Owing to the light attendance in the afternoon, the speeches of E. S. Gosney, and E. J. Huling, the former on "Forest Reserves," and the latter on "Lands," were dispensed with the association agreeing to publish both addresses in pamphlet form for distribution among the members.

Mr. Gosney, however, made a few extemporary remarks. He said that he was not disappointed in not having in 50 speak. He had come to the convention under his own protest, but found himself very much in the minority, President Luna and the officers of the association being very much in the majority. Col. R. E. Twitchell Is Elected President and O. A. Larrazolo Secretary by the Convention.

Resolution Adopted to That Effect. Providing For Raising of Necessary Funds--Meeting Was Enthusiastic and Addresses Eloquent.

For the brief space of time between the hours of 11 a. m. and 1 p. m. today in the Elks' opera house, the curtain was drawn from sixteenth century civilization and under the magic spell of magnificent oratory the old time missionary, explorer and soldier, Francesca Vasquez de Coronado came once more into his own. Elaborate preparations for the event had been made in advance by the committee of the Coronado Memorial association under whose auspices the convention was held and so ready had been the response to the call for volunteer speakers that at the last moment the program had to be cut down and only a portion of it could be carried out.

The meeting was presided over by the Hon, Solomon Luna, who in his usual efficient manner conducted the convention witnout unnecessary delay. The only disappointment of the occasion was found in the fact that Governor Curry, who had been scheduled to address the meeting took no part in the proceedings though he was present on the platform and showed his interest by his wrapt attention and frequent appliance.

Eloquent Address.

Shortly after ten orders.

Eloquent Address.

Shortly after ten o'clock the body of troopers from the Fifth Cavairy under Colonel A. P. Hunter, drew up before the Alvarade from which they escorted Governor Curry and the committee with their guests in two open carriages to the opera house and as soon thereafter as they could be seated upon the platform. Mr. Luna called the meeting to order, after which Father A. M. Mandalari, of the church of the Immaculate Conception of this city, offered the invocation. He was followed by Hon. R. E. Twitchell, of East Las Vegas, whose eloquent appeal for a more universal study of the early territorial history and the formation of a permanent association for the proper commemoration through monuments and tablets of places and names rendered conspicuous by the heroes of early days stirred his auditors to prolonged applause. His address like all others delivered before the convention deserves to be preserved in permanent form. The topic was "The Coronado Memorial Assoserved in permanent form. The topic was "The Coronado Memorial Assoclation.

Committee Appointed.

Following Colonel Twitchell's address and a musical selection by Grady's Orchestra the following committee on permanent organization was appointed by the chair in response to a resolution province. sponse to a resolution previously of-fered: Hon. M. A. Otero, O. A. Lara-zolo, E. S. Stover, Prof. W. G. Tight and Hon Nester Montoya. This im-portant matter having been decided, Mr. Luna introduced Hon. H. B. Fer-russon, who responded to the subfusion, who responded to the sub-ject of "The Spanish Pioneers." Mr. Fergusson handled this topic with ais usual ability and enthusiasm and un-der the spell of his engaging person-ality and flowing rhetoric the audi-ence, a large proportion of whom, were descendents of the men whose deeds the orator portrayed, were deeds the orator portrayed, were brought face to face with the men whose bravery and persistence had created the heritage which they now enjoy. Mr. Fergusson's peroration was particularly able and the effect created by his entire address was to renew the interest of his hearers to a record of heroign and tenrice.

men who first planted the banner of the cross on American soil, and that without exception they had been foremost in their defense of the principles then ennunciated in every time of trial through which, under all forms of government they have since passed. Mr. Larazollo in closing delivered a most eloquent plea for self-government in New Mexico the only kind of government he said under which in their long history on this soil his people had not yet been per-mitted to enjoy.

At the close of this address Sena-tor Barela of Colorado was intro-duced by Mr. Luna and delivered a abort and pleading seesting from the hort and pleasing greeting from the scopic of his state. His remarks closed the speechmaking and the convention thereupon proceeded to the practical measures for which it was called together. These began with the reading of Vegetables From Estancia Two Day's Session of Great Valley and Local Mining Display are the Best.

