PREFACE

It is my privilege to announce this first issue of the Journal of International Law's fourteenth year. International Antitrust and the other International Business topics which will be covered in Volume fourteen deserve our close attention in as much as they promise to impact upon the daily lives of the world's inhabitants in this age of economic interdependence.

Our fourteenth year has been one of tremendous growth and industry. I would like to express deep gratitude to the staff and the members of the Executive and Editorial Boards who have worked long, hard hours in an effort to guide the direction of that growth. Serving with people of such dedication, conscience, and good spirit is an experience I will not forget.

The Journal staff extends a vote of thanks to our faculty advisor, Sidney Picker, Jr. our consort and mentor. A special thanks goes to Dean Lindsey Cowen for his advice and support both this year and in years past.
