbia, from which he also received M.A. and doctor of education degrees. Since 1960 he had taught at the University of Massachusetts. A composer and a pianist, he has also written a book, The Symphonies of Ralph Vaughn Williams, which the University of Massachusetts will publish in September.

Brooks W. Stoddard, who was captain of the skiing team at Williams, from which he was graduated in 1960, will become an Instructor in Art. He has been in France under a Fulbright grant doing research for his Ph.D. thesis, which he is writing for the Institute of Fine Arts at New York University.

Professor Christie

James H. Turner '58 will become Assistant Professor of Physics and teach an experimental course in modern electronics, with emphasis on semi-conductors and solid state physics. Since 1961 he had been a teaching assistant at M.I.T., from which he holds B.S. and M.S. degrees, in addition to his A.B. from Bowdoin. He expects to receive an M.I.T. Ph.D. in September.

Dan Christie New Math Chairman

On June 1 Professor Dan E. Christie '37 succeeded Professor Cecil T. Holmes as Chairman of the Department of Mathematics. A summa cum laude graduate of Bowdoin, he has been a member of the Faculty since 1942. It was his proposal that led to the College's adopting two years ago a unique plan, supported by a grant from the Research Corporation. He suggested that as new appointments to the Math Department are made, it might be preferable to appoint several men with the same research interests rather than attempting to gain a cross-section of the field. Bowdoin would then have as large a group of specialists in a particular branch of mathematics as many universities, and the resulting atmosphere would stimulate intellectual activity.

Bowdoin started this program by appointing two new men, both algebraic specialists, to fill a vacant instructorship. The two instructors thus had time available to initiate research and carry it out. Two additional algebraists have since been appointed.

Independent Study

This summer Professor Christie is directing a program under which three June graduates and two seniors are studying advanced mathematics on the campus. Supported by an $8,400 grant from the National Science Foundation, the program enables gifted students to advance as independent scholars through creative studies under the minimal supervision of faculty members.

Edward Donahue '64 of Caribou is working on the theory of games with applications of economics. Arthur McDonald '64 of Falmouth Foreside is studying fixed point theorems and their applications. William Rounds '64 of Portland is continuing studies begun last year on a combinatorial method for describing recursively enumerable sets.

David Field '65 of Topsham is investigating some topics in complex analysis, and Steven Ingram '65 of Rehoboth, Mass., is continuing a project involving special functions and their uses in mathematical physics.

McDonald was the state singles champion in tennis and shared the doubles title with teammate Steve Hecht '65. Rounds was an outstanding sprinter on the track team, and Ingram will be co-captain of the 1964 football team. He is also a letterman in track.

Fred Putnam Overseer Emeritus

Fred L. Putnam '04 of Houlton has been elected an Overseer Emeritus, following 22 years of service on the Board of Overseers. Still President of Fred L. Putnam, Inc., a potato growing and shipping firm, he served through the years as a member of many committees of the Governing Boards, including the Examining Committee and the Committees on Educational Policy, Physical Education, the Infirmary, Grounds and Buildings, and Development. He was also a member of the building committee for Coleman Hall, constructed in 1958.

German Prize

Fred Putnam '04

by Jasper J. Stahl '09 of Waldoboro and other alumni, the fund will provide income for prizes to be awarded each year to students who in the judgment of the German Department "have profited especially from their instruction" in the language.

This new fund is "a living memorial to those remembered and unremembered men and women from the Valley of the Rhine who in the 18th Century founded the first German settlement in Maine at Broad Bay, which is now Waldoboro." Dr. Stahl is a descendant of one of those original families of German settlers who came to Waldoboro in about 1739. After teaching at Reed College in Oregon for several years and serving in the Navy during World War I, he was for nearly 30 years Director of Studies at The Hill School in Pottstown, Pa. where he was a member of the faculty from 1919 until his retirement in 1947.

The fund is open to additional gifts from alumni and friends of the College.

Hyde-Sills Loan Fund

Fred R. Lord '11 of Augusta has established the William DeWitt Hyde and Kenneth C. M. Sills Loan Fund at the College, in honor of the two men who served Bowdoin as President from 1885 until 1952. The $25,000 fund will be used to make loans, as approved by the President and the Dean of the College, to undergraduates, assistant professors, and instructors.

Mr. Lord is a former Vice President, Treasurer, and General Manager of the Guy Gannett Publishing Company, with which he was associated from 1914 until 1948. He also served as President of the Maine Daily Newspaper Publishers Association and as a member of the Board of Governors of the New England Daily Newspaper Association. He was a Director and Vice President of the First National Granite Bank in Augusta for 13 years and was also a Trustee of the Augusta Savings Bank for four years. From 1944 to 1947 he was a member of Bowdoin's Board of Overseers.

The Hyde-Sills Loan Fund is open to additional contributions from alumni and friends of the College.

Research Fellows

Ten members of the Class of 1965 have been appointed Undergraduate Research Fellows for the coming year. Beginning in September, each Fellow will participate, under the direction of a faculty member, in a research project in which the latter is independently interested. The purpose of the program is to engage the Fellow directly and responsibly in a serious attempt to extend man's knowledge in his field of interest and competence.

Here is the list of Fellows and the subjects of their investigation: John M.

Barnes, New York City, "The Relationship of the Social Sciences to Social Reform, 1890-1930"; Gary C. Brasor, Fairhaven, Mass., "The Theater of the Absurd in France: Its Scope and Meaning"; James E. Hastings, Athol, Mass., "Learning, Retention, and Metamorphosis in Frogs"; Steven K. Ingram, Rehoboth, Mass., "Studies in Differential Geometry"; Donald J. Krogstad, New Hyde Park, N. Y., "The Role of Naphthoquinones, Related to Vitamin K, in the Respiratory System of Corynebacterium diphtheriae."

Also Clayton R. Lewis, Jr., Birmingham, Mich., "Galois Theory and Class Field Theory"; Jonathan C. Raymond, Needham, Mass., "Primary Production in Marine Waters of the Gulf of Maine"; L. Sanders Smith, Short Hills, N. J., "Thermomagnetic Properties of Metals"; Walter E. Trzcienski, Jr., South Deerfield, Mass., "Progressive Metamorphism of Basic Metavolcanics of the Portland-Brunswick Area"; and Michael Waldman, Chelsea, Mass., "The Impact of Reduced Military Expenditures in Maine."

Don Lancaster Scholarship

The Bowdoin chapter of Kappa Sigma Fraternity has established the Donovan D. Lancaster Scholarship at the College with a gift of about $1,000. Mr. Lancaster, a graduate of Bowdoin in 1927, is Director of the Moulton Union and the Centralized Dining Service and has been the Kappa Sigma Alumnus Adviser since 1940.

The scholarship will be awarded each year to an active member of Kappa Sigma who has maintained a high academic average, has shown an interest in sports, and "would best represent those fraternal qualities of leadership, sincerity, and devotion commensurate with those exhibited by the man whom this scholarship honors."

Gannett Loan Fund

The newly established Guy P. Gannett Loan Fund consolidates previous gifts made to Bowdoin by the Guy Gannett Publishing Company through the interest of the late Mr. Gannett, the Company's founder and long-time President, and Fred R. Lord '11 of Augusta, a former Vice President and General Manager of the Company.

A new gift from the Company will bring the Fund's total to more than $18,500. It comes through the interest of Mrs. Jean Gannett Arnzen of Bath, President of the Company and daughter of the man for whom the Fund is named. It will be used for loans to undergraduates, assistant professors, and instructors.

In 1921 Mr. Gannett established and became President of a company which includes five newspapers, in addition to television and radio stations. When he died in 1954, Mrs. Arnzen succeeded him as President.

Bowdoin at the World's Fair

Since May 28 — which was Maine Day in the much-discussed New England Pavilion — recorded music from the Bowdoin Chimes has been a regular feature at the New York World's Fair. Seven days a week for the duration of the Fair, visitors will have a chance to hear the chimes from 11:50 to 12 noon and from 5:50 to 6 p.m. Melodies such as "Rise, Sons of Bowdoin" and "Camptown Races" are being played on non-religious days, while sacred compositions such as "Holy, Holy, Holy" and "Ye Servants of God" are played on Sundays. Doug Woods '64 of Westbury, Long Island, N. Y., played the chimes for the recordings.

Graduate Awards

Bowdoin has awarded graduate scholarships to five June graduates: Bruce Lutsk of Freeport, N. Y., Kenneth Smith of Fairfield, Conn., David Walker of Wiscasset, Steven Weiss of Jenkintown, Pa., and John Welwood of Brookline, Mass.

Lutsk, a mathematics major, received an O'Brien Scholarship. He will study for his M.A. in teaching at Harvard. Smith, who received a Webb Research Scholarship, will begin work for his M.A. in English at the University of Connecticut. He will be remembered as the captain of the College Bowl team. Walker, who is also an English major, will study at New College, Oxford, England, under both a Fulbright grant and the Longfellow Scholarship. Weiss, an economics major, will study at Harvard with the Everett Scholarship, and Welwood, a philosophy major, who received the Howard Scholarship, will work toward his Ph.D. in clinical psychology at the University of Chicago's Department of Human Development.

Alumni Day Folk Singers

Two popular folk-singing attractions — the Brandywine Singers and Carolyn Hester — will appear in the Sargent Gymnasium on Alumni Day, October 17, from 7:30 to 9:30 p.m. Information on tickets will be forthcoming from the Alumni Office.

Placement's 20th Birthday

Earlier this year the Bowdoin Placement Bureau observed its 20th birthday. Throughout the past two decades Samuel A. Ladd, Jr. '29 has been the Bureau's only Director. In his annual report to President Coles, submitted on April 21, Mr. Ladd wrote, in part, as follows: "The 20 years which have passed since the establishment of the Bureau have witnessed changes, improvements, and expansion which would not have been envisaged by those early pioneers in college and university placement. The number of students participating in the counseling and interviewing program has vastly increased, not to mention the expanded number of industrial firms which look to the campus for their potential source of future manpower. Formerly, whereas only the major firms conducted programs on the campus, today literally hundreds of medium-sized or smaller firms from great distances visit Bowdoin and other institutions of learning to interview thousands of students for industries and professions little known even five years ago.

"Few college officials reach a wider public than the Placement Officer, for through the doors of the Bureau each year pass more visitors from business and industry than is the case in any other office. Many of these visitors gain their first impression of Bowdoin and its graduates by Placement Bureau contact. The Bureau is an important aspect in fund raising and admissions. Nearly 50 of the firms which aid the College financially by matching-gift programs and by other grants, as a result of the generosity of Bowdoin men employed by these firms, are regular visitors to the office. Many of these contributing alumni made their first contact with their employer through the office of the Bureau.

"Many of these recruiting business firms have been annual visitors during the entire 20 years of the Bureau's activity, and now each year between 125 and 150 firms visit the Bureau for senior recruiting."

Writing of the Class of 1964, which at the time of the report was in the process of making decisions concerning post-graduation plans, Mr. Ladd said, "As forecast earlier, the offering salaries this year were increased approximately 2% to 3% over last year's figures. The amazing growth and interest in such new fields as programing, the aero-space industries, the continuing need for other science majors in the area of electronics, and the demands for accountants have been in large measure responsible for the salary increase. Insurance and banking continue to look to the liberal arts graduate for potential executives. The increases in these areas caused the liberal arts graduates' offers to rise, narrowing the gap between the offers in the technical and non-technical fields. The average salary offered to our June graduates appears to be near the $6 000 range, with few offers below and with some slightly above this figure."

Mr. Ladd noted that "business and industrial firms each year place less importance on the use of psychological and personality tests for selection. The prevailing opinion seems to be that these tests cannot take the place of a student's full background, home training, academic and campus activity, and the personal interview."

The thrilling experiences of many a Bowdoin man participating in military activities on land and water, north and south, a century ago — make for fascinating reading and deep meditation during these Centenary days, especially for those alumni whose younger days were spent in an atmosphere involving the war recollections of their parents and grandparents. The writer vividly remembers those days when anecdotes concerning veterans' war experiences were quite fresh in the memory of all. Even more acutely, as a Brunswick boy, he recalls the Memorial Days when the G.A.R. unit either marched or rode to the rolling of drums up Maine Street for the day's exercises, the unforgettable picture of aged veterans kneeling at graveside to place flags and flowers in memory of departed comrades; the baked bean suppers served at the close of the day's ceremonies in Veterans Hall on the third floor of the old Town Hall building. Poignant memories, these!

Then, too, he well remembers the colorful Zouave costumes which his father mysteriously made available. These he and his friends donned for "war games." Equipped with an old Civil War musket, which he bought percussion caps for so it would sound real, and an old sword for brandishing in mock combat, he assaulted the rocks of a miniature redoubt, yelling "Zou-Zou-Zou."

The writer recalls the old Chamberlain home, on Maine Street, with the large American flag draped across the entire ceiling of a front room. He often wistfully hoped for an invitation to inspect the room and the whole house. He recalls meeting the General in a rather unceremonious way one mild early spring day on the South Mall — just about opposite where the Delta Sigma House stands today. I was delivering papers that morning and noted this be-whiskered, small man vigorously flaying the flames of a grass fire in an attempt to extinguish them. He called me to join him in the fight, which I gladly did. Unfortunately, I was not old enough to appreciate fully the historical stature of the man, but it was Chamberlain — short, thin, rather irascible, and, odd to say, profane. Together we beat out the flames.

Later that summer, it was my fate — or good fortune — to meet him again. A chum and I had hoped to obtain a job at the sea-shore, so on this particular morning we set out on our bicycles for Simpson's Point. When we arrived, we stopped in the road in front of the Simpson House — and who should issue forth from the driveway but the General. We asked him if he knew where we might find Mrs. Simpson. His terse reply: "Where the hell do you think she is, in the river?" We were so stunned at the outburst that we said nothing and rode off. On that day the General was dapper and alert to a point which belied his years. He must have been at least seventy-five years of age at that time.

When the General passed away in February, 1914, I was a junior at Bowdoin. I clearly remember that cold winter day when the entire undergraduate body participated in the slow and solemn procession from the First Parish Church to Pine Grove Cemetery.

During my early high school days I did many odd jobs, particularly on the Bowdoin campus. One which gave me great pleasure was acting as a page during Commencement. I was usually stationed at the Library, where one of my duties was to wait on members of the Board of Trustees at their annual meeting. I particularly recall the bearded, one-armed General Oliver O. Howard of the Class of 1850. He had a warm smile and a friendly greeting. He invariably stopped to talk with me for a short time before entering the meeting room on the second floor at the westerly end of the building. To me, the contrast between the two generals, Chamberlain and Howard, was quite pronounced and in favor of Howard, probably because of his gentle, kindly disposition. Later, however, when I learned more of their exploits, my heart warmed toward General Chamberlain. General Howard addressed my class at the 1909 Commencement of North Yarmouth Academy.

And so our valorous Bowdoin sons of a century ago simply fade from view. Their brave contributions to the unity of our nation would undoubtedly be modestly disavowed if mentioned in their company. However, during the stress of the times they, like Bowdoin service men of later generations, and they are legion, were confronted with very personal and family problems of moment, solutions to which they could find only by acting in conformity with the high standards of faith, fortitude, and devotion to duty which have been a Bowdoin tradition since its founding.

Alumni Clubs

ALBANY

A spring meeting of Albany-area alumni was held on Thursday, May 7. Jack Hopkins '27 was host for a social hour and dinner at the Fort Orange Club in downtown Albany. Special guests were Alumni Secretary Pete Barnard '50 and Dick Wiley '49, Chairman of the Alumni Council's Committee on Alumni Clubs.

Following dinner, the Alumni Secretary reported informally on current campus happenings and there was a period of questions and answers. Mr. Wiley spoke about some of the purposes and activities for an Alumni Club and suggested several projects which the Albany-area alumni might wish to undertake. He and Mr. Barnard then led an extended discussion of ways and means to increase alumni activity in the area.

The following were chosen officers for 1964-65: President, Lewis Welch '54; Vice President, Clifford Bourgeois '46; Secretary-Treasurer, Edward Born '57; and Alumni Council Member, John Manning '33. (The Secretary's address is 1046 Wendell Avenue, Schenectady.) In addition to the new officers, these Bowdoin men were present at the meeting: Archibald Shorey '05, James Colton '31, Neal Allen '40, Robert Waugh '50, and David Lovell '60.

Plans are being completed for a fall meeting in October and a spring meeting in April.

AROOSTOOK COUNTY

The Aroostook County Bowdoin Club held its spring dinner and ladies' night on Friday, June 5, at the Northland Hotel in Houlton.

Secretary Lee Ludwig '52 reports, "There were more than 30 of us, including our guests from Brunswick, the Don Lancasters '27. Don did a good job, and there was a lively question and answer period following his talk about the College. David Scott '67 gave an interesting report on undergraduate views."

President Phil Christie '36 presided and "made special mention of the election of Fred Putnam '04 as Overseer Emeritus. We were all happy that Mr. Putnam could be with us."

