Musical group to perform as season's last lyceum

Hamilton, Joe Frank and Reynolds, a contemporary musical group, will perform in the new athletic center at 8 p.m., Saturday, April 24 at the season's last S.A. entertainment lyceum.

Tickets are available in advance in the student center 12:15 to 4:15 weekdays for $3, $4 and $5 each. At the door, the same tickets will cost one dollar more.

Formed in 1970, Hamilton, Joe Frank and Reynolds made their first success with "Don't Pull Your Love" in 1971; their latest release is "Fallin' in Love," echoing the same sentiment.

When member Tommy Reynolds left the group in 1972, Dan Hamilton and Joe Frank Carolla replaced him with Alan Dennison, retaining the original name. Dennison explains: "It's a name like any other group's name, an entity, and we're all equal parts of it."

Suzie Carey, social affair committee chairman for the S.A., said that students should listen for ads about the concert on KWCK and KKYK radio stations for further details.

Jack Otterness, a young musician better known as "The Dutchman," is touring with the group and will also perform.

In other Student Association activities, proceeds from last Friday's picnic and concert with the campus musical group Wyroc added $200 to the sum raised by football players for new uniforms.

More complete coverage sought

Petit Jean uses new layout style

By Randy Kemp

This year's yearbook features a whole new modern layout style, according to Andrea Mannen, editor of the 1975-76 Petit Jean.

"It will be a different style than anything the Petit Jean has ever featured, with a lot more pictures and, because of this, more complete coverage of every aspect of student life," she said.

Miss Mannen said that the staff of the yearbook added more extensive graphic line work this year and more action pictures on a number of pages, especially in the organization section.

"We tried to vary each section so each will present something new and fresh," she said.

Explaining why this yearbook will contain several changes Miss Mannen said that she believed "you should strive for new improvements, and not look at the styles of the past."

"Our primary goal this year has not been to win an award, but to tell the story of Harding College in 1975-76," Miss Mannen said. "Our main concern has been to produce a yearbook that the students will like, while still maintaining a high standard of journalistic quality."

Miss Mannen credited the yearbook to her staff saying that they have "really worked hard and deserve a lot of credit."

She also said that they were optimistic about the yearbook. The American Yearbook Company, who prints the yearbook, wrote the staff a personal letter complimenting them on a "job well done."

Dedication ceremonies for the yearbook will be Monday afternoon, April 26, in the main auditorium.

During the ceremonies, Miss Mannen will introduce her staff and tell about each person's contributions to the yearbook.

The highlight of the ceremonies will be the announcing of the dedication and Petit Jean queen. The Academy will also make similar presentations during the ceremonies.

"We want everyone to attend the ceremonies because they are a part of the yearbook itself — and the ceremonies will be short," she said.

Following the dedication, yearbooks may be picked up at various designated places on campus. Miss Mannen says that once again the TNT social club will help in distribution of the yearbooks.

Six departments to have workshops

Six departments of the college will offer workshops as part of the two summer sessions this year, according to Dr. Jimmy Carr, director of the summer session.

The Biology department will offer two seminars, "Elementary Science" and "Bird Study" June 7-18.

The English, education, history, mathematics and speech departments will each offer one workshop. They are: "American Poetry," July 12-23; "Teaching Reading in the Primary Grades," June 21-July 2; "American Ideals and Institutions," June 23-July 9; "Introduction to Computing for Secondary Teachers," July 12-23; and "Speech Communications," July 12-30.

May pole winders to entwine beauty of spring

The annual May fete is set for April 24 on the front lawn east of the American Heritage building. The candidates for this year's May Queen are, from left, Cheryl Welch, representing Ko Jo Kai; Paul Ferrell, representing Gata; and Karen Christofferson, representing Ju Go Ju. The Ju Go Ju social club sponsors the annual event. The spring celebration features two Maypoles. Winding the Maypoles will be two representatives of each of the women's social clubs.

Bison staff ends year with limited success

This newspaper concludes the editorial direction of the 1975-76 editorial staff. The new Bison staff, which will be announced on Sunday, will edit the final paper of the year. We wish them much success and we also hope that next year will be a successful year not only to the Bison staff but to the entire student body.

As we close out this year, we could do no better than to repeat some of the remarks made by our predecessor last year in her final issue. She took the approach of some of the articles she would like to see reported in this year's Bison — unfortunately we could not report some of her dreams.

