But before she could re-collect her wits and slip quietly away Craven ab-ruptsy lifted his head and looked directly at his daughter; and now she knew him positively. Though his jaw dropped, his mouth gaped, and his eyes stared prominently from a countenance that in a twinkling darkened portentously above the blank pallor of his shirt bosom, in every lineament he was Thaddeus Craven of the sempiternally youthful face, showed never a line to declare he wasn't thirty-one but a round decade older. For a moment whose tension lent it the length of many, father and daugh-ter remained transfixed and staring. Then his emotion communicated itself to the woman in his arms. Startled and wondering, she unvelled her eyes, caught a shadowed glimpse of the third figure, disengaged, and drew away, And Craven suffered this without a sign to indicate that he had not forgotten her. maintaining his poise and store with a fixity that, penetrating Lydia's confusion, stirred her curiosity. Taking one step toward him, she paused again, lifted one hand in a gesture at once apologetic and appealing, and said falteringly, "Daddy-"

With visible effort Craven pulled himself together and made an attempt to speak; but only a husky whisper rattled in his throat. Then his glance veered uncertainly to Mrs. Merrilees.

Abruptly this last, overcoming her astonishment, precipitated the situa-tion. The blush that had shadowed her exquisite face ebbed again, leaving it incomparably fair. She threw back her shoulders and took full advantage of her inches. "Really, Miss Carteret-" she began ; and then her voice of crystal clearness broke in a cool and tinkling laugh.

"Oh, do forgive me, Mrs. Merrilees! I never dreamed-I expected to find my father alone--"

With that iteration of "Father !" superb insolence, Mrs. Merrilees became once more completely mistress of herself; and if her tone cried scorn upon a presumptuous girl, her look demanded explanation of the man.

But Craven 2nd needed no more time to make good his recovery. It was his familiar self who stepped into this brench, attiable, unruffled, perhaps a shade too devil-may-care; but to balance that there was a not unbecoming of deference in his voice. "Fn afraid," he seid, "my surprise knocked me silly for a moment. Lydia, Id no idea you were on board; but you seem already to know Mrs. Merrilees, Batty, permit me to present my daughter." "Your' daughter, Tad?" There was unpropitious raillery in the woman's

LYDIA CRAVEN SURPRISES HER FATHER MAKING LOVE TO ANOTHER WOMAN-THERE IS EMBARRASSMENT. BUT LYDIA MAKES TWO REAL FRIENDS

SYNOPSIS .- A well-bred young Englishwoman, nervous and sus-SYNOPSIS.—A well-bred young Englishwoman, nervous and sus-picious, finds when she boards the steamer Alsatia, bound from Liv-erpool to New York, that her stateroom mate is Mrs. Amelia Beggar-staff, a fascinating, wealthy American widow of about.sixty years. The girl introduces herself as Lucy Carteret and says she is going to America to meet her father. Lucy's behavior puzzles Mrs. Beggar-staff, who is vastly surprised to find her possessing a magnifecent necklace which was stolen from a museum collection some time pre-viously, and passes the news on to her friend, Quoin, a private de-tective on board. Lucy, dressing in the dark in her stateroom, hears a mysterious conversation between two men just outside her window and recognizes one of them as Thaddeus Craven, her father. Amazed, she hurries up on deck, searches about and finds him making love to she hurries up on deck, searches about and finds him making love to Mrs. Merrilees, wealthy, beautiful young widow and friend of Mrs. Beggarstaff, to whom Lucy has just confessed that she is really Lydia Craven.

"No!" she insisted when Craven So-it was true-Craven had never promptly ranged himself at her side, "Let me go for tonight, Tad. I'd prementioned his daughter to his friends! Staring seaward, Lydia worked her hands together gently; and, watching her closely, the man saw her face fugifer to be alone to think things out. Tomorrow, perhaps-" Her smile dashed uncertainly toward tively convulsed. And wisely he held Lydia as she disappeared round the silence.

"Mrs. Beggarstaff knows," the girl Craven delayed, however, barely long enough for a word, "Wait here—I sha'n't be long." said presently, "and Mrs. Merrilees, and I dare say by tomorrow all his acquaintances on the ship will know. Lydia said nothing, but watched him So, you see, I'm not violating his con-fidence. Only you spoke of him so go with eyes confused with pain, she who had found herself suddenly relewarmly that you made me want you to understand." A quaver touched her child to that of a stumbling block in tone; but she persisted: "I'm afraid I've made a great mistake-embar-rassed him horribly, turning up this way. But I didn't know he was a passenger. I supposed, of course, he was at home-in New York-"

Much of Peter's charm lay in his in-She stood desolate amid a debris of stinctive recognition of those times when it is wisest to say nothing. "Don't! We mustn't misjudge him. You're his friend: surely you ought to make allowances for him, if I can.

I'm sure he must have had his rensons-good enough reasons, if we only knew. Why must he take the world knew. into his confidence?"

Dumfounded, Peter stared; then remembered himself that woman nature was a singular thing, its mental processes defying maculine analysis, "You're right," he asserted meekly, after a pause. "Of course you're right! I've known Tad Craven a long time and pretty well, if he is a bit older, and I know he wouldn't do anything dishonorable or calculated to hurt any body. He's not that kind."

