

4-26-2012

A Guest Artist Recital

Dzovig Markarian

Follow this and additional works at: http://digitalcommons.chapman.edu/music_programs

Recommended Citation

Markarian, Dzovig, "A Guest Artist Recital" (2012). Printed Performance Programs (PDF Format). Paper 726.
http://digitalcommons.chapman.edu/music_programs/726

This Guest Recital is brought to you for free and open access by the Music Performances at Chapman University Digital Commons. It has been accepted for inclusion in Printed Performance Programs (PDF Format) by an authorized administrator of Chapman University Digital Commons. For more information, please contact laughtin@chapman.edu.

COLLEGE OF
PERFORMING ARTS

THEATRE MUSIC DANCE

COLLEGE OF
PERFORMING ARTS

THEATRE MUSIC DANCE

Spring 2012 Event Highlights

THEATRE:

The Rimers of Eldritch by Lanford Wilson.....Feb. 16-18, 23-25
Summertime by Charles Mee.....Mar. 15-17, 22-24
Student Directed One Acts.....Apr. 25-28

MUSIC:

University Singers Post-Tour Concert.....Feb. 3
Chapman Chamber Orchestra & University Choir.....Mar. 9
Chapman University Wind Symphony.....Mar. 10
Ensemble in Residence – Firebird Ensemble.....Mar. 12-13
Opera Chapman presents The Magic Flute.....Apr. 27-29
Sholund Scholarship Concert.....May 12

DANCE:

Dance Works in Progress..... Feb. 18-19
Concert Intime Mar. 22-24
Spring Dance Concert.....May 9-12

For more information about our events, please visit our website at <http://www.chapman.edu/copa/calendar>
or call 714-997-6519 or email CoPA@chapman.edu

CHAPMAN UNIVERSITY

Conservatory of Music

presents

A Guest Artist Recital

Dzovig Markarian, piano

April 26, 2012 ▪ 7:30 P.M.

Salmon Recital Hall

Program

1
2
3
4
Tocatta, d-moll, BWV 913

J. S. Bach
(1685-1750)

5
6
7
8
Miniatures (4)

T. Mansurian
(b. 1939)

5
6 Delicato
7 Risoluto
8 Leggiero

Sonata, op. 1

A. Berg
(1883-1935)

9 Mässig bewegt

~Intermission~

Albumblätter (5), from Bunte Blätter (14), op.99

R. Schumann
(1820-1869)

10 Ziemlich langsam
11 Schnell
12 Ziemlich langsam, sehr gesangvoll
13 Sehr langsam
14 Langsam

15 Etude 2, "Cordes à vide"

Andantino rubato, molto tenero

G. Ligeti
(1923-2006)

16 Etude 5, "Arc-en-ciel"

Andante con eleganza, with swing

17 Cantéyodjayá

O. Messiaen
(1908-1992)

Program Notes

The seven Toccatas for clavier, BWV 910-916 occupy a unique place in J. S. Bach's various keyboard compositions. Unlike the more strict Preludes and Fugues or the Suites, the Toccatas present a looser form in terms of alternation of fantasia, fugue and chorale-like material. Even though a toccata is generally known to have four sections, Bach's Toccatas present great varieties within a style that never acquired a rigid form.

The term toccata was the name given since the 17th Century, to harpsichord or organ pieces, which according to the definition of the term derived from the Italian toccare ("to touch"), consists of a virtuosic composition mostly for keyboard instruments, sometimes for plucked instruments or others, where fast-moving passages and fugal interludes interlace.

