

A SMALL WORLD

Fast side, west side, all around the...world. Syracuse University today is an institution with a significant international perspective: in its courses, its programs of study, and the diversity of its students.

And yes, even in the tours it makes available to alumni and friends. Name the spot you want to visit and sooner or later SU will offer a trip there. Says Tina Casella '94, associate director of alumni relations, "We select our destinations with an eye to what's proven popular in the past and what's unique in the world of travel."

For instance, cruises to destinations ranging from the Mediterranean to the Antebellum South are frequent options. When China opened its borders to travelers, the University was there. And in 1995, SU offered a 17-day voyage to the North Pole aboard a nuclear-powered icebreaker forcing its way through the polar ice cap (not too many takers for that one).

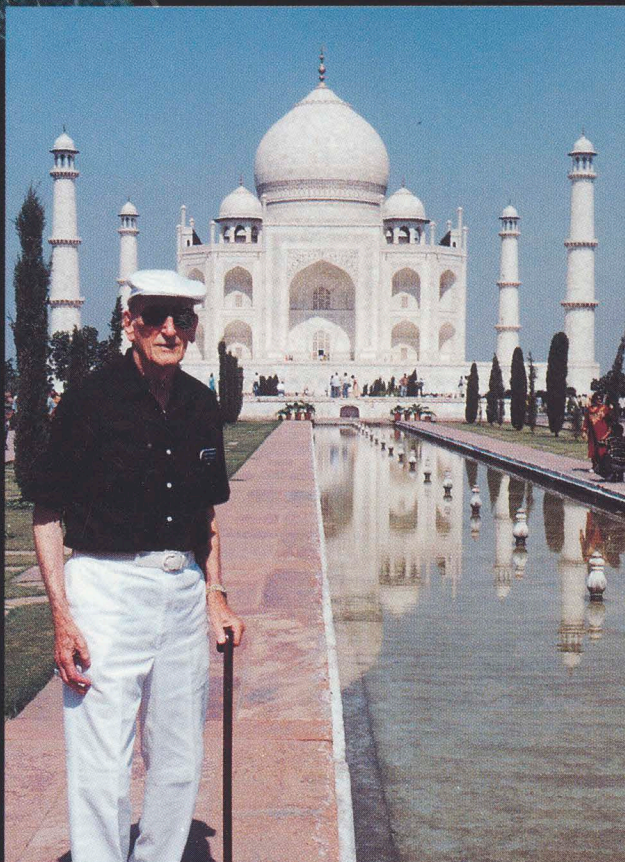

One characteristic all tours share is excellence. From transportation to escorts to accommodations, SU travelers can count on a first-class experience under the SU flag.

The Ultimate Trip: Around the World

Eighty-four-year-old Jerry Prigoff '35, G'40 was sorely tempted to try bungee jumping from Skipper's Bungee Bridge in Queenstown, New Zealand, but reluctantly decided against it. Instead, he boarded a helicopter for a breathtaking trip over the scenic volcanic mountains.

While Prigoff may have been the oldest person on the 24-day trip around the world via supersonic Concorde, the Fayetteville, New York, native didn't skip a thing. On his 1995 trip, Prigoff strolled along the Great Wall of China, spent an elegant black-tie evening at the famous Sydney Opera House in Australia, and peeked at a pride of lions in Kenya.

"Perhaps because I taught ancient history, I've always had the desire to see faraway places," Prigoff says. His travels began years ago and intensified after he retired from teaching at the old Fayetteville High School. He and his wife traveled the United States, later branching out to traverse 25 countries together. She passed away three years ago but Prigoff continues touring.

"In the past few years, I've found more and more people traveling alone, so it's never a problem," Prigoff says. "Our planeload of 96 became family in a very short time."

Prigoff calls his three-day stay in the Masai Mara Game Preserve in Kenya his favorite memory. From a hot-air balloon floating near the treetops, he spied a herd of 1,000 zebras and watched hippos frolicking in a Masai River tributary.

