Health center promoting 'safe sex'

by Tim Tezler
Staff Writer

"Be wise, condomize," is the message being conveyed to students entering the Cutler Health Center.

With the reality of Acquired Immune Deficiency Syndrome on the college campus, Cutler Health Center has set up an AIDS information table with pamphlets and free condoms to help promote "safe sex."

According to health educator Ruth Lockhart, "There are no reported cases of AIDS on the University of Maine campus, but statistically there must be people who are infected with the virus at UMaine."

Although the numbers are low (statistically, fewer than five students would have the disease), there is no denying that AIDS is here and the student population must become aware of this fact.

Lockhart, who was hired by the University as a Sexuality/AIDS educator, set up the table in order to get people thinking about the AIDS epidemic.

"The table has been set up for nearly a month now and we have already gone through 1,000 condoms," Lockhart said. "Students need to think about AIDS and other sexually transmitted diseases and if they don't see something (informing them of the diseases), chances are they're going to be less likely to think about it."

Although the condoms and pamphlets are free of charge, students are requested to take only one or two per person and should be aware that condoms are available for sale at the university bookstore and at the Cutler Health Center pharmacy.

"The purpose of the table is to educate students about AIDS, rather than serve as a mass distribution center for condoms," Lockhart said.

Cutler Health Center has set up an AIDS information table to inform students of what are and are not risky practices. Free condoms and pamphlets are available at the table.

According to Lockhart, the only Sexuality/AIDS educator to be hired by a college in the state of Maine, funding for the AIDS information table was taken out of the health education budget and it is unknown whether any of the mandatory student life fee money was allotted for this information center.

AIDS is not an easily transmitted disease, but the most common way it is contracted is by having unprotected (no condom) sex with an infected partner. Sharing

by Marcia Gauvin
Staff Writer

In 1928 when Martin Luther King Jr. was born, the civil rights movement in this country was virtually non-existent.

In the 1950s and 1960s, when many black citizens of this country were struggling to achieve voting rights, access to public accommodations, and equal opportunities in education, many of the students now here at the University of Maine were not yet born.

Yet in 1986, Maine joined 43 other states and declared King's birthday, Monday, Jan. 18, a state holiday. This year many local organizations are also planning events to celebrate the 1964 Nobel Peace Prize winner's accomplishments.

The UMaine Afro-American Student Association is coordinating several activities to commemorate Martin Luther King Day. The group is holding a private dinner for several members of the administration and faculty, followed with a lecture by Michael S. Harper, which is open to the public, at 8 p.m. in the Hauck Auditorium.

Harper, an award winning poet, is a professor of English at Brown University. He has published several volumes of poetry, and has been described by Trinity College President, James F. English Jr., as "one of the most influential voices among black artists and intellectuals in America."

The President of the UMaine

Martin Luther King, Jr., one of the country's greatest civil rights activists, will have his birthday celebrated as a state holiday today. Many groups have events planned to honor the late advocate of black equality.

Afro-American Student Association, UMaine junior Douglas Dorsey, said he believes the importance of Martin Luther King Day lies in its potential to educate students, as well as other University-affiliated people, about the American civil rights movement.

"He (King) did a great deal for our society, by being a role model in the way he went about overcoming racial injustice through non-violence," Dorsey said. "I believe he set a path or example for all of the American people that if things aren't right, they should be changed."

"You can demand equality. He initiated that for blacks, for women, for many different races," Dorsey said.

At noon on Jan. 19, in the Sutton Lounge of the Memorial Union, the Women in the Curriculum Luncheon Series will hold a program titled, "Dealing with Racism, In Honor of Martin Luther King Jr.," which will focus on ways that racism still effects our lives. The public is welcome.

Bears devour Gophers, 6-4

by Mike Bourque
Staff Writer

It was as if Shawn Walsh had written the script.

Before a record crowd at Afford Arena, the Maine Black Bear hockey team defeated the number one ranked University of Minnesota Golden Gophers.

UMaine got goals from Christian Lalonde and Mike McHugh just 11 seconds apart to come away with a 6 to 4 victory.

"We beat a great, great hockey team," said Maine's Walsh.

"This is probably the biggest win in Maine history," said sophomore Dave Capuano.

