Dr. Eugene Miller Retires This Spring

by Robin Grafton

Dr. Eugene Miller — the name is familiar to nearly everyone at Ursinus, and with good reason. But now, after 47 years of dedicated and inspirational teaching at Ursinus College, Dr. Miller will be retiring at the end of the spring term.

Dr. Miller's impressive career began at Ursinus College itself. A 1933 graduate of Ursinus, Dr. Miller was class valedictorian. He began teaching Political Science at Ursinus in 1935 and in 1940 he received his Ph.D. from Clark University in East Asian International Relations. Dr. Miller has been chairman of the Political Science Department at Ursinus since 1941 and in 1980 he received the honorary degree of LLD from Ursinus College. In 1963 he received the Lindback Award for distinguished teaching.

During his years at Ursinus, Dr. Miller has had the opportunities to travel to an outstanding number of countries around the world. Included in his numerous travels have been a Penfield Traveling Research Scholarship to Latin America in 1946-1947. He traveled to Tokyo University of Foreign Studies in 1954-1955 on a Fulbright Professorship. He also traveled to Jadapur University in Calcutta, India in 1961-1962 and to the Political Science and Public Administration University in Tapeh during the summer of 1962 on similar Professorships. Dr. Miller has been a visiting Professor at the University of Hawaii, University of Connecticut, and Lehigh University.

Dr. Miller's credits also include two years as Senior Social Scientist at the US Army Institute of Strategic Studies and, for the past three summers, he has been lecturing on Chinese History, Government and International Relations to American and European tourists inside China. He was also a Professor on Channel 6's "University of the Air" for 10 years.

While Dr. Miller's other travels include such places as East Africa, the People's Republic of Mongolia, the Soviet Union, Indonesia, New Guinea, Egypt, Morocco, Turkey, Columbia, Easter Island and the Republic of Korea, he has also been very active at Ursinus too. Dr. Miller was the Founder and first editor of the Lantern, he and Mabel Butter organized the first Forum Program, he is the Founder of Pi Gamma Mu which is the International Social Science Honor Society. He was also President of the North Eastern Political Science Association and of the Pennsylvania Political Science Association. Dr. Miller has also written several books and numerous articles.

Dr. Miller has been married for 43 years and his wife is a Sociologist and Cultural Anthropologist. His plans for after he retires include taking 10 Ursinus Students to our sister University in Sendai, Japan and going to his summer home in Winter Harbor, Maine for the rest of the summer.

When asked why he stayed at Ursinus for 47 years, Dr. Miller replied, "I stayed because of the congenial faculty, good students and because I can walk to work."

It is this impressive list of life experiences that makes Dr. Miller's teaching so unique and interesting. He will be greatly missed by students and faculty alike.

Board Names Council Chairman

Thomas G. Davis, M.D., vice president and medical director of Smith Kline & French Laboratories, a division of Smith Kline Corporation, was appointed chairman of the Ursinus Business Economics Council by the Board of Directors of Ursinus College at its March meeting.

The Business Economics Council was formed in 1980 to facilitate the relationship between Ursinus and the corporate community. The group sponsors various speakers and forum discussions on the Collegetown campus.

Dr. Davis is a 1952 graduate of Ursinus College and received his medical degree from Jefferson Medical College, Philadelphia. He joined Smith Kline & French in 1964. He and his wife, the former Nancy Bare, who is also a graduate of Ursinus, reside in Radnor, Pa.

The Grizzly is now accepting applications for its 1982-83 editorial staff. Positions to be filled are: Associate Editor, Variety Editor, Sports Editor, Photography Editor, Ad Manager and Circulation Manager.

Letters of application should be submitted by March 29 to Melissa Hanlon, Paisley 244.

Wilson's last issue today

SPC Elects Hanlon as New Grizzly Editor

Sophomore Melissa Hanlon was elected to the position of Editor-in-Chief of The Grizzly for the 1982-83 school year Wednesday, March 17 at a meeting of the Student Publications Committee. Hanlon will be responsible for the April 3, 23 and 30 issues of this year. Former Editor-in-Chief Jim Wilson steps down after today's issue.

Hanlon is a resident of Orodell, NJ and attended the Academy of the Holy Angels. She is currently majoring in Economics and Business Administration with a minor in English. She is supplementing her newspaper experience by taking Dr. Peter Perreten's course in journalism.

Hanlon will be the first female Editor-in-Chief of The Grizzly since its founding in September 1978. She served as associate editor this past year and was a reporter and photographer for the staff as a freshman. In her application she stated that she would "like to maintain the layout quality achieved this year by the editorial staff while improving upon the creative content and quality of writing in the newspaper."

Commenting on his successor, this year's Editor-in-Chief

James H. Wilson commented, "I am very confident in Melissa's capabilities in working for The Grizzly. She has built up a qualified staff and I am sure she will continue to maintain a professional journalistic commitment to The Grizzly such as that begun by my predecessors, Jack Hauler, Brian Barlow and Thomas A. Reilly."

Hanlon's first job as editor will be to recruit and recommend an associate editor, an advertising manager and a circulation manager at the next meeting of the Student Publications Committee on Wednesday, March 31.

Off the Editor's Desk

After today I join the ranks as a former editor-in-chief of The Grizzly. There are only four of us so we're still pretty close. Being editor of this humble rag presents a unique opportunity very few people can enjoy while they are students here at UC. It gives you a chance to express your views without being interrupted (to put it simply). Despite this great opportunity, every week becomes a grueling match between paper and pen deciding what stirring issue I should address. Very often you just don't care enough about any one topic to sit down and tell somebody about it and it can get pretty depressing trying to find something wrong with the campus or the world every week, even though both are far from being perfect. Today's editorial is no easier to write than any other and is maybe even harder. This is it. This is my last editorial in this newspaper and perhaps the last editorial I will ever write. What can I say?

After four full years of being a student at "good ole' Harvard on the Perkiomen" Ursinus College, if there is anything I have learned it is to believe in yourself no matter how many things are going against you. If this college does nothing else it helps students mature to get ready for the "real world" and being out on their own. Very little ever goes according to plan and it's overcoming the setbacks and striving forward until the realization of your goals that builds aggressive graduates that will make a name for themselves and eventually for the college.

It is extremely easy for someone to come to this college with great ideas and expectations and to let them all go down the tubes as soon as the pressure sets in. Don't let it happen. How many clubs have been started or ideas proposed that never got off the ground because someone had a test coming up? You are here for an education and academics should come first, but after a while you find that most of your education comes from outside the classroom during your four years here.

It is a time to test yourself, to see what you can do and at a school this size you can pretty much do it all, if you want to. The changes that have occurred at UC during the past five years are staggering. Apathy is still high as it is at any college today, but that is why it is so easy to stand apart from the crowd. Many people like being "in the crowd;" but unfortunately it is at the expense of their own personality and talents. Improvement comes from changes and changes can only come from open expression of ideas.

These four years have gone by fast. Ask any senior. Make the most of your time here. No matter what you want to do with your time, go all out. Don't be afraid to fulfill some dreams, and don't let a little adversity change your mind. All that matters is how you see yourself. This school is supposed to be pretty hard to get into. (One loses touch with that sort of stuff after you stop applying to colleges.) I guess that means we are all pretty special. Don't be afraid to show it. If Zacharias Ursini hadn't stood up for what he believed in despite adversity, we wouldn't be going to a school with such a funny name.

Before I sign off I want to give recognition to some people who don't get enough of it. To the secretaries of Ursinus College, the mail room and copy center, The Grizzly staff, Melissa Hanlon, Duncan Atkins, Drew Pecora, Larry Muscarella, Kat McSharry, Joan Buehler, Beth Repko, Deb Bozorth, Kevin Kunkle, John Sullivan, Mark Angelo, Kevin Burke, Debbi Bynon and Gina Daviso, thanks for a professional job. Maybe someday someone will get credit for going through this hell.

Thank you for your time, for the opportunity, and for reading our pages, it's been fun,

James H. Wilson

The Grizzly was founded in 1978 and replaced The Weekly, the former campus newspaper. It is published by the students of Ursinus College every Friday during the academic year except during exam and vacation periods. The Grizzly is edited entirely by the students, and the views expressed by this newspaper are not necessarily those held by the administration, faculty, or a consensus of the student body.

Huggers Needed!

ATTENTION HUGGERS! For all you people who like to "Get Physical," now's your chance.

This is the last week to sign up to be Hugger at the Pennsylvania Special Olympics Basketball Tournament.

Special Olympics will be at Ursinus Friday and Saturday, April 2 and 3. The weekend will get off to a running start with the Sixers basketball game Friday night, to which each Hugger will receive a ticket for himself and his Special Olympian.

On Saturday will be the Basketball Tournament, a lunch with the Special Olympians and promise for a fun and fulfilling weekend. All this, plus a 1982 Special Olympics T-Shirt, for just eight dollars. Sign up at lunch today in Wismer Lobby. Don't miss it!

Take Action Against Financial Aid Cuts

Reagan's proposed financial aid cuts are being discussed in committee in Congress and now is the most crucial time to join in the efforts to block these cuts.

The USGA is urging students, parents and alumni to join in the national drive to write to Congress and voice your opinion on the severity of these cuts. This is a Congressional election year — your voice will be heard.

Last year Ursinus was able to cover the financial aid cuts it received with contributions to the College and spending cuts in other departments. However, with this year's drastic cut proposals, the College cannot expect to guarantee aid to all needy students.

The USGA will provide anyone interested in writing with the names and addresses of their Congressmen, and will also mail the letters.

Take action to ensure your future — Write now.

UC Food Day Helps Fight World Hunger

Most people are concerned but do not know how they can help. On Wednesday, April 14 (Food Day) Ursinus College students will have an opportunity to do something for the millions in need.

The campus religious organizations with the support of the administration will sponsor a lunchfast. All students and faculty members are requested to voluntarily skip lunch on Food Day. The money saved by Wismer will be used to feed people in underdeveloped nations by dividing it between two organizations, Osfam America and Bread for the World. Day students may also participate by donating that day's lunch money. The opportunity to help solve one of the world's problems comes rarely; make the difference; participate in Food Day.

