On the cover:

We love Convocation. It is the first – and one of the few – occasions in the academic year that sees the assembly of the entire college community and, of course, it is also our first opportunity to meet the incoming class. For members of that class, it's a solemn occasion and the ceremonial certainly gets their attention: The ringing of the Green Knights Victory Bell marks the moment of their official reception into the college community. In this issue, we take a look at such times of arrival. Read more, starting on page 7.

Sweet anticipation

Jeff Frick
Academic Dean and Vice President of Academic Affairs

This morning I was helping my middle daughter make the batter for banana bread. Once everything was mixed, we placed the soft batter into a loaf pan and then put it in the oven. Of course, we all had to wait an hour before we could even think about enjoying her creation.

As the baking bread began to smell more and more appetizing, I began to think about anticipation – our anticipation of the treat to come, and the eager anticipation that often follows other decisions. In my case, last March I made the decision to come to St. Norbert College after spending 18 years at another institution, first as a professor (teaching organic chemistry) and more recently as associate provost. The anticipation that my family and I felt was extended because I was not to start my position here until July 1 – and they would not follow until a month later. We were eager to experience the communio reflected in all that we do at the college.

Yet, this is not all that much different from the anticipation that many of the newest members of our community experience. Our new first-year students, having made the decision to attend St. Norbert some time ago, have been anticipating their arrival on campus and the start of their courses. Our new faculty, having participated in an extensive interview process – some as long ago as last fall – have been anticipating settling in at the college and starting to share their passions with St. Norbert students.

Other members of the college community are in the midst of anticipation. Many of my faculty colleagues await the publication of their latest scholarly paper or book. Some of our students may even be featured as co-authors on some of those publications. For most students, this publication is likely their first. Our coaches face the anticipation of the upcoming season of competition. As you know, some of them face the anticipation of trying to repeat as conference champions and, in one case, trying to repeat as national champion.

Our continuing students face the anticipation of deepening their studies in their chosen field. Some may face the anticipation of study abroad (and perhaps their first trip overseas). Our seniors, no doubt, face the anticipation (and uncertainty) of what will come next for them.

Anticipation always precedes arrival. I invite you now to turn your attention to the many arrivals on our campus that we are experiencing this fall, some of which we explore in this issue. We celebrate the arrival of a large, academically gifted class. They, in turn, will experience the arrival – the opening – of several new facilities. Most notable for our students will be the new Michels Commons, where they will enjoy food prepared fresh before their eyes. We also celebrate the arrival of several new faculty, who have experienced an outstanding orientation program. Finally, we always look forward to celebrating the arrival of many of our graduates, returning to campus for Homecoming and other events that take place throughout the year.

By the way, the banana bread was worth the wait – when it arrived, it was delicious! ♣

Reflecting the mission statement of the college, St. Norbert College Magazine links the institution's past and present by chronicling its academic, cultural, spiritual and co-curricular life.

SNC Day 2011 | Community neighbors, family and friends throng the mall as St. Norbert College opens its doors for its third annual September open house.

A legacy of friendship

For Beth Blahnik '04 (College Advancement), connecting donors' passions with the financial needs of students is all in a day's work. Some days, though, making that connection carries particular meaning, as with the recent creation of the Justin C. Kausch Memorial Scholarship Fund.

Justin Kausch '03 was Blahnik's friend and classmate at St. Norbert. An honor student and athlete, Kausch was, in fact, a friend to many. His penchant for developing relationships led him, during his time at St. Norbert, to found the independent fraternity Alpha Kappa Pi with six friends. With Kausch as the group's first recruiting officer, Alpha Kappa Pi flourished, eventually joining the Phi Delta Theta international fraternity. Tragically, Kausch didn't get to witness that accomplishment. In 2002, he died in a car accident while spending the summer after his junior year at home.

Now, his parents, together with Kausch's friends Christopher Lundh '03, Carson Diltz '02, Evan Celig '03 and Peter Andrews '04, plus members of Phi Delta Theta, have worked with Blahnik to see into fruition a scholarship fund that honors both Kausch's life and the value he placed on the sense of community. The Kausch Memorial Fund provides annual financial assistance to a community-focused sophomore, junior or senior. Preference is given to members of Phi Delta Theta as well as to those majoring in biology and chemistry – fields that particularly interested Kausch.

Blahnik, as both Kausch's friend and, now, as newly elected advisor to Phi Delta Theta, has relished her role in establishing the scholarship. "All around, this has simply been a joy," she says.

Bud Selig to speak at Sport and Society 2012

Major League Baseball commissioner Bud Selig will be one of the featured speakers at the second "A Mirror of Our Culture: Sport and Society in America" conference, scheduled for May 22-24, 2012. Scholars who focus on the impact of sports, along with professionals in sports-related fields, will gather for this, the second conference of its kind co-sponsored by St. Norbert College and the Green Bay Packers.

The conference, held both on campus and at Lambeau Field, encourages academics and practitioners to share their expertise in American sport through presentations, papers and networking. In addition to keynote addresses by Selig and other renowned professionals from the world of sport, the event will feature a gallery exhibition of the finest American sports photography and a juried festival of sports-themed films and videos.

Annual peace award honors U.N. advisor

Prominent human rights scholar George Lopez received the college's 2011 Ambassador of Peace Award during a Sept. 21 reception in his honor. Lopez, the University of Notre Dame's Rev. Theodore M. Hesburgh, C.S.C., Professor of Peace Studies, serves as an advisor to the U.N. Security Council, the European Union and numerous governments and human rights organizations.

The college's annual Ambassador of Peace Award honors an individual who is an influential advocate for sustainable peace and demonstrates the qualities of a peacemaker.

Meet the Class of 2015

They are the record-breaking, AP-taking, difference-making Class of 2015 and it is our pleasure to introduce you to these, our new first-years, by letting you know just a few of the things they have already achieved.

Incoming students for this academic year competed among the largest pool of applicants ever and, in the process of admitting the class of 2015, other records were broken, too. The 2,270 total applications for a first-year place mark a 12.32 percent increase over the previous high of 2,021 (set in 2008) and a 12.76 increase from last year.

The office of admission went on to enroll the second-largest group in college history. The incoming group totals 659, a figure that includes 580 new U.S. first-years, 56 new U.S. transfer students and 23 international students. The new cohort is the most selective ever and also includes the largest number of students of color.

Individual members of the class have already proven themselves in some pretty remarkable arenas. Among their numbers are:

- 290 who enrolled in AP courses in high school.
- One who enrolled in 10 AP courses while in high school.
- 186 who captained a varsity sport.
- One who captained five sports.
- The opening act for a Third Eye Blind concert in Chicago.
- The sole proprietor of her own photography business.
- An ambassador to the United States at the International Youth Games in Austria.
- An international champion in high school a cappella.
- A delegate to a congressional leadership conference – in China.
- The 2010 Reserve World Horse Show Champion.
- The founding president of the Terminal Illness Awareness Club.
- Miss Door County 2011.
- 98 who participated in mission trips, with destinations that included the Dominican Republic, France, Haiti, Jamaica, the Philippines, the Virgin Islands and Zambia.
- 140 with a family member who graduated from, or currently attends, St. Norbert College.

Values nurtured through education inspire new library director

Kristin Vogel didn't become a librarian because she loves books. What inspired her was the symbolism of those books: empowerment through education, community building, democracy and participation in determining your own destiny.

The new director of the Mulva Library says she desired a career that would allow her to live out deeply held values – values nurtured at Earlham College, the Religious Society of Friends (Quaker) school where she majored in peace and justice studies. It wasn't until she landed a job at the science branch library, though, that she realized a career as a librarian could do just that.

She says, "It was there that I learned more about the connection between libraries and democracy, the role that a library plays in a democracy and how, in an educational institution, the library is also able to be a partner in a student's education."

Vogel went on to graduate from Indiana University School of Library and Information Science. In the years since, she's held positions at Alma College, Illinois Wesleyan University and St. Louis University.

Vogel joined the Mulva team this July. Though only on campus a short while, she has already reached out to many staff members, faculty and students. One identified priority is the collection at the library. Vogel wants to make sure ongoing subscriptions are serving current requirements. And faculty members tell her students need to continue to improve their research skills and information "savvy-ness."

Traditionally, students learn research skills from their professors in class, from faculty members and librarians teaming up to teach targeted skills, or by signing up for an individual workshop at the library. Vogel says the library staff is looking to add another option – short electronic tutorials that can be accessed whenever the students want and need them.

Vogel says: "Students learn best when they have a need. So students in college are highly motivated when they've got a research assignment from a faculty member and they need to know, and they want to know, how to get the best information for a project." Library staff have access to tutorials created elsewhere and have recently acquired software that will allow them to create their own.

Looking for and embracing opportunities like this is what keeps a library dynamic and responsive to current needs. And that's just the kind of empowerment through education that got Vogel interested in becoming a librarian in the first place.

Medieval scholars convene at St. Norbert

The Medieval Association of the Midwest returned to St. Norbert for its 2011 conference, attracting scholars who discussed medieval literature, history, language, art history, philosophy and religious studies. Programming included a special emphasis on Norbertines in medieval times.

Presenters and moderators from St. Norbert included Wolfgang Grassl (Business Administration), William Hyland (Center for Norbertine Studies), Rebecca Proefrock (Religious Studies), the Rev. John Bostwick, O.Praem., '68 (Religious Studies), Karlyn Crowley (English), John Day (Modern Languages and Literatures), Robert Boyer (English, Emeritus), Bradford Ellis (Modern Languages and Literatures), Rosemary Sands (Center for International Education), John Pennington '80 (English), Stephen Westergan (Humanities), Laurie MacDiarmid (English), Michael Lovano (History) and the association's former president Ed Ridsen (English). Kim Anderson '09 and Rachel Waymel '08 also presented papers.

Photographer guests on college TV show

An exhibit of sports photography by Evan Siegle, including images from Super Bowl XLV, drew visitors to the Baer Gallery this fall.

Siegle's career highlights include the 2006 Winter Olympic Games and also the NCAA Division I and Division III Frozen Four hockey championships. Readers will be familiar with his work in other areas, too, as he is one of the college's go-to photographers and his work has often appeared in this magazine. Siegle, who works for the Green Bay Press-Gazette, says:

"I'm very privileged to get such rare access to sporting and other events. Access is a big key in capturing great moments. Shooting sports is about having good timing, being prepared and having a little luck on your side."

National webinar highlights best practices

St. Norbert sets the pace for institutions of its size when it comes to study abroad, according to the facilitator of a recent national webinar featuring Joe Tullbane (International Education).

The webinar, "Strategic Planning for Study Abroad Financing," was hosted by NAFSA: Association of International Educators. It drew participants from 67 institutions of higher learning.

Several distinctions prompted NAFSA to choose St. Norbert as its webinar's exemplar for colleges and universities with 5,000 students or fewer. In 2004, the college was honored with the Senator Paul Simon Award for Campus Internationalization; in 2005, it earned the American Council of Education's Best Practices Award; and in 2009, St. Norbert was the first institution of higher learning to meet the national best-practices standards of the Forum for Education Abroad.

Krew knows what to do

Members of the inaugural Kunkel's Krew made moving in short work for new students and their families.

Clad in bright orange Kunkel's Krew T-shirts, 130 student, faculty and staff volunteers swarmed campus Aug. 26 to carry boxes, answer questions and personify communito for new Green Knights moving into the college's residence halls. It was the start of the academic year and move-in day for the Class of 2015.