BATH AND BRUNSWICK

The Bowdoin Club of Bath and Brunswick held its annual spring meeting and ladies' night at the Bath Country Club on Wednesday, May 6. More than 70 alumni, wives, and other guests gathered to pay tribute to the guests of honor, Emerson W. Zeitler '20 and Mrs. Zeitler.

Following a social hour and dinner, President Robert S. Stuart '44 introduced Samuel A. Ladd, Jr. '29, who read and presented to Mr. Zeitler a specially framed and printed citation.

Elections were held, with the following men chosen officers for 1964-65: President, George A. Erswell, Jr. '47; Vice President, Leonard C. Mulligan '54; Secretary-Treasurer, Eugene A. Fortin '37; and Council Member, Emerson W. Zeitler '20. Elected Directors for 1964-66 were Norman E. Duggan '44, John C. Caldwell '47, Douglas L. Morton '55, and Elford A. Stover, Jr. '58. Directors Campbell B. Niven '52, Leonard Mulligan, and Bruce H. M. White '22 will complete the second half of their two-year terms in 1964-65.

The Club will hold its fall stag meeting and subfreshman night on Wednesday, October 28, at the College. In keeping with annual custom, subfreshmen and schoolmen from secondary schools in the area will be special guests.

BOSTON

The Bowdoin Club of Boston held its spring dinner meeting and ladies' night at the Lexington Motor Inn on Friday, March 20. Following a social hour and dinner, President John Morrell '52 introduced those at the head table: Mr. and Mrs. Paul Revere '53, Professor Emeritus Warren Catlin, Professor Emeritus and Mrs. Alfred Gross H'52, Professor Emeritus Orren Hormell H'51, Mrs. Morrell, Mr. and Mrs. Robert Forsberg '53, President and Mrs. Coles, and Club Vice President Richard Wiley '49. Professor Gross spoke briefly and movingly to express the appreciation of the Faculty Emeriti in being honored as special guests at the meeting.

President Morrell reviewed the recent activities of the Boston Club, including the Tufts game picnic in the fall, the monthly luncheon meetings, the work of Mr. Wiley's subfreshman committee, and the perennial favorite Pops Concert on May 14.

The following were elected officers for 1964-65: President, Richard Wiley '49; First Vice President, Robert Forsberg '53; Second Vice President, Robert Delaney '55; Secretary, Dean Ridlon '57; Treasurer, Paul Revere '53; Past President, John Morrell '52; and Alumni Council Member, John Lawrence '37.

Mr. Morrell introduced other representatives of the Faculty and Staff: Alumni Secretary Peter Barnard '50, Executive Secretary and Mrs. Wolcott Hokanson, Jr. '50, and News Director and Mrs. Joseph Kamin. Mr. Lawrence gave a report on the work of the Alumni Council.

President Coles spoke briefly and brought greetings from the College. Mr. Morrell then introduced the principal speaker, Overseer Hodding Carter '27, Pulitzer Prize-winning author and editor, who gave a talk about freedom and the lack of freedom in the United States, citing changes in the 22 years since President Roosevelt's Four Freedoms were first outlined. He noted the dangers in the world situation, including both the challenges to freedom and the challenges of freedom. Basing many of his remarks on personal experiences, both at home and abroad, with special reference to race relations in the South, Mr. Carter held his audience's attention for an extremely thought-provoking talk. As a token of its appreciation, the Club presented to him a special Bowdoin chair bearing a brass plate commemorating the date and the occasion.

Incoming President Wiley thanked Mr. Morrell for his devoted work and announced that the Club was presenting a Bowdoin chair to him as retiring president.

BOWDOIN TEACHERS' CLUB

Dean Robert W. Morse '43 of Brown University was the principal speaker at the annual campus meeting of the Bowdoin Teachers' Club on Saturday, April 25. More than 100 alumni, faculty members, and undergraduates attended the all-day session.

The program began with a coffee hour and registration at the Alumni House, after which many of the Bowdoin educators attended Chapel exercises and heard Dr. Hendrik D. Gideonse, Instructor in Education, speak. At the 10:30 general session in Smith Auditorium, Philip S. Wilder '23, Assistant to the President, presided and introduced Dean Morse, who spoke on "The Crisis in the Undergraduate College."

Dean Morse stated that the enormously accelerating expansion of knowledge is undermining traditional concepts of liberal education by disintegrating the undergraduate curriculum and fragmenting the universities and colleges. One of the consequences of the explosion of knowledge has been increased emphasis on specialization within the colleges, he said. "Colleges are encouraging early specialization, honors projects, independent study, acceleration, early master's degrees, and other forms of academic precociousness. The curriculum is now less an instrument of a continuous philosophy of the institution than it is a treaty among departments. The students are being divided up for exploitation in the same way Africa was cut up by the continental powers in the nineteenth century."

He suggested that "the effective half-life of education ought to be at least ten years. That is to say, at least half of what is taught should still be valid and not subject to major modification over a period of 10 years. Clearly, however, if knowledge itself is so dynamic that it changes substantially in a time scale of 10 years, the very basis of education is threatened. I would suggest that in many fields the acceleration of knowledge has now reached this critical point — where the growth rate of knowledge is shorter than the acceptable half-life of education."

"Thus," Dean Morse added, "higher education is presented with a qualitatively new situation, one which cannot be solved by the same old techniques, or by improvisation, or by procrastination. The problem is not going to go away; it can only get worse."

The problems which face education "are not solved by avoiding specialization, for to do this is to deny the intellect of its one certain power. The problem comes not from specialization (which is essential) but from exclusive preoccupation with specialization."

"We are in very bad shape if we produce specialists who are so narrowly trained that they are ignorant of the whole range of human knowledge or, even worse, are contemptuous of anything that does not fit into their single way of looking at things."

It is easy to forget, said Dean Morse, that "education is a uniquely human enterprise. It has a meaning only if it starts and ends in the human situation. We need not panic if knowledge is fragmented and not unified. But we must demand that educated society as a whole have a unified base. And knowledge itself does not provide this."

"The past value of the traditional liberal arts point of view was not so much the peculiar nature of the subject matter as the fact that it provided a common humanistic tradition shared by all educated men. We cannot give up the concern of keeping knowledge within the human fabric, or else we are not involved in education at all."

At luncheon at the Moulton Union Director of Admissions Hubert S. Shaw '36 presided, and President Coles welcomed the group on behalf of the College.

From 2:00 until 3:30 members of the faculty led five informal subject-matter conferences: Professor Herbert R. Brown H'63 (English), Professor Gerald Kamber (languages), Professor Richard L. Chittim '41 (mathematics), Professor Elroy O. LaCasce, Jr. '44 (sciences), and Professor Athern P. Daggett '25 (social studies). The program concluded with a coffee hour at the Alumni House.

On Thursday evening, October 1, Bowdoin teachers in Maine will hold a dinner meeting in Bangor during the annual fall convention of the Maine Teachers' Association. The next campus meeting will be held on Saturday, April 24, 1965.

CAPE COD

A group of about 40 Bowdoin men and wives gathered at the Bourne Mill Restaurant in Buzzards Bay on Monday, May 18, to form the Cape Cod Bowdoin Club. Special guests from the College were Director of Athletics Malcolm E. Morrell '24 and Placement Director Samuel A. Ladd, Jr. '29.

Following a social hour and dinner Mr. Ladd and Richard A. Wiley '49, Chairman of the Alumni Council's Committee on Alumni Clubs, spoke briefly. Mr. Morrell, the principal speaker, brought alumni and guests up to date on current campus news, with special reference to the new gymnasium now under construction.

Plans for future meetings were discussed, and elections were held. The officers for 1964-65 are Brian K. Connor '27, President; T. Hamilton Brodie '52, Vice President; Richard M. Hallet, Jr. '50, Secretary-Treasurer; and Charles E. Hartshorn, Jr. '41, Alumni Council Member.

At its annual meeting on June 12 the Alumni Council formally recognized the Bowdoin Club of Cape Cod and voted to seat its Representative Member, Mr. Hartshorn.

CENTRAL NEW YORK

Fourteen alumni and guests met at the Hotel Syracuse Country House on Friday, May 8. They were Elmer and Alice Cooley '15, Arthur and Ruth Chapman '17, Norman Walker '41, James and Veronica Sturtevant '41, George and Joan Fogg '43, Conrad and Carolyn Peacock '49, Peter Barnard '50, Thomas Chapman '50, and Walter Moulton '58.

Following a pleasant social hour and dinner, retiring President Arthur Chapman presided at a brief business meeting. Treasurer Tom Chapman reported the Club slightly in debt, and there was discussion about ways and means of raising revenue in the future.

The following were chosen officers for 1964-65: President, W. Norman Walker '41; Vice President, Thomas A. Cloutier '26; Secretary-Treasurer, Edward E. Hildreth '18; and Alumni Council Member, Thomas R. Chapman '50. Plans for an August picnic and the fall meeting were discussed.

The College was represented by Alumni Secretary Pete Barnard '50 and Assistant Director of Admissions Walt Moulton '58. The latter described the admissions process and the new freshman class. The Alumni Secretary described recent campus events, and both he and Mr. Moulton answered a number of questions.

CLEVELAND

The Cleveland Bowdoin Club held two meetings during May. On May 1 Coach Charles Butt was the guest speaker at a luncheon at the Midday Club.

On Sunday, May 10, the Bowdoin Bachelors entertained a group of alumni and friends at the home of Ollie Emerson '49. President Cal Vanderbeek '49 reports, "Everyone certainly enjoyed their singing, and the boys themselves were excellent representatives of the College."

CONNECTICUT

Retiring Secretary Welles Standish '51 reports, "The annual meeting of the Bowdoin Club of Connecticut was held on Friday, May 1, at the Grantmoor Restaurant in Newington. Vice President Robert Brownell '49 presided, in the absence of President Ralph Keirstead '26, who could not attend because of illness. Robert Smith '60 was elected Secretary-Treasurer for 1964-66. Continuing in office are President Keirstead, Vice President Brownell, and Alumni Council Member Charles Scoville '52.

"The Connecticut Club is planning to act as host club for the Bowdoin-Wesleyan game alumni gathering on Saturday, October 3.

"To meet rising costs and greater expenses, it was voted to increase annual dues to $5.00 for members who have been out of college for five years or more. Yearly dues were set at $2.00 for those out less than five years.

"Luncheon Chairman Robert Spencer '60 announced that the monthly luncheons have been moved to the University Club in Hartford, where they will be held at 12:30 p.m. on the first Wednesday of each month. There will be no formally organized luncheons in July and August; the program of speakers will be resumed on September 2.

"The meeting was climaxed by our guest speaker, Professor Athern P. Daggett '25, who spoke on 'Continuity and Change Downeast,' an adjustment to the necessities of the times through which we maintain the values of the liberal arts education."

KENNEBEC VALLEY

The Kennebec Valley Bowdoin Club held its spring dinner and ladies' night at the Pioneer House in Augusta on Wednesday evening, April 29. A 6 o'clock social hour was followed by dinner at 7. Special guests from the College were Professor Herbert Brown H'63, Alumni Secretary Peter Barnard '50, News Director Joseph Kamin, and Capital Campaign Field Director Thomas Chadwick.

Following dinner President Philip Bird '51 called upon Treasurer Roger Welch '52, who reported the club solvent. Council Member Raymond Swift '48 outlined some highlights from the midwinter meeting of the Alumni Council. The Alumni Secretary spoke briefly of current campus happenings.

Professor Brown, the principal speaker, delivered an interesting, stirring, and oftentimes humorous talk. Following a side-splitting opening five minutes, in which he rendered his listeners completely helpless with laughter, Professor Brown turned to a more serious analysis of Bowdoin, past and present. He noted that a college changes and, like a small boy, continually outgrows its clothes. The fraternities have never been stronger at Bowdoin, he said.

Professor Brown reported the completion and publication of his biography of President Sills and spoke about the regimes of Hyde and Sills and the faculty which President Sills had gathered and kept at Bowdoin. He also talked about the faculty emeriti. He climaxed his speech with an outline of the presidency of Dr. Coles, including the stimulating new ideas and projects going forward: new programs for hiring mathematics teachers, the Senior Center, a new library, a new gymnasium, and the continual strengthening of fraternities.

Annual elections resulted in the following new officers for 1964-65: President, G. Thomas Macomber '50; Vice President, Roger A. Welch '52; Secretary-Treasurer, Jon A. Lund '51; and Council Member, Philip S. Bird '51.

The Bowdoin Club of Long Island held its spring dinner meeting on April 30 at the Point View Inn, Bayside Drive, Point Lookout. Professor Athern Daggett '25 was the special guest from the College. "We had a fine meeting," President John H. Craig '41 reports, "and Athern Daggett was in great voice."

The current officers were re-elected for 1964-65: President, John Craig; 1st Vice President, Warren F. Millard '20; 2nd Vice President, Daniel L. Dayton, Jr. '49; Secretary, William H. Barney, Jr. '43; Treasurer, James M. Fawcett, III '58; and Council Member, Robert L. Bassinette '44.

The Club presented a special Bowdoin chair with an engraved brass plate to Warren Millard in recognition of his years of outstanding and devoted service to Bowdoin.

Plans are being made for a Long Island Club family picnic on September 12 at the home of Bob Bassinette. Incoming freshmen, upperclassmen, and their parents will be guests.

MERRIMACK VALLEY

Professor Athern P. Daggett '25 was the principal speaker at the spring dinner meeting of the Merrimack Valley Bowdoin Club on Friday, May 22, when alumni and wives gathered at the Groton Inn for cocktails and dinner.

Richard A. Wiley '49, Chairman of the Alumni Council's Committee on Alumni Clubs, spoke about ways alumni can work for the College through local clubs, particularly in subfreshman affairs.

Professor Daggett brought the latest news from the campus in an informal talk entitled "Continuity and Change Downeast."

Plans are being completed for a stag meeting in the fall, to be held on Friday evening, November 13, with local subfreshmen as guests. Coaches Nels Corey '39 and Sid Watson and one of the Admissions Officers will represent the College.

MINNESOTA

Secretary Barney Barton '50 reports a dinner meeting on April 30 at the Minnekahda Country Club. The following alumni were present: Nate Cobb '26, Free Harlow '32, James Scholefield '32, Paul Ivory '37, Chuck Kinsey '40, John Charlton '44, Dave Lavender '55, and the Secretary, George Little '40, a faculty member at the University of Vermont, was a guest.

Philip S. Wilder '23, Assistant to the President, brought the alumni up to date on recent happenings at the College. He paid particular attention to problems of financial aid and also reported on the Morehouse College exchange program.

The Minnesota Club will hold a lobster bake for alumni and wives at Free Harlow's home sometime this summer.

NEW HAMPSHIRE

Twenty-four alumni attended the May 7 meeting of the Bowdoin Club of New Hampshire at the Winnisquam House in Tilton. Following a social hour and dinner, retiring President Bert Moore '48 called the meeting to order.

Norm Milne '54 reported on the mid-winter meeting of the Alumni Council, and Dutch Morse '42 reviewed the 1964 Campus Career Conference.

The following officers were elected for 1964-65: President, Norman Milne '54; Vice President and Council Member, Charles Howard '54; and Secretary-Treasurer, Mayland Morse '42.

Following the business meeting, Coaches Sid Watson, Ray Bicknell, and Charlie Butt spoke informally about Bowdoin athletics and current happenings on the campus.

NEW YORK

More than a dozen young alumni, most of whom are graduate school students in the New York City area, met for one of their informal and irregular luncheons on Friday, May 1, at the Columbia University Men's Faculty Club. The special guest from the College was Professor Athern P. Daggett '25. Alumni wishing to be notified of such meetings are invited to contact the Convener-without-Portfolio, Chris Pyle '61, a student at Columbia Law School.

The Bowdoin Club of New York entertained Professor Herbert R. Brown H'63 at a spring cocktail party on Friday, May 8, on the eve of the publication of his Sills of Bowdoin by the Columbia University Press. Alumni, wives, and other guests gathered at the Yale Club in midtown Manhattan from 5:30 until 8:00.

New York alumni plan to join alumni of other clubs for a meeting in or near Middletown on Saturday, October 3, the day of the Bowdoin-Wesleyan football game. The annual dinner meeting will be held at the Princeton Club on Friday, February 5.

The Bowdoin Club of Northern New Jersey held its spring dinner meeting at the Hotel Suburban in East Orange on Wednesday evening, May 6. Alumni Secretary Pete Barnard '50 was the special guest from the College.

Following a social hour and dinner, President Pete Grant '48 led an extended discussion about local club problems and possible solutions. A positive program that will include more advance planning and greater efforts for increased membership and attendance is being launched. Elections resulted in the following officers for 1964-65: President, Arthur Hamblen '48; Secretary-Treasurer, George Bacon '15; and Alumni Council Member, Peter Grant '48. The officers anticipate appointing Program and Prospective Students Committees in the near future.

Bob Porter '34, Member at Large of the Alumni Council, reported on the Council's recent activities and the midwinter meeting. The Alumni Secretary gave an informal report on the latest campus happenings, and the evening was marked by plenty of informal discussion.