Think Tank Discusses Energy Conservation

by Janet Wegman

"With the falling price of gasoline and the possibility of an oil glut, we are in danger — the danger of becoming complacent," stated President Richard P. Richter at an "energy conference" held last Tuesday night in the faculty dining room of Wismer Hall. A cross section of faculty, administration and students met and discussed possible means of conserving energy on campus.

The "think tank" met to discuss possible means of conserving energy which they divided into two categories: "people" and "things." Examples under the category of "things" were adding insulation to campus buildings, weather stripping doors and windows, providing better heat controls in dorm rooms and reducing the temperature in all buildings during the colder seasons while allowing it to rise during the warmer seasons.

Although these mechanical changes would make an impact on the energy situation, the conference felt that their greatest challenge was to heighten student and staff awareness of energy conservation. One proposal was to extend the duties of resident assistants to include checking for wasted energy and reminding students to conserve. Hopefully, students could be convinced to make a few minor sacrifices, such as taking shorter showers; arranging their furniture so it does not block heating units; turning off any lights, televisions, or stereos when they leave their rooms; and reporting any faulty plumbing and heating conditions.

The issue of refrigerator size and registration was also discussed. Rather than assessing a blanket fee of $50 for refrigerator registration, the conference proposed a graduated fee based upon the size of the refrigerator. They also felt that more stringent penalties for the failure to register a refrigerator would deter the number of unregistered refrigerators.

The conference felt that one of the most severe instances of energy waste on campus is the use of other buildings, such as Bomberger Hall, for studying at night, because usually only one person occupies a room. If students are studying in Bomberger or Wismer because the library is too noisy, the conference suggested that a floor, perhaps the third floor, be designated as a quiet floor.

Although the conference can make proposals, they can only be implemented with the cooperation of the students and staff. Further discussion will be necessary between everyone on campus before the changes effect any improvements.

Transplanted Texan

At The Bijou

by Duncan C. Atkins

Last semester, I sent in $10 and subscribed to a rather colorful, informative periodical known as American Film. I did not realize that this small fee would make me a member of the elite of American Cinema, but sure enough, last Saturday, I received my American Film Institute membership card. Bearing facsimiles of the signatures of Charlton Heston, George Stevens, Jr. and Jean Firshberg, it looks pretty damn impressive. So now that I have the proper credentials, I will assume the position of The Grizzly film critic, and provide you, the loyal reader, with in depth (sort of) complete, reviews of the films I have seen in the past eight months.

Tess: Roman Polanski, you magnificent child molester, you. This film is as beautiful as it is long (3½ hours, 1 intermission). Nodjia Kinsky is stunning in her portrayal of Hardy's Tess. Every line she spoke, every move she made, overflowed with a potent combination of innocence and sensuality. When Tess commits a tragic act of violence, everyone in the theater sympathizes with her, and believes, as Hardy wanted us to believe, that she had no other choice. Kudos also to Peter Firth, who was outstanding as the overly idealistic Angel. The final scene, a breathtaking shot of the sun rising over Stonehenge, is one of the most memorable cinematic moments that remains with you years after you have filed out of the theater. Atkins/Grizzly rating: Home Run into the Upper Deck.

Arthur: This movie will have you rolling on the floor for the first 15 minutes. Dudley Moore is incredibly funny as a drunk, wise-cracking millionaire who brings an outrageously dressed (red spandex pants) whore to dinner at the sedate Plaza Hotel. But the next morning when our lady of the evening gets out of bed and leaves Arthur with his hangover, the laughs go with her only to return sporadically. At this point a rather oppressive, cliché ridden (rich boy meets poor girl) plot takes over. Liza Minnelli soon comes on screen, and the audience silently urges Dudley Moore to get drunk again. He obliges us a little later, but it is not enough. Too much time is spent on Ms. Minnelli. Sir John Gielgud is humorous as Arthur's dour, cynical butler, but he leaves the plot too early. Atkins/Grizzly rating: Reached second base on error. (First baseman was laughing too hard at first quarter hour).

Body heat. This movie is funny. Unfortunately, it wasn't intended to be. It is inconsistent, stupid and burdened with a highly improbable plot. Walking out of the theatre, a man remarked to his wife: "Was this as bad as I think it was." "Yes," I silently replied, "it was."

A few weeks later, I read a review that had nothing but praise for the flick. Soon afterwards, Body Heat star William Hurt appeared on the cover of Newsweek as one of America's finest young actors. All this media acclaim led me to reconsider my opinion. I have. The media was wrong.

The only good thing I have to say about Body Heat is that they cast an incredibly beautiful woman (whose name I can't remember) as the sexy villain of this stupid movie. There's one scene where she's wearing this black silk dress and you just want to... Atkins/Grizzly rating: Out at first base, despite vigorous protests from fans.

Mommy Dearest: Better titled, Mommy Sadist, this movie is enough to make a man want to have a vasectomy. Joan Crawford, played by Faye Dunaway, decides to adopt two darling children, and spends the rest of the movie punching and abusing them towards maturity. There, I've given away the entire plot.

Based on daughter Christina Crawford's autobiographical book, Mommy Dearest is like watching Sunday Morning Wrestling. It is full of violence and the crowd roots (out loud) for the hopelessly mismatched underdogs. The acting is good and the movie is as well done as it could have been, but unless you want to receive lessons on how not to raise sane children, don't waste your four bucks. Atkins/Grizzly rating: Send back to dugout and insert pinch hitter.

Absence of Malice: This movie is not as good or dramatic as the ads make it out to be. As a matter of fact, I found it rather boring (The high point of the picture came when they had a scene with a ship I took a cruise on in the background. "I was on that ship" I said excitedly to my date and everyone else within a ten seat radius of me). There is far too little action and most of the film is filler. Oh, there is something of a love affair between co-stars Paul Newman and Sally Field, but this is rather secondary and boring. As in Mommy Dearest, we do have a good ol' American violence as Newman KO's Field in the round. A movie that billed itself as an expose on journalistic abuses turns out to be a yawner. Atkins/Grizzly rating: Called out on strikes.

Das Boot: (The Boat) This German film about the crew of a U-Boat during World War II is the best movie I have seen in years. What gives this movie its greatness is its simplicity. Like Patton, Das Boot tells the story of men at war with as few plot complications as possible. The movie is in German with subtitles, and far from being a hindrance, this allows us to feel more emphatically, the suffering (physical and mental) experienced by the crew. These men are not Nazis seeking the establishment of an Aryan master race. They are loyal Germans fighting a war with many of the same hopes, fears and misunderstandings as their allied opponents. The movie is poignantly humorous at times and I must forewarn you: upon leaving the theater you will have an irrepressible desire to sing, "It's a Long Way to Tipperary" with a German accent. Atkins/Grizzly rating: Tape Measure Home Run.

Production of 'Vanities'

The long running Broadway hit "Vanities," a three scene comedy by Jack Hefner, is now in rehearsal for Protheatre's spring production. The play traces the development of three 'cute and clever' girls as they experience high school, college and pass into early adulthood. Each character discovers that attractiveness and popularity don't always supply fulfillment — but the manner in which each woman deals with this discovery supplies the dramatic element in this comedy.

The play is one of a number of student directed productions that will be performed by Protheatre this spring. "Vanities" is being directed by Kat McSharry under the supervision of Joyce Henry. The three female characters; Kathy, Mary and Joanne will be played by Lisa Hendren ('84), Christy Hoppman ('84), and Buffy Cyr ('83), respectively. Anne Fruit will serve as technical director, aided by stage manager Steve Wallace.

Performances will be held Thursday April 15 through Saturday April 17. Thursday's performance is geared towards those students who plan to attend the Hooter's concert the following evening. Saturday evening's performance will be held as a benefit for the Ursinus Women's Club, all proceeds going towards the Lois H. Brownback Scholarship Fund. Tickets will be available in Wismer entrance hall the week of the performances, for the meagre sum of two dollars (students as well as faculty.)

So, for an evening of laughter and leisure, come on down to Ritter and observe your fellow students as they vent their "vanities"!

Dr. Derk Visser, Ursinus College professor and award-winning photographer, will repeat his sold-out photography workshop. A new section of this popular workshop is scheduled to begin on Wednesday, March 31st from 7-9 p.m. Photo enthusiasts of all skill levels may be interested in this workshop for amateur photographers.

A basic, non-credit course in photography, this workshop will cover such techniques as natural lighting, composition, slide photography, candid shots, portraits, close-ups, and landscapes. This session, which will meet a total of five times, begins on Wednesday, March 31, from 7-9 p.m. Additional Wednesday evening classes and weekend picture-taking field trips will be decided upon by the class at this first meeting. The fee for this workshop is $45.

Instruction and demonstrations will be tailored to suit students' special interests as the course progresses. There will be ample time for questions and review of students' individual projects.

To register, call the Ursinus College Evening School at 215/489-4250.

Hooters at UC for Concert

Philadelphia's hottest band — The Hooters — will be performing at UC this spring. Thanks to John Mulvey who initiated contact with the band last fall and Hank Larkin, who finalized the tentative agreement, the band will be performing at Helfferich Hall, Friday, April 16.

For those of you who have not seen the Hooters performing at a local club or heard the single they released early last year, they play a variety of very catchy, playable tunes. Their increasingly familiar reggae sound evolved from ska, an up-tempo Jamaican approach to music. The reggae-ska-rock-soul-good-time sound of the Hooters was born after their exposure to a British ska group, Madness. This exposure took place early in their career, giving the leftovers of two distinctly different bands (Rob Hyman and Eric Bazilian of Baby Grand, and Bobby Woods, David Vosikinen and John Kazma of Hot Property) a common sound.

Acting as Union Chairman of Concerts, Larkin followed up on Mulvey's groundwork by contacting the band's keyboard man and vocalist. Basically an autonomous operation, the members of the band handle their own booking, promotion and advertising. Unwilling to commit themselves more than a few weeks in advance the band refused to sign a contract until early March.