In Casino hall the exhibition of vegetables and farm projects from the Estancia valley is by far the best part of the show. This region of wonderfud richness is capable of producing grain and vegetables that rival such products raised anywhere in the world. The Estancia people may well feel proud of the splendid showing their products make at the fair.

The photograph exhibit of the locial photographers, Showell and Kemmerer, is an exhibition to be proud of. Mining Exhibit.

The mining exhibit at the fair, while not large, is interesting in that it includes many specments of rich ore taken out from the Sandia mountain district. In the last year many rich prospects have been opened up in this region and the indications are that in the future the development of the mines will mean great wealth to the city of Albuquerque.

Last night the streets were filled with an eager throng until after midnight and the carnival shows, fire show, free acts, confett stands and all the other numerous attractions were kept busy. There was not an untoward incident to mar the festivities and everybody seemed to enjoy the occasion to the limit.

Today's Attendance. The attendance today, both at the down town attractions and at the fair grounds, has exceeded that of the first two days. The fair grounds especially, received a much better attendance today than yesterday.

All the attractions, including those in exhibition hall, were well patronized and the only thing that was lacking was the balloon ascensions, the big gas bag not being in readiness until late today.

Many Attractions.

The carnival shows opened at 9 o'clock and these, in connection with the free shows, including the revolving ladders, high dive and high wire performance, held the attention of the crowd until noon.

Fair a Success.

The fair is a distinct success in every way and to the men who have ably managed its preparation and carried out the details of the big meeting is due much credit.

President J. A. Weinman has given much time to the fair and Secretary Roy Stamm has kept on the jump for the past two or three months day and night, chasing down everything that looked like an attraction. He is still on the move and to the hustling secretary can be credited much of the attractiveness and success of the fair. He deserves a place along with President Weinman, Manager Hubbs and other officials on next years board.

Whenever the band, under the lead-ership of M. C. Grady, begins to play, there is a rush toward the mu-sicians and the crowd remains until the last echo dies away.

GOSNEY SPEECH FEATURE OF

Regulation of Forest Reserves Expounded by Well Known Arizonian.

The following is the address of E. S. Gosney, of Flagstaff, Arizona, on "Forest Reserves and Their Regulation," which was of such importance that the Wool Growers' convention ordered it published in pamphlet form.

It is scarcely possible that there can remain in the mind of any intelligent citizen of our country, a doubt as to the necessity of some system of forest reserves. Our forests must be protected and preserved from the supply of timber to meet the necessities of our children and our children's children. dren's children.

I remember, when a small boy, of seeing the neighbors gather in the farmer's clearing for a "Log rolling," and they piled in the draws and low piaces great heaps of magnificent oak, hickory, ash and poplar logs and burned them up to get rid of them. Today their children ship lumber a thousand miles to build fences and houses.

We are told that a conservative or

We are told that a conservative estimate shows that at the present rate of consumption we have in the United States only timber enough to hast fifty years; and if the consumption continues to increase as it has in recent years our timber will be exhausted in thirty years. The statement is startling. The only reason that earlier action has not been taken to stop the reckless waste of timber, to preserve the forests, is that the people generally did not know these facts. The first necessity was to bring the facts before the people: to show the people the necessity of protecting and growing the trees and ask thier aid.

Solar of us have been skeptical about the theories of the protection of the forest covered water sheds and their influence upon the flow of our streams, springs and wells. The enthusiast sometimes exaggerates these benefits and losses sight of all else, but a close observation of results, has surprised many of us as to what can be done by a proper protection of the timber and vegetable growth on the water sheds of the country.

It is scarcely worth while to refer to the question of overgrazing. We all know the results. We also know that know the results. We also know that among certain, enthusiastic scientific gentiemen, who should have investigated more and written less, sheep have a reputation for destroying the forest and range that they do not deserve. You can hold sheep on a limited area until starvation forces them to clip the grass to the roots, but when properly handled there are no such results, and their tramping is less destructive to the grass roots than that of heavier animals. In those matters the scientist may yet learn something by following the herds.

