DURHAM, N.H. — University of New Hampshire Police and New Hampshire State Police responded to a call Sunday night regarding a bomb threat in Morse Hall, which houses the UNH Institute for the Study of Earth, Oceans and Space (EOS). After a thorough search of both the interior and exterior of the building, UNH Police issued an all-clear at approximately 11:15 p.m. The threat was received by two EOS faculty members' e-mail accounts.

UNH Police remind all students, faculty and staff that if they receive a threatening e-mail or see a suspicious object in or around a building or anywhere on campus, to please contact UNH Police immediately, at 862-1427, or 911.
