Two female memoers of The Counseling and Testing Center, Barbara Brockelman and Judith Palmer, have indicated they think the University's proposal to close the center as of June 1977 was made in retaliation to a suit they have filed in the Federal District Court of New Hampshire regarding unequal pay.

The two women say the proposal to shut down the Center is the last in a chain of retaliatory actions.

Vice Provost of Student Affairs Richard Stevens said he had been advised not to comment on any pending or past law suits.

Stevens said that to his knowledge there is no suit pending because the Federal District Court judge ruled there was not sufficient grounds to hear the case. He said this action had been taken around mid-August.

Brockelman says Stevens is mistaken. The case has not been thrown out of court according to her. She said because of the Useri Decision of the Supreme Court which said state employees were not covered by fair employment standards the judge decided he would hear the case on

Spanos against gambling

Harry Spanos, the Democratic candidate for Governor, said he abhors the thought of any extension of gambling in New Hampshire, including gambling casinos and betting cards.

An article in the Nashua Telegraph quoted Perry Wolf, vice president of the Four Seasons Association, a group of motel and hotel owners, as saying Spanos told him he would sign casino gambling legislation.

In a statement issued from his campaign headquarters Spanos said, "Mr. Wolf has misrepresented my position. The statements he made in the Nashua Telegraph are false. To my knowledge I do not know Mr. Wolf and I have not had any conversations with him regarding my position on the extension of gambling in New Hampshire.'

McIntyre supports Spanos

On Monday, Oct. 18, Sen. Thomas McIntyre called Governor Meldrim Thomson a "refugee from the stone age" and gave his full support to Democratic hopeful, Harry Spanos.

He called Spanos an "honorable, decent and ethical man of intellect and compassion." McIntyre has been campaigning throughout the state in support of Spanos. He said Spanos will restore "calm and responsible government to our state and put an end to Thomson's iron-fist regime and hysterical rheto-

Philip Dunlap of Hopkinton was elected chairman of the University Board of Trustees for a fourth term Saturday, Oct. 16 at the board's annual meeting.

Richard Morse of Manchester was named vice chairman of the board. He has held the position since 1973.

Other officers elected by the board include: John Day of Keene. secretary: Norman Myers of Newington, treasurer; and Hedley Pinigree of Goffstown, legal advisor to the board.

Equestrians will compete

About 120 equestrians from all over New England will participate in a two-day event sponsored by the University of New Hampshire Horseman's Club at the University's Tirrell Light Horse Center in Durham Saturday and Sunday, Oct. 23 and 24.

Competitors in the UNH event will be divided into three categories: pretraining, training and preliminary

A dressage show will be held on Saturday, beginning at 8 a.m., for training through third level tests. The dressage test is a set exercise designed to demonstrate a horse's suppleness, agility and obedience.

Sunday will be endurance day, with events beginning at 8 a.m. to test the horses' speed, stamina and jumping ability. Spectators are encouraged to attend.

Parade to oppose nuke

The Clamshell Alliance will sponsor a seven-mile bike parade from Hampton State Park to the proposed nuclear power plant in Seabrook as part of their alternative energy fair Oct. 23 and

The bicyclists will carry signed petitions calling for a permanent halt to construction of the two billion facility.

"We will deliver the petitions to Public Service Company officials at the plant site and then return to the fair," said Clamshell spokesman Neil Linsky. He said no civil disobedience is planned in connection with either the Saturday bicycle parade or the fair in general

Linsky said that if construction of the Seabrook station continues however, there are plans for a mass occupation of the site

The fair is free and open to the public.

ATO brother Chris Duffy and his friend Worthless, a Yellow-Naped Amazon parrot; he can't whistle Dixie, but he can giggle like a girl, laugh like a dirty old man or scream like a maniac. (Nick Novick photo)

Worthless woos the women with wolfish whistling

By Rob McCormick

His name is Worthless. He lives in the ATO fraternity house and on warm days he stands in the window to whistle at passing girls.

No, he is not a brother nor a UNH student. He is a three-yearold, Yellow-Naped Amazon -parrot.

Worthless lives with Chris Duffy, a first year Pre-Vet student and, apparently, the life of a fraternity house has rubbed off on him. Besides whistling at girls, Worthless likes to sing to records, do imitations of people coughing, wheezing and sneezing and when he's really excited, let out a loud, horrendous scream.

Duffy maintains parrots make the best pets, they are better than dogs, rabbits or snakes, all of which Duffy has had before. Some of his reasons are that parrots have a life expectancy of 50 years. They are very loyal and affectionate (ask Long John Silver) and they can talk.

Duffy said Worthless was two and a half years-old when they met six months ago. So, for an initial investment of $550 and four dollars a week for seeds, he will have a loyal, affectionate friend he can talk to for the next 47 years.

Worthless has a personality even more colorful than his bright green and yellow plumage. Duffy said that Worthless prefers girls to guys because "guys don't know how to play with him. Girls are always sweet and he knows they won't scare him."

To illustrate his point, Duffy told about two girls that came in one night and took Worthless out of his cage. "He jumped on one of the girl's shoulders and bit her ear and laughed. He knows it's funny, that's why he Worthless is no birdbrain, although he is slightly chicken. One day he was up in the window whistling and chattering away and letting out "his gawk," as Duffy calls it. Duffy had been trying to break him of this habit by giving Worthless a rap whenever he screeched. "He turned the window." So Worthless, in his fright, took to flight and landed in a nearby tree.

In the tree, Worthless showed his true, fowls heart. "He was really scared," said Duffy. "He wanted to get down." Someone got a broom to coax Worthless down. It worked and Worthless ran over and jumped on Duffy's shoulder.

Now that the cold weather is here Worthless no longer sits atop the open window, calling out to passers-by, He sits, somewhat uncontentedly, in his cage, occasionally letting out his little girl's giggle or his old man's dirty laugh.

Duffy said he would catch a cold if he were to sit in the open window. "But that's not a prob-lem, said Duffy. "My biggest nightmare is that one of these around and knew I was coming," dumb-dumbs is gonna c said Duffy. "The only way he could get away was to fly out be a great idea to stuff him." dumb-dumbs is gonna come home drunk and think it would

University policy decided by Senate

By Katie McClare

The University Senate is the policy-making body at UNH said, Senate Chairman Allen Thompson.

"Whatever the senate decides becomes University policy," said Thompson, an assistant professor in the Whittemore School of Business and Economics.

Thompson said the senate decisions about general education requirements. It establishes admissions and financial aid policy relative to academic programs. It cannot dictate specific academic programs such as graduation requirements for particular degree programs.

It also deals with student conduct matters like alcohol and visitation policies.

He said the senate does not handle budgets. But, "We are concerned that the meaning of the University is so wrapped up in the budget." He said this might cause the senate's issues to appear less important.

Thompson said there has been "no move" towards bringing budget matters under senate con-

"Each individual senator has an equal voice in that they all have only one vote," said Thompson. But there is a different proportional makeup. There are 30 student senators, SENATE page 19

The faculty have a faculty council which is concerned with issues of primary importance to the faculty. "There was a question of opening faculty files to other faculty. This was really not important to students since it involved only faculty," he explained.

"The equal voice is under question," he continued. He said President Mills had proposed making the administration non-voting. "I can't speak for

An outbreak of head lice (pediculosis) is circulating in the Durham area elementary and high schools.

School officials reported 53 cases at Mast Way Elementary School, five cases at the high school, four at the Middle School and three at Oyster River Elementary School since Oct. 14

No cases have been reported at Hood House, according to Director of Nurses Barbara Cavanaugh.

Seven teachers at Mast Way and four bus drivers were also

Thomson, Spanos race on Governor Meldrim Thomson will visit UNH tonight, meeting with the University community at 8:30 p.m. in the Strafford Room of the Memorial Union Building.

The meeting is open to the public. There will be a brief talk by Thomson, followed by a question and answer period.

Thomson has said that he will give $1,000 to anyone who can prove he made the remarks.

By Celia Morisete

A thoughtful, dark haired sophomore, Tom Pappas is well versed in the issues of the state. Middle-of-the-road jargon is not a Pappas trait The potential state representative knows the issues and has definite stands concerning them.