The following alumni were present: Ernest Fifield '11, Ed Skelton '11, George Bacon '15, Carl Kuebler '17, Frank Ormerod '21, Stewart Mead '33, Robert Porter '34, Dick Sullivan '40, Donald Cross '43, Pete Grant '48, Art Hamblen '48, Ray Petterson '53, Bert Barton '56, and Pete Barnard '50.

PENOBSCOT COUNTY

More than 50 alumni, wives, and guests attended the spring dinner meeting of the Penobscot County Bowdoin Club on Thursday evening, May 21, at the Tarratine Club in Bangor.

Treasurer Lewis Vafiades '42 reported a successful Bowdoin Glee Club concert in Bangor, which netted the Club a profit of more than $200.

President John Conti '52 said that his term of office had been enjoyable and pointed to a successful fall meeting, a good prospective students meeting in December, the Glee Club concert, and the present ladies' night meeting.

Council Member Malcolm Stevenson '50 delivered a brief report, outlining several recent Alumni Council projects.

Chairman Fred Newman '38 reported for the Nominating Committee, and the following were elected for 1964-65: President, Lewis Vafiades '42; Vice President, Lloyd Willey '56; Secretary-Treasurer, Thomas Needham '57; and Alumni Council Member, Philip Tukey '39.

The first of the three guest speakers, Alumni Secretary Pete Barnard '50, spoke of fraternities, admissions, and recent alumni activities at the campus.

Jim Willey '66, a native of Bangor, gave a lively undergraduate impression of current campus topics, including the Senior Center, the new gymnasium, plans for the new library, the Honor System, and the much-debated proposed changes in social rules.

The principal speaker was Donovan D. Lancaster '27, Director of the Moulton Union and long a member of the Bowdoin Faculty. "Don presented a most inspiring talk," Mr. Vafiades reports. "Many Bowdoin men present were pleased to hear of Don's attachment to this area and of his being born in LaGrange and attending Milo High School.

We enjoyed the story of his first trip to Brunswick, by the Boston Boat to Rockland and thence overland by train.

"Don told of the increased pace at Bowdoin and described the dynamic new activities and programs. He spoke of the relationship between the fraternities and the Senior Center and of the prospects of the new library. He presented a vivid picture of the Moulton Union and plans for its expansion and improved facilities."

Mr. Conti presented the gavel to incoming President Vafiades, who adjourned the meeting at 9:45. A number of alumni and guests lingered, however, for an extended period of informal conversation.

PHILADELPHIA

The Bowdoin Club of Philadelphia held its annual spring dinner and ladies' night on May 20. Assistant Director of Admissions Walt Moulton '58 spoke on Bowdoin admissions policies and also outlined the progress of the new Senior Center.

The Philadelphia Club will hold its annual dinner and ladies' night on February 6, 1965, when President Coles will represent the College, and will sponsor a Glee Club concert in late March. Plans are being completed for a fall ladies' night on September 23 and a subfreshman meeting on November 19.

PORTLAND

On Saturday, April 18, the Bowdoin Club of Portland sponsored a highly successful dinner dance. A number of private Bowdoin cocktail parties in the homes of Portland-area alumni were followed by a social hour, dinner, and dancing in the ballroom of the Eastland Motor Hotel.

Retiring President Peter Bramhall '56 introduced President Coles, who brought greetings from the College. Elections resulted in the following new officers for 1964-65: President, H. Davison Osgood '53; First Vice President, Richard M. Boyd '33; Second Vice President, John A. Mitchell '50; Secretary-Treasurer, Charles A. Hildreth, Jr. '53; Assistant Secretary-Treasurer, Alden H. Sawyer, Jr. '53; and Council Member, Peter T. C. Bramhall '56. Charles Ranlett '54 is the new Luncheon Chairman, and the Directors for the year are Herbert H. Bennett '50, Eugene A. Waters '59, Albert E. Gibbons, Jr. '58, Charles Ranlett '54, Roland H. Cobb '17, L. Robert Porteous, Jr. '46, Warren D. Eddy '14, Dr. Stephen E. Monaghan '48, and Charles F. Kahill '34.

The Club continues its program of luncheon meetings on the first Wednesday of each month at the Cumberland Club. Guest speakers during the spring semester were Art Professor Thomas Cornell (February 5), German Teaching Fellows Daniel Neradt and Winfried Fahl (March 4), Placement Director Samuel Ladd, Jr. '29 (April 1), Biology Professor James Moulton (May 6), and Grounds and Buildings Superintendent John Brush (June 3). Speakers for the coming months include Moulton Union Director Donovan Lancaster '27, Trustee Sanford Cousins '20, Physics Professor Noel Little '17, and Psychology Professor Alfred Fuchs.

ST. LOUIS

The Bowdoin Club of St. Louis held an informal meeting on April 28 at the home of the Convener, Steve Rule '58. Professor Louis Coxe, the special guest from the College, brought the group up to date on Bowdoin happenings.

In addition to three area subfreshmen, the following alumni attended the meeting: Joe Taylor '20, Ed O'Neill '38, Ben Greely '53, Jack Handy '53, Dave Fischer '60, and the Convener.

SPRINGFIELD

The Bowdoin Club of Springfield held its annual spring dinner meeting at the Wiggins Tavern in Northampton on Thursday, May 7, with 31 alumni and guests, including former Bowdoin faculty members Jeffrey Carre '40 and Carl Schmalz, present.

The Club voted to continue the present slate of officers for 1964-65: President, Edwin Sample '49; Vice President, Paul Doherty '56; Secretary, Theodore Chambers '53; Treasurer, Charles Bergeron, Jr. '53; Council Member, Lawrence Dwight '54; and Hospitality Chairman, Sherman Fein '49.

The special guest, Professor William Whiteside, reported on the Senior Center Program, the recent Civil Rights speakers at the College, and other items of interest. A question and answer period followed.

The Club will hold its fall meeting on Thursday, November 19, when News Director Joseph Kamin will be the speaker. It will also sponsor a Glee Club concert on March 26, 1965.

WASHINGTON

The Club continues to enjoy monthly luncheon meetings on the first Tuesday of each month. Shortly before he moved from the area and completed his duties as Club Secretary, Bill Grove '54 reported: "A record 22 alumni turned out for our January 7 luncheon at the Supreme Court! The meeting was highlighted by a visit to the chambers of Retired Justice Harold Burton '09, who personally greeted each of his 22 callers and told us some amusing anecdotes about his days on the Court. Ed Hudon '37, who was our host and guide, then led the group to the courtroom to see and hear the Court in session. It was quite a memorable luncheon!"

On April 15 at the Touchdown Club seventy-five alumni and wives and Professors Korgen, Jeppesen, and Walker and their wives attended a dinner in honor of President Coles. Executive Secretary Wolcott Hokanson, Jr. '50 was also a guest.

Secretary Jay Carson '53 writes: "The alumni enjoyed a most informative report on the state of the College from the President and a showing of slides depicting various views of the College presented by Dave Webster '57.

"The following were elected officers for 1964-65: President, David M. Marsh '51; Vice President, Prescott H. Pardoe '51; Secretary, Jay A. Carson '53; Treasurer, Peter S. Smith '60; and Alumni Council Representative, Edwin F. Stetson '41. New Executive Committee Members are Christopher Toole '08, Robert Hale '10, Horace C. Buxton '37, Vincent B. Welch '38, Robert L. McCarty '41, Edwin F. Stetson '41, Rufus E. Stetson '42, Raymond A. Jensen '48, and the four officers.

"Retiring President Ed Stetson reported a record-breaking year for the Washington Bowdoin Club with respect to attendance at a variety of functions, including a cocktail-buffet with Professor Whiteside, a sports night and football movies with Coach Corey, monthly luncheons, and a projected May lobster cook-out with invited guests, including guidance counselors from local schools and Bowdoin subfreshmen and their parents.

"The Washington Club's traditional ivory polar bear was awarded to Ed Stetson at the conclusion of the meeting."

WESTERN MAINE

On Thursday evening, May 18, the Bowdoin Club of Western Maine met at the Christie Vail Lodge in Rangeley. Fourteen alumni gathered for a 6:30 social hour, followed by dinner at 8 o'clock. President Joseph Holman '47 presided at a brief business meeting; Dave Burnell '50 presented a Secretary-Treasurer's report; and the group voted annual dues of $1.00 per member. Those present agreed that it is a fine idea to meet several times a year, and they will work for increased attendance.

Reed Ellis '09 of Rangeley, who used to own the Christie Vail Lodge when it was the Rangeley Inn, spoke briefly about the history of the building and the town and also reported on the activities of his two Bowdoin sons. Secretary of the Alumni Fund Bob Cross '45 and Director of News Services Joe Kamin covered the news from the College, and at about 10:30 the meeting turned into an informal discussion, which continued until 11 o'clock.

WORCESTER

The Bowdoin Club of Worcester held its annual spring dinner meeting and ladies' night on May 19 at the Worcester Club. The following were elected officers for 1964-66: President and Council Member, Dr. Chester W. Brown '35; Vice President, Dr. Harold W. Stuart, Jr. '52; and Secretary-Treasurer, Cloyd E. Small '20. The Directors for the next two years are Paul Sibley '25, Scott Sargent '55, William W. Mason '61, Dr. Wilfred T. Small '43, and Herbert S. French, Jr. '46.

Professor Dodge Fernald, the special guest speaker from the College, talked about his work in the Psychology Department. Retiring Club President French reports, "Dodge Fernald lived up to the advance billing you gave him. I would find it difficult to give you a summary of that part of his talk which described his flatworm research project, but I can assure you that it was both entertaining and amusing."

News Of The Classes

1877 Early in May the late Admiral Robert Peary's daughter and son, Mrs. Marie Peary Stafford H'49 and Robert E. Classmates and friends extend their sympathy to Sturgis Leavitt, whose wife, Olga, died on March 22.

In May Sturgis was in Washington to visit the U. S. State Department. He plans to go to Spain in August.

George and Lib Pullen are visiting friends in Guatemala City in July.

Phil Timberlake is one of the world's leading authorities on the classification of wild bees. Every year he receives, for identification, 5,000 to 10,000 specimens of bees from insect experts in the western United States and Mexico.

Phil retired officially in 1950, but he still works a five-day week at his office at the University of California in Riverside. He keeps adding to his collection of about 100,000 bees occupying 140 drawers in seven-foot stacks taking up most of the room. Phil and Edith live at 5438 Grand Avenue, Riverside. They have 12 grandchildren.

Class Secretary Chris Toole reports that early in May Sturgis Leavitt was in Washington for a few days and that they had lunch together.

Waldoboro

This Alumni Note has to do with a single classmate.

Back in college days the men of 1909 all knew Earle Richardson, but there were few of us, indeed, who knew him in his later and last years. Yet these were the most noteworthy years of his life.

On a Sunday afternoon, May 17, the C. Earle Richardson Memorial Wing of the Parkview Hospital was dedicated in Brunswick. This was the last act in a long series of public benefactions by Dr. Richardson in his later years. His was a life which gave of himself and the greater part of his earthly substance to the welfare of the community in which he lived and served.

Dr. Richardson's major interests were four: skilled medical concern and care to all who sought his help; Brunswick's hospitals and medical facilities; St. Paul's Episcopal Church; and Bowdoin College.

The doctor moved to Brunswick in 1926 and there established "Brunswick's very first hospital" through his purchase of one-half of the house at Union and Cumberland Streets. Four years later he purchased the other half of this two and one-half story frame structure. This was the first community hospital. His interest and support continued for the expanding medical facilities of the town, in consequence of which the Regional Hospital dedicated one of its surgical suites in his honor and the surgical suite at Parkview Memorial bears his name

With his medical went a religious interest. He was an active and devoted member of St. Paul's parish. In 1961 he had built a two-story addition to the parish buildings, which is used for a rector's office and church school rooms. On his death Earle bequeathed his own residence on Lincoln Street to the church to be used as a rectory.

The bulk of his estate was left in equal shares to St. Paul's Church, the hospitals, and Bowdoin College. The College's share was used to set up the C. Earle Richardson and Ethel M. Richardson Scholarships, supported by the doctor's $85,000 bequest, and to be administered preferably in the interest of Maine students.

Of Doctor Richardson it may be truly said that the great purpose of his life was to spend it for something which would outlast it, for here was a man who made mankind his sole beneficiary. The words we utter may be forgotten, recalled, or revised, but the deeds we do are ir retrievable. Wherever the men of 1909 shall read these words we are sure they will unite as a class in a silent tribute to Dr. Richardson.

Mr. Justice Burton Honored

The Cleveland Men's Club of Washington, D. C., honored Harold H. Burton '09 on April 22 for his "devoted service to . . . Community, State, and Nation. . . . We are fortunate that the beloved Mrs. Selma Burton and you . . . chose to make Cleveland your home. . . . your leadership as . . . Mayor and Senator made Cleveland a better place to live. . . . We are . . . proud that the President . . . nominated you as a Justice of the Supreme Court of the United States. Although you seek not public acclaim or favor, you have . . . won national renown, and . . . a hold on the admiration and affection, not only of your learned colleagues, but of all who pass your way. . . ."

In presenting the Award, Chief Justice Earl Warren said, "I am not a Clevelander, but I would be greatly honored to be one because it is the home of Harold and Selma Burton. We on the Supreme Court know of no finer people."

President Lyndon Johnson wrote, "As mayor, as legislator, and as Justice of the Supreme Court, you have brought honor and distinction to your country. . . . Your selfless and dedicated public service has earned you the affection of all American citizens. . . . I welcome the occasion to pay tribute to your outstanding contribution . . . to a better America."

Former Associate Justice Felix Frankfurter wrote, ". . . no member of the Supreme Court deserves admiration more than you for exercising with exquisite and unqualified fidelity the judicial power entrusted to members of the Court. . . ."

"You were a judge in all that the term implies. . . ."

"What I have said I would be writing if I were writing a formal history of the Court."

great Bowdoin President, William DeWitt Hyde, and his philosophy."

Mrs. Arthur Merrill has written to the Secretary: "To report on Arthur's children and grandchildren — four children and 13 grandchildren. Not any 'greats' yet, although two of the grandchildren are married. My daughter, Mrs. Alice Merrill Bickford, died February 11, 1963."

Mrs. Leo Pratt wrote the Secretary in May that she still retains her apartment in Saco, although she stays a great part of her time at her mother's home in Brewer. Her son, Leo, Jr., has an insurance agency in Farmington, and her grandson John is a sophomore at the University of Maine. Her granddaughter Linda is in her second year at the high school.

Mrs. Prentiss Shepherd has reported the following: her son, Prentiss, and his wife have two children, a son and a daughter. He is living in Nashua, N. As a member of the American Institute of Real Estate Appraisers, Herb Foster finds that "the demand for services after one reaches the age of 70 increases to the point where one works seven days a week instead of five."

In April Larry Irving wrote from College, Alaska, "There was no damage from the earthquake here, but along the shore it was a terrible disaster to property and lives."

"The people appear to be responding hopefully in vigorous and orderly fashion. It is early yet to estimate the course of reconstruction, but there are expressed many brave intentions for improvement. The effect on the economy of the State will be severe, with half of its productivity a shambles. It can be hoped and perhaps believed that the brave spirit with which people face such a disaster is of great importance and may even overcome the setback."

1917 Secretary, Noel C. Little
60 Federal Street
Brunswick

Rogers Crehore, who started tree planting at his place in Harwich Port, Mass., in 1959, with 40 Japanese Black Pines, now admits that these thriving trees and an additional 40 Blue and Black Spruce are actually part of the Stamp Out Lawns Movement. Rog believes that the trees will before long eliminate most of his lawn — and lawn mowing.

Dr. Harry Mason and his wife, Gertrude, have five sons, Harry E., Jr., Donald, James, John, and William. A physician in Redwood City, Calif., for many years, Harry is described in The Staffscope (published by the Sequoia Hospital) for May, 1964, in these words: ". . . the town adopted him as friend, protector, advisor, and physician. He often received calls in the middle of the night to settle arguments, give advice, mend a broken body or spirit, and often gave encouragement far beyond the range of mere medicine."

"In recent months Dr. Mason has undergone two major surgeries but has bounced back each time with much energy and vigor. He is far too busy caring for his patients to be tied to a bed for any length of time. We hope the Grand Man will continue to walk our corridors for many years to come. His almost daily visits make this hospital a more cheerful place in which to work."

1918 Secretary, Lloyd O. Coulter
Nottingham Square Road
Epping, N. H.

Bob Albion will be University Professor at the University of Connecticut during the fall semester.

Brooks Tibbetts, a retired Metropolitan Life Insurance Company real estate attorney, is now living in Pemaquid Harbor. In May he was admitted to the Maine Bar and is practicing law from his home.

On May 6 the Bowdoin Club of Brunswick and Bath honored Emerson Zeitler for his many years of devoted service to Bowdoin, Brunswick, Zeta Psi Fraternity, the Class of 1920, and his fellow man. Zeit and Sarah were guests of honor, and he received a framed citation.

