Co-Editors Choose Staffs, Make Plans for 1958 'Ruby'

According to Tom Bennis, co-editor of the 1958 "Ruby," next year's staff is "trying to stress a modern "Ruby." Ursinus looks to the future will be the theme of the book. Type in the book will be modern, having no capital letters used in names. A different use of shapes will be stressed. Pictures will be in triangles, circles, rhombi, and other geometrical figures. The staff hopes to be able to use color in the book.

The 1958 Ruby will emphasize more informality with the use of the modern touch. There will be more pictures of subjects never treated before. Special activities, such as the Meistersinger's tour, the student-faculty show, and the "Y" retreats, will be featured.

YW-YMCA Present Last Song Program

Last Wednesday at 6:30 p.m. in Bomberger Chapel, Ursinians were privileged to hear Robert Groeters, baritone, excellently accompanied by his wife, Ruth, at the piano, sing selections of art songs in English, German, French and Italian. Dr. Groeters, professor at Temple University, lecturer, and musician, at the beginning of the entertainment, gave a brief lecture on the origins of the art song from religious music and folk songs and mentioned points of interest about each song before singing it. Brahms, Schubert, Schumann, Strauss, Tschalkovsky, and Debussy were among the composers heard in this charming musical form. The art song is essentially a poem set to music; such diverse figures as Goethe, Heinrich Heine and America's own Robert Frost and Conrad Aiken were represented. Dr. Groeters commented upon the enthusiastic receptivity of his audience.

The Groeters' appearance was the last of a series of art song presentations successfully sponsored by the Ursinus YW-YMCA this year. On March 6 a student program presented by Miss Marian Spangler, instructor in the Department of Music at Ursinus, gave us Tom Bennis and Don Todd singing selections from Schubert and Schumann, accompanied by Lynn Jewett, cellist, and Miss Spangler at the piano. The March 20 performance featured two graduates of the Curtis Institute, both of whom have sung with the Philadelphia Grand Opera Company; Estelle Cramers, soprano soloist, sang Italian and French art songs, while Anne Simons, contralto, sang art songs of a German derivation.

And They Said They Couldn't Do It

The seniors have every right to be proud today! This past week-end has shown Ursinus the stuff of which they are made, and, as a result, all the college has shared in their work—for all of us will be identified with the accomplishment of the Senior Class.

"Two-Timer" was a show to set bells ringing. Everything about it was fine—the book, the music, the lyrics, and the cast that lifted it from ink markings on paper to effervescent life. No praise could equal the work that went into this original musical comedy. It is well enough to make a success out of a Broadway play that has been proved worthy of a performance by a year-long run, but to start from nothing and accomplish what was seen in the Thompson-Gay Gymnasium on Friday and Saturday is the ideal of all who have set a goal.

We have more to thank the seniors for, however. Their efforts have revived again the tradition of a Senior Show—an event that has been missing in the past few years. This should certainly quell the few that have said it couldn't be done with our "limited resources." It is obvious now that our resources are many and varied, and there is no reason why an equal talent could not be found in each class. Juniors, sophomores, and freshmen, take heed!

: Lantern Review :

by Annette Wynia

The editorial page (unhappily at the beginning) makes one hesitate to continue on. It begins with some inane and saccharine comments on the included articles. The editors would do well in the future to let the articles speak for themselves. Following directly after are some attempts at humour which were an improvement over the last issue. All told, however, the current Lantern is an enjoyable, interesting reading experience.

Some of the articles are quite well done, others at least adequate. The newsy editor tells us at the beginning that the author of Samarra Train purloined his theme from Somerset Maugham. One is reminded of Maugham's stories and a comparison is inevitable. It is unfortunate to be compared with a master when one is merely an apprentice.

The authors of these short stories and sketches seem to share the idea that dramatic, powerful moments in history are the stuff around which one can easily build a plot or impression. In this issue we coincidentally have four such historical moments: the death of Vargas, the sinking of the Bismarck, the death of George VI, and the

Play Review:

Two Timer

Saturday night saw the curtain ring down on the first original musical-comedy Ursinus has presented in years. The team of Herwig, Sella, and Ryan can be proud of their brain-child. Working against a frightful lack of time, the authors and directors managed to bring to the stage not merely a show but a good one, and the audience, aware of the miracle of such a feat, was highly appreciative. The show closed tumultuously with three curtain calls and two encores.

