Kelly, N. M., October 25, 1897 .- One of the far-reaching results of the protective tariff is most happily illustrated among the lead mines which surround the town of Kelly.

The Graphic company, operating a mine containing one of the largest bodies of low grade lead ore found in the Rocky mountain region, a mine free from water, together with a modern type of water-jacket amelter of 100 tons daily capacity, with fuel and supplies unusually cheap, and both managed by men exceptionally skilled in all the departments of extracting and treating ores, have only by practiong the closest economy, barely paid expenses during the past era of free trade. In order to keep going, they were early compelled to cut their miners' wages from $3 down to $2.50 a day. The Republicans of this district ask outsiders to keep bands off. They ought to have the say in this matter."

Now, what does this mean? Give particulars, please.

FROM every section of New Mexico comes the story of good prices for New Mexico products, big crops and good times. The proof of the pudding is in was pillaged, and for which he expected the eating. The farmers in that territory are paying off their debts so rapidly that it is estimated that the greater part of them will not owe a cent by the first of the coming year. This condition of affairs is also the cause of sore distress to the grant case, by which the Otero famnumerous money sharks who infest that territory.

Our friendly neighbor in the city of smelters has hit the nail squarely on the head. But the amount of ores, coal and agricultural products, and the number of cattle and sheep now being shipped out of the territory are only the beginning of what will find a market in the north, east, south and west the coming year from New Mexico.

THE NEW RAILROAD.

It is probable that work will soon be begun on the railroad from El Paso to White Oaks. This is a line which the southeastern part of New Mexico has long needed. When completed it will open up a section of country said to contain valuable natural resources, and, to any event, it will give an outlet to the large deposits vicinity of White Oaks .- Denver Repub-

There is nothing probable about this; on the contrary, it is an assured fact. Besides, the mineral around White Oaks is a very minor consideration in this enterprise. The El Paso & Northeastern railway is being built primarily to tap the extensive coal fields at the Salado and to supply the large and growing market for coal and coke at El Paso and in our sister republic to the south.

The section of country through which the road passes does, in all truth and soberness, contain very valuable and extensive agricultural, pastoral, timber, mineral and coal resources. Facts are stubborn things, especially in this case.

The plain language indulged in by Sec retary Sherman, in his recent correspondence with Lord Salisbury, calls to mind full amount of the claim held by the gov. an incident which took place when General Sherman was "Marching through Georgia." In a letter to Secretary Stanton dated January 2, 1865, at Savannah the general says "Mr. Barelay, former British consul at New York, called on me with reference to cotton claimed by British him that I should pay no respect to con favor than one of our own deluded citizene, and that for my part I was unwill THE Albuquerque Citizen editorially log to fight for cotton for the benefit of Englishmen, who were openly engaged in smuggling arms and instruments of war to kill us; that, on the contrary, it would afford me great pleasure to conduct my army to Nassau and wipe out that nest of pirates. There is no reason for being despondent and considering diseases of the blood incurable, simply because the treatment of physicians and many so-called blood nedies fail to effect a cure. Though it is naturally disheartening to the sufferer who faithfully takes the prescribed treatment of the physicians, often at the expense of hundreds of dollars, to find himself no better as time goes by, still a cure will result from the right remedy, S.S.S., no matter what other treatment has failed.

The reason that S.S.S. (Swift's Specific) has so successfully cured even the worst cases after other treatment had been tried in vain is that it is the only remedy which forces the poison from the blood and permanently eliminates forces out the poison and builds up and adds strength and vigor to the entire system. It is nature's remedy, and contains no harmful ingredient.

WINTER FASHIONS.

Shoes to Match the Costume-Span gled Gauze Trimmings.

Flat trimmings, such as braid and galloon, are coming in for a great share of fashionable favor, perhaps as a revulsion from the frills and furbelows so much worn for many months. From simple mo hair bands to the most elaborate embroid eries the choice ranges, and these flat strips of decoration are arranged so as to form all sorts of square, curved and pointed designs.