Zeit reports the arrival of another grandson, Adam Beecher Strang, on May 28. The parents are Sam and Libby Strang '51.

247 South Street
Reading, Mass.

On May 1 Al Blodgett retired from his position as a research chemist after more than 40 years of service with Swift and Company. On April 23 more than 85 people attended a testimonial dinner in his honor. Al reports that both of his sisters were present. During the weeks following his retirement he has been setting up his lapidary shop — a new hobby, to go with his photography hobby.

Al wrote late in April, "Expect to visit New York the latter part of June, with my brother, Phil '30, and his wife, but probably won't get up to Maine, at least not very far." His address continues to be 1704 West 100th Street, Chicago 43, Ill.

In May Paul Eames wrote, "Betty and I want to go to Japan again, for we thoroughly enjoyed our visit there two years ago. Don't know just when we'll make it, for there are so many interesting places to see. This spring we were in Australia, New Zealand, Tahiti, Fiji, and some of the other Pacific islands." Paul's address is 1143 Ford Lane, Dunedin, Fla.

In April Les Gibson reported, "No news — still working and not thinking of retiring, yet." His address is R.F.D., West Paris.

On August 1 Hugh Nixon will retire as Executive Secretary of the Massachusetts Teachers Association, after serving in that position since September 1, 1930. During most of that time he was also Editor of The Massachusetts Teacher.

Hugh writes, "I intend to stay in Melrose and find some interesting part-time activity as well as to indulge myself in some pleasures that my previous responsibilities have prevented."

In May Ken Smiley wrote, "My address after May 8 will be 145 Aurora Street, Apartment C, Bethlehem, Pa. I have been 'grounded' for a time, but am better now."

On July 1 Ken retired as Vice President of Lehigh University in Bethlehem, Pa. He was one of the men honored at Lehigh's annual faculty dinner on May 19, when he received an engraved silver tray.

Ken had been Vice President at Lehigh since 1945 and had been on leave of absence since February of 1962. In addition, he was Secretary to the Board of Trustees for ten years, beginning in 1952.

EDWIN HOWARD ALLEN '85

Dr. Edwin H. Allen died on May 23, 1964, in Boston. Born on April 16, 1864, in Alfred, he prepared for college at the local high school and attended Bowdoin for two years before transferring to Dartmouth, from which he received his A.B. degree in 1885. Four years later he was graduated from Harvard Medical School and then spent several months as private secretary to Speaker of the House Thomas B. Reed of the Class of 1860 in Washington, D. C. From 1890 until his retirement in 1939 he was associated with the John Hancock Mutual Life Insurance Company, of which he was Medical Director for 15 years.

During the past winter Dr. Allen wrote an interesting autobiographical sketch for the Harvard Medical School alumni magazine, in which he described how he and seven classmates transferred to Dartmouth as a result of disciplinary action following the shaving off of a freshman's mustache.

Dr. Allen is survived by a son, Nathaniel D. W. Allen of Boston. He was a member of Psi Upsilon Fraternity at Bowdoin and was elected to Phi Beta Kappa at Dartmouth.

ROBERT SEAVER EDWARDS '00

Robert S. Edwards, a retired consulting chemical engineer, died in Milton, Mass., on June 5, 1964. Born on January 27, 1877, in Chicago, Ill., he prepared for college at Phillips Andover Academy in Massachusetts and entered Bowdoin as a member of the sophomore class. Following his graduation in 1900, he attended Massachusetts Institute of Technology for two years, was a chemist with the Rockland-Rockport Lime Company for three years, and then became a consulting chemist in Boston, specializing in the testing of building materials, lime and lime rock, coals, hydrated lime, and cement. From 1910 until 1917 he was a consulting engineer with the Portland Railway, Light, and Power Company in Oregon and was in charge of the concrete construction of hydro-electric plants, dams, and so forth.

For nearly twenty years, beginning in about 1920, Mr. Edwards was a development engineer with the Rumford Chemical Works in Providence, R. I. From 1939 until his retirement some years ago he was a consulting chemical engineer for various concerns. A member of the American Institute of Chemical Engineers, the American Society for Testing Materials, and the Massachusetts Society of the Cincinnati, he was an original member of the Oregon Society of Engineers. He was the author of several articles on the processes of manufacture of lime and cement.

Always devoted to Bowdoin, Mr. Edwards was for many years 1900's Class Agent in the Alumni Fund and also its Class Secretary. He is survived by his wife, Mrs. Teresa Pastene Edwards, whom he married in Boston on September 8, 1913; two daughters, Miss Esther P. Edwards of Milton, Mass., and Mrs. Jean E. Ludtke of Amherst, Mass.; a son, Charles P. Edwards '41 of Tunis, Tunisia; eight grandchildren; and a sister, Miss Edith A. Edwards of Los Angeles, Calif. His fraternity was Alpha Delta Phi.

In Memory of Bob Edwards '00

The Robert Seaver Edwards Scholarship Fund and the Robert Seaver Edwards Alumni Fund Trophy have been established at Bowdoin in memory of Bob Edwards '00, who died last June 5 at the age of 87.

The new scholarship fund is a completely unrestricted one, with the income to be awarded annually to some deserving student. The Fund Trophy will be awarded each year to that one of the ten most recent graduating classes which achieves the best dollar performance in the Alumni Fund, figured on the basis of the highest percentage of dollar quota attained. The Class Agent of the winning class will receive a replica of the Trophy, to be presented at the Alumni Fund-Alumni Council Campus Conference each fall.

This dual memorial — in the thoughts of alumni and those of undergraduates — is most appropriate because Bob Edwards was always youthful in his outlook and his enthusiasm. I remember the first time I heard his voice. It was in May of 1960, when he telephoned me about the ALUMNUS. The next day I wrote to him as follows: "I am sorry that I was so dense when you called. Your voice sounded much too vigorous for the Bob Edwards who is a member of the 60-year class, but at the same time it did not sound at all like the other Bowdoin Bob Edwards with whom I correspond and who was in college with me."

Mr. Edwards served Bowdoin faithfully and well. He had been Secretary of the Class of 1900 for more than fifteen years, and he was an Alumni Fund Class Agent from 1939 until 1950. As an undergraduate he was a member of the Crown and Coffin Society, was captain of both the varsity track team and the class athletic team in his senior year, and held several New England and Maine records in the 220 yard low hurdles. He was a member of the Ivy Day Committee, delivered the Response on Ivy Day, and was a member of the Chapel Choir, the Mandolin Club, and the Politics Club.

It is not telling a family secret, I am sure, to say that only a small number of the class notes which appear in the ALUMNUS each issue are written by the Class Secretaries. However, 1900's Secretary was one of the exceptions, since he kept in touch with his classmates and submitted material for each issue of the magazine. Upon several occasions these notes would arrive at the Alumni Office in an envelope with a special delivery stamp on it, as the deadline for copy was close upon us.

These, then, are a few of the reasons why it is fitting for there to be at Bowdoin a Robert Seaver Edwards Alumni Fund Trophy and a Robert Seaver Edwards Scholarship Fund. Through the years they will remind us of Bob's frequent Commencement-time visits at the Alumni Office, usually in company with the late Bob Chapman '00. His infectious cheerfulness made this busy period of the year seem somehow less hectic.

Capital Campaign Reaches Goal

On August 20 President Coles announced that the Capital Campaign had exceeded its original $10 million goal with a $250,000 grant from the James Foundation of New York, which in November of 1963 had awarded Bowdoin $50,000 toward the cost of constructing the Senior Center.

This $250,000 helped bring the Campaign total to $10,135,848 and sparked an effort to broaden alumni participation. The official closing date for the drive continues to be Alumni Day, October 17, as previously announced.

A second reason for continuing active solicitation until Alumni Day was expressed as follows by President Coles in a message to all alumni on September 1: "... in reviewing the several projects to be financed by the Campaign, the Committee had to recognize that the decision to build a new gymnasium rather than a smaller addition to the old one, the decision to move ahead now with the enlargement and improvement of the Moulton Union so that it might more effectively fulfill its functions for both students and alumni, and the decision to proceed with other projects despite justifiable and unavoidable increases in construction costs have together added more than $1 million to the construction budget set up in 1961 when the original goal was being set. The validity of these decisions requires the Campaign Committee to utilize every moment between now and Alumni Day to make up these increased costs."

Another important gift received during the summer was $50,000 from the George F. Baker Trust of New York, to establish the George F. Baker Scholarships. Under the terms of the grant, awards will be made annually for three years, starting in the fall of 1965, to three or four young men "of the highest overall promise." The specific amounts to be awarded are flexible, depending upon the need of the individual, and the awards will be renewable throughout the recipients' Bowdoin careers, subject to continued need and effective performance.

The Baker Trust program is aimed at early identification and encouragement of able young men who give promise of leadership and capacity for growth and development through the experience of liberal studies, from which their lack of finances might otherwise bar them.

As can be seen on the facing page, construction is moving ahead rapidly on four projects. The new library building, being constructed at a cost of $2.5 million, is expected to be completed by next September, as is the new Gymnasium, which will cost $1.4 million. Winthrop Hall, being renovated at a cost of $500,000, should be ready for occupancy in February, when work will begin on Maine Hall. A $500,000 addition to the Moulton Union is designed to be ready for the opening of college in the fall of 1965, along with the gymnasium and the library.

Speaking before the Brunswick Rotary Club on September 28, Executive Secretary Wolcott A. Hokanson, Jr. '50 said, "In a week or so, technicians will begin the installation of the equipment for a $100,000 computing center, which will include a Model 1610 IBM computer. This will be used in the instruction program and for research by both students and faculty. It will also be used for some administrative functions.

"Temporarily the computer will be located in the Searles Science Building, which houses the Physics and Biology Departments. When the new library is completed, the renovation of the present library will begin and the computing center will be moved there.

"Renovation of the present library building is the only one of the projects included in the program set forth two years ago which has not yet been actually begun. There is more construction going on at the campus right now than during any other single period in Bowdoin's long history. This year will be a particularly busy one in this respect, but everything is to be completed by this time next year, and we can get back to normal all at once.

"Our plans as set forth two years ago provided also for a means of financing the various projects. We set out upon a fund raising effort with a goal of $10 million, the great bulk of which, for a college like Bowdoin, would have to come from alumni and friends, with some help to be expected from foundations and business organizations. This was $2 million more than the maximum which our professional counsel thought we could reasonably raise, but, based on cost estimate at that time, the full ten million was essential to bring the program into existence most effectively — so we decided to aim for it.

"Last month we passed the $10 million mark, and as of this morning the figure is $10,175,000. And of this amount alumni have contributed $8.6 million. The Campaign continues until Alumni Day, October 17, when active solicitation will come to an end. It is fortunate that we still have a little time, for costs have risen substantially since original estimates were made."

These facilities and the Senior Center, all made possible by the contributions of alumni and friends to the Capital Campaign, will support a strengthened and more comprehensive educational program for Bowdoin's students in the years ahead. Alumni and members of their families returning to Brunswick for Alumni Weekend, October 16-18, will have a fine opportunity to tour the Senior Center, to see at first hand what is being accomplished, and to sense the vitality of the College as it adapts its program to carry out its responsibilities most effectively in the modern world.

The renovation of Winthrop Hall.

A Letter to Henry Wadsworth Longfellow

Bowdoin College
Brunswick, Maine
September 20, 1964

Dear Mr. Longfellow,

There are a few changes taking place in Winthrop Hall, where you used to room when you were an undergraduate at Bowdoin.

First of all, your room is missing.

There is a marker outside the building indicating the third-story window of your room, but the floor you used to walk on isn't there. As a matter of fact, all the floors in Winthrop Hall have been ripped out.

For the third time in its history Winthrop is being remodeled, sir, but for the first time the job will be complete. Everything inside has been removed, so the building right now is just a gutted cavern.

An old friend of yours still loiters inside, though. Remember the fireplace that was the only source of heat those two years you lived there? The plaster that was over that fireplace in later years has been torn away, and it is visible once again, along with 31 others — gaping holes in a sturdy old fort.

Of course, the mortar in the brickwork has decayed, and the bricks blackened from your fire have grown soft, so all the fireplaces will have to be filled in for safety and added strength. Do you remember how you students used to dicker with Billy Mitchell for your firewood? Eventually old Billy would give in a little on his price, and if he wasn't too busy, he might help you carry your purchase from his woodsled to the wood box in your room.

Workmen of the George A. Fuller Company of Boston will begin rebuilding the inside of Winthrop soon, and a modern heating system will be installed. Imagine it! The students who will live there will have heat automatically regulated for them — what remarkable changes time has wrought.

If you should wander along the paths of Bowdoin after Winthrop is rebuilt, the old familiar architecture of Samuel Melcher, who designed the building in 1822 — shortly before you came to live there — would still be apparent. The small-paned windows you used to know will be restored, and the outside of the building will look much the same as when you knew it as New College — twenty years before it was named for Governor John Winthrop of Massachusetts.

The architect in charge of remodeling Winthrop, Hugh Stubbins and Associates of Cambridge, Mass., will keep Melcher's basic design for the inside, too, and you would probably still be able to find Room No. 27 without much trouble.

The $500,000 needed for the renovation is coming from the Capital Campaign, which your fellow alumni supported with enthusiasm. Because they did, a renovation committee could be formed and the work begun. Sanford B. Cousins, of the class 95 years after your own, is the Chairman, assisted by Widgery Thomas '22 of Yarmouth, Edward Humphrey '17 of Newton Highlands, Mass., Paul Sibley '25 of Worcester, Mass., Gerald W. Blakeley, Jr. '43 of Cambridge, Mass., and John F. Brush, Superintendent of Grounds and Buildings.

Winthrop deserves to be rebuilt. After all, some 8,000 students have followed you through its halls. Great men and lesser have been sheltered there, among them lawyers, farmers, ministers, judges, doctors, statesmen.

But no matter who else lives there, and no matter what other changes time brings to Winthrop Hall, it will always be remembered as the place that once was "home" for Henry Wadsworth Longfellow.

With you always in thought,
The Spirit of Bowdoin College

"I Was Born In Alfred, York County, Maine April 16, 1864"

by Dr. Edwin H. Allen '85

Excerpts from the autobiography of Dr. Edwin Howard Allen, Class of 1885. By the time of his one hundredth birthday on April 16, 1964, he had become the oldest Bowdoin, Dartmouth, and Harvard Medical School alumnus in the world and the only one in the history of the Harvard Medical School to reach the age of one hundred. With a clear mind and in relatively good health he thoroughly enjoyed his one hundredth birthday and the tributes which it brought. Unfortunately he succumbed after a brief illness to bronchial pneumonia on May 23, 1964.

I WAS BORN IN ALFRED, York County, Maine, April 16, 1864, the fourth and last child of the Honorable Amos Lawrence Allen and Esther Maddox Allen.

Alfred, the shiretown, was settled in 1763, and in 1864 its population was about 1,200. The county courthouse was built in 1800; a few years later the academy, the first in the state, which prepared students to enter Bowdoin, the only college in the state at this time. Alfred was on the stage coach route between Portland and Boston — it was about 30 miles to Portland and about 100 to Boston. In 1860 there were four hotels, and when court was in session or on days of the county conventions, the hotels were filled and it was a busy town. In addition, there were five churches and three mills — a saw mill, a grist mill, and a woolen mill. There were always two physicians, who were often very busy, as there were no physicians nearer than Springvale, five miles away. In 1864 stage coaches were still running. By 1870 the Portland & Rochester railroad was in operation, and, of course, the telegraph followed the railroad. At this time in Alfred there was no poor farm and the town had no debt. The town was made up of four villages, one of which, known as Shaker Village, included about 100 members of the Shaker Society.

Such was the peaceful scene presented by Alfred at a time when oxen were plentiful and when, in fact, I recall some 50 yoke of them were used to move a substantial structure; when Christmas was mainly a religious holiday and there was no decorating of Christmas trees; and when outside entertainment consisted in listening to one or two visiting clergymen a year. What a contrast in the span of one lifetime to sit now in front of television and watch the launching of a manned rocket into space!

I entered the primary school in Alfred in 1868 when four years old, and I distinctly recall my first punishment. For laughing aloud the teacher stood me behind the door, where, being sleepy, I sat down on the floor and fell asleep. In 1871 I entered the grammar school and during the entire year was neither absent nor late. As a result I received a certificate which I still cherish, which also states my deportment had been perfect and adds in scroll, "A good name is rather to be chosen than great riches." I entered the high school in the fall of 1874 as the youngest pupil. At home I heard my father almost daily going over problems my older brother had in courses I had yet to reach, and in school similarly I heard recitations of the older scholars. Quite naturally the result was that studies and marks came easy to me, but in consequence deportment was another matter. Boys were required to declaim two or three times each term. By finding a poem of three stanzas and declaiming one stanza at a time, I made it last a term or more, and I understand it was used by others for years afterwards.

