PROFESSOR JOHN WENTWORTH CLAWSON, A. M.
Professor of Mathematics and Physics

Professor John Wentworth Clawson

JOHN WENTWORTH CLAWSON was born in St. Johns, New Brunswick, Canada, the twenty-sixth of November, 1881. His father is a Canadian by birth, while his mother is an American of English descent.

When he was old enough to attend public school he began laying the foundation of his education in the public schools of St. Johns. After having absorbed all the knowledge which he could obtain at this place, he attended the University of New Brunswick, Fredericton, Canada, where he received the A.B. degree in 1901.

His parents, recognizing that he was one whose education should not cease at this point, made immediate preparations for him to attend Cambridge, where he registered the following fall in Queen's College. Here our Professor of Mathematics studied for three years in the subject in which he has proven himself to be a very proficient teacher. From this place he graduated in 1904, receiving the degree of Bachelor of Arts, with honors.

In the following year, 1905, he was elected Lecturer in Astronomy at Cambridge. During this year Professor Clawson pursued a further course of study, and in the following spring received the A.M. degree.

In 1906 Professor Clawson was elected Instructor in Physics in the Ohio State University, which position he held for one year. In the fall of the following year he entered into active work at Ursinus as Professor of Mathematics and Physics, which position he has capably filled ever since.

Besides occupying the chair of Physics and Mathematics, he was elected in 1909 as assistant to the Dean of the College to take charge of the office records. Since the assigning of this work to Professor Clawson, it is a very easy matter to get the sometimes needed information from the office, as everything is kept systematically and in order.

Professor Clawson is not only interested in his class work, but also takes a deep interest in the activities of the college. Whenever it is necessary to do any surveying, either on the athletic field or on the college property in general, he is always willing and ready to lend his time and services.

The members of the group of which Professor Clawson is the adviser find in him a true friend, as it is to these that he is best known. This is due to the deep personal interest which he takes in each member of his group.

THE Class of 1911, after many hours of toil and labor, takes pleasure in introducing the 1911 Ruby to you. From the start our class has been seriously handicapped by reason of its smallness. On this account this book is distinctly representative of the class, each and every member having some particular work to do. Besides, all the work of this volume has been done by members of the 1911 class. If this book merits any applause, the credit is due to the class as a whole and not to any individual member or members. We have endeavored to maintain and even to surpass the standards set by our predecessors. Whether or not we have accomplished our purpose, we will let the decision to our patrons.

Senior Class History

A RETROSPECTIVE view of the activities of the Class of Nineteen Ten discloses the fact that we have much more to be proud of than to regret. There have been some things in our history to be regretted; sometimes we have failed when we should, by greater effort, have been successful. However, on the whole, our life, with its elevations and depressions of spirit, its pleasures and pains, and its many successes and few failures, we hope is worthy of the admiration and imitation of following classes.

The Class of 1910 in its Freshman year included thirty members. This was the largest class in the history of Ursinus College, and it must be admitted that it distinguished itself in other ways than through numbers. The bodily struggles with the "Soph's" during the first few days of the school; the sudden destruction of the Sophomore posters; the artistic work of the class numeral artists on the standpipe and elsewhere are but a few of our many victories. Then there was the Freshman football season with its two games and two decisive victories, closely followed by the remarkably pleasant class banquet, at which every member was present. But all was not roses this year, and the less said about the baseball game the better.

About the middle of September, 1907, the Class of 1910, with its original spirit, but lacking four members, returned to take up the prosecution of another year's work. After putting down several insurrections of the unruly Freshmen, and covering the beautiful surroundings of the college with large green posters, the class won a decisive victory in the interclass football game, receiving the much-coveted interclass championship. Two lamentable things happened this year. In the fall the Freshies took advantage of our piety and on a Sabbath stole away to their banquet. This sad affair followed in the spring by a second deplorable escapade on the diamond.

Since that time all has been well. The Class of 1912 followed our good example when they swept everything before them, and gave us no reasons to doubt that our successors would continue to uphold that standard which we set for them. The reception and dance tendered by this class to us, even with the enforced absence of the ice-cream, was one of the most pleasing events of our history.

Our contributions to college activities have been far from meagre, in every line except baseball. We are represented on the gridiron, on the tennis court, track, and in the various musical clubs of the college. But it is along social lines that the class most distinguishes itself. Quite a few of its members are regulars, a few sad ones are engaged, while there are several who are trying hard to enlist in either class. This devotion to society has in no way hindered the intellectual work of the class, and its class standing has been uniformly good.

As the time for our dissolution (as a class) approaches, we look with feelings akin to sadness on the prospect of leaving this place we have learned to love so well. We have a work to do, however, and the conflict with the stern realities of a struggle for existence will show us of how much use our work and associations have been.

1910 Class Poem

When to the end of college days we come,
With sadness look we o'er the days gone by.
How vivid seems each memory when rehearsed!
How longings for the past with future vie!

While dear to us are musings on the past,
How vain that we should write our thoughts in verse!
Yet custom binds us to the brainless task—
Our aim is futile and our results worse.

Why should we yield our memories of the past?
Why open thus our shrine of inner thought?
What cares the world how prize we times gone by?
To her what matters deeds that we have wrought?

The memories which we cherish most are those
Which we to others would not wish revealed;
And so with class achievements, class exploits—
We prize them more if in our memory sealed.

The world is careless of our deeds at school.
She has exploits—her own—to brag about.
While we might vaunt our feats with honest pride,
We wish not to subject them to her doubt.

So then, as classmates though at length we part,
To Nineteen Ten let us be true for e'er.
"Virtute et labore" we've achieved;
Our interests now we leave in others' care.

Junior Class History

THE Class of 1911 has a modest and unimposing history. Now that we have advanced to the rank of Juniors, we are proud to relate our career in the college, and to hint at the possibilities in life's field of battle. Our conduct has been an exemplary one, and all future classes will do well to emulate us and thus immortalize the noble sentiments which we have struggled so faithfully to establish in these classic halls.

Three years ago we matriculated in Ursinus College as Freshmen. Immediately we organized, and as a class noticed the conditions to which we fell heir. The appearance of class numerals on the college buildings was repulsive to us. For this reason the 1911 numerals do not adorn college property in conspicuous places. The following year when we attained to the ranks of Sophomores we did not even take notice of the splashes of corruption of the class over which we were the guardians.

Let us begin our catalogue of actions with those things which, during our Freshman year, caused us the most sorrow—the first of these being our defeat in the class rush. This defeat, however, was not due to lack of valor but to lack of contestants. During the same year we lost the Freshman-Sophomore football game, but only after a fierce struggle on the part of our opponents.

Now that we have mentioned those things that were unpleasant to us, we take more pleasure in narrating those events in which we were successful—the first of these being the banquet. In spite of the fact that we were watched day and night, we were able to avoid the vigilance of the Sophomores. Even after we were many miles distant, the "Sophs" were of the opinion that if we could be found the banquet could be broken up. With this end in view, they roamed over the hills of Montgomery and part of Chester County searching for their little charges. After spending an entire night and day, they were compelled to return to the college altogether ignorant of our whereabouts. While the gloomy and disconsolate "Sophs" were trying to solve the mystery, we were seated around the banquet board enjoying a most elaborate feast.

It is with modest pride that we relate the victory gained on the baseball diamond in our Freshman year, winning from our opponents by the score of 19-2. We regret very much that on account of the small size of our class we were unable to engage in athletic contests in our Sophomore year.