"There were quite a few people who didn't have to move a thing. By the time they checked into their hall, all their stuff had already been carried to their room," says Rob Trembinski (Residential Education and Housing). "All the students, staff and faculty who helped out just had a blast."

The number of volunteers for the first-of-its-kind welcome effort, launched with the help of President Tom Kunkel, exceeded expectations by 30 percent – and the 110 returning students on Kunkel's Krew reaped a few benefits of their own. They got to move in on Aug. 24 ahead of other students, and they were thanked with an invitation to dinner at the president's residence at the end of move-in day.

Workshops on Somali culture meet local need

Some 30 educators, health-care workers and social services agents gathered on campus in August and September for a taste of Somalia's traditions and an introduction to the language of the African nation.

Language Services offered the two Somali culture workshops in response to the quadrupling of northeast Wisconsin's Somali population in the past year. Years of conflict and drought have displaced millions of Somalis.

The Green Bay area's safe environment, affordable housing and new mosque have attracted the mostly second-generation refugees, many of whom are Muslim.

College loses a friend

Evaleen Neufeld, "an outstanding lady" and the first woman to chair the college's board of trustees, has died at the age of 86.

Neufeld, who made her career as a social worker, served on the board 1978-92, and as its chair 1988-92. She was instrumental in seeing the Bemis International Center built, and is remembered particularly for the strong interest she took in the student body. She was awarded an honorary doctorate in humane letters in 1993.

Evaleen Neufeld

President Emeritus Thomas Manion remembers: "When there was a decision to make, I'd always ask the question, 'Is it the right thing to do?' Evie would say, 'Is it the kind thing to do?' She was an outstanding lady. She made us think in different directions."

Neufeld and her late husband, Joe, established six scholarships at St. Norbert, and many other institutions also benefited from the couple's ongoing and generous philanthropy.

Neufeld, who was a longtime resident of De Pere, died on Sept. 5, 2011.

Timely discovery greets Class of 1961

Just a few weeks before the Class of 1961 assembled on campus for its 50th reunion, a construction worker discovered a time capsule – from 1961.

Pat Wells, of Miron Construction, has been working on the new Michels Commons, a transformation of the former Sensenbrenner Union building. When he spotted a gleam of copper inside the original Sensenbrenner cornerstone, removed for the installation of a new elevator, he investigated further.

The capsule was so well sealed that it had to be forced open with metal cutters. The Rev. Jay Fostner, O.Praem., '84 (Mission and Student Affairs) says: "We were considering waiting for the dedication of the new building. But we got too excited!"

The contents – photos and college publications, including an edition of The St. Norbert Alumni Quarterly, a precursor to this magazine – were removed and put on display in time for the Class of 1961's reunion. Those items, alongside their 2011 counterparts, will be sealed in a new time capsule that will be set in the cornerstone of Michels Commons.

Arrivals

By Mike Dauplaise '84

The first moments on campus open the door to a world of possibility

First impressions matter, and that made by St. Norbert College packed quite a punch for both prospective student Alyssa Wapneski and her mother, Marie, when they toured the campus in September.

While Alyssa was most concerned with the college's offerings from an academic perspective, the aesthetic appeal of the campus caught her mother's eye. The pair were among the first visitors to be welcomed via the college's newest "front door," the Ariens Family Welcome Center on College Avenue.

"St. Norbert has a good reputation, so I wanted to come here and look at it," said Alyssa, a no-nonsense high school senior who aspires to a career in the medical field. "I would like to be involved in music, and I like that you can participate in music without having it be a major or minor. I was hoping to get a feel for the campus, and I'm very satisfied with my visit."

Her mother, on the other hand, was so taken by the visual appeal of the campus and the friendliness of the people they encountered that she found it difficult to contain her enthusiasm. “My first impression is, the school is absolutely beautiful,” Marie stated. “Looking at the updated buildings, it’s so appealing. Alyssa is very smart, loves the smaller setting and class sizes, but all the while I’m thinking, ‘Yes, but it’s beautiful!’”

The Ariens Family Welcome Center includes the Roland and Helen Murphy Office of Admission and the Ed and Sally Thompson Office of Communications.

The experience of first-time visitors to campus has been transformed by the Ariens Family Welcome Center, and all was made possible by a wholesale reimagining of the original Third Street admissions building – a reimagining that has seen the college’s core tradition of radical hospitality now actually rendered in bricks and mortar.

The project, completed in August, more than doubles the original building’s square footage and reorients its main entrance to focus on the heart of the campus. Windows in the building’s Glenn and Barbara Madrigano Gallery and Presentation Theatre provide a wide view of Third Street and the St. Norbert arch. Visitors have a clear view of landmarks such as the Mulva Library, Abbot Pennings Hall of Fine Arts and Baer Mall. The gallery in the building’s rotunda greets visitors with its high-impact images illustrating the St. Norbert experience and words used in iconic fashion to encapsulate the essence of the institution.

family that has been involved and engaged with the college for decades. Now we can extend that welcome to countless families for years to come. This facility allows us to transcend the typical campus tour and help people understand what St. Norbert College is all about. The gallery and rotunda of the building are intended to provide a very welcoming experience, and a bit of a ‘wow’ factor, too.”

That “wow” factor scored a direct hit on John Angster, who visited the campus with his daughter, Jennifer, on what happened to be Dedication Day for the new facility. “Our first impression was, the building looks very new, but we had no benchmark for what it was like prior to this,” John said. “We went right in and told the staff we were here for a tour. They had a packet ready for us and were attentive to us, even though the dedication events were taking place.”

The Admissions staff leads four scheduled tours that start from the rotunda throughout the day. Staff make an effort to accommodate additional requests, such as visits with faculty members or even sitting in on a class. Prospective athletes also meet with coaches and tour the athletics facilities.

“Every family has a different agenda when they visit the campus,” said Jim Stamatakos (Admissions). “Our tours are very modular, so the pieces can be moved around and adjusted as needed.”

Jennifer Angster is a high-school track star who is interested in continuing her athletics career at the college level. Soon after she clicked the “How to Apply” button on the St. Norbert website, she received a call from track coach Don Augustine.

“He set up the tour for me, and we even had lunch during our visit with some of the track and cross-country people,” Jennifer said. “The tour definitely got my interest.”

“It was quite impressive as we walked the campus to see all the capital expenditures either in progress or recently completed,” her father noted. “Today’s experience was the best of the four other significant campus visits we’ve had.”

The new rotunda provides a spacious starting point for campus tours.

Three moments of decision arrive

Donors talk about why they give – and the deeper context where possibility begins to take shape.

Families and individuals who have the capacity to make major gifts are used to fielding requests for financial assistance. It takes a special relationship with the organization and a project that triggers a passionate desire to make a difference before donors can arrive at a point of taking action.

Major gifts are the lifeblood for private institutions like St. Norbert. The task of matching donors with a campus need for which they have a passion is the responsibility of Phil Oswald (College Advancement) and President Tom Kunkel.

“Major gifts don’t happen unless there is a level of trust for the leadership and financial stability of the institution,” Oswald explains. “Projects need to be meaningful for donors. An additional arrival point is when we can help donors see where their passions align with the needs of the college in getting to where it’s trying to go.”

St. Norbert has benefited recently from the generosity of several families who arrived at their own points of decision, yet with each building on the strength of the other. The result is an impressive transformation of the campus, ushering in a new era for new generations of students.

“There certainly is a lot of momentum on campus,” Oswald says. “When you have three cranes working at once, you’ve got some good things happening.”

The new facility includes comfortable spaces for meeting with visitors – like the Ariens family, pictured.

The Ariens Family Welcome Center

The Ariens family has a history of giving that stretches back to the early 1950s, when the parents of Mike Ariens donated homes on Fourth Street and Reid Street to the college. Mike is a former board of trustees chair who attended St. Norbert from 1959 to 1962. He met his wife, Mimi, near the spot where the Ariens Family Welcome Center stands today, at the corner of College and Third.

Six of the couple’s nine children are St. Norbert graduates, Mike’s three brothers attended the college, and even Mimi’s father attended the old St. Norbert High School in the 1930s. The family’s ties to the college truly run deep.

“Our family has a history of gifting to the college, so we agreed to meet with Tom Kunkel when he called and asked to talk about a building project they had,” Ariens recalls. “He and Phil [Oswald] came for a visit and talked about redoing the Admissions center. Mimi and I talked about it, and along with [college trustee] Ed Thompson being interested in giving as well, the combination made the project a possibility. We have a great group of children that, long-term, can be helpful to the college. It was important to us that the Ariens family get involved.”

Ariens says the family bases its giving decisions on the availability of funds; the closeness of the family to the request; its worthiness; their knowledge of the people behind the request; and the organization’s ability to function with what they require. “This was the largest gift we’ve ever given,” he says. “The building is very attractive and practical. Their architectural sense was, this is a gateway to the campus. It’s got a welcoming sensitivity to it, which is very critical to a young student and their parents who might not have been there before.”

The Ed and Sally Thompson Office of Communications

Ed Thompson has been a friend of St. Norbert and advisor to its presidents for many years, going back to a brainstorming session with then-president Neil Webb in 1973. Thompson and his late wife, Sally, later played a major role in helping the college turn its face toward the Fox River with a gift to create the Ed and Sally Thompson Marina, which now hosts the Knights on the Fox concert series in front of the Ray Van Den Heuvel Family Campus Center.

“I’ve had a very strong passion for the college from the beginning of my involvement there,” Thompson says. “It attracts and sends out into the world some great students.”

His decision to provide the resources needed to begin redevelopment of the original Roland and Helen Murphy Admission and Visitor Center was in part a logical next step in campus development and in part a sentimental journey. A new facility would provide for an expanded

Mike Ariens and Ed Thompson.

Admissions area and, perhaps, the opportunity to house the college's marketing and recruitment teams under one roof. This initial step was to be followed by a major gift from Thompson toward the new Ed and Sally Thompson Office of Communications wing.

"Ed and I started sketching out some ideas while sitting in a local café," remembers O'Connor. "Ed said that not only did he think it was a good idea to combine these offices under one roof, he was willing to contribute the resources to flesh it out. Without that, we wouldn't have been able to get the ball rolling."

The result of their brainstorming

Take a video tour of the Welcome Center. snc.edu/go/magazine

session became a focal point for positive energy as Thompson endured a challenging stretch in his personal life. His beloved wife was in declining health – she was to die in August 2010 – and the couple's home had burned down during the 2007 holiday season.

"Our arrival point was we wanted to do something more for the college, something beyond the marina," he says. "We knew my wife was seriously ill and this could be one more thing we could do together. Plus, I really wanted to team with Tom [Kunkel] and Bridget."

To work on the project, Thompson recruited the architect who helped him design his replacement home, Chris Renier, and the team quickly grew to include The Boldt Company, a respected construction contractor. "They were eager to do a project on campus," Thompson says. "My donation was important, but the involvement and creativity of putting this together in an attractive way also helped. Another important arrival point for me was understanding the value of attracting the right kids and communicating well with them. The combination ... deserved to be on that main street and in an attractive building."

Michels Commons

The Michels family also has a long history of giving to St. Norbert, and had endowed the Michels Chair in Business. The family was open to considering an additional major gift, but the college's first suggestion of renovating the John Minahan Science Hall did not strike quite the right chord.

When Kunkel and Oswald paid the family a follow-up visit in September of 2010, the Michels reiterated their desire to contribute in a way that would make a broader impact on the student experience.

"We wanted to help the college in some way, but the science building was not a good fit for us at that time," explains Kevin Michels '89, one of three brothers to graduate from the college.