The d minor Toccata is in three distinct movements:

1-(Introduction)- fantasy, chorale, second fantasy

2-Thema- fugato, fantasy, chorale

3-Allegro- fugato

Even though the original manuscripts in Bach's handwriting have not survived, the handwritten copies by Bach's very own pupils have. As these were expert keyboardists too, musicologists have been comparing and honoring those sketches in order to present a complete set of the seven Toccatas. It is according to these secondary copies and also to the Thematic Catalogue of the Works of J. S. Bach by Wolfgang Schmieder, that BWV 913 (d minor, before 1708) has been placed first in the set, and is followed by BWV 914 (e minor, before 1708), BWV 910 (f# minor, c1717), BWV 915 (g minor, before 1708), BWV 912 (D Major, c1710), BWV 911 (c minor, c1717), and BWV 916 (G Major, c1719).

Recently hailed from Berlin, Germany on the occasion of the premiere of his Requiem (Nov. 2011) for soprano, baritone, mixed chorus and string orchestra, Tigran Mansurian is Armenia's leading composer of today.

Mr. Mansurian's large body of works, which comprises film music, stage works, concerti, chamber music, vocal and choral scores, as well as instrumental solos- is characterized mainly by the organic synthesis of ancient Armenian musical traditions and contemporary European composition methods.

Originally from Beirut-Lebanon, Mansurian's family has settled in Yerevan-Armenia in 1947, a move that has contributed to the composer later becoming a close collaborator with prominent composers and performers of his era, such as Sofia Gubaidulina, Alfred Schnittke, Arvo Pärt, Edison Denisov, Andrei Volkonsky, Alexei Lubimov, Natalia Gutman, and others.

Program Notes

The four Miniatures for solo piano represent a unique character in Mr. Mansurian's piano writing, which is generally more lyrical and modal, and presented in classical forms, such as Sonatas and Sonatinas. Composed in 1969, these pieces are dedicated to Russian musicologist Mikhail S. Druskin (1905-1991), who was a mentor of Mansurian's and shared with the composer a deep reverence for modern music. In an interview, which I conducted on March 2012, the composer explained that these pieces, however inspired by post-Webernian tendencies, are explorations into the world of chromaticism, as it develops into diatonicism, and their ultimate goal is to present complete ideas, rather than fragmentary telegrams.

Although these miniatures present a rather abstract set of sketches, each miniature ends with a hint of the next, and each miniature that follows, resonates with a remnant of the past. The first miniature presents Schoenbergian abrupt and highly expressive gestures, while the last one is a study in Boulezian pointillism. The two in the middle are poetic essays in contrast to each other, with some resemblance to Schumann's Eusebius and Florestan.

Composer of the Second Viennese School next to Arnold Schoenberg and Anton Webern, Alban Berg is mostly recognized for his two operas: Wozzeck (1925) and Lulu (1937). More than a decade before the conception of his first opera, and while he was writing his more than 80 songs for voice and piano, Berg's Sonata op. 1 (1907-8) already shows influences of Schumann and early Schoenberg, with tonal ambiguity and intense lyricism. Some of the thematic material in this sonata would later become identifying features in prominent themes of Wozzeck.

Often under-estimated as a "student work," this sonata is composed as a graduation assignment during Berg's study years with Schoenberg.

Even though it bears the nominal key signature of b minor, this sonata is highly chromatic and never really in the key of b minor, except at the first statement of the exposition, and the last statement of the coda. Other compositional features include augmented triads, quartal harmonies, note-name letter symbolism (ex: A-D-G, for Arnold Schoenberg), etc.

There are a number of elements that clearly define this composition as a sonata, such as its exposition which is marked to be repeated, followed by a clear development, and finally a recapitulation. However, there are other elements that make this through-composed sonata highly ambiguous formally, and with clear tendencies of a "developing variation." In fact, some theorists argue, that every idea can be traced to the opening idea, a feature that clearly contradicts the definition of a sonata where two contrasting themes are usually expected to sustain a dialogue. While thematic contrasts may not be clearly present, there are three contrasting tempi present in this piece: Tempo I- Allegro moderato, Tempo II- Più lento, and Tempo III (or closing theme)- Molto più lento.