As students the Class of 1911 ranks high. Psychology and economics refresh our intellects, and we renew our journey in quest of happiness. A 1911 student is never defeated in classic aspirations and in attainments in the arts and sciences. In the exciting rush toward the goal of attaining unto the wisdom of the Greeks and the Romans, we have learned to hold reins with the most furious contestants.

It would require volumes to relate all the glorious deeds of this class. A brief summary must suffice. One-third of the male members play on the Varsity football team. Several of the class are invaluable members of the musical clubs of the institution. In fact, no phase of college life is neglected by the 1911's and complete without the support of the same.

So much for our past. We are now laying the cornerstone for the success of the coming Senior year, and then we shall look out over the broad expanse of life's possibilities.

Mary Nina Austerberry

"The rose, although in thorny shrubs she spread,
Is still the rose—her beauties wax not dead."

THE subject of this sketch is one of those rare, sweet maidens with dreamy brown eyes and a "Mary" smile, Mary Nina Austerberry. She was born in the little borough of Trappe in the early nineties. When she was only a few years of age her parents moved to Jersey. Here she enjoyed many pleasant hours playing in the sand on the seashore. About eight years ago the family returned to Trappe, where "Meg," or "Mary Ann" as she is called by her friends, completed her elementary education, graduating from the High School of Trappe with honors.

Desirous of more knowledge "Meg" registered as a fourth-year student in the Ursinus Academy. This year of school life she claims to be the best year of her life. She occupied her time in taking long walks, especially during the nutting season, and by making excellent use of the alcoves in the library. As for her studies, they were left to take care of themselves; however, "Meg" entered college with the Class of 1911.

There is much to be related about the college life of this maiden, indeed too much to be mentioned here. Her happy, genial disposition has won for her many friends. In the classroom Mary shines with her other classmates. She is a staunch member of the Zwinglian Literary Society and a true and worthy supporter of the Phi Alpha Psi Club.

It is mostly in the social world that "Meg" has won her medals. At the beginning of her life at Ursinus, Mary was often the cause of would-be duels, the contestants always being members of the Class of 1910. The fortunate contestant of the would-be duels and Mary soon joined the ranks of the regulars, and for several years Mary and the champion could be seen at every shine at Ursinus. At the present time "Meg" is one of the volunteers.

Mary is extremely fond of outdoor sports, especially rowing and skating. In fact, she is so fond of skating that she was heard to say, "I could die skating." Then, too, her spiritual nature has been developed, being a worker of the Y. W. C. A. and a diligent student in her Bible Study Class, being especially fond of studying the books of Samuel (?).

After Mary's college days are over, she contemplates teaching for a few years and then take up the study of medicine. Her ambition is to become a servant of the sick and needy. But whatever her life work may be, we can predict nothing but the brightest of futures for her.

David Ellis Bunting

"He is the mildest mannered man."

THIS dainty little morsel of human flesh, whose noble physiognomy illuminates this page, first began experimenting with his optics in the infinitesimal village of Allentown, New Jersey, some time during the year 1889. The exact time of the year is not precisely known, but indications point to, and most eminent historians and biographers accept, February 25 as the date of his birth.

At the youthful age of two his parents transported him bodily to Trenton. This beautiful city immediately became an important city on the face of the earth. Here he remained for about eight years, and it was here he met a certain young lady with whom he has formed a friendship which has lasted ever since.

After breaking a large number of show windows, as well as quite a number of faces (for it must be remembered that this boy with the angelic countenance has quite a temper), he returned to the "Deserted Village," Allentown, New Jersey.

We must not forget that much of his time during this period was spent in the public schools, laying the foundation of his education. In 1904, after winning many gold prizes for good conduct (?), he graduated from the Allentown High School. In the fall of the same year he entered Bordertown Military Academy. Here David took a prominent part in athletics—especially in baseball. His skill as a player was recognized by the other members of the team, and he was elected captain of the 1907 nine.

"Baby" was graduated from the Bordertown Military Academy in the spring of 1907. Three months later a long-legged, skinny person was noticed on the front campus of Ursinus, and it was none other than "Dave" Bunting. At Ursinus real life began for him in earnest. Immediately he carried matches and began to use the filthy weed.

Bunting's good manners always assert themselves when in the presence of ladies, and with these he shines most brilliantly. This lad now breaks hearts as in his earlier life he broke windows and faces. He, however, has never had a serious crush even if he has received gloves from a lady in Pottstown, and even if he has spent many pleasant evenings in Norristown.

On the athletic field Bunting shows much prowess. He is nervy as well as "scrappy" in football, quick and steady in tennis, and last, but not least, a sure hitter, a clean fielder, and a "heady" player in baseball, on account of which qualities he has been elected captain of the 1910 team.

And now we must lay down our pen, but before doing so permit the biographer to note that "Dave" expects to follow, as a life's occupation, coaching ping-pong at Miss Brown's Academy.

Mabel Irene Dunn

"Faithful, gentle, good,
Wearing the rose of womanhood."

ONE spring morning some years ago, when the violets and anemones were bursting forth in their modest beauty by the roadside, another far fairer than they began its growth. This tender plant, however, proved to be planted in a different garden, for as the dews of tender nurture and care fell upon it and were absorbed it grew and developed into a fair young maiden planted in the garden of life. This fair flower, as we see it to-day, is none other than Mabel Irene Dunn.

A pure-hearted, kindly girl is introduced to you—one whose character, though not rounded into symmetry, gives promise of a noble womanhood.

As a chubby, fair-faced child in simple frock and snowy apron with a sunbonnet dangling on her arm, she started off at seven years of age to spend her first day in the primary school at Utica, New York. But this town was not to be honored with the rearing of a maiden so fair. Some years later she with her parents made their home at Steelton, Pennsylvania. Here she resumed her early education, and through persistent and profitable studying she graduated from the High School in the spring of nineteen hundred and seven with first honors.

It was deemed advisable for one so promising to receive a higher education, consequently she was sent to Ursinus the following fall to join the ranks of 1911, and ever since she has been an earnest and enthusiastic supporter of the purple and white.

Looking upon her face, one cannot help believing that a kind and guileless heart has its expression there. She is well liked by all who truly know her. Her nature is a healthy, hearty one. Friendly words and smiles are the warmth and light in which it unfolds its rarest qualities.

Irene has proved herself indispensable to the musical life at Ursinus. She is a member of the Handel Choral Society, the Girls' Glee Club, and the Girls' Quartette. However, music is not her only diversion; as a staunch and capable member of the Y. W. C. A. and Schaff Society she is invaluable.

In her we also find the sterling qualities of a good student. She displays aptness in every branch of study and a strong sense of duty in the preparation and carrying out of the duties assigned her. Indeed, she studies diligently to prepare herself for the promising years before her; yet, notwithstanding her deep sense of the duties of life and her earnest wish to merit its rewards, she is known among her friends as one of the merriest of them all.

Alpheus William Dupler

"In thee is nothing sudden, nothing single."

THE small town of Thornville, Ohio, was pleasantly awakened from its lethargy, one bright summer morning in the early eighties, by the arrival of one who was destined to play a prominent part in the world with which he came in contact. This personage was none other than Alpheus William Dupler.

His parents, deeming it necessary that a boy so promising should be trained well in order to follow rightly the paths of knowledge, sent him at the age of six years to the public schools at Glenford, Ohio. He was gradually promoted from one grade to another, until in 1902 we find him valedictorian of his class in the Glenford High School.

