Foreward

South Dakota Agricultural Experiment Station and Extension Service publications have been issued continuously since 1887. These various series contain a wealth of information related to the agricultural sciences in South Dakota. Included are research reports, explanations of research in process, and analyses of current agricultural and economic trends of specific interest to the State.

Though researchers, business analysts, faculty members, students and librarians frequently have need to refer to this information, no attempt was made to systematically index the materials for many years. The Reference Department of South Dakota State University Library, aware of the need for better access to these publications, initiated an indexing project in the early 1970s. This first effort, under the direction of B.J. Kim, resulted in a keyword-out-of-context index which was first published in 1975. It covered monographic series issued by the Experiment Station and Extension Service through December, 1974.

Although the 1975 Keyword Index provided subject access only and lacked bibliographic detail, it has served well its intended purpose—to encourage the use of South Dakota Agricultural Experiment Station and Extension Service publications. Through its use researchers and students in the agricultural sciences have gained quick access to a wide variety of information related to South Dakota agriculture. By using the Keyword Index, agri-business analysts have benefited increasingly from the economic information contained in these publications. Sociologists and historians also have found a rich source of information on the agricultural history of South Dakota. And, finally, librarians find the index useful in providing information concerning the contents of the Agricultural Experiment Station and Extension Service publications.

This revised edition, which will be known as the South Dakota Agricultural Experiment Station and Extension Service Publications Index, actually supersedes and replaces the original Keyword Index published in 1975. Here the user will find all references to publications issued through December, 1985. In addition, an author index has been added as well as a complete list of publications in the various series.

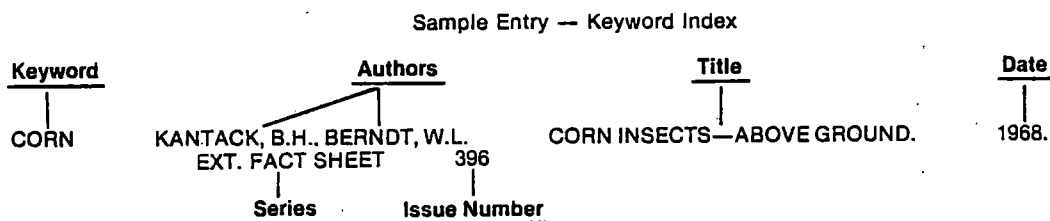

Throughout the ten years of this project, B.J. Kim, now Head Catalog Librarian at the South Dakota State University Library, has worked with the SDSU Computing Center to refine and improve the Index. Together they have produced an excellent reference work for anyone interested in South Dakota agriculture. All who use this information—researchers, students, librarians—are in their debt.

Guide to Using Subject Index

For the most part, subject headings appearing in this Index were taken directly from keywords found within publication titles themselves. However, for clarity and consistency, two or more synonymous keywords are sometimes brought together under a single generic term. Nearly 700 subject headings or keywords appear in the Index.

Arranged alphabetically, keywords are listed in the left-hand column. Titles of specific publications in which the keyword appears are then listed. Appearing first are those titles for which no author is given. These are followed by the main alphabetical listing under known authors. In either case, title entries are followed by the date of issue and an abbreviation indicating the series and number of each publication.

Cross References

“SEE” references guide one from a subject heading under which no information is given to another subject heading under which the desired information will be found. For example, for information concerning pollution, one is referred from “pollution” to “environment” by the cross reference: POLLUTION SEE ENVIRONMENT.

A “SEE ALSO” reference guides one from a subject heading under which information may be located to another heading where additional material will be found. For example, if one wished material on lawns, he will find a listing under the heading: LAWN. Additional sources are indicated, however, by the cross reference: LAWN SEE ALSO GRASSES.

Abbreviations

Within the Index, all Agricultural Experiment Station publications are preceded by the abbreviation: EXP. Likewise, Extension Service publications are indicated by the abbreviation: EXT. These designations are followed by an abbreviation which refers to a specific series.
