TRAVELS 3,000 MILES TO RECEIVE TREATMENT FOR TUBERCULOSIS

Hon. Alford W. Cooley, well known to the people of Otero county, is now in Providence, R. I., where he is in charge of Dr. Friedrich Friedmann. He is accompanied by Mrs. Cooley and Jimmie, the only child. Every one here joins the News-Advertiser in the fervent hope that Judge Cooley will find speedy relief and permanent cure at the hands of the distinguished German physician. Judge and Mrs. Cooley have no warmer friends anywhere on earth than their Alamogordo friends.

Referring to Judge Cooley's sudden determination to go to Dr. Friedmann, the Silver City Enterprise says: "Larz Anderson, U. S. Ambassador to Japan, and Mrs. Anderson, arrived in Silver City Saturday noon and left the same day for Washington, D. C., in their private car, Mayflower. They came here to visit Judge and Mrs. Alford W. Cooley, old Washington friends of theirs, and were accompanied East by the Judge and Mrs. Cooley and little son, Jimmie. Judge Cooley, who came here for his health, has not been doing so well of late, and it was decided at the last moment to take him East in the hope the change might prove beneficial and that he might secure the Dr. Friedmann treatment for tuberculosis. The Cooleys' many friends in this section-and they are legion-sincerely hope the Judge may be benefitted by the trip."

Editorially, the Albuquerque Herald says: "We sincerely hope that Judge Alford W. Cooley will find the relief which he seeks in trying out the alleged tuberculosis cure of Dr. Friedmann. In this we will be cordially joined by the numberless friends which Judge Cooley has made while seeking health in New Mexico. Ill health in his case has largely deprived the state and the nation of the usefulness of a very keen mind and great ability of the kind that is needed nowadays."

Simple Country Girl's Story Told to Actress Results in Sensational Episode.

By HERBERT PAUL.

Why the story told by this simple country girl in the Pullman brought tears to Miss Agnes Dare's eyes the latter could not imagine. It was only after she knew how deeply she was moved that she discovered the reason. it was her girlhood story over again. It is because Miss Dare is so well known that I have called her by this nom de plume. Her married life has been presented to the attention of scandal-loving readers on the front pages of the most popular journals not once or twice, but at least ten times. And if Miss Dare has been more sinned against than sinning, at any rate she has paid in reputation the price of her immense success. For when an actress overshadows her company and eats into the box of-

of expense, it is success, as people use Just now she was traveling alone across the continent to open in Los Angeles, thankful enough for the brief respite from popularity which enabled her to assume her real name. But for us she is still Miss Dare. And this simple country girl had got on with some man whose face Miss Dare had not seen at Fort Tyson and she was traveling to Denver. Miss Dare, seeing that she was distressed, had sat beside her and the girl had little by little told her the whole story.

She was rancher's daughter, and it was the old tale of a monotonous farm life with no distraction, and the brillant actor whose fancy she had caught while his troupe played two nights at elegant lunch was served. If she had met him she could not imagine

She took the girl's hand between her own and began talking to her. Was she sure that she loved him and that Clarence loved her? And was she sure that he was a worthy man? Then, if that were really so, why had he not gone to see her father and mother?

"But my father would never let me marry an actor," exclaimed the girl. "You know, we folks have strange ALAMOGORDO TRADING CO. ideas out on the ranches." And Clarence had been the first to explain to her the impossibility of that.

Then Miss Dare began explaining her views until she saw the scared look that came in the girl's face: then she tried to console her. And just then, happening to look up, she saw somebody at the end of the car, walking rather indirectly, and hastily she excused herself and hurried toward

She knew him at once, and she knew now that their meeting had been mercifully postponed until she could see him under just such conditions as should lend her strength to face him. She took him by the arm and swung him around. The end of the car was empty and nobody noticed.

The man looked down, "Hello!" he said, smiling stupidly, "Hello! Why! . Why!-" Suddenly his face blanched and he sat down heavily upon a seat.

Miss Dare did not let go his arm for an instant.

"Listen to me, you -" she could not find a suitable term of address. "Listen to me," she said. "You know me, don't you? Well, you are going to that little girl in No. 5 and you are going to tell her that you have made a mistake. Do you understand? And then-we shall be at Dry fice receipts more than any other item Lake in five minutes. You get off at Dry Lake."

He swore at her. "What has it to do with you?" he sneered. "Why are you butting in? How do you know I'm not free? What call have you to interfere?"

Miss Dare was still clinging to him. because she knew that if she let go she would be unable to keep her hands off him. "You-go-now," she whispered hoarsely. "You know the abduction laws in Colorado? Yes, you

She watched him pass along the aisle and saw him bend over the girl and speak. She saw the girl start up, clinging to the velvet cushions of the Pullman. Then the train slowed down, and the train was pulling into Dry Lake. The girl was going to scream. Miss Agnes Dare got there in time, and a moment later she was knocking Clarence Montfort all over the car.

That was the latest of the Dare scandals, and Miss Agnes's photograph was prominently displayed as usual on the front pages of the newspapers, from New York to San Francisco. How persistently luck followed her. they said. To think that, on her way to California, she should meet her first husband and pummel him to her heart's content, thereby materially increasing the box office receipts on the opening night and for many nights thereafter! Would she have pummeled him if she had been plain Miss Dare with no reputation for scandal to maintain? And then, why had she abruptly left the train and disappeared somewhere in the Colorado wilderness, and who was that young girl that she was chaperoning, and was she a worthy person to have charge of her? Miss Agnes read all that and smiled. Life has its compensations, and there is a letter in her handbag which she reads sometimes when things have gone badly with her. It is from a girl in Tyson: and she reflects that if she has ruined her own life she may have saved another.

the Hipp enters the Hippodrome,

Where, naturally, he feels quite at home.

Then mounted upon the Hippo's back, They race quite madly around the track.

The Hippo's laughter rings through the hall, And Dinny cries: "Let the curtain fall."

A champion trick then Dinny springs, With the Hippo amiling as he swings.