Belts of gold or silver webbing, or else embroidered with gold, silver or steel, are much worn and brighten up a quiet cos-tume very prettily. A high collar to match sometimes finishes the neck of the gown.

The picture given today illustrates oose sack with a watteau plait falling from the neck at the back, but having a perfectly plain front. It is of black cloth the lower edge being cut in scallops. The flaring collar is composed of rounded tabs which are heavily embroidered, as are the straps fastened over the shoulders by horn buttons. The sleeves are of a bell shape and are scalloped and embroidered. The front closes with square horn buttons and is finished by a jabot of lace. JUDIC CHOLLET.

VARIOUS NOTES.

Colors In Stationery-Jackets and Capes Serviceable Cloth Gowns.

Among the fashionable shades of sta tionery are light mauve, pale gray and pale green. White and cream are always in style. If sealing wax is used, it is chosen to match the paper. Often it is brightened by flakes of sparkling metal, gold or silver, giving a pleasing effect.

For light, fanciful gowns, in silver gray, rose and other delicate tints, voile, crepe de chine, taffeta and fine cashmere are employed, and they are trimmed very attractively with white satin.

Jackets are worn of various lengths and are additionally distinguished by different styles of pockets, revers, buttons, applications of embroideries, braid and passe menterie. Capes of cloth are also much seen and are often made en suite with the costume. Long coats are included in the list of fashionable wraps and are worn both loose and tight.

Cloth gowns are highly favored at present. In fact, a well cut, well trimmed orative in character there is a fancy for dis-tinguishing the front in some way. The tablier is often framed in panels or quilles or it is arranged to button on one or both sides. The edges may be straight or cut into fanciful shapes or elongated into straps, which are fastened in place by buttons or buckles.

Some of the new models of jackets are only half fitting, instead of being close. This style is never really pleasing neither one thing nor another, but every now and then it returns to favor temporari-ly, as a change probably, for there is noth-ing to recommend it otherwise.

The illustration shows a wedding costume of white satin. The skirt has a long PLEADINGS train, the fullness being gathered in at the waistband at the back. The bodice is tight at the back and draped crosswise in front, having a guimpe of white mous-seline de sole trimmed with plaitings of mousseline. The close sleeves are slightly gathered and open at the shoulders over plaitings of white mousseline de sole, a plaitings of white mousseine de sole, a knot of orange flowers being placed at the opening. Orange blossoms are likewise arranged at the left shoulder, with a white satin bow. The collarette and sleeve frills are of lace, the veil of illusion.

THE SEVENTH Beet Sugar factory in the United States was erected at Eddy, New Nexico, in 1896, and made its first "campaign," beginning November 15th, 1896, and closing February 15th, 1897.

THE CONTENT OF "SUGAR in the beet" of the crop grown in the Eddy and Roswell sections of the val-ley has proven to be more uniformly high than any other part of the United States, 124 separate analysis, chiefly carload lots, showed AN AVERAGE of 17.01 per cent sugar in beet; 84.1 per cent purity.

THIS REMARKABLE RESULT was accomplished by raw farmers, unacquainted with the culture of beet root, on new land and under very trying circumstances, as the factory was not assured until May, and a majority of the acreage was planted between JUNE 1st AND AUGUST 10th.

A Syndicate to Purchase Klondike

Ciaims Late advices from London confirm rumors that have heretofore reached this side of the Atlantic that a financially powerful syndicate is in process of for-mation in England, France and Germany to buy all of the paying claims of miners in the Klondike region. Of course this will lead to a vast amount of speculative valuation, but there is a claim in the Klondike, as elsewhere, which it is impossible to underestimate, and that is the claim of Hostetter's Stomach Bitters to the foremost place among American remedies for liver complaint. The bilious and constipated derive prompt re-lief from this genial alterative, which remedies nauses, yellowness of the skin and eyeballs, fur upon the tongue, and unpleasant odor of the breath that characterize biliousness. It also remedies and prevents malarial and rheumatic ailments, kidney trouble, lack of stamins, dyspepsis and nervousness. Like all standard remedies that have established themselves in popular favor, it deserves a fair and persistent trial.

