MOON-GLO

(A Fantasy Waltz Lullaby)

Words and Music by C. C. Webster

Come,—snuggle near, baby darling,
Nestle here close to my breast,
Close, drowsy eyelids in slumber,
While mother sings baby to rest.
Through the lattice the moon-beams are streaming,
And the fairies come tripping along,
In the elfin robes made of the moon-glo,
And dancing to their fairy song.

CHORUS:

Hush a bye—hush a bye,
Drift into dreamland, in slumber so sweet and deep,
Hush a bye—hush a bye,
Fairies take you in their keeping,
Just to guard you while you're sleeping,
Baby—in the moon-glo sleep.

The radiant robe of the night queen,
Is the moon-glo which all fairies wear,
Baby can tell, in each fairy dell,
Just how many fairies are there.
When the leaves in the trees softly whisper
And the moon filters through, down below,
Each fairy sprite, bathed in shimmering light,
Is wearing a frock of moon-glo.

—CHORUS

The pixies assemble at nightfall,
To the sound of the nightingale's call,
The chirping of crickets, the babble of brooks,
Make music at each fairy ball,
Amid rustling twigs in the dell, dear,
Soon tiny lanterns will show,
Where the fireflies turn on the footlights,
For the fairies arrayed in moon-glo.
