BULGARIA NEUTRALITY MAY BE ENDED SOON

BY MORNING JOURNAL SPECIAL LEADER WIRE. London, June 7 (3:17 a. m.)—A communication issued by the ministerial journal yesterday, stating that Bulgaria was resolved to adhere to neutrality, is now disavowed.

the enemy undertook yesterday evening a very violent effort to recapture the positions which he had lost recently. The whole of the front from Abian to Noville, and particularly the sugar refinery at Souchez, underwent a bombardment almost continuous to which our artillery replied energetically.

Five German counter-attacks were launched on the slope east of la Chapelle-de-Lorette. The counter-attacks have been frequent in the wood east of the road from Aix-Neufville to Souchez.

The German offensive was everywhere and we maintained all our positions, inflicting heavy losses on the enemy. Between the Aix-Neufville-Souchez road and the Abian-Souchez road we took several trenches of the enemy, in which we made about thirty prisoners.

Our total captures up to date, including the above, amount to eighty officers and 2,000 men and seven field guns, six naval guns from the gunboat Marmaris, twelve large steel barges, one large river steamer, three small steamers and a considerable number of rifles and ammunition of all kinds. Further surrenders are expected.

Of six Germans with the Turks, three were taken prisoners, two were killed by march Arabs and the fate of the sixth is doubtful.

Special telegrams from Austrian headquarters report that the Russian rear guards are opposing the pursuit by General Linington's army south of the Dniester and covering the retreat across the river.

General Mackensen's army is again meeting violent attacks from fresh Russian reserve forces, and the Russians are exerting enormous pressure in the region of the San.

On the 5th, the enemy opened a violent artillery fire on the region on the left bank of the Pisu river.

On the 6th, the enemy succeeded in bombarding a train of enemy boats and sank one of them.

to a cheerful competition producing poisonous smoke.

From Przemyśl the enemy continues the offensive in the direction of Mluciska. On the evening of June 4, the enemy, having concentrated strong forces against the Czajka-Pasow-Hodosin front, made a series of attacks supported by numerous batteries of heavy artillery.

On the 6th, the allied troops made an attack on the whole of the front with the object of solving certain points of support of the enemy.

The British center occupied two lines of Turkish trenches over a depth of 100 meters. The first French division took the first line of the enemy.

During the operation the allied fleet gave effective support. The losses of the enemy were very heavy. Several hundred soldiers and ten officers were made prisoners.

The artillery of the enemy has been dominated constantly during the fight by ours.

Two Turkish counter-attacks during the night of June 4-5, were repulsed easily.

The same day a group of our destroyers, which were unsuccessfully attacked by Austrian aeroplanes, again bombarded Mluciska and sank several sailing craft, laden with merchandise.

The railway between Cattaro and Barina was bombarded and seriously damaged.

The struggle continues with extreme activity and to our advantage. We have delivered several favorable attacks on the two sides of the road from Aix-Neufville to Souchez, and gained some ground in the wood to the east of that road, and to the south, in the region of the Fond de Duval.

The Neville St. Vaast our progress continues. In the northern part of the village we have carried several houses, and at the same time tightened our investment of an enemy shelter in a group of houses to the northwest of that locality, and have occupied the passage leading to it.

We have captured new trenches in the center and to the south of the "Labyrinth" and have advanced about a hundred meters. The struggle had continued without interruption for eight days in that great work, two-thirds of which we now hold.

On the north of the Aisne, to the east of Tracy le Mont, on the neighboring heights of Moulins-Sous-Touvent, we delivered an attack, which realized important gains.

attacks were repulsed by our troops, who took more than 200 prisoners and three guns.

In Champagne, near Reusejour, we have progressed to the mine on the height of the Meuse. In the Vosges, there have been artillery engagements.

The allied troops yesterday advanced east from Przemysl close to Mluciska and stormed Starzawa.

In Russian Poland the situation is unchanged.

The allied troops, proceeding from the region of Stry eastward captured a bridge head at Zurawna on the Dniester, and also defeated the enemy north of Kalusz. Fighting continues on the Prut.

On the Tyrol and Carinthian frontier, the enemy confines himself to a fruitless artillery fire, avoiding a closer range on our positions.

In the region of Lavonne and Polgar, we have now opened fire with our heavy artillery on the hostile frontiers. On the front in the coastal district, the artillery duels are becoming more violent.

In the fighting at Monteviore, the Italians have sustained considerable losses, on the southern slope 300 Italian dead being found.

The enemy's attempt to cross the Isongo river near Sagrado has been repulsed.

They Look Alike But... The average cup of coffee contains about 2-1-2 grains of caffeine, a subtle, poisonous drug. Caffeine is cumulative, and day by day pounds away at nerves, heart and other organs, finally showing in biliousness, headache, sleeplessness, heart flutter, nervous prostration, etc. A cup of INSTANT POSTUM has a flavour similar to mild, high-grade Java, but contains no coffee, caffeine, nor other harmful substance. Postum—made of whole wheat, roasted with a little wholesome molasses—is a pure food-drink decidedly American, and is taking the place of coffee with thousands of people who appreciate health and comfort. Postum comes in two forms: POTUM CEREAL—the original form—requires thorough boiling to bring out its flavour and food value. 15c and 25c packages. INSTANT POSTUM—the soluble form—is prepared in the cup instantly with hot water. 30c and 50c tins. Both kinds are equally delicious—cost per cup about the same—sold by grocers everywhere. DIG EXPOSITION FULLY MEETS ALL EXPECTATIONS

Crowds Coming to San Francisco Are Pleased With Exhibits Which Surpass Anything Ever Known Before.

(SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE TO MORNING JOURNAL)
San Francisco, June 6.—A universal interest in the progress of the Panama-Pacific international exposition has been expressed by thousands of friends in all parts of the world. The progress of the exposition at this time gives evidence that the unprecedented success which has attended its opening period will be many times amplified in the ensuing months.

The arrival, early in April, of the last national displays from Europe discloses a wealth of exhibits, a large number of which represent phases of European accomplishment not hitherto exhibited in America.

Many of the thousands who, during the present year, will take advantage of the existing low transportation rates have begun to reach San Francisco. In the first ninety-two days following the opening of the exposition on February 20, 1915, 5,000,000 persons passed through its turnstiles. This extraordinary attendance when taken in connection with the fact that the great vacation travel has not yet begun gives definite promise of the continued and spectacular success of the exposition.

The exhibition was never more beautiful than it is at the present time. The daffodils (290,000 plants) that were massed in the South Gardens upon the opening of the exposition gave way early in April to as many yellow tulips, and these in turn have been succeeded in May by yellow pansies, riotous acres of the massed blooms presenting a vista of fragrance and charm certainly never excelled. In regular rotation will appear begonias, dahlias and chrysanthemums. The pansies at present in bloom will remain during May and June. Then pink begonias will appear almost over night and carpet the spaces of the South Gardens with their brilliant richness. The fall will be given over to the dahlias and chrysanthemums, the latter being the last of the flowers to blossom in the South Gardens and bringing the landscape effects of the exposition to a fitting close with their gorgeous and regal coloring.

Among the advance events of international interest scheduled for the exposition period, is the arrival of the liberty bell from Philadelphia in a triumphal procession. The bell will be in Philadelphia on July 5th, arriving in San Francisco on the evening of July 16. Plans now made will bring this sacred relic of America's freedom to San Francisco in time to be the inspiration for a celebration on July 17, commensurate with the significance of the occasion. Several hundreds of thousands of school children, from all parts of California, will be in the parade of welcome which escorts the bell from the depot to the Pennsylvania state building, where it will remain during the period of the exposition.

The journey of the bell through the west will afford the only opportunity the major part of the western citizens will ever have to pay their homage to this shrine of patriotism, and the occasion of the appearance of the liberty bell in San Francisco will be a question result in a spontaneous outpouring of loyal Americans from all portions of the United States.