When Kevin asked about the potential of updating the Sensenbrenner Memorial Union and cafeteria, it caught Oswald and Kunkel off-guard. The building certainly needed renovation, but it wasn't high on the priority list and the college had yet to develop a proposal for such a project.

"Pat Michels then asked what would happen if the family gave us a large donation. How quickly would the union project move up on the priority list?" recalls Oswald. "Tom [Kunkel] looked at his watch, and that elicited some laughter."

The president's tongue-in-cheek response wasn't really an exaggeration. The St. Norbert team quickly huddled with designers and the Union staff over the next four weeks to develop a concept. The Michels family then traveled to campus to tour the facility and ask a number of questions. Upon exiting the union, the family asked for some privacy to discuss their decision. A few minutes later, they were ready to move forward.

Tim Michels '84 sealed the deal when he symbolically handed a check to Student Government Association representative Keri Hodnik '13 at a later building committee meeting. As Tim told Hodnik, this was for her and all the students at St. Norbert.

When Michels Commons opens next spring, it will stand as a state-of-the-art dining facility and reception space.

"We felt we'd be able to help the most for a student body that potentially visits that building three times a day or more," Kevin Michels says. "We knew it was in need of major work and we felt it was a worthy project. Whether you're a prospective student or current student, that's the one place you go all the time. It fit our goals very nicely." ❀

Holly Nickerson

St. Norbert College

Move-in day, Aug. 25. Along with 579 classmates, Holly Nickerson '15 began her life as a college student, bringing with her a heap of stuff plus a passion for concert band and Key Club, the Kiwanis high school service group.

It was exhilarating. It was stressful. And it was happening to everyone around her at the same time.

Like all incoming St. Norbert students, the honors student from Fremont, Ind., got acclimated to college life with help from the First Year Experience (FYE) and Week of Welcome programs. One thing about Holly's first week at St. Norbert was unique though: She allowed us to open for our readers a social media window on her new world.

Holly Nickerson is at St. Norbert College.

Meetings meetings meetings ... and soon there will be fun. Is anyone from Key Club of Fremont surprised that I'll be participating in the service project tomorrow morning, "Into The Streets"? Yeah ... didn't think so, it's totally why I picked this college :D

I'm here and very stressed. We couldn't get all moved in cuz we couldn't get the loft up cuz my roommate isn't here and my mom and Rach had to leave so it's just G'ma and I. Tear.

Done with the scavenger hunt ... Way fun, but also way tired.

Hey G'ma. I've been having a great wonderful awesome time so far. It's been scary, sad, exciting and new ... and now it's confusing. I think that I left my iPod in your car when we went to go eat at Big Apple Bagels. Do you mind checking for me? I've been keeping my calendar on there and I'm very lost with all of my meetings without it. – Love, Holly

Dear G'ma and Mom,
So classes do officially start tomorrow. I have finished my honors assignment that was due on Tuesday and walked my class schedule with a very friendly helpful sophomore that I just met tonight.
We had Convocation today ... which is I guess the opposite of graduation. It was nice ...
Anyway ... I'll let you know how it all went tomorrow.
Love you! Holly

CLASSES START TOMORROW!
I can't wait to get on a routine and a schedule.

My first day of classes started with an embarrassing flop. I thought that my Spanish 102 class was in Bemis 214. It was my first class ever, so I had walked my schedule the night before and felt prepared for the class, if a little nervous about my Spanish-speaking abilities. I arrived early and was waiting out in the hallway when I suddenly realized that other students who were in the hallway were pulling out religious studies textbooks that I of course did NOT have. I asked what class they were waiting for and they replied, "Intro to Theology. You?" Another girl across the hall dropped her jaw along with me and almost started crying. "I thought this was Spanish."

We went into the class, the professor kindly helped us sort it out and we booked it towards BOYLE 114. Small mistake, but enough to make us miss the first five minutes of my first college course.

Holly Nickerson, who will be checking her classes at least six times for tomorrow and the rest of the week before she gets there.

Plenty of hands to help with Holly's luggage.

The first week of college is eventful enough without the occasional presence of a benign paparazzi in the shape of magazine interns Nicole Jagielski '12 and Joel Van Fossen '13. But Nickerson was gracious enough not only to put up with our presence but to befriend us as she offered her daily glimpses of her Week of Welcome activities.

Her fellows took all in their stride, although her FYE group commented that they must have royalty along. There was great excitement at Convocation Aug. 28, when Nickerson spotted Drew Van Fossen (Office of Communications) atop Main Hall with a camera trained upon her. "He's on the roof! Drew is on the roof!" she texted Jagielski from the event.

We knew all would be well when Nickerson "liked" the magazine page on Facebook before the week was out. And now, Nickerson has become a colleague: Her first on-campus job is as a student worker in the office of admission, just down the hall from the magazine office.

Thank you, Holly, for making this story possible.

Hi Erin!
I am really enjoying my classes. They're harder, and I'm getting way more homework than I ever did in high school, but it's kinda great because I really do enjoy the classes themselves. Every night since classes started we've been meeting in my room to study quietly for a few hours and then when everyone's ready we quiz each other on our different stuff. That's a lot of fun, and normally by that time of night we're pretty silly ... but let me tell you: If you like middle school, you're going to love high school, and if you end up loving high school you will ADORE college.

St. Norbert College invites you to Week of Welcome

St. Norbert's First Year Experience (FYE) is a three-tiered program designed to help students succeed in their early days at the college. It begins with Summer Orientation, a two-day program that gives students a feel for the campus and a chance to get things set before they arrive in the fall.

Week of Welcome starts with move-in day, a few days before classes begin. Events help new students get comfortable and create a network of friends and support. Every new student is assigned to an FYE group of about 18 students who meet regularly with a mentor – a junior or senior – in the first six weeks of school.

"That's where you get to know some of your classmates for the first time," says Nicole Jagielski '12. "It's your first group. You get to know people who aren't in your building, who aren't in your class. It's outside of an academic and residential setting, and that takes the pressure off. Because you have an FYE mentor who's another student, it's easier to ask stupid questions! It's your chance to ask how Knightline works; how early is the Campus Center open; how you look up dining menus."

Haley Bass '15 tells her move-in story. snc.edu/go/magazine

Bonnie McVey (Computer Science) and Terry Jo Leiterman (Mathematics) were paired as faculty mentor and mentee when Leiterman arrived at St. Norbert five years ago. It was a meaningful connection that saw the start of an ongoing and productive friendship.

For new faculty, a new community

A radical welcome

By Tony Staley

Thanks to a unique faculty development program, new professors arriving on campus forge quick connections and find common ground in their new environment.

Tomas Bogardus (Philosophy) and Mara Brecht (Religious Studies) discovered a mutual interest while chatting at the college's New Faculty Orientation Program this summer.

Both had written doctoral dissertations on epistemology – the study of knowledge. Soon they were discussing potential collaboration on a conference or workshop examining religious disagreement and religious diversity.

That's not a lone example of the relationships the program fosters.

Bob Pyne (Peace and Justice) says he made close friends when he participated in the program in 2009: "I discovered some natural connections between others' work and mine. A couple of them have gotten involved in the peace and justice minor, which none of us had anticipated, and I have helped out in their classes and programs. There is a strong sense of collegiality, largely formed during those first few orientation times together."

Other sorts of bonds are also forged.

Bogardus and other new faculty set play dates for their young children, while Brecht says connections she made with new biology, sociology and library faculty mean "we can get to know each other more and have an impetus to get together more throughout the semester and the coming years."

Second-year faculty member Ryan Cordell (English) agrees. "The biggest benefit really is creating a cohort. I made a lot of friends with the other faculty who are coming in. They're my staple group who I always see at faculty meetings and other events. I think that really builds that sense of community here, to have not

I totally wanna travel abroad! The program looks so great and even if it was just a short trip, it'd be eye-opening enough.

The Bergstrom girls: officially friends.

I loooooove the FYE games. I might be in the minority of students who actually admit that ... but I think deep down everyone loves getting to know each other better.

“Probably for me the most useful part of the orientation was the extended process of welcome, a way of saying to new faculty and staff, ‘We care about you, we want you to succeed, we want you to be happy here.’”

— ED RISDEN (ENGLISH)

just your own discipline but also this group of people from other disciplines who you associate closely with.”

Third-year faculty member Tynisha Meidl (Education) says her cohort met informally for lunch to discuss various issues. “You feel you have this bond and sense of connection with others who are coming in at the same time.”

Cordell also found a racquetball partner — Blake Henson (Music) — and says discussing challenges they face is a big part of their games.

Building a cohort and encouraging collaboration have been aims of the New Faculty Orientation Program since it started in 1985, says Linda Beane Katner (Modern Languages and Literatures). The program fits into the office of faculty development’s mission of assisting in the professional and personal growth of full- and part-time faculty throughout their careers. The office does this by providing voluntary, confidential, individual consultation; a 1,800-volume library of professional materials; information on successful grant-writing; and funding for professional development conferences.

The college places such importance on faculty development that Beane Katner meets individually with each tenure-track candidate for 45 to 60 minutes. “It’s a privilege to be able to tell our story to the faculty candidates. They will see when they compare us to their other potential offers, wow, they’ve got something going on there.”

Several say the services described in those meetings were a factor in their decision to come to the college.

Once they arrive, new faculty gather in August for an intensive two-day workshop starting with breakfast at St. Norbert Abbey, where the Rev. Jay Fostner, O.Praem., ’84 (Mission and Student Affairs) discusses the college’s Norbertine roots and leads a tour.

Participants then move to the college for talks about student demographics, building a syllabus, surviving the first few weeks and other basic information. President Tom Kunkel and Dean Jeff Frick welcome them and host lunches.

Their considerable involvement in the program surprised Bogardus. “They were really around quite a bit, which was nice,” he says.

Kunkel says the program’s purpose is “to connect these important people to the heart of the community right from the start, and it works very well.”

The orientation allows administrators to talk about the college’s mission and why faculty are central to it, and to thank them for choosing St. Norbert. It also increases understanding of expectations, helps faculty learn the college’s culture, allows them to interact with experienced faculty, administrators and students, and gives them a taste of radical hospitality, Frick says.

Erik Brekke (Physics) connects with Jamie Lynch (Sociology) during one of the first workshops held for the 2011-12 cohort of new faculty members.

Ed Risdén (English), who participated in the program in 1990, says: “Probably for me the most useful part of the orientation was the extended process of welcome, a way of saying to new faculty and staff, ‘We care about you, we want you to succeed, we want you to be happy here,’ rather than any specific advice about things to do or things not to do. It was that sense of entering a community and feeling welcome there.”

Ken Zahorski (English, Emeritus) was the office’s founding director from its start in 1985 to 2006, when Beane Katner came on board. He says the program has always included new administrators and all new full-time and part-time faculty:

“Whether it was through new faculty orientation or any other program, I’ve always strongly believed that when faculty are given an opportunity to grow professionally and personally, the ultimate beneficiaries are the students.”

Beane Katner calls her role with the program the best job on campus. “This is all good,” she says. “I don’t evaluate people. It’s just about helping people achieve their full potential. We give out money. We offer these training opportunities. It’s very, very rewarding to help people reach their full potential.”

Faculty orientation also includes six 90-minute workshops during the first year and assignment of a mentor with whom to discuss professional and personal concerns.

Bogardus says his mentor, John Neary (English), was among the faculty members who helped his family move into their house.

