VAGINA.

The Vagina Institute

BULLSHIT

The website VaginalInstitute.com is one of the biggest jokes of a company I have ever heard of. Did you know that there is a website which labels itself an "institute" that actually tells women what vagina's SHOULD look, feel and smell like? This webpage provides pictures, surveys, and opinions of what the perfect vagina is. When you get on the site you can actually take a survey that then rates your vagina from 0-100. One of the questions on the survey rates the tightness of your vagina on if you would be able to cut a piece of a banana with your vagina. Okay, Really? Are you fucking kidding me? The worst part about this is, I'm not making it up and the people on the site are not kidding.

This site is shaping what an "ideal vagina" is based on the observation of 1,726 women. Where they found these women is undisclosed information, not to mention I haven't heard of any medical credentials on the site. So what every woman's vagina must look, feel, and smell like is based on 1,726 women they observed, and what I would like to know is how many out of that group had a perfect vagina?

What is this perfect vagina you may ask? A hairless, tight, scentless, prepubescent vagina is what we all should strive for. So in fact no one who has a natural vagina has the perfect one. You must be willing to do a lot of work in order to fit the ideal ten-year-old schoolgirl vagina that society wants to see. So let me get this straight, every man desires to have biggest penis and every woman is should want the tightest vagina. Riddle me this society, how is sexual intercourse supposed to be enjoyable? That sounds like a square peg trying to fit in a round hole to me.

Here's even more terrifying information about the site. For the low price of $17.95 a month you can upload pictures of your own vagina where the "medical professionals" of the Vagina Institute will tell you just how perfect your vagina is and of course what is wrong with your vagina. You can look at pictures of other women's vaginas to compare and contrast with your own, hoping that your vagina is much better than the ones they post. There is no solidarity in resenting women with "perfect" vagina's and feelings superiority to the girls whose vaginas only got a 20% on the vagina test. The site actually has a write up about what the ideal vagina is, "...Unfortunately, not all vaginas have beauty so some are not ideal to what a person desires on their body or view on their partner's body. To define the ideal and perfect human vagina, we must accept personal desires and preferences to the aesthetic beauty, which some vaginas have, and some do not." The site actually tells women that their vaginas may just not be desirable. That is the most disturbing and painful thing to put online.

BOTTOM LINE: The reason a website like this exists is because women are curious. Women want to know more about vaginas I can only imagine what this could do to a women who is curious about how her vagina compares to others, but what if a twelve year old girl gets on this site? I think that we can agree, sexual education in public schools across America is not that informative. So if you aren't finding out what you want to know in school, or from your parents, where else will you turn to? The answer is simple: the Internet. I fear that young girls will not only go on this site and take these surveys, that they will attempt to cut a piece of a banana with their vaginas. And might I add not only does that sound unhealthy, but extremely uncomfortable.

If there is one message I would like to relay it is that Your Vagina Is Beautiful! Every vagina is unique. It is okay to have a natural vagina and be proud of your vagina! You do not need to compare your vagina with others. You are beautiful and so is your vagina!

A Quick Guide To Knowing When You're

OVULATING

Every girl should have an idea of how to check out when you're ovulating. In case you want to get pregnant or avoid it, it's nice to know your cycle or at least have some idea of what vaginal fluids mean what.

Tip 1: Checking your basal temperature.

If you go out and purchase a basal thermometer and record what your temperature is every morning right when you wake up you will see that it does change throughout your menstrual cycle. When your basal temperature is at its lowest point, that's when you're ovulating!

Tip 2: Check out your cervix.

"One detectable sign of oncoming ovulation is the position of the cervix itself. During the beginning of a cycle, your cervix — that neck-like passage between your vagina and uterus that has to stretch during birth to accommodate your baby's head — is low, hard, and closed. But as ovulation approaches, it pulls back up, softens a bit, and opens just a little, to let the sperm through on their way to their target." Check your cervix daily, using one or two fingers, and keep a chart of your observations.

Tip 3: Know your vaginal fluids.

After your period there is a dry spell. You have very little to know vaginal mucus at all.

As your cycle continues on you will see very cloudy white vaginal mucus. When you spread this between your fingers you can see it breaks apart.

Next, when you get closer to ovulation the mucus becomes thicker, clearer and more mucus-y. It has a slippery consistency to it that is very similar to an egg white. If you spread that between your fingers you can pull it into a string and it does not break apart.

After this period, which is ovulation you can either experience a dry spell or a thicker amount of discharge.

Tip 4: If all else fails, buy one of those handy dandy ovulation predictor kits!

These kits can predict when you're ovulating 12-24 hours in advance. They measure the amount of luteinizing hormone, the last hormone to hit its peak right before ovulation. You just pee on a stick and wait for it to tell you if you're ovulating or not. These kits have gotten pretty accurate, and helpful throughout the years.

Tip 5: Purchase a Saliva Test.

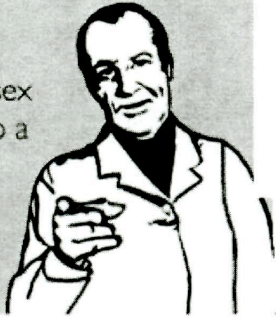

These tests measure the amount of estrogen in your saliva in order to indicate when you will be ovulating. These tests are cheaper than the ovulation predictor kits and they are reusable! The tradeoff, however is that they may not be as accurate. Unlike the 12-24 hour warning this test gives a 4 day warning.

Q: Why are men smarter during sex?

A: Because during sex they're plugged into a fucking know-it-all.

GODLESS VAGINA

My vagina was not issued by the state.

I did not go to any office to pick it up.

I did not have it ordered, or licensed. I was born with it.

There is no bureaucrat in my vagina, and I assure you there is no room for one.

In fact there is no doctor in there, there is no lawyer in there, and that is the way I want to keep it.

I don't want you putting your religious laws into practice governing my vagina.

She is fine, without you and certainly without your god.