Eight hundred and twelve congresses, conventions and conferences will meet in San Francisco during the remainder of the year, the majority on the exposition grounds. The San Francisco civic auditorium will accommodate the larger of these, others being held at festival hall in the exposition grounds and at the Oakland auditorium. Among the largest of the conventions will be that of the National Educational association. Executives of great transportation companies have expressed the belief, founded upon reports in their possession, that there will be 40,000 delegates, their families and friends in attendance at the convention which will begin on August 16. The principal meetings will be held in the exposition grounds, which has direct ferry connections with the exposition grounds.

It is the conservative estimate of the division of congresses and conventions of the exposition that there will be one million visitors in San Francisco during the summer whose presence is directly traceable to the hundreds of conventions scheduled to meet in San Francisco. These visitors are additional to the regular tourist traffic to the west in the summer and the many thousands who have secured reservation for pleasure tours of California and the west, with the Panama-Pacific international exposition as the objective of their journey.

TOURNAMENT AT WHICH, IT IS EXPECTED, FIFTY THOUSAND MARKSMEN WILL GATHER, WILL BE HELD ON THE SHELL MOUND RANGE IN CONJUNCTION WITH THE EXPOSITION COMMENCING ON SUNDAY, AUGUST 8, AND THE TOURNAMENT HAS ATTRACTED THE UNIVERSAL ATTENTION OF MARKSMEN THROUGHOUT THE WORLD. FIFTY THOUSAND DOLLARS WILL BE DISTRIBUTED IN PRIZES TO SUCCESSFUL CONTESTANTS AT THE TOURNAMENT.

The tournament will be inaugurated with a magnificent demonstration through the principal streets of San Francisco and all the exposition grounds. By a happy coincidence "German week" will close on that day, and of the thousands of Germans that will participate in celebrating "German week" many will prolong their stay in order to take part in the tournament while many shooters will come a few days in advance of the shooting festival to take part in celebrating "German week." Prizes aggregating more than fifty thousand dollars will be distributed.

An idea of the magnitude of the convention life of the exposition is afforded by the fact that eighty-one of the conventions are scheduled for June, 123 for July and in August, the pinnacle month, there will be 349 conventions, congresses and conferences having the exposition as their pivotal point. In a single convention, that of the American Medical association, during the week of July 21, there will be 245 prepared addresses and papers.

Of world interest will be the convention of the international engineering congress with 20,000 delegates, Col. George W. Goethals, will preside over the sessions. The proceedings of this congress will be published in eleven large volumes.

WHITE SLAVERS MASK IN GUISE OF DANCE HALLS

New York Detectives Plan Coup on Human Vultures Who Lie in Wait to Destroy Lives of Young Girls.

(SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE TO MORNING JOURNAL)
New York, June 6.—Tearing off the veil under which the tango trotteries here have masqueraded as mere dance halls for years, squads of detectives in dress-suits have today practically proved that a sly gang of white-slavers are operating in them for the moral and financial ruin of flocks of wealthy society girls.

Following the revelations of the case of Eugenia Kelly, scores of sleuths have been hovering about every corner of the big Broadway cabarets and running down every available clue to the history and design of the human harpies who hang about them at all hours. Only the natural reticence of hundreds of heartbroken parents has served hitherto to hide the huge scale of the activities of this ring of ruin, the detectives declare as they are completing the lay of their net to catch and forever put out of business these cruel crooks of the ballroom floor.

Suspicious Silence.
With hysterical bay more tongue-tied than ever before in history, the political leaders of this town are now pondering, amazed, over the silence of Teddy Roosevelt following the verdict that was expected to result in prolonged crowing and cackling from Long Island shore. Since silence is the surest sign of a man of medicine over on Sagamore hill, the wisecracks are predicting that before many moons the ex-president will burst forth with a campaign chart that will realign the party map.

While the older republican leaders here stick stoutly to the belief that Roosevelt has forever read himself out of their party, many of the younger men in the ranks are expecting to be asked to rally behind Teddy whichever way he jumps.

Underworld Sobered.
Dumfounded and disconcerted over the news of the final defeat of Becker's long fight for life, the criminal clan in every hang-out about town is today showing the sobering influence of this rare example of the overthrow of the old police power. When the cops that controlled the crooks were cased and could employ them or jail them at will, the path of the criminal was plain if he only worked with proper sanction and division of the spoils.

Now that the courts have beaten Becker's forces and a clean, young commissioner would the police force simply as a weapon to catch law-breakers, the most clever crook is at his wit's end to protect his activities. Whether Italy will recall the hundred thousand reservists that can be claimed from these shores is a question that has on the air since all this week great crowds in the Italian quarters here. If a comprehensive call to the colors comes, the large labor employers are acknowledging that a serious shortage of workers will result, although every effort is being made to prepare for such an emergency.

NO STARVATION IS POSSIBLE IN FERTILE MEXICO

Carranza Officer Declares Crops Springing Up There Over Night; Cannot Believe Wilson Will Interfere.

(SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE TO MORNING JOURNAL)
Philadelphia, June 6.—"Starvation in Mexico? My dear sir, do you realize that down in my country crops spring up almost over night, in response to a mere rainfall of the soil? How can there be starvation in a land where the earth is so bountiful, where a woman can grow enough vegetables on a space no bigger than one of your backyards to support a family for a year?"

The speaker was Major Gaston de Prida, of the constitutional army, who has been in Philadelphia on his way to New York to obtain treatment for a bothersome wound in the knee which he received recently in a battle with the Zapatistas at Tlanepantla, near Mexico City. He is on furlough from the headquarters of his chief, General Carranza, of whose staff he is a member.

The major comes direct from Vera Cruz, where he declares conditions have never been so good for the mass of the inhabitants as they are now. "Happy Vera Cruz," he declares, "I repeat it—they are happy in Vera Cruz. The people are sunny, the people are at peace, the cafes are open and filled with customers. The business of the town is going on as usual, for its affairs are in the hands of a government with which the inhabitants are eminently satisfied. We have no long bread lines such as I see every time I take a stroll at night through your great and prosperous cities. We have no desperate men walking up and down our streets in search of a victim, we have no prowling bands of gunners—our streets are safe by day and night. There is food enough for all. Prices of virtually every article of food and wear are much lower than in any part of the United States."

The usual Mexican abundance has been cut down in some sections, it is true, due to the fact that so many of the able-bodied workers are in one or the other of the armies and to hampered railroad traffic, but this is a temporary condition. In no part of the country under General Carranza's control there any complaint of starvation. The staple article of Mexican diet, you know, is beans, and there are certainly enough beans for all. The objection that the Mexican diet is starving is—well, I do not wish to be discourteous, so I will simply say that the reports have been much exaggerated.

Major de Prida is a young man scarcely cut of his fifties, and his boundless enthusiasm for his country, his people and his chiefs, General Carranza. His eyes sparkle, his face beams, as he tells of the awakening of the people after their long misery under oppressive rulers and the vision of a future in which Mexico will be known as the land of liberty. Only when the subject of possible intervention by the United States is broached does his face become grave.

"It would be a terrible, terrible thing," he declared, "it is difficult for me to speak of the subject with calmness. Only evil could result. The consequences would be most sad both for the Mexican people and for the United States. Intervention now would undo the work of years—just now when victory is so near for us. Twenty of the twenty-seven states in Mexico are under the first chief. We have won all the principal seaports except Chihuahua, the west coast, and all the principal border towns except Juarez. We have only a little way to go now, perhaps that is just the trouble. There are certain powerful interests that do not wish to see General Carranza victorious."

"Why?"
"Because General Carranza has no master. He is under the influence of no great corporations. He thinks only of the good and welfare of his people. He is a strong man of independent mind and character. He will do only what he thinks is right. And there are certain people, certain interests, that do not like to see a man like that in a position of power—is it not true?"

"Do you think that intervention would cause the present warring factions to unite against the invading Americans?"
"I am afraid so," answered Major de Prida slowly. "Yes, I am certain of it. Intervention would cost many lives. You know how it is. When an outsider interferes in a family quarrel, no matter how bitter the clashing factions may be, they will instantly combine against an intruder—is it not true?"