Program Notes

Four sonata beginnings pre-date this complete one called op.1. The fourth fragment is called Vierte Sonate (Fourth Sonata), and has become the basis for the beginning of the Symphonic Epilogue for Berg's first opera, Wozzeck.

Unlike Mansurian's, the style of miniature-writing represents a large portion of Schumann's compositions for piano solo, especially also that keeping "autograph albums" was common for 19th Century German composers. Albumblätter, or Album Leaves, was the common name that a number of composers used to name typically shorter character pieces for piano, where each one or the set was inspired by and dedicated to a friend, lover, colleague, benefactor, nobility, etc.

While Schumann called a subset of his op. 99 by this name, Albumblätter is also the name of his op. 124, which is composed between 1832 and 1845, and contains 20 pieces.

Bunte Blätter, or Colored Leaves, is a collection of 14 pieces published in 1852, as Opus 99. Written between the years 1830 and 1840, shortly before the composer's final mental collapse, these pianistic character pieces provide for a great variety of styles and moods, hence the title of the collection. Schumann at first intended to call them spreu, or "chaff" in English, a term which stands for the protective casing of seeds of the cereal grain, which separates during threshing and becomes dry and useless.

The five pieces subtitled Albumblätter are preceded by three Stücke, and followed by six more miniatures: Novelette, Praeludium, March, Abendmusik, Scherzo, Geschwindmarsch. It is curious to note that the five miniatures of Albumblätter do not carry titles, but only tempo indications. Written mostly in duple meter, except for the third one marked Gesangvoll, the character of these pieces is an alternation of Schumann's signature Eusebius versus Florestan, as far as rhythm and key are concerned.

The notion of albums or album leaves, is not entirely dead today. Examples of contemporary albums include György Kurtág's (b.1926) Játékok, and Artur Avanesov's (b.1980) Albumblätter.

Program Notes

Another “tradition” that is well alive and has evolved throughout the 20th Century, is the phenomenon called the Piano Etude. Inspired by Scarlatti, Chopin, Schumann, Debussy, and his “own inadequacy” (in the composer’s terms) in piano virtuosity, Ligeti has dedicated seventeen years to the composition of 18 Etudes (1985-2001).

Generally known for his orchestral composition called Atmospheres (1961), later used in S. Kubrick’s movie 2001: A Space Odyssey, Ligeti’s music is characterized by micropolyphony, rhythmic complexity, geometry, and trompe l’oreille illusions.

With dedications to friends, supporters (such as Vincent Meyer), conductors (such as Pierre Boulez) and premiering pianists (such as Louise Sibourd, Pierre Laurent-Aimard) among others, Ligeti’s three books of Etudes somehow resemble the Albumblätter, in their autobiographical quality.

Historically, the piano repertoire is marked first, with the Chopin Etudes (total of 27 Etudes, composed between 1829 and 1839), followed by Transcendental Etudes of Liszt (total of 12 Etudes, composed between 1826 and 1837), and finally the 12 Etudes by Claude Debussy (composed in 1915).

With multiple comparisons to their historical counterparts, the Ligeti Etudes combine piano virtuosity with poeticism, however, in a sound world much more cosmopolitan than the impressionistic and romantic sounds of the Etudes of his predecessors.

The two on this program, nos. 2 and 5, are not in the general character of the rather fast-paced and mostly loud and intense etudes. Instead, they represent a generally reflective sound world, with colors and harmonies reminiscent of the French Impressionists, and furthermore, those of Olivier Messiaen.

Cordes à vide (Open strings) is a study in arpeggiated open fifths, which are at times also sounded together like the open strings of the violin for example. The rhythm starts out with simple eighth notes, and spaced out accentuation, then grows to become a complex maze of cross-rhythms marked with horn calls. After the climax on fff at the top register, the rhythm develops further into four juxtaposed varieties: 16th note triplets and 8th note triplets in the right hand, versus 8th note and 16th note in the left. Eventually the music reaches the lowest register, and after the last horn calls are heard, the piece ends in pp perdendosi.