Brecht’s mentor, Shalisa Collins (Modern Foreign Languages), texted her before her first class wishing her good luck. “That was really nice. It’s a simple thing, but it’s a really good way to start the day knowing that somebody here who has more experience is paying attention to you and keeping you in their thoughts.” ♣

When help arrives

By Kathleen (Greif) Berken ’71

If you want to help an area struck by disaster, then have a practical skill to offer and be ready to be self-sufficient. It’s sound advice from an obstetrician and dentist whose vacations the past eight years have found them delivering babies and practicing oral surgery in Haiti, Sri Lanka, Bosnia, Honduras and New Orleans.

Drs. Carol (Ehlinger) ’77 and Tom Ritter ’78 set up clinics, create medical team networks, raise money and try to foster lasting relationships with the people they serve. Their humanitarian aid trips last from a weekend to three weeks. Tom explains, “It’s a vacation for us to practice what we love to do without the barriers we face delivering healthcare in the States.”

The couple met at St. Norbert when they were each other’s lab instructors in chemistry and microbiology. Married in 1984, they moved to Baltimore for Carol’s residency at Johns Hopkins and Greater Baltimore Medical Center, where she is the director of minimally invasive surgery. Tom established a dental practice and the couple settled down to raise three children.

The Ritters undertook their first medical missions in 2004, when a team working in Honduras after Hurricane Mitch needed an obstetrician and a dentist to help.

Carol’s journey to assist in relief efforts in Sri Lanka after the 2004 tsunami pulled her away from the filming of “If the Bough Breaks,” the documentary the Ritters produced to educate the public on the rising costs of liability insurance — costs that are driving medical professionals away from their field.

The Ritter’s primary focus has been Haiti, since well before the 2010 earthquake hit. They have made some 20 humanitarian aid trips there since Carol’s parents first connected with the country, through the Rev. Larry Canavera’s Friends of Haiti group at St. Philip’s Church, Green Bay. “We went to Haiti because of my parents’ relationship with Father Larry and the church,” Carol says. “It’s been a love affair ever since.”

Besides helping to improve the Haitian dental school, Tom acts as a logistician who networks with medical teams, coordinates the flow of dental supplies, teaches and follows the care of patients. “We try not to be medical tourists,” Carol says. “We go back to the villages to follow up and monitor our treatment outcomes.”

Carol coordinates with local doctors in Haiti, does Pap smears for hundreds of Haitian women and takes the specimens back to Baltimore for analysis, returning to operate on the abnormal results. “There is an epidemic of aggressive cervical cancer in Haiti,” Carol says. Life expectancy for Haitian women is 45 and dropping. “We are trying to provide access for early detection since prevention with the HPV vaccine [alone] is unimaginable. We need to educate people so they can be active participants in their healthcare.”

Critical is finding local women to relay information to other women. “I try to be a voice for the voiceless — to help women empower each other,” Carol says.

Carol’s joy is delivering babies, because she gets to be the first person to touch the new arrivals. “This is all so much bigger than myself,” she says. Tom agrees: “You can wake up each day knowing that you can make a difference.” Sometimes that requires all one’s knowledge and skill. Other times, it’s simple: fixing a patient’s wheelchair, replacing inefficient cooking devices, introducing sterilization techniques.

Vital to the Ritters’ work is listening, paying attention, networking and “doing the right work for the right reasons to make the right changes.” It can be difficult not to overpromise what you can accomplish in Haiti or take on too many projects, they say.

After a disaster, medical aid workers often suffer from symptoms of post-traumatic stress disorder. Arriving three days after the 2010 earthquake, teams had to use Civil War methods to care for trauma victims and perform surgery in makeshift hospitals, using whatever was brought in their suitcases. Returning home can sometimes be the most difficult part. “People ask, ‘How was Haiti?’ but they really don’t want to hear the long answer,” says Tom.

However, the Ritters’ days at St. Norbert planted hopeful seeds. Grateful for the selfless service of the Norbertines, the Ritters are also guided by it. As Tom says: “So after you’ve developed a profession, expanded your mind, found God, attained bliss, found your passion ... what do you do the next day? To us, the answer seems universal across all religious and spiritual traditions: Give back. Serve others selflessly.”

Their next trip to Haiti will be in February 2012. ♣

The Rev. Gery Meehan, O.Praem., '57 recalls Abott Pennings in his later years. snc.edu/go/magazine

By William Hyland
Director of the Center for Norbertine Studies

When he first set foot on U.S. soil, the Dutch Norbertine priest Bernard Pennings likely had little idea that those first steps in a new world would lead, not five years later, to the founding of St. Norbert College.

A mixture of excitement and trepidation, common to all starting off on a new adventure, must have accompanied the Rev. Bernard Pennings, O.Praem., and his two Norbertine companions as they set off from Berne Abbey in the Netherlands on a chilly All Saints Day in 1893. It was the start of several weeks of travel to the remote frontier of northeast Wisconsin.

Bishop Messmer of Green Bay had contacted the abbot at Berne, asking him to send priests to help minister to the growing number of Belgian Catholics in what is now Wisconsin's Door Peninsula. Now three Norbertine volunteers – Pennings, the Rev. Lambert Broens, O.Praem., and Br. Servatius Heesackers, O.Praem. – were on their way to Wisconsin, with little knowledge of where they were going and what they were getting into.

In the frequent letters that the future Abbot Pennings sent home, the emotions that all travelers experience are evident, from the trio's last wistful gaze at the coast of Europe, to the wonder at the bustling sights of the New York harbor. While they were certainly impressed with the buildings and the great press of humanity they encountered, their European eyes were astounded by the egalitarian nature of the urban crowd in Hoboken, N.J., where they came ashore.

"The general impression we have gotten here far exceeds our expectations," Pennings wrote. "I don't think anything was being exaggerated in Holland when we heard strange things about America. It is beautiful, colossal, and so busy it is unbelievable. Nobody bothers anyone else, everybody goes his own way, or rather everyone takes the tram and rides. The most dignified gentlemen and ladies sit next to working men carrying a saw and plane."

Moving on to Chicago, and feeling a bit overwhelmed and very much outsiders, their trip took on a more human aspect when they met their fellow clergy among the passengers on the train from Chicago to Green Bay:

"... one of the passengers noticed that we were priests like himself and came up to us in a very friendly manner. After getting acquainted, we learned that Msgr. Katzer, the archbishop of Milwaukee, was sitting in the same coach, a few seats away from us; the latter told us that our new bishop, Msgr. Messmer of Green Bay, was on the same train and that he would introduce us to His Eminence as soon as he had finished his cigar! Words were followed by actions, and a quarter of an hour later we were standing in the presence of our most friendly Bishop Messmer, in whose company we now remain."

This friendly and casual time of conversation on a train heading north into the unknown was the beginning of a process of welcome as these Norbertines began to feel their way in this new world. They found rest and refreshment at the home of Bishop

Messmer, but soon it was time to head north by wagon to their mission in the Door Peninsula at Sturgeon Bay and Delwich:

"At 1 p.m. we embarked at the bishop's residence, wrapped ourselves in warm buffalo hides, a heavy scarf around our necks and a fur cap drawn

The earliest days at St. Norbert College.

I don't think anything was being exaggerated in Holland when we heard strange things about America. It is beautiful, colossal, and so busy it is unbelievable.

over our ears (winter had started the day before), and off we went. It was the strangest trip we had ever made, over hills and dales, over roads and rocks, over sandbars and tree trunks; at times an hour long in the midst of a wilderness, and all the while there was a good snowstorm, and always, at least most of the time, going at a trot. Sometimes the road was so bumpy that we and the luggage were catapulted into the air, and Fr. Lamberts and I burst out laughing. ... It is unbelievable that horses can go on such a route without resting. They were expecting us at Rosiere and welcomed us."

The rough and bumpy road, the warm welcome they received from the religious sisters, and their cozy but primitive living quarters all were indicative of the exciting but challenging tasks ahead. Their enthusiasm, success and perseverance as pastors among the immigrants soon led to more responsibilities and more Norbertines arriving from the Netherlands, and eventually to the foundation of an abbey and college in De Pere. The fact that the Norbertine presence and institutions would over time become an integral part of the life and culture of northeast Wisconsin may not have been evident as they jostled with the crowds in New York and Chicago, and traveled dubious roads through the Wisconsin countryside, wrapped in furs against the winter. Yet these impressive and lasting accomplishments all would grow from the seeds of human interaction and new friendships forged on these very first days in a new world. ♣

Deaths

1942 Robert Mitchell, of Mineral Point, Wis., died Feb. 26, 2011, at the age of 91. He served in the U.S. Air Force and later joined the family business at Mitchell True Value. He also served as a volunteer firefighter and was a member of the Mineral Point American Legion. He is survived by his wife, Ruth, and nine children.

1942 Dewey Decker, of De Pere, died March 18, 2011, at the age of 90. He received an ROTC commission as an officer of the U.S. Army 102nd infantry division and was awarded the Purple Heart and the Bronze Star with a gold V for valor after being wounded in action in Germany in 1944. He had a 45-year career in real estate as owner of Decker Realty and Decker Appraisal Service, and operated Green Bay's Riverside Ballroom with his family. He is survived by six children.

1946 James Habermann, of Joplin, Mo., died Oct. 9, 2010, at the age of 84. He served four years in the U.S. Army, achieving the rank of first lieutenant in the Airborne Infantry. Afterward, he worked in the medical field, mainly as a pathologist, until his retirement in 1991. He is survived by his wife, Helen, and five children.

1949 Clayton Toonen, of Green Bay, died March 4, 2011, at the age of 88. He served in the U.S. Army during World War II and was awarded the Purple Heart. He taught at Premontre High School and in 2008 published the novel "The Chess Game – A Game of Life." He is survived by five children.

1950 Kenneth Boye, of Greenville, S.C., died Oct. 19, 2010, at the age of 85. He was stationed in northern France during

Composing a Carnegie Hall experience

A rare opportunity will connect New York City alums with St. Norbert student musicians and a major living composer.

Students from all the college choirs will be working with England's John Rutter to present a performance of his "Magnificat" in Carnegie Hall next spring. Alumni living on the East Coast will be invited to a pre-concert reception. After the concert they will be able to join the choir contingent for a post-performance boat cruise around Lower Manhattan, with dancing and a buffet supper. Todd Danen '77 (Alumni and Parent Relations) says, "We think this will be a great evening, a wonderful opportunity for East Coast alums to connect – and not just with one another, but with our students at one of the highlights of their college career."

After the concert, they will be able to join the St. Norbert contingent for a post-performance boat cruise around Lower Manhattan, with dancing and a buffet supper.

The March 19 concert will see St. Norbert students join forces with the New England

Symphonic Ensemble and five other choirs, with Rutter as guest conductor. Ahead of the performance, they will spend two days in rehearsal with the composer himself.

Sarah Parks (Music) says: "The music community at St. Norbert has deep respect for the work of John Rutter, so for our students to be able to interact with the composer on his own composition is a remarkable opportunity.

"We work on a masterwork together as combined choirs, every other year, and this enhances the experience. Not only are we doing it for a public performance in our area, but we will be able to perform it a second time – and it's just exciting to be in a venue like Carnegie Hall with the composer conducting his own work."

More than 30 of our choral students are planning to make the trip. All members of the St. Norbert College Concert Choir, Men's Choir and Women's Choir will be learning Rutter's "Magnificat" for a March 6 performance on campus, ahead of the Carnegie Hall concert.

World War II and worked for 33 years as a salesman for Gerber. He was an avid golfer and guitar player. He is survived by his son, David '80, and daughter, Lora.