Wilson's Praises Sung in Mexico.
"But I cannot believe that Wilson intends to interfere. Mexicans believe President Wilson is their friend. Everywhere you hear his praises sung in Mexico. He has spoken of the troubles so understandingly, the people revere his name. The effect on them would be terrible if they learned to suspect that he was not sincere after all."
"There is no bitterness in Mexico against the Americans. Not even in Vera Cruz, where many of our people lost their lives because they misunderstood what the coming of American soldiers meant. But they learned better afterward. The American officers and soldiers left nothing but pleasant memories behind them in Vera Cruz. They were never rough, never harsh, but were kindly and friendly in their behavior. And my people appreciate that. We are a sensitive race, you know, but our hearts are easily won by kindness. It is only the American who is contemptuous and intolerant in his manner toward them whom the Mexicans dislike. Think of the number of Americans who have been living in Mexico all this time, but how many, really, have you heard of as being seriously harmed, even though the land has been rent with blood internal strife?"

SLIGHT EARTH SHOCK IN SAN FRANCISCO

(BY MORNING JOURNAL SPECIAL LEASED WIRE)
San Francisco, June 6.—Two slight but distinct earthquakes, separated by a fraction of a second, were felt generally throughout the city at 9:51 this morning. No damage was reported. At the University of California in Berkeley, across the bay, where the shocks also were felt, Prof. A. G. Lawson of the mineralogy and geology department, who superintends the seismograph records, said the tremble was comparatively insignificant. Observers at Lassen peak reported the volcano unquiet and that no earthquake had been felt in that region.

WAR RULES WILL BE CHANGED WHEN STRUGGLE ENDS

Hague Convention Likely to Have Its Hands Full in Providing New Set of Regulations for Belligerents.

(Associated Press Correspondence.)
Berlin, May 29.—The changes that the present war may render necessary in the decrees of the Hague convention are discussed at considerable length in an article by Prof. Sigurd Ibsen, which is prominently published in the Vossische Zeitung. New conditions and developments without precedent in former history, says Professor Ibsen, must be provided for in new regulations and treaties in naval warfare, for example, he observes:

"The right to wage war at sea must be regulated anew. In fact, this has never been established on a firm basis, but not one could have guessed that it rested on a foundation so utterly unstable as events have proved."

Warfare at Sea.
"There have been many attempts to place the law for war at sea on a firm foundation. The second Hague convention and the London conference of 1909 drew up a whole list of regulations in relation to sea warfare which altogether make a complete book of statutes on the subject. But the difficulty was that many of these regulations were either rendered unworkable by reservations or did not gain the force of law through failure to obtain recognition from the governments concerned. This was the fate of the most important volume of declarations, the oft-quoted London declaration of 1864. England was almost every international right that has so far been laid down."

"However, uncertain the obligations were in the past, there were certain limitations which could not be overstepped. But it seems that present there is no limitation to the claim of every state to do as it pleases. The law of contraband has received a development which no one foresaw. The trade and the shipping of neutral countries have been placed under a control which has become humiliating. The sinking of enemy merchant ships, which formerly was allowed only when unavoidable, has now become a regular practice."

Submarine a Factor.
"This condition of things is due to the working of two factors. In the first place, sea warfare has become a much more intensive way than heretofore anyone could have believed, a battle of financial weapons, a bitter fight for the means of existence. In the second place, the improvement of the modern means of war, in particular the submarines and mines, has developed a kind of war which is without precedent in former history and which falls by necessity outside the range of international law, which was adapted to conditions very different from the present."

"All this must be put right at the next Hague conference. It will be the first conference to make international law as far as possible square with these new facts. More than this one cannot say at the present moment. No one can say what regulations will be drawn up for contraband, blockades and other matters of this kind, or what code of conduct can be drawn up for combatants in this sphere of warfare, or what can be conceded to neutrals."

Assistant Secretary of Interior Sees New Mexico Exhibit and Is Proud of Showing Made by Commissioners.

(SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE TO MORNING JOURNAL)
Santa Fe, June 6.—Assistant Secretary of the Interior and Mrs. A. A. Jones were very strong in their favorable comments upon the New Mexico building and exhibit at San Diego. They were part of the congressional committee that had visited Hawaii and with them were Mr. and Mrs. J. D. Hand, of Las Vegas. Mr. Jones declared that the New Mexico building is the talk of the coast and that people back east know about it. "It has already done New Mexico untold good and every resident of the state should feel extremely proud of it and the able, conscientious work of the exposition commission. Mr. Jones was delighted with the pictures, mineral display, forest service exhibit and the courtesy of the New Mexico employees."

The board has just purchased a film cleaner and has cleaned and repaired 20,000 feet of film which, because of the frequent demand for their exhibit had become shoptorn. The films are like new and will last into August and October.

Boulder, Colo., June 6.—President Livingston Farrand delivered the annual baccalaureate address this afternoon to approximately 250 students who will receive degrees from the University of Colorado on Wednesday, and their friends. He urged them to devote their attention to the social problem of the world, saying that that responsibility cannot be evaded. He urged the necessity of right thinking and right acting and said "play your part in politics, but see that it is an expression of principles, not of persons." Referring briefly to a recent suggestion on church unity, Dr. Farrand said that true church unity would produce a millennium.

Dukes Get Off on the Wrong Foot and a Sorry Exhibition of the National Sport Results; Everybody Sore.

Albuquerque and Tucson will play the final game of the series today. The game will begin at 2:45 o'clock.

Yesterday was just one of those rotten days that come every once in a while. The Dukes got off on the wrong foot. Several of them had some crosses stored up in their system that broke out unexpectedly and in a most unfortunate manner.

Lefty Russell made his debut in an Albuquerque uniform, and made a creditable showing under the most discouraging circumstances. If Lefty's pals had shown the form that they used to show, and if there had been a little more of the stuff that they call hitting to back up his efforts, and if everything hadn't just been naturally and decently dead wrong, we wouldn't be here wringing our hands in bitter grief this morning.

It should be remembered that the circumstances under which the members of the team are playing are not such as to bring forth that feverish enthusiasm that lifts the breast of the sun gods who have paid their two bits and are nibbling their neighbors' peanuts with the repose that comes with supreme content.

The Exploits of Elaine

A Detective Novel and a Motion Picture Drama

SYNOPSIS.

The New York police are mystified by a series of murders of prominent men. The principal clue to the murderer is the warning letter which is sent the victim, signed with a "clutching hand." The latest victim of the mysterious assassin is Taylor Dodge, the insurance president. His daughter, Elaine, employs Craig Kennedy, the famous scientific detective, to try to unravel the mystery. What Kennedy accomplishes is told by his friend Jameson, a newspaper man. Clutching Hand tries to kill Elaine by means of a diabolical device which generates a poison in the wall paper of her room that is deadly to breathe for any length of time. Aunt Josephine's scientific knowledge is brought into play just in season to save the heroine from death.

SIXTH EPISODE

"The Vampire."

Kennedy went the next day to the Dodge house, and, as usual, Perry Bennett, Elaine's lawyer, was there in the library with Elaine, still going over the Clutching Hand case in their endeavor to track down the mysterious master criminal.

Bennett seemed as deeply as ever in love with Elaine. Still, as Jennings admitted, it was sufficiently evident by the manner in which Elaine left Bennett and ran to greet Craig that she had the highest regard for him.

"I've brought you a little document that may interest you," remarked Kennedy, reaching into his pocket and pulling out an envelope.

Elaine tore it open and looked at the paper within.

"Oh, how thoughtful of you!" she exclaimed in surprise.

It was a permit from the police made out in her name allowing her to carry a revolver.

A moment later, Kennedy reached into his coat pocket and produced a little automatic which he handed to her.

"Thank you," she cried, eagerly.

Elaine examined the gun with interest, then, raising it, pointed it playfully at Bennett.

"Oh, no, no!" exclaimed Kennedy, taking her arm quickly and gently, deflecting the weapon away. "You mustn't think it is a toy. It explodes at a mere touch of the trigger—when that safety ratchet is turned."

Bennett had realized the danger and had jumped back, almost mechanically. As he did so, he bumped into a suit of medieval armor standing by the wall, knocking it over with a resounding crash.

"I beg pardon," he ejaculated. "I'm very sorry. That was very awkward of me."

