GERMAN DRIVE AGAINST SLAVS IS SUCCESSFUL ON ALL FRONTS

Russians Are Driven From Position After Position by Impetuous Rush of Kaiser's Vast Armies.

VICTORIOUS ADVANCE OF GEN. VON BUELOW

Mackensen's Forces Meet Determined Resistance Which They Break After Important Battles Are Fought.

The offensive movement, begun a few days ago in the eastern theater of war, under command of Field Marshal von Hindenburg, has led to great results. The army of General von Buelow, which, on July 14, crossed the Windau river northward and Kurshland, continued its victorious advance. Eleven officers and 2,460 men were taken prisoners and three cannon and five machine-guns were captured.

Russian Lines Stormed.

The army of General von Gallwitz proceeded against the Russian positions in the district south and southeast of Olawa. After a brilliant attack, three Russian lines situated behind each other northward and northeast of Przemysl, were pierced. Dziewila was captured and Lipa was reached and attacked by pressure exerted from both these directions. The Russians retreated after the evacuation of the district of Kolno. Their line of defense from Ciechanow to Krasnosiel, lying behind them. On the 15th, German troops also took these enemy positions by storm, and entered the position south of Zielona over a front of seven kilometers. Four and a third miles forcing their opponents to retreat. They were supported by troops under General von Scholtz, which are occupied with a pursuit from the direction of Kolno. Since yesterday the Russians have been retreating on the center front, between the Plosa and Vistula rivers, in the direction of the Narow.

Successes in Southeast.

Southwestern theater of war: After the Teutonic allies had taken during the last few days a series of Russian positions on the river Bug and between the Bug and the Vistula, important battles developed. Under the leadership of Field Marshal von Mackensen, West of the Vistula in the district southwest of Krasnostav, German troops broke through the enemy's line. For twenty-eight officers and 6,350 men have fallen into our hands, and nine machine-guns have been captured. West of the upper Vistula, the offensive has again been by the army of General von Woytki.

GERMANS DECIMATE BELGIAN WITH FLAGS

Berlin, July 18. (Via London, 9:40 p. m.)—The news of Field Marshal von Hindenburg's newest victory for the Russians, which the war office announces has resulted in important successes, was made known late yesterday, causing general rejoicing and the appearance of flags all over the city. The breaking of the Russian line near Krasnostav, 21 miles south of Lublin, brings the Germans dangerously near Choin and Lublin, both of which points are of the highest importance for the Russians in retaining their position in the Vistula region.

REMINGTON STRIKE POSTPONED 24 HOURS

Bridgewater, Conn., July 18.—A series of conferences in this city and in New York, resulted tonight in the postponement of the general strike of machinists employed by the Remington Arms & Ammunition Co. The strike would not begin at noon tomorrow, the time set for the walk-out. Persons interested in the continued industrial prosperity of this city were said by labor bodies to be responsible for an agreement to withhold the strike call for at least twenty-four hours.

Lady Paget Well Again.

London, July 18.—Lady Paget, wife of Sir Ralph Paget, who has been ill for some time with typhus, caught while in charge of one of the Red Cross hospitals in Serbia, has left London to take up her work there again.

WEATHER FORECAST

Washington, July 18.—New Mexico: Partly cloudy with local thunder showers Monday, cooler east portion. Tuesday generally fair.

COLORADO SPRINGS IS HIT BY SEVERE STORM

Colorado Springs, Colo., July 18.—What is considered the worst hail and rain storm that has visited this vicinity in recent years, did damage estimated at $75,000 in half an hour this afternoon. The Fountain valley and Frank gardens near here suffered heavily. An excavation of the mountains early tonight by slides and it is said they will be unable to get through before morning.

RUSSIAN EVACUATION RELIEF TO FARMERS

Vienna, July 8.—The enforced evacuation of many of Galicia by the Russians has brought untold relief to the occupants of the province, many of them Germans who have colonized there, and whose farms have suffered the same fate that those in East Prussia did last fall. A recent investigation of the province as far eastward as Przemysl, farther in some places, shows that houses and cattle have been stolen, churches, school houses, barns and cottages burned, and food, furniture and valuable articles taken. In a few isolated cases the Russians appear to have paid, at price far below value, for what they took.

For some curious reason not yet entirely explained they left, in dozens and scores of cases, one article for each family that was robbed—perhaps on the theory that this would prevent the starvation of their victims. Hogs they usually slaughtered on the spot, but at night so that they should not be seen at their work. Hay and straw by the wagon load has been carried off by the Russians. The Germans in many instances attempted to secure their things, but almost invariably the hiding places were betrayed by the normal life in the house that was often the case in East Prussia. There are comparatively few complaints of this nature. Houses that have not been destroyed have suffered from occupation by Russian soldiers and officers.