1950 Ervin Wright, of Green Bay, died Dec. 19, 2010, at the age of 84. He received a degree in accounting and served in the U.S. Navy during World War II. He is survived by his wife, Pat.

1950 Donald N. Schneider, of Fond du Lac, Wis., died Jan. 11, 2011, at the age of 85. He served in the U.S. Navy during World War II and the Korean War. He taught at St. Mary's Springs Academy for 10 years and later served as an educator and administrator at correctional facilities in Fox Lake, Wis., and Kettle Moraine, Wis. He is survived by three daughters.

1950 Richard Nelson, of Green Bay, died Feb. 26, 2011, at the age of 88. He served in the U.S. Army during World War II and worked as an elementary school principal in Ashwaubenton, Wis., for 37 years. He is survived by his wife, Mary Lou, and five children.

1950 Darrell Gallenberger, of Wichita Falls, Texas, died March 26, 2011, at the age of 82. He served in the U.S. Air Force for 30 years. He also set 11 state records and two American records in powerlifting. He is survived by his wife, Lois, and two children.

1951 Richard Leitermann, of Wauwatosa, Wis., died Jan. 21, 2011, at the age of 81. He served in the U.S. Army and later worked for A.C. Spark Plug. He is survived by his wife, Patricia, and six children.

Alumni connections are now virtually effortless

Finding long-lost college friends used to call for serious investigative skills. Now that social media sites make it as simple as a few mouse clicks, the office of alumni and parent relations is providing new ways for Green Knights to connect with its staff, and each other.

On Facebook, 1,344 people have liked the St. Norbert College Alumni page thus far. Visitors to the page can find everything from information on upcoming alumni events to questions that are plaguing fellow grads, like this one from Robert Strang '78: "Whatever happened to the circus sculpture that was donated to the college in the late '70s?"

The St. Norbert College Alumni and Friends group on LinkedIn has hosted several discussions among alums in cities from San Francisco to Philadelphia. Green Knights also have posted job opportunities on the site and exchanged campus memories of Packers training camp.

And the SNC Alumni Twitter feed gives grads a window on campus life. Links to media coverage of the college and its alumni, as well as photos of campus events, help keep Green Knights connected to their alma mater.

For information on all the alumni office's virtual networking opportunities, visit www.snc.edu/alumni/networking.html.

Jack Riopelle '68 says De Peaux was always available to the group. "He gained such enormous respect and love from the fraternity brothers because he is such a gentle man, and such a smart man, and someone who always made sure you went down the straight and narrow. He was just such a guiding light for all of us and also for the girlfriends, who were also attending St. Norbert – and many of them became wives."

Rapping to the Ancient Greeks

This semester's production of Aristophanes' "The Birds" is scripted from a new translation by Joel Mann (Philosophy). Mann is working with director Stephen Rupsch (Theatre Studies) to update the humor of the original Greek comedy while still keeping Aristophanes' main themes intact.

"In one of the choruses, there's a reference to this man selling chicken on a stick who the birds want to run out of town," said Mann. "We changed it so the birds run Colonel Sanders out of town."

Rupsch says, "The text is full of things appropriate for this place and time, and full of really funny shtick, so there's modern references all over the place."

Working in collaboration with classical studies minor Elizabeth Jolly '12, Mann has been taking a close look at the choruses for specific patterns suitable for Michael Rosewall (Music) and Blake Henson (Music) to adapt to contemporary musical genres.

"The plan is to use fun and rhythmic speaking parts," says Rosewall, "using percussion and sound elements that are used in hip hop and Stomp to recreate the excitement, fun and audience involvement of the original production – for modern audiences. [We] are looking forward to seeing the script and working to create a soundscape that matches Dr. Rupsch's conception of 'The Birds' for the 21st century."

Seven: a most literate number

Seven books + one department + one year = incredible. Yet that's just what the English department has accomplished. Six professors wrote or edited seven books that were published, or are about to be published, this year.

"There's a culture of scholarship among the English faculty that is pretty impressive," says Michael Marsden (English), co-editor of "Westerns: The Essential 'Journal of Popular Film and Television' Collection" (Routledge, 2012). "And it's a good example of why the argument that teaching and scholarship are not complementary is wrong. They are."

But is there more to it than that? Is there some kind of synergy among staff members spurring such creativity? Yes, says Marsden, to some degree. While he and his colleagues are fairly independent and don't typically discuss their work at staff meetings or, say, ask each other for editing assistance, they'll casually chat about their projects over coffee or at social gatherings. And there's a strong undercurrent of support, says Marsden, which is invaluable.

Laurie MacDiarmid (English) agrees. Her new book, "Consolation Prize" (Georgetown Review Press, 2012), is a collection of poems about her family's life after her father's death when she was not quite two years old. She had written nearly all of the poems before she arrived at St. Norbert in 2000 and had been trying to get them published for years. So while she didn't find her creative impetus in her colleagues, she says, "What this place gave me was the encouragement to send it out over and over again."

MacDiarmid also credits her students for her success: "The push to publish is arduous and soul-killing. But then I had a moment where I realized, I can't be standing in front of my students saying they should write every day, and have a thick skin [about getting rejected], so I sent it out one more time."

That's when her submission bested more than 300 entries to win the 2011 Georgetown Review Poetry Manuscript Contest.

Although Marsden says the group's sudden slew of published books is "so unusual" and "like an alignment of the stars," he's already at work on another book, his 12th.

Along with Marsden and MacDiarmid, English professors with recently published books include:

Karlyn Crowley, author of "Feminism's New Age: Gender, Appropriation, and the Afterlife of Essentialism" (State University of New York Press, 2011).

John Neary, author of "Shadows and Illuminations: Literature as Spiritual Journey" (Sussex Academic Press, 2011).

John Pennington '80, co-editor of "Behind the Back of the North Wind: Critical Essays on George MacDonald's Classic Children's Book" (Winged Lion Press, 2011) and "At the Back of the North Wind" (Broadview Press, 2011).

Ed Ridsen, author of "A Consideration of Anglo-Saxon Humor" (Mellen Press, forthcoming).

■ Need to send a robot to work in a burning building? There's an app for that, thanks to the work of Ravikant Agarwal (Computer Science), Derek Harrington '12 and Christopher Gusman '12. During a nine-week research experience at Hope College this summer, the team developed an Android application that can stream audio and video to a robot – technology that is useful in any space where human mobility is restricted, as it could be in a mine, or at an accident scene.

■ Seminars at the United Nations were part of the experience for Olivia Poepping '13 and Kara Hirner '13 at this year's Path to Peace Foundation conference on Catholic social teaching. Among lectures from senior officials and representatives, they heard from the Most Rev. Archbishop Francis Chullikat, permanent observer of the Holy See to the U.N.

■ Zach Broberg '15 is hoping to turn a high school project into a full-fledged business. The first-year student's Stay Fit Health Kit placed fifth at nationals in the annual DECA (Distributive Education Clubs of America) contest for student entrepreneurs. The $89.99 kit, already available at www.stayfithealthkit.com, includes equipment for basic health checks and is intended to help people recognize and manage health concerns before they escalate.

■ Rath scholarships of $10,000 each have been awarded to Carrie Roberts '12 and Caitlin Petersen '13.

■ Phi Delta Theta has recognized the St. Norbert chapter with its Silver Chapter Award, GHQ Trophy and Recruitment Award. Eric Sallmann '13, president, and Guy Allen '13, treasurer, represented the chapter at the fraternity's national Emerging Leaders Institute, held at Miami University this summer.

■ An internship experience and a scholarship connected when Emily Collins '12 was able to work in the human resources department at AAR Corp's national branch outside of Chicago. Collins, beneficiary of one of the corporation's annual scholarships, was not the first Green Knight to intern at the company: Luke Howe '09 benefited from the same opportunity. Timothy Romenesko '79 is president and COO of AAR Corp, a supplier to the worldwide aerospace and defense industry.

■ Katy Coutley '12 will present her research at the 20th National McNair Research Conference this fall. Coutley is working with Betsy Bauman (Religious Studies) to analyze the possible liberating aspects of the story of Hagar in the Hebrew Bible, and she will teach a section of Bauman's Intro to the Bible class, on Women in the Hebrew Bible. Bauman says: "Katy's project is one that she can build on in graduate school and beyond, particularly in light of her understanding of the complexities of translation, hermeneutics, and the tensions that surround women's religious experiences and who writes about them. We are extremely proud of our religious studies students!"

■ A St. Norbert team has won the annual weekend-long Third Army ROTC Brigade Ranger Challenge at Fort McCoy, Wis. On the five-man team were Todd Winkelbauer '12, Austin McGuine '12, Michael Hillsman '12, Scott Delsart '13 and Patrick Ziesmer '13, with Zach Benkert '14 as alternate. Sergeant First Class Donald Garmong trained the team.

■ Bojan Francuz '13 is the first St. Norbert student to study in Amman, Jordan, thanks in part to a $2,500 scholarship from the School for International Training Study Abroad (SIT). Francuz, an international student from Serbia, is partnering with SIT for a semester that will include homestays with a family resident in the capital and a Bedouin family in the desert region of Badia.

Others among the 68 St. Norbert students studying abroad this semester are also benefiting from funding to support their travel. Alyssa Wolan '13, in Toledo, Spain, is supported with $4,500 from the Benjamin A. Gilman International Scholarship, and Deven Scherer '13, in Lancaster, England, with $2,500 from the same fund. A $750 travel stipend from St. Norbert is assisting many others in this, the college's largest fall cohort ever to study abroad.

■ The impact of social networking policies in the workforce is the subject of a new research project undertaken by Matthew Stollak (Business Administration), Kevin Scribner '13 and Jordan Zeni '13. The project is among several supported by new grants from the St. Norbert Collaborative.

■ A trip to the Optimist International Convention in Baltimore opened doors for Hannah Loppnow '13 and Kathy Gordon '13, co-presidents of the St. Norbert Optimists. Loppnow says: "Our club is only a few years old, but this has been a persisting goal, to make it to a convention. It has taken the club various leaders and years to come up with the money and support to send us, and we are so grateful to have been given the opportunity.

"Next year, the convention will be in Milwaukee, Wisconsin, so we will definitely try to attend that. We have also been contacted to see if we would like a college breakout session so we can focus on how to successfully run a college club. We might even have the opportunity to facilitate part of this!"

The St. Norbert club works to develop opportunities through which students can benefit children in the community.

■ Elected to this year's Student Government Association executive board for the 2011-12 school year are Joe Susag '12 (president); Joe Jones '12 (finance coordinator); Molly Hansen '14 (student assembly chair); David Prosper '13 (vice president for student relations); and Adam Warner '12 (vice president for college affairs).

Student revives organ music at Sunday Mass

Emily Bielinski '12 did not set out on a mission to reintegrate the organ into worship music, but that's precisely what she does every Sunday at Old St. Joseph Church. The results, according to music ministry coordinator Jennifer McAllister '94, are beautiful.

When Bielinski arrived at St. Norbert, she enrolled in organ lessons not only to continue her progress on the instrument but also to meet other people who were interested in the organ. "It was hard in high school," Bielinski says, "because I had nobody to share that passion with."

Since then, she's not only found other students and professors who share her enthusiasm, but also works toward cultivating the same love for organ music in those around her. The music ministry at Old St. Joseph Church provides a weekly outlet for her to do just that.

"Many Catholic churches do not even have organs anymore," says Bielinski. "Old St. Joseph Church has a beautiful instrument in our space, and I fully believe that it needs to be used."