Impulsively Lydia's hand went out to Peter's; but in the long instant that they sat hand in hand and eye to eye, each smiling a trace consciously, signals of distress showed in her wavering glance, and within his grasp the pressure of her firm young fingers lessened until reluctantly he released them.

"What is it?" Peter asked gently, "Only my presumptuousness-inflict-

ABOUT THE WAR

German illustrated papers received Amsterdam reproduce photographs "types of the first Americans captured on the Western front."

Several American troops have been killed and a number wounded by a German shell on the French front. The Sammles are increasing their fire constantly.

The Germans launched an attack at Passchendaele in attempt to wrest that city from the British. This is the town Von Hindenburg ordered recaptured at all costs.

Germany's submarine warfare evi-dently is being stemmed. Last week, according to London reports, only one ship was sunk. Six other vessels of the smaller class were destroyed.

The loss to French shipping through mine or submarine for the week ending Nov. 11, was two vessels over 1.600 tons, one of which was actually sunk the previous week and no vessels under that tonnage.

The British in Palestine have reached a point three miles south of Jaffa and are meeting with only slight resistance. Since the operations be-gan, Oct. 31, more than 9,000 Turks have been made prisoner.

The Italians continue to stiffen their front from the region of Lake Garda to the Adriatic sea. Teuton attacks have met with fierce resistance and ultimate repulse, except in the north, where the town of Cismon, on the east bank of the Brenta river. and several hill positions have been taken by the invaders. All along the Plave a furious artillery action is progress. To the south, near the mouth of the Piave, Italian engineers have opened the dikes against the enemy forces which crossed the stream at Grisolera, who possibly have been trapped by the inrush of the wa

BIG GUN HIT BY TEUTONS

GEN. PERSHING'S MEN INFLICT ING DAMAGE ON ENEMY THAT EVENS SCORE.

With the American Army in France Nov. 19.-Gen. Pershing returned to his headquarters from a visit to his troops in the first line trenches and the support in the rear. Artillery fir-ing on both sides was normal while he was there and no shells fell near him. The artillery fighting in the sector held by American troops has become even more lively and there have been further casualties, shrapnel wounding some men in the trenches.

An enemy shell hit an American gun and caused casualties. Some of the men wounded in the last two days have died.

The American batteries have been firing rapidly in return. The visibil-ity is becoming better and it is considered certain that more damage and casualties have been caused in the German lines than the Germans have inflicted on the Americans.

The French general commanding the sector has mentioned in the dis patches fifteen American officers and soldiers, including three who were killed, for excellent military qualities and for bravery displayed in the recent trench raid.

The general specially cited in the order of the day Corporal James Gresham and Privates Meric D. Hay and Thomas F. Enright "who died bravely in hand-to-hand fighting with the enemy who had penetrated the first line.

ITALIANS HOLD LINE ON PIAVE.

Hundreds of Austro-Germans Fall Prisoner to King Victor's Troops -British Take Jerusalem Gate.

Rome, Nov. 19 .- The armles of Italy are making a stand along the Plave river. They have thrown back masses of Austro-German troops that have been hurled against them in an effort to break the line, which has not been breached at any point.

The invaders for a week have been trying to force the Italian defenses on the Plave, but have been unsuccess-ful, and the Italian army seems to have been strengthened during that time. Hundreds of Austrian and German soldiers have been captured in the last repulse and twenty-seven machine guns taken.

In Flanders the British have pushed further north on Goeberg spur, northwest of Passchendaele, and captured a strongly fortified redoubt.

Germans report the capture of 800 Italians in the Monte Prassolyn drive. The British troops in Palestine are giving the Turks no rest. Jaffa has een captured by them, the Ottoman forces offering no resistance. It is stated that the Turks are in retirement northward.

The German naval forces encoun tered by British light war craft in the North sea Saturday were forced to seek a haven of safety under the protection of their battle fleets and behind the mine fields of Helgoland.

Americans in uniform-there Uncle Sam's boys will be eating turkey and ranberry sauce, and listening to nons by their chaplains on the last Thursday of November this year. France has never before been in flose touch with this, the most characteristically American of all our holidnys. Of course their Christmas, their Easter, their New Year's Day, and their various church festivals, correspond to our own. They have an ade-junte understanding even of our Fourth of July, for it is close akin to their own Fourteenth of July, the an-alversary of the fall of the Bastile and the dawn of real liberty in France,

But Thanksgiving Day has always seen Uncle Sam's own private and per-sonal feast day, in which nobody else had a part. It had its origin in no great international, nor even national, event. At first it was not really American in scope, but was confined to the few hundreds of religious enthusiasts who fixed a day of public devotion and thank-giving for deliverance from Indians and cold and hunger. Even the materials for the feast were indigenous to America. Despite his name, which would seem to indicate an oriental origin, the turkey is a na-tive of America, and was unknown in the domain of the sultan until importnow these homeless, shelterless, women, old men and little children, in numed there. Further, the American manner of elebrating this most American of all days has never been of a nature to the attention of other nations, or of their citizens visiting here. On this day of all days the American has been wont to retire from public gaze, to refrain from any great public demon-stration, and to give thanks in his own way and eat the meal in the privacy of his own family. The only notable seeming exception to this is the institution called the Thanksgiving Day games of the college football teams But this is no real exception.