VILLA FINDS IT MOST DIFFICULT TO RAISE MONEY

Peon General May Soon Have Recourse to Forced Loans From Foreigners, Including Americans Who Own Mines.

El Paso, Tex., July 18.—Never before perhaps has it been so difficult for Villa to secure money and there have been intimations from those close to him that he soon will levy forced loans on even the American and other foreign interests. A large part of the American mine owners agreed among themselves that, in case they are asked to contribute they will refuse. It is assumed by them that Villa will retaliate by ordering their properties looted. The recent order issued by Chihuahua that the currency issued by Villa will be exchanged for the state of thirty percent money for six percent being enforced to a greater extent than was expected. It has not affected in general the price of Villa's money, which today was about twenty United States currency for one peso, but in some cases has forced the small amounts of American money that had, and were given in exchange Villa's currency at the rate from five percent of commodities have not been affected, however, a loaf of bread costing two pesos.

CALLES DECISIVELY BEATS VILLA FORCE

Douglas, Ariz., July 18.—After a six-hour battle in Anavacachi, pass west of Agua Prieta, General Calles, Carranza commander in Sonora, was reported late today to have definitely defeated Villa troops under Gen. Jose Maria Acosta. The Calles force was said to have numbered 2,000, while those of Acosta were reported as 1,500 strong.

BELIEVED CALLES MAY LAY SIEGE TO NACO

Naco, Ariz., July 18.—Reports received here today stated that General Calles, Carranza commander in Sonora, is believed to have defeated Villa forces under command of generals Acosta and Trujillo. Calles was said to be pursuing the Villa soldiers toward Del Rio, Sonora, a small town on the Nogales branch of the Southern Pacific railroad. In Naco, Sonora, just across the border from here, it was feared that Calles might attack that town. Communication with Cananea was recovered today.

FRANK IS STILL ALIVE; DOCTORS DECLARE HE HAS SLIGHT CHANGE

Investigation to Follow Murderous Attack by Fellow Prisoner on Man Convicted of Atrocious Crime.

FIRST AID RENDERED BY CONVICT PHYSICIAN

'I Guess They've Got Me Now' Is First Utterance of Victim After Deadly Assault With Butcher Knife.

Milledgeville, Ga., July 18.—Leo M. Frank lay in the Georgia state prison hospital tonight with attendants said was a fighting chance for recovery. Physicians here succeeded in stopping the flow of blood from a jagged wound in his throat made with a butcher knife in the hands of William Green, a fellow convict, also serving a life term for murder. The blow was struck as Frank slept in his bunk in a dormitory last night. An investigation of the attack probably will be concluded by the Georgia prison commission, the same body that refused to recommend that Frank's death sentence for the murder of Mary Phagan be commuted to life imprisonment. Reports from Atlanta were that Governor Harris intended today he would start such an investigation to ascertain if Green acted entirely of his own volition.

Green said that when taken to the convict confinement long enough to be questioned that he planned the attack alone, and that no one knew what he intended to do. He was non-communicative, giving as his only excuse that he thought it should be "done." He said, however, he regretted his act.

Green Admits Rape.

Frank was quartered at night in a dormitory with about 100 other prisoners and occupied a bunk about forty feet from one of the two doors to the large room. Green's bunk was fourth from his. No prisoner is allowed to leave his place without permission from one of the two guards stationed at the dormitory at night. Shortly after 11 o'clock last night, Green called out for permission to get up and was granted.

Thaw Attends Church and Poses for Movies

Atlantic City, N. J., July 18.—Harry K. Thaw left here today for Philadelphia, where he is expected to spend the night. Leaving his hotel an hour before his train was to depart he delegated a porter to have an automobile ready to rush him to the station. Then he went to a public bath house, donned a bathing suit, and went into the water for fifteen minutes. Thaw spent the day very quietly. Shortly after breakfast he strolled out on the board walk and met James Mullen, an old friend of Dr. Sylvester La Scoville, president of the University of Wooster, where Thaw attended school as a boy. Mr. Mullen, who is 70 years old, took him to the First Presbyterian church. After church Thaw again went to the beach. He posed for the moving pictures for some time and spent the remainder of the afternoon at his hotel chatting with friends. Thaw, who came here Friday night after being given his freedom by the New York supreme court, said he was undecided as to when he would leave Philadelphia for Pittsburgh, but expected to reach the latter city in a few days.

Our troops are repulsing the enemy's onset with valor and tenacity."

In the direction of Lublin the enemy delivered attacks on the whole front, chiefly in concentrating his efforts on the Witkows district, where we repulsed during the course of the day more than ten attacks. Great masses of German troops during the day attacked our forces on the left bank of the Vistula. The enemy succeeded in making progress northward in the Lublin district and there suffered our troops heroically repulsed the famous attacks which were continued until late in the evening.