Bielinski certainly seizes the opportunity to incorporate the organ into Mass. "Emily is not shy about her love of organ," says McAllister. "She often has me listen to a piece that I am not sure will work on organ, but more often than not, it works beautifully."

Bielinski admits that the process of reintegrating organ music into Masses has been gradual. "I started slow, playing only the traditional songs such as 'Now Thank We All Our God.' The more I got to know Jennifer, the more she began to trust me to try new pieces on the organ. I started to introduce more contemporary songs on the organ, such as 'City of God.'"

"Most importantly," Bielinski states, "we both try to find something that works for Old St. Joe's, that fits liturgically, yet is musically interesting to the parish."

Bielinski's weekly organ lessons with Jeff Verkuilen (Music) give her the basis she needs to play well each Sunday. "Emily's skills and confidence have improved considerably as a leader and accompanist of congregation and solo singing," says Verkuilen.

When Bielinski holds her senior recital on Nov. 11 at St. Norbert Abbey, she will demonstrate not only her technical ability but also her training in leading congregational music, as she directs the audience in a hymn.

A recipe for communio, served up at SNC Day

SNC Day is a chance to show the local community the best the college has to offer – and, this year, an impromptu bake sale was part of that. Kayla Stuckey '15 took the opportunity to mount the sale to raise funds for a family from her hometown whose barn burned down, costing them 3,500 bales of hay and almost all their farm equipment. The family has 18 children, and Stuckey had worked closely with several who have special needs. She said: "It's in my nature to help people who need it. When SNC Day came, it was a great opportunity to raise money and get the word out because there would be so many people there. The family means so much to me, so I wanted to help them."

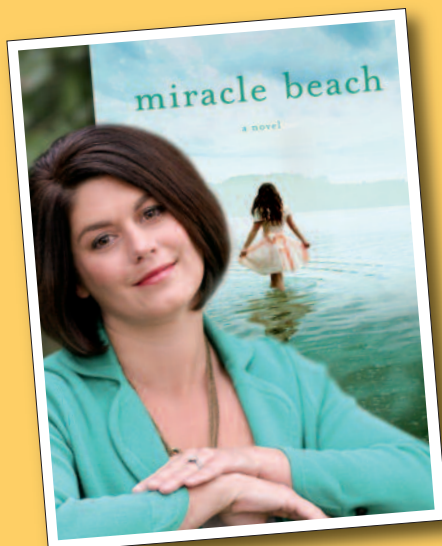

Stuckey's mom and her friends helped bake, and the sale, held out on the mall among the student org booths, raised $364. Along the way, she also raised awareness and appreciation for the college's emphasis on responsibility to the wider world. One man stopped by her booth and asked if she was the girl raising money for a family's burned barn. Stuckey says, "That [question] stood out to me because it showed that people were spreading the word about my work." Another customer donated $20. He said he had not planned on spending money that day, but thought Stuckey's cause deserved the donation.

To continue raising funds, Stuckey is working with Marcia LaSalle '15 as part of a Connections project to host a concert on campus. Stuckey says: "I don't care about the credit; I just want to know that I've helped someone. It really means a lot to me."

A novel setting

Scenes that play out against a familiar backdrop move forward the action of "Miracle Beach" (Penguin, 2011). Magda Allen, a character in the debut novel of Erin Celello '99, lives in De Pere, a half-mile away from St. Norbert College. Allen's interactions with the college are largely interior, as she attempts to reconcile the loss of her only son. In one particular scene, she stops along the stretch of the Fox River near the Campus Center. She watches students running across the Main Street bridge, and the rowing team practicing. Initials carved into the bench of a picnic table serve to remind her of an earlier time in her marriage, and allow her to question her son's relationship with his widow.

The novel centers around the two relationships called to mind by those carved initials: Allen's own deteriorating marriage, and her daughter-in-law's abruptly ended one. A significant part of the rest of the novel, which chronicles a family's struggle with loneliness and loss, takes place on Vancouver Island, a locale familiar to Celello from summer vacations.

Celello majored in English at St. Norbert, where she also ran track and was an editor of the St. Norbert Times. She earned an M.F.A. in fiction from Northern Michigan University. She now lives in Madison, Wis., with her husband, Aaron, and is working on a second novel.

1954 Robert Bonacci, of Las Vegas, Nev., died April 3, 2011, at the age of 82. He taught high school science and later worked as a chemist and pharmacist. He is survived by five children.

1956 Francis Tremel, of Green Bay, died Jan. 7, 2011, at the age of 76. He served in the U.S. Army and later was employed by Charmin/Procter & Gamble until his retirement in 1994. He was a member of the Dudley Birder Chorale and the Sounds Fantastic. He is survived by his wife, Jean, two children and his brother, the Rev. 1956 Robert Fitzgerald, of New London, Wis., died Feb. 19, 2011, at the age of 81. He served in the U.S. Army during the Korean War. He taught in Shiocton for 15 years, was the editor of the New London Press-Star and worked as a reporter for the Appleton (Wis.) Post-Crescent. He is survived by two siblings.

1957 Harry Lemerond, of Suamico, Wis., died Jan. 19, 2011, at the age of 76. He served in the U.S. Army and later worked for 30 years as the finance director for Brown County. He is survived by his wife, Patricia, and three children.

1959 Jim Vander Pas, of Verona, Wis., died March 15, 2011, at the age of 73. He worked for several insurance companies, including his 30 years with Home Mutual/Secura Insurance. He is survived by his wife, Barb, and seven children.

1960 Mary Jo Leaper, of Green Bay, died Jan. 23, 2011, at the age of 73. She taught in public schools in Green Bay and Syracuse, N.Y. She is survived by her daughter.

1961 James Delaney, of Madison, Wis., died Jan. 20, 2011, at the age of 71. He served as an infantry company commander in the U.S. Marines. He worked for Texaco and eventually owned and operated his own Texaco service station in Madison. Later, he founded Delaney's Charcoal Steaks and was a two-time Wisconsin Restaurant Association Restaurateur of the Year. He is survived by his wife, Eileen, three children and two stepchildren.

1961 Steven Aschenbrener, of Shawano, Wis., died March 29, 2011, at the age of 71. After graduating from the University of Wisconsin Law School, he practiced law, first with his father, Ed, and later with his brother Dan. He is survived by four children.

1964 Gerald Kaye, of Nashville, Tenn., died Dec. 30, 2010, at the age of 67. He held product management and marketing positions with several companies before starting his first company in 1978. He went on to develop several successful businesses and help others do the same. He is survived by his wife, June, and two children.

1964 Timothy Killeen, of Chanhassen, Minn., died May 5, 2011, at the age of 68. He served in the U.S. Marine Corps Reserve and was actively involved with Los Amigos, a charity assisting the people of Chimbote, Peru. He is survived by his wife, Jan, and three children.

1971 Lois Van Dyk, of Santa Fe, N.M., died on March 14, 2011, at the age of 92. She spent her life traveling the world and lived the last 25 years of her life in the Southwest. She is survived by five children.

1972 Mary De Ruyter, of Santa Fe, N.M., died Dec. 20, 2010, at the age of 61. She was employed as a graphic artist for various companies. She is survived by four children.

1972 The Rev. Jack Druding, of Atlanta, died Feb. 12, 2011, at the age of 74. He attended St. Mary's Seminary and was ordained to serve in the Atlanta Archdiocese in 1976. He served in several parishes in the Atlanta area and was a founder of Interfaith Airport Chaplaincy at Hartsfield International Airport. He retired in 2005. He is survived by a brother.

1978 Ellen Zettel, of Green Bay, died March 4, 2011, at the age of 54. She started her career as a newspaper reporter, moved to public relations, then corporate relations, and held senior positions at several Fortune 500 companies. She is survived by two siblings.

1979 Bryan Zolfo, of Geneva, Wis., died Feb. 24, 2011, at the age of 53. He was the owner of Integrated Marketing in Geneva. He is survived by his wife, Tammy, two children and his parents.

1992 Craig Antonissen, of Kaukauna, Wis., died Jan. 22, 2011, at the age of 41. He was employed by the IRS. He is survived by his wife, Penny, two children and his parents.

Natural transition

By Melanie Radzicki McManus '83

By day, Ashley Prange '05 mediates mineral disputes. By night, her focus is on other pure minerals: They are the ingredients for her line of natural cosmetics.

When Prange was a political science major at St. Norbert, she knew exactly what she wanted to do: work on Capitol Hill. With the help of Gratzia Villarroel (Political Science), she arranged an internship working on policy and international issues with then-Rep. Patrick Kennedy. The minute she picked up her diploma, she returned to Washington to work on uranium dispute mediation at the U.S. Nuclear Regulatory Commission (NRC).

After hours, though, Prange has been working to launch her own company, Au Naturele Cosmetics. This past year, she's lined up investors, talked to lawyers and filled out copious paperwork. "I should have gone to school for business," she says, a bit ruefully.

Prange's dual career as public servant and businesswoman is right in line with entrepreneurial tendencies already evident during her undergraduate career. At St. Norbert, she helped create the Zambia Project, which raises money to educate Zambian children. And, she worked with the study abroad office to set up a program with the University of Cape Town, just so she could study there.

While Prange loves her work, over time she has realized her true passion is health and wellness, a topic that has fascinated her since childhood. The impetus? Make-up.

Several years ago, Prange began hearing a lot about mineral make-up. Unlike traditional petroleum-based make-up, which seeps into one's pores, mineral make-up merely sits on top of one's skin. As someone with self-proclaimed "terrible skin," Prange was intrigued.

Unfortunately, she discovered the products usually weren't crafted from pure minerals and were loaded with cheap fillers like talc, which isn't a good thing to be inhaling all day; in fact, some studies link talcum powder to cancer.

So Prange mixed up her own products, swapping out the unhealthy fillers for pure, crushed minerals, and creating creamy products and lipsticks with natural ingredients like jojoba, castor and coconut oils.

She liked what they did for her own skin. Friends and colleagues tried her products and loved them, as did associates in the fashion industry. Soon there was such a positive buzz, "It seemed wrong not to take the concept farther," she says. And Au Naturele was born.

Prange formally launches her company online this fall. AuNatureleCosmetics.com offers everything from creamy foundation and loose powder to blusher, lip gloss, eye shadow and more. All products are crafted from pure minerals and natural ingredients, and no animal products are used. Further, unlike most cosmetics, which are packaged in China, Au Naturele products come wrapped in biodegradable packaging designed and manufactured in the U.S., so they'll not only be natural and vegan, but also green.

Prange's passion for her new career direction is obvious, as is her pride in creating a beneficial product. "Most lipstick is made from [petroleum-based] lipstick oil and crushed crustaceans! But nothing in any of my make-up is harmful. People see a big change in their skin after using it two to three weeks."

Eventually, Prange hopes to donate a portion of Au Naturele's proceeds to her beloved Zambia Project. And she wants current students and alumni to know they should always follow their passion.

"Wellness was always important to me, but I didn't know how I'd make a living at it, so I never considered it as a career," she says. "Now I realize, if you have a drive for something, you'll be successful." ♣

Adjustment in service

A new chapter begins for retiring military chaplains

By Jeff Kurowski

After more than four decades of combined military service on land, in the air and on the sea, the Rev. Steven Vanden Boogard, O.Praem., '81 and the Rev. Michael Weber, O.Praem., are adjusting to retired life.