Six candidates including Pappas are vying for the three available seats in Nashua's Ward Three. A basic interest in politics prompted Pappas to seek office. Everyone should become involved in whatever capacity possible," said Pappas. "Since I haven't any ties to anything, I'll offer an objective outlook on the issues. I can view both sides of the coin. Yet, I also realize that the first session (of legislature)

-Reforms due to wastes occuring between local, country and state levels.

-against any broad base tax, inherently regressive.

Pappas said he feels his main objective will be to promote "orderly growth in New Hampshire

Students comment against administration policies

By Mark Pridham
"People have power in numbers. I think that when the administration sees that students are demanding a say in how this university is run there will be more changes," said one of the approximately 800 students who gathered to demonstrate in front of Thompson Hall yester-

demonstration organized and sponsored by student government to protest the breakdown of student input in the decision-making of the University

Changes in next years calendar, the possible closing of Schofield House and the Testing Center and parietals were a few of the areas cited where the administration has allegedly failed to respond to

"I feel that some of the things the Administration has done recently have affected me adversely," said Dave Wise, a senior majoring in Biochemistry.

"I was going to take my first pass-fail course this year, but I didn't because I would have to get a C or better to pass," he said. Several students expressed their disappointment with the changes in next year's calendar and the proposed closing of the Testing Center at Schofield

"I depend on the money I make during the Christmas break to help me through the Spring semester," said one student who wished to remain anonymous. She also complained about the existence of parietals, calling them "behind the times.

"If anything, this demonstration shows that students are really concerned with the issues affecting them. They want to know what's going on," said freshman pre-law major Kim Keany.

of those students Most questioned felt the demonstration would have some effect on the administration's dealings with students.

"I think it has already had as effect," said one student. She cited President Mill's plan for a series of open forums with students, the first of which was held last Mon-day in the Memorial Union Building.

Another student was more cautious in her appraisal of the demonstration's effect: "These are valid issues -- one's which directly effect students and their life at UNH. I hope the administration listens."

Mills attends protest

By Gary Langer

UNH President Eugene Mills and vice provosts Richard Stevens and Allan Prince were among administrators and faculty who viewed yesterday's Student Government demonstration and offered opinions on it.

"I take the student's concerns very seriously," Mills said after the demonstration. Mills said these concerns "ought to be treated and dealt with." He said that he thinks the demonstration was prompted by student leadership concerns over student costs and parietals, as well as "some confusion over two or three other

Mills said the administration must take into account the faculty, alumni association, staff, Board of Trustees and others as well as the students.

Richard Stevens, vice provost for student affairs, said he has "no particular feelings one way or the other" about the demon-

"It's fine, if this is the way they want to express themselves," he Stevens said some of Student Government's complaints are 'inaccurate or misleading' that "students were involved all along" in the 24 hour visitation proposal.

"Somebody has the responsibility of making the final decision," said Stevens.

Associate Dean of Students William Kidder said Student Government's "getting ideas across to students is a healthy

'The administration has tried to be open," said Kidder, "but on particular events they have come across as not." Kidder said he hopes the demonstration "will prompt a reappraisal of the administration's procedures

With a brisk wind blowing that often made it difficult to hear, Farnham also made the following demands from the ministration:

-That the Senate initiate a revote on the pass-fail issue. The present system requiring a C grade to pass a pass-fail course is "an infringement on those who have saved their pass-fails over the last three years." Farnham said the present system was voted into existence because of "lack of communication" and "contradictory statements,"

-That the newly-formed committee which is investigating the Counseling and Testing Center include two students with a background in counselling.
There are no students on the committee, chosen by Stevens and UNH President Eugene

That student membership on the Parking and Traffic Committee be raised to a majority portion of the committee and that not less than two thirds of the student membership to commuter

-That the fall's registration procedure "was a disgrace" and students living on campus should be allowed to pick up their registration forms in their dormitories,

-Student Government "applauded" the new Kari-van program, but Farnham said many of the frustrations brought about by the reduced schedule "could have been eliminated had the administration the courtesy to inform students of the cutbacks beforehand, not three months later."

-That all new administrative positions be communicated to Student Government with a justification for the position prior to the position being filled.

Bob Millen, vice president of Student Government and chairman of the Dining and Residence Advisory Council (DRAC) and Jack Calhoun, chairman of the students legal service committee and vice president for student services also spoke at the demonstration, which lasted about 45 minutes.

The speakers focused on the University's bureacracy and administration. "The red tape of the bureacracy of the administration is an educational in-convenience," Calhoun said.

Calhoun cited the 30 police officers on the UNH police force as "The Durham police sit down there at the other end of Main Street and could provide the same service," he said. "The size of the UNH police force would leave many small towns in envy."

"Are we students so completely unqualified that we cannot participate in the decisions that affect our daily lives?" Calhoun asked in reference to the tack of students on the committee studying the Counselling and Testing Center.

Millen said the result of the administration's withdrawal of support of the visitation policy was that the administration was in effect saying, "Don't improve your environment, don't get involved and don't stand up for what you believe in."

"Why must the best interests of the University not be in the best interests of the students?" Millen

The speakers were interupted frequently by applause from the crowd. The loudest applause came when Farnham said "Lets's get the bureacracy out of academics" when he called for the elimination of the ten administrative seats in the University Senate.

Farnham concluded in saying that to those administrators "who ignore our efforts to upgrade this institution, I unequivocally state to all of you here today that I will publically call for their resignations," a statement that resulted in applause that lasted over 30 sec-

Ford pays UNH security bill others' bills still unpaid

By Jon Seaver
The security bill of $5,474.91 for President Ford's visit to UNH last Feb. 8 was paid in full Monday.

The payment covered the University's cost of about 100 police officers from the Campus Police Department and nine communities for security during his pre-primary appearance here.

The Ford committee already paid $3,123 for his reception at the Memorial Union Building the Peter Hollister, director of University Relations, has been working with Captain Guy Mermet of UNH Police since last spring to secure payments due from five presidential candidates.

Unpaid bills include Ronald Reagan, $1,378; Congressman Morris Udall, $39; Senator Birch Bayh, $33; and Fred Harris, $20.

"It looked like a bad debt," Hollister said referring to Ford's bill, "But I didn't take it as a bad debt, and I'm sure they didn't take it that way.
"I strongly suspect that with campaigns as extensive as the President's, it takes time to go through the procedure of catching up with many bills, literally hundreds of bills, accumulated during the campaign," continued Hollister

Ford's bill was originally sent to Concord, to the office of Congressman James Cleveland who is coordinating Ford's campaign effort in New Hampshire.

"They forwarded it to Washington," said Hollister. "I don't know whether Cleveland's office sent it to the wrong place or it was misdirected, but it ended up going to the Secret Service who don't handle campaign bills. Once the bill got to the commit-tee, though, it was a matter of weeks before they responded with a check."

On the other bills Hollister said, "To the best of my knowledge, they haven't been paid yet. We are still working on securing payment. As recently as Oct. 18, I know of no payment from Governor Reagan,

"We have been concentrating on the big bill (President Ford's), so we have not done anything on Reagan's or the other three smaller ones. Our attitude is the same on these as on President Ford's, It's a matter of time before the committees catch up on their many small bills.

University replaces doors

By Jamie Batson
Traffic through the main entrance of the Memorial Union Building was detoured to the side entrance for six days while workmen tore down the old doors and installed new ones

The new doors comprise a $5,500 project that was approved last May according to Herbert Cilley the assistant director of main-tenance for the University Physical Plant.

"We originally planned to com-plete the project over the sum-mer vacation", said Cilley, "but a delay in the delivery of some parts held the project up."

The work on the four new single doors which replace three sets of double doors began on Oct. 13 and was completed on Oct 19. Some grumbled extensively about the inconvenience of entering on the lower level, while others welcomed the break in routine.

"I was surprised to find there was a door down there" mented one good natured MUB frequenter. Others didn't respond as amiably to the construction:

"Do you know what it's like to work for four hours with a buzz saw whizzing in your ears?" asked a weary looking MUB information desk receptionist.