To train others in order that they might be better able to enjoy the good things about them, was the earnest desire of this young man. Accordingly the two years following his graduation he spent in the profession of teaching. But his merit as a leader and teacher did not go unrecognized by those who were intimately associated with him. This is proven by the fact that in 1904 he received a call from his home congregation to become their pastor. Realizing the congregation's urgent need and the great possibilities involved in filling such a mission, he accepted the call and served as pastor to this congregation for three years. During this time he was taking a course in theology in a nearby seminary.

During these more mature years he was not entirely indifferent to the fair sex. Although a diligent student and a hard worker, he proved himself unable to elude the darts hurled at him by Cupid. After a season of wooing he finally gained the consent of a fair maiden to combine her efforts with his in establishing a home of their own. Consequently, in the autumn of 1906 he was married to Olive Replogle.

In September of 1907 he enrolled as a student in Juniata College, where he spent two years; his course there was interrupted by a call to the charge at Royersford, Pa.

It was with this last step that the Class of 1911 was fortunate in receiving into its ranks this promising young man. Upon entering college he enrolled in the Chemical-Biological Group. His ultimate aim is to become a teacher of Biology.

Wesley Reiff Gerges

"Judge thou me by what I am,
So shall thou find me fairest."

Little Wesley Gerges, of Royersford-town,
Is a man of mighty valor,
Which won him great renown.
Wherefore we will attempt to say
Something of his life gone by,
And of his kind and jolly way.

WESLEY REIFF GERGES began his thus far grand and glorious career on October 8, 1889, in Gratersford, a small village situated on the Perkiomen. When "Milt," as he is known by his most intimate friends, was but a very small boy his parents moved to Royersford. In the fall of 1903, after finishing the course of study prescribed in the primary and intermediate departments of the public schools of Royersford, he entered the high school of the same place. Upon his graduation from the high school, Wesley entered Ursinus College the following fall as a member of the 1911 Class.

On account of his high grade of scholarship, his athletic ability, and his social attainments, Wesley stands out prominently in the life and activities of the student body. Few members of his class have their "little red book" adorned with as many A's and A+'s. On the gridiron he has been a hard worker. During his first year at college he won a position on the Varsity Football Team and has earned a U in each successive year. As a proof of his great athletic prowess on the football field he was unanimously chosen, at the close of the 1909 football season, captain of the 1910 Varsity. "Gig" also won a position on the relay team which represented Ursinus on Franklin Field last season, and did his part in making the race a success.

Besides making a hit with the Ursinus co-eds, Wesley is also quite a favorite with the belles of Norristown; but for some reason or other his visits to Haws Avenue are always made either on Monday or Friday nights. Why these two particular nights are selected is not even known by his nearest friends. One explanation surmised is that "Bill" is taking the fair one out driving with a livery (?) team on the evening when most people make social calls.

"Milt" is a member of the Chemical-Biological Group, a staunch member of the Zwinglian Literary Society, and a strong supporter of the purple and white. In reference to his future, he told his biographer on the quiet that he expected to relieve his father of his duties. Ere long we can expect to see the name of W. R. Gerges labeled on patent medicine bottles of many and various descriptions.

Morvin Wanner Godshall

"Blessed with plain reason and sober sense."

THIS austere-countenanced young man is an aboriginal from the wilds of the famous old township of Skippack, Montgomery County, Pennsylvania. He may be Irish, Scotch, English, Norwegian, or Swede, but he isn't—he's just plain Dutch. He informed the writer that he was born in the early 80's, and his word has been taken as authority, for none of us can remember that far back. From this ample data we are able to get a good conception of his age. His early life was spent on the farm helping "Pop and "Mom," in the language of those noble Skippackians, and between chores attending the township school, where his intellectual ability already asserted itself.

Being inclined to business he engaged in various enterprises until the fall of 1905, when he decided to join that vast multitude seeking after higher education, and immediately began his educational career by entering Ursinus Academy. This early business training is continually manifesting itself by the way "Gertie" handles the college bookroom, of which he is the capable manager.

It is said that all great men take pleasure, during their years of maturity, in returning to renew the scenes surrounding their birthplace. That Morvin, at least in this phase, has the attributes of a great man is shown by his evident pleasure in visiting Skippack, not occasionally, but weekly. Here he is always welcomed by one who might be called, in lovers' parlance, a "fair one," but we hesitate to place such endearing terms in this sketch. He insists in denoting this person as a "mere friend." It is said, although he truthfully denies it, that reflections concerning this "mere friend" caused him to leave school at the end of his Freshman year. After a few months and on wiser consideration, he again returned to aggrandize in size, as well as calibre, the diminishing Class of 1911.

Morvin is a good, hard-working student, standing high in his class and equally as high in the opinion of the professors. He never took an active part in athletics outside of tennis and the class football and baseball games. His main ambition is to get through college and then take up the duties of life with the girl of his choice. He is persistent and generally quiet, although when circumstances require he is capable of sending forth his words with a "point-blankety" that is remarkable. "Gertie" is a staunch Zwinglian, and here he is always in evidence when duty calls him.

Amos Jacob Heinly

"There is mischief in this man."

THE subject of this sketch is Amos Jacob Heinly. "Honey," as his roommate calls him, first saw the light of day streaming over the hills of Berks County in the fall of the year 1887. Little is known of his ancestry save a few distinguishing facts, namely, his father was a school teacher and was one who believed in the Biblical proverb, "Spare the rod and spoil the child;" although he himself says "I can trace my lineage through the Old Testament Prophets—Amos and Jacob included—back to Rip Van Winkle."

Realizing in early life that he was existing for something loftier than farming, this product of the soil attended the Philadelphia schools, where he studied the fundamental principles of life. But city life was all too strenuous for him, and it was necessary to move him to more quiet quarters. His parents found the desired spot in the little "village" of Royersford. From this place he came to the Ursinus Academy in the fall of 1906 as a fourth-year student.

To describe the man as we know him is indeed a difficult problem. His mother says, "Er hat die knop hinich den Ohren." He has all the characteristics belonging to a reserved and sensitive nature. His emotions are hidden behind his cold, unruffled, misleading Dutch exterior. He takes delight in deceiving people as to his true thoughts and convictions. He is apt to give wrong impressions of himself in order to be misunderstood.

Heinly's favorite recreations are found in the "Ursinus Grub Slingers' Association"—under the benign influence of our well-beloved (?) head-waiter, "Bobby"—on the track, and in walking. Next to Mertz, he is the greatest pedestrian at college. Not only is Amos fond of using his pedal extremities, but he also enjoys riding. As one enters his room one can see many steeds in their respective stalls.

The hero of this biography is also a member of the State Forestry Commission. Exercising his authority in this capacity, he appeared on the Ursinus Campus removing dead timbers; but his activity was brought to a sudden standstill by a penetrating but melodious voice calling out, "And thou, too, Amos!" "Art thou a participant in this?"

With all these varied activities Heinly is a good student. Reserved as he is, he is nevertheless a thinker and debater. He is a fellow loved by all, an honest worker, and a conscientious student. We predict for him a successful future in the Gospel ministry.

Henry James Herber

"Many a young man fails by that species of vanity called shyness."

FEBRUARY 10, 1887, will ever be an important date in the history of Jordan, Pa. The day was stormy and the wind was howling around the chimney-tops. The people believed that some unusual if not disastrous event was about to happen. The sun was even disturbed in his deliberations. Everyone was terrified. What could it mean? "The mountains heaved and a little 'mus' came forth." Henry J. Herber was born.