About this time I was reading English history and my father noticed I was reading about the Battle of Waterloo. He suggested I should talk with James Bradeen, who could tell me about the battle. This was 1880; the battle 1815. Father explained that Jimmy fought under Wellington when 18 or 19 years of age. A few days later I saw Jimmy at the village and was thrilled by his description of the battle, the outcome of which remained in doubt until late in the day, when word reached the soldiers that the French were retreating in panic form. It still gives me a thrill to recall that a famous battle nearly 150 years ago was described to me by one of the soldiers who had been in the thickest of the fight.

Late in 1874 my Grandmother and Grandfather Allen celebrated their golden wedding anniversary. Seven of their 10 children were present and among them their son Otis, who had gone to California in the gold rush days of 1849. From him I heard many interesting tales of the period, ranging from his experiences as a member of the committee of safety in San Francisco to his problems in a party of 12 crossing Panama on foot. This was the first party to cross the Isthmus instead of sailing around Cape Horn to reach California.

I elected to go to Bowdoin because my father, Amos L. Allen, had graduated from there in the Class of 1860 with his classmate and close associate the Honorable Thomas B. Reed, subsequently Speaker of the U. S. House of Representatives, and also because my older brother, Herbert L. Allen, was already there as a junior in the Class of 1883.

ABOUT THE MIDDLE OF JUNE IN 1881 the family went to our summer home in Old Orchard, and I reviewed my studies in order to take the entrance examination to Bowdoin after the fourth of July. It was while studying on July 2nd that I heard my father shout, "President Garfield has been shot!"

On July 5th I went to Bowdoin and took the examinations, written and oral. There and at various fitting schools over 50 took the examinations. Ten entered without conditions; of these I was one, and I felt quite proud. Then came a long vacation, as the fall term did not begin until the first week in October.

One of the early college events was a sort of football game between the sophomores and freshmen in which a large rubber ball was used and the game was three goals out of five. The sophomores were to kick the ball over a line on the campus, but the freshmen had to kick it over a high hedge an equal distance in the opposite direction. The sophomores made the rules, and these in due and ancient form were communicated to the "freshmen green as grass" in their rooms the night before the game. I vividly recall studying my Livy that evening when after a loud rap on the door 10 or more sophomores entered and the spokesman, Sherman Walker, warned me to keep well in the rear and away from their fighting men. They called on every freshman, but even so, we intended to win and thought we could because we outnumbered the sophomores by at least 20. However, we lost because it took only one or two kicks to place the ball near their goal.

The "fishing season" as usual was early in the term. Those that were unpledged to any Greek letter society were interviewed by an upperclassman and nearly all were invited to join. The societies at Bowdoin were Psi Upsilon, Zeta Psi, Delta Kappa Epsilon, Alpha Delta Phi, and Theta Delta Chi. If any student was not invited or refused to join any society he was called an Ouden. This was the Greek for nothing. My father and my brother were both Psi Upsilons, and I naturally decided to join that society. There were nine in our delegation, Freeman, Ford, Mooers, Howard, Norton, Gould, Webb, Leigh, and Allen.

At that time hazing was still in vogue, and every freshman was advised to do whatever he was ordered to do pleasantly and promptly. The hazing season had not yet opened and the Psi Upsilon delegation had not yet been initiated. Since the Greek letter Societies held their meetings Friday evening, someone proposed that the delegation meet while the Society was in session and have a "peanut drunk" — which meant to drink sweet cider and eat peanuts. We could play cards and sing college songs, but to be on the safe side we asked an upperclassman whether such a meeting would bring down the wrath of the sophomores on our heads. My own brother advised that we were within our rights. So, after dark, Ford came up a back street with 10 or 12 quarts of sweet cider, and Howard, I think, had four quarts of peanuts. We met in Ford's room, believing all the upperclassmen were in the Society Hall. After a few moments of conversation we raised our glasses, and Howard, an excellent singer, started the well known song "Here's to '85! Drink 'er down!" Just as we were all singing, "Drink 'er down, down, down," there was a loud knock on the door and at least 20 sophomores rushed in. They immediately confiscated the peanuts, drank the cider, and prepared for amateur theatricals — which, being interpreted, meant hazing. I recall that Howard, a nephew of General Oliver O. Howard, had to sing several songs, and Webb, a nephew of Justice Webb of the U. S. Circuit Court, was told to make a political speech.

One afternoon in the autumn of 1881 there was a rap on my door and to my surprise my father and Judge Derby came in. Father, as stated, was Bowdoin 1860 while Judge Derby was 1868, and my father had been his tutor in Greek and Latin. They had come to Brunswick to discuss a case with Judge Barrows and were shortly to return to Portland. They sat down and pleasantly recalled events while they were students. In those days there was relatively little outside entertainment, there was no gymnasium, and athletics were at a low ebb. As a matter of course, a considerable amount of concentrated study went into the required subjects. Quite naturally this brought a need for contrast and relaxation, which, in turn, occasionally resulted in some ridiculous prankish outbursts.

As an instance, Judge Derby told of a dinner his class had had in the study of President Woods in one of the college dormitories. President Woods was one of the leading scholars of the country. He had visited Rome and conversed in Latin with the Pontiff and when in France had spoken in fluent French with the royal family. The students entered the study after President Woods had gone home for the night. They had purchased oysters, milk, butter, crackers, pickles, sardines, and coffee, and their dinner consisted mainly of oyster stew cooked in a wash boiler on his stove. Needless to say, in such a setting they enjoyed the stew immensely. They forgot to take away their wash boiler, but the President never sought to ascertain who had been in his study that night.

WHEN THE FACULTY FELT THESE STUDENT PRANKS NEEDED ATTENTION, they handled them quite adroitly. Father told us that Professor William Smyth, the author of books on navigation and mathematics, had a garden and raised a few chickens. He was known by the students as Billy Smyth and he had a son, Egbert Smyth, later a prominent and progressive theologian. Three members of my father's class undertook one night to obtain some chickens surreptitiously from the Professor's coop for a special clandestine feast. As one chicken was passed from one of the group to his accomplice, he said, "This is Egbert Smyth." Passing the second one, he said, "This is Billy Smyth." Someone who knew the students had been listening. He shouted and the students ran, leaving the chickens. The next day one of the students received an invitation to dine the following evening at Professor William Smyth's. He was made doubly uneasy on learning each of the others had a similar invitation. They held a serious conference as to whether to make a clean breast of it immediately. They were greeted pleasantly by Professor and Mrs. Smyth and Egbert. No mention was made of the episode until several chickens were served at dinner and the Professor, turning to the nearest student, said, "Will you have a slice of Egbert Smyth or Billy Smyth?" Professor and Mrs. Smyth were excellent hosts and from this point on the dinner progressed as a dinner should — except that the students were nearly voiceless!

In my freshman year, as in my father's time, it was true that there were practically no outside activities or public entertainment. Hazing was popular still, but during the year it received a severe setback because of some unexpected injuries which resulted in a considerable change in sentiment. As to studies, we had Latin, Greek, and mathematics, and these were quite exacting but interesting.

When I became a sophomore, we did very little hazing because of the events in the previous year. However, there were college customs and we found that the incoming freshman class of less than 30 seemed disposed to break them. Among the various episodes one freshman, Fred Smith, allowed his mustache to grow — which was clearly contrary to college custom. Trivial as it may later have seemed, he was spoken to and it was shaved off — but when he again allowed it to grow, this resulted in a committee to straighten the matter out. While not a member of the committee, I had been in his room somewhat earlier and, therefore, was one of those reported. Because of the new attitude toward hazing, the faculty took a serious view of the matter, which we all felt was unduly harsh. Looked at with the perspective of later years, it is clear that both sides were concerned with the principles involved and both, truth to tell, were quite loyal to Bowdoin. Yet the upshot was that 11 sophomores decided to leave college — one went to Williams, two left college, and the other eight went to Dartmouth. These were Allen, Leigh, Goddard, Goodenow, Manson, Mooers, Hodgkins, and Webb. These friendships continued throughout life, as did my interest in Bowdoin.

I went to Dartmouth alone in March, 1883, and after reaching Hanover called on President Bartlett. The others soon followed, and we came to realize the good grounding we had had at Bowdoin as we found no difficulty with the examinations. After an examination in Latin I was given a number of passages in Greek lyric anthology to translate and scan. The others were given similar examinations, and we all did sufficiently well so that we were not asked to take an exam in mathematics.

When I was an undergraduate in Dartmouth, the college consisted of only 250 students and friendships were strong. I was a member of the Psi Upsilon Society and a close friend of Richard Hovey. I graduated in 1885 and was elected to Phi Beta Kappa.

Having decided to go to Harvard Medical School, I found my knowledge of shorthand invaluable in taking lectures verbatim. As a result my final mark in Clinical Medicine was 97, but the grade which pleased me most was 100 in Theory and Practice. I graduated in 1889 and that fall opened an office at Hancock Street on Beacon Hill in Boston. For a short while at that time I went to Washington, D. C., as an interim secretary to Mr. Thomas B. Reed, Speaker of the U. S. House of Representatives. This was at the request of my father, who likewise had an active career in Congress, serving ably for 12 years as a Representative from Maine.

SHORTLY AFTER MY RETURN I began to make examinations for the John Hancock Mutual Life Insurance Company. When I became actively associated in 1890, the company was renting the fifth floor of a building at the corner of Boylston and Washington Streets. Only about 50 ordinary policies were written each month and the limit then was $20,000. In 1890 there were only one stenographer and less than 100 employees. In fact, the company was so small that a few years before serious consideration had been given to liquidation or merger. What a far cry from the present handsome 26-story building with its computers and thousands of employees! This growth was in large measure due to the constructive policies followed by the company, but I like to think that these policies were made possible in turn by the sound policies of the medical department. I was with the company for 49 years and was appointed Assistant Medical Director in 1917. From 1923 until my retirement in April, 1939, I was Chief Medical Director. This long association has provided me with many warm memories.

In 1896 I was married to Linda Whitin Forbush, a very happy marriage for us both until her death in 1938. We began housekeeping at 37 Hancock Street, which with its marble front and circular staircase has been listed as of historic value to the Beacon Hill area and is now over 100 years old.

Having, as I have said, retained my interest in Bowdoin, I attended a meeting of the Bowdoin Club of Boston in 1901 and took verbatim stenographic notes of stirring addresses on the Civil War by two famous Bowdoin graduates, General Oliver O. Howard and General Joshua L. Chamberlain. I still have these and they throw considerable light on the problems surmounted and the courage displayed by these heroic men.

As to myself, while I have no formula for long life other than the basic admonition of making sure you pick out the right ancestors, I have always been a strong believer in regular but gentle daily exercise. I used to walk a good deal, but this changed somewhat when I entered the auto age with the purchase of a Stanley Steamer in 1902. This car steered with a tiller and had a sort of front rumble seat where people could sit below but in front of the driver. I have one son, Nathaniel D. W., who was born in 1903, and when he was a baby, his mother and I frequently took him out in this car. If we were out when feeding time came, I simply turned a valve in the front of the car and heated his formula in the resulting jet of steam. He graduated from Harvard in 1925 and is now an officer in The First National Bank of Boston.

For my general health I took up golf about middle age and enjoyed it so much my wife used to suggest jokingly I ought perhaps to drop it for my health. Many pleasant games ensued with associates of the John Hancock, and I continued to play golf until I reached the age of 80. From then on I made a point of daily walks when in Boston, even in somewhat stormy weather, and in the summer time when at the family home in Whitinsville, Mass., was quite active outdoors. This lovely old Victorian home is now about 90 years old. It has beautiful and extensive grounds and includes a large barn which still houses some 16 carriages which had been used by various generations of my wife's family.

Understandably, in the last five years I have been less active, but in season I continue to go to Linwood Grove in Whitinsville, where I am frequently outdoors. I still watch television each day and have no restrictions on what I eat. I continue to enjoy what has been for me a long and full and what I hope is a worthwhile life.

Nathaniel Hawthorne in London

by John Yeowell

NATHANIEL HAWTHORNE was already one of America's great men of letters when President Franklin Pierce appointed him United States Consul at the important British seaport of Liverpool in 1853 — three years after the publication of his most famous novel, The Scarlet Letter. More than two centuries had elapsed since his ancestor, William Hathorne (Nathaniel added the "w" when he was at college), had sailed from England for the Massachusetts Bay Colony. He was, we understand, an efficient Consul, but his work did not prevent him from indulging in a good deal of sightseeing during which, for the first time, he was able to visit places known previously only through the pages of literature — and he viewed them with a keen and observant eye. Hawthorne's record of his stay in this country is presented in Our Old Home and the English Notebooks, and his comments make fascinating reading.

It was not, however, until he had been in Liverpool for two years that Hawthorne first travelled southwards to London. Then ensued "a month of as great enjoyment as Hawthorne had hitherto known in England," writes his son Julian in Nathaniel Hawthorne and his Wife. "His appetite for London was almost as big as London itself."

The younger Hawthorne testifies to his father's absorption in the capital. "No American better qualified than he to appreciate its sights, its historic and literary associations, its antiquities, and its immensity, has ever before lost himself in its streets. . . . He cast himself adrift upon the great city, and cruised whithersoever the current took him." He and his family lodged in what is now St. George Street, Hanover Square, and although this district has now developed a predominantly business rather than a residential character, there remains much that would have been familiar to Hawthorne, including the nearby church dedicated to St. George where his great compatriot, Theodore Roosevelt, was married thirty years later.

One day, as he was walking along High Holborn, he came upon the half-timbered facade of Staple Inn and remarked upon "the most antique-looking houses I have yet met with in London." On entering the courtyard, he was charmed with the Inn's quiet solitude, and tells us, "the windows were open, and it was a lovely summer afternoon. I had a sense that bees were humming in the Court, though this may have been suggested by my fancy, because the sound would have been well suited to the scene." Of the nearby Temple he wrote, "no sooner do you pass under the arch than all the rumble and bustle of London dies away at once, and it seems as if a person might live there in perfect quiet without suspecting that it was not always the Sabbath."

St. Paul's Cathedral greatly impressed Hawthorne, but he confessed to some difficulty in deciding whether it was built of stone or marble, because the years had left on its exterior "the smoke of ages." He concluded that it was perhaps better in its coat of soot, for "the edifice would not be nearly so grand without this drapery of black." He might have changed his mind had he been able to see the result of the recent cleaning of the stone facade which has revealed the magnificent carvings in all their glory.

One day found him searching the streets of Clerkenwell for the ancient gateway which had formed part of the medieval Priory of the Knights Hospitaller, and on entering St. John's Street he was "in hopes of having seen the old St. John's Gate, so familiar for above a century on the cover of the Gentleman's Magazine. But I suppose it was taken down, for we went through the entire street, I think, and saw no trace of it." It is sad to think that Hawthorne should have been so close to the Gate without setting eyes on it, for it stands yet, turreted and austere, in St. John's Lane, and is now occupied by the Order of St. John of Jerusalem, who continue the work of the Hospitallers of old. There is much of interest within the Gatehouse that makes well worth while the small trouble of writing to the Secretary of that Order for permission to see the interior.

ON THE OUTSKIRTS OF LONDON, Hawthorne explored Greenwich Park and visited the magnificent riverside buildings of Greenwich Hospital (now the Royal Naval College) which occupy the site of the 15th-century royal palace that was the birthplace of Henry VIII and his daughters, Queen Mary I and Queen Elizabeth I. The present building was commenced during the reign of Charles II (1660-1685) and was completed in 1692 as a hospital for disabled seamen. Hawthorne saw the old sea dogs there, passing their declining years amidst the dignity of classical stone pillars and porticoes. "Their home, in its outward form, is on a very magnificent plan," he wrote. "Its germ was a royal palace, the full expansion of which has resulted in a series of edifices externally more beautiful than any English palace that I have seen, consisting of several quadrangles of stately architecture, united by colonnades and graceful walks, and enclosing grassy squares with statues in the centre, the whole extending along the Thames." As a man of practical commonsense, Hawthorne was prompted to wonder whether, instead of this classical elegance, the old sailors might not have preferred something cosier, and he adds, "Had I been the architect, I would have studied the characteristics, habits, and predilections of nautical people in Wapping, Rotherhithe, and the neighbourhood of the Tower (places which I visit in affectionate remembrance of Captain Lemuel Gulliver, and other actual or mythical navigators)." A few years after his visit to Greenwich the system of residential pensions for old sailors came to an end, and the Hospital as such became redundant. It started life afresh in 1873 as the Royal Naval College.

At Blackheath (which adjoins Greenwich Park) Hawthorne watched, with somewhat mystified curiosity, the game of cricket. "It is necessary to be born an Englishman, I believe, in order to enjoy this great national game" was his comment. "I found it lazy, lingering, tedious, and utterly devoid of pictorial effects." Of London's weather Hawthorne recorded, "there are weeks of incomparable summer . . . exquisite enough to atone for a whole year's atmospherical delinquencies." His manner of writing about London was frank but affectionate, as of an old acquaintance.

Nathaniel Hawthorne returned to the United States in 1859 and died on May 19th, 1864. His widow, the devoted Sophia of his travels, died in London seven years later and lies buried in Kensal Green Cemetery, where their daughter Una planted some ivy "that I had brought from America, and a periwinkle from papa's grave." Perhaps some literary pilgrim will, in this centenary year, place more evergreens on the quiet tomb inscribed with dignified brevity, "Sophia, Wife of Nathaniel Hawthorne," and also on the grave of Una, by her mother's side.