The Union's budget, in part composed of the 'union fee' that appears on all of our bills, allots approximately $2,000 for a spring concert. This money will just cover the payment of the band; extensive lighting and stage renting costs will be paid by the concert's profits. Tickets will be available in advance, $3 for students (limit 2) and $5 for non-students. On the night of the performance all tickets will be sold for $5.

The Union Board hopes to attract a sizable group from outside the college, in addition to the students of the college. This would not only enable the Union to sell its 2000 ticket capacity, but would also increase the college's publicity and improve the rapport with the community. Considering the band's reputation, which has recently begun to extend beyond the Philadelphia area, and their longstanding contingent of followers, the Union should have no trouble meeting its goal.

Whether you are into rock or reggae, the Hooters promise to be hot as Helfferich is guaranteed to be on Friday, April 16!

UC Escape Series

What's Around Town on the Silver Screen

For those of us who lack the basic resources necessary for an escape into Philly — financial, automotive or otherwise — there are still many weekend activities around here that can be just as entertaining.

For instance, how about the all-American favorite pastime, the movies? A measly four bucks, plus popcorn, can bring you two hours of entertainment that could keep you inspired for days.

Of all the options at theaters within a 20 mile radius of UC, I most highly recommend Missing, at Cinema on the Mall. Plymouth Meeting. Missing, a Costa-Gavras film starring Jack Lemmon and Sissy Spacek, centers around a young American journalist living in a nameless South American country with his wife. The journalist, Charles Horman, disappears one night in the middle of a military coup after finding out a little too much about American government and military involvement in the coup.

Lemmon, Charlie's American businessman father, is a naive patriot whose trust in the red, white and blue is shattered in his attempts to find his missing son. Spacek, as Beth, Charlie's wife, seeks to find the truth about her husband's disappearance while fighting the cover-up of the American Embassy. While sharing this ordeal with her father-in-law, she is able to paint for him a vivid picture of the son he never really understood.

Missing is a startling real film about a true story which took place in Chile in 1973. It reveals a great deal about the ignorance of the average American towards the dealings of his government, and yet is still a very patriotic film.

Also playing at Plymouth

Meeting is Evil Under the Sun, a fun movie based on an Agatha Christie murder story. Peter Ustinov stars as Inspector Hercule Poirot. There is an endless list of stars, some suspense, pretty costumes and lots of sun and sand in this entertaining farce, but nothing more.

At the Plaza Theatre, King of Prussia Mall, is Atlantic City, which has been rated as one of 1981's "ten best" on several lists, and Quest for Fire, a Stone Age tale about rivalry between tribes for the valuable tool, Fire. Not highly recommended.

Plymouth Theatre, Conshohocken, offers Death-trap, from the hit Broadway play, starring Michael Caine, Dyan Cannon and Christopher Reeve in a "who will do it" who-dun-it.

The Valley Forge Cinema at the Sheraton offers On Golden Pond and the new I Ought to be in Pictures. Henry Fonda, daughter Jane and Katherine Hepburn are all up for Academy Awards for their performances in Best Picture nominee On Golden Pond. It's a funny, touching story of how three different generations come to terms with themselves and each other. I Ought to be in Pictures is undoubtedly a worthwhile film, since it stars Walter Mathau as the long-lost father of a girl who has come 2000 miles to find him.

For those of you with slightly different tastes, The Beast Within, a 3-D Sci-Fi and Porkies, an immature comedy about "growing up" are playing at the King Theatre, Valley Forge Shopping Center. And even more different, the Hiway Drive-In, Limerick is showing Senior Snatch, Eager Beavers and Cheerleaders.

USGA Notes

It is time again for election of class officers. Petitions can be obtained in the Student Life Office in Paisley Hall. This is an excellent opportunity for anyone who is interested in Student Government to become involved. Being elected to an executive class position can entail considerable responsibility and work. But I feel from my experience that such a post provides the opportunity for great self satisfaction. This occurs when an activity you set up becomes a success. You, as a class officer decide what activities to plan, how to finance them and also plan every detail. You are also a focal point and a communication link between the administration and the students. I feel that anyone who is interested, if elected will enjoy being a class officer immensely.

There is also ample opportunity for students to become involved in student government through representing the USGA on various committees. The USGA is looking for students for the Freshman Orientation Committee, Campus Life Committee, Athletic Recruiting Advisory Committee, Computer Advisory Committee, Union Board and the Academic Council. If anyone is interested in these posts, please see any USGA member or come to the USGA meeting Thursday, 6:30 in the Union Conference Room.

Over spring break Eva Zouras and Carol Colby attended the National Collegiate Assembly at Rutgers University. They met with various senators and also had the opportunity to learn more about the operation of the federal government.

Pell Program Efficient Under New Management

Improved management of the Pell Grant Program saved $21 million in interest last year and enabled the Department of Education to recover and return to the US Treasury an additional $66 million over a two-year period, Secretary T.H. Bell announced today.

"I find it significant that we were able to accomplish savings of this magnitude simply by making better use of our existing resources and requiring institutions to do a better job of bookkeeping and reporting," Secretary Bell said.

The Pell Grant (formerly the Basic Educational Opportunity Grant) program was authorized in the Education Amendments of 1972 and the first awards to students were made in the 1973-74 school year. Since that time, more than 13.4 million grants totaling more than $10.5 billion have been awarded to financially needy students for postsecondary education.

At the beginning of each Pell Grant award period, the Department of Education "banks" with a Federal disbursement system the amount of money an education institution is estimated to need for initial payments to students. As needed, additional funds are banked for subsequent payments.

Through a more careful analysis of the amount needed for initial payments, only $1 billion of the available $2.4 billion was credited to institutional accounts at the beginning of the 1980-81 grant period. In the year before, they had been credited with $1.4 billion — a $400 million excess. By holding the excess for later release, the Federal Government's interest obligation was reduced by nearly $21 million. Total awards to students were approximately the same in both years.

The $66 million returned to the Treasury Department came from unused Pell Grant funds remaining in school accounts. The surplus was identified when school reports of payments to students were reconciled with Federal records of disbursements to the schools.

Currently, 98% of all participating school accounts have been reconciled and closed. However, before the concerted reconciliation effort began in November 1979, only 12% had been reconciled.

Details of the improved management techniques are spelled out in a report, "Savings in Basic Grant Program Operations," prepared for the Department of Education's Office of Postsecondary Education — Student Financial Assistance.

Congress Seeks Agreement on Financial Aid Cuts

Congressional leaders met throughout the week in an effort to reach agreement on a federal budget that would be acceptable to Democrats, Republicans and the president.

Neither the White House nor Congress wants to take the lead on the politically-unpleasant task of trimming several billion dollars from a budget with a projected deficit near $100 billion.

The president so far has refused to compromise on cuts to defense spending or a rollback on tax breaks passed last year.

Democrats and Republicans in Congress hope to reach agreement on the basic outlines of a budget before beginning formal action later this month.

Funding For Higher Education in 1983

Recommendations for funding for federal programs in 1983 were submitted to the key Senate and House Budget Committees beginning two weeks ago.

The House and Senate Budget Committees will soon be drafting the first concurrent budget resolution which will set spending ceilings for the 1983 fiscal year.

Higher education groups have urged that the ceilings for student aid programs be no lower than those in the Reconciliation Act of 1981. (See HENA, March 5.)

The Senate Budget Committee is expected to report its resolution by March 31, while the House committee deadline is set for April 15.

In preparing its recommendations to the Senate Budget Committee, the Senate Subcommittee on Labor, Health and Human Services, and Education held hearings this week where the president's plan came under attack.

Chairing the hearing Sen. Warren Rudman (R-N.H.) declared that "the technical base of this country is coming under question."

"My concern is that we don't return" to a previous era in which "intellectual achievement was made in direct proportion to financial means," he said.

Sen. Arlen Specter (R-Pa.) echoed Rudman adding "the U.S. is facing a technological challenge. If we don't have the graduate students, where are we going to go?"

Funding This Year

Funding for next fall, the federal 1982 fiscal year, was in limbo as Congress debated the president requested rescissions — cutbacks in current funding — and looked toward a new "continuing resolution," the present funding vehicle which is set to expire at the end of this month.

During the week of March 22, both the House and Senate Appropriations Committee drafted extensions of the continuing resolution.

Observers predict that the administration will seek this opportunity to obtain restrictions in the Guaranteed Student Loan program and cutbacks in other student aid programs for fall 1982.

Administration efforts to obtain their proposals in GSL by other means so far have proved unsuccessful.

A House appropriations subcommittee spurned this week a Reagan call to bar graduate students from the program and also recommended spending $1.3 billion more on the loans this year. The president had requested a supplemental of only $978 million.

Higher Education Groups Head Off New Cuts

Senate and House education appropriations subcommittees were the target of a letter opposing Education Department changes in the Pell Grant program.

"We understand," the groups said, "that the department is now planning to use the first stage rateable reduction schedule set in the Higher Education Act, for those awards which would be affected by the rateable reduction and to reduce every award by $80.

"The result of that action would be a reduction in the maximum award to $1,720 for all students and additional reductions of 10% to 50% for students from families with expected family contributions of $600 or more."

W's Tennis Ready to Go

Women's tennis opens this Tuesday against West Chester . . . the home match with a 3:30 start will feature returnees Jo Zierdt in the first singles, Laura Ludwick, Alesa Jespersen and Barb Mathers in a few of the other five starting spots . . . sophomore Pam Famous, first singles a year ago, won't be playing for quite a while, felled by an ailing back . . . Coach Sandy Famous had an incredible 25 players to choose from last week in selecting and filling out the varsity team . . . several freshmen appear to have an inside track in making the varsity squad. Complete preview next week . . .

