Taye Diggs '93 and Shane W. Evans '92 promote youth literacy, self-esteem in the 'Cuse—In November, television, film, and stage actor—and now author—Taye Diggs '93 (pictured, on left), a drama alumnus, along with illustration alumnus Shane W. Evans '92 (pictured, on right), visited campus for Orange Central and joined the Syracuse community in promoting literacy, education, and just being yourself. As collaborators for the children's book Chocolate Me! (Feiwel & Friends, 2011), Diggs and Evans held a book signing at the SU Bookstore as part of Orange Central and a book signing/Q-and-A for Syracuse children at a local church. Chocolate Me!, which Diggs wrote and Evans illustrated, carries an important message for children who may feel a little different from their peers. Chocolate Me! encourages kids to “appreciate their differences and celebrate them with a healthy sense of self-esteem.” While in Syracuse, Diggs also stopped by the Department of Drama to conduct a workshop for drama students.