THE NEW WOMAN AND HER GRANDAM

My grandam used to turn her wheel And spin the glistening tow, Or knit a sock as she'd sit and rock

The cradle to and fro,
And when that sock was worn or torn—
Oh, then with soft spun yarn it Was soon made new all through and through, For my grandam she would darn it.

My grandam's daughter's daughter spins The wheel with her glistening toe The whole day long, for she isn't strong.

So she dare not work, you know.

But when her wheel of polished steel,
With nothing to forewarn it,
Hits a snag kerplunk and gets a "punk,"
Why, she's almost sure to "Darn it!"

MAN VERSUS WOMAN

Mr. Gordon Watts had reached tha time of life when a man becomes a kind of walking sportsman's almanac. There was very little in the way of "record times" and "record distances" that Mr. Watts did not know. His soul was consumed with sport.

To be sure, he spent a certain portion of each day in a solicitor's office, but this was sheer good nature, for it is impossible to imagine any subject that in-terested him less than law, and it was only in deference to the wishes of his family that he sat on an office stool His real life began when he donned boxing gloves, sat across his machine or was stroking his club four.

Mr. Watts was at the height of his masculine prejudice. When the man versus woman subject came up for discussion, he had one argument. "Can anybody tell me of one single record which is held by a woman—except, of course, talking?" he would say. Having put this subtle question, he would replace his pipe in his mouth with the satisfied air of a man who has dispose 1 of a troublesome matter and declines to be bothered with any further argument. While the record for every thing was held by "man" Mr. Watts failed to see how there could be a doubt as to which was the superior sex.

Consequently it was a cause of great annoyance to him when one Saturday afternoon a lady sprang into the smoking apartment in which he reclined on his way to Teddington.
"This is smoking," said Mr. Watts severely.

"I'm very sorry," said the girl, who had evidently been running for the train, for she was somewhat out of breath. "It can't be helped. I had no time to pick and choose.

The train was an express from Barnes to Teddington, and any ordinary man would have been rather pleased at a tete-a-tete with a nice looking girl who showed no signs of being prudishly reserved. Not so Mr. Watts. It was an intrusion, an invasion, of his privileges as a man. The proper place for a woman is anywhere you like except in a smoking carriage.

"Do you wish pipe?" he inquired in a tone of sarcasm. "Not at all," she said. "In fact, think I will smoke a cigarette myself.

She produced a dainty cigarette case, and, having lighted up, became absorb ed in the fashion plate of a ladies' paper. Mr. Watts returned to his study of Victor Wild's pedigree with a bitter scowl on his face.

She was really a charming little creature in her white blouse and tan colored belt and gloves. If he had seized his opportunity and tried to strike up an impromptu flirtation it would have been excusable, but he was above that kind of nonsense.

"Here we are at last," she said as the train drew up at Teddington. "I hope I have not annoyed you very much by sitting in the same carriage. Now, as everybody knows, the exact force of a remark depends entirely on the tone of voice. There was something very provoking in the way she spoke-a kind of light, semimalicious satire.

"Not at all," he said gruffly. "De lighted to have your company. It is quite the usual thing for ladies to use smoking carriages. It was rather rude, but he was irritated. No man likes to be laughed at by a woman, especially when he de-

Mr. Watts strode away with gloomy dignity to the boathouse, where his skiff was harbored, and, having overhauled it with the air of an authority, paddled leisurely up stream. Half an hour later he found himself alongside the girl he had met in the train. He gave her "turnout" a critical look and was forced to admit it was decidedly neat. She honored him with a friendly little nod of recognition, to which he responded by lifting his cap very slightly indeed.