The form of this black-haired, brown-eyed baby boy indicated future strength and might. True to expectations he developed a good, healthy physique. On his father's farm he lived and fought with his brothers. When half grown to manhood, and no longer willing to work on the farm, he decided to run away from home and attempt to surmount life's path to glory. He entered a small grammar school situated, however, not far from home, thus enabling him to daily view the parental roof. After studying at this place for one year, he bought a teacher's certificate and taught in the public schools for two years.

Like a true warrior he realized life's greater possibilities, and as a natural consequence he resumed warfare in quest of knowledge. After spending three years at the Keystone State Normal School, where he became an expert classical horseman, he entered Ursinus College in the fall of 1908, casting his lot with the 1911's.

Mr. Herber is a firm believer in co-education. This statement is proved by the fact that at any hour of the day he may be seen casting side glances at the co-eds. So large hearted and magnanimous and even chivalrous is this young man that he invites not only one fair damsel but as many as three at a time to accompany him to a public demonstration. On account of this philanthropic spirit he has become quite a favorite among the ladies.

Henry has an earnest desire to equip well for good citizenship. He firmly believes that in order to meet these requirements it is necessary to be a well-developed man along many lines of activity. This development in Mr. Herber is being brought about by his connection with athletics, the musical clubs, and his constant attending of theatrical performances—his favorite play in the theatrical world being Antony and Cleopatra.

Mr. Herber's aim is the Christian ministry. For one so good-natured, so honest, so truthful and so cheerful, we can predict only great things in the future annals of our fair country.

John Walter Keener

"I am a sad and serious man."

BEHOLD the portrait—a mere shadow of John W. Keener—an advocate of Woman Suffrage and Prohibition, an enemy to civic wickedness and a friend to the common people. This illustrious piece of human existence was born in the gray and misty past in the vicinity of Womelsdorf, Berks County, Pa. Ipsa dixit, "this is the funniest town under God's blue sky."

A trinity of interests clusters about the life of this man. They are his physique, the record of his past life, and the possibility of his future greatness.

In reference to his physique, he is about five feet six inches tall, walks straight as a die, his heart is slightly wounded, but his other faculties are unimpaired. His countenance is shining and he has a sweet facial expression. He is usually calm but stern, although there are times when his brow announces the approach of a storm.

His activities have been mainly along educational lines, with the exception that in his boyhood days he manifested quite an interest in the poultry business. Our friend Keener is a graduate of the Womelsdorf High School and of the Keystone State Normal School, graduating at the latter place in 1901. For two years his patience ruled supreme in a "little red schoolhouse." But the ambition of this young man could not be confined within the four walls of a country schoolhouse.

After being instrumental in founding a Young Men's Christian Association in his home town, he pursued a further course of study at the Kutztown Normal School, and in the fall of 1908 he matriculated at Ursinus, and enrolled as a member of the Class of 1911. Ever since he has taken great interest in the activities of the institution. He is a staunch member of the Zwinglian Literary Society, an ardent supporter of all the religious organizations of the college; also president of the Junior Christian Endeavor Society of the Borough Church.

Judging from his almost spotless character, and remembering along what lines his interest and activities are bent, we cannot help but prophesy that the world will hear from him in the near future. John is a candidate for the ministry, and it is the hope of his friends that he will be an honor to himself and a benefactor to the race.

Charles William Langner

"One of those loyal dispositions."

BEHOLD a wanderer. Born in the vicinity of Royersford, Pa., he wandered to Brooklyn, then to Newark, New Jersey, back to Royersford, and finally he has found a country residence on the outskirts of Pottstown, Pa.

The foundation for "Charlie's" education was laid in the schools of Royersford. He graduated from the High School at this place in the spring of 1907. The following fall he registered as a day student in Ursinus College.

At the end of his Freshman year he decided to enter the teaching profession, and he labored in this capacity the following year. By pursuing a course of study in the summer school, and by taking Saturday work, the Sophomore studies of this hard-working youth were passed off and he was able to register as a harmless Junior the following fall.

"Charlie" is accomplished along many lines. Besides being able to play "Home, Sweet Home" on the piano with many variations, he is noted for killing time in Psychology by asking foolish questions. He is also gifted with the art of throwing paint on canvas, and spends many hours at this practice when his time could be better employed by developing physically on the tennis court, where he is (n)ever seen.

In his Freshman year he was not known outside of his classroom. This fact was due to his undivided attention given to the ladies of the vicinity of Limerick. He continually spoke of the good times which he had at those country parties where "spin the bottle" was the most important game. During this year "Charlie" was noted for attending from five to six parties each week, and even then regretted that he had to turn down about one-half of the invitations. This year he has become a flirt, often practicing with "Willie" in the chapel. It is not known whether this is a serious case or not.

Langner is known to be of a quiet disposition and seldom has very much to say. However, when he does speak, he is known to begin his sentences with, "Je suis," "Je fais," "Je donne," "Je —," "Je —."

In the profession of his choice, which is teaching, we hope that he will be more successful than he has been in raising his first "down."

Dorothy Lavinia Latshaw

Her eye (I'm very fond of handsome eyes)
Was large and dark, suppressing half its fire,
Until she spoke; then, thru its disguise,
Flash'd an expression more of pride than ire,
And love than either.

THE little town of Royersford, Pennsylvania, awoke one cool morning in September, a few years ago, to find itself the richer by one new inhabitant. This newcomer was none other than Dorothy Latshaw. She grew and waxed strong in the tender nurture of the doting household, and at the age of seven was sent off to school to tread the paths of knowledge and wisdom. During her entire school career she showed alertness and ability in the line of study, and in 1907 graduated from the High School with honors.

In the fall of the same year, Dorothy, or "Dot," as she is familiarly called, decided to enter Ursinus College where she became a welcome member of the Class of 1911. She could not hide her light under a bushel, and her classmates soon learned her true worth. Her spirit has never lacked in furthering the welfare of her class, and her loyalty is always evident. Her social life has gradually been developing, as well as her mental life. She is an active member of Zwinglian Literary Society and the Phi Alpha Psi. She takes great interest in the work of the Young Women's Christian Association, and last year was sent as a delegate to Mountain Lake Park Conference.

One of her favorite haunts about the campus is the tennis court. A great many of her leisure hours are spent in trying to become more proficient in this game. When a game has come to an end the score is generally fifty love, with the love on the opponent's side.

"Dot" will doubtless be at home after finishing her college course. The biographer cannot prophesy concerning this. Cupid has tried "Long" and "Ernest(ly)" to pierce her heart, but she remains intact. However, our best wishes attend her for an opportunity to remain at home in a cozy little cottage built for two.

Henry Wischman Mathieu

"A man who loves to hear himself talk."

HENRY WISCHMAN MATHIEU, the subject of this "biology," to quote from him, first startled Philadelphia with his high tenor voice one cold December day in the year 1890. He spent his childhood in that city playing hide-and-seek, hunt-the-hare, pitching pennies, etc. He says that at four years of age he could speak nothing but German, not learning any English until he began running the streets. Later on his knowledge of German was increased by attending a German school. On account of this early knowledge of "Dutch" he is a star member of "Der Deutsche Verein."

Occasionally after the adjournment of the "Verein" the members engage in a social time. One of the favorite pastimes for this hour is to solve the problems of mental telepathy. In this Henry is exceptionally bright. At the beginning of the game he takes a few notes, and in a short time has it figured out mathematically.

Mathematics, next to flirting, is his hobby. He is continually engaged in a mathematical study. One day while thus engrossed he was strolling over the college campus when he bumped into the college cow. He absent-mindedly said, "Beg pardon, madam," and went mathematically on his way.