She said she hoped to see the Student Association become "a vital part of the student body, that every student and administrator considered it an important improvement-making organization." This year has shown us that very few students have any confidence in the power of the S.A. and we don't really understand why because we feel that this year's S.A. has done a lot for the student body. This did not happen this year but one day this will come true — maybe next year.

Last year's editor also wanted to see a "flourishing women's intercollegiate sports program, and that the problems involved with the program are being dealt with calmly and rationally, rather than emotionally." This did not happen this year but one day this will come true — maybe next year.

However, her most important dream we are able to report. She wanted to hear that the difference at Harding is still just that — a difference. That is, the standards of behavior and dress which sets us apart from other schools are still being strictly observed.

Harding College does not need a "major overhaul" nor does it need a good "spring cleaning." All Harding College needs is a small "lube job" to grease some of the joints. We hope that this is done and Harding will continue to stand strong for another 50 years so our children can get their education in a true Christian college, and maybe next year everyone's dreams will come true.

Diversion — Book

Riis biography contrasts rich man, poor man

By Tim McNeese

Jacob A. Riis: Photographer & Citizen by Alexander Alland, Sr. Aperture Press., 1974, pages 220, $17.50.

On Eighth Avenue in New York in the 1870's there stood an extravagant mansion and private opera house built by one of the city's roguish millionaires John Fisk. Fisk was one of the "vulgar rich" who would dress in gold laced costumes and carry himself about the city in carriages drawn by six white horses.

Concurrent with this extreme wealth of the 1870's, across town there stood the original slums of New York. The squalor found in the hovels of Mulberry Street have no match today. Eighth Street and Mulberry Street; two extremes of wealth in what Kenneth Clark would one day call "the city of Mammon." John Fisk died in 1872 of bullet wounds inflicted by a business and amatory rival Edward S. Stokes. But the slums remained.

It would take 25 years of reforms before the Mulberry Street slums would be destroyed. The chief reformer responsible for their destruction would be Jacob A. Riis.

Alexander Alland's book Jacob A. Riis: Photographer & Citizen tells of Riis' fight for social reform in a city where the poor were ignored. Alland, a photography artist, sees Riis as not an artist or a literary stylist, but merely a simple man bantering a simple message of social reforms, armed with the tools he felt adequate for the task: the pen and the camera.

Jacob A. Riis was a journalist, photographer, and reformer. He immigrated to America from Denmark in 1870 at the age of 21 virtually penniless. His poverty forced him into the rookeries of Mulberry Street where he begged soup bones and slept in lodging houses for 7 cents a night. Riis' education and eventual good luck landed him a job with the New York Tribune at a handsome salary of $25 a week. But Riis' good fortune did not dim his view of what he had experienced on Mulberry Street. He began writing about what he had seen in a book entitled How the Other Half Lives (1890).

Riis illustrated his writings with photographs taken in the Mulberry Street dives. The subject matter of these photographs is not pleasant. Some of the saddest eyes ever preserved on film are found among Riis' glass negatives. They are lined with despair and etched with grief and misery. They show the filth of the tenements, the squalor of the slums.

The pictures show places with names such as Poverty Gap, Bandit Roost, Thieves' Alley and the worst of all, Battle Alley, where, according to Riis, a week never passed without a murder. Riis' constant calls for reform did fall on concerned ears.

Author Alland has written an honest book portraying an honest citizen who could not separate his activities as a journalist from his standards of citizenship. His photographs have a childlike honesty and spontaneity, yet they are powerful in content. They reflect this thought of Riis: "The poor we shall have always with us, but the slum we need not have. These two do not rightfully belong together. Their present partnership is at once poverty's worst hardship and our worst blunder."

Fifth Column

Final note: final column

By Wayne Morgan

This is it — my final week to hide under my desk in the Bison office when the newspaper is put out in the Student Center on Fridays. You see, my year as "editor" has officially ended as of now.

The word final, which means no more, has really been haunting me this week — I guess because this week is:

— the final week that I have to hit the bottle to get the newspaper out (the Bufferin bottle, that is).

— the final week that I have to talk someone into stealing the chapel announcements off the bulletin board so we can write them up for stories.

— the final week that I have to plead with someone to write a letter to the editor.

— the final week that I have to make up names when I can't identify everyone in a photograph.