Field Hockey

Back from England

Some surprising weather (hail-delays?) and a fabulous two-week tour of selected parts of England highlighted the girls' hockey representatives trip from Ursinus College . . . While not faring as well as last fall's super team, the girls nevertheless made a good American impression on the teams from the Motherland . . . With only a week to prepare, the team looked quite strong in spots, assuring next fall's success . . . it was an excellent experience for all, since most of the travelers were from the underclasses.

W's Track Club is Tough

It's a shame that one of Ursinus' most successful women's teams isn't a team at all.

Ursinus women's track currently retains only club status, but needs only approval and maybe a little money to qualify for team recognition at the College.

So far, though, the fact that they are clubbers hasn't hindered enthusiasm or performance for the lady tracksters. Last season they ended at the top of the Delaware Valley Classic, (a meet similar to the MAC), beating out 10 other teams for the honor. It is little wonder, then, that their roster is booming and interest runs high in Ursinus' newest women's spring sport.

"Everything is voluntary — practice is flexible, you work at your own pace," says Bubba Miller, a member of last year's 7-1 squad. "There's a very relaxed atmosphere, and new people are always welcome. Also, there's absolutely no pressure to compete in meets or make practice every day. You can even compete in the meets without practicing."

Coach Mark Davies of the Admissions Department has seven returning trackers and seven new faces gracing his roster this spring. Seniors Amy Rowland and Wendy Wallace, juniors Karen Hansen and Carol Jankaukas and soph Miller head the list of top returning runners. Peggy Owens and Tricia Vergis have also decided to compete on this year's team after a highly successful 1981 campaign.

Incoming juniors Karla Cantello and Chris Geissler, sophs Sandy Wirth and frosh Bernadette Powell, Ange Woods, Ellen Gallagher and Katherine Wilson will help in the running and field events.

Their first test will come next Saturday in a tri-meet away at 1 p.m.

Sloppy play hurts . . .

Batmen Drop Close One

by Joe Granhan
and Tim Cosgrave

The Ursinus College Baseball team began its 1982 campaign on a sour note, dropping a 6-5 decision to the Muhlenberg Mules Monday afternoon. The offensive firepower for Ursinus was provided by Steve Pallone, Jeff Grassie and Jim Gasho, all of whom are expected to continue this trend throughout the season. Howard Blubaugh (0-1), the pitching staff ace, pitched well but was hurt by untimely errors.

Despite the season-opening loss, first year coach Wilson Kulp is very optimistic. "I feel at the end of the year we'll be near the top (MAC standings)."

The lineup is based upon a veteran infield and a young, fairly inexperienced outfield. First base will be manned by glove man Keith Lulewich and heavy hitter Blubaugh, when not on the mound. All MAC candidate Grassie, the premier fielder on the squad, will be seen at second base. Jim Rumer, who possesses the strongest arm on the team, will be positioned at shortstop. The hot corner will be guarded by senior Jim Drevs. Drevs' left-handed power will be vital to the success of the Bears. Behind the plate will be the powerful Jim Gasho. A long-ball threat, Gasho will be spelled by freshman Ed Woodland. Another freshman coming off a fine spring is Joe Loefflad who will see time in the utility infielder role.

The outfield appears to be the only questionable area on this fine Bear team. Speedsters Skip Ferraco and Morris Salley will cover a lot of ground in centerfield. Competing for the remaining jobs will be Steve Pallone, Ed Wheeler and freshman Eric Bobo.

The pitching staff appears to be the strongest area on the squad, which is vital to successful teams. Headed by Blubaugh, Jim Birchmeier and Bob Fooskas, a fine crop of other hurlers including Mike Wilson, Mike Flanagan, Steve Donohue and Jim DeCorso will be ready to take the mound when given the call.

BEAR BITS: In J-V action Saturday, the Bears came up short against Philadelphia Community College, 12-8. . . Drew Pecora ripped a grand-slam in the losing effort . . . Next J-V home game is today at 3 p.m. against The Hill School at home . . . Varsity travels to F&M tomorrow and returns home for a twin-bill Monday against Delaware Valley.

M's Lacrosse Looking Tough

by Ed Hovick

The Ursinus Men's Lacrosse Club is off to their best start ever. On Monday, they surprised Division III leading Widener. Although Widener won the closely contested game 7-3, Ursinus considered the game a moral victory, because this was the same Widener team which embarrassed UC 10-0 in last year's opener. The three Ursinus goals were scored by captain Bruce Kuo and attackmen Brian Dwyer and Joe Dunn.

On Wednesday, the team traveled to Millersville hungry for their first win. Millersville jumped off to a quick 3-0 lead, but Ursinus refused to quit. In a period of two minutes, consecutive goals by Joe Dunn, Brian Dwyer and Billy Kramer knotted the score at half-time.

A fired up UC squad came out from the half-time intermission with Kramer picking up three more goals and Dwyer adding another to give Ursinus a 7-3 lead. Millersville made several comeback attempts, but strong goal tending by Kevin Burke and an insurance goal by Dwyer late in the fourth period allowed Ursinus to leave Millersville victorious, 8-6.

This Saturday, at 2 p.m., Ursinus will face possibly its toughest challenge of the year when Division I West Chester pays a visit on the Bears. Strong support is needed as UC tries to continue its winning ways.

The girls' next game is March 30 against Harvard at 3:15 p.m. home. They then face the University of Maryland, home at 3 p.m. The U. of Md. beat UC for the national championship last year and the Bears will be looking for revenge.

UC Track Team Explodes for Big Win

Larry Muscarella/the Grizzly

The Bears track and field team is hungry this year, and they showed four other teams to just what extent, as they ran away with the meet on Saturday by over 100 points. Teams from Upsala, Moravian, Washington and Scranton showed up, but that was about it, as UC outscored them 126 to 15, 14, 8 and 0 respectively. The Bears placed first in every event but one and swept six events totally.

In the 400 meter relay, the team of John Summers, Dave Belson, Mike Milligan and Paul Iannacone took a first place. Belson also won the long jump, by over a foot, and placed third in the 100 meter. In the 1500 meter, premier distance man Neil Brown took first and Doug Nevins took a third. In an event that was totally dominated by the Bears, Brown took a first in the 800 meter, followed by Brian Clark, Nevins and Keith Kerr. Craig Harris took a first place in the 100 high hurdles and won the 400 intermediate hurdles followed by Jared Opitz. In the 100 and 200 meter sprints, Summers took first with Morris Salley taking a fourth and a third respectively. In the 5000 meter run Michael Snyder took first followed by John Perrotto and John Gelhard.

Dave DiMattia captured first place in the shot and the discus, Jon Orens took fourth in the discus. Leaper Tom Broderick finished first in the high jump and Milligan took third. Captain Jim Mulroy took first in the pole-vault with Jon Boyd and Dave Huttinger taking second and third. In the javelin, Opitz placed first with Keith Beck, Ron Wenk and Gavin Lentz finishing the UC sweep of that event. Another event swept by UC was the triple jump won by Scott Maurer, followed by Joel Alutius, Dave Remmy and Orens.

After this impressive victory, the question arises, "How good is this team?" Next Saturday's meet against tough F&M will tell.

Dave Belson, qualified for MAC's with his longjump victory.

Veterans Plus Youth Equals Excitement

A pleasing mixture of old and new talent should combine to lead this year's women's softball team to one of its most successful seasons in years.

Eight returning seniors form the nucleus of a squad loaded with both veterans and fresh faces. Coach April Winham is therefore presented with the pleasant dilemma of choosing between collegiate experience and hungry enthusiasm when she makes out her lineup card for the early season games.

There's plenty of room for improvement over last year's 9-13 record, and with a schedule remarkably similar to 1981's, that improvement should not be difficult to measure. Losing no one to last year's graduation is of course a big plus; the returnees have played together for at least two seasons and thus need not spend as much time as usual getting acquainted as a team.

Infielders Gwen McKeon, Deb Brackett and Patti Loeflad anchor the infield at their old spots, first or short, second and third bases, respectively. Vicki Videon and Tracy Cherry may shift to outfield positions but can essentially play anywhere. The senior battery of Lynda Nelson and Stacy Smith is back, and it is a good one, but Smith will face some competition behind the plate from also senior Joanie Groome. Soph Mo Gorman, the only other returnee, is the team's leading batsman and will be in the lineup somewhere.

The rest of the team is new to Ursinus softball, but not to Ursinus athletics or to softball itself. Infielders Teresa DeVincent, Jeannine Jilbert, and Linda Fithian can compete with the seniors. Stormy Baver adds depth to the backstop squad, and Kippie Crouch, Mary Ram and Connie Bleiler will help shore up the outfield defense. Winham can also call on pitchers Jennifer Posey and transfer Joan Buehler when Nelson's venerable arm tires. One added note of great importance is that all the newcomers are hitters.

The games, beginning with yesterday's opener, are scheduled in a tight, almost day-to-day schedule. With only 10

Softball Seniors, the heart of the team.

W's Lacrosse Opens With Victory

by Jean Morrison

The Ursinus Women's Lacrosse team facing a definite rebuilding year, fared well in their first test this past Tuesday, March 23 against Rutgers University. The final tally wound up 15-9 in favor of Ursinus, with junior Margaret Tomlinson leading the scoring with four goals with one assist. Junior Stephanie DiSantis also turned in quite an impressive game with three goals and five assists.

Having suffered the graduation loss of seven starters from last season, including five of six defensive positions, the coaches looked heavily to the J-V team to fill the spaces; and fill the spaces they did. The defense, anchored by the only returning defense player, sophomore Jackie Keeley, was filled in by sophomore goaltender Margaret Olmeda, junior point Nadia Adley, Keeley at cover point, senior third man Jackie Bolger, senior defense wing Georgette Zawawski and junior defense wing Betty Morrison. The offense fared a bit better, losing only three to graduation, but that included the nation's leading scorer last year: Sue Morley. Filling the positions were junior attack wing Joanne Greenlee, junior third home Stephanie DiSantis who saw varsity action last year, and freshman first home Chris MacColl.