Starring a cast of virtually untried talent (at least in the field of musical-comedy), Two-Timer rolled easily from one of Vinnie Ryan's lilting melodies to another, and opened up the entire field of musicals to the usually score-shy Curtain Club. Featuring the fine voices of Hal McWilliams and Eileen Connor, the beautiful Sweetness and Light and Love Comes Through climaxed the show with a fitting crescendo.

In addition to the sterling performances rendered by Eileen and McWilliams, Scott Taylor and Marge Dawkins, the former a high-brained kid and the latter a lovely barmaid, did more than their share to round out the leads. Scott's touching rendition of Pornography and Calypso broke the audience in half; while Marge's Lament in conjunction with half a dozen others was a Saturday night show stopper.

Wayne Millward and Barbara Olmo, playing Jim McWilliams' parents, did an admirable job of handling the snobbish parent role, while Joan Bradley (Nicole) surprised everyone with a lovely voice and fine characterization. Strangely enough, or perhaps not so strange really, was that Dick Hummel got the real belly-laughs of the show. Speaking less than one line, the grand old man of the U.C. stage rocked them in the aisles just serving two martinis. It has been speculated that Dick Hummel would probably get a laugh if he did nothing more than just come to see the show.

Much credit should go to Bob Engel who played the bartender and to the chorus whose excellent participation insured the show's success. Certainly one of the highlights of the evening was the soft shoe number by Joan Finney, Joan Clement, Doris Lockett, Les Applegate, Ed Sella, Al Breidegam, and George Brown, who rickety-ticked their way to terrific applause.

But the laurels of the evening must go to Bobbe Hunt and Ed Sella for whipping the show up in so short a time and especially to Karl Herwig who wrote the show. Vincent Ryan, Julliard Music School student, did credit to his alma mater with his beautiful score. The truly tragic part of the show was that little or no provision was made for recording properly so that the music may be lost before long, but this reporter has been informed that there is a taped record of the show somewhere about with which the composer may be able to do something.

: A MODERN FAIRY TALE :

by Ann Leger

Once upon a time there was a picturesque tranquil little country called Hungroslovakia. This country was in an isolated part of the world, surrounded by high mountains which had a crooked, narrow path cut into them as the only way to ride into or out of the country. And near the path was a small, delightful river where the people of Hungroslovakia met for their gay festivals. These people, called Hungroslovakians, or Hungs for short, appeared to outsiders to be a privileged group with many advantages. But foreigners did not know that the Hungs were really unhappy. Now this sadness seemed unreasonable at first because the Hungs were taken care of by a providential king who sheltered and clothed and fed them. He even proclaimed festivals for his subjects, and on these days the people laughed and danced in the town square or down by their river. But the King, who thought he was doing the best he could for the Hungs, was criticized by his subjects. The Hungs knew that whenever any of their number had to venture over the crooked, narrow path to do business in the outside world, he was not always equipped to meet the problems of the restless and busy world, having been sheltered for such a long time in tranquil Hungroslovakia. Even though there was an occasional sign of unrest, the trouble was usually settled by the King and his advisors without disturbing the quietness too much. The Hungs, after having assembled peacefully in the

U. C. Mermaids Complete Season; Finish With Two Wins, Three Losses

On February 25, 1957, the Ursinus mermaids were defeated by West Chester 41-16. In the back stroke, Merle Syvertsen placed second with Linda Wolf coming in third. Jackie Robbins took second in the butterfly and third in the free style. In the diving competition, Stevie Nichols was awarded third place. The relay team of Tama Williams, Lucy Faye Syvertsen and Robbins were defeated. The medley team of Syvertsen, Wolf, and Faye also lost to the strong West Chester team.

