there; Then they sing their song of Dixie, And the A-la-bama coon, And of drifting down the river, On a gladsome honey-toll, It would be the beauty of the hills, The splendor of the vale, It would be a joy-ous song of laughter with-out tear or moon, I would have them sing a song, With-out any fear or shame, 'T would be of my land so good and grand, The good old State of Maine.

nail, It would be of those great woods, The home of the king, Pine Tree, Where the silv'ry lakes in their splendor, The fairest you can see.

Chorus

There's the old Pen-ob-scot River, With the moonbeams on its breast, Oh, my good old State of Maine, 9 sure do love you best, I'll sing my song of your forest, Where the glorious waters fall, Where the birds and beast roam at their ease, And for their mates do call, I will sing a song of glad-ness, For the State from where I came, I will always sing the praises, For the good old State of Maine. Here's the Maine.
