Basic Indian Legal Literature for Foreign Legal Professionals****

UMA NARAYAN*

Among Asian Nations, India has become a major political, cultural and business hub. This situation has contributed to frequent interaction of foreign governments, foreign nationals and businesspersons with India and Indians. In order to make them aware of the Indian Legal System and Literatures - so that they act within scope of the system – I present here a brief article giving an introduction to Indian legal literature and legal sources.

Two earlier resources for Indian legal materials include:

1. A BIBLIOGRAPHY OF INDIAN LAW, edited by Charles Henry Alexandrowicz, (Oxford University Press, 1958), and
2. INDIAN LEGAL MATERIALS: A BIBLIOGRAPHIC GUIDE, by H.C.Jain, ( N.M.Tripathi, Bombay, 1970).

Both these sources are good beginning points for information about Indian law and legal materials, though they are quickly becoming out of date. The present article is inspired by these two publications and is an effort to update sources for indentifying and locating Indian legal materials. The most recent materials are cited. Correct and current information for publishers and book vendors has been provided.

Introduction to Indian Legal History:

India has a rich tradition of law since ancient times. The Indian Legal History can be divided into the Hindu period, Muslim Period, British Period and Independent India. The ancient legal and the constitutional system show the concept of law in a Welfare State. It established a duty based society. Both individuals' duty towards the society and the duty of the King towards the individuals and society were of prime importance in the ancient Indian law. Earliest theories in law were Arthashastra of Kautilya dated 400 B.C. and Manusmriti by Manu dated 100 A.D.

The Muslim Period commenced in 1192 A.D. when Mohammad Ghori defeated King Prithiviraj. The fundamental concept in the Muslim Law like the Hindu Law was that the authority of the king was subordinate to that of law. Under the Muslim law, non-Muslims did not enjoy all the rights and privileges which the Muslims had. The first Muslim ruler who showed tolerance towards persons belonging to other religions was the Mughal Emperor Akbar. He repealed the discriminatory law regarding citizenship and created common citizenship and also one unanimous system of justice for all.

1. With the advent of British East India Company in 1600, the foundation of modern legal system was laid. The three Presidency towns of Bombay, Madras and Calcutta were set up and legal system consisting of both English Law and local personal laws of Hindus and Muslims were introduced. The British Parliament enacted the 'High Courts Act 1861' with the object of having a uniform and common judicial system. India attained independence from the British rule on August 15, 1947. India became a Sovereign Socialist Secular Democratic Republic. Modern India has a federal structure with the Parliament /Central Government at the top and the State Legislatures/ Governments in each State of India.

The very best source of study of ancient Indian Legal and Constitutional History is Justice M. Rama Jois's book 'Legal and Constitutional History of India' published in two volumes. The first volume covers the ancient legal, judicial and constitutional system and the second volume covers the judicial system under Muslim rule and evolution of modern legal system. The book 'The Framing of India's Constitution: select documents' by B. Shiva Rao is also a worthwhile source for the understanding of Indian Constitution.

Indian Judicial System:

The legal hierarchical set up consists of the Supreme Court at the apex. There are High Courts in each state of India which are the final courts of appeal in those states. Below the High Court there are District Courts having a District Judge in charge of the administration of justice at district level. The Judges at lower levels of the rank of Junior or Senior Civil Judges, and Magistrates administering criminal jurisdiction, function below the District Judge. Apart from the hierarchy of regular courts, the Constitution also makes provisions for Special Tribunals to aid administration of justice.

Indian Legal Source Materials:

The primary Indian legal source materials are-

- The Constitution of India, the supreme law
- Legislation/Statutes made by the Parliament and State Legislatures from time to time, and Bills of the Parliament insofar as they express legislative intent
- Rules, regulations, orders and by-laws made by the bodies to whom the Parliament delegates such authority
- Authoritative reports of the decisions of the Courts and the Law Commission Reports
- GAZETTE OF INDIA, published by the Department of Publication, Government of India, New Delhi.

The legislation above is known as Central Legislation. Each State has power to enact its own legislation and publish their own gazettes according to the Seventh Schedule of the Constitution of India. These gazettes can be procured from the Government Printing Press of the individual states. Some state governments also provide their legislation on their websites.<sup>8</sup>

Part III: Law Reports & Academic Journals

There are many law reports and law journals published in India. Some of them are official publications like the Supreme Court Reports of India (SCR) and the India Law Report Series (ILRs) such as ILR Delhi, ILR Kerala, ILR Karnataka. Previously, all the states published in the Indian Law Reports; currently only a few publish there. This is why today there is a real need to cite cases from private publications. The citations of these law reports published by private companies are accepted by the Indian Courts and are also cited in the judgements of the Courts. All the States in India privately publish the judgements of their respective high courts. Some of these law reports are available in electronic format. Only some of the State Law Reports are listed. A few of the leading law reports/journals are in the table below.