Having taken in all the points of her craft and noticed that she sculled rather prettily, he stretched his back with the idea of passing her.

It was here that a trifling surprise was in store for Mr. Watts. It may be that the look he bestowed on her and her boat was one of fancied superiority and that she resented it, for as he quick-ened his pace she quickened hers and kept alongside.

"Beautiful weather for the time of the year, isn't it?" ahe said with that aggravating smile on her lips.
"Lovely," he said shortly and set to work seriously to get some pace on the boat, reflecting that the sooner he got clear of this "confounded girl" the bet-

"Would you like to race?" she said theerily.

"Just as you like," he growled.

It was early in the season and the river was almost deserted. Mr. Watts set his teeth and did his best. After a few minutes he glanced to the right. The lady's boat was no longer on a level. She led by about half a length. Presently she was clear of him.

Have you had enough?" she called

"No!" he roared. Five minutes later he was by her side. At first he thought he had worn her down, but a glance at her face told him he was wrong. She was almost as cool and fresh as when they started. "I think you will have to consider yourself beaten," she said provokingly. 'To keep that up any longer when you are evidently not in condition would be absurd."

"Don't trouble about me," he said "I know I haven't got your pace, but at least I'll keep going as "Nonsense," she answered. "You couldn't keep it up another half mile. For one thing, you haven't had the right sort of coaching."

This was rather too much for a man who considered himself a judge of form, but it was true. He was a very fairly good oarsman, with plenty of strength and pluck, but she had all the finish of a varsity crack, learned probably from a brother

"Well, we won't argue about it," he said rather sulkily. "You have beaten me, so there's an end of it." "You dig the water too deep and don't get forward enough," she continued, with the aggravating smile still on her lips. "But I shall land here Goodby. She turned her boat toward the shore and Mr. Watts continued his way up stream, an angry and humiliated man. A train was waiting in the station as he approached, and he ran for it, jumping into the first carriage that caught his eye. It was not until he had shut the door and the train had left the platform that he saw what he had done. He had got into a compartment reserved for ladies, and in the corner of it sat the girl in the white blouse. "I beg your pardon," he muttered; "didn't notice it was a ladies' car-

"Oh, it doesn't matter," she said, showing a row of white, merciless teeth as she smiled. "I don't require a carriage all to myself.

There was the slightest possible stress on the "I," which made him wince. Evidently she was not going to spare "How far did you get?" she inquired.

He named the spot where he had turned back. "You didn't go far. I hope our little race didn't take it out of you too much.' This was said with an air of innocence, which it was impossible to take offense at openly, but it was none the less irritating. She continued her crushing process until the train reached Barnes by crow ing over him about the race. 'crowing" was done very delicately and sweetly, but it was "crowing' nevertheless. She discussed "form" and "style," told him he depended too much on the strength of his arms and not sufficiently on his weight, and altogether made him feel more like a cockney novice than a racing man. To do Mr. Watts justice, he submitted to it fairly well. Three weeks later they met again under rather odd circumstances, and this time Mr. Watts had his chance of scor-

He had been paddling about on the river for an hour or two when he felt a splash of rain. There was evidently going to be a heavy downpour. It happened that he was at a part where there was not a scrap of shelter on either bank for a mile or two except at one place where a huge elm hung over the water and provided one of nature's umbrellas.

He had scarcely reached it when he heard the swish of oars, and, looking through the leaves, he saw the girl in a white blouse coming down stream at racing speed. A gleam of triumph shot into his eyes. She was making for the same tree, but there was only room for one boat, and he clearly had the right of prior possession.

