He made a lot of fun of him, an' said "Your'e gettin' gay."
But jist fur fun, he tried it, and you'd ort to see 'im now—
So big and strong an' healthy-like— 'tain't anyone knows how
The sunshine works is wonders, but they isn't any doubt,

An' wunst they wuz another man had kind o' been tuck in,
An' lost his money an' 'is friends, an' mus' begin agin.
He took a train for Santa Fe, an' settled on a claim;
He's prosperous an' happy now; I don't tell 'is name—
He's made hisself so famous here that ev'ry one'd know it,
An' he'd not stand such liberties from me or any poet.
But he's the most enthusiastic boost- er here-about;
An' Santa Fe'll git YOU
EF YOU DON'T WATCH

So if yer livin' fur away, er maybe purty near,
An' haven't bin to Santa Fe we're lookin' fer you here.
Jist let us know yer comin', er jist take us by surprise;

They's things to do an' things to wear and lots o' things to eat—
You'll find a friend in ev'ry single citizen you meet.
We're a-watchin' an' a-waitin', with a welcome hangin' out,

People with kidney ills want to be cured. When one suffers the tortures of an aching back, relief is eagerly sought for. There are many remedies today that relieve, but do not cure. Doan's Kidney Pills have cured thousands. Here is Santa Fe evidence to prove it:

Lino Romero, Palace Ave., Santa Fe, N. Mex., says: "I know that Doan's Kidney Pills live up to the claims made for them. If I were not confident of this fact, I could never be induced to give this medicine my endorsement. There was a dull ache in the small of my back that bothered me and often I was obliged to lay off from work for two or three days. Doan's Kidney Pills brought me entire relief and the few slight attacks of backache I have had since then have quickly yielded to the remedy."

Mr. Romero gave the above testimonial in January, 1907, and when interviewed on June 6, 1909, he said: "I can speak as highly of Doan's Kidney Pills today as when I endorsed them two and a half years ago. This remedy has always benefited me when I have used it."

SAINT PAUL IN ATHENS

Graphic Lecture and Sermon by Doctor Carroll at Capital

BRILLIANT AUDIENCE PRESENT

Triumph of Christianity in Classic World of Old Graphically Described.

It was not only a lecture but a sermon, profound, scholarly, graphic, eloquent, that was delivered last evening in the Hall of Representatives, before a large and brilliant audience by Dr. Carroll on "Paul at Athens." In opening, he told how the ancient world had been preparing for centuries for the coming of the Messiah; how Greek philosophy and literature and Roman law were as much preparatory as had been the Hebrew law for the evangelization of the people of the earth; how Socrates, Plato and Aristotle prepared the way for the acceptance of Christianity in the Greek civilization; how Pericles in fact, had reared the terrace upon which stands the civilization of the present day.

It was a clear and complete picture that was given concisely in language beautifully chaste and flowing like a deep, broad stream, and the auditors grasped readily that it was to Saint Paul that the world owes the spread of Christianity more than to any of the other apostles. Deeply versed in Greek philosophy, literature and life, to which so many allusions are found in his writings, Paul was the man to gain the ear of the men of Athens. It was his first journey to Europe and the route he took was described, as he meandered among the cities along the coast in which Greek culture flourished. It was a decadent culture, it is true, and adhered more to the symbols of the Periclean age than to its spirit, but withal learned, skeptical, brilliant.

The two great philosophies of Greece in Paul's time, were that of the Stoics founded by Zeno, and that of the Epicureans, founded by Epicurus. Both were beautiful in their precepts, and in their original purity reached the heights of human thought and aspirations, but in the time of Paul, the verbal refinements of their followers had taken from them much of the spirit. The Stoics based their philosophy on "duty," the Epicureans on "friendship."