"The people in the MUB have been after us for years about those doors", said Cilley. The main problem with the old doors was inadequate security. Many people had devised ways of getting into the MUB even when the doors were locked. "Quite a few of the old doors are still on cam-pus buildings", said Cilley. Another problem with the old doors was the metal crash bars on them. Every time someone opened the doors from the inside the metal pieces inside the bar mechanism were smashed together, causing the metal to wear down.

"This meant that we had to repair the doors constantly", explained Cilley. The mechanism in the new doors is improved so that the metal pieces only strike each other when the custodian unlocks the door in the morning.

The HGI Corporation of Portland, Me. installed the new doors. The wooden panels around the doors are going to be painted by the service department. The wire mesh glass is going to be replaced with tempered glass, glazed by Pittsburg Plate Glass Company of Portsmouth.

Cilley says the panels will be painted, the glass glazed and the doors done in four weeks.

Students for park plan concert shell

By Tom Nelson Students For a Park, a UNH student organization, is trying to raise money for a small acoustical concert shell which would be constructed in East-West

The shell was unanimously approved April 2, 1976 by the Physical Plant and Maintenance Office pending further acoustical studies. Its estimated cost is $5,000. The group now has $1,000 and is expecting a profit of $200 in a plant sale they held last Monday and Tuesday.

Nancy Waldman, president of the organization, indicated that they are trying to work "within the system." She said, "We've talked to several administrators in different segments of the University and we've gotten some support and some cautions. So far there have been no red lights."

Students For a Park has been in existence since 1972, when they formed for the purpose of persuading the administration to allow them to construct a park instead of a planned parking lot next to the Memorial Union Building. Since the park was approved and built the organization has made periodic improvements and changes.

The shell is intended for quiet concerts, lecturers, and theater or dance presentations. It was designed last year by Craig Finley and Phil Steiger for their senior civil engineering project. The structure, which will be 24 ft. wide, 14 ft. deep, and 12 ft. high is made of reinforced concrete. It will face the Memorial Union Building from the corner of East-West park nearest to Huddleston.

Last year's MUSO concert in East-West park with Vassar Clemments drew complaints about noise from UNH faculty and Durham residents. Because of the complaints a proposal concerning future outdoor concerts is being drawn up by Hope Spruance, director of student activities. It is hoped that the shell will be included in the proposal. Waldman said, "I hope the shells will be a solution to the problem of outdoor concerts because it was designed for smaller, quieter concerts.'

towards communication with students."

A faculty member who wished to remain anonymous said the students' complaints are "definitely valid." "The adstudents' ministration won't pay attention to student needs until the students make themselves heard as a counterforce," he said, adding. that "the faculty will react to administration policies by unionizing and the students will react by this type of protest.

Alan Prince, vice provost for budget and administration, said, "The demonstration was well done, even though I don't necessarily agree.

Prince said he felt that the demonstration was the result of "Tensions resulting from hard choices" by the administration. "I think this will help things along," said Prince.

Last March three psychologists at the Center filed grievances with the University on ethical grounds.

Palmer said there never had been any difficulty between the Center and the administration until the Labor Department findings.

She said there had never been any mention of the Center costing too much money.

According to the two women the former director of the center, Dr. Peter Cimbolic, originally supported their claims for equal pay. According to Brockelman, recent figures from Cimbolic's report on the counseling and Testing Center misrepresent the Center. She said he used a different statistical system for recording "contacts" at the Cen-

"He counted 15 people who met in a group for 10 weeks as 15 contacts rather than 150," said Brockelman.

She says he also ignored their behind the scenes programs like RA training sessions.

She said Cimbolic, "a straight medical man", was "philosophically opposed" to soine of the more humanistic oriented counselors at the Center.

"He was the odd man out," said Brockelman. "He felt he didn't have control over testing and counseling."

Stevens, who hired Cimbolic, would not comment on why Cimbolic left. He said there was no connection between Cimbolic's resignation and his report. "He just acquired another job," Stevens said.

Stevens would not comment further on any of the issues raised by the women saying he "would not discuss personnel matters with the media."

Brockelman and Palmer also said that when the new PAT (Professional, Administrative, Technical staff) reclassifications became effective on July 1, they were classified two steps lower than three male psychologists. Palmer said all five had similar job descriptions and responsibilities at the Center.

The committee for PAT reclassifications met between February and July

According to Gary Wolf, director of systems personnel, "if the reclassification is tied in with any retaliat ry action by the University it's pure happenstance."

Wolf said the committee dealt with numbers and not with names. He said all job descriptions were coded Brockelman said the three male psychologists were reclassified in such a way that although they received no cut in pay they were limited in chances for advancement.

Candidates debate issues

would want to hear those individuals who have or will have a role in what tuition increases will be", said Mori.

"There were some contrasting views, some candidates pro-student, some definitely anti-student. But I think students reflect the general apathy of the public."Mori concluded.

Two candidates for Governor's Council were present to express their views, Durham's Dudley Dudley and Salem's Vesta Roy. Democratic candidate Dudly differed with Republican Roy on nuclear power, choice of gover-nors and building I-93 through Franconia Notch. Neither have taken a stand on tax reform.

Both candidates agree on a need to put emphasis on better paying jobs in safe, clean industries and educational and vocational opportunities to New Hampshire people.

Dudley a graduate of UNH, has been a two-term legislator, plays an active role in the state and national Democratic parties, and is a delegate to the Eagleton Institute of Politics.

Roy has been a four-term legislator, a County Com-missioner in Rockingham County, and is the New England Director of the National Order of Women Legislators.

Roy sees the Council's responsibilities as overseeing legislative expenditures on such things as bridges and roads, to interpret laws, guidelines, and procedures at state level, and saw a great need for more communication between governmental levels and state departments.

She promised to hold meetings in the district, and as "a council woman who does her homework", promised to provide a strong voice on matters affecting District One. Roy said she will be able to work with any Governor Dudley said during the past four years the Governor's Council has existed in name only. It has been a rubber stamp, not a check on one-man rule. She made reference to the gag rule, illegal tax search and crony appointments. "A great deal of directions for the state in the coming years should come from the Council", she said. She said she would like to see the Council become a search committee for appointments such as Attorney General, UNH Trustees, Commission on Crime and Delinquency, Prison Trustees, Director of the N.H. State Hospital, and Chief Justice of the New Hampshire Supreme

Her idea of a Council's business would include planning for aid to educational and vocational institutions, providing better programs for senior citizens and enhancing the quality of life.

Dudley who is supporting Spanos for governor, attacked Governor Thomson as dictatorial and requiring the Council to be a rubber stamp to get along. She said, "I think I'm a person to stand up to it. If Spanos is elected, I don't objective and have the courage to fight for the needs of this district and the people of this state.

Dudley opposes nuclear power in N.H. and criticized the present state energy policies for being too inefficient.

Roy said, "Any change in the Seabrook operation will come through the courts. This state has a need for additional energy resources and the nuclear power plant will be a boon in this area as an alternative energy source. The national GNP is linked with our energy resources and we must look beyond our oil and coal resources we are using today. Roy also emphasized that her family is using solar energy in their home.

Dudley is opposed to the building of I-93 through Franconia Notch. Roy commented, "I believe there is an alternative to the highway being built through Franconia Notch, but obviously if you are going to develop the industry in this state, you have to make the northern part accessible.

The two candidates for State Senator from District One differed on their campaign approaches. Republican Larry campaigning primarily on his credentials of more than 15 years in the FBI, six years as a foreign assistance inspector with the Agency for International Development and the Department of State assigned to Asia/Africa sectors.

Democratic incumbent Robert Fennelly boasts a 94 per cent attendance record in the Senate and a 97 per cent attendance in committees (Vice Chairman of Ways and Means, committee member of Energy, Transportation, and Judiciary Commit-

Fennelly said he was the main force behind getting the University System 1.6 million dollars more than the Governor wanted to give.

Keenan said according to Alf Jacobson, president of N.H.'s Senate, Fennelly had nothing to do with the $1.6 million increase in the University system's budget. Keenan said Fennelly was on the Ways and Means Committee that covers only gambling and liquor. The budget comes out of the state Budget and Education committees. He emphasized his support in the past for the University in every area; budgets, moral issues, and student scholarships.