She slowed down and backed water skillfully until she caught sight of him, safely sheltered under the thick leaves. A look of vexation came into her eyes. 'You must make room for me somehow," she said crossly.
"Come along, then," he said, seizing a branch of the tree and easing his boat out into the stream. She paddled into

"What are you going to do now? she asked in a doubtful tone. "I shall make the best of my way back to Teddington. "You'll get wet through," she said. "I must chance that," he said. "I owe you a good turn for the nice way you treated me when we raced the other If Mr. Watts had thought for a week he could not have hit on a better way of humiliating her. She was a thorough little sportswoman and felt the satire keenly. To treat her with courtesy after what had happened made her feel very much smaller than a vulgar revenge would have done. She told her best friend about it and said: "I was never more taken down in my life. I would much rather have got wet through. But it's always the way when you quarrel with a man -he treats you generously and makes you feel small." Nevertheless, Mr. Watts modified his views of man's superiority from that hour and has never been known to repeat his celebrated argument about record breaking, especially as he has taken his conqueror into life partnership.—

War a Curious Business.

Tryon took his long glass on shore with him and found it useful for reconnoitering the position and proceedings of the enemy. He made the acquaint-ance of a Russian officer who also rejoiced in a long glass (a species of ac-quaintance which was not at all uncomnon during the siege of Sevastopol). In the early morning, as soon as it was light enough, they reconnoitered each other with their long glasses, to see if anything new had been done during the night; then, as soon as they were satisfied they mounted their respective para-pets, waved ach other a friendly recognition, jumped down and blazed away. UNCLE TOM'S FRIEND.

Folsom talked pitifully about a neighbor who was called Uncle Tom in the village. Sick and poor, he could no longer suppor himself and his aged wife, and the people had decided that the poorhouse was the only place for them.

Little Gertie Folsom was taking her breakfast with her father and mother and listened to every word.

All the children liked Uncle Tom, for he always had something pleasant to say to them. Ever since Gertic learned to walk she had a habit of trotting into the stree to meet him and put up a small hand for his large, bony one to clasp.

Often the old man reached his cabin with a cluster of little villagers holding fast to him, like grapes to their stem. He was uncle to the whole.

As she thought over the situation of kind Uncle Tom, Gertle's heart was very sad. She felt sure there must be a way to save him the disgrace of being a pauper Then she remembered how a lady lately called on her mamma with a subscription paper for a charity of some sort. She re solved to get up a subscription for the ben efit of poor Uncle Tom.

Gertie, although only 9, could write quite well. She was fond of writing let ters to mamma, as if mamma were away from home. Saying nothing to any per son, she drew up, all by herself, a paper that read thus:

To the Charitable: Thomas Alden is too sick to work and he not got money to buy things with. I can't bear to hear them say he will be obliged to go to the poorhouse. If everybody who knows he is an excellent man will sign and give some money, he will be ever so thankful and so will Gertrade Folsom (3 cents).

"Mamma," said Gertrude very serious ly, "I've brought you this to sign." I am busy, dear, and can't attend to

'But, mamma, you don't know what it is. There isn't time to wait. Please sign. I have signed 3 cents—all I bad—and Laura has signed her 2 cents, and dere is Bertie. He must sign 3 cents,

"Pooh!" returned her brother, with a well. "I should sign 5 cents, if anything What is it?" "It is to save Uncle Tom from the poor

'Good! Give me the paper." It took him nearly two minutes to write his name. He cashed his subscription of a half dime on the spot.

By this time their mother had become interested. She read the paper, smiled a little, and the children thought they saw a tear in her eye. She had always wished her young daughters to grow up kind and helpful to those in need, so she could but encourage Gertie in her undertaking. She wrote her name, Mrs. Margaret Folsom. She paused, then made a figure 5 on the line below Bertie's.