It was a beautiful, a grand, an imposing Athens, that Paul visited. He must have lingered amidst its temples and places of assembly, and their grandeur and beauty must have greatly impressed him, and yet he recognized their vanity, their emptiness. All the monuments of the Periclean Age, when Athens in thirty years produced more great artists, sculptors, writers, great men, than had been or ever have been produced in any country in any age during a similar short period, were still standing in their pristine glory, and the people still met during the noon hour in the market place to discuss philosophy and kindred topics. It was a picture superb and overpowering in its splendor that Dr. Carroll drew of the Athens of that day. He gave a thrilling word picture of Paul on the Areopagus, defending in polished manner, the faith he was preaching and that was in him. Paul left Athens disappointed. He imagined that he had failed to make an impression on the Athenians, and yet, Athens soon became a center of early Christianity, the love of righteousness overcame the mere love of beauty in the Athenians, and the famous temples one after the other, became influential Christian churches, the Areopagus supplanted the Acropolis as a center of civilization in the Greek world.

The above gives but a mere outline of a great theme that Dr. Carroll presented in the finished manner that makes him one of the great platform speakers of the country. He is so sure of his ground, so certain of his conclusions, that he carries conviction. Having lived and worked amidst the surroundings which he describes with overwhelming flow of language of classic beauty, he conveys to his listeners a living, breathing presentation of the place and the age which he sets out to describe.

The pictures thrown on the screen must have given all a most vivid impression of Athens and its glory that years cannot efface, and brought home to realization that two thousand years ago there lived in a small corner of the Mediterranean world, a people whose genius set an example in art, literature and civilization, that has never been surpassed in many respects and that in some respects still remains to be attained by the present.

Announcements. Dr. Edgar L. Hewett made a number of announcements regarding the summer school now in camp in the Rito de los Pinos, but which will come to an end this week, with a brilliant reception to be given in the Palace of the Governors on Friday evening, August 25. He called a meeting of the Woman's Auxiliary Committee for tomorrow forenoon at 10:30 o'clock in the reception room at the Palace. He told of the lectures that are being given by Professors Patton, Harrington, and others in the Rito, the campfires, the study trips, the excavations and the plans for the future, which embody next year a continuation of the parallel studies of the beginnings of civilization, but the work in Greek, Semite and Southwestern archaeology and civilization, to be replaced by studies in Egyptian, Roman and Central American culture history.

The Musical Program. The evening's exercises closed with a superb solo, "Abide With Us," by Miss Carroll, accompanied by Miss Massee, and Tennyson's touching and sublime "Crossing the Bar," rendered with tenderness and power by Mrs. W. D. Hayes, accompanied on violin by Mrs. Bean and piano by Miss Massee.

Hard Work Makes Longevity. Colonel H. A. Dupont of the famous Delaware family was one of the seven members of the West Point class of 1861, that were present at the class' golden anniversary last month. Colonel Dupont, discussing at this anniversary the interesting question of longevity, said: "The average age of the survivors of our class is 75 years. I am sure that all these survivors owe to their vast experience, will agree with me in the dictum: It is not work that kills men—it is worry. The revolution is not what destroys machinery but the friction."

SCHOOL OPENS SEPTEMBER 18

Splendid Force of Trained Men and Women Will Conduct It

MANY BUILDINGS IMPROVED

U. S. Indian Industrial School Will Soon Lauuch on a Promising Year.

During these pleasant summer days while there are no classes the employees and students remaining over at the U. S. Indian Industrial School are taking things easy according to the spirit of the Good Old Summer Time. They are enjoying life. After office hours, the program is made up of picnics, tennis games and parties. However improvements and repairs to the buildings are progressing nicely and it is expected that by the time school opens for the fall term, that is on September 18th, the entire plant will be in first class shape to maintain the high order of efficiency which this institution has held in the past.

New Domestic Science Building. There is now in course of construction a new domestic science building that will afford opportunities for attainment in this department that will be unexcelled in the Southwest and when the young Indian maidens have completed their course in this department they will be fitted to manage the homes of their future Indian spouses in a most approved and scientific manner. This building is being constructed to a large extent by Indian student carpenters of the school under the able direction of Mr. Clark, the school carpenter, and situated on the west side of Andrews Park.