His advice to other would-be around-the-world travelers? "Go now. There will never be a better time."

At SU's Alumni College in the Swiss Alps

Newly retired Dr. Walter Zukof '50 just can't get enough education. "I never stop trying to learn," he says. "My wife, Helene, and I had never been to Switzerland, and when the Syracuse brochure arrived about Alumni College in the Alps, we knew it combined all the things we like."

The couple, from Louisville, Kentucky, loved the experience. "Switzerland has always intrigued me," Zukof says. "How did they develop the idea of neutrality? I found out that percentage-wise they are the most armed people in the world. Every citizen serves in the military and they take their guns home. The Swiss have peace with strength."

The Zukofs and other SU travelers were headquartered in Meiringen, a charming rural village in the lush Hasli Valley, about an hour's drive from Lucerne.

"Our mornings were spent in informal seminars about whatever area we were visiting that day," Zukof says. "A knowledgeable guide would tell us about the Swiss government, economy, geography, and history. The subject was our host country."

From their first-class hotel, the group took alpine meadow walks in the mountains, visited museums, saw a glacier, and rode on the Brienz Rothorn Cogwheel train. Travelers had plenty of free time to wander on their own and shop.

"We decided on an SU trip because we wanted to be with people of similar interests and education," he continues. "That's just what we experienced. We had a wonderful time in a very beautiful country and learned quite a bit at the same time."

Adventures in Scandinavia

It seems Anne Conover Merrell of Lowville, New York, had always longed to see Scandinavia—her grandmother, after all, was Swedish—but the time never seemed quite right.

"I finally realized that you never know when the opportunity will come around again, and if I were ever going to go, I should do it now," says the 1952 graduate. She invited her daughter, Martha Benedict of Elmira, New York, to accompany her on the 16-day land and sea tour of Finland, Denmark, Norway, and Sweden.

"Copenhagen is beyond belief; you never want to leave," Merrell says. "It retains a great deal of its old world charm, with canals throughout the city."

Next the group sailed to Oslo through the North Sea past the stunning fjords, including the 60-mile-long Oslofjord. After Oslo they traveled by motorcoach through the spectacular scenery for which Scandinavia is known: thundering white waterfalls, groves of birch trees, fields of flowers, and craggy mountains.

Stockholm, often referred to as the Venice of the North, is built on 14 islands, surrounded by inlets, bays, and canals. "It's very colorful, in contrast to a city like Helsinki, which is quite modern and functional," Merrell says.

She is a paralegal with Merrell & Merrell, a firm in which her late husband, Edgar II G'52, was a principal. Now she works with her two sons, Edgar III G'78 and Charles G'84, who attended SU's College of Law in their father's footsteps.

"The trip was wonderful," Merrell says. "It's the first time my daughter and I have ever taken a trip alone together and she mothered me. We enjoyed the alumni from other universities and it was all very friendly. It's a wonderful way to travel."

In the Wake of Lewis & Clark

It was a book that first got Amelia Mele Greiner '39 of Syracuse interested. "I read Undaunted Courage, a best-seller about Lewis and Clark's historic journey, and decided I wanted to see it myself," Greiner says.

Greiner retired from a successful career in real estate some years ago, but recently was persuaded to act as interim director of Aurora, a nonprofit group offering services to people with disabilities. She persuaded her housemate, Ruth Wharton DeHerrera '39, a retired controller of United Way, to accompany her on the trip.

Their cruise started in Portland, Oregon, on the 70-passenger Sea Lion, and traveled more than 450 miles upstream to the mouth of the Columbia River. The alumni travelers were shepherded by historians and naturalists rather than conventional tour guides. "I was impressed with those experts," Greiner says. "They made us feel their enthusiasm and led us on fascinating side trips."