The mermaids came back on February 27 to sneak by Temple 29-28. In the free style, Lucy Faye finished second with Jackie Robbins third. Merle Syvertsen swam to a first place in the back stroke with the winning time of 29.2. Jackie Robbins and Linda Wolf finished first and second in the butterfly. The winning time was 30.5. Stevie Nichols placed third in the diving event. The medley team of Syvertsen, Wolf, and Faye lost a very close race to the Temple medley team, but in the relay, Faye, Syvertsen, Tama Williams, and Robbins nosed through in 1:44.0 to give Ursinus their final win. The relay also clinched the meet for the determined Ursinus team.

Chestnut Hill defeated the Ursinus swimming team 42-15, on March 5. Jackie Robbins was third in the free style and the butterfly. Merle Syvertsen finished third in the back stroke. In diving competition, Stevie Nichols captured second place for Ursinus. Syvertsen, Linda Wolf and Debbie Rogers were upset by the Chestnut Hill medley team. The Ursinus relay team of Sally Garside, Kathy Sheffield, Rogers, and Robbins marked the final defeat of the meet.

On March 7, the Ursinus mermaids lost a thriller to Beaver College 25-22. Ursinus gave Beaver a tough fight, but Beaver finally emerged the victor in the closely-fought match. In the free style Jackie Robbins placed third. Merle Syvertsen and Linda Wolf came in first and third in the back stroke with the winning time, 29.0. Linda Wolf also placed second in the butterfly. Judy Berry captured third place for Ursinus in the diving competition. Lucy Faye, Syvertsen and Wolf were defeated by Beaver in the medley. Syvertsen, Tama Williams, Faye, and Robbins won the relay in 1:44.2.

On March 12, the Ursinus mermaids defeated Penn 33-24. Jackie Robbins and Lucy Faye started off for Ursinus first and third in the free style. The winning time was 25.5. In the back stroke, Merle Syvertsen captured first place with Linda Wolf finishing third. Robbins and Wolf finished first and third in the butterfly with the winning time 30.0. Stevie Nichols finished third in the diving competition. The medley team of Syvertsen, Wolf, and Faye also won for Ursinus in 40.1. ## Belles Complete Successful Season

Under the experienced coaching of Miss Eleanor Snell and the able organizing of captain Marge Dawkins the Ursinus girls' basketball team ended a very successful season by adding two more victories to their credit. The Belles defeated Temple on March 19, 78-48, and Rosemont two days later, 75-30.

The Ursinus team won nine of their ten games. Hopes for another undefeated season were crushed by the loss to Beaver early in the season. The girls were also victorious over Albright, 71-34; William and Mary, 82-34; Immaculata, 65-29; West Chester, 36-33; East Stroudsburg, 73-58; Reading, 59-49; and Gettysburg, 61-23.

Vonnie Gros, outstanding Ursinus forward, set the scoring pace with an average of 35.9 points a game. This exceeds her fine record of last year by 5.9 points per game. Vonnie's highest scoring game this season was against East Stroudsburg when she tallied 53 points.

Freshmen Faye Bardman and Sue Wagner completed the offensive trio. Faye played a fine season, averaging 16.5 points per game, and Sue came through with a season's total of 59. Sophomore Carolyn Custer joined the Varsity ranks late in the season, but performed excellently. One of the most valuable players this year was the versatile Pat Woodbury. Pat, a very fine guard, alternated at forward and proved a very accurate scorer.

Belles Beginning Tennis Practice

Favorable prospects for a season which will equal or better last spring's 6-1 record are prevalent as the girls have begun intensive practice in preparation for their opening tennis match the last week of this month with a tentative William and Mary opponent scheduled for April 25.

The squad, coached by Jeneffer P. Shillingford, is led by a nucleus of veterans returning from last year's varsity. Carol LeCato, Captain Connie Cross, Bunny Alexander, Vonnie Gros, and Rene Rawcliffe, who will be back in action after last spring's incapacitated knee, are joined by several talented freshmen such as Jeanne LeCato, Joanne Scholl, Sandy Rinehart, and Bev. Kalenbach in producing what appears to be well-balanced and powerful Varsity and Junior Varsity teams.

Other candidates include the following: Hub Carpenter, Lee Meitzner, Joyce Gilbert, Anne Hall, Marty Menchey, Sue Wagner, Carol Williamson, Mary Lou Moock, Becky Francis, Gail Snyder, and Sally Leshner. Merle Syvertsen is manager for the '57 squad.