Dr. Charles E. Chesney, the superintendent of day schools for the northern group of pueblos in New Mexico, who with his force of agency employees has been occupying temporary quarters at the Santa Fe School, now is now negotiating for suitable agency quarters in the city of Santa Fe and he hopes that with the approval of the department he may be able to accomplish this much desired end at an early date.

Office Force. The following is the office force for the ensuing year:

John S. R. Hammit, chief clerk; Clinton J. Crandall, Jr., financial clerk. Medical Department: W. S. Harroun, contract physician; Emile Robinson, nurse; Eusevia Vargas, assistant.

MINES AND MINING

Grant County. The shutting down of the Eighty Five Company's plant near Lordsburg, because of the emptying of the company's oil tank has made no difference in the ore shipments. There is a large amount of ore broken down in the mine above the tunnel level, and the company could keep up its usual shipments for some time without breaking down another pound. Twenty-nine cars of ore were shipped from Lordsburg last week.

Lincoln County. A. H. Norton has uncovered a rich vein of ore in the Good Luck tunnel at Jicarilla. The vein is gradually getting wider. C. C. Hedges has put a small force at work on the Doctor claim at Jicarilla. The outlook for a larger yield and better grade of ore on the Gold Stain at Jicarilla is declared to be very good.

McKinley County. "Rodolfo Otero a McKinley county cattle raiser came into town with samples of a substance of a very greasy nature that is believed to be a good oil bearing material. This substance has been discovered on the range about 20 miles north of grants at a place called El Puertecito de Flores. He came to Gallup to record filings for a party on two sections of the land. The substance was discovered bubbling up through the crevices in the rocks."—McKinley County Republican.

Socorro County. The Oaks company's car, track and accessories for the main drainage and transportation tunnel at Mogollon, Socorro county, will be delivered during the week. The portal has been timbered with square sets. A small amount of water has been flowing from the tunnel for some time. At the Socorro mines all wood choppers in the timber in the region of the power plant were taken off some time ago and all wood packers discharged except those making delivery with the company's burros. Several thousand cords are cut and by the time this is transported to the power plant the oil engines will be installed. The mine and mill continue their good output of bullion and concentrates. At the Deadwood mines forty feet of development work was done in the mine the past week. The mill handled 400 tons of ore in the same period, largely from stops on the fourth level. Everything is said to be running smoothly. The Ernestine Mining Company's mill treated 705 tons during the week and produced 6,345 Troy ounces of gold and silver bullion and four and one-half tons of concentrates for the first ten day period of August. Grading and foundation pits for the new power plant are completed and construction work has been started. Over a carload of cement will be required for the foundations. At the Gold Dust mines, uninterrupted progress is being made in advancement of the lower tunnel. At the Treasure Mining and Reduction Company several of the old houses at the mine are being remodeled for the accommodation of their employes.

CHICAGO WHEAT MARKET INFLUENCED FROM OUTSIDE.

Corn Weakened, However, While Oats Were Quiet and Firm as Were Provisions.

(By Special Leased Wire to New Mexican) Chicago, Ill., Aug. 21.—Outside firmness influenced the local wheat market at the opening today. December opened 1-4 lower to 1-8 higher at 94 3-4 to 95 1-8 and on professional buying advanced to 95 3-8; September advanced to 91 early but soon sold off to 90 3-8.

The close was firm with Dec. 5-8 over Saturday at 90 5-8.

The corn market was weakened by increasing offerings following recent rains; by the fact that Kansas City is selling September four cents under Chicago and reports that St. Louis traders are trying to re-sell Illinois corn. December opened a shade higher to 1-8 lower at 62 1-8 to 7-8 @ 62 and dropped early to 61 1-2. September dropped 5-8 to 3-4 on early sales to 64.

The close was easy, Dec. 1-4 @ 3-8 down at 64 1-4 @ 3-8.

Oats were quiet but firm on light offerings and scattered buying of September which is now practically on a cash basis. December opened unchanged at 44 3-4 and advanced to 44 7-8.