The most important struggle is on between the Vistula and the Bug rivers. The Austro-Germans are fighting to attain control of the Lublin-Choin railroads, which would be of great value in their efforts to advance to Warsaw. CONSTIPATION

The Most Prevalent of Ailments. The Cause of Almost All Illness.

If you are constipated, your blood is full of poisons, your system is clogged, your nerves are overworked, your skin rough and scaly, your head aching, your eyes full of red and watery mucus, your stomach full of gas and indigestion, your bowels full of hard lumps, your blood full of poisons, your system is clogged, your nerves are overworked, your skin rough and scaly, your head aching, your eyes full of red and watery mucus, your stomach full of gas and indigestion, your bowels full of hard lumps.

How She Cured Her Husband

For five years my husband suffered with indigestion. The medicine he took only gave relief for a while, nothing cured, so I tried Mrs. Sarah Baker of Nottingham, Mo. Our merchant bought some of Chamberlain's medicine last fall and also received some free trial samples of Chamberlain's Stomach and Liver Tablets. He gave us some of them and I wanted my husband to try them. He said it would do no good. His stomach had been troubling him worse than ever. At last on Friday I told him if he would not take those tablets I was going to send for a doctor, and he said he would take them. By Monday he was like another man. The blues were gone, no more trouble with his stomach, and the best part is that the trouble has not returned. I cannot praise Chamberlain's Tablets too highly.

SKELETONS ARE TAKEN FROM RUINS ON PECOS

(Associated Press Correspondence.) Santa Fe, July 18.—Eleven skeletons were taken out of the Pecos ruins yesterday by Dr. A. V. Kidder, anthropologist. The first complete skeleton and a number of fragments of broken pottery have been recovered. The work of strengthening the ruins is proceeding rapidly under the direction of Jesse Kistner, of the Bureau of American Archaeology. Some of the old ruins have been located in the Kistner house. They are well preserved. The church building had been sold and abandoned by the Indians, who proceeded to dismantle it to build a home for himself. One day a group of men was standing by the church tower when lightning struck the edifice and killed two men. The ruins were then abandoned. A fine highway has been laid out which takes El Camino Real right to the ruins and historic points and makes it possible to see the ruins of the Pecos in preference to the stretch which has been laid out.

Trasny Makes Escape

Santa Fe, July 18.—Word was received from Springfield that Trasny, a frisky at the New Mexico reform school, made good his escape while sent out on an errand. This escape of a prisoner at work with the people consumed more than the difference which was the result of his official subtraction.

Statisticians are seriously working on the problem but the war has upset every established way of living to such an extent that the problem is not an easy one.

For example, instead of feeding an urban population living in offices and living the lives of clerks, the government now has to feed half a million soldiers doing hard labor at digging and marching and the entire diet has been upped. Then the Belgian refugees have come into the country by the hundreds of thousands and nobody knows exactly how many and they are different things from what the Hollanders do.

Smuggling Stories Discounted

The stories of large quantities of contraband smuggled into Germany across the Dutch frontier are entirely discounted by the department of commerce. It is true that potatoes have gone into Germany but they were not in the quantities and they were not in small quantities, just sufficient to break the potato corner which some German speculators had brought about. According to French newspapers every sack of potatoes sold to Germany means that fifty French soldiers are being fed.

Disappointed in French

Another member of the fifth royal gave a brief glimpse into the relations among the allies. He said: "Let me tell you that the French as fighters have proved a big disappointment to us. Whenever the two have been together—French and English and Canadians—it has been the latter two who have had to bear the brunt of the war."

Not Much Mud

"It has been remarked by some that the Belgians would at that time of year were more muddy than the mud in my picture, but as a matter of fact I carefully inquired into that, and found that the mud was hardly touched, as a cold northwest wind had dried up the mud.

The Exploits of Elaine

A Detective Novel and a Motion Picture Drama
By ARTHUR B. REEVE
The Well-Known Novelist and the Creator of the "Craig Kennedy" Stories
Presented in Collaboration With the Pathe Players and the Eclectic Film Company

SYNOPSIS.

The New York police are mystified by a series of murders and other crimes. The principal clue to the criminal is the warning letter which is sent the victims, signed with a "clutching hand." The latest victim of the mysterious assassin is Taylor Dodge, the insurance president. His daughter, Elaine, employs Craig Kennedy, the famous scientific detective, to try to unravel the mystery. What Kennedy accomplishes is told by his friend Jameson, a newspaper man. Buried at the determined effort which Elaine and Craig Kennedy are making to put an end to his crimes, the Clutching Hand, as this strange criminal is known, resorts to all sorts of the most diabolical schemes to put them out of the way. Each chapter of the story tells of a new plot against their lives and of the way the great detective uses all his skill to save this pretty girl and himself from death.

