Cincinnati 3rd March 1836.

Gentlemen.

It is with much regret that I find myself compelled to decline the very polite invitation which you, as a committee on behalf of the Democratic citizens of the City of Cincinnati and County of Hamilton, have tendered me, to attend the dinner to be given in the City on the 4th inst, for the purpose of celebrating the expiration of the Charter of the Bank of the United States. But I must attend the court in Georgetown Ky, which will commence on Monday next, and I have barely time to reach there, in time. It would have afforded me great pleasure indeed to have been present, at the glorious occasion referred to; but as that is impossible I will beg leave to offer the following sentiment which could hardly come amiss upon any occasion.

Col. Richard M. Johnson, who as a Statesman and Soldier has done more and suffered more than any man living.

Respectfully yours &c.