Along the way they saw some of the most spectacular scenery in the United States. The Columbia and Snake rivers cut through a geologically rich area featuring waterfalls streaming from high basaltic cliffs, and forested valleys that change suddenly to harsh desert canyons. Often tour members zipped ashore in small motorized landing crafts.

They also passed through eight locks, each of them 100 feet deep. "I was awed thinking about Lewis and Clark making this journey by canoe and portage," Greiner says.

A decided plus was the small size of their ship, according to DeHerrera. "Enough people were on board to be interesting but not overwhelming," she says. "There was only one gathering room and one seating for dinner, so you got to know everyone."

Greiner also relished an open train ride through the orchards at the base of Mount Hood. "We stopped at a local grange where people served us coffee and homemade pie. That's a special memory," she says.

Ski Switzerland

When Tamara Farmer's 13th birthday was coming up, her parents, Tara and Robert Farmer '66 of Canandaigua, New York, tried to think of a special gift. "A trip," they decided. "Let her choose some nice resort for next summer and we'll all go." To their astonishment, their daughter declared, "Switzerland!"

The very next day, the SU brochure advertising eight

Amelia Mele Greiner '39 (left) and Carolyn Harvey MacAllister '39 of Jamesville, New York, rested in the area where Lewis and Clark spent a long, cold winter.

As part of their Ski Switzerland holiday, Robert Farmer '66 and daughter Tamara went off on a ski jaunt to Wengen-Jungfrau on a day of brilliant sunshine.

days at Interlaken arrived. "We have a strong family background in skiing," Tara explains. "Our oldest son is a professional ski racer and we all spend many weekends on the slopes. We knew we were destined for this trip."

Once the Farmers arrived, they found everything to their liking. The ideal February weather featured sunshine and good snow. Tamara and her father were on the slopes almost every day. Tara, who no longer skis downhill because of a back condition, did some cross-country skiing and spent the rest of her time shopping and sightseeing. "I was never bored," she says. "I would arrange to meet Robert and Tamara for lunch and then sit at an outdoor cafe enjoying the sun until they skied down to join me."

Tara says her family has always enjoyed family vacations. "Traveling with a teenager is wonderful because young people are so open to new experiences. Tamara soaked in everything."

The family also discovered the advantages of being part of a group. "At night we'd sit around the hotel and talk about what we'd done during the day and then would reminisce about old times at Syracuse," she says. "We also had fun with alumni groups from other colleges who were there."

Robert, who is president of R.W. Farmer, a manufacturer's representative for industrial and commercial HVAC equipment, fell in love with the Alps. "The mountains surpassed all our expectations."

Aboard the Eastern and Oriental Express, and Through the Panama Canal

So, where would you choose to celebrate your 40th anniversary?

Deborah and Warren Grossman '50 of New York City decided Singapore might be nice.

In 1994 they joined other SU alumni who flew to Bangkok, traveled the Golden Triangle, then boarded the Eastern and Oriental Express for a romantic trip through Malaysia to Singapore, and ended their tour in Hong Kong.

"We spent two nights on the train in ultra luxury," Grossman says. "The compartments had double berths or beds. Train attendants came in to serve tea, all beautifully done in the Eastern tradition. The bar car was magnificent."

He declares the train ride to Singapore memorable. "I'm old enough to remember World War II, when we thought Singapore, with its guns facing out to sea, was invulnerable. Then the Japanese came down the Malaysian Peninsula on bikes and took the city from the rear. It was fascinating to relive history geographically," Grossman says.

For their anniversary dinner, the Grossmans chose Raffle's, a hotel dating back to colonial times. "Raffle's was built when rubber plantations flourished in Malaysia, although now it's surrounded by high-rise buildings," Grossman explains. "But it's recently been restored and when you sit in the dining room of this incredible hotel, you're back in the 1800s."