TWELFTH EPISODE THE BLOOD CRYSTALS.

"On your right is the residence of Miss Elaine Dodge, who is pursuing the famous master criminal known as the Clutching Hand."
The Barker had been grandiloquently pointing out the residences of noted New Yorkers as the big night-seeing car lumbered along through the streets.
No one had paid any attention to the unobtrusive Chinaman who sat inconspicuously in the middle of the car. He was Mr. Wong Long Sin, but no one saw anything particularly mysterious about an Oriental visitor, more or less, viewing New York city.

Wong was of the mandarin type, with long, drooping mustache, well dressed in American clothes, and conforming to the new customs of an Occidentalized China.
Anyone, however, who had been watching Long Sin would have seen that he showed much interest whenever any of the wealthy residents of the city were mentioned. The name of Elaine Dodge seemed particularly to strike him. He listened with subtle interest to what the Barker said and looked keenly at the Dodge house.

The eight-seeing car had passed the house, when he rose slowly and motioned that he wanted to be let off. The car stopped, he alighted and slowly rambled away, evidently marveling greatly at the strange customs of these unorthodox Westerners.
Elaine was going out when she met Perry Bennett almost on the steps of the house.

"I've brought you the watch," remarked Bennett. "Thought I'd like to give it to you myself."
He displayed the watch which he himself had bought a couple of days before for her birthday. He had called for it himself at the jeweler's, where it had now been regulated.
"Oh, thank you," exclaimed Elaine. "Won't you come in?"

They had scarcely greeted each other when Long Sin stroled along. Neither of them, however, had time to notice the quiet Chinaman who passed the house, looking at Elaine sharply out of the corner of his eye. They entered and Wong disappeared down the street.
"Isn't it a beauty?" cried Elaine, holding it out from her as they entered the library, and examining it with great appreciation. "And, oh, do you know, the strangest thing happened yesterday! Sometimes Mr. Kennedy acts too queerly for anything."

She related how Craig had burst in on her and Aunt Josephine and had almost torn the other watch off her wrist.
"Another watch?" repeated Bennett, amazed. "It must have been a mistake. Kennedy is crazy."
"I don't understand it, myself," murmured Elaine.

Long Sin was revolving some dark and devious plan beneath his impassive Oriental countenance. He was no ordinary personage, in fact, he was astute enough to have no record. He left that to his tools.
This remarkable criminal had established himself in a hired apartment down town.
Long Sin, now in rich Oriental costume, was reclining on a divan smoking a strange-looking pipe and playing with two pet white rats. Each white rat had a gold band around his leg, to which was connected a gold chain about a foot in length, and the chains ended in rings which were slipped over Wong's little fingers. Ordinarily he carried the pets up the capacious sleeve of each arm.
A little Chinese girl, also in native costume, entered and bowed deferentially.
"A Miss Mary Carson," she lisped in soft English.
"Let the lady enter," waved Long Sin, with a smile of subtle satisfaction. The girl bowed again and silently left the room, returning with a handsome, very well-dressed white woman.
It would be difficult to analyze just what the fascination was that Long Sin exercised over Mary Carson. But as the servant left the room, Mary bowed almost as deferentially as the little Chinese girl. Wong merely nodded in reply.
After a moment he slowly rose and took from a drawer a newspaper clipping. Without a word he handed it to

Mary. She looked at it with interest, as one woman always does at the picture of another pretty woman. It was a newspaper cut of Elaine, under which was:

"ELAINE DODGE, THE HEIRESS, WHOSE BATTLE WITH THE CLUTCHING HAND IS CREATING WORLD-WIDE INTEREST."

"Now," he began at last, breaking the silence, "I'll show you just what I want you to do."
He went over to the wall and took down a curious long Chinese knife from a scabbard which hung there conspicuously.

"See that?" he added, holding it up. Before she could say a word he had plunged the knife, apparently, into his own breast.
"Oh!" cried Mary, startled. She expected to see him fall. But nothing happened. Wong laughed. It was an ornamental trinket knife, in which the blade telescoped into the handle.
"Look at it," he added, handing it to her.

Long Sin took a bladder of water from a table near by and concealed it under his coat. "Now, you stab me," he directed.
Mary hesitated. But he repeated the command and she plunged the knife gingerly at him. It telescoped. He made her try it over, and she stabbed him more resolutely. The water from the bladder poured out.
"Good!" cried Long Sin, much pleased. "Now," he added, seating himself beside her, "I want you to lure Elaine here."