Provisions opened firm with lard leading. January pork started 2 1-2 up at 16.60; October lard 5 cents higher at 9.25 to 9.27 1-2; October ribs 15 1-2 higher at 9.25.

Elgin, Ill., Aug. 21.—Butter, firm at 26 cents. Output 849,300 pounds.

New York, Aug. 21.—Cotton, spot closed quiet; middling uplands, 12.50; do gulf, 12.75. No sales. Cotton exchange will be closed Sept. 2, the Saturday preceding Labor Day.

OFFICIAL PAPER OF SANTA FE COUNTY. The New Mexican is the oldest newspaper in New Mexico. It is sent to every postoffice in the Territory, and has a large and growing circulation among the intelligent and progressive people of the Southwest.

LOOKING FORWARD. Santa Fe will have one great event to look forward to for a year. The summer school of American Archaeology, so auspiciously held in Santa Fe this summer, is but the forerunner of a much greater session next year, when it is hoped to have facilities for more visitors and students than this year.

THE LA BAJADA ROAD. While the La Bajada road in nowise approaches the beauty and grandeur of the Scenic Highway from Las Vegas to El Porvenir, or from Santa Fe across the Dalton Divide, or from Buckman to the Rio de los Frijoles, yet, it must prove very attractive to the tourist and to the many automobile owners in New Mexico.

ONLY ONE SANTA FE. A less experienced and a less cosmopolitan city than Santa Fe would be overwhelmed by the many events that are crowding it on a day like this. The dedication of the "End of the Santa Fe Trail Marker" this afternoon, would be a significant event in a great metropolis like New York.

FOUR STATE CONVENTIONS. Santa Fe must endeavor to secure the four state conventions that will be held during the next few weeks. The Chamber of Commerce should extend invitations to the Republican, Democratic, Socialist and Prohibition committees to hold their first state convention in the capital, which is the logical place for such conventions.

New Mexico will have a voice in national politics and the first state campaign involving the choice of two Senators and two Congressmen, will be fought out on national issues, especially the tariff on wool and the re-nomination and re-election of President Taft.

WYOMING, ARIZONA, NEW MEXICO. The assessment of Arizona for 1911, is in round figures $450 per capita, while that of New Mexico is less than $200. Even though from Arizona's total of $98,032,000, there were subtracted the total valuation of Arizona's mining property and Arizona's railroads, the total assessment would still be more than that of New Mexico with all of the latter's mining and railroad property included.

The new Roswell Morning News, the organ of the whisky wing of the Democracy, declares humbly and very truthfully in its editorial columns: "Some of the Republican papers treat the New Mexico Democracy as a joke. That they have had ground to take that view cannot be questioned."

King Solomon has for three thousand years stood as the human embodiment of wisdom, and the owl and the moon (fair Luna), have been emblems of wisdom. The new state needs for its chief executive a Solomon of wisdom and the Republican party is ready to offer such a one to the people for their suffrage. If nominated, he will come in under the wire at the home stretch, something like 20,000 votes ahead of any opponent who could be put up against him.

Back to the Blankets. In an interview at Kansas City, Miss Maggie Mitchell, an Indian student of Haskell Institute, declared regret that she had ever gone to school, because now she must return to the blankets and marry a young buck at White Eagle, Oklahoma, against her wishes, but as her father and the custom of the tribe demands "My life will from now on be a continual looking backward," she declared.

THE FORUM

W. C. T. U. NOTES.

THE SOWERS.
The sowers went for to sow their seeds,
As they cowed they thought of the people's needs;
They thought of the souls that longed for food,
And they labored hard for the people's good.

They sowed with a will so strong and true,
And the seeds sank deeper than they knew.
They sprang to life in a living soil,
And roused the minds of the mass who toil.

They drew their thoughts from the realms above,
And they sang of liberty, life and love.
They worked with their hands and hearts as well,
And noted the spot where each good seed fell.

They labored, and loved, and led the way,
To where the goal of their labors lay.
For they thought always of the New Day's birth,
When Freedom and Truth shall rule the earth.