UMaine was ranked second in the nation in last week's hockey polls. This victory, with Saturday's victory over Minnesota-Deluth, will, in all likelihood, jump the Black Bears to the number one slot.

With the score tied 4 to 4 and less than five minutes to go in regulation time, Maine's Lalonde got the game winner. He slid the puck by Gopher goaltender Robb Stauber after the puck had been loose in front of the net.

Allen brings women's issues to classes

by Chris Kollander
Volunteer Writer

From the male viewpoint, UMaine philosophy Professor Allen has been a WIC ally for years. Allen has served on the Advisory Committee for several years. Like Brewer, Allen brings women's views into his courses.

"I don't see this as a 'woman's thing,'" Allen said. "We're concerned about sexism as male domination with gender oppression."

In his view, Allen believes that women's experiences and contributions and women's issues and concerns have either been totally ignored or neglected. This has something to do with power in society, which, Allen said, is usually male defined. "If you have a curriculum (with those characteristics), then that says something about power."

Allen says the topic of gender issues in his course is "very provocative, stimulating, positive for me."

"The students can relate it very easily to their lives," he said. "It really hits home. If a professor can relate subject matter in a way that students can relate to it on a personal level, it makes for a good educational environment."

In bringing these views into his classes, Allen said, "I don't want to bring up feminist concerns that are artificial. In most of the curriculum, women's concerns are vital." Especially in philosophy, Allen noted "concerns about gender oppression and feminist contributions are relevant to the subject matter."

Allen would like to see one of two approaches taken by the university. The first would be to organize and establish a women's studies program. "I think that's legitimate and we should do that."

The other approach could be mainstreaming, which is going on right now, he said. But it wouldn't have a full women's studies program; rather it would try to integrate women's issues and concerns within other classes. "I think we've been partially successful in this," he said.

"I feel both approaches are good. We should not restrict the student option to an exclusive focus on women's studies. Students should be able to take other courses. I believe that students should have both options."

Six years ago, Allen learned a lesson as a WIC supporter. "You don't have to please everyone," he said. "If we have enough people who are supportive, that's sufficient to develop a vital program."

Kristin Langellier, associate professor of speech communication, also serves on the WIC Advisory Committee. "I feel like it (WIC) has made more of a difference in my professional life than any other curriculum effort," said Langellier, of her seven years at UMaine. She too sees a certain part of the faculty not supporting WIC, though

"overall, there is excellent institutional support."

In the Speech Communication department, Langellier feels that WIC has had an important impact, since there has been considerable revision of the curriculum.

And how do the students feel about these courses? UMaine senior Laura Quine has taken many courses in the women's studies area. "I just love them," she said. "They make me much more aware of what is going on around me than other courses I've taken."

"The one thing I can say about them is they are exciting. I always look forward to going to class, because I'm always learning something new and different, where in other courses, it's the same old, dull thing. Things in these courses are presented in such a positive way. I'm even tinking of having a concentration in women's studies, because of my interest in them."

WIC director Newlyn sees WIC gaining in popularity. According to her, the women's studies courses have had a good enrollment and have had positive responses. "I can generally say that unless the person is very close minded, once students take a women's studies course, their lives are changed," she said.

"There are things that make me optimistic," she said. "I have good people to work with: the faculty, administration and the students."

hypodermic needles with an infected person ranks second.

AIDS can not be contracted from drinking glasses, toilet seats, donating blood, eating utensils, swimming pools, insect bites, coughing, sneezing, spitting or touching an infected person.

When made aware of the statistical fact that there are AIDS carriers at UMaine, several students reacted positively to the AIDS information available at the health center.

"I think it's a great idea for students to have this information on campus and it gives students a good chance to know what they're getting themselves into when they have unprotected sex," said Mike Henry, a senior from Hancock Hall.

"The fact that they have free condoms and information shows that the health center is concerned and I'm glad that the student population is becoming aware of AIDS," said Bill Young, a junior from Chadbourne Hall.

With this distribution of condoms and information on AIDS, UMaine joins such schools as the University of Vermont, UMass, Syracuse and Cornell, where AIDS victims are more prevalent.

According to Lockhart, "this makes us unique, since we have no reported cases, and it shows we are at the forefront of universities distributing condoms and information on such a serious virus."