On The Campus

Bowdoin Plan Students

Twelve foreign students are enrolled this fall, with full scholarships covering tuition, room, and board for one year under the well known Bowdoin Plan, established in 1947 and now completing its second decade. One of the 12 men, Abdul S. Kandeh, who is 24, was also a Bowdoin Plan student during the spring semester, after spending the first semester last year at Franklin Pierce College in Rindge, N. H. He comes from Sierra Leone, West Africa.

The other eleven men are new to Bowdoin. Hiromi Haruke (26), a graduate of Doshisha University in Kyoto, Japan, is a fourth-grade judoist. Bo Erik Lennart Hedlund of Hohog, Sweden, who is 19, speaks Swedish, English, Danish, German, and French. Nils-Arne Holmlid (20), also a native of Sweden, wants to be a journalist.

Marius Josephus Jitta of Wassenaar, Holland, who is 18, plans to continue his education in political science. Sten Gustaf Luthman of Stockholm, Sweden, who is 19, plans to enter the Swedish Diplomatic Service. To Hedlund's five languages — English, Swedish, Danish, German, and French — he adds Norwegian. Tatsumi Moritsuka of Kagawa, Japan, who is 21 and a student at Kagawa University, where he has completed three years of study in economics, wants to work for an export-import firm eventually.

John Ngoh (24) comes from Cameroon, West Africa, and has completed one year at the Cameroon College of Arts and Sciences. Daniel Portmann of Lucerne, Switzerland, who is 21, has completed one year at the University of Zurich, where he plans to complete work for a law degree. Allan Spencer (23), who wants to become a teacher, is a student at the University of Panama.

Johan Fredrik Sudmann (22) of Aasane, Norway, wants to study sociology. He has passed Norway's college entrance examination, which qualifies him to enter any university in that country with no further testing. Joseph B. M. E. Ndang of West Cameroon, West Africa has been editor of a bi-weekly newspaper in that country and has attended journalism seminars in Lagos, Nigeria, and Tel Aviv, Israel.

New Parking Areas

Three off-street parking lots have recently been completed in the first phase of a master plan to provide additional parking space within the campus area for students, faculty and staff members, and visitors. Located on Coffin Street and South Street, the lots can accommodate more than 150 cars. Long-range plans call for about 500 off-street parking spaces on or near the campus. A 40-car area around the Senior Center will soon be opened, and work is about to be started on a lot to hold more than 100 cars in the rear of Cleaveland Hall, on Sills Drive.

In Honor of Mal Morrell

In honor of their classmate Malcolm E. Morrell, who has served as Director of Athletics since 1927, members of the Class of 1924 have designated their contributions to the Capital Campaign to provide for the Athletic Director's office in the new gymnasium, now under construction.

Mal Morrell was a four-year letterman in baseball at Bowdoin and was captain of the football team as a senior. For three seasons, from 1927 through 1929, he coached the varsity football squad. He was the first person to suggest that the rules be changed to permit a forward pass to be thrown from anywhere behind the line of scrimmage, rather than five yards back. The suggestion was adopted a few years later.

Work on the gymnasium, which started in May, is scheduled for completion by September of 1965. Consolidated Constructors and Builders, Inc., of Portland is the contractor, and the architect is Hugh Stubbins and Associates of Cambridge, Mass., the firm which designed the Senior Center.

During a visit to Europe last June and July Assistant to the President Philip S. Wilder '23 met with several groups of Bowdoin men. This picture was taken at the Swedish chateau of Wolfgang Thomas '29 on July 11. It shows, beginning at the bottom and going clockwise, Mr. Wilder, a visitor (from Harvard or Yale), Mrs. Wilder, Mr. Thomas, Harry Hedenstedt '60, Birgitta Boman (the fiancée of Nils Hedenstedt '62), and Nils Hedenstedt.

Myron Jeppesen Physics Chairman

Professor Myron A. Jeppesen has been appointed Chairman of the Department of Physics, succeeding Noel C. Little '17. An authority on spectroscopy and optics, he has been a member of the faculty since 1936. He spent the academic year 1963-64 in Washington, D. C., as Associate Program Director of Graduate Programs in the Fellowships Section of the National Science Foundation's Division of Scientific Personnel and Education.

Under a Guggenheim Fellowship, Professor Jeppesen spent the year 1956-57 at the University of California in Berkeley, working on a project entitled "Optical Studies of Surface and Body Properties of Crystalline and Amorphous Solids." Bowdoin research projects in which he has been engaged under National Science Foundation support include a study of "Photoelectric Emission from Small Particles in Pulsed Light" and an investigation of thin solid films such as are formed by the evaporation of metals and alloys under high vacuum.

New Faculty Members

In addition to the twelve men listed in the July ALUMNUS, nine new appointments to the faculty were announced during the summer.

Dr. John P. Armstrong, who was a Visiting Associate Professor of Government in 1954-55, has returned to the campus as Visiting Professor of Government. A specialist in politics and foreign relations in Southeast Asia, he is the author of Sihanouk Speaks, a recently published book about Norodom Sihanouk, Prince of Cambodia. Professor Armstrong has M.A. and Ph.D. degrees from the University of Chicago.

Walter R. Boland is an Instructor in Sociology. A graduate of the University of Michigan, where he is a candidate for his Ph.D. this year, he is the co-author of a study of the influence of increasing size on the organization of American colleges and universities. He taught last year at Oakland University in Rochester, Mich.

Dr. Charles H. Foster, a Hawthorne scholar, is Visiting Professor of English for 1964-65. Regularly Director of Graduate Work in the Department of English at the University of Minnesota, he will offer a course in American literature stressing the imaginative use of thought in Hawthorne and his contemporaries. He is a graduate of Amherst and has M.A. and Ph.D. degrees from the University of Iowa. Among his books are Emerson's Theory of Poetry and The Rungless Ladder: Harriet Beecher Stowe and New England Puritanism.

Charles A. Grobe, Jr., a graduate of the University of Michigan, where he is a candidate for his Ph.D. this year, is an Instructor in Mathematics. His thesis, supported in part by the National Science Foundation, is entitled "On Sheffer's A-classification for Simple Sets of Polynomials."

Douglas I. Hodgkin, a graduate of Yale in 1961 with an M.A. from Duke in 1963, is an Instructor in Government. He wrote his M.A. thesis on "The Democratic Landslide: Maine Elections, 1948-1960," and the title of his Ph.D. dissertation is "Break-through Elections: Elements of Large and Durable Minority Party Gains in Selected States Since 1944."

Robert W. Johnson, an Instructor in Mathematics, is a graduate of Amherst and has M.S. and Ph.D. degrees from M.I.T., where he was a research assistant. His main fields of interest in mathematics are Algebraic Number Theory and Topological Algebra, particularly applications of local rings to algebraic number theory.

John E. Rogers, who is an Instructor in Music, holds bachelor of arts and bachelor of music degrees from the University of Georgia and a master of music degree from Yale. A composer who has won several prizes in composition contests, he is interested in the development of musical vocabularies for use in computer programming.

Dr. Alfred M. Taylor, a British physicist, has been appointed Visiting Professor of Physics on the Tallman Foundation for 1964-65. A member of the faculty at the University of Southampton in England since 1941, he is a graduate of Trinity College, Cambridge University, from which he also received a Ph.D. degree. He is a Fellow of the Institute of Physics and was Chairman of its London and Home Counties Branch from 1958 until 1961. For two years he has been Chairman of the Southern Area Committee of the British Association for the Advancement of Science. From 1929 until 1934 he was Assistant Professor of Physical Optics at the University of Rochester in New York, and he taught at the University of St. Andrews in Scotland before joining the faculty at Southampton.

Captain Jerry G. Williamson, an Army officer who has served in both Korea and Germany, is Assistant Professor of Military Science. A graduate of Oklahoma State University in 1955, he attended the Infantry Officers Career Course at Fort Benning, Ga., last year.

Football Outlook

Bowdoin's defending state football champions face an uphill battle to keep their hard-earned title, but they will be a team well worth watching.

With but 11 lettermen returning — and a total turnout of only 25 — Coach Nels Corey '39 has one of the thinnest squads in Bowdoin history, and he will have to repeat some of last year's sensational feats to hold on to the State Series trophy.

The smallness of his squad means that Corey will have to keep his contact drills at a minimum — or risk injuries that could prove disastrous. Even without injuries, he will have to make some wholesale position shifts in order to find enough personnel for intra-squad scrimmages. Some players will have to learn to play two positions.

But the small size of the team is only one of the many obstacles between Bowdoin and another State Series crown. For the first time in 36 years the Polar Bears will play an eight-game schedule this fall, starting unusually early with the home opener against new opponent Worcester Polytechnic Institute on September 19.

The addition of this eighth game at the top of the schedule allowed the team only one scrimmage (at Northeastern on September 12) instead of the usual two pre-season practice contests.

Bowdoin has two linemen weighing 200 pounds or more, while most of its opponents list at least 10 heavyweights on their rosters. Weight problems are nothing new to Corey, however. The Polar Bear line was outweighed by an average of 15 pounds per man last season and in some cases gave away 25 pounds.

Even if his team escapes serious injuries, Corey will still have only two men for each spot in the lineup. But he had a similar problem of an undermanned team last season and still pulled in the Maine title and had a 6 and 1 record. He did it with a pro-type passing attack built around a winged-T offense with a split end, and including the "bread-and-butter" option play in which the quarterback is free to run or throw.

"We hope once again to do a lot of throwing," Corey said as his small squad reported for physical examinations. "We're too small for a powerful ground game, and taking to the air seems to be our best hope."

Among the returning players who Corey hopes will stabilize his aerial attack are All-Maine quarterback Bob Harrington '65 and glue-fingered end Jim MacAllen '66. Harrington and MacAllen combined their considerable talents last year to establish a new all-time Polar Bear passing completion record of 50.4%. Harrington completed 59 of 113 forwards, including eight for touchdowns, and MacAllen caught 23 tosses, including four for touchdowns.

Another returning veteran whom Corey is counting on is All-Maine halfback Paul Soule '66, who paced last fall's ground attack with a gain of 441 yards in 104 carries. Soule also helped out in the aerial department, hauling in 11 passes for 106 yards, including a touchdown.

Scrappy halfback Bill Matthews '65, a letterman, recently underwent a leg operation, and another senior letterman, guard Tom Zilinsky, was unable to report because he aggravated an old shoulder injury.

On successive Saturday afternoons at 1:30, beginning with the home opener against Worcester Tech on September 19, Bowdoin will take on Tufts at home, Wesleyan away, Amherst at home, Williams at home, Colby away, Bates away, and Maine at home.

Worcester Tech fielded an excellent defensive squad last year, and Tufts should have a much stronger team, built around no less than 20 returning lettermen. Wesleyan will be at least as strong as it was last year. Amherst, the only squad to defeat Bowdoin in 1963, has lost three fine backs but should still prove tough. Williams and Colby are likely to be much improved, while Bates, as usual, is anyone's guess. Maine, with a roster almost three times the size of Bowdoin's, will continue to be strong.

Alumni Fund Organizes

The Directors of the Alumni Fund met on the campus on August 7 and 8 to make plans for the 1964-65 Fund. Lewis V. Vafiades '42 of Hampden, a lawyer in Bangor, is serving as Chairman, and Morris A. Densmore '46 of Grand Rapids, Mich., is Vice Chairman. The other Directors are Willard B. Arnold, III '51 of Waterville, J. Philip Smith '29 of Melrose, Mass., and Gordon C. Knight '32 of North Haven, Conn.

The Directors voted a 1964-65 objective of $275,000 — an increase of 10% or $25,000 over the goal of the preceding three years.

Bill Shaw to Get Award

Director of Admissions Hubert S. (Bill) Shaw '36 will become the second recipient of the Alumni Council's Alumni Award for Faculty and Staff on Alumni Day, October 17. The first recipient was Professor Athern P. Daggett '25, who received last October the special Bowdoin clock and citation that go with the Award. Mr. and Mrs. Shaw will be guests of honor at the Alumni Day luncheon and at the reception that afternoon, following the Bowdoin-Williams football game.

A Hammer Thrower and His Coach

Alex Schulten '66 of Woolwich twice during the summer threw his favorite weapon, the 16-pound hammer, 196 feet, 7 inches, establishing a new record for Maine college athletes. The old record of 196 feet, 5½ inches, was held by Bill McWilliams '57, who last July threw just under 200 feet to edge Schulten in the Olympic trials at Randalls Island, New York. Schulten finished fifth in that event and as a result was invited, with five other men, for two weeks of training at Olympic Committee expense in Los Angeles. After more trials there, two of the five men were to be selected to join Boston's Harold Connolly, who threw some 225 feet at Randalls Island, in representing this country at the Olympic Games in Tokyo in October.

Schulten's coach, Frank Sabasteanski '41, was many miles away from Los Angeles and his star pupil during the summer. On July 16 he left for the African country of Ghana to help prepare its track and field team for the Olympics — a three-month assignment. Ghana has several good sprinters, a 26-foot-9-inch broad jumper, and a 400 meter relay team which tied Great Britain's team recently.

Professor Hall

Mrs. Barbara Sabasteanski, a member of the staff at the Coe Infirmary, accompanied her husband to Ghana. Last year she was one of the two nurses for the U.S. track and field team at the Pan American Games in Brazil. Her husband was the manager-coach of a group of top United States trackmen who toured the Middle East in 1960 under the auspices of the State Department and the A.A.U.

Other Bowdoin faculty members at the Olympics will include College Physician Dan Hanley '39, who will be a U.S. team physician, and Coach of Swimming and Soccer Charlie Butt, who will be a spectator.

New English Department Chairman

Professor Lawrence S. Hall '36 has been appointed Chairman of the Department of English, with Professor Herbert R. Brown on sabbatical leave during the fall semester. A prize-winning author and an expert both on the English language and in using that language, Professor Hall joined the faculty in 1946. His sea novel Stowaway won for him the 1961 William Faulkner Award, and his short story "The Ledge" won first prize in the O. Henry Prize Collection in 1960.

Professor Hall's latest book, How Thinking Is Written, which deals with the logic of the English language, was published in 1963. A text entitled A Grammar of Literary Criticism will be published next spring.

NSF Grant for Math Journals

The National Science Foundation has made a grant of $2,480 to the College to support a program of purchasing files of some of the world's leading mathematical journals, such as Scripta Mathematica, Mathematical Gazette, Proceedings of the London Mathematical Society, and Mathematische Zeitschrift. Last year 280 students were enrolled in courses offered by the Math Department, with 32 majoring in the subject. Each year there are half a dozen or so majors engaged in honors projects on such topics as Logical Foundations of Mathematics, Convex Bodies, Algebraic Topology, and Differential Equations of Physics.

Fourteen Masters of Arts

Fourteen secondary school mathematics teachers from nine states received master of arts degrees at a Commencement ceremony held in the Chapel on Sunday, August 9. Ten of the group had completed four summers of honor-grade study at Bowdoin in the Mathematics Institute program sponsored jointly by the College and the National Science Foundation. The other four had participated in the Academic Year Institute, another NSF-supported program at Bowdoin, as well as in one Summer Institute. Three of the recipients are women.

President Coles presided at the exercises, assisted by Roy A. Foulke '19, Vice President of the Board of Overseers. Professor Emeritus Edward S. Hammond gave the Commencement address.

The Right Person

The right person happened to be at the right place at the right time, and a relic of the College's history was saved from being lost forever. Marvin S. Sadik, Director and Curator of the Museum of Art, was the right person. The right place was an antique shop in West Bath. He was looking through some old photographs, a collection of stern-faced Puritans who sat for the daguerreotype cameras of more than 100 years ago. One was a picture of a man with long dark hair and steel-rimmed spectacles. Mr. Sadik knew he had seen that face before, so he bought the picture for a modest price.

He started by looking through a book of Bowdoin history, and there he found the face. It was that of Leonard Woods, the fourth President of the College, who held that position from 1839 to 1866. The illustration in the book was an engraving which had been drawn by hand from a daguerreotype, the only way a photograph could be reproduced before the invention of the halftone printing process.

"It is probably the first photographic impression of any President of Bowdoin," President Coles told Mr. Sadik in expressing the College's thanks for his gift.

Daguerreotypy, invented by Louis Daguerre in France in 1839, was the original photographic process. To take a picture the photographer coated a polished copper plate with a silver solution and made the exposure while the plate was still wet. The finished product was the original plate with a metallic silver image. The picture of President Woods is about three by four inches.

Daguerreotype of President Woods

Aeolian Chamber Players

During the summer the Aeolian Chamber Players presented a series of five Thursday evening concerts at the Smith Auditorium in Sills Hall. Members of the group are violinist Lewis Kaplan, flutist Thomas Nyfenger, clarinetist Joseph Rab-bai, and pianist Gilbert Kalish. They were assisted by cellist Donald Anderson.

