The team from UNH included Jodi Alger, of Hebron, Conn.; Cynthia Blodgett, of Lisbon; Seth Gray, of Pittsburg; and Susan Marston, of Pittsfield. Pete Erickson, UNH assistant professor of animal and nutritional sciences, coached the team.

NAIDC is an innovative two-day competition for students representing dairy programs in North American universities. It enables students to apply theory and learning to a real-world dairy, while working as part of a team.

During the competition, students inspect their designated dairies and interview herd managers. Each team then develops a farm analysis and presentation materials, including recommendations for nutrition, reproduction, milking procedures, animal health, housing and financial management. They then present their recommendations to a panel of judges.. For more information, visit www.dairychallenge.org.