Further efforts to inform the student population on "loving carefully" will be made on February 12th in the lobby of the gym. Several groups from the area will put up displays stressing the need for communication with your partner, abstinence and safe sex.

These displays are open to everyone in anticipation of the declared Love Carefully Day, on Feb. 14.

Economics course to be offered

For many years after World War II, Maine's economy lagged behind the nation's. But in the 1980's, the situation reversed, with Maine's growth rate easily outpacing the U.S. economy.

Beginning in January, the University of Maine will offer a spring semester course aimed at understanding the significant recent changes in Maine's economy. Richard Barringer, former Maine Commissioner of Conservation and visiting UMaine professor of economics, will teach the course titled "Issues of Maine Economic Growth and Development: A Research Seminar."

According to Barringer, the course is designed to enhance the "knowledge and understanding of the Maine economy, its historical evolution, its current contribution to the well-being of Maine people and its future requirements."

Barringer plans to employ theoretical perspectives and observable economic trends in examining the state's economy. On the latter point, he said he believes several developments in Maine should be recognized as having a significant effect on the state's present and future.

Among these developments are a decline in manufacturing and a growth in service industries, a concentration of growth in Southern Maine, a continuing decline in farm acreage, internationalization of lumber and pulp markets, the end of major capital construction in the Maine utility industry, the aging of Maine's population and a continuing out-migration of people of prime working age.

Given the above trends, Barringer said he does not believe that economic vitality can be attained in all sections of the state with the same strategy.

The differences among Maine's regions will be among the issues explored in the course.

"It does not necessarily follow that because growth has spilled into Southern Maine from Massachusetts and New Hampshire that it spill further northward," said Barringer. "Closer economic ties to Quebec and the Maritime Provinces may be a more realistic strategy for Maine's northern and western counties."

Barringer is approaching the UMaine course with a clear-cut academic goal. "I want the students to be able to do a piece of economic analysis that a policy-maker would find valuable," he said.

Getting psyched by Ike

A cult figure has been born. But if Cathy Iaconeta gets any more popular with University of Maine basketball fans, she may just lose that cult status.

With Victoria Watras's departure, the starting point-guard spot was Iaconeta's for the taking.

And she has definitely taken it.

At 5-2, "Ike" has always been a crowd favorite because of her sheer quickness and dazzling ball-handling ability. But fan adulation aside, Cathy Iaconeta is a basketball player.

"She's a sparkplug," said UMaine tri-captain Liz Coffin. "She's grown into a good Division I point guard. She can match up with anyone in the nation with her quickness."

In the Black Bears' 76-56 victory over the University of Miami in Bangor Auditorium Wednesday night, Iaconeta's tenacious defense and flawless ballhandling sparked a second half UMaine surge that broke open a tight game and sent the crowd of 1,814 into a frenzy.

The statistical line on Iaconeta was good enough: 38 minutes played, 10 points, five assists, four steals and two rebounds. She committed only three turnovers, none in the second half. But that doesn't even come close to telling the whole story.

Ike scrapped, fought, dove and dazzled before finally getting her first rest of the night with 9:05 left in the game. The Hurricanes must have been awfully tired of her by then, but Coach Peter Gavett showed no mercy. Iaconeta was back on the floor at the 7:30 mark.

Some Ike highlights.

• In the first half, she twice chased down fastbreaking Canes to poke the ball away. With 2:01 left in the half, Iaconeta came from behind to thwart a breakaway by Miami's Toni Smiley, made an exit through a door at the end of the floor and returned to a standing ovation. But the second half was truly Ike Time — steals, assists, hoops and lots of fist-pumping.

• At 18:03 she broke Miami's press and whipped a cross court pass to Debbie Duff for a layup.

• At 17:13 she cut off a breaking Maria Rivera and Coffin blocked the shot. Coffin hit the floor, got the ball to Iaconeta who went coast-to-coast, stutter-stepped at the foul line and tossed in a layup, giving UMaine a 42-33 lead and sending the crowd into fits.

• At 13:27 she snuck around Smiley, snatched the ball from her and hit Duff with a beautiful no-look dish for a layup. Yet another crowd eruption. Just 24 seconds earlier she had picked Smiley.

• At 10:29 she showed Rivera a between-the-legs move, drove past her and canned a double-pump jumper. The hoop gave UMaine a 52-36 lead and it was lights out for the Canes.