Arc-en-ciel (Rainbow) combines gentle swing tempo character of jazz pianism – something Ligeti admired in the poetry of Thelonious Monk and Bill Evans- to the harmonies of

Program Notes

Skryabin, and the bursting colors of Messiaen. Unlike no. 2, after a few appearances of the “rainbow,” the etude climbs to the upper register in pppp perdendosi.

Messiaen’s Cantéyodjayâ, similar to the Berg Sonata op. 1, presents a formally ambiguous composition. The main opening refrain, which is called Cantéyodjayâ, returns many times throughout this through-composed piece, which shows tendencies of what would in the classical period be termed a Rondo. The appearance and reappearances of this theme and others rotate in kaleidoscopic patterns and achieve a cumulative effect.

The titles of the different rhythmic and thematic patterns, among them doubléaflorealila, trianguillonouarké, plüsséghoucorbéliinâ, grénouditâ, statoua, like the very title of the work itself, are synthetic compounds of French and Sanskrit words.

Composed while teaching at Tanglewood, this work combines influences from Greek and Hindu rhythms, to Messiaen’s response to the impact of Schoenberg’s serialism, to thematic material from his own compositions, such as the Turangalîla Symphony. Besides kaleidoscopic juxtapositions of refrains and episodes, and self-quotations, the piece contains a unique section called Modéré (modes de durées, de hauteurs et d’intensités). According to the composer’s wife Madame Yvonne Loriot, it is this experimentation with the modes started in Cantéyodjayâ, that has led to the second of the Quatre Etudes de Rythme, or the etude called Modes de Valeurs et d’Intensités.

Unlike Berg’s relatively small output for piano, Messiaen’s output for piano solo is huge, with several large sets such as Les Preludes (8 pcs for piano solo, 1929), Visions de l’Amen (10 pcs for two pianos, 1943), Vingt Regards sur l’Enfant Jesus (20 pcs for solo piano, 1944), Catalogue d’Oiseaux (7 books for piano solo, 1956-8). While some of these sets, the second and the third, as well as most of Messiaen’s other compositions are religious, Cantéyodjayâ and his Quatre Etudes de Rythme (4 pcs for piano solo, 1949-50) are clearly secular works.

About the Artist

Currently a doctoral student at USC, Dzovig Markarian is an American-Armenian pianist specializing in contemporary classical music.

With two degrees in Contemporary Keyboard from the California Institute of the Arts, Dzovig has contributed to numerous festivals and premieres including the festivals of Elliott Carter, Iannis Xenakis, Sofia Gubaidulina, and New Zealand composers at REDCAT, Walt Disney Hall.

Dzovig has privately worked with such composers as Sofia Gubaidulina, Chinary Ung, Tigran Mansurian, Artur Avanesov, Vache Sharafyan, Jeffrey Holmes, Bruno Louchouarn, and Alan Shockley, among others.

Many thanks to Jeffrey Holmes, and Grace Fong, for making this event possible.

The community of Chapman Conservatory is one of friends, colleagues and great musicians for whom I have the deepest of respect.

CELEBRATE the creative and intellectual promise of today's rising stars by supporting the Chapman University College of Performing Arts. Your tax-deductible donation to our Fund for Excellence underwrites award-winning programs and performances. Also, your employer may be interested in the visibility gained by underwriting programs and performances within the College of Performing Arts.

We invite you to learn more about how you can assist with the construction of our new Center for the Arts, a 1,050-seat theatre which will be located in the northwest corner of campus. When completed, the Center for the Arts will be one of the largest at any university in Orange County and will feature state-of-the-art technology.

For more information about supporting our future stars in theatre, music and dance and the exciting programs produced by the College of Performing Arts, contact the College of Performing Arts office at 714-997-6519 or copa@chapman.edu. Thank you for your interest and continued support!