Vanden Boogard, a Kimberly native, was ordained a priest in 1988. Five years later, he was commissioned in the U.S. Navy Reserve, marking a return to the military. He had earlier served as a hospital corpsman from 1972 to 1978, during the Vietnam War era.

"I did a little over 22 years with active duty and reserves," he says. "I spent a little over five years on the decks of ships. I sailed everything from harbor tugs to nuclear-propelled aircraft carriers and everything in between."

Vanden Boogard, who served both the U.S. Navy and Marines, recalls one year that he spent 330 days at sea. His land deployments included service at Guantanamo Bay, Cuba, and with the 5th Marine Regiment in Iraq. The ministry was rewarding but very demanding, he says.

"The biggest challenge was there were very few priests," he says. "For instance, in Iraq, you've got a geographical area that's bigger than Green Bay, yet you are the only priest. When I was there, I had four battalions of Marines and an Army brigade of soldiers. Plus I had 1,500 of my own personal Marines scattered all over Fallujah."

In addition to celebrating Masses and the sacraments, Vanden Boogard was called upon to minister to soldiers and sailors dealing with personal problems, including marital issues, and drug and alcohol dependency. While serving on the USS John F. Kennedy, he was also the point person for anger-management issues.

"Everything you find in society you find on the ship," he says, "but you can't refer them to someone. You are at the end of the line."

Health problems led to Vanden Boogard's retirement from the military. The lieutenant commander's final assignment was as the Catholic chaplain at the Marine Corps base at Quantico, Va.

Vanden Boogard currently celebrates Masses at St. Norbert Abbey and area parishes. In 2012, he hopes to study at the Catholic Theological Union in Chicago, with plans to serve as a spiritual director.

Weber joined the U.S. Air Force after experiencing an epiphany of sorts while teaching psychology at St. Norbert.

"It was an Intro to Psych course in one of the large lecture rooms," he says. "There were 100 or so students. I gave a quiz, mostly for attendance purposes. I was looking up at the students.

The Rev. Weber, O.Praem.

The Rev. Vanden Boogard, O.Praem., '81

I was 27 at the time. I thought to myself, 'I know more psychology than they do, but I may not know a lot more about life experiences.' I liked teaching, but I really felt that I needed some life experiences."

Despite being the son of a Marine who served in World War II, the armed forces didn't initially appeal to Weber.

"I wanted to expand my horizons," he says, "so I had to do something I didn't want to do."

Weber was commissioned to the Air Force in 1987. He worked in hospital settings, handled administration and wrote regulations. Deployment took him to the Middle East. In Kabul, Weber worked with the Islamic Republic of Afghanistan, assisting with religious support efforts. He experienced the violence of war firsthand on May 19, 2010, during a frontline Taliban attack in Bagram, Afghanistan, that killed a U.S. contractor and wounded nine service members.

"A couple days before the attack there was a warehouse fire about 200 feet from where I was located," says Weber. "It exploded. We thought we were under attack. We didn't know the cause of the fire. I was thinking about how best to minister to others with the situation you find yourself in, realizing that you are under attack. How do you best take care of others while protecting yourself?"

He says one of the most rewarding aspects of his military service was assisting the enlisted members with family issues.

"It's difficult for them to be away from their spouses and families," he says. "You try to help keep people refreshed mentally and spiritually."

Weber retired as a lieutenant colonel in March of 2011. The native of Lake Benton, Minn., says he is enjoying prayer life at St. Norbert Abbey. He plans to help out at parishes, do some volunteer work and become more involved at St. Norbert College. ♣

■ Brother Steve Herro, O.Praem., '85 has been appointed manager of mission and ministry at Catholic Charities USA in Alexandria, Va. In his new role, Herro provides support for persons involved in parish social ministry throughout the U.S. and offers continuing formation for Catholic Charities agencies and staff on matters related to Catholic social teaching, mission and identity.

■ On the Feast of St. Augustine, Aug. 28, Frater Matthew Dougherty, O.Praem., '09 professed Simple Vows at St. Norbert Abbey. Fraters Jaime Avila-Borunda, O.Praem., Graham Golden, O.Praem., and Stephen Gaertner, O.Praem., '98 professed Simple Vows at Our Lady of the Most Holy Rosary Church in Albuquerque, N.M. The four novices continue their studies at Catholic Theological Union, residing at the Norbertine House of Studies in Chicago.

■ The Rev. Al McBride, O.Praem., '50 has received the National Conference for Catechetical Leadership Award. McBride, who has written more than 40 books and 200 articles on topics ranging from Church history to the lives of the saints to the interpretations of the Gospels, is recognized for his decades of work in promoting catechesis through his teaching, writing and speaking.

■ Though St. Norbert Abbey is a well-recognized landmark in De Pere, it is not necessarily well understood, even by longtime community members. The Norbertines set out to change that with the May 2009 introduction of Abbey Magazine. The biannual publication, distributed throughout the community, on campus and to friends of the abbey worldwide, illumines life at the abbey and welcomes readers into that life, mind and spirit.

The magazine's launch coincided with the 50th anniversary of the opening of the current abbey on its East De Pere site.

Content includes features on Norbertine life, profiles of individual Norbertines, briefs on ministries at the abbey's priories in Mississippi and New Mexico, and a spiritual essay, typically published in both English and Spanish.

Those interested in subscribing may e-mail the abbey's public relations coordinator, Judy Turba '76, at stnorbertabbeypr@gmail.com. Abbey Magazine can also be viewed at www.norbertines.org.

Finishing strong

By Jeff Kurowski

No one would have questioned Brigette Baudhuin '12 if she chose to walk away from basketball, but that's not in her nature. This season, the senior forward from Brussels, Wis., is determined to finish what she started.

Baudhuin suffers from psoriatic arthritis. She was diagnosed with the condition the summer before her junior year at Southern Door High School, when she noticed unusual symptoms after returning from a family vacation in Mexico. "My joints started swelling really badly where I couldn't get out of bed in the morning," she says. "My mom would have to roll me out of bed."

Baudhuin, who also was a standout volleyball player in high school, feared that her days as an athlete were over. Dr. David Keim, a rheumatologist, believed otherwise. "He was very up front with me and very positive," says Baudhuin. "He said, 'We are going to get you back on the court.' Within a month, I was back on the court."

Baudhuin's pain and discomfort vary day to day. She struggles on humid, rainy and frigid days. Swelling in her fingers and knees affects her ability to catch the basketball and run the court, yet she perseveres.

"I've been battling through it," she says. "My teammates are there for me. They know what I'm going through and are so supportive. I try to internalize it and deal with it myself. Everyone has issues that they have to deal with in life. It doesn't define who I am." Regular injections administered by her mother, Connie – Baudhuin's youth basketball coach – help treat the inflammatory arthritis and have forced Baudhuin to overcome her fear of needles. "I used to pass out when I got shots," she says. "Every time a needle came near me I would faint."

Right now, Baudhuin is happy to be playing the game she loves. "When I was diagnosed, I wasn't thinking about playing college basketball," she says. "I was thinking about if I was going to be able to walk or hold a toothbrush in the morning. When buttoning your jeans becomes a challenge, you definitely rethink athletics, but I don't know what I would do without sports. They really are a big part of my life."

"It's remarkable what she puts up with in order to play," says women's basketball coach Connie Tilley. "She is one of our captains this season and is a total team player. It's a demanding game at this level. We demand so much from a defensive standpoint, and Brigette never complains. I'm just so proud that she's able to live a dream."

Baudhuin suffered a physical setback last season. She tried playing with a stress fracture in her foot, but in the third game of the season the bone fractured completely. She missed four weeks. Baudhuin is hoping for a healthy and successful final collegiate season. "I really want to contribute," says Baudhuin. "I want to help motivate the underclassmen. Being selected a captain means a lot to me. It's great that Coach Tilley respects me enough to put that trust in me and that my teammates believe in my leadership enough that they put me in that position. I hope I do good things for the program."

"I can't even give you in words how impressed I am by her as a person," says Tilley. "People like Brigette are the reason I became a coach."

The St. Norbert women are two-time defending conference champions. Winning a third consecutive title would be a rewarding way to go out, says Baudhuin, one of three seniors (along with Krista Pelky '12 and Jamie Kuhl '12). "These are your sisters for life," she says of her teammates. "You take a sense of pride in working hard every day. No one sees us practice hard every day for two to three hours in the gym."

Ireland awaits Green Knight football

The Emerald Isle will get a little greener when St. Norbert competes in Dublin next year. The season-opening game sees the Green Knights take on John Carroll University as part of the Global Ireland Football Tournament – an event also featuring a Notre Dame-Navy face-off.

The game marks the first time St. Norbert will compete outside North America, and only the second time a Green Knight team has played outside of the continental U.S. (The St. Norbert hockey team took to the ice at the University of Alaska Fairbanks in 1997.)

"This will be a wonderful educational opportunity for our student-athletes," says Coach Jim Purtill. "This experience will be great for those who might not normally get a chance to travel abroad, in not only an athletic setting but an educational one as well." More information is available at www.snc.edu/athletics.

Green Knights net television coverage

MYNEW32 (WACY-TV) is televising 25 Green Knight athletic events to Time Warner Cable subscribers in northeastern Wisconsin. Already broadcast are five football games. Scheduled for the remainder of the 2011-12 academic year are six men's hockey games, four women's hockey games, five football games, five men's basketball games and five women's basketball games. "To have this many live event telecasts is very unique for a Division III institution," says athletics director Tim Bald.

Norby Knight promotes TV coverage. snc.edu/go/magazine

The station is providing a state-of-the-art production van, complete with instant replay, five cameras and professional crew. Long-time area sports broadcaster Ted Stefaniak handles play-by-play, with assistance from Tim Derozier '95 for hockey broadcasts.

Two-time champs see more success ahead

By Jeff Kurowski

Eight newly graduated Green Knight skaters have become very familiar with their ring sizes. Blake Bashor '11, Mike Bernardy '11, Adam Hammerbeck '11, Taylor Langford '11, Brandon Longley '11, Scott Pulak '11, Nick Tabisz '11 and Dustin Walz '11 captured their second NCAA Division III hockey national championship last season. The group also was part of the 2008 title team in their first season at St. Norbert.

"I don't think as a freshman that you appreciate it as much," says Pulak. "We had so much success right away that you think it's going to happen every year. The struggle the next year and building the team back up as juniors and seniors makes you appreciate the hard work that goes into it."

The former players anticipate a challenging transition from the ice to the stands. Bernardy, who is working in finance in De Pere, says that he likely will only attend big rivalry matchups.

"I don't think I will be at all of the games," he says. "It will be too depressing not being out there."

"I don't think it's going to set in until everyone else is stepping on the ice and we are on the outside looking in," says Hammerbeck, who is enrolled in the Marquette University School of Dentistry. "I don't think we will ever get out of the game. A hockey player can never completely remove himself from the game."

The two-time champs like the prospects for the 2011-12 Green Knights, despite the loss of a large number of key contributors.

"I think they are going to have a good opportunity," says Pulak. "They are still returning a strong corps of players. If they go in with the right attitude and aren't complacent, they have a great chance of getting back to the Frozen Four again."

"At St. Norbert it's never really a rebuilding process," says Hammerbeck. "It's retooling, refining things a little bit."

The success of past teams sets the foundation for the future, says Bernardy.

"Coach [Tim Coghlin] sees each player as a piece of the puzzle and he knows where to put them," Bernardy says. "I feel that we left a legacy here that will bring in more talent that wants to win. They see that we won two national titles and played in a third. We built a legacy here on top of an already storied program."