The SU travel experience was such fun that two years later the couple joined other alumni travelers on a Trans-Panama Canal cruise. "We started in Puerto Rico and island hopped down to South America," Grossman says. "Then we went through the canal, ending up in Acapulco."

Again Grossman found himself mesmerized by the historic subtext of the trip, recalling that the canal took 10 years and $525 million to build. "The Panama Canal played a vital role in our country's history," he says. "We particularly liked seeing the locks and how they work from the inside."

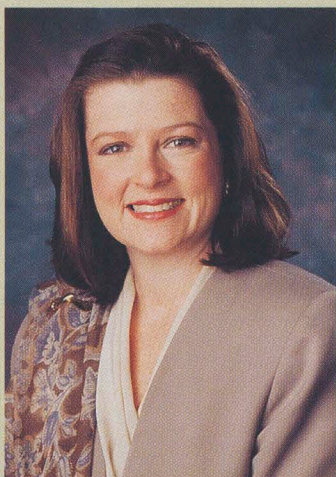

The Grossmans proclaim themselves delighted with the University's trips. "Wherever we go, we find first-class arrangements. When we get the brochures, there's not always a trip that appeals to us at a time we can get away. But when one comes that really interests us, we don't even have to think about whether it's going to be done well. It is."

Warren '50 and Deborah Grossman (center and right) and another traveler became intrepid elephant jockeys to get around in Chiang Mai, located in northwest Thailand's Golden Triangle.

EXPLORING SU'S WORLDWIDE CONNECTIONS

by Sherri Givens Holland
Executive Director, Office of Alumni Relations

Dear Alumni and Friends,

In this issue we invite you to share our international vision. Sitting on the Hill in Syracuse, it's easy to forget our University's global presence. Once I step out of my office and see the diversity of our students and faculty, I am quickly reminded that our ties stretch around the globe.

International alumni clubs and the work they do for SU in Japan, Europe, and other places are critical. The role of international students in the Syracuse University Student Alumni Association (SUSA) and other organizations is a vital link to our future. Our alumni tour program offers you the opportunity to explore the diverse and fascinating areas of the world where SU already has a presence, and others where we may establish ties one day.

Tales shared by our past travelers illustrate the fun, education, and global awareness created when members of the SU family explore the world together. To have the SU flag flying from a pole on a ship cruising the Rhine and Moselle rivers gives the University tremendous visibility and says to local people, some of whom may well be our alumni and friends, "We are here to learn about life in your country."

I invite you to join us in exploring the areas of the world SU reaches with fellow alumni and friends. Review our 1997 travel offerings on the last two pages of Orange Peel and pack your bags. I assure you it will be an experience you will treasure.

Warmest regards,

Sherri Givens Holland

ALUMNI HIGHLIGHTS

LINDA D. EPSTEIN '89

At the October Syracuse University Sports Night in Washington, D.C., Joe Lampe '53 (right), chair of the Student Athlete Fund, presented a plaque to men's head basketball coach Jim Boeheim '66, G'73, commemorating his 34 years of involvement in SU athletics and the establishment of the James A. Boeheim Endowed Basketball Scholarship.

Alumni Club Awards

During Homecoming, awards were presented to alumni clubs and their members for outstanding work during the year.

The Outstanding Alumni Club Award went to Philadelphia, whose membership grew by 51 percent for the third consecutive year. The club published a professional directory that enables members to network, and continually surveys its membership to schedule a variety of events that appeal to diverse interests.

The Outstanding Alumni Club Program Award went to the Central New Jersey club, for its September '95 SU-Rutgers football game event. The program was supported by 13 clubs and involved a pre-game buffet for more than 300 people and game tickets for 632 alumni and friends. The event generated more than $2,000 for a scholarship fund.

The Outstanding Alumni Club Officer Award went to Bernard Porray '68 of Rochester, New York, who created the club's new membership database of more than 6,000 alumni, obtained a satellite bulk permit that cut mailing costs, and produced several high-quality newsletters and mailings on his computer.