• At :52 Ike calls it a night and finishes up with a leaping high-five with Coffin.

Following the game, Gavett said, "She's playing real well."

Possibly the understatement of the season.

Defense spurs Bears past Miami

Record moves to 10 and 3 with 76-56 rout

By John Holyoke
Staff Writer

After a back-and-forth first half that ended with the University of Maine women's basketball team holding a 33-31 lead over the University of Miami, most of the 1,814 fans in attendance at the Bangor Auditorium were probably expecting an old fashioned barn-burner.

Instead, the Black Bears came out of the locker room blazing, holding Miami to just five points in more than 13 minutes while scoring 25 to blow the game open en route to a 76-56 win.

UMaine Coach Peter Gavett said a change in defensive strategy at halftime seemed to confuse the Hurricanes.

"We used a 1-3-1 zone with a matchup on (Maria) Rivera, and it really gave them some trouble," Gavett said.

To say that the defense gave Miami "some trouble" is like saying the QE II is a "pretty nice boat."

After the Black Bears ran off an impressive 12-5 spurt they held Miami scoreless for nine minutes. The Hurricanes broke the scoring drought with a Hope Butler layup with 6:43 left in the game, but by that time UMaine held a 20-point lead.

Senior center Liz Coffin led all scorers with 25 points and pulled down a game-high 17 rebounds to pace UMaine, but it was far from a one woman show.

During the decisive nine-minute span the Bears used hoops by Coffin, Cathy Iaconeta, a three-point play by Rachel Bouchard, and two Debbie Duff baskets to lengthen a 45-35 lead.

Duff continued her torrid outside shooting, as she converted on 6 of 9 attempts from the floor en route to a 16 point outing. Duff also went four-for-four from the foul line to leave her free throw percentage at a perfect 1.000 after 14 attempts.

Miami Coach Ken Patrick said the Bears showed him no surprises, but inexperience hurt his squad.

"We expected a tough, physical game, but our own inexperience hurt us," Patrick said. "Maine plays great defense, and the crowd really got into the game. That may have shaken some of our younger players a little."

Bouchard, who turned in another strong showing with 15 points and 10 rebounds, said the crowd did play a part in the win.

"The place was rocking," Bouchard said. "With them reacting like that, it really gets you going."

Iaconeta continued to play her mixed role as crowd catalyst and general nuisance as she scored 10 points, made five assists and four steals.

Besides the tangible evidence offered by the scorebook, though, were several hurried shots and passing miscues which in front, and it was loose. I deflected it through his pads," said Lalonde.

Much to the delight of the 4,432 at Alford, Maine's McHugh added the finishing touch to the win just 11 seconds later. Mike Golden found McHugh alone in the slot, and he shot it into the net to Stauber's right.

Maine had taken the lead in the first period 1 to 0 on a shorthanded goal by Dave Capuano who broke in with his brother, Jack.

"Corkum made a great play in the corner, and Jack gave me a good pass. I faked to one side and shot," Dave Capuano said. Minnesota came back and scored the next three goals to take a 3 to 1 lead.

Dave Gannis got the first tally when he shot through a screen in front of Maine goaltender Scott King.

Then Peter Hankinson scored on a wrap around play that got by King.

Defenceman Randy Skarda increased the lead with his 15th goal of the season.

The Black Bears came back to even the score in the second period on goals by Mario Thyer and Claudio Scremin.

"We really learned from the first period,"

Walsh said. "We scored five of the last six goals."

Thyer's goal was an important one for Maine as it came just 28 seconds after Minnesota made it 3 to 1. This goal brought the raucous Maine crowd back to life.

Maine climbed back to take a 4 to 3 lead around the mid-point of the second period when Guy Perron took a pass from Golden and broke in alone over the blue line.

The Gophers tied it at four just two minutes later when Brett Nelson stepped in to the slot and shot it in high over King's shoulder.

As soon as the speculation ended, the speculation began.

When it was announced Friday that Skip Chappelle would retire from his post as men's basketball coach at the University of Maine after increasing speculation that he would do so, the first question on everybody's mind was, "Who's going to replace him?"

The leading candidates both come from within the University of Maine system. One is UMaine women's coach Peter Gavett, the other is University of Southern Maine men's coach Bob Brown. Although neither has expressed interest in the position, everybody seems to hope that one of them will.