"I had been amusing myself by rigging up a contrivance by which I could make it possible to see through, or, rather, over, a door."
Kennedy, who had been busy at the other end of the laboratory, happened to look over in my direction. "What's the big idea, Walter?" he asked.
"It was, I admit, a rather cumbersome and clumsy affair."
"Well, you see, Craig," I explained, "you put the top mirror through the transom of a door and—"
Kennedy interrupted with a hearty burst of laughter. "But suppose the door has no transom?" he asked, pointing to his own door.
I scratched my head thoughtfully. I had assumed that the door would have a transom. A moment later Craig went to the cabinet and drew out a tube about as big around as a putty blower and as long.

"Now, here's what I call my delectoscope," he remarked. "None of your mirrors for me."
"I know," I said somewhat nettled, "but what can you see through that?"

They had scarcely greeted each other when Long Sin stroled along. Neither of them, however, had time to notice the quiet Chinaman who passed the house, looking at Elaine sharply out of the corner of his eye. They entered and Wong disappeared down the street.

"Isn't it a beauty?" cried Elaine, holding it out from her as they entered the library, and examining it with great appreciation. "And, oh, do you know, the strangest thing happened yesterday! Sometimes Mr. Kennedy acts too queerly for anything."

"ELAINE DODGE, THE HEIRESS, WHOSE BATTLE WITH THE CLUTCHING HAND IS CREATING WORLD-WIDE INTEREST."

"You see, Miss Dodge," began Mary. "We're getting up this movement to help the Belgians and we have splendid backing. Just let me show you some of the names on our committee."
She handed Elaine a list.
"I've just been sent to see if I cannot persuade you to join the committee and attend a meeting at Mrs. Riverton's," she went on.
"Why—er—" considered Elaine, thoughtfully. "er—yes. It must be all right with such people as in it."
"Can you go down with me now?" "Just as well as later," agreed Elaine.

They went out together, and as they were leaving the house a man who had been loitering outside looked at Elaine, then fixedly at her companion.
No sooner had they gone than he sped off to a car waiting around the corner. In the dark depths was a sinister figure, the master criminal himself. The watcher had been an emissary of the Clutching Hand.
"Chief," he whispered eagerly, "you know Adventurous Mary? Well, she's got Elaine Dodge in tow!"
"The deuce!" cried Clutching Hand. "Then we must teach Mary Carson, or whoever she is working for, a lesson. No one shall interfere with our affairs. Follow them!"

Elaine and Mary had gone downtown, talking animatedly—walking down the avenue toward Mrs. Riverton's apartment.
Meanwhile, Wong Sin, still in his Chinese costume, was explaining to another male servant just what he wished done, pointing out the dagger on the wall and placing the bladder under his jacket. A box of opium was on the table, and he was giving most explicit directions. It was into such a web that Elaine was being unwittingly led by Mary.

Entering the hallway of the apartment, Mary rang the bell.
The servant opened the door and Elaine and Mary entered. He closed the door and almost before they knew it was gone into the back room.
Elaine gazed about in trepidation. But before she could say anything, Mary, with a great show of surprise, exclaimed, "Why, I must have made a mistake. This isn't Mrs. Riverton's apartment. How stupid of me!"
They looked at each other a moment. Then each laughed nervously, as together they started to go out of the door. It was locked!
Quickly they ran to another door. It was locked also.

Just then the Chinaman entered and stood a moment gazing at them. They turned and Elaine recoiled from him. Wong bowed.
"Oh, sir," cried Mary, "we've made a mistake. Can't you tell us how to get out?"
"No speke English," he said, gliding out again from the room and closing the door.
Elaine and Mary looked about in despair.

"What shall we do?" asked Elaine. Mary said nothing, but with a hasty glance discovered on the wall the knife which Wong had already told her about. She took it from its scabbard. As she did so the Chinaman returned with a tray on which were queer drinks and glasses.
At the sight of Mary with the knife she scowled blackly, laid down the tray, and took a few steps in her direction. She brandished the knife threateningly; then, as if her nerve failed her, fainted, letting the knife fall carefully on the floor so that it struck on the handle, and not on the blade.

Wong quickly caught her as she fainted and carrying her out of the room, banged shut the door. Elaine followed in a moment, loyally to protect her supposed friend, but found that the door had a snap lock on the other side.
She looked about wildly, and in a moment Wong reappeared. As he advanced slowly and inauspiciously, she drew back, pleading. But her words fell on seemingly deaf ears.
She had picked up the knife which Mary had dropped, and when at last Wong maneuvered to get her cornered and was about to seize her, she nerved herself up and stabbed at him resolutely.

Wong staggered back—and fell.
As he did so, he pressed the bladder which he had already placed under his coat. A dark red fluid, like blood, oozed out all over him and ran in a pool on the floor.
Elaine, too horror-stricken at what had happened even to scream, dropped the knife and bent over him. He did not move. She rose quickly and ran through the now open door. As she did so, Wong seemed suddenly to come to life. He raised himself and looked after her, then with a subtle smile sank back into his former assumed posture on the floor.