Fore! Start visiting the practice range now. The ninth annual Florida Golf Scramble will be held Monday, March 17, at the beautiful Wycliffe Golf and Country Club in Lake Fort Worth. Lunch is followed by a shotgun tee-off at 1 p.m. After the tournament, prizes will be awarded during a cocktail party featuring hearty hors d'oeuvres. The entry fee includes lunch, greens fee, cart, and the cocktail party. For more information, you can call 1-800-SUALUMS (1-800-782-5867).

Homecoming Winners

During Homecoming '96, first prize in the annual Chili Cook-Off went to B.J. and Sherry Hayes for "B.J.'s Jerky Chili." Second place went to Professor Brad Beran and students Brad Jacobson, Tim MacTurk, Jon Thering, and Rob Levinsohn for "Orange McMad," while Ann Marziale and Shawn Adam took third place with "Ann and Shawn's Bean Counters' Chili."

Reunion '97: Save the dates June 6 to 8 for a festive weekend, honoring classes ending in 2 and 7. We welcome volunteers for class committees; if you are planning to attend and can lend a hand, contact Elaine Cardone at 1-800-SU-ALUMS.

CLUB NEWS

CLUB NEWS

Syracuse University has alumni clubs throughout the country as well as abroad. They offer alumni an excellent opportunity to get together for social occasions, develop valuable business contacts, and keep up with developments on campus. For details on any event, call the club contact person listed on the pages following this schedule. If there is no alumni club in your area and you are interested in starting one, contact Meg A. Goldberg in the Office of Alumni Relations.

PUERTO RICO

Although it is only two years old, the Puerto Rico alumni club has managed to attract alumni from all over the island to a variety of events. Membership numbers more than 70.

"Our first event drew 150 alumni and their spouses," says Jorge Rodriguez '89, club president. "We had a social evening that was very popular."

For its next affair, the club cosponsored the visit of the SU and Princeton crew teams to compete against the Puerto Rican national team. Alumni met the team members at a reception.

"Our goal is to hold three events a year," Rodriguez says. "We try to mix social, educational, and sports events. So far we've been very successful."

Just before the fall semester began, the club hosted a New Student Send-Off that attracted 11 students and their families as well as alumni. "We believe in giving students a good start at Syracuse and letting them know we're here when they graduate."

Although the Japanese Alumni Club is starting modestly with 188 members, club president Akira Ohtomo '51 estimates between 500 and 600 alumni live in the country. "If we can locate students from summer language courses, alumni could number more than 1,000," Ohtomo says.

Currently the group is based in Tokyo, but Ohtomo hopes to have meetings in other major cities. Club members are also discussing holding joint meetings with alumni in Korea by alternating locations. "This is an excellent idea and could be expanded to other Asian countries," he says.

Ohtomo explains that in the past, a number of small groups existed with very little contact. "Since 1970, I have worked in my spare time to organize one association." He says the visit of Chancellor Melvin A. Eggers and the football team to the Tokyo Bowl in 1989 provided a real impetus to establish the group.

Current plans call for two major events a year. Members are already planning a general meeting and reception for Chancellor Kenneth A. Shaw in May 1997. Working with Ohtomo are board members Hiroyuki Inagawa G'60 and Keiske Yawata G'63.

"The world today is borderless," Ohtomo says. "Most Japanese alumni found their experience at Syracuse very valuable in promoting mutual understanding between our countries. In talking to more than 100 alumni, I discovered an overwhelming number wanted to maintain contact with the University and be involved in developing SU activities, academic and social."

ALUMNI BOARD MEMBERS

The Alumni Association, a group that encourages alumni to maintain personal involvement in SU's activities, has elected new alumni representatives to its board of directors and SU's athletic policy board. We welcome your nominations for next year's elections. Send them by February 1 to Sherri Givens Holland, Executive Director of Alumni Relations, 820 Comstock Avenue, Syracuse University, Syracuse, NY 13244-5040.