He mentioned his leading of the floor fight to override Governor Thomson on the Student Trustee

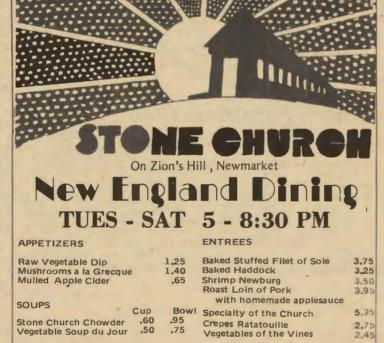

He is also a member of Senate Select Committee studying the goals of UNH.

Fennelly is supported by Spanos and Dudley.

Keenan wants no new taxes and is in favor of broadening the tax base. He emphasized the need to improve the quality of life in N.H., to publicize the benefits of coming to N.H., endorses greater allocation of revenues for educational purposes, greater recreation for all ages, increased loans and scholarships for N.H. high school graduates, and pledges to work for a better line of communication and liason between the University and the General Court. Keenan pledged to be a strong, energetic, and an independent voice for the district.

Fennelly is a one term state senator originally from the New York City area. Keenan is a native of Dover, a graduate of Notre Dame, has attended UNH recently for graduate work, and runs a real estate agency in editorial-

Is a senate realignment coming?

It looks like a realignment of the University Senate is imminent. Because there are a number of proposals, the form the "new" senate may take is up in the air.

Legislation for a change is yet to be introduced in the senate this semester, but the different alternatives are already kicking about.

Some faculty members are thinking about a bicameral senate, which would create separate faculty and student branches. Students would probably lose power, especially concerning academic issues if this was adopted.

A second proposal is Student Body President David Farnham's newly announced idea to abolish the ten administrative seats in the senate. What, if anything he proposes to do beyond that is yet to be announced. Regardless of what that may be, Farnham's idea would benefit students and faculty, giving those groups more power in the senate.

A third proposal gives faculty more power, at least on the surface. This one is President Mills'

He asked the senate's executive council in a letter dated Dec. 15, 1975 to consider abolishing the nine ex-officio administrative seats and adding ten more faculty seats. He said at the time the change would give the faculty a stronger voice in the development of educational policy and increase faculty confidence in the senate without making the body too large.

The student and faculty caucuses of the senate each voted on the proposal early last spring. The students favored it and the faculty voted against it.

Why did the faculty vote against something that was supposed to benefit them? According to English Professor John Richardson, who was a senate member at that time, many faculty members felt the proposal would allow the administration the luxury of not being responsible to the senate.

They felt if a policy the administration did not like came up, the administration might not go along with it, giving the excuse they were not bound to obey the senate since they were not voting members of it.

That happening is a possibility. But nevertheless, President Mills will probably reintroduce his idea to this year's senate, which has a number of new members.

Whether or not the faculty will vote differently this time around is unclear. However, considering the current climate among the student leadership, their vote could be different.

It appears they do not want to lose power to anyonefaculty included. The president's proposal would give the faculty ten more votes than students, 40 to 30.

A good compromise might be to eliminate the administrative votes and give five more to the students and five more to the faculty. Each faction would have equal say as now, with the administration merely observing and giving advise on policies when it is requested. The body would not become any larger than under Dr. Mill's proposal.

Because students and faculty are the consumers of most University Senate policies, they should be the ones to make the decisions. The administration should carry out the policies. If they feel a particular policy is unwise or impossible to administer, they can make that feeling known to the senate during debate on the policy.

As for making the administration accountable, the senate should be able to come up with a rule making their legislation binding and requiring the administration to carry it out. As an example, the executive branch of national government cannot refuse to administer a policy voted by Congress if Congress overrides its veto.

It will be interesting to see which proposal is adopted, for that will indicate which faction is the controlling one. Right now the students have momentum. Whether or not they can keep it up in the senate, through the adoption of Farnham's proposal or a compromise similar to the one we propose, remains to be seen.

About personals letters

During the last couple of weeks problems have come up concerning the "personals" section of the paper. Lately, personals of a slanderous or libelous nature have appeared, embarrassing people and jeopardizing The New Hampshire legally.

This must stop. The personals are intended as a fun section of the paper, for love notes, birthday wishes, secret messages and the like. Entries such as the "social disease" one Tuesday cannot be tolerated.

That one deserves clarification. It was a private joke between two friends. However, the person who placed the personal did not realize the consequences her friend would suffer in terms of bothersome phone calls and other practical jokes

The whole thing was unfortunate, especially that it got in the paper. We must accept the blame for that. The personals, like all parts of the paper, are supposed to be scanned and checked prior to going to press. However, production night was so hectic that the personals were overlooked. That will not happen again.

It would be appreciated if anyone wishing to place a personal use discretion when submitting it. We, in turn, plan to carefully screen each one as it is pasted down. Any that may cause someone embarrassment and the paper trouble will be pulled immediately, with a refund given if the person who placed it comes in.

The personals section is a fun section and one of the most widely read parts of The New Hampshire. We want to keep it going. And it will, provided you use it as it was intended.

Front page

I compliment you and your staff on the remarkable front page on your issue of 8 October, 1976. the bucolic scene under the logo radically con-trasted the shocking news in the Seabrook Construction story.

I'd say "Students in error must pay tickets" is a typical story since the UNH Public Safety Divison almost exists solely to screw the students. What does Fublic Safety have to do with parking anyhow? It's more like automobile safety. Just who is more important at UNH: people or cars? When I left in May, I think it was still people, as cats still had to yield to productions at components. pedestrians at some crosswalks. Perhaps it's the other way around "Testing Center Defended" can be blamed on Meldrim Thomson as can everything else bad that comes from lack of sufficient funds. I never had the chance to use the Counseling and Testing Center to it's fullest extent, nevertheless I'm sorry to hear of its apparent demise.

Why doesn't the University hire another administrator to overrun the MUB, then they can close Hood House. Wouldn't that solve the problem? "Building Removed" and the photo that went with it were the best part of the whole page.

I wish to propose a tront page of the-future. The top picture could be the same; it looks like a pasture near Seabrook, N.H. There would be a need for a cutline, though, as it would be an old picture. I suggest something like, "This is the way it was before..."

The parking story could be replaced by the story, "Governor erred, must pay price." The Seabrook story would headline; "Nuclear Regulatory Commission Dismissed, SOUTHEAST N.H. EVACUATED."

EVACUATED."
And, finally, just superimpose the governor's mansion on that house-moving photo, because Mel and his mansion (the guy on the top of the house kind of resembles the Honorable) and that's where Mel would sit. however, there's just one problem. After so many people's lives were threatened by the Thomson Seabrook blunder no one will allow Mel free passage across their land Mel free passage across their land.
There, Mel will sit, looking forlorn and unwanted, sneering at able-minded
UNH students (who will not let him down off the roof) and wishing he had gotten a better education.

I sincerely hope that the Seabrook

Calendar

To the Editor:

The tip-off for those, students and faculty alike, who prefer the current, frenetic calendar, is given by the student who reportedly stated: "I'd rather take exams before Christmas and get them over with." (Emphasis added.) As long as we have enrollees, rather than students, who perceive an educational experience as something to "get over," just so long will we have the hurried semester and the academically-dead period between semesters. It has been my experience in some fifteen different colleges and universities that serious students, both the honor students and those trying and get them over with." (Emphasis the honor students and those trying desperately to remain in school, utilize the two-week vacation period effectively. The current semester plan th-warts both of these groups. Too, one should question the justification for the existence of courses in which it is claimed, by student or faculty person, that "they forget everything they know in the two week vacation period." If a college education will not last even two weeks, why bother with it at all?

To "get it over with before Christmas" advocates apparently see the school experience as something, a necessary evil, which gets in the way of their plans to go skiing or to Bermuda where "real living" takes place.

SCOPE

After reading the article concerning the financial losses of recent SCOPE concerts, and reading that Fleetwood Mac was signed up to play UNH this year but cancelled due to high playing fees, it is no wonder that SCOPE is losing student funds.

losing student funds.

I wager that most students would unhesitantly pay $7.50 to $8.50 to see Fleetwood Mac or any other top quality band. SCOPE's policy of having second-rate bands play at UNH, to keep ticket prices down is a fine policy, but the music is second-rate and unsatisfying.