Jennings, who had been busy about the portieres at the doorway, started to pick up the fallen knight.

"Too bad, too bad," apologized Bennett profusely. "I really forgot how close I was to the thing."

"Oh, never mind," returned Elaine, a little crestfallen. "It is smashed all right—but it was my fault. Jennings, send for someone to repair it."

It was late that night that a masked figure succeeded in raising itself to the narrow ornamental ledge under Elaine's bedroom window.

Elaine was a light sleeper, and, besides, Rusty, her faithful colie, now fully recovered from the poison, was in her room.

Rusty growled and the sudden noise awakened her.

Startled, Elaine instantly thought of the automatic. She reached under her pillow, keeping very quiet, and drew forth the gun that Craig had given her. Stealthily concealing her actions under the covers, she leveled the automatic at the figure silhouetted in her window and fired three times.

The figure fell back.

Down in the street below, the assistant of the Clutching Hand who had waited while Taylor Dodge was electrocuted, was waiting as his confederate, "Pitts Slim"—which indicated that he was both wiry in stature and libelous in delegating his nativity—made the attempt.

As Slim came tumbling down, having fallen back from the window above mortally wounded, the confederate lifted him up and carried him out of sight hurriedly.

Elaine, by this time, had turned on the lights and had run to the window to look out. Rusty was barking loudly.

In a side street near by stood a waiting automobile, at the wheel of which sat another of the emissaries of the Clutching Hand. The driver looked up, startled, as he saw his fellow hurry around the corner carrying the wounded "Pitts Slim." It was the work of just a moment to drop the wounded man, as comfortably as possible under the circumstances, in the rear seat, while his pals started the car off with a jerk in the hurry of escape.

Jennings, having hastily slipped his trousers on over his pajamas, came running down the hall, while Marie, frightened, came in the other direction. Aunt Josephine appeared a few seconds later, adding to the general excitement.

"What's the matter?" she asked, anxiously.

"A burglar, I think," exclaimed Elaine, still holding the gun in her hand. "Someone tried to get into my window."

"My gracious!" cried Aunt Josephine, in alarm. "Where will this thing end?"

"Well," Elaine laughed, a little nervously, now that it was all over, "I want you all to go to bed and stop worrying about me. Don't you see I'm perfectly able to take care of myself? Besides, there isn't a chance now of the burglar coming back. Why, I shot him."

"Yes," put in Aunt Josephine, "but—"

Elaine laughingly interrupted her and playfully made as though she were driving them out of her room.

"Rusty!" she called. "Down, there!"

The intelligent colie seemed to understand. He lay down by the doorway, his nose close to the bottom of the door, and his ears alert.

Finally Elaine, too, retired again. Meanwhile the wounded man was being hurried to one of the hangouts of the mysterious Clutching Hand.

The car containing the wounded "Pitts Slim" drew up, and the other two men leaped out of it. With a hurried glance about they unlocked the front door with a pass key and entered, carrying the man.

Indoors was another emissary of the Clutching Hand, a rather studious-looking chap.

"Why, what's the matter?" he exclaimed as the crooks entered his room supporting their half-fainting, wounded pal.

"Slim got a couple of pills," they panted as they laid him on a couch.

"How?" demanded the other.

"Trying to get into the Dodge house. Elaine did it."

Slim was, quite evidently, badly wounded and was bleeding profusely. A glance at him was enough for the studious-looking chap. He went to a secret panel and, pressing it down, took out what was apparently a secret house telephone.

In another part of this mysterious house was the secret room of the Clutching Hand himself, where he hid his identity from even his most trusted followers.

His telephone rang and he took down the receiver.

"Pitts Slim's been wounded, badly, chief," was all he waited to hear.

With scarcely a word he hung up the receiver, then opened a table drawer and took out a full face mask. Next he went to a nearby bookcase, pressed another secret spring, and a panel opened. He passed through, the mask adjusted.

Across, in the larger outside study, another panel opened, and the Clutching Hand, all crouched up, transformed, appeared. Without a word he advanced to the couch on which the wounded crook lay, and examined him.

"How did it happen?" he asked at length.

"Miss Dodge shot him," answered the others, "with an automatic."

"That Craig Kennedy must have given it to her!" he exclaimed with suppressed fury.

For a moment the Clutching Hand stopped to consider. Then he seized the regular telephone.

"Doctor Martin!" he asked, as he got the number he called.

Late as it was, the doctor, who was a well-known surgeon in that part of the country, answered from an extension of his telephone near his bed.

The call was urgent, and apparently from a family which he did not feel that he could neglect.

Doctor Martin was a middle-aged man, one of those medical men on whose judgment one instinctively relies.

It was only a matter of minutes before the doctor was speeding over the now deserted suburban roads, apparently on an errand of mercy.

At the address that had been given him he drew up to the side of the road, got out and ran up the steps to the door. A ring at the bell brought a sleepy man to the door, in his trousers and nightshirt.

"How's the patient?" asked Doctor Martin, eagerly.

"Patient!" repeated the man, rubbing his eyes. "There's no one sick here."

Slowly it dawned on the doctor that it was a false alarm, and that he must be the victim of some practical joke.

"Well, that's a great note," he growled, as the man shut the door.

He descended the steps, muttering harsh language at some unknown trickster. As he climbed back into his machine and made ready to start two men seemed to rise before him as if from nowhere.

As a matter of fact they had been sent there by the Clutching Hand, and were hiding in a nearby cellarway until their chance came.

One man stood on the running board, on either side of him, and two guns yawned menacingly at him.

"Drive ahead that way!" muttered one man, seating himself in the runabout with his gun close to the doctor's ribs.

The other kept his place on the running board, and on they drove in the direction of the mysterious, dark house. Half a mile, perhaps, down the road, they halted and left the car beside the walk.

Doctor Martin was too surprised to marvel at anything now, and he realized that he was in the power of two desperate men. Quickly they blindfolded him.

It seemed an interminable walk, as they led him about to confuse him, but at last he could feel that they had taken him into a house and along passages, which they were making unnecessarily long in order to destroy all recollection that they could. Finally he knew that he was in a room in which others were present.

A moment later he felt them remove the bandage from his eyes, and, blinking at the light, he could see a hard-faced fellow, pale and weak, on a blood-stained couch. Over him bent a masked man and another man stood near by endeavoring by improvised bandages to stop the flow of blood.

"What can you do for this fellow?" asked the masked man.

Doctor Martin, seeing nothing else to do, for he was more than outnumbered now, bent down and examined him.

As he rose, he said, "He will be dead from loss of blood by morning, no matter if he is properly bandaged."

"Is there nothing that can save him?" whispered the Clutching Hand hoarsely.

"Blood transfusion might save him," replied the doctor. "But so much blood would be needed that whoever gives it would be liable to die himself."

Clutching Hand stood silent a moment, thinking, as he gazed at the man who had been one of his chief lieutenants. Then, with a menacing gesture, he spoke in a low, bitter tone:

"She who shot him shall supply the blood."

A few quick directions followed to his subordinates, and as he made ready to go he muttered, "Keep the doctor here. Don't let him stir from the room."

It was just before early daybreak when the Clutching Hand and his confederate reached the Dodge house in the city and came up to the back door, over the fences. As they stood there the Clutching Hand produced a master key and started to open the door. But before he did so he took out his watch.

"Let me see," he ruminated. "Twenty minutes past 4. At exactly half past I want you to do as I told you—see?"

The other crook nodded.

"You may go," ordered the Clutching Hand.

As the crook slunk away Clutching Hand stealthily let himself into the house. Noiselessly he prowled through the halls until he came to Elaine's doorway.

He gave a hasty look up and down the hall. There was no sound. Quickly he took a syringe from his pocket and bent down by the door. Inserting the end under it, he squirted some liquid through, which vaporized rapidly in a wide, fine stream of spray. Before he could give an alarm Rusty was overcome on his back and lay still.

Outside, the other crook was waiting, looking at his watch. As the hand slowly turned the half-hour he snapped the watch shut. With a quick glance up and down the deserted street, he deftly started up the twin pipe that passed near Elaine's window.