One of the highlights of the concert series was the presentation on July 23 of a work entitled "Trio in One Movement," written for flute, clarinet, and cello by Professor Elliott S. Schwartz, a new member of the Bowdoin faculty. The composition was written for New York's Café Figaro chamber series, where it was first played in 1962. This was the first Maine performance of the piece and the first Bowdoin performance of any of the works of Professor Schwartz.

His latest commissions include one from the New York Camerata for a chamber work scheduled for a première performance at the Phillips Gallery in Washington, D. C., in November, and another from the Hartt Chamber Players for a chamber work which will have its première in New York this fall.

The Symphonies of Ralph Vaughn Williams, a book by Professor Schwartz, will be published by the University of Massachusetts Press this fall.

Recent Gifts

The personal notebook used by the builder of the Civil War sloop-steamer USS Kearsarge has been given to the Library by Mrs. James Marshall of Lisbon Falls, whose three sons are alumni of the College, and her two sisters, Mrs. S. Kirby Hight of Skowhegan, whose husband is a member of the Class of 1938, and Mrs. William C. Swallow of New Canaan, Conn. Apparently used as a memo booklet by the ship's builder, the notebook contains drawings of the sloop's upper and lower decks and gun and engine placements, as well as technical information on its weight, dimensions, and structure.

The College has recently received a bequest of $4,000 under the will of Stanley Williams '05, who died in 1959. He was for many years an executive with the International Banking Corporation and the National City Bank of New York.

A gift from Dr. Richard Dale '54 has established the Fessenden Prize in Government, honoring the memory of William Pitt Fessenden of the Class of 1823, who became Secretary of the Treasury under Abraham Lincoln. The award will be presented each year to the senior majoring in government who has made the greatest improvement in his studies in that field while at Bowdoin. He must have been accepted either for admission to graduate school or for employment in the federal service.

The University of Georgia has given the Library two copies of Confederate sheet music. One is an elaborately engraved "Christmas and New Year Musical Souvenir," published in 1863 in Richmond, Va., and Columbus, S. C. It is of special interest because one of the three songs included is a musical setting of Henry Wadsworth Longfellow's "I Know a Maiden Fair to See."

The second piece of music is "Kathleen Mavourneen," perhaps the most popular song ever published.

DAN E. CHRISTIE, Vector Mechanics, Second Edition: McGraw-Hill, 1964; pp. xiii and 622; $10.75.

The mark of an outstanding teacher is his ability to teach by specific example. To create a book which systematically presents abstract concepts by countless concrete specific examples requires a special genius. Vector Mechanics testifies to Professor Christie's genius as a teacher, to say nothing of his scholarship.

By means of this text, the student is indelibly ingrained with vectors — their language, their power as a tool for physicists, engineers, and mathematicians, and their indispensable applications.

Following a well-defined introduction to vectors, Professor Christie systematically presents the fundamental concepts of mechanics. Throughout the book new vector notions and operations are illustrated in physical terms and then used to formalize the concepts of mechanics. Each new idea in vectors and mechanics is immediately followed by one or more well-chosen examples.

After every new idea there is an exercise section which no student could forget. These exercises include problems in the manipulation of vectors, the extension of the theory of mechanics in vector language, and the application of vectors to specific problems in mechanics. Professor Christie provides over 1,300 exercises to develop the student's proficiency and confidence in vector mechanics.

Professor Christie emphasizes from his first chapter onward the importance of dimensional analysis and uses three building blocks — force, time, and length. This tool he presents so frequently that its use becomes second-nature to the student and increases his insight into the abstractions of mechanics.

Included within this self-contained framework are introductions to the Lagrange and Hamilton methods, vector spaces, linear transformations, and matrices. Introducing the student to these topics should help him tremendously in his graduate work.

Professor Christie's scholarship is obvious, for he has chosen examples from satellites, effect of friction on orbits, galaxy dynamics, neutron modulation, resonance, Serret-Frenet formulas, radiation pressure, and vector geometry. His choice of examples will be of lasting value in the careers of his students.

His concise methods of presentation and solution are outstanding. The amount of careful work that went into this remarkable volume is more than this reviewer can imagine. Fortunate is the student who learns vector mechanics by means of Professor Christie's new text.

MARY ELLEN CHASE, Richard Mansfield, the Prince of Donkeys: W. W. Norton and Company, 1964; pp. 65; $2.95.

Traveling in the vicinity of Blue Hill, Maine, fifty years ago, one might have encountered a singular sight: a donkey lying asleep between the shafts of his phaeton, his two mistresses, aged ten or twelve, resignedly reading great literature under a peddler's umbrella while waiting for him to decide to proceed. One of the girls grew up to be Mary Ellen Chase; now in a charming sketch she memorializes the donkey.

A family pet for five important years, Richard Mansfield shared some of his tribe's traditional faults. Hard to get started — his mistresses knew he would be hiding when they came to harness him — he was equally hard to keep going — witness his roadside naps. But, as she fills in the portrait, Miss Chase makes clear that in Richard these traits were coupled with a lively sense of humor and the manners of a gentleman.

It is too bad that we do not get to know some of the supporting human characters as well: the elderly Misses Mansfield, who first owned and appreciated Richard; the brother who sent him to them "as a 'sort of joke'"; Miss Chase's father, too gallant to refuse the donkey as payment of a debt but too honest to be pleased. Fortunately, in Victoria, A Pig in a Pram, to which Richard Mansfield is a companion piece, Miss Chase has already introduced her remarkable parents. Readers of Victoria who marveled when Mrs. Chase took time to fashion pinafores for that dainty pig will not be surprised to find that she regularly invites Richard into her kitchen for cookies.

It is hard to say who will enjoy the book more, the young readers to whom it is directed, or their elders. Certainly one could argue that the farther back one's childhood, the greater the appeal in this nostalgic piece.

ROBERT B. HOUSE, The Light That Shines: Chapel Hill, 1912-1916, with drawings by Joyce Kachergis: University of North Carolina Press, 1964; pp. xi and 216; $5.00.

This is a chatty history of the University of North Carolina when that institution was more of a college than a university. It is told by a man whose memories of his college days are vivid, and whose appreciation of the lessons of great teachers is deep and sincere. "Bob" House is eminently well qualified to set this story down, for he has been intimately in touch with the University ever since his graduation. He was Chancellor for nearly twenty years, and after his retirement he taught English, and Greek and Latin Literature in Translation, to large classes of enthusiastic students.

I came to the University in 1917 and saw it much as it was when "Bob" House was a student. Chapel Hill was an isolated community, reached with considerable difficulty by a dinky railroad, or by "jitney" over a rutty highway. The stores in the town were run by charming eccentrics. The one café that I remember had a few cans of soup on the shelf, the new members of the faculty ate in boarding houses for something like $25.00 a month, and there were two elderly ladies who would call up to see if the two automobiles in town were likely to be on the street and scare their horses.

In those days people walked, had time to stop and talk, the faculty played — and enjoyed! — parlor games, and they listened with mild amusement to long speeches in the faculty meetings. They were just beginning to see the dawn of a true university, as new professors were brought in, new buildings were constructed, and the legislature was showing signs of generosity.

After a fascinating account of his college experiences, "Bob" House deals with the professors whose classes he attended. He reaches back into the past to give an appropriate background for their contributions, and he extends himself beyond his graduation to round out the significance of their work. It was my good fortune to be acquainted with these men. I knew the president, "Ed" Graham, but my tennis was not good enough to qualify for matches with him. These matches were for good players that I knew off the court, such as the mathematician John Lasley and the head of my department, "Billy" Dey. More in my class were "Jim" Bullitt of the Medical School and Archibald Henderson of the Department of Mathematics and an expert on George Bernard Shaw. Francis Venable, former president of the University, lived next door. Major Cain, Head of the Department of Mathematics, ate at our table in the boarding house. There were no housing developments. Everybody lived nearby. Chapel Hill was a grand place to be in.

In the course of his narrative "Bob" House shows himself to be quite a philosopher. He has his own ideas — good ideas — about study, recreation, moral principles, and life in general. He has no adverse criticism of his fellow students, or of his teachers — with a single exception. In one chapter he praises Horace Williams, the Department of Philosophy all by himself and the idol of his students, but later he terms him an "individualistic, controversial, cantankerous neighbor." Many of us who never saw this man operate in the classroom thought him the worst citizen in town.

This book will have an appeal to those who knew the University of North Carolina around the time when "Bob" House was a student. But it will recall to many others their own college days and the teachers who influenced them most. To me this book brings back vividly "Mitch" and his lessons in English and logic, "Whisker" Woodruff and his meticulous instruction in Greek, Roscoe Ham and his solid instruction in German, "Frenchy" Johnson and his precise mannerisms, William Trufant Foster and his merciless correction of themes (his was the most valuable course I ever had anywhere), George T. Files and his inspiring interpretations of German plays, and the god-like "Prexy" Hyde.

To this reviewer it seems unfortunate that this book has no bibliography. Surely the mention of titles of books about Chapel Hill and its university cannot fail to arouse in readers a desire to buy and read them. The way ought to be made easy for them to do so. People everywhere ought to know more about "The Southern Part of Heaven."

RICHARD HARWELL, The Confederate Hundred: A Bibliophilic Selection of Confederate Books: Beta Phi Mu, Urbana, Ill., 1964; pp. xxiii and 58; $5.00.

Mr. Harwell's Confederate Hundred is not a list of the one hundred most important books produced in the Confederacy; neither is it a list of the one hundred books considered most representative of Confederate life. Rather this list is finely balanced between the intrinsically important book and that book which serves primarily to illustrate an aspect of Confederate life. The books range from poetry, fiction, history, and translations to a catalogue of imported goods for sale, a city directory, sermons, school books, and government documents. Of course, the selection of such books is a personal choice, but no one is more qualified to make such a personal choice than Mr. Harwell, who has devoted years to the bibliographical and historical study of the Confederacy.

In addition to full publication notes, most of the books are annotated in an unusual and interesting manner — with selections "from the books themselves or from contemporary reviews of them; always only from sources that could have been available to a Confederate reader." The selections convey the spirit with which the book first greeted the reader.

Mr. Harwell's introduction traces the changes in the amount and kind of writing about the Civil War and treats historically the collecting of Civil War books.

Appropriately, The Confederate Hundred, Chapbook No. 7 in the series published by Beta Phi Mu, does not resemble the books of the Confederacy, some of which are "the most inelegant books perhaps ever made." Instead it is a handsome book, printed by the Anthoensen Press with plates by the Meriden Gravure Company.

HERBERT ROSS BROWN, Sills of Bowdoin: The Life of Kenneth Charles Morton Sills, 1879-1954: Columbia University Press, 1964; pp. xii and 440; $6.95.

A reviewer can hardly be more trite than to say that something or other is "heart-warming." Yet, when you are talking about Professor Brown's entertaining and highly informative biography of "Casey" Sills, the term is an apt one. Likewise, a reviewer is supposed to be careful about the use of superlatives. Yet you cannot imagine a Bowdoin man, or even a State-of-Mainer, reading this book without being profoundly moved and realizing he is in the presence of one of the intellectual and administrative giants of American education of the last fifty years, as well as one of God's chosen gentlemen.

Indeed, Professor Brown's magnificent book, obviously a labor of love on a subject and a locality for which he has tremendous affection, is almost as much a history of Bowdoin College for a fifty-year period as it is about the life and accomplishments of Kenneth Charles Morton Sills. No Bowdoin man since 1915 can possibly read it without feeling better, without remembering countless things he had forgotten about this remarkable man and the remarkable college which he attended. Nor can he read it without a pang in the realization that Casey and his wonderful wife no longer are there in their home on Federal Street.

You read how Sills came to Bowdoin as a student, then as a professor and Dean, and finally as President on the death of William DeWitt Hyde, another giant. And you are bound to get a catch in your throat as you read how he brought Edith Sills to 85 Federal Street — and "from that time forward no one would ever think of one without thinking of the other." Professor Brown realizes and pays affectionate tribute to Mrs. Sills and to what Casey, the College, and hundreds of alumni owe to her — a beautiful, understanding, and warm woman.

Over the long career of Sills as President you can read about his keeping the College on an even keel through wars and depression, his candidacy for the United States Senate, his work on the Passamaquoddy Bay Commission, the fight over the ending of the Bowdoin Medical School, his efforts to get Bowdoin a winning football team, and his human and understanding relations with Mitchell, Whittier, Cram, Hormell, George Roy Elliott (a honey if there ever was one), and a score of others. The Bowdoin man to whom this book does not bring back memories of the happiest time in his life indeed has lost something along the way.

It is hard to imagine how anybody could have done a better job than Professor Brown. President Sills was not an easy man to get to know intimately. Until you did, he seemed over-shy, reserved, quiet, and preoccupied. Yet he was one of the warmest human beings who ever lived, and Herbert Brown gets to the bottom of his personality and that of Edith Sills beautifully. He had no formal theological training; yet no man could have been more devoted to the church. He was no back-slapper or log-roller; yet he made hundreds of speeches at alumni affairs, and when the College had to have funds raised, he got them. Essentially a great teacher, he became a great administrator — truly a great man. His story and that of the college with which he was associated for more than fifty years are told interestingly and convincingly.

By this time you can see that this review has violated all the rules. Yet, again, you cannot read how the long Sills reign came to an end — how he and his wife took an extended trip around the world, where Bowdoin men galore entertained them, how he finally returned to Portland and passed away while still engrossed in many activities of retirement — without realizing how fortunate you are to have known such a man — even how much your life was influenced by his example, perhaps without your realizing it.

Andrew Carnegie, The Gospel of Wealth, edited by EDWARD C. KIRKLAND, John Harvard Library, 1962; pp. xxii and 239; $4.50.

In 1900 the Century Company published a collection of Andrew Carnegie's essays under the title The Gospel of Wealth, the great industrialist's views on topics ranging from the advantages of poverty to the future of Anglo-American cooperation, the doctrine of stewardship to the rights of the working man. Timely in 1900, these essays are significant today as much for their revelation of the workings of the business mind as for their substantive criticism of industrial America. Now they reappear in a handsome new addition to the John Harvard Library edited with full notes and a brilliant introduction by Professor Kirkland. It is a measure of the editor's success that his introductory analysis predisposes the reader to grant Carnegie the new hearing he apparently deserves.

Professor Kirkland's main purpose in making The Gospel of Wealth available once more is clear from the outset. "The republication of these essays," he writes, "should remove once and for all the commonplace notion that the whole business generation was one of 'robber barons' and that its members were all either crooks or clowns, dunces or hypocrites." His own response to the pugnacious Carnegie is sympathetic but not uncritical. Like many of his self-made colleagues, Carnegie was troubled by few lasting doubts about anything. His essays, whether extrapolating universal "laws" of Competition and Accumulation of Wealth or prescribing cures for labor strife, are marked by a sublime confidence in "practical" solutions propounded by no-nonsense fellows like himself. They are suffused with a profound contempt for the speculative and merely theoretical which, in a manner suggestive of Theodore Roosevelt's Strenuous Life, are equated with femininity and failure of nerve. Yet, as Professor Kirkland points out, Carnegie's own career was studded with the contradictory and the anachronistic. His definitions of business and the businessman followed the outlines of an earlier and outmoded interpretation of the Protestant ethic; and he fought to the very end against incorporation, clinging tenaciously to older and more personal methods of business management. Such contradictory elements give high color to the essays themselves, which are curious combinations of conservative bias and radical proposal, rigorous analysis and high-flown idealism.

Carnegie's treatment of ideas extends from self-indulgent sentimentality in the familiar "How I Served My Apprenticeship," with its praise of motherhood and poverty, to the shattering lucidity of his indictment of American imperialism in "Distant Possessions" and "Americanism Versus Imperialism." In between lies the middle-ground of his social thought, terrain cluttered with bogus scientific laws borrowed from Herbert Spencer, an unperceptive commentary on federalism, and patronizing views of the American labor movement. At his all too seldom best Carnegie is very good indeed, as in his devastating critique of ill-considered expansionist ventures. At his worst, in declaiming the advantages of poverty, he is downright silly. Generally, this middle-ground of his mind nurtures the plans for human betterment of a successful businessman who has thought strenuously but not deeply on some of the major social problems of his day.

In the last analysis it is with Carnegie as a thinker that Professor Kirkland would have us concern ourselves — with the business mind's contribution to social thought which he himself seeks to reassess. "When due attention has been given to these business writers and to the media in which their work appeared," he predicts, "the business literature of the age will compare favorably in bulk and in force with that of the reformists and critics." With the question of bulk I am not competent to deal, but to the revisionist argument of quality I must enter an exception. Despite its undeniable merits, The Gospel of Wealth simply is no match for Progress and Poverty, Wealth Against Commonwealth, or Looking Backward, books with which Professor Kirkland would have us compare it. With all their inaccuracies and faulty economics these texts opened a view of the good society which remained hidden to Carnegie. It is not simply "the ironies subsequent events of twentieth-century history have produced" which Carnegie failed to foresee but the whole intellectual and social topography of Progressive America with its new signposts and rules of the road. All the vast landscape of modern social thought, which for Carnegie was terra incognita, was first surveyed and staked out by those reformers and critics whom he dismissed as cranks and visionaries.