For Justice and Right they boldly spoke,
While gladly wearing the Master's yoke,
For the yoke was easy, the burden light,
When Jesus Himself was leading the fight.

As the sowers sow they shall surely reap,
And each his share of the harvest keep.
But when women are free and men are strong,
Then, oh, then, will come the "harvest song."

And they who labor and they who wait
May enter together the golden gate,
And never again shall a sorrow come
To the hearts that carry their harvest home.
—Belle Taylor (Austin, Texas).

VERDICT OF THE GOVERNORS.

What Governors and Ex-Governors Think of the Liquor Traffic.

Governor Stubbs of Kansas.
I believe that Kansas with prohibition has more sobriety and less intemperance and its evil results, than any other state has ever had. Prohibition must stand or fall upon its merits. The people of Kansas are very progressive, very positive and intensely practical in their ideas and habits. If the prohibitory law had not given us a better civilization and a higher standard of manhood and womanhood, the measure would have been repealed years ago.

Governor Kitchen of North Carolina.
Prohibition law has been in force throughout the state for two years. This is a short period in which to measure the effects of a reform movement. We have done little more than plant the seed, whose full fruition will be gathered by coming generations. And yet already the results fully justify its adoption. There has been, as appears from the attorney general's report, based upon court statistics, a marked diminution in crime, even in the crime of violating the prohibition law. Business has experienced increased rather than diminished prosperity. Morality, industry, and frugality have increased and politics and government have been to a great extent relieved of one of their most corrupting influences.

Ex-Governor Fernald of Maine.
There are more than 212,000 school children in the state of Maine. Not one of this great army of healthy, happy, rugged boys and girls has ever seen emblazoned over a store front a sign advertising the sale of intoxicating liquors. They have walked the hundreds of miles of business streets of our twenty cities and 454 towns, on their way to and from school, they have seen the names of their fathers shining in letters of gold as sellers of all the wholesome and necessary articles of trade, as lawyers and doctors and printers, but never as poisoners of the human system and wreckers of homes. This is the legacy that has come to the 212,000 school children from the 200,000 children of the generation that preceded them. I hope these 212,000 children will pledge themselves to bequeath to the 225,000 school children who, without doubt, will follow them, the same precious legacy.

Ex-Governor Cutler of Utah.
It is a foregone conclusion that the morals of a community are improved by a decreased sale of strong drink. The revenues of the state are increased, because temperance leads to frugality and thrift, which lead to property accumulation by the citizens.

Governor Vessey of South Dakota.
I believe that the liquor tax is in reality the highest tax that is being paid by the common people today and paying it is the heaviest drain upon their resources.

Ex-Governor Glenn of North Carolina.
A man must take a square and unmistakable stand for the right or for the wrong, for righteousness or for evil, for happiness or for misery, for justice or for oppression. As for me, I am heart and soul against the liquor traffic. State-wide prohibition is the one end for which all true temperance people should contend, as giving the greatest good to the greatest number, the fundamental doctrine of our democratic form of government.

Governor Hooper of Tennessee.
Over the state in general, the temperance laws are successfully enforced, but of course not perfectly. The consumption of whiskey has greatly diminished in Tennessee and the crimes that result from it have decreased in number. All the state now needs are a few local officials in the cities of Nashville and Memphis who will respect their oath of office. This will surely come. The temperance people of the state are not discouraged, although they realize the inherent difficulty of enforcing the laws in the larger cities.

President Taft.
He who drinks is deliberately disqualifying himself for advancement. Personally, I refuse to take such a risk. I do not drink.

Ex-Governor Cobb of Maine.
I intend to vote in September for the retention of the prohibitory amendment and shall do this because I believe that a vote to that end is the best contribution I can make to the moral, social and economical welfare of Maine.

Governor Osborn of Michigan.
The saloon today is a social saprophyte. It has always been a breeding place of lawlessness and a culture ground for vice.