This time there was no faithful Rusty to give warning, and the second intruder, after a glance at Elaine, slipped the key and admitted the Clutching Hand. As he did so he closed the door.

Evidently the fumes had not reached Elaine, or, if they had, the flush of fresh air revived her, for she waked and quickly reached for the gun. In an instant the other crook had leaped at her. Holding his hand over her mouth to prevent her screaming, he snatched the revolver away before she could fire it.

In the meantime the Clutching Hand had taken out some chloroform, and, rolling a towel in the form of a cone, placed it over her face.

When Elaine was completely under the influence of the drug they lifted her out of bed, the chloroform cone still over her face, and quietly carried her to the door, which they had opened stealthily.

Down stairs they carried her until they came to the library with its new safe where they placed her on a couch.

At an early hour an express wagon stopped before the Dodge house and Jennings, half-dressed, answered the bell.

"We've come for that broken suit of armor to be repaired," said a workman.

Jennings let the men in. The armor was still on the stand and the repairs took armor, stand and all, laying it on the couch, where they wrapped it in the covers they had brought for the purpose. They lifted it up and started to carry it out.

"Be careful," cautioned the thrifty Jennings.

Rusty, now recovered, was barking and sniffing at the armor.

"Kick the mutt off," growled one man.

The other did so, and Rusty snarled and snapped at him. Jennings took him by the collar and held him as the repairs went out, loaded the armor on the wagon, and drove off.

Scarcely had they gone, while Jennings straightened out the disarranged library, when Rusty began jumping about, barking furiously. Jennings looked at him in amazement as the dog ran to the window and leaped out.

He had no time to look after the dog, though, for at that very instant he heard a voice calling, "Jennings, Jennings!"

It was Marie, almost speechless. He followed her as she led the way to Miss Elaine's room. There Marie pointed mutely to the bed.

Elaine was not there.

There, too, were her clothes, neatly folded, as Marie had hung them for her.

"Something must have happened to her!" wailed Marie.

Jennings was now thoroughly alarmed.

Meanwhile the express wagon outside was driving off, with Rusty tearing after it.

"What's the matter?" cried Aunt Josephine, coming in where the footman and the maid were arguing what was to be done.

She gave one look at her bed, the clothes, and the servants.

"Call Mr. Kennedy!" she cried in alarm.

"Elaine is gone—no one knows how or where," announced Craig, after leaping out of bed that morning to answer the furious ringing of our telephone bell.

When we arrived at the Dodge house Aunt Josephine and Marie were fully dressed. Jennings let us in.

"What has happened?" demanded Kennedy, breathlessly.

While Aunt Josephine tried to tell

Rusty was trying to lead Kennedy down the street.

"Wait here," called Kennedy to Aunt Josephine, as he stepped with me on the running board of the cab. "Go on, Rusty; good dog!"

It seemed miles that we went, but at last we came to a peculiarly deserted looking house. Here Rusty turned in and began scratching at the door. We jumped off the cab and followed.

The door was locked when we tried it, and from inside we could get no answer. We put our shoulders to it and burst it in. Rusty gave a leap forward with a joyous bark.

We followed more cautiously. There were pieces of armor strewn all over the floor. Rusty sniffed at them and looked about, disappointed, then howled.

I looked from the armor to Kennedy in blank amazement.

"Elaine was kidnapped—in the armor," he cried.

He was right. Meanwhile, the armor repairers had stopped at last at this apparently deserted house, a strange sort of repair shop. Still keeping it wrapped in blankets, they had taken the armor out of an old broken bed. Then they had unwrapped it and taken off the helmet.

There was Elaine!

"Sh! What's that?" cautioned one of the men.

They paused and listened. Sure enough, there was a sound outside. They opened the window cautiously. A dog was scratching on the door, endeavoring to get in. It was Rusty.

"I think it's her dog," said the man, turning. "We'd better let him in. Someone might see him."

The other nodded and a moment later the door opened and in ran Rusty. Straight to Elaine he went, starting to lick her hand.

"Right—her dog," exclaimed the other man, drawing a gun and hastily leveling it at Rusty.

"Don't cautioned the first. 'It would make too much noise. You'd better choke him!'"

The fellow grabbed for Rusty. Rusty was too quick. He jumped. Around the room they ran. Rusty saw the wide-open window—and his chance. Out he went and disappeared, leaving the man swearing at him.

A moment's argument followed, then they wrapped Elaine in the blankets alone, still bound and gagged, and carried her out.

In the secret den the Clutching Hand was waiting, gazing now and then at his watch, and then at the wounded man before him. In a chair his first assistant sat, watching Doctor Martin.

A knock at the door caused them to turn their heads. The crook opened it, and in walked the other crooks who had carried off Elaine in the suit of armor.

Elaine was now almost conscious, as they sat her down in a chair, and partly loosed her bonds and gag. She gazed about, frightened.

"Oh, help! help!" she screamed, as she caught sight of the now familiar mask of the Clutching Hand.

"Call all you want—here, young lady," he laughed unctuously.

"Now, doc," he added harshly to Doctor Martin. "It was she who shot him. Her blood must save him."

Doctor Martin recoiled at the thought of torturing the beautiful young girl before him.

"Are you willing to have your blood transfused?" he parleyed.

"No, no, no!" she cried in horror.

Doctor Martin turned to the desperate criminal. "I cannot do it."

"The deuce you can't."

A cold steel revolver pressed down on Doctor Martin's stomach.

The other crooks next carried Elaine, struggling, and threw her down beside the wounded man.

Doctor Martin, still covered by the gun, bent over the two, the hardened criminal and the delicate, beautiful girl. Clutching Hand glared fiendishly, insanely.

From his bag he took a little piece of something that shone like silver.

A moment later, Doctor Martin looked up at the Clutching Hand and nodded. "Well, it's working!"

All were now bending over the two. Doctor Martin bent closest over Elaine. He looked at her anxiously, felt her pulse, watched her breathing, then pursed up his lips.

"This is—dangerous," he ventured, gazing askance at the grim Clutching Hand.

"Can't help it," came back laconically, and relentlessly.

The doctor shuddered.

The man was a veritable vampire.

Outside the deserted house, Kennedy and I were looking helplessly about.

Suddenly Kennedy reached into his pocket and produced and pulled out a police whistle. He blew three sharp blasts.

Would it bring help?

While we were thus despairing, the continued absence of Doctor Martin from his home had alarmed his family, and had set in motion another train of events.

When he did not return, and could not be located at the place to which he was supposed to have gone, several policemen had been summoned to his house, and they had come, finally, with real bloodhounds from a suburban station.

It had not been long before the party came across the deserted runabout beside the road. There they had stopped for a moment.

It was just then that they heard Kennedy's call, and one of them had been detailed to answer it.

"Well, what do you want?" asked the officer, eyeing Kennedy suspiciously as he stood there with the armor. "What's them pieces of tin—hey?"

Kennedy quickly flashed his own special badge. "I want to trail a girl," he exclaimed hurriedly. "Can I find a bloodhound about here?"

"A hound? Why, we have a pack—over there."

"Bring them—quick!" ordered Craig. Kennedy held the armor down to the dogs. "Searchlight" gave a low whine, then, followed by "Bob" and the others, was off, all with noses close to the ground. We followed.

In the mysterious haunt of the Clutching Hand, all were still standing around Elaine and the wounded Pitts Slim.

Just then a cry from one of the group startled the rest. One of them, less hardened than the Clutching Hand, had turned away from the sight, had gone to the window, and had been attracted by something outside.

"Look!" he cried.

From the absolute stillness of death there was now wild excitement among the crooks.

"Police! Police!" they shouted to each other as they fled by a doorway to a secret passage.

Clutching Hand turned to his first assistant.

"You go, too," he ordered.

The dogs had led us to a strange looking house, and were now baying

Holding his Hand Over Elaine's Mouth to Prevent Her Screaming, He Snatched the Revolver Away Before She Could Fire It.

"Elaine Was Kidnaped—in the Armor," Cried Kennedy.

WHAT EFFICIENCY MEANS.