'I expected, mamma, dear," said the little girl, eagerly watching the pen, "maybe you'd give a quarter." She seemed But when her mother placed before the figure this character, $, making her sub-scription $5, Gertie was surprised and delighted. Uncle Tom go to the poorhouse Why, no. He would soon be rich. While the child was thinking whom to go to next her Uncle Wesley came down the street and was about to pass the house. She started to appeal to him, but at the thought of offering her subscription paper outside of her own family her heart began to fail her. "Laura," she whispered to her 6-year old sister in a hurry, "can't you run and ask uncle for some money for Uncle Tom?" "Cert'n," was the pleased answer.

'I'll help you get lots." An eager little voice cried, "Uncle Wes-sy, Uncle Wessy!" and a pair of little arms clasped his knees so that he could not go Give me some money.

He, thinking it only a childish freak, drew out a jackknife and offered it to her. "No," said the child, "give some cents." What for, little highwayman?" h

"Poor Uncle Tom. Don't you see Ger-tie's skiption paper? We's signed all our moneys

Still thinking it merely a joke, her un cle gave Laura a dime, saying:
"You may give me back the change."
"No, uncle," said Laura, "I must keep it all and buy something good for poor

Uncle Wesley went up to the gate, be yond which Gertie was waiting shyly. Without giving him time for inquiries sho passed him the paper.
"Well, well," returned her uncle. "This is a good beginning. I must do my part."

Laying the paper on the top of a gatepost, he produced a pencil and wrote something "Which of you is treasurer?" he inquired, holding a $20 bill.

"No, suh," returned the colonel, "it didn't. We had along two bah'els of the finest kind of liquor. It was a snake that endangered my friend's life, suh. We were in a native village called Rahmaputra, in the mountains near Simla, hop-ing to get a shot at a snow leopard. The major and I were sitting at supper in our tent with a couple of natives waiting upon us when an enormous cobra di capello crawled in and wound itself around one leg of the table."
"Did you both see the snake?" interrupted the doctor.

"See him, suh? Of course we did!"

"But was there any snake, colonel?" "I scorn your insinuations, suh," said e colonel. "The snake was about 9 feet long, and it raised its head on a level with the major's and fixed its glittering eyes on his. The cobra, like the rattlesnake, has the power to charm its victim, and in a moment there sat my friend the major staring into the monster's eyes, completely fascinated and unable to move a muscle.

"I was sitting across the table from him almost paralyzed with horror and afraid to make any movement for his rescue lest the cobra strike. It was growing more excited every moment, and its beadlike eyes shone like diamonds. The poor major sat like a man carved in stone, wholly under the influence of the serpent's charm "I was about to spring to my feet when I felt a light touch on my shoulder, and one of the natives whispered at my ear:
"'Sahib, please not move. Snake comin tent for water. No rain; no water in jungle. I will place water upon table. Snake drink it and go away.'

"Breathlessly I waited. I heard the soft footfalls of the native as he crossed the tent. I saw him creep noiselessly back and set a glass of water between the cobra and my friend the major. That is the way, suh, Major Crackbottle was saved from a terrible death."

"The snake drank the water, did he?" asked the doctor.

One winter about 12 years ago I was visiting Bill Nye at his home in Hudson, Wis., for a few days, and one evening we were doing the chores preparatory to a good time later on in a cuchre party were going from the woodshed to the back porch, well loaded with stove wood, when t occurred to Nye that he would knock down a huge icicle that hung over the porch steps, lest it should fall and hurt some one. At least this was what thought was running in his head. He took a good, handy stove stick from the load on his left arm and threw it, as I supposed, at the leicle, but the missile went rubbing herself against a corner of th kitchen. EX-GOVERNOR THORNTON

Has Unbounded Confidence in His with Colorado Capitalists.

Ex-Governor W. T. Thornton has returned to Santa Fe from a protracted visit to his valuable gold mining proper pensive. ties in the state of Sonora, in the Republie of Mexico. The ex-governor admitted this morning to a New Mexican representative, smiling all the while in that contented and significant sort of fashion peculiar to men on the very verge of suc-cess, that, in association with ex-Governor Grant and other Denver capitalists, he entertained no doubt of realizing rich returns from the San Miguelito group of mines in Sonora. These mines are located 86 miles south of Bisbee and 75 miles south of the Arizona line and carry gold in paying quantities. The ledges of the group average about three feet in width and all of the ore can be cheaply made free milling by roasting.