Gavett has built a powerhouse with the women, a team consisting entirely of home-grown players. He is also a former men's assistant at UMaine.

Brown is a well-known figure to Maine hoop fans. He coached some of the best teams in the state's history at South Portland High School before leaving to become an assistant under present New York Knick coach Rick Pitino at Boston University.

After a stint as the head coach at St. Anselm's College, Brown returned to Maine to coach Edward Little High School in Auburn. The second he set foot in Maine, rumblings began that he was moving in for the UMaine job, a rumor that Brown has consistently denied. But with the UMaine program struggling, the rumors persisted.

Now Brown is the head coach at USM, where his Huskies are the No. 9 team in the nation in Division III. And whether he likes it or not, Bob Brown will be speculated as a possible replacement for Chappelle.

Gavett, in the midst of a 12-3 season with the women, has smartly refused to comment on the possibility of a switch in order to concentrate on his present job.

Prediction: Peter Gavett will not be the next UMaine men's coach. Bob Brown will.

With the current UMaine administration working to upgrade the athletic programs at UMaine, men's basketball is the next logical beneficiary.

And if the program is improved with more scholarships and a larger recruiting budget, it just might lure Brown back into Division I basketball.

Brown is an intense coach and has an astute basketball mind. Besides his on-court coaching ability, he is a motivator and has the personality to be a successful recruiter, given the means to work with.

Taking nothing away from Peter Gavett, Bob Brown is the man for the job.

Bears rally to repeat feat

Bears trounce UMD, 6-2

by R. Kevin Dietrich

Sports Writer

All the elements were there for the University of Maine hockey team to experience a bit of a letdown Saturday evening against the University of Minnesota-Duluth.

The Black Bears were fresh off a rousing 6-4 triumph over No. 1-ranked University of Minnesota Friday night while the Bulldogs had dropped a tough 2-1 contest to the University of Lowell.

But what the near-record Alford Arena crowd of 4,421 saw was anything but a letdown as UMaine thumped UMD and left absolutely no doubt as to whom the best team in college hockey is.

Spurred on by a pair of goals from Dave Wensley and Mike McHugh and overall solid team play, the Black Bears defeated the Bulldogs 6-2 and upped their record to 19-4-2, including a conference mark of 11-2-2, good for the top spot in Hockey East.

Defenseman Dave Nonis said the team expected a small letdown following its big win Friday.

"I was expecting it a little bit. I think it's kind of natural after last night (the game with Minnesota) and I think it's tough to play two straight emotional games," Nonis said.

Indeed, UMaine had a tough time getting things going early on. The Bulldogs tallied first, as forward Sandy Smith scored his 16th goal of the season, a power play marker, at 9:03 of the first period.

It didn't stay that way for long, though, as McHugh's goal at 13:39 tied it up and Dave Capuano's marker six minutes later, with just 27 seconds remaining in the period, gave the Black Bears a 2-1 lead.

UMD's Bob Alexander tied it up again with his 14th goal 46 seconds into the second period, but after that it was all UMaine.

Wensley scored his 13th goal of the season at 7:05 when was able to convert Bob Corkum's pass.

Four minutes later Corkum made it a 4-2 contest when he deflected Capuano's slapshot past Bulldog netminder John Hyduke.

Goals by McHugh and Wensley sealed things in the third with McHugh tipping a shot past Hyduke and Wensley poking in a rebound.

McHugh's tally came just 38 seconds into the period and, in effect, broke the Bulldogs' back.

But no matter how well the Black Bears have played of late, none has forgotten that the No. 1 ranking will mean much more at the end of the season.

"It's nice to be No. 1 and I think we should be No. 1, but we want to be No. 1 at the end of March and the beginning of April," Nonis said. "It'll mean a lot more at the end of the year. Hopefully things will keep up."

Scott King was sharp in goal for the Black Bears, turning aside 26 shots and earning the praise of head Coach Shawn Walsh.

"Nobody talks about him as the best goalie in the nation but I wouldn't trade him for anyone else in the world," Walsh said.

"I felt really good tonight and we were playing really well," King said. "I thought we came back pretty well and we played good defense."

"We can go as far as we want," he added.

UMaine's next outing is Friday against Hockey East foe Boston College in Boston.