Henry has still another hobby, namely, photography. He is senior partner in the firm of Godshall and Mathieu, the most famous photographers of the Perkiomen Valley.

This brilliant young man, in addition to his many other duties, has been elected manager of the 1910 football team. By the work that he accomplished as assistant manager of the 1909 team, and in arranging the schedule for next season, he promises to be all that can be desired as a manager.

"Harry," in former years, used to be very much afraid of the young ladies. However, in the last several years he has altogether overcome his bashfulness. Now, almost any time of the day, one may find him strolling through "Ye hallowed halls of Bomberger," or sitting in the chapel engaged in earnest conversation with a certain young lady from Arcola.

It is not entirely settled as to just what vocation this young man will follow. But whatever his profession will be, it is almost certain that he will seek quarters farther south, in order to be nearer to the one with whom he holds a very regular correspondence.

Helen T. Miller

"Full of sweet dreams and health and quiet breathing."

THE character of this sketch is one of the Ursinus co-eds, none other than Helen T. Miller—a cheery-dispositioned girl with soft brown eyes and chestnut-brown hair.

Helen, better known as "Spass," spent the first years of her life in the small town of Limerick, Pennsylvania. But Collegeville, with its intellectual environment and its wonderful resources for education, was destined to become her home. It was in the public schools of this town that "Spass" gained her early education, and finally, in the year 1906, she graduated as "Honor Girl" from the Collegeville High School.

Wishing to continue her studies, Helen enrolled as a Fourth-Year "Prep." in the Ursinus Academy. It was not until these days that "Spass" actually and truly lived. The foolish actions and petty joys of this year can never be erased from her memory. In the fall of 1907 she entered the College, registering with the Class of 1911.

Helen is an excellent student and never has she failed in any class work. A classmate remarked one day after "Spass" had endeavored to bluff the Psychology Professor, "Well, that is the first time that Miss Miller ever bluffed in class." This only shows how her ability as a scholar is recognized.

Never will this maid refuse a good time, and when circumstances permit she will skate, coast, or enter into any out-door sport with all her youthful spirit. Socially, Helen is quite a favorite. But the most interesting phases of her social affairs must here be omitted. It may be mentioned, however, that at one time "Spass" brightened a musician and dulled a Spear.

Helen is an efficient member of the Schaff Literary Society and a true loyal supporter of the Phi Alpha Psi Club. Her spiritual side is also given attention both in the Y. W. C. A. and in the religious organizations of the church of which she is a member.

To become a thorough master of the English language is Helen's ambition. Anything further pertaining to her life's work we know nothing. But from one so true and whole-hearted we can hope for nothing but success.

Ernest Erwin Quay

"Frivolous talk with ladies unbends the mind and polishes the manners."

LATE in the eighties there was born one who was destined to become great—great in many respects, and it was none other than the captain of the 1900 football team. Although he no longer is a resident of Pottstown, she claims the honor of being the birthplace of this illustrious youth.

The early part of his life was spent in acquiring knowledge in the Pottstown public schools. At the age of thirteen his parents moved to Phoenixville where a more advanced course of study was pursued. "Mat" being a large, husky fellow did not like the atmosphere of the school-room, and as a consequence did not finish the course prescribed in the Phoenixville High School, but essayed to learn a trade. Before he finished learning his trade his thoughts turned toward higher ambitions and more noble aspirations, and he began preparations for a life's work in the Ursinus Academy in the fall of 1905.

From the beginning "Mat" distinguished himself as a student, as a social lion, and last, but not least, as an athlete. As an athlete he deserves special mention. The first year at school he won a position on the Varsity eleven, and each succeeding year he has been a prominent figure on the gridiron. His highest ambition was realized at the close of the 1908 football season when he was elected captain of the 1909 eleven.

One of "Mat's" peculiarities has been to seek companions older than himself. He himself has told the biographer that when he was but fourteen years of age he called on a lady who was nearly old enough to be his mother. During his career his love for persons older than himself again asserted itself. Besides having several such strikes at this place, it is known for certain that he paid attention to a fair damsel of his native town whom he called "Auntie." His most serious love affair, however, was one that found its origin at the close of his freshman year. Anyone being acquainted with this romance will understand why this big, husky fellow sheds tears whenever he hears the conductor on the Perkiomen railroad call out the name of the immediate station below Collegeville.

"Mat" is a hard worker both in and outside the class-room. He takes an active interest in the affairs of the class. He is a strong member of Zwinglian Literary Society, always taking his part on the programme—except when he has a date in Phoenixville.

Mr. Quay declares that he has never had a vision, and thus he is entirely at a loss to know what the future has in store for him. But whether he enters the teaching profession, business world, politics, or the ministry, we can predict nothing but a bright future for him.

William Calvin Strack

"A mere mite of a man."

ONE September afternoon in 1906 a mysterious voice was heard on the front campus saying, "I am to be heard and not seen." The curiosity of several members of the Faculty and student body was aroused, and by the use of powerful magnifying glasses a thorough search was made. They found what happened to be a new species of "homo sapiens," trying to make its way across the campus to the office. On being questioned it said:

"I am William Calvin Strack, of Lebanon, Pa. I was born on December 5th, 1885, on a farm at Strack's Dam, Lebanon County. When I was old enough to go to school my father moved to Lebanon. After graduating from the Lebanon High School, and working for a few years, I decided to come to Ursinus Academy to prepare for college. After graduating I will take a course in the seminary and then will show the people of the United States that, even if I am small in stature, I can be a great preacher."

That was five years ago. During the year spent in the Academy he preached long sermons in his sleep, and during his waking hours studied hard. The following year he entered college as a freshman. In the meantime forgetting, at least for the time being, his future calling, "Strappy" became a "scrapper" and did himself justice in the class-rush and class football game. He has not taken an active part in college athletics, but on several occasions gave exhibitions of his sprinting and boxing ability.

This many-sided little man has not failed to absorb a large share of the various forms of knowledge handed out at the college, but not listed in the catalogue. He has also tasted the filthy weed, and after smoking a cigar and carefully noting the effects, he has placed his stamp of disapproval on the tobacco habit.

Since entering college Strack has found an outlet for his superfluous oratorical energy by preaching on Sunday afternoons at the County Home. There are times when this amateur preacher has great difficulty in making the trip to the County Home. On one occasion he borrowed a horse from one person, a harness from another and a buggy from still another. He himself says that he would walk, but when he has a team he can take two young ladies with him, and this is a pleasure which he cannot afford to lose. The practice which our friend Strack receives in administering to the souls of these poor people will only prepare him for the greater work before him. We wish him success in his life's work.

Ex-Members of 1911

Wellington M. Hoover

WHEN the Class of 1911 entered Ursinus as Freshmen, it had among its number one who played an important role in the underclass activities. He was a fat-faced, rosy-cheeked Dutchman from the wilds of Dauphin County, Pennsylvania.

Hoover was a good student, but he especially distinguished himself in athletics. Besides taking an active part on the Varsity football and baseball teams, he was a prominent figure on the Interclass baseball nine and football eleven. Although the football game was lost, yet Hoover was to a large degree responsible in keeping the score as low as it was. He was also a great aid in the baseball game helping to score the 19 runs.

After plodding through the first two years of the College course, "Pussy-foot" has gone to the Seminary to further prepare himself to raise fallen humanity. In one so eloquent and verbose we expect the ministerial world to find a man who is destined to become a leader among men.