It's true that last year's ripoff Baez-Dylan concert ($8.50 or higher a ticket) gave people a hankering for lower priced concerts, but I'm sure in the case of Fleetwood

I am writing this letter in reference to the situation at the Counseling and Testing Center. I find it difficult to believe that the administration is even considering it's closing. The Center is by far one of the richest and most valuable resources that this University has. It's people are a rare breed of counselors with skills and sensitivity of the highest quality. They certainly could not be easily replaced.

As a student, over the past three years I have been able to take advantage of the wide variety of workshops and counseling services that they have offered. This includes assertiveness training self-hypnosis a woman's training, self-hypnosis, a woman's consciousness raising group and individual therapy. I would say that my affilliation with the CTC has resulted in one of the most important parts of my education here.

As a woman at UNH, one of the greatest things that could have come my way was running into two coun-selors named Barbara Brockelman and Judy Palmer. They are among the most positive and aware women that I have ever known, and they are incredibly needed at this University. At times, I wonder if it was the progressiveness of these women as well as the togetherness and excellence of the entire Center staff that frightened Peter Cimbolic into submitting such a ridiculous proposal in the first place.

The rationale that the University is in a financial crunch is possibly one of the poorest excuses for trying to abolish CTC. It is not that I doubt the truth of UNH's poor financial status, but rather that the Counseling Center should be one of the last things to go, not the first. Perhaps the administration should think instead about abolishing the MUB, the Traffic Bureau or those little trash cans on the lawn of Paul · Arts that look like penguins.

The idea of replacing CTC with a 'Mental Hygiene Unit' is literally insane. That would be stepping backwards into the land where Freud was King, and where it was a common belief that a counselor's effectiveness was measured by the time they had spent in school. Learning to help ourselves should be the goal, and that is what CTC is all about.

The Counseling and Testing Center is very important organization and should remain on this campus

T-School

To the Editor

There seems to be a certain degree of ignorance in the article concerning the Thompson School of Applied Science.

It is not true that we are academically inferior students who could not receive admission to the "University of New Hampshire". We have all specifically chosen Thompson School because it can give us in a short period of time, knowledge and skills we need to become proficient in our chosen fields.

We do not wish to compare the academic sophistication of the two schools. Thompson School offers its students an education which combines scientific theory with practical ap-

In Dr. Roberts' words there is inferiority attached to T-School because of the 40 per cent loss of credits. It is also publically acknowledged that the capital is "the others indeed to the company of t school is "on the other side of the tracks". If the university system believes that our credits have less value, then our tuition should be proportionately reduced.

By simple calculations it can be ob-served that T-School gets less for their money than students at the main university. The full proportion of the money we pay should be channeled back for our use and benefit. It has also been brought to our attention that the university system will now accept full credit transfer from other two year schools. It is not reasonable that the UNIT system can't accept the entire credit load from their own two year school.

One semester's work, money and energy would not be wasted if the University would accept all our credits. We do realize that all of our courses could not be applied to another field - but our credits from these cour-ses could be excepted as elective

The matter of transferability of credits should be looked at carefully before a decision has to be made.

Ms. Clai E. Losher Secretary Thompson School Executive Council

Insult

To the Editor: 'As a Thompson School student, I am insulted and outraged by the Oct. 19th article written by Jennifer Grant. I resent the implications of Ms. Grant that T-School students are inferior to UNH four year students.

A poor piece of writing, her article belongs on the editorial page, not as a news article. I suppose Jennifer Grant can't be blamed, though, considering the source of her information.

Donald Murray clearly shows himself as a prejudiced un-informed individual, yet he is willing to set himself up as some sort of authority on T-School. He obviously knows nothing about it, and I am surprised that Murray who actually teaches newswriting, is so irresponsible concerning what he feeds to the press.

Thompson School students are not picked from the lowest levels of their classes, in fact, many students here did stand very high in their high school classes, but find that their educational goals are best met by a two-year program.

These students are every bit as intelligent and capable as any four-year student. T-School students also work as hard or harder than four-year students, in that we spend more hours in class per class than any UNH four-year student.

The idea that anyone over 21 is automatically accepted to T-School is an absolute fallacy, as anyone who looks at the catalog can easily see.

In conclusion, I would like to make the following points: 1. We work as hard as anyone else.

 We are as capable as anyone else.
 I resent any other implications by 4. Donald Murray should check his facts before opening his mouth.

Food fight

To the Editor: As the President's Council of Area I, we feel obliged to express our feelings regarding the food fight on Friday, October 8 at Stillings Dining Hall. This food fight (which was carried out by a minority of students), caused an in-convenience by having one side of Stillings closed for the weekend and will result in the loss of special meals throughout the semester. We feel that instances like this should be viewed as an exception and not the rule, and that in the future this could be prevented by peer pressure.

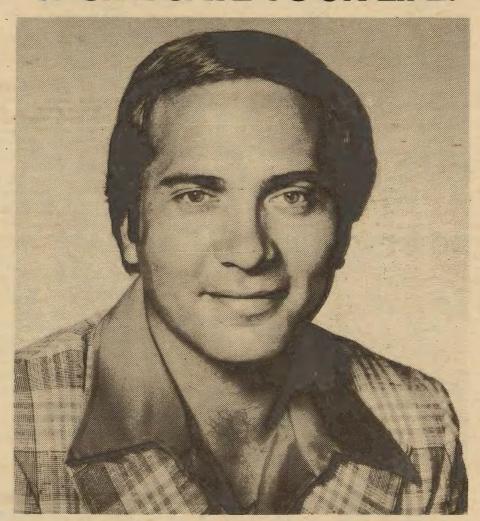

The majority of students should not stand for this asinine behavior of a few. We expect that this type of action will not occur ag ain.

During one of my checkups, the doctors found a spot on my lungs. I thought it might be cancer. So did they.

Luckily, it wasn't. Most people are lucky. Most people never have cancer.

But those who find they do have cancer are far better off if their cancer is discovered early. Because we know how to cure many cancers when we discover them early.

That's why I want you to have a checkup. And keep having checkups. The rest of your life. It'll be a lot longer if you do.

Utah RDT: the energy of democratic dance

By Marion Gordon

Style, strength and versatility represent the best of the Utah Repertory Dance Theater. The twelve member company, in which each member has an equal voice in production and choreography, highlighted its brief residency at UNH with performances at Johnson Theater Monday and Tuesday night.

Monday and Tuesday night.

Technically this modern dance company is as strong as any of the best ballet companies and their diverse repertoire compliments the dancers both individually and collectively.

A change in the program on Monday night due to the illness of dancer Karen Steele resulted in dancer Karen Steele resulted in Nocturne being presented first. This piece, choreographed in 1953 by Donald McKayle, relies heavily on the ethnic beat. The dance is actually multi-rhythmic and creates a visual form of counterpoint.

The choreography allows the dancers to use and control space, with diverse patterns and roundlike coordination there seems never to be any empty space.

The choreography allows the dancers to use and control space.

With diverse patterns and roundlike coordination there seems never to be any empty space.

success of choreography naturally depends on the technical abilities of the dancers. RDT's young dancers are together in every sense of the word. In groups they are cohesive and dynamic. There is nothing equivocal in the movements - a flexed foot is a flexed foot and a contraction is a contraction.

RDT's six male members are not only strong, but together they form an aesthetically pleasing corps with nice, clean lines and high extensions.

My Brother's Keeper, choreographed by company member Lynne Wimmer, struck a graceful balance between pure dance and dramatic acting. The piece gave sense and emotional substance to geometric patterns. Martin Kravitz eloquently danced the role of Lenny, the retar-ded young man. Together, with George, they performed a duet as sensitive and visually striking as any balletic pas de deux.

The action revolves around the accidental death, or possibly murder, of a girl whom Lenny is attracted to. His friend George then kills him with a loving strangling embrace to save him from the ire of an avenging society.

Lynne Wimmer as the girl, attired in a clingy red dress, swivelhipped and sleazed her way around the stage. For a relatively small dancer she projects a lot of energy and fills the stage with her presence.