Even though there were many new players, things seemed to mesh well. Against Rutgers, Tomlinson opened the scoring only 23 seconds into the game. The game went back and forth and the Bears soon jumped into a 3-1 lead with another goal from Tomlinson and the first of two from senior Tracy Davis. Rutgers closed the score to 3-2; but Ursinus added two more by senior Trish Delfemie and DiSantis, upping the score to 5-2. Rutgers again closed the score to within one at 5-4. Once again Davis broke in for a score and Greenlee added her first of two to up the score to 7-4 for a three goal lead at the half.

The first five minutes of the second half were rather calm with up and down play. At 5:03 Rutgers cut their deficit to two only to have Ursinus run the score to 9-5 with goals by Zawawski and MacColl. Rutgers came back with two more but then Ursinus struck with four straight goals to give

New Course Offered in Snake Embryology

by F.M. Javelin

The administration of Ursinus College announced today that a new course in snake embryology will be taught by renowned author Dr. Fred J. Domegelo. Dr. Domegelo is a contributing editor for Snakes Illustrated magazine and author of several books, including last year's comedy best-seller, How To Punch A Wall And Break Your Shoulder (which he co-authored with T.O'Reilly).

As widely travelled as he is read, Dr. Domegelo has had more than his share of harrowing experiences. A few years ago while in Africa, a cobra slithered into his hut. Luckily Dr. Domegelo was able to spray the cobra in the face with a chemical repellent, causing it to pass out at the foot of the bed.

While in Asia two years ago Dr. Domegelo was attacked by natives who hurled rocks at him. When asked about the incident, Domegelo replied, "That's not the first time I have ever been stoned."

Just last year in Arizona Dr. Domegelo grabbed a rattlesnake by the neck and killed it. This incident caused one female eyewitness to say, "The things he can do with his hands make Marlon Perkins look like an amateur."

Dr. Domegelo says that his course will consist "mainly of slides and a few field trips. After all, at 2 in the afternoon who wants to sit there and talk."

Ursinus looks forward to a fine relationship with its newest professor. Dr. Domegelo says "It should be outrageous." In his spare time Domegelo can be found at the Philadelphia Zoo's reptile house with his family and friends.

Beginning next semester Ursinus will provide a coed dormitory. Although the creation of an official residence hall for both men and women will be a first, the actual practice of men and women living together is not new to this campus. Several "experimental" sections of currently noncoed dorms are being used as testing grounds as a sort of "premature habitation" indicator. Single rooms are

Four Students Slain in Wismer Tragedy

Four students were brutally gunned down yesterday in the cafeteria in Wismer Hall by an enraged dishroom worker. Junior Tim Lowrey has been called by the Judiciary Board to explain his actions.

The four students reportedly neglected to take up their trays after repeated pleas came from Lowrey and other cafeteria workers. Lowrey was quoted, "I clearly said 'please bring up your trays' twice and then finally 'last call for trays' like we always do. They just sat there talking so I got really mad. I mean, what does it take? I've got things to do. I can't stand around here all day." Lowrey then allegedly jumped up on the table in a fit of rage and screamed, "I have had it with you punks." According to eyewitnesses, he then disappeared into the food service director's office, came out with a .38 caliber pistol and began firing upon the unsuspecting "loafers."

"I really feel sorry for Timmy," commented Ray De-Floozio, fellow dishroom worker, "this job can get to you sometimes and they (the administration and students who use the cafeteria) just don't understand that. They ought to crack down on these clowns who never take their trays and lock them up, not somebody like Timmy. They laugh at us. Can you believe it? They think it's some kind of joke."

Dean of Student Life, J. Hurtin Shine in a statement to The Grisly said, "We see the whole situation as just a prank since Lowrey had no real reason for brutally slaying the students. He has agreed to discuss the whole matter with us openly and we see this as a positive sign of rehabilitation." Lowrey will still have to go before the J-board next week, however, and either way will probably lose at least a couple of hours in the dishroom.

Parents of the four slain students have been notified that the school will be returning the unused portion of their tuition payments unless they would like to use the money as a donation in honor of their deceased children.

How old is Ripper ? . . .

President Believed Among the Living Dead

by Ellis D.

According to accusations by an Ursinus College employee, College President Riptorn P. Ripper is actually clinically dead and is being kept alive and functioning through the use of machines. According to our source, a maid that we shall call Betty, Ripper is about 120 years old. Betty alleges that she, as a young girl, actually knew Ripper 30 years ago when he was a 90 year old man. "Yea, my momma cleaned his house a long time ago and he was pretty old then." Betty supplied The Grisly with a photo of Ripper taken 30 years ago.

Pres. Riptorn P. Ripper, 30 years ago at age 90.

Betty came to the Grisly Investigative Reporting Center last week after encountering Ripper in an incriminating situation. "I was going to scrub the johns in the men's room in Corson and I walked in on Mr. Ripper. He was sittin' on the floor with some kind of electric cord comin' outta his neck plugged into a socket in the wall. There was a hummin' noise and I just didn't stick around to find out what was going on. I knowed all along that he was real old but didn't look it; you never know these days with that cosmetic surgery and stuff. I just don't think it's right for a dead man to run a college; I ain't got nothing against him, he was always real nice to my momma and to me. But if he's dead and has to plug himself in . . . it just ain't right."

A Grisly reporter tried to interview Mr. Ripper but was turned away by his secretary. We will pursue the story and try to inform our readers of the bizarre chain of events and deceptions leading up to this alarming situation.

Fallen Off The Editor's Desk

Malissa,

I can't believe I am finally finished with this god-forsaken job. You can have it. Steep, 30 hours a week for what. No "hey Jim! Thanks for the coverage," or anything. You only hear from them if you spell their name wrong or aren't able to put their article in because there wasn't enough space available.

I guess I wouldn't go through with it if I didn't enjoy it, but if only I didn't have 16 credits to worry about at the same time. No wonder my cum. is so low. Who has time to study? I bombed a test because I never got around to reading the chapters until the night before the test and who knows about it? Me and the prof. but if I don't get around to putting the paper together, the whole school plus about 280 alumni and parents look at me and tell me I am no good. We have to come out every week. That's our job!

Even if they would at least pay me something like they do the library assistants and floor walkers in Wismer, or the RAs. I'm broke, but I don't have time to go out and get a job. I'm putting in almost full-time hours

now. It would at least make you feel like you're appreciated.

We tried to work out a seminar course last year that gave editor credit for working on the paper, but it got lost at the faculty meeting. They don't seem to think the students are too bright around here. They just said to us "we always managed to find someone before." Yeah, that's why the Weekly got as bad as it did. The Grisly will probably end up the same way in a few years.

Oh well. I am done. Now I just have to concentrate on getting a job.

In case you are wondering, no it wasn't worth it, but you'll find that out soon enough. Have fun with it, you are the boss now. No matter what anybody thinks.

Incidentally, don't show this letter to anybody. They wouldn't like me saying this and I don't need another inter-campus memo.

Resident's Corner

Mutterings of a Rambling Senior

It was Friday afternoon, after two platters of leather clam strips at Wismer, I headed over to Happy Hour, the first stop of the evening. Figuring to hit at least five parties that night, I drank lightly. Besides, those were the worst looking barmaids I had seen in years. At 6:30 I left to catch a movie, but couldn't hear the sound over clattering bottles and the commentary from the inebriated audience. Suddenly the lights went on, I felt like I was supposed to hand in a forum card or something. Grabbing a few frat brothers, we pressed onward to Duryea and Shreiner, noted for their extraordinary, and curious women. One of the girls began a tale of the Shreiner ghost and then handed me a tuna fish sandwich with my beer. I got sick. Was it worth it? No, I could have more fun alone. Loud music emanated from Old Men's Dormitory. From Brodbeck Country Club perhaps? Maybe, but they hate people don't they? So I moved to Curtis 2 for the grain punch. After getting soaked for $1.50 they ran out of grain. It was time to hit New Men's. Once in 304, I relived my high school days, even to the point where there was never enough beer — they all ran to 310 when their kegs went dry. So I returned to my room and got psyched for a 7-11 run. As usual, half the school was there and the tacomies element monopolized the video games. Meanwhile, other students filled their pockets with overpriced munchies while the clerk got them Big Gulps. There wasn't a decent bar open in town, I had forgotten the Collegeville Bay Area closes up at 5 p.m. It was back to my room with a new found bag of killer weed. For being such a light weight I still paid tribute to the porcelain goddess labeled American Standard, for old times sake. After all, I'm a senior, this barrage of unlikely experiences was about to end.

Can Invisible Hand Save Ursinus

by A. Damn Smith

In an unprecedented move, a faculty member has spoken out about student apathy.

According to Dr. John Pilsner, Economics department chairman, there exists no imminent solution, but a closer examination of the stirring forces reveals the reasons for the recent rash of excess partying.

"It's simply a matter of supply and demand. As the demand for leisure time has increased so has the marginal propensity to party. Also, the factors of partying (alcohol distributors, drug dealers, girls, mid-week parties and depression) have all contributed to a steeper positively sloped supply curve."

When questioned whether he thought Ursinus was going to pot, Pilsner replied, "It all depends. Consumer preference and disposable income are the ultimate determinants." However, Mr. Money Cyers, a Headonomics teacher, was more definitive in his answer, "Wellllllll, Yes. I hope so."

When questioned whether Ursinus was experiencing cyclical recession, Pilsner retorted, "Absolutely not. That's invalid reasoning apparently you haven't read the book."

Using various different colored curves, he proceeded to explain the phenomenon of capital depletion. This, claims Pilsner, is the obvious longer short-run consequence of party-intensive decisions. "Very few college students have perfectly elastic bank accounts. When checks start bouncing like multipliers off of Milton Friedman's head the party will be all over."

However, in recognition of a nationwide party movement, President Reagan has taken the initiative by imposing "Reaganomics," an off shoot of supply-side economics. Such a movement will not only limit college partying, but also college students. This, says Pilsner, will lead to guzzling increases in enrollment at the obligopolist state universities while the smaller, too-perfectly-competitive schools, such as Ursinus, will inherit the richer student who simply enjoys coke.