1911 Class Poem

The fates decreed that small our class should be,
Thus robbed of one vain, empty pride,
We then resolved to win through quality,
In manly strength and grit confide.

Secure beneath the purple and the white,
Each sturdy youth and maiden fair
Determined then to gain their ground aright,
And hardship with each other share.

Strong youths on football fields great deeds have wrought;
Artists won fame with brush and paint;
A few, some truths to young and poor have taught;
All, knowledge have—some clear, some faint.

Around Ursinus' banner may we cling,
For in our hearts she does instill
Such motives that some future day may bring
Abundant honors, wealth and skill.

For common sense and honesty we stand,
For justice we shall ever fight;
Whether at home or on a foreign strand,
Let none forget Ursinus' might.

Sophomore Class History

TAKING up the thread of the narrative where the task was relinquished by the historian of our verdant days, an endeavor will be made to record only the most important of the many glorious achievements of this illustrious class.

In the Class of 1912 Ursinus has one of the most loyal organizations in her history. Our spirit has always been sufficient to keep alive a keen alertness in our opponents.

In all lines of college activity our sturdy sons and daughters occupy conspicuous places. In athletics our Varsity material consists of two baseball men, six football men, and one track man, while the scrub material furnished has helped considerably in whipping the Varsity into shape. In the College Glee Club, Quartettes, Choral Society and Forensic Club the 1912 class has furnished much valuable assistance. In spite of these many and varied activities the class ranks high in scholarship. Granting that a few are not up to the standard, yet it is true that the great majority of the members of the class perform their work with a thoroughness that bids well for the future.

On account of the great need of our men on the football field, we decided at the opening of the present school year to allow class spirit to lay dormant until after the close of the football season. Our posters were lenient and our attitude toward the Freshies was friendly. But our wards were not able to appreciate our sacrifice, and they took advantage of our leniency by trying to give a yell in front of Bomberger, by marring the beauty of the immediate landscape with obnoxious paint and obscene posters, by challenging us to a football game, and by attempting to have a banquet before the holidays.

Slow was the hand of wrath to fall, but it was mighty when it did fall. Our non-football men, although outnumbered two to one, were a match for the disturbances of the after-chapel quietude, the obscene posters never saw the light of day, the paint was diligently scrubbed by captive "Freshies," the verdant eleven was ignominiously defeated by 27-0, and the President and two other would-be banqueters were detained from enjoying the bounteous spread. As a class we have finished the second lap of the race with flying colors, and we promise to pass under the wire in 1912 many lengths in the lead.

1912 Class Poem

As we sit and meditate upon our college days gone by,
A peculiar strain of sadness, as the end is drawing nigh,
Seems to quell and dampen all the sports and pleasures we've enjoyed,
And no longer gives us freedom to pursue them unalloyed.

Ofttimes we went in ecstasy o'er pranks which we did play,
And the struggles for the honors of the Garnet and the Gray
Made our very fibres tingle, and did thrill us, one and all,
When we fought upon the campus and were victors at football.

But why should we sit and ponder on the things that now are past,
And let them overwhelm us or our spirits overcast?
For we have tasks before us that of greater import are,
Which should set our minds to thinking and should make our hearts
unbar.

So let's be up and doing, and as upper classmen tried,
Assert our rights and prove a help to those whom we must guide.
Our past experience a great and good asset should prove
In fulfilling all the duties of our offices with love.

Then farewell to underclassmen days, the days of joy and pain!
May frequently their memories loom up in life again,
To prove as sweet companions when through our books we delve!
So fill your cups clear to the brim and drink to Nineteen Twelve!

Freshman Class History

THE Class of 1913, the largest one that has ever entered Ursinus, has among its number some who are endowed with keen intellects, others who are possessed with strenuousness, and still others who are willing to learn.

From the fact that the 1913 class numeral can be seen gracing the buildings of the institution is sufficient proof that the "greenies" have been interested in class affairs. A new feature introduced by the "freshies" was that after tearing down the posters of the Sophomores, they themselves put up posters dedicating to their guardians certain endearing terms.

Although the "Sophs" greatly outweighed their little charges, yet the spirit of this verdant class was high enough to challenge them to a football contest. The Freshman boys, after a hard contest, met an honorable defeat. One of the features of the game being the flight of one of "Zeke's" molars to other lands.

Then the much-talked-of banquet must not be forgotten. Even if it did not occur on the day decided upon by the considerate "Sophs," it was a fine feast. Ah! just one glance of the turkey gazing into "K. Timothy's" eyes; just one glimpse of "Lindy" dropping sugar into the consommé; just one recollection of the olives gliding down "Dave's" shirt front; just one view of the '13 "Punch Frappe." Ah, dear reader, if you had seen "Echo" and "Grandpa" in their full-dress; Pauline being monopolized; and "Yoh" taking care of that sweet little girl from Lebanon! Every member of the class was there except "Mac," "Ted," "Fats," and "Zeke." Had it not been for the assistance of the Senior boys it is very likely that these also would have been in attendance.

At an early hour the gay-hearted participants repaired to their college abodes for the purpose of engaging in sweet repose. The boys sought relief on their downy pillows, but the girls almost fainted when they saw the interior of their rooms, which during the day had been stacked; yes, almost demolished by the "Sophs" in their vengeance because they were unable to prevent the '13 girls from going to the banquet. The victims were greatly surprised to find such an expression of principle, at least they didn't surmise that the Senior girls would lower their dignity to such an extent as to supervise the work.

In this short space only a few achievements of the class can be related. That the class has succeeded is proved by its achievements. The observance of the motto, "Fidelitas in Omnibus," by each member of the class will afford them a new respect in the sight of people, and will enable them to reach their goal.

1913 Class Poem

When morning sun has kissed the shade
Of mind and body into smile,
And every gift we have is laid
Before thee for the while,
Ursinus, to thy noble name we raise
Our class's loyal song of love and praise.

We Freshmen cast our lot with thine:
The red and black, the blue and gray,
Shall wave as one throughout the time
We live beneath thy sway;
But may the days which we together share,
By us be cherished for the good they bear.

All hail, to this, the Class we love,
Loud shout her praise with ringing cheers,
And let the echos from above
Go sounding through the years;
Let nineteen thirteen ever be our cry,
Till our last sunset tints the western sky!

Review of the 1909 Football Team

JOHN B. PRICE

Finally, the team averaged six feet in height and one hundred and seventy pounds in weight. We are all proud of this team. We all hope to see greater ones, but it is the candid opinion of the writer that it will be an extremely powerful team that will surpass this one. May the standard never drop at Ursinus, but continue in the standard set by the illustrious team of 1909!

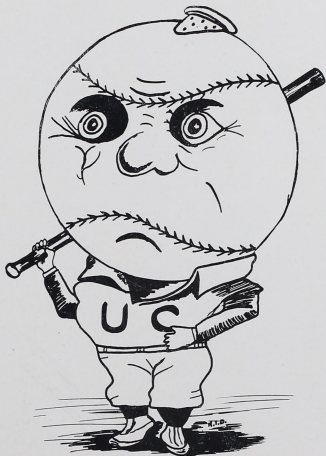

URSINUS, during the fall of 1909, experienced one of the most successful football seasons in the history of this sport. This statement immediately calls forth inquiry as to the 1902 season. True, all the games of that season were victories, but were the teams on that schedule equal to the teams on the 1909 schedule? The writer himself was an end on that famous team and entertains fond memories of it, but feels that, collectively and individually, the 1909 eleven has never had an equal at Ursinus.