Competition among individuals is what keeps some of them up to the mark, whereas the less competent either do not rise to the standard required or positively deteriorate. Competition among the nations operates in the same manner. In Europe, Germany for a generation has been setting the pace. Its rivals have been forced to reform, to regenerate, to settle their houses in order, as witness France and Russia.

Great Britain is halting before the necessity of drastic dealing with its drink evil, and but for the war it never would so much as consider dealing with the evil. Individualism is too precious a thing under the British system. Moral reform and other habits are for the individual to choose; he cannot be compelled by law to be industrious or saving or temperate. If he choose to be a valuable economic unit, well and good; if he doesn't, it is his own funeral, and the business of nobody else.

An individualistic society like the British or American has relied upon the moral forces to keep the individual efficient for himself and for his fellows. The individual is exhorted for the good of his own soul not to get drunk, not to waste his earnings, not to abuse his wife, not to neglect his children. There is no denying that much good has come to many individuals through moral persuasion. But are moral means only sufficient to produce the required sum of economic virtue?

Apparently not. Germany regulates the life of all of its citizens. It does not rely on moral persuasion alone, nor on the patriotic incentive, powerful as it has made the latter instrumentality. It also orders, and enforces its orders. And by all these means it has produced so high a degree of efficiency that its rivals are compelled to resort to drastic remedies to cure their weaknesses. Russia has prohibited the sale of vodka and France that of absinthe.

England admits the necessity for such reforms among her own people, but hesitates before taking a step so revolutionary. Until this war broke out, the Lloyd-George system was that of coddling the people into a system by which little work was required from any one who did not wish to work. The taxes were being paid by the rich and old age pensions made it unnecessary for the individual to cultivate habits of thrift.

The French government was coming close to doing the same sort of thing, to coddling its citizens into comfortable laziness and contented mediocrity—which is indeed the dream of socialism. What has saved France has been the German menace, and if England is saved it will be that the same menace has forced the British people to energy, to sacrifice, to heroism.

Religious England is irritated over how they are to follow the prayer book. There the prayers include all of the members of the royal family, many of whom are German and fighting against Great Britain. It seems that these good people cannot trust God to discriminate between the loyal British royalty and the hated German royalty.

SERVING THE "DEAR PEOPLE."

Comparatively few people know outside of railroad circles, that what is known as the Cummins amendment to the interstate commerce law went into effect three days ago. It is the ripe fruitage of Senator Cummins' ceaseless and fatherly interest in the "dear people."

On the republican side, Cummins and La Follette have championed the cause of the people ceaselessly. La Follette got in his first work for the reformation of Wisconsin, and he so remedied the state that there were some hundreds of commissions formed, at the expense of the state, for the enforcement of the people's rights. The only trouble about it was that the people to be benefited also had to pay the bulk of the taxes for the maintenance of the commissions. And as the years passed, it gradually was borne in upon them that the protection was costing them vastly more than the benefits were worth. So, last year, the people revolted and overthrew the La Follette machine and the commissions are being abolished.

Also, in his efforts to serve the "dear people," Senator La Follette has the seaman's law passed at the last congress. It will become effective November 3, and already American steamship companies are giving notice that they will quit business, just at a time that they should be booming. We lost our merchant marine during the civil war and it was hoped that we would regain it during the world war now raging. But under the new seaman's law, the American ships engaged in traffic on the Pacific cannot compete with the Japs. The Japs, realizing the situation, are working their shipbuilding plants night and day in order to take the little commerce heretofore carried in American bottoms. The British, French, Italian and Scandinavian ships, which still have the run of the Atlantic ocean, will displace the American lines there.

But coming back to Senator La Follette's great competitor, Senator A. B. Cummins and his bill, now a law. It is probable that when the Iowa statesman drew his complicated bill, he did not foresee what a world of unnecessary trouble and vexation it was destined to cause the traveling public. One may doubt whether he realized that the law would apply to baggage as well as to freight.

But the Interstate Commerce commission had no doubt on the subject. When that commission studied the Cummins amendment carefully, it discovered that every person who checks his trunk when going on a journey is in point of fact a shipper and must therefore have a bill of lading. He must also put a definite valuation on the contents of his trunk in order to recover the same in case of its loss or damage.

The Cummins idea was to force the railroads to pay full value for all goods lost or damaged in transit. So far, so good. But many shipments are in closed packages, the contents of which are not known to the railroads. In shipping such "hidden goods," therefore, it is required that the shipper state in writing the value thereof. Moreover, the commission is authorized to establish rates dependent on the value of the property shipped, as stated by the shipper.

This is all perfectly practicable as to freight, but when applied to personal baggage cannot fail to prove an unmitigated nuisance. In compliance with this law, the Interstate Commerce commission has promulgated rules under which a piece of baggage containing articles to the value of $100 must be carried free by the railroads. For each hundred dollars in excess, the traveler must pay ten cents extra—a sort of insurance premium.

Thus, whenever you start on a journey now, either you must carry only hand baggage or you must get a bill of lading and sign a statement of the value of the baggage checked. It is even said that a misstatement of the value of the contents of a trunk or suit case checked is a misdemeanor and punishable as such. Before the cumbersome law has been in operation many months, doubtless Senator Cummins will have more curses on his head than ever have fallen upon any other lawmaker of this nation. He is the cause of what must be a vast amount of unnecessary trouble.

Officers of the morals court in Chicago found there were people constantly in the room hoping that they might be able to hear low and degrading testimony. A raid took place in the court room, and those arrested were treated as vagrants, although not a few of them were women who had good homes and good reputations.

OUR DUTY IN MEXICO.

A single line in President Wilson's note of warning to Mexico summed up the whole miserable situation: "Mexico is starving and without a government."

That country has been allowed to degenerate to a level where it is questionable if even a strong man as dictator could do it of much avail. Without food, when murder and rapine are the order of the day, when incompetent brigands wield what authority there is, it is idle to expect that matters will do other than go from bad to worse.

Conditions in Cuba never were comparable to those in Mexico today, yet we felt it our duty to enter Cuba, clean it up and establish a responsible government. Today the same duty is more insistent south of the Rio Grande. We owe it to other nations to fulfill our obligations under the Monroe doctrine. We owe it to ourselves to remove this moral and physical stench from our door. We owe it to the miserable people of Mexico themselves, if ever there was a duty to humanity it is here.

A year ago, few people wanted to kill their neighbors. Today about 70 per cent of the people are engaged, directly or indirectly, in that unpleasant pastime. The question now is, Shall we declare peace on Mexico?

ANOTHER INDIAN UPRISING NIPPED IN THE BUD

With Scissors and Paste PERFECT SETTING MAKES SAN DIEGO FAIR BEAUTIFUL

Artistic in Every Detail, Panama-California Exposition Has Powerful Appeal to Lovers of the Esthetic.

Special correspondence to Morning Journal Santa Fe, June 6.—The most beautiful cluster of buildings ever erected in the most perfect setting possible! That is the Panama-California exposition at San Diego.

The morning and listens to their burning words of scorn of the blow that struck the Lusitania. Among "men and women who have been compelled to live on terms of closest friendship he hears the appalling possibility of a war with Germany discussed. There is talk of detention camps, of prison, of exile and this in a country which is the American German's true home, and where the ties of sentiment bind him to every tree and flower and to many homes and hearts!

The true German is a man of sentiment. Even if he retains such a feeling of devotion to his mother country as leads him to sympathize with Germany, he has a generally an equally deep love for the land where his domicile has been. Between the two sentiments his heart is torn, and the words of scorn that he hears fall upon his sensibilities like drops of molten lead.

The conductor of this column knows a man who cannot speak a word to his own wife and children on the subject of the war, though they are as German in blood as he is; of another, whose wife, not German, threatens to leave him if he says a word for Germany. Another, a well-to-do man, has shut himself in his house since the Lusitania disaster.

And this is the case of men who are accustomed to the most genial intercourse with their fellows, who have not a personal enemy in the world, and all of those whose impulses toward their fellow American citizens are kindly and gentle. Who can say that suffering of such men is not deep and poignant?

