Introduction

The South Dakota Periodicals Index is a subject and author index to selected periodicals and annuals published in South Dakota. Its purpose is to facilitate the location of information about the people, places, events, and issues that make South Dakota a special place. As reference librarians at South Dakota State University we are aware of the difficulty of finding specific information about South Dakota. National periodical indexes provide very limited coverage of South Dakota, and it is not unusual to search through many different indexes without finding a single reference to the state.

In 1984 we completed A Survey of South Dakota Periodicals (Bethesda, MD: ERIC Document Reproduction Service, ED 245 710), and we realized that much valuable information about the state is available in these publications. However, we also realized that access to that information is limited. Most of these fine publications are not indexed in the national indexes. This is especially true for publications that are intended for those outside the scholarly community. Because of the small circulation and limited promotional budgets of many of these publications, most people are not aware of their existence or of their usefulness. Therefore important information pertaining to local and state topics may be found only by those individuals who regularly read these publications. Others are left with serendipitous discovery methods.

This index was conceived as the best way to facilitate use of the information in South Dakota publications. We believe the creation of an index covering several of these publications brings together a substantial source of useful information about South Dakota. The index should provide access to these publications even though users may not have prior knowledge of them. By using this index, people across the state, and elsewhere, can identify useful information even though the publications may not be owned by libraries in their area. Regular interlibrary loan procedures through local libraries may be used to obtain copies of relevant articles.

The South Dakota Periodicals Index is not intended to be a comprehensive source of all articles about South Dakota in periodicals or annual publications. It does not index publications which are published outside the state. It also does not index all publications which are published in the state. Staffing and budgetary realities necessitated that we included only a selected list of South Dakota publications which we believed would provide the most useful information to the greatest number of people.

Although scholarly articles are included, we view the target audience of the index to consist mainly of citizens of South Dakota and other persons interested in the state. Topics covered by the index are highly eclectic because of the diversity of the publications indexed. Basically, we have tried to include publications which illuminate the rich history, culture, and artistry of the state along with its social, economic, and environmental diversity. Some short fiction, poetry, and photographic essays also are indexed. All types of South Dakotans are represented by the listed articles, including: farmers, politicians, city folks, Native Americans, ethnic minorities, teachers, fishermen, and many others.

This retrospective index covers material published from 1982 through 1986. We are committed to continuing the index with regular supplements in the future. Tentatively we plan to issue annual supplements with multi-year cumulations.

Production and publication of this index would not have been possible without the help and support of many people. We must acknowledge at least a few of these individuals:

Todd Erickson—Student Programmer.

Todd did an excellent job of translating our many demands into computer language and forcing the computer to deliver an acceptable product.

Elizabeth Tucker—Student Assistant.

Liz typed virtually every word in this index with remarkable accuracy and speed at a computer terminal in the library.

Leon Raney—Dean of Libraries, SDSU.

Dr. Raney's continuing encouragement and support made this project possible.

Again, we have tried to produce an index which will make it easier to locate information about South Dakota. We also wanted to highlight some of the fine publications and authors in South Dakota. We believe this index takes a step toward those goals.

Indexing Policies

All publications are fully indexed, i.e., all substantive articles are indexed; except for South Dakota Law Review which was selectively indexed. Selective indexing of the South Dakota Law Review excludes material which deals with global legal issues, i.e., that which is not specifically related to South Dakota. Substantive articles do not include brief announcements of events or other articles of only a few sentences. Generally, substantive articles also do not include organization/membership news, letters to the editor, etc. A few articles are indexed although they do not pertain to South Dakota because they appear in publications which we index fully and they are substantive.

Generally, each indexed article is listed under as many as five subject headings and under as many as five author's names. In all cases, an attempt is made to adequately describe the contents of each article, and more subject headings are assigned if needed. Several articles were assigned more than five subject headings, and many were assigned less than five. Subject headings are not based on title keywords although some title words may have been assigned as headings. Sears list of Subject Headings, 13th edition, served as a guide for subject heading assignment. However, due to the nature of the index, no single published subject headings list was sufficient. Therefore the Library of Congress Subject Headings, 10th edition, was also consulted; and often it was necessary to create our own headings. A subject authority file of more than 1500 headings, including numerous cross references, was developed as the indexing progressed.

The following is a list of some specific indexing guidelines which were used in this indexing project:

Articles about specific individuals, or which give significant biographical information about specific individuals, are listed under the individual(s) names with birth and death dates included when possible, e.g., COOLIDGE, CALVIN (1872-1933).

Articles about specific places, e.g., cities, towns, counties, parks, historic sites, etc., are listed under their specific names. They may also be listed under a generic term, e.g., PARKS.

Book reviews are included only for books about South Dakota topics. They are listed under BOOK REVIEWS only, not under the subjects of the books or under the authors. Other information about books pertaining to South Dakota can be found under BOOK NOTES which lists short descriptive annotations, not critical reviews. Again these descriptive book notes are not listed under the specific subjects of the books or under their authors.

Articles about lakes are listed under LAKE as the first word. For example, Lewis and Clark Lake is indexed under LAKE LEWIS AND CLARK.

Fiction, short stories, and poetry are included in the index, but this material usually is not indexed by topic. Instead it is listed under the generic term(s), e.g., CHILDREN'S STORIES, SHORT STORIES, POEMS, etc. It is also listed in the author index under the authors' names.

Articles referring to the winners of awards and prizes are listed under the heading, AWARDS AND PRIZES. They are not listed under the names of the individuals unless significant biographical information about the individuals is given.

Articles about American Indians are listed under NATIVE AMERICANS followed by subheadings, e.g., NATIVE AMERICANS—HEALTH AND MEDICINE, or under more specific headings, e.g., personal names, tribal names, reservation names, etc.

Users' Guide

The South Dakota Periodicals Index consists of two main parts: a subject index, and an author index.

I. The Subject Index The subject index

Articles about specific topics are found listed under subject headings which describe that topic, e.g., RAILROADS, WALLEYES, GHOST TOWNS. Place names and personal names may also be used as subject headings if articles have been written about a specific place, e.g., RAPID CITY, S.D. or person, e.g., PYLE, GLADYS (1890-1986).

Following each subject heading will be a list of citations to articles about that subject and/or a cross reference to other subject headings. Each citation includes all the information necessary to locate each article. A sample entry follows:

GOVERNORS—S.D. Subject heading

MILLER, J.E. OUR COWBOY GOVERNOR. SDMAG V 2, NO 4, P 6-11, NOV 1986.

“SEE” references guide you from a subject heading under which no information is given to a different subject heading under which the desired information will be found. For example, when looking up information about sod houses you are referred to the proper subject heading by the cross reference:

SOD HOUSES SEE HOUSES—SOD.

“SEE ALSO” references alert you to the fact that although information is found under a particular subject heading, additional related information may be found under other headings. For example:

BANKRUPTCY SEE ALSO FARM FORECLOSURES.

II. The Author Index The author index

The author index follows the subject index. Using the author index allows you to look up the name of an author and find a list of their articles.