At only two positions does the writer believe that it has ever been out-classed. But when has Ursinus had as powerful an end as Captain-elect Gerges? Taken from the position of guard, the only position he ever played, he quickly developed into a fast, powerful and aggressive end. And Slonaker, no harder tackler has ever been seen on the Ursinus field. Then take Kerr Thompson; without doubt Kerr is the greatest lineman Ursinus has ever seen. Powerfully built, standing six feet in height, weighing two hundred and ten pounds, being able to punt fifty or sixty yards at every kick. He is absolutely impregnable in defense and a terror in offense.

Back of the line there was a wonderful quartette. In Gay, Ursinus possesses a half-back rarely seen, especially in a small college. He is a natural born football player. He combines fearlessness with speed and accuracy. In designing the attack of the opposing team, Gay stands alone. West, at quarter-back, is better at defensive work than at offensive. He with Gay practically defy a runner to get by the second defense of the lineup. He has great power in picking out the weakest point of the opponents. West is an accurate handler of the ball and is proficient in handling the forward pass.

In Isenberg and Keyser, Ursinus has two men on account of whose battering ability she has gained many yards. Isenberg has often electrified spectators by his clever handling of punts.

1909 RESERVE BASEBALL TEAM

CAPTAIN ABEL

Review of the 1909 Baseball Season

THE baseball season of 1909 was a good one and in many respects the most successful season enjoyed at College. The team was the first nine developed by Coach Price, and considering the material at hand when he assumed charge, the results were more than gratifying, and on the whole favorably compared with the football team, which made an enviable record.

The baseball team lost many men by graduation in '08, which left at the opening of the season, Captain Abel, Bunting, Hoover, Isenberg and Horton as a nucleus for a team. It required but a short time to see that there were some very likely men among the many new candidates—Freese, Pownall, West and Kichline being the most promising material. Peters, Gay and Romeo from the reserve team also developed into Varsity form, and with the addition of this material the squad was formed.

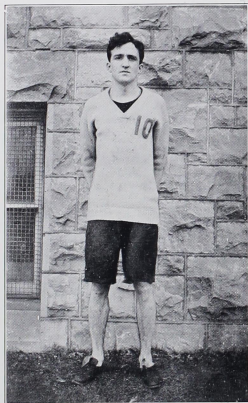

After the final selection of the team marked development on the part of each player was noticed as the season advanced. As a result of this development the last four games of the season were played without the opposing teams scoring one single run. Too much credit cannot be given to Horton, on account of whose excellent pitching the team won many of the games. Freese, a new man, supported him in an able manner, while the older men, Captain Abel, Bunting, Isenberg and Hoover, played in their old form and were much in evidence at the right time. West and Pownall, both new men, also did creditable work. An injury to Peters prevented him from doing his best, but Romeo proved to be a worthy substitute.

Captain Abel, Peters, Romeo and Captain-elect Bunting will be lost to the team for the coming season, but with numerous aspirants for their positions there is every requisite to not only equal the 1909 team, but to bring forth even better results.

THE COLLEGE TRACK TEAM

CAPTAIN DAVIS

Track Athletics

THE one line of athletic sports which is beginning to make itself more and more prominent in the eyes of sport lovers is track athletics. Likewise the same love and enthusiasm for this sport is becoming more firm at Ursinus. Although the facilities for developing a good team are somewhat lacking, nevertheless, Ursinus has done her best in developing a winning team each year. The prospects for the coming season, to all appearances, are very bright. There are more candidates, besides there is some very promising material. Unlike other years, the old men on the team will have to work hard to retain their positions.

Among the old men to report are Captain Davis, Geroges, Kershner and Maeder, men who have represented Ursinus on the Franklin Field on previous occasions. Besides, the Freshman Class has among its members men who have represented first rate high-schools at relay races. In view of these facts Ursinus should develop a fast relay team.

Although Ursinus has been handicapped in previous years by not having a suitable track on which to develop a team, it is hoped that by this coming season a suitable track will be built around the athletic field.

Review of the Academy Track Team

MOST of the regular readers of the Ruby will no doubt be surprised to learn of Academy athletics at Ursinus. But the time is at hand when Academy students can no longer appear on College athletic teams. In view of the fact that all enthusiastic students are eager for athletics, there was but one thing to do; that being to form an Academy Athletic Association and to have Academy athletic teams.

In the early spring of 1909 Ursinus Academy organized an athletic association. During the first year the organization was supported in part by the Academy students and partly by donations for which Professor Riddle was entirely responsible in securing. As for its government it is strictly under the supervision of the College Athletic Association.

The first athletic team to represent the Academy was the 1909 basketball team, which did very creditable work considering the many obstacles it had to confront.

As track season approached there were men who were anxious and willing to work for a relay team. The candidates elected Bogert captain and manager. The following men responded to the call for candidates, Captain Bogert, Bacon, Holt, Poland, Laurent, and Bufill. After six weeks of continuous training the first five of the above mentioned were chosen to represent the Academy at the Pennsylvania Relay Races held on Franklin Field. Although not winning the race, all felt very much encouraged in finishing in third place.

The Academy was also represented by a point winner, Bariscello, at nearly all the Interscholastic meets held in eastern Pennsylvania and New Jersey. Bariscello excelled in putting the 12-lb shot. His best put was 44 ft. 3 in. at the Middle States Interscholastic championship games, this distance capturing second place in the contest.

With this remarkable beginning the Academy track and relay teams rank with the first rate preparatory schools of this section of the country.

College Widows

COLLEGE Widows are autumnal flowers, buried all summer, but blooming in September, and from that time on enjoying a lively existence; now radiant with hope, now wilted with sorrow, as the case may be.

They are the wonder and admiration, nay, the adoration, of Freshmen. Sophomores call on them occasionally, and Juniors and Seniors call once during the week following exams.

College Widows are usually the girls who have helped present Seniors and some alumni to meet the girl. They are the ones who, for the sake of memories that are dear, help the present generation to get things in order for house parties; who get up pillow showers and other things to take the student's mind from the brain-distracting lessons.

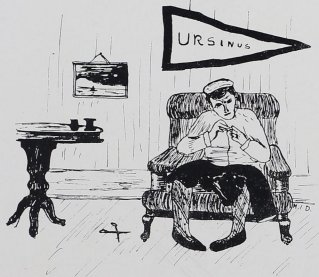

College Widows have a very important place in the social life of the college. It is one of them on whom the Freshman makes his first call, and it is they who introduce him to the other girls of the town, and polish his rough corners.

It is to the College Widows that a college owes its social life; for, if they all married, where would the newcomers be?

Song of the Pants

With fingers weary and worn,
With cuss-words many and dread,
The student sat "en dishabile,"
Plying his needle and thread.
Rip, rip, rip,
The most unhappy of all,
He lost his grip on his handle bars
When he turned to look at the "Hall."

"Had I but a wife," he cries,
As he pricked his finger end,
"No more groans and weary sighs,
For she my pants would mend."
—! —! —!
"There it goes again,
Away with your single blessedness,
A pretty mate shall share my den."

Reveries of an Observer

It appears that the management of the College have dropped the old idea of trusting humanity and have concluded that the modern college-man (including the co-ed) is no longer responsible for his actions; that he is intemperate and needs the supervision of a guardian in his activities which are outside of class-room labors. Accordingly, an experienced superintendent of a "bug-house" of an adjoining state was with considerable difficulty persuaded to take up duties at this place, duties which were assured to him to be of the exact nature as those in which he was formerly engaged. This worthy official has now given us his valuable services for two years, and it is altogether fitting and proper that a part of this book be dedicated to him.