New Alumni Association Board Members

HOMECOMING WRAP - UP

In late September, alumni came back to Syracuse from all over the country to celebrate that fall rite of passage, Homecoming Weekend.

Homecoming '96 meant more than cheering at a football game. According to Sherri Givens Holland, executive director of the Office of Alumni Relations, alumni enthusiastically participated in many activities.

"One of the most popular events was our Young Alumni pre-game tailgate party for alumni in classes from 1986 to 1996," says Holland. "We had more than 150 people, and many alumni brought their children to the party. It was an excellent response for our first Young Alumni event and we plan to make this an annual affair."

A highlight for Elaine Cardone, associate director of the Office of Alumni Relations and the person responsible for Homecoming activities, was the Alumni Awards dinner on Friday at the home of Chancellor Kenneth A. Shaw and Mary Ann Shaw. Attending were the honorees and their families, as well as members of the Alumni Association board of directors and alumni club presidents. The Outstanding Alumni Award went to Bonnie Poitras Tucker '61; Outstanding Young Alumni Awards went to Tanya M. Heidelberg '85 and Mike Tirico '88; and the Outstanding Teacher Award was presented to Professor Sari Knopp Biklen. Festivities for the honorees concluded with a ceremony during half-time at the game.

Several organizations held mini-reunions, including the Alumni Band, Alumni Cheerleaders, Chi Omega sorority, Delta Upsilon Society of Syracuse, Flint Hall RAs, Newhouse Sequence 33, and Sigma Nu fraternity.

The Daily Orange sponsored the largest gathering, as staff members celebrated the paper's 25th anniversary of becoming financially independent of the University. Former staff members enjoyed a cocktail reception on Friday, a Saturday evening banquet featuring DO alumni speakers, and a continental breakfast on Sunday.

"We look forward to celebrating Homecoming next year with more activities offered for our alumni," says Holland. "Give us your suggestions on what you want to see."

THE WAY IT WAS

Sean Byrne is currently writing a book on Belfast youngsters' images of conflict and peace. On a trip to Ireland last summer, he met with schoolchildren to conduct research. Despite the serious purpose of their talks, Byrne and the children obviously enjoyed one another.

THE UNSUNG HEROES OF SYRACUSE

by Sean Byrne G'93, assistant professor of dispute resolution and international relations, Nova Southeastern University, Fort Lauderdale, Florida

I arrived in Syracuse in August of 1988 with a sense of excitement, adventure—and culture shock. I was far away from my native Emerald Isle, a tired and bewildered young Irishman when I landed, bag and baggage, on the steps of the Office of International Services (OIS).

Pat Burak, the director, and program assistant Riet DeKleermaeker welcomed me with open arms into the international student community. Meeting Pat and Riet was a positive experience for someone so very far away from home, and I felt an immediate sense of belonging and connection to this new place.

They took me to the International Living Center (ILC), where I spent two weeks before moving to Vincent apartments. In the ILC, I met Angelo Rivera, then its director, who became a good friend and fellow doctoral student in the international relations program.

Over the next few weeks, the OIS staff went out of its way to make sure every new international student was looked after and fully integrated into the community. In a sense, the OIS became home to more than 3,000 students during this time. A very special relationship developed between the OIS and this energetic young Irishman.

During my six-year stay at Syracuse, I became very involved in OIS activities. For example, staff member Skip Greenblatt and I set up an international soccer match during the 1992 and 1993 fall semesters that brought together both new and old students. Our lively and entertaining game developed new friendships and helped build that shared sense of community within the international student body and the OIS.

Every international alumnus knows what a special place the OIS is during those days spent on the Hill. The OIS becomes family, friend, recreational center, meeting place, cultural institute, and teacher. International students also realize what a special bunch of people the staff of the OIS really is—they're the unsung heroes of Syracuse University.