Accompanied by country-western music of Hal Cannon and Chris Montague with completely bare set, the dancers evoked a sense of a steamy, rural southern

The silences and stillnesses conveyed as much meaning as the music and the movement - a skill which is always a good measuring stick for any actor or dancer.

There is a Time, Jose Limon's 1956 piece, takes its title and spirit from Ecclesiastes. As a whole the work is symmetrical whose the symmetrical a circumstance. the dancers begin joined in a circle and end in the same formation. Emotionally there is a feeling of unity and rest.

The choreography showed the influence of folk dance but recast that style into a more classical mold. The company achieved power through repetition of certain simple patterns.

Although a little long, the piece gave the dancers an opportunity to show their full range. Ron Rubey was especially exciting and elastic in his solo, A Time to Kill and Kay Clark and Martin Kravitz austerely charismatic in their duet.

Ultimately all the members of the company are equally strong and able. The star-less, and able. The star-less, democratic dance company has found its home in RDT.

Luneau's looks luscious

By Paul Cadigan

For the budget-minded who has the means to leave Durham occasionally, there's a place in Rochester with good food, drink and live entertainment.

Luneau's Restaurant, just off the Spaulding Turnpike on Rt. 11, is only a twenty minute drive from campus.

The atmosphere of the dining area is mild and comfortable. The varied entrees range in price from three to seven dollars. The meals include your choice of poptato or rice pilaf, and anything your heart desires at their salad bar, which owner Dick Luneau considers his restaurant's best feature.

The salad bar offers a good selection of quality ingredients, from cole slaw to carrot slices. In addition there are corn fritters, soup, and home-made bread. The salad bar also features unlimited seconds.

Aside from the regular menu, children's specials and a dieter's menu are offered. The dieter's meals are preparted under the guidelines of the Official Diet Workshop in which no fats or sugars are used.

This reporter had the roast lambfrom the "Light Entrees," a section of the menu which offers a smaller portion for those who don't usually finish a regular order. It was quite sufficient, tasty, and had a pricetag of under four dollars. My comrade had the Braised Beef in a thick gravy sauce and said it agreed with him very well

A dinner for two with a cocktail each could be done for less than twelve dollars. Luneau's prices looked less than what a comparative dinner would cost in Portsmouth.

Luneau's also features a lounge downstairs, open six nights a week. (the establishment is closed on Tuesday). The lounge caters to the college-aged crowd with contemporary rock and folk music predominating. Some local bands appear here, but most of the entertainment is booked out of Boston clubs by Judy Starrett. It would be smart to call and find out who's playing, because on some nights an older crowd is catered to. Mixed drinks cost $1.35.

Luneau's is looking to attract more college students. One of their more progressive projects is promoting a concert to be held in Dover featuring the Pousette Dart Band and Capt. Moon, a Dover band with an English sound.

Food, drink, music, all at a reasonable price. For all that it offers, Luneau's is a place that's worth checking out.

On Campus.....

The New Hampshire's cartoonist Debbie Blood and Bob Finegold are a study in contrast. Blood is a senior fine arts major. Finegold is a freshman and a prospective English and predental major. Blood's cartoons rely on her fine drawing and subtle humor. Finegold's cartoons are rough and the humor is often outrageously blatant. They do have one thing in common, though. Each is the creator of funny comic strips.

Debbie Blood's room is the room of an artist. Paintings by her are hung on the walls of her room. Her bookshelf is crammed with various art books. On her desk is her current project, a large self portrait done in pencil. This doesn't seem like the room of a college cartoonist.

Blood said she has been drawing for as long as she can remember. She developed her cartooning Blood became interested in doing a comic strip for The New Hampshire last spring. Ken Sheldon, a former UNH student and cartoonist for the paper, talked to her about it. So this year she decided to submit her comic strip to The New Hampshire. The editors liked the strip (entitled "Our Better Side" and decided to publish it.

"Our Better Side" humorously deals with situations that are confronted on campus. There are no specific characters, none are named, but they are obviously students. The strip relies on Blood's strong cartooning and her subtle humor.

It takes Blood 45 minutes to draw an average comic strip. She says, "Sometimes it takes days to come up with a good story idea. I worry much more about getting a story idea than doing the art. The art is something I know I can just do.

"I do the comic strip just for Blood said she has no aspirations to become a professional cartoonist. She wants to enter the illustration field and work on her portraiture. She is also interested in courtroom drawing. Three of her favorite artists are Rembrandt, Degas and Norman Rockwell Blood's favorite comic strips

Blood's favorite comic strips are "The Wizard of Id", "Broom Hilda", "Doonesbury" and "L'il Abner." She said she likes "L'il Abner" because she feels it is well drawn. She likes the others because they make her laugh.

Blood says, "The strip has gotten favorable reaction. Most people who mention it to me like it a lot." She did mention that she has a drawing teacher who picks on her because of the strip. She said the teacher picks on her because he's afraid that her cartooning will hurt her fine arts

Aside from her fine art and car-tooning, Blood also rides and shows Morgan horses in and around her hometown of Swanzey

Blood said she feels she will be able to sustain her strip for the year. She has no specific plans for the strip. She wants to simply continue making cartoons that people will laugh at.

Doonesbury.
Finegold does the strip "Just for the Hell of it. It's something I enjoy doing." His strip revolves around the misadventures of Brian Goldman, a very neurotic undergrad. Goldman's problems include getting punched out by a beer chugging RA and being locked out of 'Stalag' Stoke on occasions.

It takes Finegold 15-45 minutes to draw a strip. He is never at a loss for ideas. He has a drawer full of cartoon ideas. He says, "I'll get an idea, write it down and throw it in the drawer for the Finegold's strips vary between the personal and the political. the future he plans some football cartoons, dining hall cartoons and a series involving Brian Goldman finding a girlfriend.

Finegold says, "When I do a strip I do it mostly to get a laugh.
Sometimes I will try to make a point, but I want to basically do a straightforward, funny strip.

His favorite comic strips are "B.C." "Wizard of Id", and "Doonesbury." He said he feels all of those strips have influenced

Other hobbies Finegold has aside from his cartooning include skiing, hiking, reading (he is an avid science fiction and comic book fan) and writing (he wants to be a fiction writer).

Finegold is happy with his comic strip. He said his art will become more refined and that the strip will become even better

Thomson responded that the thousand dollars is still his as Spanos was only "saying what a reporter wrote, and that reporter is absolutely wrong."

Thomson earlier in the week travelled to Washington D.C. for President Ford's signing of an amendment to the Safe Boating Act of 1971. The amendment prohibits U.S. Coast Guard jurisdiction on major New Hampshire lakes.

Thomson also spent some time spreading his "Ax the Tax" campaign philosophy in Rochester and Somersworth.

Speaking in Berlin, Spanos addressed the tax issue as well. He stressed that he has always been against any form of sales or income tax in New Hampshire, but added that he would refuse to "bow down" and take some pledge forced on him by "Bill Loeb and the Manchester Union Leader."

Accompanying spanos on ins northern swing was former State Representative Hugh Gallen, who gave his personal endorsement to the Democratic candidate.

Also this week, the Union Leader began a six part series exposing the "lies" in Spanos' campaign statements. The series is composed by a state senatorial "truth squad.

Thus far the series has zeroed in on the armament of the National Guard issue and the claim by Spanos that the Thomson ad-ministration has seen a rise in the state's property taxes as well as the beer and tobacco tax.

Doug White, communications manager for the Spanos campaign said "We son't mind those pieces at all. We don't expect any truth from the Union Leader. Thomson is obviously the choice of the paper so it's tough to get anything in there that's bi-partisan. We don't think they'll hurt us."

simply to increase percentage of faculty participation." He called it a response to "the push for called its bargaining." collective bargaining."

Mills said, "The faculty have felt, correctly, that they have minority representation. I wanted to increase faculty representation without a cut-back of students.

"A lot of faculty feel that if the Senate is to deal with educational policy the faculty ought to be in á position where they are not now, to have more input than non-teaching members," said Mills

Thompson called this an "issue of balance," adding that "students say the same thing." he said the faculty wanted to keep the administration in its present capacity faculty member preferred to remain anonymous said, "It's important for administration to be there to know. what faculty and students are thinking."

Thompson said the issue is "still an open question.'