Of course there are exceptions to the rule of sorrow. In some cases it is not sorrow—it is altogether resentment and hatred. The conductor of this column has on his table letters from German threatening not only their personal hostility, but civil war, and breathing scorn and contempt for everything American. These are extreme manifestations of the German reaction under criticism. They represent a state of mind that is far from that of the average American German. The ordeal of this average American German, in the passing crisis, is a most painful one indeed.

forma with the Fine Arts building, the women's clubs have their headquarters. Elegantly furnished and inviting reception rooms are attached with the sixty Beauregard paintings from Santa Fe, a loan of Hon. Frank Springer, of Santa Fe. These will find their final place in the art gallery of the Cathedral of the Desert to be erected at the state capital. This bridge or gallery leads to the Fine Arts building, forming one side of the California quadrangle, one of the permanent structures that will form a museum after the exposition. The main art exhibit typifies the modern spirit of America as expressed by American artists and being therefore a unit, scientifically conceived and arranged, is far superior, especially to the teacher, to the great mass of paintings assembled in the Fine Arts palace at San Francisco. Here again, one meets names familiar in New Mexico, such as J. H. Sharp, of Taos, and Robert Henri, who exhibits two portraits of San Ildefonso pueblos, quite familiar on Santa Fe's streets. In the so-called small art gallery, upstairs, Sheldon Parsons, of Santa Fe, will exhibit a series of southwestern landscapes during the month that the New Mexico teachers' excursion will be in California.

Then, of course, the New Mexico building, the most impressive and most appropriate of the forty-eight state buildings at the two fairs, will be the haven of the New Mexico excursionists which they will regard the most lovingly because of its beauty, its historical associations and because it is to be re-erected in enduring form at Santa Fe, for a great state art gallery and auditorium. No one who has visited the building has been disappointed in its appearance, and many from which side it is approached.

Space does not permit to write more fully of these notable structures so deserving of extended study, nor even to mention the other main and subsidiary exhibit buildings all worthy of at least a casual visit, nor to dwell upon the magnificent vistas of city and bay, the entrancing flower and palm gardens, the landscaping, the great out-of-doors pipe organ, the dome in the Palace of Fine Arts, the military encampment, the daily reviews, concerts, lectures, the Isthmus with its amusements and lights, the Model Farm, the Puente de Cabrillo giving the exposition the finest approach that any exposition has ever had, Balboa park, monuments, the schools of San Diego, the sights of Coronado and Point Loma. Suffice it to say, that a dream city has become a reality at San Diego and every one who fails to visit it must needs be the poorer.

Then, too, the exposition is a fitting introduction to the fair at San Francisco, overwhelming in its dazzling array of splendid buildings, erected by color and light, the beauty, the grandeur of which, the careful to get the first impression from the main entrance opposite the Tower Jewels, which glitters with thousands of brilliant diamonds, the court and study the huge sculpture, fountains, gorgeous flower beds and out-of-door mural paintings, before you enter any of the buildings. Read the legends under the impressive, beautiful groups of statues, the east and the west as they appear to us, each other. The main palaces are grouped together, so are the buildings of the foreign nations and of the states while the pleasure resorts form the groups on the outskirts to one side of the grounds. The beautiful setting, Golden Gate and San Francisco bay on one side, the wooded heights of the Presidio on the other, is most attractive.

The entire enterprise has been and is a New Mexico pedagogic, a former president of the Normal university of East Las Vegas, the president before and now in Mexico, even the visiting New Mexico teachers, even the visiting New Mexico scientists, New Mexico craftsmen.

Science of Man. If I were asked: "What is the greatest, the most wonderful exhibit among the thousands of both expositions?" I would reply unhesitatingly: "That of the Science of Man at San Diego." It is the one exhibit that every teacher and every preacher should study in detail under the guidance of Dr. Hewitt, which will be at the service of the visiting New Mexico teachers as it has been at that of the many California teachers' institutes, clubs and associations which came to San Diego especially to study it. There never was before and there is not now, even at San Francisco, an exhibit that so completely illustrates the genesis, the evolution, the majesty of man, or points so clearly the way of his growth and development, or proves so self-evidently and conclusively that vocational training is an essential foundation for education.

Even a child may understand its significance while savants marvel at it. Alas! Hrodeka, to whom the world owes a debt of gratitude for the end of the earth for material with which to complete it, summoned science and art to his aid, and succeeded in creating a display that will make San Diego the mecca of the scientific world for years to come. Mr. Hrodeka, by the way, is on the managing committee of the School of American Archaeology at Santa Fe. Volumes can be and will be written on what the teachers will see and study in the Science of Man building at San Diego.

Indian Arts Building. Across the Avenida de Panama is the Indian Arts building, the beauty of whose mural paintings by Gerald Cusick among the exhibits is that of a Mojave hogan and Mojave handicrafts, the most complete of its kind ever prepared. It is by a New Mexico scientist, John P. Harrington, of the staff of the School of Archaeology, who spent a year and risked his life, in securing the material, paying with a price of typhoid fever, for his activities among those Indians. Of special interest to teachers in this building is a series of models of types of homes among many primitive tribes as well as life-size groups of Indians at work which the exposition owes to W. H. Holmes, chairman of the managing committee of the School of American Archaeology. The school also comes the exhibit of photographs of Indian chiefs and also much of the pottery and other material beautifully displayed. An attraction in this building is the little tea room of the Daughters of the American Revolution. At this point it may be well to emphasize that living at San Diego and at San Francisco is as cheap as it is at any point in New Mexico.

The third great building, in fact, the most imposing and attractive architecturally, aesthetically and historically, is the California edifice. Strange to say, in this commercial age, it is not filled with pumpkins and oranges from California, but with a dignified, most beautiful exhibit of the Maya world, the work entirely of New Mexico art and science. Despite the subdued light in this great ecclesiastical structure, the splendid mural paintings of Carlos Yverri, the Santa Fe artist, show up most beautifully. Each of the six paintings has for its subject one of the great prehistoric Maya cities and above each runs a panel of Maya art. The panels are the huge, weird, artistically sculptured stelae and zoomorphic of the Maya region, reproduced faithfully from models made at Quirigua, Guatemala, by Dr. Hewett, Wesley Bradford, and others. The exhibit is most beautiful, assisted by Miss Ruth Langhain and others of Santa Fe. This, too, forms an exhibit the like of which has never been attempted before and the equal of which cannot be found in all the treasures entered from all parts of the world in the San Francisco exhibition palaces.

In the bridge connecting the California with the Fine Arts building, the women's clubs have their headquarters. Elegantly furnished and inviting reception rooms are attached with the sixty Beauregard paintings from Santa Fe, a loan of Hon. Frank Springer, of Santa Fe. These will find their final place in the art gallery of the Cathedral of the Desert to be erected at the state capital. This bridge or gallery leads to the Fine Arts building, forming one side of the California quadrangle, one of the permanent structures that will form a museum after the exposition. The main art exhibit typifies the modern spirit of America as expressed by American artists and being therefore a unit, scientifically conceived and arranged, is far superior, especially to the teacher, to the great mass of paintings assembled in the Fine Arts palace at San Francisco. Here again, one meets names familiar in New Mexico, such as J. H. Sharp, of Taos, and Robert Henri, who exhibits two portraits of San Ildefonso pueblos, quite familiar on Santa Fe's streets. In the so-called small art gallery, upstairs, Sheldon Parsons, of Santa Fe, will exhibit a series of southwestern landscapes during the month that the New Mexico teachers' excursion will be in California.

Then, of course, the New Mexico building, the most impressive and most appropriate of the forty-eight state buildings at the two fairs, will be the haven of the New Mexico excursionists which they will regard the most lovingly because of its beauty, its historical associations and because it is to be re-erected in enduring form at Santa Fe, for a great state art gallery and auditorium. No one who has visited the building has been disappointed in its appearance, and many from which side it is approached.

Space does not permit to write more fully of these notable structures so deserving of extended study, nor even to mention the other main and subsidiary exhibit buildings all worthy of at least a casual visit, nor to dwell upon the magnificent vistas of city and bay, the entrancing flower and palm gardens, the landscaping, the great out-of-doors pipe organ, the dome in the Palace of Fine Arts, the military encampment, the daily reviews, concerts, lectures, the Isthmus with its amusements and lights, the Model Farm, the Puente de Cabrillo giving the exposition the finest approach that any exposition has ever had, Balboa park, monuments, the schools of San Diego, the sights of Coronado and Point Loma. Suffice it to say, that a dream city has become a reality at San Diego and every one who fails to visit it must needs be the poorer.