— the final week to blame the typesetter at the printshop when spelling and grammar mistakes are printed in the paper.

— the final week that I'll get notes from people asking me to run ads in the paper for possible wife candidates.

— the final week to put Ex-Lax and other things into my staff's tuna fish and peanut butter sandwiches to get even with them for something that they did or didn't do the week before.

— the final week that I can call Dr. Ganus, president of the college, a "sacred cow," Dr. Joe, dean of the college, "precious pup," and Miss Downing, our single dean of women, "Marrying-Beth" and get away with it.

— the final week to use my key to the front door of the Student Center to give parties after dark.

Too bad that this is my last because there are some more Fifth Columns that I would like to write about. Like I would like to write about the fact that Mrs. Morris in the Student Personnel Office has not worn her mood ring since we ran that picture of her hand in the newspaper because she wanted to be anonymous.

I would also like to write a Fifth Column of the ways that I have sabotaged this year's yearbook so it can't possibly win an All-American. Destroying the yearbook is one of the pledges a Bison editor has to take before he is appointed.

But nevertheless this is my last and I'm being forced out into the cold world and I have to find some kind of work. I'm currently trying to get Shelia Oswald to help me write a book entitled "How to Go Through Four Years of College and Know Even Less than What You Did Before You Entered."

Editor's Note:

Although I have never been good at saying "Thank you" I feel that I must for the amount of encouragement and expressions of interest that so many of you have expressed to us this year. Your pats on the back, comments, and compliments have kept us going.

We have tried our best to give you a quality publication and we sincerely hope you agree.

We know that we did not meet everyone's needs, but we did try to reach out each Friday with a part of ourselves. And to you, the ones that reached back to us, we want to say "Thank you" — you're the reason we do what we do.

Feedback

Student encourages grading honestly

Dear Editor:

There comes a time when an individual feels that it is his duty to reveal his convictions, especially when he thinks a practice or policy is detrimental to himself and his peers. Now is that time. I am quite concerned about some of the habits and practices of some of Harding's faculty in regard to quizzes, tests and the grading of same. Hopefully, I will convey to the faculty members something that will bring serious thought to their prevailing evaluative methods.

There is a dominant theme presently running through our society and since this institution is social, it is liable to pick up some characteristics of that theme. This theme is the one that wants to make everyone equal. The theme sounds like this: An individual who puts in his time, tears, effort and cheers to produce is dissuaded and dismayed when the individual who disregards his responsibility to himself and his peers is encouraged in his indifference by a gratuity."

Now I realize that for a faculty member there is a time to be merciful; there is a season for compassion; there is an occasion to be a little gracious with a student who fails to measure up to an academic standard. However, there should also be an awareness of the responsibility of revealing to a student, his family and society an accurate account of a student's efforts. This awareness I feel is deficient in some faculty members.

I do not want to get into the question of what is an effective grading system, but, if grades are going to be used as an academic measure, social measure or any other measure, I think they should be as responsibly accurate as possible or else disposed of. The choice is ours.

None of us would want to be deceived into thinking we were summa cum laude graduate when we hardly deserved the cum laude recognition, would we? These words are expressed with the utmost concern and respect for all my peers who admire this institution.

Bible department adds Cloer to staff for fall semester

Eddie Cloer, 31, of Osceola, will be added to Harding's Bible department next fall.

Cloer studied at Harding for two years before going to Oklahoma Christian College to earn his B.A. in Bible. He has since earned his M.Th. at Harding Graduate School in Memphis.

"He's a real strong man in the area of revivals," commented Jimmy Allen, associate professor of Bible, about Cloer. "He's a veritable powerhouse." According to Allen, Cloer has held more than 150 revivals, in addition to numerous workshops and youth rallies.

Cloer, who is originally from Springdale, now preaches regularly for the church in Blytheville.

Cloer and his wife, a nurse, are expecting their first child.

College writers form association

The first program of the newly formed Creative Writing Study Association will be a presentation and discussion of poetry entered in the 1976 Creative Writing Contest. The meeting will be at 6:30 p.m. next Thursday in the Trophy Room of the American Heritage Center.

Students who entered the contest and would like to have their poems discussed informally should notify Dr. Dennis Organ, the group's sponsor, in AS 310A by Tuesday afternoon. The winning poems also will be included.

In earlier meetings the association has drawn up and ratified a constitution. At the Thursday meeting officers will be elected for the fall semester.

