There's a friend-ly lit-tle To the one who lives in cit-y, In the fair-est part of Maine, Where they grace a heart-y wel-come, And a Ells-worth, None is fair-er to dis-cern, Though he roam the coun-try o-ver, Or the Yan-kee "Come a-gain!" Where the morn-ing meets the sun-rise, With a smile a-cross the seas a-far he churn. For the dis-tant hills seem green-er To those graz-ing in the bay; Where they al-ways hail a greet-ing, To be-gin a hap-py day. vale, But the home town's al-ways dear-er, When you look back on the dale.

Ells - worth, fair Ells - worth, On the shores of an in - land Ells - worth, fair Ells - worth, On the shores of an in - land bay On the banks of old Un - ion Riv - er, That u - nites us in bay On the banks of old Un - ion Riv - er, That u - nites us in work and play. Down on the high - way, Thru the work and play. Hill - top and val - ley, You're a o - pen gate in sum - mer's lane Ells - worth, fair Ells - worth, fa - vored spot on God's green earth Wood - land, fair lake - land, 1 A jew - el in the crown of Maine. Maine.