Then, too, the exposition is a fitting introduction to the fair at San Francisco, overwhelming in its dazzling array of splendid buildings, erected by color and light, the beauty, the grandeur of which, the careful to get the first impression from the main entrance opposite the Tower Jewels, which glitters with thousands of brilliant diamonds, the court and study the huge sculpture, fountains, gorgeous flower beds and out-of-door mural paintings, before you enter any of the buildings. Read the legends under the impressive, beautiful groups of statues, the east and the west as they appear to us, each other. The main palaces are grouped together, so are the buildings of the foreign nations and of the states while the pleasure resorts form the groups on the outskirts to one side of the grounds. The beautiful setting, Golden Gate and San Francisco bay on one side, the wooded heights of the Presidio on the other, is most attractive.

AD CLUB PROSECUTES MERCHANT.

In Boone, Iowa, recently the Ad club of that city, supporting the national movement of honesty in advertising, prosecuted and secured the conviction of a local merchant for advertising an imitation shoe as the genuine Martha Washington. The manager was fined $25 and costs. The time has come when such unfair methods can no longer be employed without detection or loss of trade. The name "Martha Washington" is the exclusive trademark of the P. Mayer Foot & Shoe company of Milwaukee, Wisconsin. The retailer in selling shoes is not allowed to offer shoes as the Martha Washington unless they are the genuine and have the name stamped on the sole.

If you are one of those who cannot go, yet feel that you need relief from such pain and misery, try Foley Kidney Pills. They restore the kidneys to healthful activity and make you feel well and strong. Sold everywhere.

SPECIAL TO WOMEN

The most economical, cleansing and germicidal of all antiseptics is

Paxtine

A soluble Antiseptic Powder to be dissolved in water as needed. As a medicinal antiseptic for douches in treating catarrh, inflammation or ulceration of nose, throat, and that caused by feminine ills it has no equal. For ten years the Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co. has recommended Paxtine in their private correspondence with women, which proves its superiority. Women who have been cured say it is "worth its weight in gold." At druggists. 50c. Large box, or by mail, The Paxton Toilet Co., Boston, Mass.

How She Cured Her Husband

"For five years my husband suffered with his stomach. The medicine he took only gave relief for a while, nothing cured, writes Mrs. Sarah Baker of Nottingham, Mo. 'Our merchant bought some of Chamberlain's medicine last fall and also received some free trial samples of Chamberlain's Stomach and Liver Tablets. He gave us some of them and I wanted my husband to try them. He said it would do no good. His stomach had been troubling him worse than ever. At last on Friday I told him if he would not take those tablets I was going to send for a doctor, and he said he would take them. By Monday he was like another man. The blues were gone, no more trouble with his stomach, and the best part is that the trouble has not returned. I cannot praise Chamberlain's Tablets too highly.'"

GARFIELD TELLS SANTA FEANS TO HIT DEMON RUM

Former Secretary of Interior Lands Some Sledge-hammer Blows in Local Option Campaign in Capital.

Santa Fe, June 6.—Leaping unexpectedly upon the platform of the Paris theater at a big prohibition rally last night, former Secretary of the Interior James R. Garfield thrilled the big audience and roused them to a high pitch of enthusiasm with a speech against the saloon. Mr. Garfield cited instances from Ohio as illustrating his argument that business would not be hurt but helped, by prohibition.

Tomorrow the city will vote for the second time in recent years on the prohibition question. Six years ago the town went wet by a majority of forty-one votes. It is generally conceded that the election this time will be extremely close, though both sides are predicting victory. The anti-prohibitionists claim the city by 150 majority and the drys by at least sixty.

MORE THAN A THOUSAND TAKE PART IN CORPUS CHRISTI PROCESSION

Santa Fe, June 6.—Today the Corpus Christi procession of the cathedral parish, one of the notable sights of the year, took place. Canyon road, Delgado street and Palace avenue were lined with pinyon trees and the route of the procession was strewn with flowers. Halts were made before the street altars at the Sena and Delgado homes. There were over a thousand people in the procession. Next Sunday the Historic De Vargas procession takes place in the afternoon and the Corpus Christi procession of Guadalupe parish in the forenoon. Possibly nowhere else in the United States are there so many religious and such large and picturesque processions in June as at Santa Fe. June 21, the return De Vargas procession escorts the image of the Virgin Mary from Rosario chapel on the outskirts of the city to the cathedral, in accordance with the tradition of De Vargas, made upon the reconquest of Santa Fe in 1693.

Realty Company Incorporates. Santa Fe, June 6.—The Parsons Realty company of Optimo, Mora county, filed incorporation papers. The capitalization is $20,000 with $2,000 paid up. The incorporators and directors are: A. L. and F. A. Parsons of Clinton, Mich., and C. G. Parsons of Optimo.

NOT FOR MEN ONLY. Foley Cathartic Tablets are not as hastily demanded by women as by men because this particular cathartic is not so well known among women. Women suffer as much as men do from indigestion and constipation, and they also require this scientific remedy to keep the stomach sweet, the liver active and the bowels regular. Foley Cathartic Tablets are wholesome and thoroughly cleansing; do not grip or cause nausea. Stout people say this is the one cathartic that takes away that over-full and clogged-up feeling. Sold everywhere.

SANTA FE PAROCHIAL SCHOOLS HAVE BIGGEST ATTENDANCE OF ALL

Santa Fe, June 6.—Santa Fe is one of the few cities in the United States, the attendance of whose parochial schools is greater than that of its public schools. The public schools have an average of 471, the parochial schools of 515.

The city public schools have submitted to the board of county commissioners their demands for the coming fiscal year under the county unit law. Under the law, the city may ask for a per cent more than it had last year and the county commissioners must make a levy to bring in such a sum less the money received from the state, from rents and other sources. The city schools ask for $31,250, or about $60 per pupil. For teachers' salaries, $16,900 is wanted, plus $700, school supplies $1,500, books for indigent children $150, janitors $1,300, the making of the poll tax list $36.50, repairs $2,000, furniture $500, school safe $500, interest and sinking fund $3,650, floating indebtedness $2,500. The tax receipts last year were $18,562.25, but only $170 of poll tax was collected, although $1,700 was due. Under the county unit law, the taxation falls upon the entire county and not only upon the city for the city schools, while on the other hand, the city must bear its proportion of the county school taxation for which County Superintendent John V. Conway has made a demand of $14,358.

However, the city gets the best of the deal, as only one-third of the population is within the city limits. The demands for the various school districts ran from $150 to $2,740 per rural district.

CUT-OFF TRAINS DETOURED OVER SANTA FE MAIN LINE

No. 21—the Missionary—arrived here at 3:10 o'clock yesterday afternoon, running over the main line for the first time. The Missionary's route is from Chicago to the coast by way of Newton, Kan., Amarillo, Tex., Belton and Dallas, N. M. It was detoured yesterday when the trouble over the South Canadian, near Alton, Okla., went out Saturday in a flood. Two miles of track were washed away. No. 21 had sixteen cars. The length was unusual owing to the fact that Saturday's and yesterday's Missionaries were consolidated at Newton, Kan., Saturday's train having been backed to that city from the bridge.

AUTHENTIC PICTURES OF GREAT WAR TO BE SHOWN HERE TODAY

The first authentic motion pictures of the war—pictures taken in the midst of the battles—will be shown and explained by a lecturer at the Crystal theater Monday and Tuesday, June 7 and 8, afternoons and evenings. Until now the animated scenes thrown on the screen have been interesting only as showing prominent leaders, mobilizations, etc. of various countries. These new German war motion pictures are the sensation of New York at the Deutsche Irving Place theater and now crowding to its utmost the Broadway theater in Denver. They were taken on the front lines and in camp by permission of the German general staff with the approval of Emperor Wilhelm II, who appears in several of the scenes.