When Elaine reached the other room she found Mary there with the Chinese servant who was giving her a glass of water. At the sight of her the servant paused, then withdrew into another room farther back. Mary, now apparently recovering from her faintness, smiled wanly at Elaine.
"It's all right," she murmured. "He is a Chinese prince who thought we were callers."
At the reassuring nod of Mary toward the front room, Elaine was over come.
"I—I killed him!" she managed to gasp.
"What?" cried Mary, starting up and trembling violently. "You killed him—?"
"Yes," sobbed Elaine. "He came at me—I had the knife—I struck at him—"
The two girls ran into the other room. There Mary looked at the motionless body on the floor and recoiled, horrified.

Elaine noticed some spots on her hands, and seeing that they were stained by the blood of Long Sin, wiped the spots off on her handkerchief, dropping it to the floor.
"High!" exclaimed a guttural voice behind them.
It was the servant who had come in.
"You—kill him—with knife!" insisted the Chinese.
Elaine was dumb. The servant did not wait for an answer, but hastily opened the hall door.

To Elaine it seemed that something must be done quickly. A moment and all the house would be in uproar.
Instead, he placed his finger on his lips. "Quick—no word," he said, leading the way to the hall door, "and—oh, you must not leave that—it will be a clue," he added, picking up the bloody handkerchief and pressing it into Elaine's hand.
They quickly ran out into the hall.
"Go—quick!" he urged again, "and hide the handkerchief in the bag. Let no one see it!"
He shut the door. As they hurried away Elaine breathed a sigh of relief.

They had reached the street. Afraid to run, they hurried as fast as they could until they turned the first corner.
They pressed each other's hands and parted.
Meanwhile in the front room Long Sin was on his feet again, brushing himself off and mopping up the blood.
"It worked very well, Sam," he said to the servant.
They were conversing eagerly and laughing and did not hear a noise in the back room.
A sinister figure had made its way by means of a fire escape to a rear window that was not barred, and silently he had stolen in on them.

They turned at a slight noise and saw him. Genuine fright was now on their faces as they looked at him, open mouthed.
"What's all this?" he growled. "I am known as the Clutching Hand. I allow no interference with my affairs. Tell me what you are doing here with Elaine Dodge."
Their body almost eyes flashed fear. The Clutching Hand moved menacingly. There was nothing for the astute Wong Long Sin to do but to submit.

With a low bow, Wong spread out his hands in surrender and submission.
"I will tell you, honorable sir," he said at length.
"Go on!" growled the criminal. Quickly Wong rehearsed what had happened from the moment the idea of blackmail entered his head.
"How about Mary Carson?" asked Clutching Hand. "I saw her here."
Wong gave a glance of almost superstitious dread at the man.
"She will be back—in here now," he added, opening the door at a knock and admitting her.

Adventurous Mary had hurried back to see that all was right. This time Mary was genuinely scared at the forbidding figure of which she had heard.
"It is all right," pacified Wong. "Henceforth we work with the honorable Clutching Hand."
At home at last, Elaine sank down into a deep library chair and stared straight ahead. She saw visions of arrest and trial, of the terrible electric chair with herself in it, bound, and of the giving of the fatal signal for turning on the current.

Were such things as these going to happen to her, without Kennedy's help? Why had they quarreled? She buried her face in her hands and wept.
Then she could stand it no longer. She had not taken off her street clothes. She rose and almost fled from the house.
Kennedy and I were still in the laboratory when a knock sounded at the door. I went to the door and opened it. There stood Elaine Dodge. It was a complete surprise to Craig.
"What is the matter?" he asked.
She hesitated, then suddenly burst out, "Craig—I—I am—a murderer!"
I had never before seen such a look on Craig's face as suddenly came over it.

Then she poured forth the story substantially as I have set it down, but without the explanation, which at that time was not known to any of us.
"Oh," expostulated Craig, there must be some mistake. It's impossible—impossible."
"No," she asserted. "Look—here's my handkerchief all spotted with blood."

She opened the bag and displayed the blood-spotted handkerchief. He took it and examined it carefully.
"Elaine," he said earnestly, not at all displeased I could see that some thing had come up that night blot out the past unfortunate misunderstanding. "There simply must be something wrong here. Leave this handkerchief with me. I'll do my best."
"Thank you," she said simply as she left the laboratory.
Craig went to work abruptly without a word.

On the laboratory table he placed his splendid microscope and several cases of slides, as well as innumerable microphotographs. He had been working for some time when he looked up.
"It is dog's blood—not human blood," he said simply, "but what is the game back of all this—that's the main question now."
It was not much later that Elaine received a second visit from Mary.
"Do you know why the servant allowed us to leave the apartment?" whispered Mary with a glance about fearfully, as if the walls had ears.
"No—why?" inquired Elaine anxiously.