In the long run, however, Pilsner offers two reasons for not giving a damn. First, any conclusions drawn about the future of UC based on economics would be pure conjecture since economics is only theory, used by qualified individuals who apply it in any way they see fit. And secondly, as only Pilsner could so aptly quote the famous economist, "In the long run, we're all dead."

Ursinus "A Joke" Declares Koch

NEW YORK — New York City Mayor and Democratic Gubernatorial Candidate, Edward Koch, today added Ursinus College to the list of institutions he considers "sterile" and "a joke." Koch was asked by a reporter from The Grisly if he had ever heard of the small, liberal arts college in Collegeville, Pennsylvania. "Sure," the Mayor replied. "I was even gonna' go there." (Laughter) "But then my dad got a job." (Laughs harder.) "Ursinus is just like the suburbs," Koch added, "It's sterile and artificial. I highly recommend it to students from Long Island. At Ursinus they will receive reinforcement of all those dumb, boring things they learn in the suburbs. Christ, what a life. Imagine growing up on damn Long Island and then going to Ursinus. You graduate from there, marry some boring Ursinus girl, and then head back to Nassau county, raise a boring family, root for the Islanders and send the kids to Ursinus. Then the whole cycle begins again. Oh brother." Koch then waved off a question about how he would deal with Reagan's New Federalism. "Please allow me to address this Ursinus issue further," the Mayor said. "This whole Ursinus thing's a joke." Koch declared, "Your typical Ursinus student is the kind of guy who would drive 25 miles for a Gingham dress or a suit from Sears." When asked if he felt his comments would prevent him from getting support from Ursinus alumni and parents, Koch replied, "Who needs 'em?"

Library's Friends Donate Scott Papers

The Friends of Ursinus Library Users (FULU) recently presented Myboy Library with a six specimen collection of papers from historic Tudor England. Known as the Scott Collection, these volumes represent economic and political necessities during the period. On Wednesday, March 24, Jim Colonel, chairman of the FULU steering committee and three people who happened to be standing around presented the collection to Chuckles Broadstraight, Library Director.

These volumes had previously been requested by Ursinus students and maintenance head Red Glee. Glee said that the collection "will doubtlessly prove an invaluable aid to students, faculty and other readers who use the library."

The collection will be on display on the second floor of the library. Colonel said that "we are looking forward to continuing our acquiring of materials that the Library can utilize. Thanks to all who support us and we ask your continued suggestions and interest." The steering committee also asks for college and community support at the upcoming book sale. All books from the third floor of the Library will be sold because they weren't dedicated by anybody. "They are all pretty old anyway," added Broadstraight. Department heads are encouraged to contact Chuckles Broadstraight with ideas for future book sale proceeds.

UC Goes Computer

In order to keep costs down yet not deny Ursinus the chance to progress into the highly technological future, the College Physics and Math departments have joined forces to construct an IBM 64K computer. Shown here working on the circuit board, they are confident that the project will be completed by May 1984. Although the hardware will be a little larger than the conventional systems used by major universities today, it will be able to handle many complex situations presently hindering the smooth efficient network of the college such as class registration and room drawing. "And even better," added Dr. Peter Hiccup, "we will be able to say we made it ourselves . . . and I helped."

The Misplaced Philadelphian

There I was spending another less-than-fulfilling evening in Myboy Library. The stifling atmosphere of dweebing hung close and heavy like the abusively odiferous amenes of Pfahler basement, where one could almost envision the brains of yesteryear wandering about in immaculate white lab coats. Listlessly, I paged through any appealing reading material in the periodical section, rationalizing that I was at least doing something positive while I procrastinated. However, interruptions from those who muttered perfunctory greetings (actually saying "can't get into it either, huh?") and a backache from those not-so-comfortable chair but modern-looking chairs brought me back to reality. I got up to attack the task at hand. Besides, those sketchings that pass for art on the maze of white composition board were bothering me.

Proceeding over to the librarian's desk, where there appeared to be an ex-nun performing some mundane task, I encountered three of the opposite sex who I didn't want to see. Strange how you're not allowed to forget the past around here, I mused. Within a half hour I discovered what I already knew: Myboy was like a female airhead — pretty on the outside, empty inside, as well as always having smart, ugly girls hanging around.

Just try to do a research paper. When you find yourself visiting other campuses to use their libraries instead of either partying or transferring, it's time to ask yourself some serious questions.

A trip to the second floor revealed rows of empty shelves, the more serious dweebs, and a worn path in the rug for the perimeter of the building. The latter being Chim-chim and Spreital's (AKA bookend-brothers) memorial, created while doing study break laps in order to search for other cutthroats. Med School, I ponder?

Time for a Union break. I felt bold so I exited through the entrance doors crashing into the glass because I ignored what the door-handies told me to do. This caused me to be even more critical of the bogus displays on the way out. I neatly spat on the twisted modern pseudo-structure of rust. The Bear, Upheaval II . . . make me gag! I remembered my destination.

Entering the snack shop is an abusive experience. Everyone looks at you heightening your already established sense of guilt from either not studying or spending money that you shouldn't.

I proceeded to the counter where I saw Lamb-chop Luise amble off with three rather greasy burgers, large fries, a sundae and, of course, a small Tab. I figured there must have been a frat meeting due to the anonymity of 15 people in identical drab coats. I decided to leave.

On the way out, I heard the Screamer talking about Iron Man, Mr. and Mrs. Ursinus holding hands, Flounder floundering, and the farmer and his wife dribbling their food. I encountered Jack and the Beanstalk; the former giving LIP service to the Crab Lady entourage. I passed unsaluted and unscathed.

The fresh air was good for a minute, until wafts of Wismer wavered in. It was just then I confronted a small, displaced, young, pseudo-professor resembling nobody, who questioned the stolen "wandering jew" I tried to conceal in my cloak. "What plant?" I asked trying to incorporate a comment about their cafeteria stench in the background. He let me leave on the condition that I return it at the end of the Year — "Yeah, right, see you then," I said. I decided the optimal studying place would be the third floor of the library. Reserved only for "power dweebs", my 81 GPA was suddenly written all over my face; it stood out like the "Fire Hose" (AKA weightlifter — get the idea?) on the way to a call. My only saving grace was the blue collar night school students competing against "son of Arnold" for a computer terminal. As long as I was in the computer room I thought I'd first make a free call but V. Maserati had beaten me to it. So I figured I'd work on my computer program, after I completed the GAME file. Before I reached the second game the terminal closed — thank god — now maybe they'll air the room out. It stank of mental irritation. It was wise I gave it up; time to party. I had one hour before Star Trek to get primed. For a Thursday my options were limited to: the Idle Hour, (no I didn't have enough for bail); 310 (but I thought I'd just left the hoag show); or 200 (but my Burt Reynolds imitations needed work as I was only benching 184 lbs. and I couldn't sweet talk like the Fag Gambler). I stayed in my room, though leisure materials were limited. I figured I could scrap a buzz with a little elbow grease. My buddy asked, "What time are you through with classes tomorrow?" After trying to formulate an answer I blurted, as an Ec/BA major, "the propensity to party was a vertical, positively-sloped curve based on Pm- the party multiplier."

Stepping out of my room, I found Sally High School roaming the halls trying to score, "wanna go to the junior prom?" I stuttered, laughing so hard I could hardly stand. The topic of conversation somehow shifted to the number of empty shaving cream cans behind the Olevian, Todd . . . , figuring they were an added convenience for their frat mates — Sure!!!

I contemplated a daring move to break my shell and impose upon the upper classwomen across the street, but thoughts of Holland boys damning dikes pranced across my mind and subdued any frenzied expectations.

I nestled back considering the whole scenario: Harvard on the Perkiomen? Girls' Jock School? School for Administratively Inadequate? and the potential site of Richter-Gate? — I chuckled. Ironically only the abstract yet sensible words of a somewhat enigmatic favorite TV character could summarize my feelings at that time: "Scotty, beam me aboard, there's no intelligent life here!!!"

Unwed Fathers Club

by DQ4

If life in the small town has got you down and you've never experienced the exciting gyrations of Studio 54, Cintillations or Dillinger's — fret not. We are fortunate enough to have a fabulous night life spot right here on the, yes . . . thrilling . . . chilling Ursinus campus. For those of you with nothing to do but sit in your dorm and listen to Rick James, we urge you to come out and experience the Unwed Father's Club.

You will be greeted at the door by the hobbling babblers, Dick Pickle, the prestigious owner and proprietor of the club. As he escorts you through the scattered debris you'll note the slothful interior of the establishment. Designed by that local Luke-Spencer look alike Mack Dullman, the debris is arranged to create a casual 'anything goes' atmosphere, an effect which Mack strives to achieve in all of his interior designs. This is the setting for the nightly activities sponsored by the studly crew.

On Tuesday evenings after 11 p.m. the club sponsors a "Disco in Docksiders" demonstration by resident preps Lori Trots and Pete Hots, proving that even preps can disco. The Quackman, the shoeless lunatic dancer, is available every night of the week to jam with you all night long. And for those of you interested in serious disco, 'De Candy Man' is on hand for professional instruction, in dance and a variety of other areas.

Although the UWF Club caters to the funk in all of us, it also offers a number of other enjoyable activities. Earlier in the evening, the club offers fashion and hairstyling demos to keep you informed on all of the cosmopolitan trends. This coming week GQ magazine's Kev O'Neill will hold a fashion show featuring the latest in metallic ties. These items are available for purchase after the show. And for the latest in bouffant hairstyling, Joe Buns will show you how to achieve that 'just came from the blowdryer look.'

On feature nights the club has engaged such celebs as Diana Ross and the Supremes, Pat Benetar and Joan Jett. Every night is ladies' night with beverages and entertainment absolutely free. Dress code is casual, though pointy shoes and headbands are required. Although no proof of age is required, patrons must submit to the examination of qualifications, usually performed by bouncer Bill Salmon. Located 53 miles west of Venus the club is centrally located and open for action 24 hours a day.