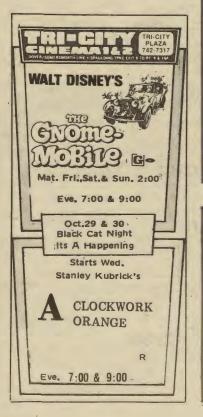

Terms of office are two years, with half the senators re-elected each year. Thompson said students undergo a "greater turnover" than do others because students tend to leave the University more often.

In the Senate there are six standing committees whose purpose is to decide on general policies in their respective areas. These are the Admissions, Educational Financial Policies, Aids, Judiciary, Student Welfare, and University Planning Commit-

The Executive Council which consists of representatives from students, faculty, administration and staff, makes policy recom-mendations to the Senate, coordinates the committees, and advises the president who serves as an ex-officio (non-voting) member.

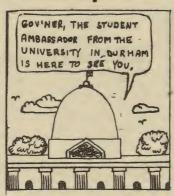

Resolutions from students are first made in the student caucus and then introduced to the Senate, said Thompson. "If they don't introduce it into the Senate nothing will happen to it," he Thompson said the administration has so far been cooperative with the Senate. are taken very seriously by the administration," he said. "There's been no clearcut confrontation between what the University wants and Senate policy. The University is part of the Senate."

will know he's in a football game," he said. "He's our big play man.

Lyons also said that New Ham-

Lyons also said that New Hampshire is "probably the best football team we'll play this year."
"We'll have to be at our very best," he said. "And we haven't been at our best yet this year."
The Huskies came out of last weeks game against Springfield virtually injury free. The same cannot be said for the Wildcats.

Missing this week will be run-

Missing this week will be running back Dave Loehle, who is out with a knee injury, flanker Paul Jarry, and offensive tackle John Merrill (ankle).

Still questionable are defensive tackle Bill Logue, fullback Archie Iodice and split end Lee Pope.
Running back Bill Burnham, who injured an ankle in last week's game against Central Connecticut, is not at full speed, but is expected to be ready.
Bowes said that either John Buckley or Tim Pendry will sub for Loehle at fullback, with George Moore taking over at flan ker.

Ron Lavita, who drew praise from the coach last week, will fill in for Merrill and go against Nor-

One other factor which heavily effects the UNH performance is that Northeastern's Parsons Field is covered with an artificial rug. The phony stuff has proved to be a definite hindrance to UNH teams in the past.

"We've never played well on artificial turf," Bowes said. "This is something we've been very concerned about. It took us a while to get adjusted to it last year at Boston University, and as a result, we didn't play that

The only Wildcat who responds favorably to the crap grass is Burnham, who rushed for over 200 yards both times he ran on the stuff last year against BU and Springfield.

Bowes said that the Cats will go through a "rather extensive workout" today on the NU field, in preparation for tomorrow's

YC football

This week's Yankee conference action has two contenders going against two non contenders.

In Amherst, Connecticut (0-6) takes on Massachusetts (4-1) In the past, this game has had a direct bearing on the YC title. This year though things are different. While UMass remains in contention, UConn has their hands full trying to win a game, never mind the conference.

In the other game, Boston University visits Rhode Island in search of their first conference win.

The Terriers are coming off a disappointing 31-11 loss to Holy

Rhode Island on the other hand is in the thick of things. If the Rams should lose, they'll by knocked out of contention. a win by Rhode Island means UNH has two tough games to end their Maine will be after their third win in a row then they host Lehigh this year. Under new coach Jack Bicknell, the Bears are surprising alot of people. Maine is ranked fourth in the Lambert Cup.

Lehigh should provide Maine with some tough competition though. The Engineers lost to Rutgers 28-21 last week. Rutgers is undefeated this year.

UNH by $6\frac{1}{2}$

Jeff Sagarin is expecting a close game Saturday. He's got the Wildcats by 61/2 over Northeastern.

YC soccer

UNH's Chip Smith was named Yankee Conference player of the week last week. Smith, co-captain of the soccer team, was a defensive standout in the Maine game.

Wrestling tryouts

Anyone interested in participating on the UNH wrestling team should report to the wrestling room in the Field House on Monday, Oct. 25 at four p.m. Interested candidates should be dressed and ready to go. Any questions call coach Irv Hess at the Field House.

WUNH

WUNH will broadcast tomorrow's game beginning at 12:55 p.m. Davidson Rubber Co. of Dover has given the radio station an educational grant to cover the costs of the broadcast.

"We played well against Keene State, but that was a super defensive effort. Today, we did it both ways", Young added.
"This is the best we've played all season, and it's a shame we didn't win it", Dave Teggart commented.

"We had the chances, and just missed," Craig Smith added.
The referees called the game at the end of regulation time "due to the bad field conditions". It was probably a wise move on their part, for tempers were short and anything could have happened.

"We wanted the overtime badly", Smith said. "We could have done it.'

It had been raining hard all day when the two teams began the game. After only a few minutes of chewing up the soggy turf with their cleats, players found themselves in a veritable marsh, especially the goalies.

UNH's Bruce Riedell and
Bridgeport's Erik Swallow (who would both be replaced before the game's end) came equipped with towels and tongue depressors to clean the mud out of their spikes.

They would need it.

Manuel Banal opened the scoring at 16:17 when his shot skidded in the mud in front of Riedell and caught the right post Riedell had lunged toward the ball, but with the poor footing he fell short and Bridgeport had a 1-0 lead.

UNH fought back hard, and kept up a solid short passing attack to force the pressure on the Knights. At 41:45, it paid off as Dave Teggart blasted one home over a

The half ended 1-1, but Bridgeport had received the worst of the beating. Goalie Erik Swallow was kicked in the stomach by a sliding Kevin Dewhurst midway through the half and had to be replaced by Steve Radespiel.

Another Bridgeport player suffered a sprained ankle when he was kicked in a scramble in front of the Wildcat net.

The Bridgeport coach also complained of losing two other valuable men prior to this game, a star fullback and the team cap-

Bob Black and Bridgeport's Tom Dolan were given warnings for "tap dancing", and Cat fullback Jack Edwards received a yellow card for unsportsmanlike conduct when he hollered at the referee for missing an offsides call.

his fourth goal of the year at 7:55 to give the Cats a 2-1 lead. He took a pass from Paul Koch to the right of goalie Radspiel, and drilled it home.

Bridgeport applied some offen-sive pressure but the Cat defense turned them back time and time again. Gordon Tuttle had replaced Riedell at the half, and sloshed his way to a couple of good saves on potential scoring

Paul Koch and Dolan were both ejected when they battled mid-way through the half. Koch said he was kicked, and Dolan claimed he didn't do anything, but both were kicked out.

The entire UNH team was given a warning when they wouldn't leave a ball alone so Bridgeport could get off a direct kick. The call was delay of game.

Bridgeport's pressure paid off, as the Cats may have been guilty of sitting back and waiting for time to run out. Grant bounced home the equalizer at 37:29, out of a scramble in front of Tuttle.

Ed McGrath Admitting NU would

aid YC competition

Northeastern University has applied for admittance into the Yankee Conference but they have yet to be given an invitation to join.

That's *too bad because Northeastern is competitive with the YC

Take football; the Huskies have compiled a 10-18 record against the YC in the last ten years. Northeastern is 1-8 against UNH in this category, and 9-10 against the other YC teams.

Northeastern has played two of their four games with YC schools to date. They lost to Rhode Island, 15-14 and Boston University, 23-20.

Hardly blowouts by any sense of the word.

Northeastern also plays YC schools in various other sports and fares well. Their track teams are among the best in the east.

Even though there is no more YC in basketball, NU plays the YC schools and does all right.

But let's stick with football, since it is that season.

Two years ago Vermont dropped football as an economy measure. Rumors flew about that the YC was going to disband. Some of the teams wanted to leave the YC and strive for higher aspirations.

The talk of disbanding the YC has died down since UNH had that spectacular season last year. But one thing that has been forgotten is the reduced number of games played within the YC.

Allowing Northeastern into the YC would alleviate this situation. Having only five games within the conference takes something away from the race. A sixth game would mean one more conference game on the schedule and possibly a tighter race.

