EDITOR'S NOTES

The following are the proceedings of a Conference held under the auspices of the Canada-United States Law Institute and Case Western Reserve University School of Law. The Conference was held in Cleveland, Ohio, April 12-14, 1991. The theme of the Conference was The Law and Economics of Dispute Resolution in the Canada-U.S. Context.

The articles and discussions printed here have been compiled from transcripts of the Conference and papers provided by the speakers. Minimal editing has been done in order to preserve the spirit of the conference while ensuring clarity of expression. Questions regarding unfootnoted factual assertions should be addressed to the authors.

Footnotes have been placed in the format which complies with A Uniform System of Citations (15th ed.). The Journal recognizes that some discrepancies exist between the preferred citation system in the United States and that in Canada. The Case Western Reserve Journal of International Law is presently compiling a comprehensive listing of international citation systems for publication, with a view towards eliminating the inconvenience inherent in the present uniform system. Any comments or suggestions regarding this undertaking should be directed to the Editor-in-Chief of the Journal of International Law.

The views expressed within are those of the authors or Conference participants and do not necessarily reflect the opinions or policies of any organization, governmental agency, corporation, etc. with which they may be affiliated.

The Editor would like to thank those people who have assisted in the production and printing of this volume. The Editor is especially grateful to Debra Hairston of the Case Western Reserve University Law School Staff. Canada-United States Law Journal, Vol. 17 [1991], Iss. 1, Art. 5