The forest reserve laws, the rules and regulations under those laws. The forest reserve laws, the rules and regulations under those laws, and the forest service organization under Mr. Pinchot's management is only the machinery by which to carry out the will of the people. Their object might be stated as three-fold:

First, to use the timber but preserve the forest.

Second, to use the water but preserve the watershed.

Third, to use the grass in the forest reserves but protect and preserve the range and the small trees.

We all heartly endorse this policy. The question is how these ends shall be accomplished. Much has been accomplished already, and many blunders have been made. The forest service have been made. The forest service complished already, and many blunders have been made. The forest service has a small army of rangers in the field, good, bad and indifferent, who are getting credit for much that is being done by the stock men and honest settlers and occupants of these forests. The government can not hire and keep the class of ranges they need at the salaries they now pay and it can not hire enough rangers to protect the forests from fire at any price.

A forest may be protected in this arid country for ten or twenty years

A forest may be protected in this arid country for ten or twenty years and a splendid growth of young trees had, and those trees, the work of all those years, may be swept away by a single fire. These forests can never be protected by forest rangers. Hundreds of fires are started by lightning, campers and in various ways, and extinguished by stock men that the rangers never see or know of. I have known stock men to fight forest fires for days and extinguish them without ever seeing a ranger. The stock men and settlers must protect the forests from fires, the rangers cannot.

horses and cattle, which require perhaps forty or. fifty men to run them; but the whereabouts of the cowboy is more uncertain than the range rider. We have a few ranchers, but not many in localities most likely to suffer from fires. Permits are issued for 125,000 sheep, which call for at least 150 men constantly with their herds scattered upon the range, always within reach at the critical moment when the fire starts. Two hundred stock men and settlers, in all, on the forest reserve. Two hundred stockmen can do more to protect the forest than ten rangers. Twenty stock men cover the district of each forest range rider. Who will likely put out the fires?

A few years ago the newspapers

Who will likely put out the fires?

A few years ago the newspapers and magazines of the country were full of articles charging the sheep herders, especially the Mexican herders, with wiffully and recklessly setting out fires, but time and experience have proven these charges to be slander. When properly advised of their duties and fairly treated, our sheep herders are splendid guards against forest fires. They extinguish hundreds of fires never reported or known by forest officials. Many receive better salaries than the government pay their rangers, and are fully as reliable and efficient men.

A thousand horses or cattle will consume as much grass as eight thousand sheep. One man will look after the horses or cattle and spend perhaps half his time on their range.

E. S. Gosney, of Flagstaff, Ariz., who delivered address before Wool Growers' Convention on "Forest Re-serve; and Their Regulations,"

It takes at least eight men to care for the eight thousand sheep and they must be on the range day and night all the time. Therefore sheep, which consume the same amount of forest forage as horses and cattle provide eight times as many men upon the range. It is easy to see where the available force of men must come from to put out fires in their incipiency. The conclusion is inevitable that, in most of the forest reserves of New Mexico and Arizona, the grazing of sheep under seasonable limitations and regulations affords the greatest and only practical protection against forest fires. These are the possibilities of the case. It remains for us, the sheep owners of the country, to see to it that every employe on our force gives to the protection of these forests his most careful and best effords. We must demonstrate to the forest service that sheep and sheep men are indispensable, as a part of practical forestry. Absolute fidelity to duty by every man will bring this about. The stock men of the forest reserves, must not only do their full duty toward the forest service but they must demand of forest officials the highest degree of integrity and fairness.

Fewer forest rangers, if they are Fewer forest rangers, if they are, intelligent, energetic, honest and fair minded, with the hearty co-operation of the stock men and settlers, will do more efficient work than twice their more carelessly selected poorly paid. The stockmen and their employes must be treated right by forest officials, to secure the neby forest officials, to secure the necessary co-operation and efficient work. Forest service must demand of the stock men, who hold these permits to graze, the highest standard of integrity. There must be no triffling. The man who to gain an advantage, will state a wiliful false-hood, or commit deliberate perjury is not a desirable home builder or occupant of forest reserves. Such a man can not be relied upon and should be excluded from grazing privileges. If we are to depend upon the settlers and stock men using the forest reserves to protect them from the one arch destroyer, we must have honest reliable men only. Liars, perjurers and dishonest men can not be depended upon to protect the forest heritage of future generations.