Carnegie, as Professor Kirkland makes clear, wrote of events as he saw them. He was a literate and articulate man of business, unique perhaps in the variety of his interests but still largely representative of the business mind, which the editor has done so much to illuminate. This new edition of The Gospel of Wealth reminds us that we are still in Professor Kirkland's debt.

1903 Secretary, Clement F. Robinson
P. O. Box 438
Brunswick

Phil Clifford, Dan Munro, and Leon Walker all registered in the Library at Commencement.

Harold Pratt has been in a nursing home for more than two years. His wife, Marguerite, reported in June, "We have six children and 30 grandchildren. The eldest, John, graduated from Harvard Law School in 1934, practices here in Washington, and spent two or three years in the Pacific as a Marine during World War II. He was badly injured in the Philippines but has carried on marvelously.

"The other two boys graduated from the Naval Academy. One is now an admiral, and the other retired as a captain after 30 years of service. The three girls, after college and two with jobs in Naval Intelligence, the third with ILO, married and have 17 of these grandchildren. One granddaughter graduated Phi Beta Kappa just last fall from Wellesley. Her brother will be a junior this fall at Harvard.

"One daughter is now at our home in Chocorua, N. H., to which we have gone for 45 years. The children really grew up there and are devoted to it, as the grandchildren now are. What with the large family, the children must take turns in going."

Dr. Joseph Ridlon of Gorham received a 55-year pin from the Maine Medical Association last June.

1904 Secretary, Wallace M. Powers
37-28 80th Street
Jackson Heights 72, N. Y.

Washington, D. C. 20007

Crowley, Scates, Stetson, and Toole signed the Registration Book at Commencement.

Waldoboro

Eleven members of the Class registered in the Library at our 55th Reunion in June: Ginn, Hovey, Hughes, Moulton, Pennell, Pottle, Smith, Stahl, Stanley, Stone, and Sturtevant. Campus headquarters were in South Hyde Hall, and the Friday dinner was held at the New Meadows Inn.

One by one the men of 1909 are closing ranks from the far-flung scenes of their later days. There have been some nice, recent letters reflecting the trend.

Wally Hayden writes from Washburn, Wisconsin. Now Washburn is a town (3,000-5,000 pop.) on Chequamegon Bay, an inlet of Lake Superior on the very northernmost shore of the state, seat of Bayfield County and a trade center for dairy and fruit products, a lumber area, and the location of a state fish hatchery. This is Wally's milieu. Here in younger days golf was his hobby, but now it is gardening — a truck patch, we fancy — which keeps him fascinatedly occupied. He speaks with pride of his Bowdoin association and truly hopes to renew his association with his classmates once more.

Another old classmate, Roy Harlow, has recently emerged from his luxurious seclusion, down the vale of Shenandoah at Bedford, between Lynchburg and Roanoke, Virginia. Here Harlow is located in a retreat for elderly gentlemen. Survival in such an environment must cost a pretty penny, but here certainly is a man's money's worth. There is everything needful for man's health and comfort — nice private apartments, dining room facilities, dispensary, hospital, theatre, and gymnasium. Roy was a marine in the First World War, was wounded and underwent a long period of hospitalization. He has been at Bedford since the death of his wife fourteen years ago. His son is a graduate of Miami University, Oxford, Ohio, and is now a professor at the University of Cincinnati, I think. But I am certain there was one thing Harlow never learned at Bowdoin, to wit, a pleasant mastery of legible penmanship. There are also two grandchildren — a boy and a girl.

Some time ago we awarded the laurel of durability to Thomas Davis Ginn. We may have been mistaken, for Paul Newman explains his absence from his fifty-fifth reunion as arising from the fact that a year ago he arranged a week's fishing trip with a couple of old Isaac Waltons, deep in the Canadian hinterland, 100 miles northeast of Montreal. This is some feat, that a man near eighty should and could penetrate the Canadian bush a mere hundred miles away from civilization. If not the most durable, perhaps Newman rates the title of the most eternal.

Our Class President, Justice Burton, is our most articulate contact. His appreciation and encouragement serve to keep the Acting Agent under a constant head of steam.

With each Bulletin a note of sadness creeps into our annals. On June 27, at 4:00 p.m., Anne Mabel Crossland Voter, widow of the late Professor P. Conant Voter, of Middlebury College, was buried from the Douglas Memorial Chapel at 1844 Mass. Avenue, Lexington. She leaves a daughter, Mrs. Carroll M. Williams of Lexington, Mass., and a son, Roger, of Wilmington, Delaware.

Dr. Charles S. F. Lincoln '91 attended Commencement, as usual, last June 13. On August 13 he observed his 95th birthday at his home in Brunswick. Shown here on that occasion are Professor Pat Quinby '23, Dr. Lincoln, Wolcott A. Hokanson, Jr. '50, and Dr. Lincoln's son, John D. Lincoln '29.

1910 Secretary, E. Curtis Matthews
59 Pearl Street
Mystic, Conn.

Back for our 54th in June and registered at the Library were Cary, Evans, Hale, Matthews, Ross, Warren, and Webster.

Carleton Eaton writes from his farm in Gray that he and Mollie move around quite a bit but that they usually settle in at their farm for the summer. They have five grandchildren by their son Tony '42.

In June Curt Matthews wrote, "Once again the illustrious Class of 1910 comes to the front with that magnificent gift of Henry Hawes and his wife. Looks as though we should all have gone into the beef-raising business. Henry, we salute you, and we should have a beef steak dinner from your farm on our 55th."

"Sabbath Reverie," a sonnet by Al Stone, was printed recently on the editorial page of the Boston Sunday Herald. Al is pastor of the Prospect Hill Congregational Church in Somerville, Mass.

1911 Secretary, Ernest G. Fifield
351 Highland Avenue
Upper Montclair, N. J.

Registered at Commencement in June for our 53rd Reunion were Black, Burns, Frank Davis, Hussey, Oxnard, Sanborn, and Wiggin.

Robert Bradford is retired and living in Livermore.

Don Dennis' son, Donald '51, is engaged to Miss Mary Lou Hartig of Berkeley Heights, N. J., the Alumnae Secretary at Cedar Crest College, Allentown, Pa., of which she is a graduate. Young Don is Librarian at Cedar Crest.

Lt. Comdr. Wilfrid Devine '48, son of the late John Devine, is now Assistant Inspector of Naval Material at the Pittsfield (Mass.) General Electric Ordnance Department. He is responsible for the administration of all government contracts, sub-contracts, and property within the local G.E. plants. Wilfrid and his wife, the former Gunilla Stjerfelt of Stockholm, Sweden, have two sons.

Hugh Hastings continues to be a member of the Board of Trustees at Fryeburg Academy.

114 Atlantic Avenue
Boothbay Harbor

Barbour, Bragdon, Bryant, Foss, Hill, McKenney, Marsh, Purington, Ridley, Welch, and Woodcock were all registered at Commencement for our 52nd Reunion.

1913 Secretary, Luther G. Whittier
R. F. D. 2
Farmington

Back in June for our 51st were Chef Abbott, Buck, Conant, Jones, Kennedy, Lunt, McNeally, Norton, Philoon, Pike, Savage, Shackford, Whittier, and Wood — a fine turnout of 14 men.

U. S. Senator Paul Douglas was the speaker at the commencement exercises at Southeastern Illinois College on May 31.

Sim Pike has been named as one of the three United States representatives on the Roosevelt Campobello International Park Commission.

Dr. Burton Walker has retired from his medical practice and is living with his son, Dr. H. Burton Walker, Jr. '43, at 3445 South Columbine Circle, Englewood, Colo.

1914 Secretary, Alfred E. Gray
Francestown, N. H.

Twenty members of 1914 attended our 50th Reunion in June — Lew Brown, Callahan, Chase, Coombs, Donahue, Farrar, Fowler, Gray, Hubbard, LaCase, Loeffler, Marr, Minott, Mitchell, Russell, Snow, Standish, Earle Thompson, Verrill, and Weatherill.

Campus headquarters were in East Coleman Hall, and Earle Thompson entertained the group at his summer home in West Boothbay. Thirty-nine people were present to partake of his hospitality, including classmates, wives, widows, Dr. Ralph Faulkingham of the Medical School Class of 1914, and four guests.

Pearl Bordeaux is Chairman of the Mount Desert Board of Assessors. He still has a garage but is not operating it at the present time. His son has a dairy business, and his daughter has the Mount Desert Camp Ground.

1915 Secretary, Harold E. Verrill
Ocean House Road
Cape Elizabeth

Back for our 49th and to help plan for our 50th next June were Adams, Demmons, Dow, Knowlton, Lappin, Jim Lewis, MacCormick, MacDonald, McKenney, Smith, Stone, Stowell, Talbot, and Verrill — a fine turnout of 14 men.

On August 15, at the alumni banquet of the Fryeburg Academy Alumni Association, George Bacon received the Distinguished Alumnus Award. He is the first recipient of the Award, which will be presented each year. George was in the Class of 1911 at Fryeburg.

1916 Secretary, Edward C. Hawes
180 High Street

Back for our 48th in June and registered at the Library were Baxter, Cartland, Church, Evans, Fitzgerald, Hargraves, Hawes, Head, Ireland, Larabee, Moulton, Niven, and Woodman.

Winthrop and Anna Bancroft spent some weeks during the summer at their Boothbay Harbor home.

Gene and Paulette Cronin are building a new home in Lewiston.

Word comes from California that Herb Foster, M.A.I., has recently sojourned in Hawaii and that Don Hight plans a European trip — doubtless all of which is in training for our 50th.

Joe Ginty died suddenly on June 15 at his home in Chestnut Hill, Mass. After service in World War I he began his long career in the paper industry. He was a most loyal member of the Class and a faithful attendant at reunions. Joe will be greatly missed. He is survived by his wife, Lillian.

Ralph Glidden reports that he is "just the same as usual. Getting older." He continues to live on Peaks Island in Casco Bay.

Larry Hart is Director of Public Relations for the Addison Gilbert Hospital Annual Giving Program of Gloucester, Mass.

Paul Niven has sent to many members of 1916 various newspaper clippings, pictures, and so forth that were gathered over the years and saved for future reminders by our late Secretary, Dwight Sayward. More of such material will be shown and distributed at our 50th Reunion, which, incidentally, is not so far away!

The late Phil Weatherill's son Warren '53 was married on June 20 to Miss Frances B. Hume of Seattle, Wash., a graduate of Mount Holyoke College and the Columbia University School of Occupational Therapy. They are living in Seattle, where she is an instructor in occupational therapy at the University of Washington and Warren is a research engineer with the Boeing Company.

In June Charlie Wyman wrote, "Just learning to talk again after throat operation a year ago. Selling Cadillacs and Oldsmobiles without talking has been financially terrible."

1917 Secretary, Noel C. Little
60 Federal Street
Brunswick

Returning in June for Commencement were Brick Bartlett, Bond, Fillmore, Fobes, Humphrey, Kuebler, Little, Maguire, Owen, Philbrick, Pierce, and Webber.

Deane Peacock has retired and lives in Phoenix, Arizona, at 2734 West Campbell Avenue in the winter and in Winthrop in Maine in the summer.

1918 Secretary, Lloyd O. Coulter
Nottingham Square Road
Epping, N. H.

Registered at Commencement for our 46th Reunion were Albion, Babbitt, Boyd, Coulter, Farmer, Gray, Hanson, Haskell, Johnson, Norton, Sloggett, Warren, Woodman, and Herman Young.

Bob Albion was re-elected President of the Maine Historical Society last June.

Lloyd Claff has been awarded the American Heart Association's Meritorious Service Medal. He and his associate, Dr. Armand A. Crescenzi, a New York thoracic surgeon, continue to work at the Lerner Marine Laboratory at Bimini in the Bahamas. There they have been experimenting with the heart-lung artificial kidney device which they have been developing together for the past seven years. During the spring and early summer they used sharks as experimental animals, keeping them alive out of water by this device.

On July 1, 1962, Stafford Derby retired from his position as Chief of the New York News Bureau of the Christian Science Monitor. Since that time he and Evelyn have been living in Sanford, Fla., where his address is 1305 East 24th Street. Staff is serving as First Reader at the First Church of Christ, Scientist, in Sanford. He writes, "This study, plus a continued interest in gardening, boating on the lakes and river, and my photography are making these happy, useful, and interesting years."

1919 Secretary, Donald S. Higgins
78 Royal Road
Bangor

Class Secretary Don Higgins reports, "Twenty-two members of the Class of 1919 and 17 wives were in attendance at our 45th Reunion, which proved to be the best yet. Our off-campus headquarters at Sebasco were delightful, and we were fortunate to have three sunny, warm days to enjoy it."

1919 at its 45th Reunion in June.

"On Friday evening we traveled by bus to and from Brunswick, where our class dinner was held at the Hotel Eagle from eight to eleven o'clock. Immediately following it, Roy Foulke was elected President by acclamation, in spite of an effort on his part to nullify the action. After recovering from parliamentary defeat, he graciously assumed the office which had been thrust upon him, and things began to happen. Hidden prizes of important criteria such as height, weight, distance traveled, number of grandchildren, and the like were distributed. All the recipients were appropriately serenaded as they received their prizes.

"The new President then proceeded with an interesting program, with all the talent drawn from the assembled group. Among those who took part were Roy Foulke, Andy Rollins, Paul Doherty, Mike Sullivan, Gordon Hargraves, Wes Coburn, and Don Higgins.

"Others present at the dinner were John McClave, Huck Finn, Lou Doherty, Bill Hill, Reg Lombard, Harold Sawyer, Hugh Mitchell, Shep Paul, Hal Hersum, Ben Smethurst, Don Tebbets, John Gardner, Orson Berry, Eric Simmons, and Dan Mahoney."

Jonathan's address is P. O. Box 755, Central Valley, Calif.

In July Evarts Wagg wrote, "I retired three years ago after 38 years with Bell Telephone. I am now more active in political, civic, and church affairs, besides keeping our half-acre lot well groomed. In 1962 we went to California and in 1963 to Europe, with featured stops at London, Amsterdam, Paris, Switzerland, Venice, Rome, and Nice. It was a tremendous experience for me (first trip over).

"We also visit our grandsons — three in Michigan and four in New Mexico — so we get a chance to see much of this country. Our address is 9014 Alton Parkway, Silver Spring, Md."

Bruce White has a grandson, Rupert B. Crouch, entering Bowdoin this fall.

Last April 30 the New York Credit and Financial Management Association presented to Roliston Woodbury its highest award — the Laurel — marking the first time it had ever been given to a past president of the organization. He also was presented a life membership in the Association.

The Association's President, G. H. Bush, paid tribute to Woody at a special luncheon on April 30, saying, in part, "One of the best liked figures in the trade, Woody has had that unique gift of always being a true gentleman regardless of the situation or the circumstances — a gentleman who has rarely, if ever, been able to turn down an opportunity to help others or serve a worthy cause. Scores of once unemployed credit men will long remember how he used his influence to help them find new connections.

"Woody — by his deeds a man shall be known. By yours you will never be forgotten! Your career has been an inspiration to all of us. Your dedication to your industry and to your fellow man has been without peer.

"However well deserved your retirement may be, the credit field will be poorer for it. Without your active presence in it, something will be missing.

"But credit as a profession will continue to grow in stature and will prosper — because a man named Woodbury helped to give it stature!"

ERNEST MARTIN HOPKINS Honorary 1944

Dr. Ernest M. Hopkins, President Emeritus of Dartmouth College, died on August 13, 1964, at his summer home in Southwest Harbor. Born on November 6, 1877, in Dunbarton, N. H., he was graduated from Dartmouth in 1901 and worked with Wm. Filene's Sons and the New England Telephone and Telegraph Company in Boston, Western Electric Company in Chicago, and the Curtis Publishing Company in Philadelphia before becoming President of Dartmouth in 1916. He became President Emeritus in 1945. For years he was a Director in such firms as the Boston and Maine Railroad, the New England Telephone and Telegraph Company, the Brown Company, Continental Can Company, the Rumford Press, and the National Life Insurance Company of Vermont, of which he was also President and Chairman of the Board. He served as a Trustee of Worcester Academy and Phillips Andover Academy.

A member of Phi Beta Kappa and Delta Kappa Epsilon at Dartmouth, President Hopkins held honorary degrees from seventeen colleges and universities. The citation which President Sills read on June 24, 1944, when Bowdoin conferred an honorary doctor of laws degree upon him, said, in part, ". . . wise counsellor to all who seek advice, from freshmen to senators and railroad presidents who equally need his counsel; appropriately taken into our Bowdoin family both by his own right and to strengthen the friendly ties which began with the first two presidents of Bowdoin College a century and a quarter ago and have been firm ever since; senior in service of all New England college presidents; beloved by his colleagues, youthful in his outlook and energy, living in the hearts of Dartmouth men, honored and respected by the sons of other academic mothers."