Ex-Governor Dawson of West Virginia.
Do men deplore the rule of corrupt political bosses? It is the saloon that rallies the masses of venal and unpatriotic voters, who constitute the phalanx of the bosses' power. Has crime become rampant on the streets? The saloon is the refuge of the criminals. Does vice seek protection? The saloon effects the arrangement with the policemen, who are familiar with its dark secrets and comrades of its debased fraternity. Do gamblers wish to ply their demoralizing trade among the young? The saloon affords them not only the shield, but brings them the susceptible patronage of inexperienced youths.

Governor Noel of Mississippi.
That our prohibition laws do immensely curtail the selling and use of intoxicating liquors is manifest to all intelligent and fair minded men who have seen our laws tested, and is demonstrated by the immense expenditure of time, money and work on the part of the brewery and liquor interests in their persistent endeavor to discredit and repeal prohibition legislation. The public sentiment of Mississippi is overwhelmingly in favor of the prohibition of the liquor traffic and of the enforcement of law.

Governor Burke of North Dakota.
At each session of our legislative assembly statehood, and until the session of 1909, a resolution to re-submit the prohibition clause of the constitution to the people was introduced. The resolution had fewer adherents at each session, until finally they became so few that no resolution has been offered since the session of 1907, so it would appear that prohibition has become a settled policy in this state.

Many of its adherents support prohibition for moral reasons, and, I think, quite as many for business reasons. The farmer says that if a rainy day came during the busy season, when we had saloons, many of his hired men would go to town, become drunk and be worthless for several days while they were sobering up; while under prohibition the employe cannot get the liquor, or if he does it is in such limited quantities that it does not interfere with the farm work—hence the farmer is a prohibitionist.

The merchant claims that under prohibition there is more money in the legitimate channels of trade, that collections are better, and people generally buy more. They are better fed, better clothed, better schooled and are better citizens—hence the business man becomes a prohibitionist, and prohibition becomes a settled policy in the state.

Ex-Governor T. M. Campbell of Texas.
I believe that the saloon is a bad thing—a thing from which no good can come. Those who vote for a partnership with the saloon, vote for the crack of the pistol in the saloon, and for all other crimes that follow in the wake of the liquor traffic. Vote for it if you will. I wash my hands of it. The widows and the orphans shall never in the judgment day stand up and charge me with the iniquities which overtook them through the saloon. More than $40,000,000 are paid over the bar in the saloons of Texas annually. That is enough money to build and equip four railroads across the state every year. Abolish the saloon and allow this money to enter the legitimate channels of trade. Wherever it has been tried, the community has blossomed like a rose.

Ex-Governor Haskell of Oklahoma.
Oklahoma's conditions has vastly improved under prohibition and we are daily gaining in sentiment and votes in favor of it. Our best argument is the statement made by small merchants, that their customers are buying shoes instead of whiskey. Men are paying their bills with greater promptness and buying more for their families. This is strong evidence of the practical benefit of the law.

Oklahoma adopted constitutional state wide prohibition, September 17, 1907. Immediately the whiskey and beer interests employed shrewd lawyers and politicians, opened headquarters and started a campaign to secure and vote upon an initiative petition to repeal prohibition. After spending thousands of dollars to get signatures to this petition and to make public sentiment favorable to it, the vote taken three years later resulted in a victory for prohibition, with a larger majority than at the former election. The good people of our state are satisfied with our progress under prohibition.

You read and hear that prohibition is a failure in Oklahoma. If you will search for the origin of these stories, you will find that they come from writers and talkers paid by the whiskey and beer interests. Stop and reflect.

The Fountain Head of Life Is The Stomach

A man who has a weak and impaired stomach and who does not properly digest his food will soon find that his blood has become weak and impoverished, and that his whole body is improperly and insufficiently nourished.

Dr. PIERCE'S GOLDEN MEDICAL DISCOVERY makes the stomach strong, promotes the flow of digestive juices, restores the lost appetite, makes assimilation perfect, invigorates the liver and purifies and enriches the blood. It is the great blood-maker, flesh-builder and restorative nerve tonic. It makes men strong in body, active in mind and cool in judgement.