"We are just a part of the legacy," says Pulak. "So many great players came before us to establish this program. We won two national championships but are still just a small part of it. There's going to be more to come."

2005 Under the leadership of Ted Ziemann, Zesty's Frozen Custard & Grill tied with Allouez Café for the Allouez (Wis.) Business Association's inaugural Excellence in Business Award in the small business category.

2005 Patricia Kasten was featured in The Compass, the newspaper of the Catholic Diocese of Green Bay. The article focused on her book "Linking Your Beads: The Rosary's History, Mysteries, and Prayers."

2006 Nicholas Padilla returns to St. Norbert College as an adjunct instructor of geography. He is working on his Ph.D. at the University of Wisconsin-Milwaukee.

2006 Erin Gibbons has received a master's degree in curriculum and instruction with an ESL endorsement from Concordia University Chicago.

2006 Andrea (Lee) Schultz has received a master's degree in teaching from the University of Southern California.

2006 Colleen (Dukinfield) Griepentrog has received a Master of Music Education degree from VanderCook College of Music in Chicago. She graduated with a 4.0 GPA and earned an honors designation for her master's project.

2007 Krista Perine has been appointed the first National Alumnae Association president for Kappa Beta Gamma (KBG) International Sorority. She is now on KBG's executive board and oversees all alumnae of Kappa Beta Gamma.

2008 Danielle DuFour is director and lead choreographer for the Milwaukee Mustangs Fillies dance team.

2008 Hannah-Mae Wick has accepted a position as a graphic designer for Sargento Foods.

2009 Brittany Wollitz shared her account of the recent earthquake in Japan, where she was teaching kindergarten.

2010 Jenny Scherer, former Green Knight track champion, is running professionally, focusing on 10K through marathon distances. She also works at Hansons-Brooks Distance Project as a running-shoe salesperson.

2010 Kim Hansen is teaching English with the Peace Corps in Cape Verde, Africa.

2010 Ashley Knoke is studying for her master's in criminal justice at Virginia Commonwealth University.

2010 Samantha Christian joined the Watertown Daily Times as a reporter and photographer.

2011 Nate Wine has accepted a position as major accounts district sales manager at ADP in Dearborn, Mich.

2011 Jessica Dorfler has accepted a position with public accounting firm Reilly, Penner & Benton. Her practice focuses on school choice audits.

2011 B.J. O'Brien, former Green Knight hockey goaltender, has signed a contract to play with the Rio Grande Valley Killer Bees of the Central Hockey League.

2011 Chelsea Weirich has been accepted at the University of Wisconsin-Milwaukee's Zilber School of Public Health.

■ If you caught "The Today Show" Sept 8, you couldn't help but notice that St. Norbert College was all over the program, which was themed around the NFL season-opening game that evening. Our cheerleaders greeted Matt Lauer and Al Roker as they came out of the players' tunnel. The Rev. Andy Cribben, O.Praem., was also interviewed for the show.

Meanwhile, Roker was out on Lambeau Field, sampling Wisconsin beers with Kevin Revolinski '90. Revolinski, author of "Wisconsin's Best Beer Guide" (2010), recommended a couple of ales from Titledown Brewery in Green Bay – Titledown is owned by Brent Weycker '92.

In his blog, "The Mad Traveler," Revolinski wrote: "It was quite amusing to listen to the walkie-talkie of the guy who drove me around in a golf cart beforehand. 'Where's my beer guy?' 'I've got the beer guy.' 'The beer guy is waiting in the tunnel.' 'The beer guy will go first. Then cheese. Then the brats.' I was lucky. The cheese guy got cut off and the brat guy was lost completely when the broadcast failed."

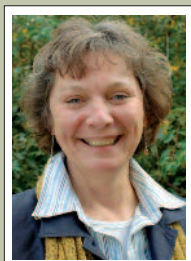

Although Roker took a few obligatory sips for the camera, Kevin noted that the presenter doesn't actually like beer and doesn't really drink.

■ He has achieved greater things since, but still it was satisfying to see the record set straight on behalf of our Academic All-American Lt. Gen. Bill Campbell '62.

CoSIDA, the association of sports information directors that selects All-Americans, admits that its record-keeping from the 1950s and '60s is "sketchy at best." When we let them know that Campbell's name was omitted from its database, they were happy to remedy the error. The clincher? A clipping about the honor that Campbell had kept from Panorama, a St. Norbert alumni publication forerunner to this magazine.

Campbell says the list of St. Norbert All-Americans makes him especially proud, because it is a great example of the best in college sports.

Alumni Award Winners 2011

Each year the college is privileged to honor a few among many outstanding alumni. Meet this year's winners, recognized at a celebratory dinner in October.

Terese Allen '77 works to make food a celebration for all. The philosophy major turned food writer/historian/activist/chef believes that all people have the right to good, healthy food. It is a credo that has led her to pursue "sustainable eating:" cuisine that is environmentally friendly, economically feasible and socially just. As board chair of REAP Food Group, Allen has worked with programs like the Food for Thought Festival, Farm to School and Buy Fresh, Buy Local. Among many publications about food and cooking, she has revised the classic "The Flavor of Wisconsin" in order to reflect the full spectrum of the state's cuisine.

Young Alumni Award winner, Casey Golomski '06 has recently returned from a year in Swaziland, where he researched how the HIV-AIDS epidemic is influencing ritual and religious practices throughout the course of life. He hopes his work will bridge cultural divides, raise understanding of humanitarian crises and support the search for solutions.

Golomski, a doctoral candidate at Brandeis University, has received two Fulbright awards and grants and the Carrie Hunter-Tate Award for academic and professional achievement. A peer reviewer for the African Studies Review, he has taught at Northeastern University and the University of Massachusetts. His work was featured in our Spring 2011 issue.

Dentist Tom '78 and physician Carol (Ehlinger) Ritter '77 have visited some of the most desperate places on earth, laying their professional skills at the service of people suffering from war and natural disaster. Closer to home, the Ritters produced a documentary titled "If the Bough Breaks," sounding the alarm about highly qualified physicians being driven from practice by the medical liability crisis. Their story is told on page 17 of this issue.

Excellence on the move

ST. NORBERT COLLEGE PRESIDENT'S REPORT 2010-11

If you were at our Commencement ceremony on that festive Sunday last May, you may have noticed many of our graduates wearing a new emblem on their robes. The badge read "Senior Pledge 2011."

This symbol meant these graduates had committed to give the college a donation for each of the next five years. The pledges are modest – most are for $10 a year. The amount pledged wasn't the point, however; the commitment was.

In fact, that's why we started the Senior Class Pledge program in the first place, and we were delighted that 124 students, or about one-fourth of the total class, chose to be involved.

Philanthropic support is the backbone of any private college, and alumni giving is the backbone of any college's philanthropic regimen. That's why it's so important to try to get alumni committed, and the sooner the better. The amount they give will grow over time, as their careers develop and their incomes burgeon. But we want to instill in them early the habit of giving back. We often remind our students that they are part of a continuum – they were able to attend St. Norbert in large part because of the generosity of those who came before them, and because of their help many more will be able to attend in the future.

Alumni giving is also important because it's one of the factors U.S. News & World Report uses in determining where colleges rank nationally. Alumni giving is considered a kind of proxy for alumni loyalty in general. The best, most established private colleges have annual alumni-giving rates that can exceed 40, or even 50, percent. At St. Norbert we are approaching the more typical 20 percent, although we have been steadily moving the needle in the right direction.

And it all starts with young alums, because frankly there are more and more of them out there – roughly 500 new graduates each year, joining our base. Because of the new Senior Class Pledge program, this year's graduates committed to give at more than twice the rate of the 2010 class. We also want to send out a big "thanks" to trustee Miriam Mulva '69 and her husband, Jim, for the important role they're playing in this effort. The Mulvas are the epitome of enlightened philanthropy – you'll recall their lead gift of $10 million several years ago to underwrite our new library. And this year they agreed to match each new graduate's pledge – and those of other recent graduates, dating back to 2001 – with a gift of $50. Talk about sweetening the pot!

As you know, the fall issue of St. Norbert College Magazine is where we particularly recognize our many friends and donors, and what their generosity has meant to us.

What it meant in the past 12 months is fairly easy to summarize: This was quite likely the best year in the history of St. Norbert College.

Generous friends like you donated more than $17 million to the college last year, easily shattering the previous St. Norbert record. The largest of these gifts went to underwrite some of our most conspicuous and needed campus projects: the current expansion and renovation of the cafeteria and union complex into Michels Commons; the new Ariens Family Welcome Center; and completion of the locker room at Donald J. Schneider Stadium. But as always, every gift mattered, and had an impact, whether it funded scholarships, academic programs, athletics or worthy community outreach like the CEO Breakfast Series or the Girls Leadership and Development (GLAD) camp.

We had a record enrollment of 2,179 undergraduate students, and the record freshman class had the highest collective ACT scores in school history – the highest GPAs, too.

With talented new additions, our faculty ranks are stronger than ever, whether you're talking about classroom instruction, undergraduate research, mentoring, service-learning, or the production of research and scholarship that matters.

We made dramatic jumps in both the U.S. News & World Report and Forbes national rankings of colleges and universities – and our Forbes ranking for 2012 has since jumped a further 68 places.

Then there was that men's hockey Division III national championship – our second in four years! – and the stellar performances by many, many other Green Knight teams.

Because of your confidence and your generosity, the momentum at St. Norbert College continues to be brisk. It will be no small feat for us to top last year's performance in 2011-12, but with your support – big and small, from alumni old and new – we know we will.

President Thomas Kunkel reports on a banner year for St. Norbert College.

Philanthropy 101

The office of college advancement's new student philanthropy program is designed to educate today's students about the roles, responsibilities and opportunities that await them as St. Norbert College alumni.

Through regular communication and special events, the program focuses on the traditions, heritage, people and elements that make St. Norbert such a special place. During the course of their four years here, students will learn through the student philanthropy program that graduation signals not a departure from St. Norbert, but rather a transition to a new stage in their relationship with their alma mater – a relationship they can enjoy all of their lives.

In addition, the program encourages students to consider how their future support will provide the means for new generations to attend St. Norbert – and how philanthropy reflects the spirit and principles of communio that the institution embraces.

This year, students learned more about the need for donor support at Tuition Runs Out Day events, March 2. And, through the Senior Pledge program, some 28 percent of the Class of 2011 have committed to a five-year giving plan. New this fall is a monthly program of outreach and education for incoming first-year students – a program that will extend through their four years at St. Norbert.

How the giving levels work:

Lifetime Giving

Norbert Guild – Donors who have made gifts to St. Norbert College totaling $1 million or more over their lifetime.
Pennings Guild – Donors who have made gifts to St. Norbert College totaling $250,000 or more over their lifetime.
Burke Guild – Donors who have made gifts to St. Norbert College totaling $50,000 or more over their lifetime.

Current Giving 2010-11

President's Club – Donors who have made gifts to St. Norbert College totaling $2,000 or more over the previous fiscal year.
Dean's Club – Donors who have made gifts to St. Norbert College totaling $1,000-$1,999 over the previous fiscal year.
Main Hall Club – Donors who have made gifts to St. Norbert College totaling $500-$999 over the previous fiscal year.
Founder's Club – Donors who have made gifts to St. Norbert College totaling $100-$499 over the previous fiscal year.

Planned Giving

Anselm Keefe Society – Donors of any age who have made a planned gift: a future bequest, charitable gift annuity, charitable remainder trust, charitable lead trust or life insurance policy with St. Norbert College as a beneficiary.