For more information call Kevin O'Shack — call him, if you need someone to talk to, call him, satisfaction guaranteed.

"The Rape of the Flock" or "The Greek Guys"

Bacchus, that first from out the purple grape Crush'd the sweet poison of misused wine.
—Milton

Canto I, The Invocation

I sing to thee, oh sodden Dionysus!
To thee, oh master of unnatural breeches!
Enlighten and inspire simple us,
Possessed of athlete's foot and pimple puss.
Instruct us in subhuman desecration.
Educate us in honor-deprivation.
Direct our roles exceedingly perverse,
And give us whole semesters to rehearse.
For you and you alone are justly praised.
To you alone our frothy cups are raised.
And when we fish the sacramental bowl
And chew or swallow golden swimmers whole,
As like as every virgin we undo,
We make a solemn sacrament to you.
In you we find the only true religion,
The object of our soul, our sole ambition!
Therefore, to your everlasting homage
Has gathered this most orthodox assemblage,
And on the brink of metaphysical bliss
We pause and prayerfully petition this:
From the simmering stills distilling schnapps,
From the bubbling cauldrons brewing hopps,
From the purple vineyards of Lombardy -
Come, Dionysus, consecrate our party.

Canto II, The Festivities Begin

In present time the honored guests arrive,
Unruly groups of three and four and five.
They all are somewhat uniformly dressed,
As is expected of a proper guest.
Each is garbed in pantalons de Nimes,
And every garb is frayed about the seam.
And every guest, be he man or woman,
Sports a shirt without an upper button.
The temple chamber, by no means spacious (But convenient for facile embraces),
Is in a throbbing moment thick with crowd,
Is quickly very steamy, very loud.
A breathless porter hustles through the door;
He's seen by every seer on the floor.
A quick commotion whirrs throughout the hall,
A flushed anticipation seizes all.
Hush! Several squads of burly priests appear,
Conveying each a cask of nectar beer.
The crowd is struck; there's awe in every eye.
A path appears to let the barrels by.
The fonts are rolled and gently set in place;
Religious rapture freezes every face.
Two solemn bishops kneel before the kegs,
A shiver shoots through many spellbound legs.
The tap is slowly raised to its position,
As is prescribed by many months' tradition.
The bishops nod, exchanging solemn glances,
The congregation's visage blanches.
A practiced twist of blessed, holy hand -
The Miracle of the Keg is worked again!

Canto III, The Festivities Continue

The festive hall is fluid with emotion
And snaking shapes of seething sound and motion.
Enraptured pilgrims filling at the fountain.
An hundred steins are raised to groping lips
That open to devour liter sips.
A thousand minds are strained in concentration,
In ardent philosophic disputation,
Like how could Luke's romantic life improve,
And who does vampish Laura really love?
Still higher minds are bouncing coins in mugs
And forcing down the deep, resultant chugs.
So thus for a measure the party goes,
The backdrop to its celebrator's prose -
Every woman giggles with abandon,
Hoping to induce some careless man in;
And every man indulges manly poses,

Till some one mounts a table and proposes:
"Brothers! I bid thee weigh this wide suggestion,
I bid thee punt this baneful 'education'!
Attend: I hold that cold cerebral labor
Is base blaspheming of religious fervor,
That even a little academics
Could instigate scholastic epidemics.

I therefore bid we gather all our papers
And make of them ecclesiastic vapors.
I bid we capture all things cultural,
Assemble it all, and mulch it all.
Brothers - I bid thee stand, I bid thee follow,
I bid we capture and we hang Apollo!"

An alto roar of joyous cheer resounds,
Affirming that general assent abounds.
Another devotee attains the floor,
And all are in a moment still once more;
"We all applaud this missionary toil,
And I gladly give this mission coil,
And yet, lest all of us go storming out,
I beg we not forget our fete devout.

Those by the door, prepare yourselves to go.
The rest remain that beer might ever flow!"

This wins as well the general approbation
And all the hall erupts in loud elation.
A moment more, the death dispatch is gone.
The others raise a toast to wish them on.

Canto IV, Interlude

A slumbrous hamlet squats beneath a hill,
Cared in sophie-blue and midnight chill.
A restless yokel turning in his bed
Peruses through his window opened,
Regards the royal raiment of the night,
The glaring hilltop temple's lurid light;
Surveys the asteral display and hears
The distant, rising music of the beers.
Inside the blaring hall the din continues
Innervating loins and throbbing sinews.
Here two contending muscled braggarts
Wrench their bulging necks and toss their tankards;
Quaff and draw, then wipe the glistening rills,
But overlook the lather on their bills.

And there two girls of near-anemic pall
Recite soliliquies of alcohol.
And everywhere commercial rock and roll
Thumps and thuds in every frenzied soul.
And peppy boys and girls are seen to try
To dance to music to have a seizure by.

Canto VI, The Hangmen Return

Oh, this music seems an art divine,
Synthesizing human will and cosmic mind!
Athena and Skynard are in cohorts;
Funky nymphs crank-up electric lutes.
Go onward! tumults eternizing drugs,
Ejected by untutored, greasy thugs!
Upward! strains that loosen every rafter,
Concerted by near-hobophrenic laughter!
Onward! Upward! beautiful cacaphony!
Enthrall us all in vulgar ecstasy!

Amid the driving, writhing, thriving clamour
A brother near an opened window stammers,
"I can see . . . see them. The boys are coming back!"
And surely comes a posse through the black.
He leans across the casement to accost 'em,
Extends his length entire, gargoye posture.
A girl behind him, not inclined to doubt,
Grabs his ankles as he wiggles farther out.
He cranes his neck, extending to the edge;
His ribs contract, his slender shoulders wedge.

The entry of the hangmen now impends,
And everybody fast the door attends (Except the leaner and his helper, who Support the fenestrator by the shoe).
There's hoots and hollers in the outer rooms;
Inside the temple the long moment looms,
Now quickly chants, now tremendous bangs -
The doorway flies: "Success! Apollo hangs!"
A joyous, transcendental glory-blast,
Triumphant gush of drinks and flying glass.
In short, a universal letting-go,
To left, to right, and at the window.

Fountain Sculpture Dedicated to Union

The most recent tribute to an Ursinus dignitary is the new section between the Union building, Bomberger and the bookstore. The Union triangle, as it has been called, has been constructed for the enjoyment of the students on campus in between classes. The section is expected to be a local hangout for students in the warmer months and will provide a central location for the larger gatherings on campus.

Joel Eisenberg Union, the man the Union building and the new Union triangle have been named after is best known for his speech on graduation day in June of 1937 when he said, "There can never be too many water fountains on a college campus."

In honor of this former president of the college and great orator, 16 water fountains have been erected in four sets of four. According to Dr. Milland of the Pol. Sci. Department, "he would have loved this, it's even better than the fountain statue I saw in New Delhi."

Future plans include putting benches around the fountains along with flower and grass plots. The water turning-on ceremony will be late next month.

Coed Dorms

who has said, "This experience is lacking. I consider this whole thing a slap in the face."

All things considered, coed dorms seem to be working well. The men and women of UC have shown that they can live and work together. Speaking from first hand experience residents are sure that in the future coed dorms will prove more than satisfactory.

This is Ed Barnes. He is the food service director of the College. His picture has no relevance to the rest of this newspaper, but he looked so nice we thought you might like to see him. Next time you eat at Wismer you can think of his smiling face and figure out after a few mouthfuls why he is smiling. He wouldn't dare look mean. You could hate him then.

Windsurfers Mellow Out to Victory

by Ellis D.

The Ursinus College Varsity Windsurfing Team brought more honors to the College's roll of winning teams last week as they traveled to Bimini, West Indies to compete in the College Windsurfing World Championships. The team placed first in both Freestyle and Short Course Racing and third in Distance Racing. Team captain and surfer/coach Monty Spindler told us the story behind this remarkable team.

"We're basically pretty mellow, but when we need to we can get pretty radical. Take Nate for example, he was sleepin' most of the practice sessions but when it came down to the time for Freestyle, he was right there — cruising'. He got us a first in that, in Distance he sort of didn't do so well, he never showed up. See, it was the day after Freestyle and he sort of celebrated the night before and, well, we just couldn't find him 'til after the race. The whole team was like that — the girls won us the Freestyle really, and they didn't let us down off the water either."

"Yea, we have a good time but we have a lot of disadvantages compared to teams like Tulane and UCLA; the Perk just isn't all that great so we have to go to the Corinthian Yacht Club of Cape May to train, and it's so much colder up here than at the southern schools. But we really did hang out and go up to people good at Bimini."

When asked about recruiting new members for next year's squad Monty replied, "Uh, well, we sort of just go to a lot of Duryea parties the beginning of the year, to that Tropical Party, and we just ho wore one."

This picture was an accident and was not supposed to appear in this newspaper. This man is not an enrolled student at UC . . . any more. Juan Murry

Track Team Blues

Jake and Elwood Blues add something to UC Track Juan Murry

by T.B. Arch

Ursinus College Track and Field Coach Dick Howley has decided to compete against Division I competition next season. This "move up" can be attributed to the stellar performances of two freshman athletes, Joliet Jake and Elwood Blues.

Jake, a 6'8" 275 pounder, set school records in the discus, 1500 meter and 20 mile shuttle hurdles.

Elwood, who is 7'5" tall and weighs 350 pounds, competed in the long and high jumps, the javelin and the 110 meter high hurdles. Elwood also set school records in the Shot Put, Pole Vault and the 150 pound Hoag Throw. When not competing for the Track team the Blues brothers can be found singing at coffee houses or free basing Coca-Cola.

Lacrosse Team Flexs Muscles

by Ed "Oompa" Novick

Complaining that their schedule was too easy, the Ursinus Men's Lacrosse Club wants to strengthen their list of opponents. Coach Dave Reject would like to include Division I Powerhouses Johns Hopkins, Cornell, and last year's NCAA champion North Carolina.