Lantern . . .

Battle of Antietam. It must be said that the authors managed to give reality, intensity, and emotion to historical fact.

The Lantern closed on a hopeful note with some worthwhile comments on poetry and life—all meriting a second glance at least. Hope for The Lantern lies in the fact that this essay, and to a lesser extent all the other writings, show that we have talent and thought among us. These contributors plus other talent that might, with a bit of investigation, be discovered can build The Lantern into a magazine that would rank with the leading college publications. With this issue it has shown itself to be worthwhile—an asset to Ursinus.

Applications may be obtained from the State Civil Service Commission, Box 569, Harrisburg, Pennsylvania.

town square and protested these measures a number of times, decided that this method would not bring any change in the benevolent government of their tiny realm and no longer made any attempts to protest. The unrest continued, however, and one beautiful spring day, a group of capricious Hungs was charged disobedience. Now this was not the first case of disobedience on the part of the Hung people, and the King and his advisors decided that something stricter than usual would have to be done. The people's council was called upon to look into the facts, and after due deliberation the people's council decided that the defendants' activities should be curtailed. Some of the subjects were unhappy about this settlement and made known their dissatisfaction. After looking into the issue and all of its possible ramifications, the advisors set up a different punishment. But still some of the subjects were dissatisfied because they believed that the little group of disobedient Hungs should not be overly punished either.

All the subjects in Hungoslovakia heard about this issue, and all over the quaint villages of the realm, little cliques of Hungs discussed the problem. The women talked about it in the morning as they hung their wash and scrubbed their windows. The men mulled over the question as they sat on their porches late in the afternoon, quietly drinking or smoking. The children heard snatches of the adults' conversations and talked about it too in their small childish way. Since communications throughout the sovereignty of Hungoslovakia were as quaint as the colorful, picturesque hamlets and show places of Hungoslovakia, all sorts of opinions and viewpoints were uttered. The episode snowballed until every Hung in every corner of Hungoslovakia had his own view of the story as well as his own opinions and castigations.

The fruits of the countryside turned ripe with the advent of summer, the little river still flowed peacefully along, and the high mountains still guarded Hungoslovakia, but the Hungs themselves did not live peacefully ever after. The hurt feelings and wounds on the part of the Hung citizenry were not soon healed, and the subjects were sorrowful for many years after because they thought of all the earlier unsuccessful protests; and some continued to believe that an earlier amelioration of the country's legal code and system would have prevented all their unhappiness.

Mental Health Wk. Apr. 28 thru May 4

Percy C. Madeira, Jr., president of the Mental Health Association of Southeastern Pennsylvania and chairman of the executive committee of Traders-Bank and Trust Co., will be general chairman for Mental Health Week activities in this area.

The announcement was made March 25 by Richard C. Hunter, executive director of the association.

Mental Health Week, scheduled for April 28 through May 4, will be conducted nationally for the ninth straight year.

In Philadelphia, Chester, Delaware and Montgomery Counties, the event will be sponsored by the Southeastern Pennsylvania Association.

Mr. Madeira will coordinate activities with suburban leaders who will serve as County chairmen.

They include M. Wesley Detwiler, of Norristown, for Montgomery County; Evan Randolph, of Radnor, for Delaware County; and William L. Hires, of Gladwyne, with Mrs. John C. Garner, of Wayne, for Chester County.

An intensive educational campaign will be conducted to acquaint the public with facts about mental illness. Special emphasis will be placed this year on rehabilitation of mental patients.

Slogan for the 1957 campaign is: "The Mentally Ill Can Come Back—Help Them."

Programs will be conducted throughout the week in mental hospitals, schools, clinics, churches and other organizations to point up the importance of proper facilities, care and treatment for the mentally ill.

Attention also will be focused on better mental health for the community-at-large. Libraries will exhibit appropriate literature dealing with the problem. Film presentations will be given and group discussions will be held in every community.

The Mental Health Association of Southeastern Pennsylvania is an organized citizens' movement designed to improve conditions for the mentally ill and to promote sound mental health in the community.

It is supported principally by the United Fund in this area, and is an affiliate of Pennsylvania Mental Health, Inc. and the National Association for Mental Health.