Some people will disagree with me, arguing that Northeastern isn't really that competitive at all. They'll bring out last year's 56-7 loss to UNH as a point supporting their argument.

But looking back over recent years not all of the scores have been Allowing Northeastern into the YC would strengthen their program. They might be able to get some better football players to their school. It couldn't hurt the present school's program that much. The reasons for keeping Northeastern out of the YC are unknown.

If they have been made public they haven't been publicized. The member schools of the YC should admit Northeastern next

For as NU president Kenneth Ryder said this summer, Northeastern is on par with the Yankee Conference.

The ins and outs of UNH sports

Hello spring fever fans, only six short months until next baseball season, which means a little bit more of the cold and wet is on the way.

But until then, it appears that the UNH football team is again heading to a final game showdown with UMass for the Yankee Con-

If the Wildcats can get by the Rams of Rhode Island in two weeks at Cowell Stadium, the title game will be played November 13 in Amherst, Mass.

A UNH victory there will give them a tie for the title with the Minutemen. A UMass victory, and the crown belongs to them

Now, the sporting enthusiast contends that a tie for anything is like "kissing your sister," but half a title is better than no title at all .. right?

Meanwhile, coach Charlie Holt has his skaters active in preparation for the season's opener, an exhibition game with the Warriors of Merrimack on November 6, at Snively Arena.

At this point it appears that returning Olympian Bobby Miller will skate the first line flanked by Dave Lumley and Barry Edgar. On the defensive first line will be Tim Burke and Paul Powers.

Last year's freshman line of Frank Roy, Rob Gould and Ralph Cox is still intact, with Jon Fontas, Gary Burns and Bruce Crowder destined for a lot of ice time.

Dan Magnarelli, the incumbent has the goaltending position ocked up, but junior Mark Evans and sophomore Ken Lorance are battling it out for the back-up spot.

In case you didn't notice, the Wildcat baseball team staged a Blue-White doubleheader scrimmage last week in a chilly Brackett Field. UNH took both ends of the twin bill.

Luckily for the Wildcat footballers, depth is one of this year's strong points. Two or three starters are doubtful for tomorrow's game due to injuries sustained in last week's game at Central Connecticut. With adequate replacements, the Wildcats don't appear to be unusually affected. While on that subject, Northeastern coach "Bo" Lyons was heard to say that he wished he had some of UNH's second stringers playing for his first unit. "In my opinion," he said, "UNH overall has the best team in the Yankee Conference. Other teams may have better players at certain positions, but overall, the New Hampshire depth is impressive. The performance of Phil Pleat in the recently concluded ECACgolf tournament must be applauded. Other area schools have fielded superior golf teams over the years and for the Wildcats to come up with one blue chip (or blue pitch whichever club suits you) is quite a an accomplishment And in conclusion, how about a much deserved round of applause for the UNH women's tennis team who travelled undefeated nine straight matches this year before succumbing to those Ivies of Radcliffe. That's not a bad record for a team whose top two players are a freshman and a sophomore. Anyone for an afternoon of ice fishing?

AIA to play UNH in basketball

By Andy Schachat
Though the UNH basketball team plays seven regular season games against teams that were in post season tournaments last year, the Wildcats may find that their toughest game may be the one that won't count on the final

UNH will host Athletes in Action on November 2 at eight p.m. This team was the 1976 National AAU champions.

Athletes in Action is the athletic ministry of Campus Crusade for Christ International. It fields two basketball teams comprised of top former college players, as well as teams in numerous other sports.

The team is touring New England for five games. They will play Providence, Holy Cross, Springfield and Boston University as well as UNH.

The AIA team will also play nationally ranked teams such as Maryland, Marquette, Louisana State, Minnesota and North Carolina.

Last year's AIA USA squad compiled a 37-8 record while on its way to the AAU title.

Of all the former college stars playing for AIA, perhaps the most well known is former UCLA star Ralph Drollinger.

Drollinger, 7'2", graduated last June. He was the back up center for the Bruins and a teammate of All-American Bill Walton. During Drollinger's four years with the Bruins, UCLA was crowned NCAA national champions twice.

AIA has five players who stand 6'8" or taller. Among them are forwards Tim Hall from Colorado and Irv Kiffin of Oklahoma.

Hall was the leading scorer on last year's team averaging 15.9

points per game. At the guard position, AIA has Eldon Lawyer of Oral Roberts and 5'10" Brad Hoffman from North Carolina. This will be no easy task for the Wildcats and head coach Gerry Friel knows it.

"This is an opportunity for our players to play against the best," Friel said. "Most people think we are biting off more than we can chew, but if we are to have a suc-

"If we play well against a team like this, it would be a boost for our program and a great opportunity to promote and publicize UNH basketball."

"We want to give the students an additional program to be proud of," Friel explained, "We'll play to win while hoping to get something out of the game for everybody."

Chiefs outspike Wildcats

By Gerry Miles The agony of defeat.

It always manages to find a victim. On Wednesday the victim was the UNH volleyball team at the expense of Springfield

College 15-1, and 15-10.

Springfield, the perenial powerhouse of the East, was not all that powerful, but still managed to come out on top.

"This was the year to beat them", said coach Laurel Milos, "but our serve reception had some rough edges which prevented us from mounting a sure attack, and we weren't too sure of where our serves were going to.

The first game bore out this fact as the Chiefs tamed the Wildcats 15-1.
The next game saw a drastic turn-around as the Wildcats were even with Springfield and tied the match at 10-10 at one point

Springfield then came back to win the next five points in a row but they had to work for them as the Cats battled for every point.

"Springfield earned the last five points. We didn't lie down and give up", said Milos, "we could have used another game (meaning the best 3 out of 5 instead of 2 out of 3), we were just steat of 2 out of 3), we were just getting warmed up.

Milos also pointed out that the blocking picked up and Nadine Hamel and Jean Marie Giarusso had quite a few blocks. Freshman Pat Casey also was a big contributor in the outcome of the second game.

The JV's also went down in defeat 15-8 and 15-8. Both times the score had been tied at 8-8 but they just couldn't sustain a drive. However, there were many bright spots in their play.

Helping Milos is Marnie Nimick, the assistant coach. Milos pointed out that with Nimick's efforts and all the time that she's put in with the JV's, the squad is closer in skill level to the varsity than last year.

"Judy Luber was a standout part of the JV offense with overpowering serves and constant spikes added Milos.

Stickwomen edge Chiefs; Tennis loses

First defeat in two years

By Paul Keegan The UNH women's tennis team brought their unblemished 9-0 season record to Radcliffe yesterday but returned in defeat for the first time in two years.

The Wildcats, who compiled a 17-0 mark during that span, soundly thrashed Colby College on

First singles player Nancy

By Paul Keegan Springfield College, the perrenial powerhouse and num-ber one field hockey team in the East fell from their pedestal and came crashing to defeat yester-day as UNH stunned the Chiefs 1-

Indeed it was, as the Wildcats showed their muscle against this team that, according to Rilling, had only lost once in the last five years before yesterday's game. What makes the shutout even more remarkable is the fact that the Wildcats were able to stop Springfield's potent scoring machine that includes three players that are on the U.S.

National Team.
Rilling attributes this to the brilliant play of freshman defen-sewoman Laura O'Donnell, playing in her first varsity game. "Our strategy was to shut off

"Our strategy was to shut off their main scoring threats, and it worked very well", she said. "Laura just did a fantastic job stopping one of their top players, Denise Desautiles."

"They have some real good people," said UNH coach Bill Bowes. "They're big and strong and they hit hard. They just haven't put it all together yet."
Offensively, the Huskies follow the lead of quarterback Clark Crowley. Crowley can run as well as throw, and doesn't hesitate to do either.

Crowley's backfield consists of fullback Russ McDonald with Preston Carroll and Kevin Foley at halfback.

When Crowley decides to pass, he'll look to tight end Mike Budrow, considered by Bowes as "the best we'll face this year, receiving as well as blocking."

Budrow was the leading Huskie receiver last year with 24 catches for 346 yards. The split end is Dan Ross who caught 14 passes last

"They can be explosive on of-fense," Bowes said. "Crowley is the best scrambler we'll see. He sprints out a lot and would just as soon keep the ball as throw it."
