

NOW WHAT?

JOIN US TO DISCUSS WHAT YOU CAN DO TO ADDRESS SOCIAL INJUSTICE

Learn about the experiences of two activists,

Jen Wallin-Ruschman and Perry William Green, III

who engage in various forms of social action to address social inequities.

GSU students, faculty, staff, and members of the community are invited to attend a free symposium to discuss social action.

OCTOBER 9, 2015

4:30 to 6 p.m.

D34104

Jen Wallin-Ruschman, Ph.D. is a scholar-activist. She is an Assistant Professor of Psychology at Abraham Baldwin Agricultural College in Georgia. She has worked with a range of psychology, critical education, and social justice organizations, including: Highlander Research and Education Center, Rethinking Schools, Safe Zone, Society for Community Research and Action, Kentucky Commission on Human Rights, Oxfam America, and The Anne Braden Institute.

Perry William Green, III is a seasoned community and political organizer. Currently, Perry is a project staffer in the Campaigns and Elections Department at the National Education Association (NEA). Prior to joining the NEA, Perry was a Deputy Field Director on Jesús “Chuy” Garcia’s campaign for Mayor of Chicago.

Perry has worked in the non-profit, governmental and education sectors at various organizations and as an organizer on political and electoral campaigns across the United States since 2008.

This event is sponsored by Governors State University’s Intellectual Life Grant.

For additional information contact Dr. Mazna Patka at mpatka@govst.edu.