Bears win one for the Skipper, 94-84

by Dave Greely

Sports Writer

"If I had known this would happen, I would have retired after the Michigan State game."

Just 24 hours after announcing his retirement, University of Maine basketball Coach Skip Chappelle was rewarded with his first victory since Dec. 12, as the Black Bears knocked off Canisius College, 94-84, Saturday afternoon in Memorial Gymnasium.

Coco Barry and Reggie Banks came up with big plays all afternoon as the Golden Griffins were neither strong enough to stop Barry nor quick enough to stop Banks.

Barry powered in 27 points, 20 in the second half, and collected 15 rebounds. Banks added 24 points and 12 rebounds.

"That's been there, and I hope it continues," Chappelle said of Barry's performance. "I think what happened yesterday (the retirement announcement) affected him in a positive way."

Barry was unstoppable underneath, scoring mostly on short, turnaround jumpers and layups off of missed shots.

"We did it for him (Chappelle) and we did it for ourselves," Barry said. "We needed a win. I didn't care if they boxed me out or not, I was going to pound the boards."

The Black Bears seemed tight at the outset, turning the ball over and missing some easy shots before finally getting on the scoreboard after almost four minutes of play on a jumper by Matt Rossignol.

The rest of the first half was ugly, with both teams turning the ball over on several occasions. But the Black Bears stayed close and when Banks followed a Dean Smith miss, UMaine trailed 37-35 at the half.

At the start of the second half, UMaine's Senegal connection of Barry and Guy Gomis combined for the first 14 Black Bear points.

An opposite hand flip by Barry gave UMaine a 49-48 lead and ignited a 12-0 Black Bear run. Jeff Holmes drilled two straight three-point shots and Rossignol added another as the Black Bears took a 63-50 lead with just under nine minutes remaining in the contest. The Golden Griffins could get no closer than five points the rest of the way.

The Black Bears also received a solid effort from reserve point guard Todd Hanson. He came up with two consecutive steals early in the second half and gave the Black Bears an emotional lift.

"Todd gives us a dimension that Matt doesn't, in that Todd is a true point guard," Chappelle said.

The last six minutes of the game was vintage Banks as he scored 13 points, eight of which came on dunks.

Gomis and Holmes added 12 points apiece for UMaine, now 3-8, 1-3 in the North Atlantic Conference.

Brian Smith led Canisius with 25 points and Mike Brown added 18.

David Halberstam

Famed journalist to talk at UMaine on U.S. economy

ORONO — Author and Pulitzer Prize-winning reporter David Halberstam, once called "a legend in American journalism," will speak Jan. 19 at the University of Maine.

Halberstam, author of "The Best and the Brightest," "The Powers That Be" and "The Reckoning" — a trilogy on power in America, will speak at 8 p.m. in Hauck Auditorium. The free public lecture, titled "The Reckoning: Made in America or Japan?" sponsored by UMaine Distinguished Lecture Series.

Halberstam first came to national prominence in the early 1960s with his reporting of the Vietnam War. When he refused to accept the official optimism about Vietnam and reported that the war was being lost, President John Kennedy asked the publisher of The New York Times to transfer Halberstam to another bureau. For his Vietnam reporting, Halberstam, at the age of 30, was awarded the Pulitzer Prize.

Since Vietnam, Halberstam has covered a number of social issues including the civil rights struggle in the South. He has also reported from Eastern Europe, the Congo and South Africa. Halberstam has won every major journalistic prize and explored major United States institutions in his many books including the government and military in "The Best and the Brightest," the media in "The Powers That Be" and the decline of the U.S. economy and the rise of Japan's in "The Reckoning."

"The Reckoning," the final volume of the trilogy, was chosen the "Most Important Book Read in 1986" in a Wall Street Journal survey of Fortune 500 CEOs. It was deemed one of the "10 Best Books of the Year" by "Business Week" and was six months on The New York Times best-seller list.

Halberstam has been described as a powerful journalist who writes about large crucial subjects in a way that laypeople can understand. "Harper's" Magazine has called Halberstam, "a legend in American journalism." He has even been cited by Watergate reporter Bob Woodward as "the journalistic father to a generation of us who went into the profession because of what he did in Vietnam."

came as a direct result of Laconeta's personal brand of intense, swarming defense.