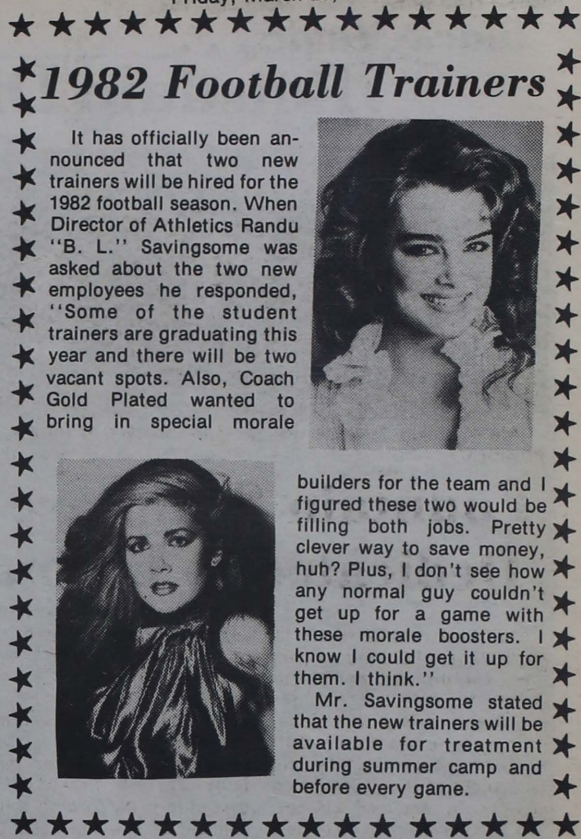

The form that makes the best tremble.

"We feel games like this are just what we need to turn our program around," stated Reject. "We were 1-9 last year, but we could easily have been 2-8."

"Right now the ball is in their court, we will play them but only under our conditions." Rumors have it that North Carolina and the others are running scared. Unreported sources state that players from last year's NCAA championship team have said, "We still want a couple more years under our belts before we take on a team like UC."

In other Lacrosse news, Ursinus is refusing to compete in the newly formed World Cup Tournament. As Reject put it, "We don't want our players hurt for big games by playing in these Mickey Mouse tournaments."

1982 Football Trainers

It has officially been announced that two new trainers will be hired for the 1982 football season. When Director of Athletics Randu "B. L." Savingsome was asked about the two new employees he responded, "Some of the student trainers are graduating this year and there will be two vacant spots. Also, Coach Gold Plated wanted to bring in special morale builders for the team and I figured these two would be filling both jobs. Pretty clever way to save money, huh? Plus, I don't see how any normal guy couldn't get up for a game with these morale boosters. I know I could get it up for them. I think."

Mr. Savingsome stated that the new trainers will be available for treatment during summer camp and before every game.

"I think our neighbors are using thinner glass in their windows this year!"

Baseball Skipper is Very Versatile

UC head coach Flip Wilsen, is preparing to start his first year as coach of the Bears. Wilsen, who doubles as a school maintenance man, feels that despite certain obstacles, he has the tools to rebuild the club.

The first problem that faces Wilsen is that of finding a uniform that will fit him. Wilsen, although in fine shape is the janitor built like a drum. In search of a uniform, they have written to Tommy Lasorda, Bill Bergey and the Jolly Green Giant.

Director of Athletics, Randu "Bye Larry" Savingsom has this to say about Wilsen. "He's a smart guy, was a great player, and best of all, he's full time. Not only that, but he's also economical. Wilsen will line the field and mow the lawn before the games. Then during the seventh inning stretch, he can rake the infield. Plus we no longer have the need to go out and buy wooden bats, Wilsen can just make some in the maintenance building."

When Wilsen was asked about the upcoming season, he had this to say, "Our batters hammer the ball all over the place, our pitchers throw like buzzsaws, and our infielders are like vacuum cleaners. We play some tough competition this year, but we should sweep by them." When asked about a strong Widener team Wilsen said, "We'll hammer them, and we'll nail Swarthmore too!"

Assistant coach Rim Mayor is looking forward to another successful year as first base coach. Mayor also doubles as the team's equipment manager and clothes washer. When he was asked about the team's strong and weak points he said, "Our strong points are our ability to put our raunry in the raundry bags, and to keep the rocker-room clean. Our weakpoints are, that the boys forget to put their varuables in the varuable bag, and me as a first base coach. I know nofring about the game of baseball at all. The only fring I know, is that every time somebody slides, I have to clean the uniform. Do you know what kind of a pain in the butt that is?"

Coach Wilsen had this to say about the team's recent trip to Florida, "It was a hell of a good time. Do you believe what a sucker that Savingsom guy is. Forkin' over the money to send 18 fun-loving guys and two alcoholic coaches down to Florida. We spent the first six days in the bars drunk as skunks, and the next four days in bed with hangovers. Hell, I even got lucky one night with this redhead after we left the bar . . . Wow what a trip!"

Tri-Captain Jim Gashole made these remarks about the team's outlook for this season, "They have me, what else do they need? With me behind the plate, we're a cinch to go all the way. I'll bat us right through every team in the MAC."

Well with three guys like this leading the team, baseball fans throughout the Collegeville Bay area will be thrilled with the 1982 version of UC baseball. Bear Fever, Catch it!

Black Magic . . .Potsdam Disqualified from NCAA's

The voodoo dolls found at Potsdam by NCAA.

The Ursinus College wrestling team did something last weekend that no other college has been able to do in four years, that was to take the Division I National team title from the University of Iowa. The Grizzlies accomplished this feat by placing nine out of 10 wrestlers in the top three; including four individual winners. The only wrestler not to place was 177 pound senior captain "Coma" Roach. Coma was eliminated in the first round, when he was pinned by local Pilgrim Whitemush hero S. Wowie Reeger. When asked what happened Roach replied, "I don't know. I beat him in high school, I guess Dan Gable worked with him a little harder. Ursinus coach Batmite Racht explained the match by saying, "I told Coma he was the number one seed and that everyone would be gunning for him. I guess Reeger had too much ammo for Roach to handle."

Leading the gold medal winners for the Bears was 134 pounder Rob Tyler (also known as "Tires" to his friends). Rob did exceptionally well in holding off a late rally by defending national champ Pepe Cuestas to hold on for his first national championship. Rob is only a freshman and has a chance to be Ursinus College's only four time national champ.

In one of the more exciting matches of the tournament our very own Shott Whiting (142) held on to beat defending national champion Roger Metzger by a score of one to nothing. It was a hard fought battle which didn't see any scoring until Shott escaped with three seconds left on the clock. Later Whiting was heard to say, "I knew I had a tough match coming up so I went out and drank a six-pack so I could get some extra energy from the carbohydrates."

In the most physical bout of the evening Sleeve DuDetwo outmuscled defending champion Nate Carr 26-24. This was amazing considering DuDetwo didn't resume wrestling until there were three weeks left in the season. DuDetwo was out for the season with a neck injury. In a post match interview DuDetwo explained, "He must have heard I had a bad neck because all he did was shoot a half Nelson." When asked about his opponent, Carr responded, "That guy's a stud!! I was lucky to escape some of his cradles."

The use of voodoo dolls is an art that was brought to this country from native African tribes. A native priest or "witchdoctor" will mix a magic potion, say some magic words and do a dance to put a spell on the doll and the person the doll is modeled after. Whatever is done to the doll, is magically done to the person.

In charge of the investigation was Brennan "Concrete" Smokey, head of the NCAA law division. When asked what tipped him off he said, "I was at the game. I saw this strange looking guy, wearing a grass dress, no shirt and had his face painted. At first I thought maybe it was just a fraternity pledge, but then I saw him playing with dolls. I knew it wasn't Halloween so that meant something was up. I saw this type of guy on a Gilligan's Island rerun once. I followed him back to Potsdam where I broke the case wide open. Hey, do you think I can get a doll made like my mother-in-law?"

Thirteen small dolls were found lying in a trash bag; there were 12 dolls in uniform and one of head coach Skip "To my Lou" Curly. This could explain why the coach was seen doing some somersaults and cartwheels throughout the game. These dolls are now being held as evidence against Potsdam and the witchdoctor, Dr. Shake E. Miller. When asked why he made the dolls, Dr. Miller replied, "Hey, I mortgaged my hut and my canoe, and put everything on Potsdam. I needed the cash, what can I say?"

When informed of the findings, tri-captain Ray DeFloozio said, "Now I know why my rump was so sore after the game. It was those damn needles, not hemorrhoids."

The Grisky

coach Batmite Racht said this about his team: "I knew they could do it. I've been working them hard since Christmas and promised them that if they won the Division I championship Coach Lollie Torn and I would treat them to dinner at his Corner Store."

In closing, Dan Gable had this to say about the Grizzlies, "They're a well coached team. I'd like to know where they came from, evidently our scouts aren't doing a very good job." When asked what it was like to lose to a Division III school Gable replied, "It stinks, it really stinks, but considering the class they showed out here they must have been a highly budgeted outfit. One thing, though, those uniforms and warmups they had were atrocious. It's a good thing they didn't indicate their wrestling ability."

BEAR NOTES: Since winning the national championships Athletic Director Rander "B.L." Savingsome has met with the administration and they voted to tap MAC for the cash to buy new warmups and uniforms.

most valuable wrestler of the tournament. Bitta later told the media about his feelings on the match. "I was confident going out. I knew I could beat him because I pinned him before when we were juniors in high school. I knew if I could get the legs in, the match would be mine because that's how I pinned him in high school . . . with a banana split."

The only second place finish went to Don Splenkowenk at 190. Winning by a score of 26-3 in the third period, Splenkowenk's opponent caught him with a roll and pinned him with 30 seconds left on the clock. Splenkowenk's only comment was, "I didn't think he had it in him."

The third place finishers for Ursinus were Rolf Stallone (118), Conrad Grister (134), Dwano Oile (150), and Ryan Jones (167). Second year head

Within fifteen seconds Bitta had Baum Gartner with his legs in and pinned him with a banana split. For this remarkable feat Bitta was named