Lamar Culpepper, one of the group's organizers, said the program would last about one hour.

Broadwater wins prize for paper

Jeff Broadwater, a senior from Searcy, won the top prize for the best undergraduate paper presented at the Phi Alpha Theta international honorary history society meeting in Fayetteville recently. Broadwater, a political science major, will be among the May graduates.

Broadwater's paper was on the Little Rock Desegregation Crisis and the Arkansas Gazette. Representatives from eight other colleges in the state also read reports.

Dr. Fred Jewell, a member of the history faculty, accompanied the delegation to the annual meeting.

Students join in 'Free Enterprize Day' celebration

Assistant economics professor Dr. Don Diffine, Kiwanis project chairman Rodger Yarnell and students Sherry Beck, Max Thannisch, Robi Roberts and Greg Marr, from left, display a sign as part of Searcy's celebration of "Free Enterprise Day." Searcy Mayor Leslie Carmichael designated last Thursday to recognize the recent joint efforts of economic students and local business people to publicly promote the free enterprise system.

By John McGee
Now that the new Harding Coliseum is fully operational, nearly all the Bisons' athletic teams have the finest in practice facilities.

This Bison swim team responded to their new Olympic size pool with their first AIC championship in the school's history while the basketball squad came up with their finest season in years.

New gymnastic facilities helped the male athletes retain their state title and the indoor track has been a boost to coach Lloyd's thinclads as they have entered the outdoor season in the best shape in a long time.

Football has profited with the expansion of dressing rooms and the working our rooms as cross country and track. Four indoor tennis courts have been a welcome addition to Coach Elliott's team as well.

In other areas, the tennis team has received the aid of newly resurfaced courts and the bowling team has access to the finest bowling lanes in the AIC. The linesters are able to play in two Searcy golf courses which are in fine condition. However, where does all this leave our baseball Bisons?

With all the recent building and improving of facilities, the baseball team has seemed to be passed by with regard to better conditions. At present, the Bisons are the only team in the conference which is forced to play in a park designed for Legion and prep competition.

Although M. E. Berryhill Park is an excellent park for what it was designed, it does not meet the needs of collegiate competition. The grassless infields and short fences have been a headache on many a windy day. A great number of pop flies to left wind up over the fence with any kind of southern breeze.

In addition to the park's limitations, it is also located too far from campus for those without cars thus keeping attendance down.

While we're building some of the best athletic facilities in the state, why not include something for both the baseball players and the baseball fans?

Keglers finish fourth

The Bison keglers fought back from near disaster to finish fourth in the finals of the NAIA National Bowling Championships last weekend in Kansas City.

Although returning as the defending national champions, the Bisons had nearly slipped into the eighth position before staging a tremendous comeback to climb back into the upper division of the tournament.

"The boys made a fantastic comeback," coach Ed Burt related, "At one time we were only 15 pins out of eighth place and then the boys found themselves and started bowling up to their normal output."

The Bisons had a rough time of things in first round action, losing five of eight games while posting a pinfall of 7,944 which was the sixth best team total. However, in the late going Saturday, the Bisons split a pair of contests with the eventual champion Glenville State and went on to sweep Clarion State in the final position round to wind up fourth.

Senior two-time AIC singles champion Zearl Watson was the top individual for Harding with a 188.8 pin average, good enough for the seventh spot on the final NAIA rankings. The 34-year old veteran also recorded the second highest game of the tournament with a 266 effort.

The Bisons' second best effort was recorded by Kevin Fisher who finished 12th nationally with a 2,770 pinfall and a 184 average. Junior Tim Baur finished 15th with 2,735 and 180.5

and Rick Payne finished 18th with a 180-average and 2,711 pick-up. Senior Steve Kloske rounded out the Harding entry with a 2,598 pinfall, good enough for a 173 average and 37th place.

Although they took four national championships in the last six years, including 1975, the Bisons returned only two men from last season's championship team and weren't able to get it rolling in the early going.

"It was just one of those things where it just wasn't our day," Burt commented, "the boys stayed in there and never gave up, and that's the important thing. They're a real bunch of competitors."

Glenville State, paced by national champion Sam Terrell, rolled up a 16,313 pinfall to out-distance runner-up Oregon College of Education with 16,065. Terrell's total of 3,050 pins gave him a 203 average of the 15-game affair, just ahead of Clarion State's Paul Woods who grabbed second with 2,958 pins.