I have the greatest respect for the the rangers never see or know of. I have known stock men to fight forest fires for days and extinguish them without ever seeing a ranger. The stock men and settlers must protect the foresis from fires, the rangers cannot.

Take for example the San Prancisco Mountain Forest reserve. They employ about ten range riders to protect a district nearly sixty miles aquare. Each ranger covers an average area of sixteen miles square. If the happened to be on one side of this district or at almost any point except on a high hill that overlooked the district he could not see the smoke from a fire until under favorable conditions. It would be beyond control by any reasonable force of men.

What protection have we? We have permits for grazing 40,000 are generations to protect the forester; cannot.

I have the greatest respect for the integrity of the forester, Gifford Pinchot, and the highest admiration for the tircless effort and self sacrifice he is making for this great work of our country. While this is true, we must not be blind to the mistakes made by the forester or forestry service. We must not expect perfection in the rules and regulations that come from the forester's office. But we have a right to make a patient persistent demand for even-handed justice, the correction of all errors and for open, rational, fair methods of investigation and decision of questions.

which is used or is intended to be used to influence the decision of that case, which report is not open to the inspection and criticism of any party interested in the contest. The methods of the trial of contested cases and the fidelity to duty of the forest service officials should approach as closely as possible the principles and methods of our courts of justice. This they have not done in the past. The forest service as now administered is an autocracy, and the forest supervisor is practically an autocrat. The forest service makes its own rules and regulations and changes them as often as it likes, without notice to the range occupant. It regulates limits or excludes the resident and stock grower from the use of his ranch water or recognized range. It decides his rights and enforces its decrees, and the clitzen has no appeal to the courts, and no principles or precedents limit the will of the forest service judge who passes on the case. These are dangerous powers to place in the hands of men of limited experience and knowledge of the subject matter, the country and the business involved in their decisions.

If such powers must be given to forest service officials, justice demands that such officials be selected with the greatest care, and that some means be placed in their hands, and within the reach of the citizens, whose rights are to be thus determined, whereby the parties knowing the facts can be placed upon the witness stand and compelled to tell what they know under oath. An act of congress granting such authority to the proper officer is necessary for the protection of the purposes of forestry, for the protection of the rights of the people and the good name and integrity of forestry service, No court in the land would listen for a moment to such alleged evidence as these forest service judges must depend upon for their facts.

A wrongdoer within the ranks of the navy or military service is tried before a court martial, which has before a court martial, which has the power to summon and examine witnesses as in other courts, but with this army of the forest service dealing directly with the rights of the people, no such power is given. How is forest service to rid itself of unscrupulous, dangerous employes?

We all know, if a difference arises between two neighbors, other neighbors not interested, will not give facts they know against either party unless they are almost forced to do so, and then as a rule they give only such as they feel are necessary.
Every lawyer knows that it is utterly impossible to get the facts of any y impossible to get the facts of any ase before a court without the pow-r to summon and examine witnesses ander oath. Exparty affidavits and eports will not answer the ends of

Such a law would be a terror to every wrongdoer whether private clitizen or public official, who wants to keep any material facts from the knowledge of the forest service, Amateurs Were Too Light For Professionals--Brewer's Kid Won 2:17 Pace.

Hidalgo was too light for the Browns yesterday and Silver City lost to the big fellows by a score of 16 to 1—Bryan's free silver ratio. This score should make a hit with the mining magnates of Grant county in one way at least.

There was no question as to what the result of the game would be after the first inning. The amateurs were not strong enough for Matson's professionals. While Silver City was given one score, the game should have been a shut out. The one score made by the visitors came in the have been a shut out.