At present a nine-stamp mill is being anccessfully operated on the property. The main shaft has reached a depth of 460 feet and about 2,000 feet of levels have been run. Development work is being energetically pushed with a view of blocking out ore for treatment.

The operators of these mines have re cently added to their extensive plant two new steam pumps and the most approved noisting appliances. When this machinery is firmly planted and started up deelopment work will proceed more rapid-

Ex-Governor Thornton reports that the climate of Sonora is fine, that his health is perfect and that he has unbounded faith in the future.

FOREIGN JUDGMENTS.

An Opinion of the Territorial Suprem Court Sustaining Statute of Limitations.

In the matter of Stern & Krauss, plain tiffs in error, vs. Paul T. Bates, defendant in error, from Bernalillo county, Judge Laughlin handed down the opinion of the Territorial Supreme court, holding that the court below properly sustained the motion of the defendant to strike out the Printing company. It deals with the affirmed. Chief Justice Smith and Asso-conditions and resources of New Mexico ciate Justices Hamilton and Bantz conciate Justices Hamilton and Bantz conenrred in this opinion.

The plaintiffs in error filed this suit as an action for the recovery of a debt of $993.81, alleged to have been due to them by Paul T. Bates and R. M. Bates, doing business under the firm name of Bates Brothers in Alabama. Judgment was recovered for the amount named in the state of Alabama.

At the time the judgment was rendered one of the defendants, Paul T. Bates, was a resident of Bernalillo county, N. M., Owing to the atorm of yesterday and but the residence of the plaintiffs is not disclosed in the record. The defendant pleaded the general is-pleas and demurred as to the third. The demurrer was overruled by the court, and demurrer was overraised by the court, and the plaintiffs filed their replication as to the third plea, alleging that at the time the cause of action accrued to them the defendant was out of the territory, and that he afterwards came into the territory and that they commenced their sait within seven years next after defendant's PRESSED CORN BEEF arrival in the territory, and that imme-diately after the cause of action accrued he removed from the territory and did not return until 1895, during all of which time the defendant was a non-resident, and PIGS FEET that the suit was begun within seven PICKLED TRIPE years after the cause accrued to them, excluding the time the defendant was a non-resident. The motion of the defendaut to strike this replication from the CORN FEED BEEF files was sustained by the court below, and the plaintiffe, electing to stand upon their pleadings, judgment was entered for as a bar to the cause of action and relied upon that statute as a complete defense; quotes in full the statutes of limitations; then adds:

"By the replication it is seen that the defendant came into this territory for the first time during the year 1895. The statute began to run on the approval of the act, February 24, 1891, and the plain Major R. E. Twitchell has returned to tiffs had one year from that time within Las Vegas from Springer, where he has been on legal business.

The fact that the defendant came into the territory for the first time three years after the time within which his right of action became barred, we do not think removed the bar or interrupted the continuous running of the statute.

The doctor is clearly an optimist, but fortunately his faith is well founded. He declares without equivocation that Taos county is now more prosperous than ever before in its history. He is satisfied that, in spite of all the large shipments of the fleecy fellows, there are still 175,000 sheep on the ranges in Taos county, and nearly all of these are of improved wool varieties, each one of which will easily shear four pounds of the stuff that keeps people warm in mid winter. The doctor adds that there are still many fat cattle on the ranges of his county and that the owners behold them with a good deal of quiet satisfaction, knowing that they are cashable at the rate of from $10 to $30 per head.

"I have lived in Taos county for eight years," continued the doctor, "and I have never seen such a prolific yield of fruits and cereals as this year in our county. Notably Juan Santistevan and Alex.