"He's a tough man who has been chosen to do away with the prince. He followed me, and says you have done his work for him. If you will give him ten thousand dollars for expenses he will attend to hiding the body."
Here, at least, was a way out.
"It is the safest way out of the trouble. Yes, I'll do it. I'll step at the bank now and get the money."
They rose and Mary preceded her, eager to get away from the house. At the door, however, Elaine asked her to wait while she ran back on some pretext.
Our telephone rang in the middle of our conversation on blood crystals, and Kennedy himself answered it.

It was Elaine asking Craig's advice.
"They have offered to hush the thing up for ten thousand dollars," she said in a muffled voice.
She seemed bent on doing it, and no amount of argument from him could stop her. She simply refused to accept the evidence of the blood crystals as better than what her own eyes told her she had seen and done.
"Then wait for half an hour," he answered, without arguing further. "You can do that without exciting suspicion. Then go with her to her hotel and hand her over the money."
"All right—I'll do it," she agreed. "What is the hotel?"
Craig wrote on a slip of paper what she told him—"Room 509, Hotel La Coste."
Hastily he threw on his street coat.

"Go into the back room and get me a brace and bit, Walter," he said.
I did so. When I returned I saw that he had placed the delectoscope and some stuff in a bag. He shoved in the brace and bit also.
"Come on—hurry!" he urged.
We must have made record time in getting to the La Coste. It was an obscure place, where merely to breathe was expensive. We entered, and by some excuse Kennedy contrived to get past the vigilant bell-boys. We passed the telephone switchboard and entered the elevator, getting off at the fifth floor.

With a hasty glance up and down the corridor, to make sure no one was about, Kennedy came to Room 509, then passed to the next room, 511, opening the door with a skeleton key.
Quickly Craig went to the door which led to the next room. It was, of course, locked also. He listened a moment carefully. Not a sound. Quickly, with an exclamation of satisfaction, he opened that door also and went into 509.
This room was much like that in which we had already been. He opened the hall door.

"Watch here, Walter," he directed. "Let me know at the slightest alarm." Craig had already taken the brace and bit from the bag and started to bore through the wall in Room 511, selecting a spot behind a picture of a Spanish dancer—a spot directly back of her snapping blue eyes. He finished quickly and inserted the delectoscope so that the lens fitted an eye in the picture. The eye-piece was in room 511. Then he started to brush up the pieces of plaster on the floor.
"Craig!" I whispered hastily as I heard an elevator door, "someone's coming!"
He hurried to the door and looked. "There they are," he said, as he saw Elaine and Mary rounding the corner of the hall.

Across the hall, although we did not know it at the time, in room 508, already Wong Sin had taken up his station, just to be handy. There he had been with his servant, playing with his two trained white rats.
Wong placed them up his capacious sleeves and carefully opened the door to look out. Unfortunately he was just in time to see the door of 509 open and disclose us.
We hurried into 511 and shut the door.
Kennedy mounted a chair and applied his eye to the delectoscope. Just then Mary and Elaine entered the next room. Mary opening the door with a regular key.

"Won't you step in?" she asked. Elaine did so, and Mary hesitated in the hall. Wong Sin had slipped out, on noiseless feet and taken refuge behind some curtains. As he saw her alone, he beckoned, for Mary.
"There's a stranger in the next room," he whispered. "I don't like him. Take the money and as quickly as possible get out and go to my apartment."
At the news that there was a suspicious stranger about Mary showed great alarm. Everything was so rapid now that the slightest hesitation meant disaster. Perhaps by quickness even a suspicious stranger could be fooled, she reasoned. At any rate, Wong Sin was resourceful. She had better trust him.
Mary followed Elaine into the room, where she had seated herself already, and locked the door.

"Have you the money there?" she asked.
"Yes," nodded Elaine, taking out the package of bills which she had got from the bank during the half-hour delay.
All this we could see by gazing alternately through the delectoscope.
Elaine handed Mary the money. Mary counted it slowly. At last she looked up.
"It's all right," she said. "Now, I'll take this to that tough leader. He's in a room only just across the hall."
She went out.

Mary had just succeeded in getting on the elevator as Kennedy hurried down the hall. The door was closed and the ear descended. He rang the push bell furiously, but there was no answer.
He dashed back to the room with us and jerked the telephone receiver.
"Hello—hello—hello!" he called.
There seemed to be no way to get a connection. What was the matter?
He hurried down the hall again.
Down in the hotel lobby, with his follower, the Chinaman passed before the telephone switchboard, where two girls were at work.
"You may go," ordered Wong, and, as his man left, he moved over close to the switchboard.
Just as a call from 509 flashed up, Wong slipped the rings off his little fingers and loosened the white rats on the telephone switchboard itself.