To the rest of the 'Beats' credit, every Miami fumble was met with one, two, or three UMaine players diving on the floor for the loose ball.

"We put on a coaching clinic on what to do when there is a loose ball on the floor," Gavett said.

Leading the way for the Hurricanes was Rivera, who showed incredible range in connecting for 21 points. Included in her output were bombs from well beyond the 19-foot, 9-inch three point stripe.

The only other Miami player to reach double figures was Butler, who scored 15 and pulled down a team-leading 10 rebounds.

PRESENT AND FORMER R.A.'s SPEAK OUT

I am presently an R.A. and find that my job never ceases to amaze me. I like to help people, that's why I became an R.A. but now that I am an R.A. I find that people help me just as much as I help them. I get a feeling of accomplishment when someone comes up to me and says that I helped them solve their problem, or when I can see a nervous, new-comer develop into a mature upperclass student. This lets me know that one person who really cares can make a difference in someone else's life.
-Kevin Verrier

We are working on our second years as resident assistants. Our reasons for being R.A.s this year are entirely different from last year. Last year we were R.A.s because we needed the compensation of five room board to afford college. In the process of completing last year we learned a surprising amount about ourselves and about working with others. We gained valuable hands-on job experience that developed many useful job skills: communicator, counselor, programmer, supervisor, administrator, consultant, researcher, organizer, volunteer, para-professional, intervener, trainer, mediator. As a group they are simply people skills, an abundant supply of people skills.

Nonetheless, we have not mentioned our reason for coming back for a second year. We have never before had the experience to work on a staff which concentrates all its efforts toward a common goal. In our position we try to create the best living environment for students that is possible. The process by which the goal is completed is our reason for returning. We have never before been exposed to the sincerity, commitment and friendship which result from staff interaction.

Why did I become an R.A.? Well, there are many reasons for this decision. Basically I like to work with people and I thrive on responsibility. My freshman and sophomore years I watched my Resident Assistants and saw what they had to do. I felt I had the skills to fill the position; there is much more to an R.A. position than the room and board stipend. An R.A. must learn good time management skills in order to balance his or her job and study requirements. Since becoming an R.A. my communication and assertiveness skills have grown tremendously. I have become quite familiar with campus resources and have had the opportunity to work with many people with unique skills, such as the Counseling Center, the Health Center, Police and Safety and other program coordinators. I have been very pleased with the choice I made three years ago. I have learned much, and hopefully I have helped others along the way.

Jim Buttarazzi

Last semester, as part of Resident Assistant job, I put on a program in the residence hall on the Vietnam War. We invited several Vietnam Vets and a Vietnamese history professor to come give us their perspective on that tragedy which most college students are barely old enough to recall. In that program, I saw students learning, enjoying, and taking part in a discussion which went on for over 3 hours. I saw them moved by what they heard, and I also saw the appreciation of the veterans as they realized that young people still care, and want to learn from the past. That was on way in which my R.A. position helped me make a positive impact upon the learning experiences of my peers. And it's the opportunity to do so which makes this job worthwhile.

I'll be the first to admit that I became interested in the job for money. The free room and board had a certain appeal to my checking account. But most experienced R.A.'s will confess, and sometimes complain that the hassles and headaches just aren't worth it. What is worth, however, is the experience of taking an active part in making this campus a better living and learning environment - in short, a better place to go to school. The opportunities to help others are many, and the personal rewards are equally numerous. And extensive, hands-on experience in interpersonal relations will certainly pay off in the future. After all, when you've graduated, and you're in that first job interview, not only can you say "I like working with people..." but also, "I've worked with people in administrative, counseling, and educational aspects..." and I like it!

David Giroux

My experience as a resident assistant helped me as an undergraduate and continues to help me now that I have graduated from the University of Maine. As an undergraduate the R.A. job taught me a great deal about myself, other people, and myself in relation to others. After graduation it helped me to get my first job which was working as a full time resident director at Franklin Pierce College in New Hampshire. When I decided to attend graduate school, it helped me to qualify for a graduate assistant resident director position - a position which I currently hold. The most important thing the R.A. experience did for me was to help me to make the decision to pursue a career in student personnel. To be honest, I have no idea where I would be right now or where I'd be headed if I hadn't become a resident assistant as an undergraduate here at the University of Maine.