Gary Rhodes dives back to first on an unsuccessful pick-off attempt. Harding is currently sixth in the conference. The Bisons will play Arkansas-Monticello tomorrow here.

Quartet to participate in exhibition game

A quartet of Bison diamond men have been selected to participate in the annual AIC-Arkansas Traveler Exhibition Game April 25 in Little Rock.

First baseman Vince Adams, second sacker Ordis Copeland, pitcher Perry Brown and outfielder Joe David Smith were included on the 24-man AIC All-Star roster for this year's game, again to be played at Ray Winder Field. This year's game marks the second honor for Perry Brown while Adams will be playing in his third contest.

Sponsored by the AIC and Mr. Dunberbachs of McCain Mall, the Travelers annually meet the AIC All-Stars since the series inception in 1974. The Arkansas club is one of the top minor league teams in the St. Louis Cardinal Baseball organization.

Ouachita Baptist University has the most representatives on the team with five, followed by the Bisons, Arkansas Tech and Central Arkansas with four each. Henderson State has three selections, while College of the Ozarks has two and Southern State and Arkansas-Monticello each have one.

Willie Williams turned in a 1:30.0 first place time in the 880 relay in Wednesday's meet.

Tracksters place second in meet

The Harding tack team fought the Ouachita Baptist Tigers on even terms in the field events, but couldn't match the former AIC champs on the track as OBU scored a 102½-68½-4 victory in a triangular meet on the Hendrix College campus Wednesday.

Freshman standout Rick Stegall in the 440 and the Bison 880 relay team were the only event winners in the running events although Harding did come up with winning efforts in the triple jump, high jump and shot put competitions.

Stegall, the 1975 Arkansas State AAA quartermile champion, easily topped the field in the 440 with a time of 50.0. The anchorman for the mile relay, Stegall has a personal best in the 440 of 48.3.

Defending NAIA national high champion Steve Celsor won the high jump with a 6-6 leap, while defending AIC shot put titlist Steve Flatt heaved the sphere 47-4 for another first. Current AIC pacesetter Greg Blake sailed 47-5 in the triple jump and the relay team of Paul McLendon, John Reece, Cisco Bassett, and Willie Williams recorded a 1:30.0 clocking.

"Although we are not yet running at full strength," remarked coach Ted Lloyd, referring to the large number of injuries on the Bison squad, "we did have a good meet with several individuals having their best career performances."

Freshman Cam Prock cleared 13-6 in the pole vault to place third right behind teammate Dave Bell who was second with 14-0. Joe Shepherd's blazine 4:18 mark in the mile and Blake's 21-7½ performance in the long jump were other bright spots in the Bisons runner-up finish. Ken Sewell's third place in the 440 intermediates with a time of 57.5 was his best to date.

Ouachita Baptist University was the AIC champion in 1972, 1973 and 1974 before settling for second behind Central Arkansas in 1975; the Tigers are outside favorites for top honors.

Tennis team whips Ozarks, CBC

The Bison netters solidified their bid for an Arkansas Intercollegiate Conference tennis title, whipping co-favorite College Ozarks 5-4 as well as splitting a pair of matches with Centenary University and Christian Brothers College.

The Bisons have compiled a 9-1 AIC mark to date and will seek revenge for the lone blemish on the record when they host Southern State College today at 3 on the Harding courts. The 'Riders earlier defeated the Bisons by a narrow 5-4 verdict.

Playing against a much improved Ozarks club, the Bisons lost four of the six singles matches but came back to sweep all three of the doubles contests to whip the Mountaineers for the second time this season by a 5-4 count.

"Although we have played better matches, both physically and mentally, "Coach David Elliott related, "we did win under a lot of pressure and that was very encouraging. We had to win all three doubles matches to win and we managed to pull it off."

Last Saturday the Bisons overwhelmed Christian Brothers College of Memphis by a 9-0 count to post the netters sixteenth victory of the season, but were beaten by NCAA power Centenary by a 7-2 margin Wednesday.

After playing Southern State today, the Bisons will be host next week to Henderson State, Central Arkansas, and Freed-Hardeman before hosting the season finale with Hendrix College on April 26th at home, AIC tournament play is scheduled to begin on April 29 in Arkadelphia.