With a shriek the telephone system of the Coste went temporarily out of business.
Kennedy had succeeded in finding the alcove of the floor clerk in charge of the fifth floor. There on his desk was an instrument having a stylus on the end of two arms, connected to a system of magnets. It was a telautograph.
Unconsciously Craig pushed the clerk out of his seat and sat down himself. It was a last chance, now that the telephone was out of commission.
Downstairs in the hotel office, where the excitement had not spread to every one, was the other end of the electric long-distance writer.
It started to write, as Kennedy wrote, upstairs:
"House Detective—quick—hold woman with blue chatelaine bag, getting out of elevator."

The clerks downstairs saw it and shouted above the din of the rat-baiting:
"McCann—McCann!"
The clerk had torn off the message from the telautograph register and handed it to the house man, who pushed his way to the desk.
Quickly the detective called to the bell-boys. Together they hurried after the well-dressed woman who had just swept out of the elevator. Mary had already passed through the excited lobby and out, and was about to cross the street—safe.
McCann and the bell-boys were now in full cry after her. Flight was useless. She took refuge in indignation and threats.

But McCann was obdurate. She passed quickly to tears and pleadings. It had no effect. They insisted on leading her back. The game was up.
"Here," cried Kennedy, "take her up in the elevator. I'll prove the case."
"Now—not a word of who she is in the papers, McCann," Kennedy concluded, referring to Elaine. "You know, it wouldn't sound well for the La Coste. As for that woman—well, I've got the money back. You can take her off—make the charge."
As the house man left with Mary I handed Craig his bag. We moved toward the door, and as we stood there a moment with Elaine, he quietly handed over to her the big roll of money. If he had been less of a scientist, he might have understood the look on her face, but, with a nod to me, he turned and went.
As she looked first at him, then at the paltry ten thousand in her hand, Elaine stamped her little foot in vexation.
"I'm glad I didn't say anything more," she cried. "No—no—he shall beg my pardon first—there!"

KEEPING HISTORY STRAIGHT. Our old friend, Edward D. Tammann... the leading hypochondriac American of Hillsboro, is out in an article in the Evening Herald telling just why shipments of munitions should be prohibited. It is not recalled that Mr. Tammann recorded an audible cry against the sale of munitions by the Germans to Spain, during the Spanish-American war, or in the Filipino rebel.

What New Mexico Most Needs Is Vastly Greater Publicity. Editor Morning Journal: I have been greatly interested in your series of articles appearing in the Journal from time to time bearing upon what New Mexico needs most and if you will permit me to state some of your valuable time, I would like to bring out a few pertinent facts, bearing upon the same subject, that have come to my notice the past few days or two.

Among them were expressions from River City and from Clayton, from Carlsbad and from Farmington. Each editor recognized that there was something regarding the growth of New Mexico and each of them gave suggestions of at least partial remedies. In each of them was found thought. Inspired by these editorials, the editors of weekly newspapers in White Mountain territory, Walter F. Twishell, son of Col. Ralph Emerson Twishell, contributes an article which appears elsewhere on this page on the same subject: 'What New Mexico Most Needs'.

What New Mexico Most Needs Is Vastly Greater Publicity

Editor Morning Journal: I have been greatly interested in your series of articles appearing in the Journal from time to time bearing upon what New Mexico needs most and if you will permit me to state some of your valuable time, I would like to bring out a few pertinent facts, bearing upon the same subject, that have come to my notice the past few days or two. First of all, these observations and deductions have been made after hearing the comments of perhaps a quarter of a million people who have visited the New Mexico building at the San Diego exposition since the first of January. These visitors have come from all parts of our own United States and a few from other portions of the world. A great majority of these people have expressed their opinions regarding New Mexico and the conclusions I have drawn are representative of the outsider's view of our state.

How'd you like to be the richest man in the world? Not for this did we wear our somnolent faces and shake their heads as they passed the building... Let us pray for enough tightening our nerves till they be as impassable as a mask, should anyone come and say: 'Your day has just passed in the East' and may the sacrifice be the more beautiful and acceptable that it has been offered. Blessed be she who follows the lead and dies the field and looks after the property, and continues the task for the sake of him who has left all for the sacred war, let her not remain idle for a day nor an hour; let her whole life be consecrated and illumined by the power of her devotion.

No such thing as 'rubber roofing' A lot of manufacturers call their roofing 'Rubber Roofing', 'Rubberine', 'Rubberoid' - Rubber-thin and Rubber-thick. The life is all out of rubber if exposed to the daylight for six months. It would be silly to put rubber in roofing, and rubber costs more per pound than roofing sells for for a hundred pounds. There is no such thing as 'Rubber Roofing' of any kind. There is no rubber in Certain-teed Roofing.