Immediately after entering upon his responsibilities here, our friend bought two dozen padlocks, and he personally fastened, every night, all the doors of the kitchen, dining-halls, storerooms and stables; he having been informed that students when hungry were in the habit of entering the above-mentioned places and helping themselves to whatever goodies could be found. In spite of the fact that every door and window was locked, one morning the bovines failed to yield the usual amount of milk and showed signs of receiving early callers. During the same night the prunes prepared for the following breakfast disappeared in addition to two teaspoons. As a result of these depredations of depraved minds, bars and gratings were placed on the windows, and one might judge from appearances the students to be inmates of an insane asylum.

These extra fastenings availed nothing; therefore our "super" employed a man possessed with enough "nerve" to carry a gun. Everything was abnormal for about a fortnight when devastations became greater than ever. One night all the locks disappeared but nothing else was missing except a lamp chimney from "Charlie's" office. One morning the day after ground-hog day, the farmer on visiting the pig-sty noticed that two of the inmates had during the night disappeared. After searching for some time the missing swine were found in the Modern Language and Public Speaking rooms. After considerable grunting the porkers were removed to what seemed to them more pleasant quarters. Such actions on the part of students who have undeveloped minds made "Gum-Shoe Charlie" rave, and he decided that the watchman was negligent. Upon approaching the official he asked, "Are you not aware of the night's depredations?"

"Certainly; I almost caught one of the fellows. He was clad in a sheet."

"You carry a gun; why didn't you shoot?"

"Would you shoot?" asked the man behind the gun.

"No," replied Charlie, "but I hired you to do it."

We are sorry to say that one or two students were not in the chapel when the rules regarding the care of the superintendent were read, and as a result he has received more than his lawful share of water-bags when passing underneath the East Wing windows. When not making new rules he may be found in the dining hall, seated at a small table from which he has a command of the entire room, and he sincerely hopes, with his stare (?) to frighten the students from using the second block of butter or eating a second shredded wheat biscuit, or to prevent anyone from giving his dessert to a table companion. Alas! the hopes of some persons are blasted.

Die Klu Klux Klan

Klu Klux Klan Raise Their Colors

Special to the Ursinus Bulletin, December 15.

THE Klu Klux Klan, an organization which has ruined more of the youth of Ursinus College than either the Y. M. C. A. or Brotherhood of St. Paul, was last night again on the rampage. A motley, drunken, thievery mob of Kluxes brought a perfectly sober negro to the east wing by force—yea, they even took him by the arm (of course not intending to throw any insinuations at Prof. Omwake's speech). After putting the colored lad through numerous stunts, they further insulted him by putting him in bed with R. F. Kichline, a student (?) from Bangor. This object so frightened the poor "coon" that, after entering several wardrobes in search for a place of exit, he dashed through a window and landed head first on Fritchman's cement walk, 555 feet below. After standing on his head for ten minutes, deciding which way he should land on his feet so as not to injure them, he righted himself and walked away, thanking God that he was at least a gentleman.

Further Developments of the Disturbance Caused by the Klu Klux Klan on night of December 15

Special to the Ursinus Bulletin, December 17, 1909

The negro, whom the Klu Klux Klan so rudely initiated on the night of the 15th, returned Saturday morning for his hat, which he had evidently lost in the fray. The hat could not be found, but Dean Kline appeased him by donating one better than the original.

The Prep.

Gentle, tender, little darling,
With heart so light and mind so free,
Do not touch him or you'll spoil him,
Hither come, dear boy, to me;
We'll not harm the little fellow—
Harm him! not at any price!
For the maidens all do love him,
And he must be very nice.

When he left his home and mamma
And became a gentle prep,
Left his baby-dolls and dishes,
Was it not a fatal step?
But cheer up, my little fellow,
Wipe those cruel tears away,
Tell your troubles to Prof. Myers—
Night will soon turn into day.

You may some day be a Freshman,
If you keep your time and place,
And remember to be sparing
With your words and with your face.
Courage, then, my little soldier,
Be as wise as e'er you can;
And although it's rather doubtful,
You may yet become a man.

We will all be father to you,
Shield you like a Noah's Ark;
We will see they don't kidnap you
When you walk out after dark.
Don't play football, it is wicked,
And you might get hurt, you know,
And without a graft with "Paddles"
You would never have a show.

You must never be a bad boy,
Never dare to grow too bold;
You must listen to your elders,
Only doing what you're told.
Always diligent and busied
With your knitting and your books,
Have a common-sense opinion
Of your learning and your looks.

Extract from Zwinglian Review

The Weekly March of Events

WITH the exception of several very important decisions handed down by the Supreme Court, and President Taft's pronouncements concerning economy in federal expenditures, by far the most important event of the week was the speech made by Vice-President Omwake appertaining to a matter which affects a large number of students. Those who were present at past performances of the ex-dean expected the ethereal gate to creak on its rusty hinges as was wont to be its custom. However, the point was all the same and everyone, we feel, is truly indebted to the "loco parentis" for putting us wise to certain rules of etiquette, which, though not generally known, are quite essential to correct form. An observer can readily see that the diatribe has had its desired effect.

A Question

Miss Miller (at meeting of Girls' Club)—
"Let us have something and invite our beaux."

A shine was given and Gerges was the invited guest of Miss Miller.

Question—"Is Gerges the beau of Miss Miller?"

"Mary had a little waist,
Where waist-lines ought to grow,
But everywhere the fashion went
That waist was sure to go."

THE CONSOLIDATED SPORTING GOODS MFG. CO.

At 230 and 232 N. 12th Street
Philadelphia

is admitted a leader of those who manufacture sporting goods in that city. Our 1910 baseball uniforms and 1912 sweaters and hats show the quality of their goods. I buy at factory prices and have no establishment to maintain. All the city dealers buy at the same factory prices and maintain large stores—Why pay car fare to pay the top price? Goods in season in stock. Goods not in stock can be procured on a few days' notice.

If you prefer Spalding or Reach athletic goods I can deliver any of their material to you at catalogue prices.

When in the city, if you want any articles for sale in the above-mentioned stores and care to do me a favor, request the salesman to give the commission on your purchase to their agent at Ursinus.

Here are some reasons why a Marlin Model 1897 .22 caliber repeating rifle is the most satisfactory small bore repeater you can possibly own.

In finish, workmanship and balance this rifle is unsurpassed. The Marlin quality of steel drop-forgings constitutes all the working parts. Every single piece and screw and pin in this gun is made with care to a standard pattern so that all parts are positively interchangeable. The barrel of excellent steel is carefully bored and the deep rifling gives absolute accuracy and great wearing quality. This and other Marlin rifles are the only repeating rifles to which telescopes can be attached because the top of the breech is solid and the empty shell is ejected from the side.

For all sorts of small game this rifle is recommended, and with the long-rifle cartridge it is very deadly to hawks, owls, eagles, geese, ducks and any other shy birds which are hard to approach and require a hard blow to kill.

As a target rifle at long or short ranges, with or without a telescope, the Marlin Model 1897 .22 caliber repeating rifle is the guaranteed equal of any in the world.

How Money Helps to Make the Man

THE POWER OF MONEY cannot be overestimated. Money divides the world into two classes—the thrifty and the extravagant—those who have saved and those who have spent. It is the law of nature that the man who wastes his money is dependent on the man who saves. The first step toward independence and freedom is economy. The starting point is a savings account at the Penn Trust Co. From here the road leads to happiness and prosperity.