This "Discovery" is a pure, glyceric extract of American medical roots, absolutely free from alcohol and all injurious, habit-forming drugs. All its ingredients are printed on its wrappers. It has no relationship with secret nostrums. Its every ingredient is endorsed by the leaders in all the schools of medicine. Don't accept a secret nostrum as a substitute for this time-proven remedy of known composition. Ask your neighbors. They must know of many cures made by it during past 40 years, right in your own neighborhood. World's Dispensary Medical Association, Dr. R. V. Pierce, Pres., Buffalo, N. Y.

If they sell more whisky in Oklahoma under prohibition than they did before we had it, would they spend their money so lavishly to destroy their own business?

Governor Cruce of Oklahoma.
The people of Oklahoma are well satisfied with prohibition, which fact is proven conclusively by the election returns. The majority at the last election was larger than at the former election. This is the best evidence that the people of Oklahoma are better satisfied with conditions now than with conditions which formerly prevailed when the state had open saloons. There is more money in the banks now than then. The stores are selling more goods now than then. Real estate is worth more now than then in both town and country. There are more miles of paving now than then, and all Oklahoma is more prosperous today than it was when it had open saloons.

Ex-Governor J. W. Folk of Missouri.
The saloon is a business the natural tendency of which is towards lawlessness, and the time has come when it will either ruin the politics of the state or be run out of the politics of the state.

Ex-Governor J. F. Hanly of Indiana.
Personally I have seen so much of the evils of the liquor traffic in the last four years, so much of its economic waste, so much of its physical ruin, so much of its mental blight, so much of its tears and heartaches, that I have come to regard the business as one that must be held and controlled by strong men and effective laws. I bear no malice towards those engaged in the business, but I hate the traffic. I hate its every phase. I hate it for its utter disregard of law, its ruthless trampling of the solemn compacts of state constitutions; for the load it straps to labor's back, for the palsied hand it gives to toll, for its wounds to genius, for the tragedies of its might-have-beens.

I hate it for the human wrecks it has caused; the almshouses it peoples, for the prisons it fills, for the insanity it begets, for its countless graves in potter's fields; the mental ruin it imposes upon its victims, for its spiritual blight, for its moral degradation; the crimes it has committed, the homes it has destroyed, the hearts it has broken, the malice it has planted in the hearts of men—for its poison, for its bitterness—for the dead sea fruit with which it starves their souls.

Hon. Earl Brewer, Only Candidate for Governor of Mississippi Declares for Prohibition.
I have always stated, both on the stump and over my own signature, that I am now, and have been all my life and expect to die a red-hot, uncompromising prohibitionist, in favor of statutory prohibition, state-wide prohibition, and every species and form of state prohibition and national prohibition. If the W. C. T. U. can make it any stronger than that, write it out and pass it up to me and I will sign it.

Child Chauffeurs.
Editor of the Santa Fe New Mexican. Dear Sir—I take pleasure in calling attention to an article which has appeared in a New York City newspaper entitled Ban to Be Put on Child Chauffeurs.

The great metropolis is about to introduce a reform which Santa Fe has long had and yet people call this city behind the times!

The article is as follows:
"How legally to stop children from driving automobiles, big and little, through the streets of New York and thereby frightening citizens out of their wits is a matter receiving the earnest consideration of Police Commissioner Waldo. He has received a flood of complaints, each describing the incompetent handling of automobiles by boys and girls of ten or twelve years, and in most cases reciting a narrow escape from injury by the driver or some member of his family."

"Examination of the law controlling the licensing of drivers of automobiles revealed that there is nothing in it at present to prevent the driving of cars by children if the owner of the car permits it. The owner is licensed by the fact of his ownership and licenses are demanded only of those who propose to act as professional chauffeurs. The framers of the law believed, apparently, that the owner of a machine would be deterred from placing its use in incompetent hands by the danger of damage suits or injury to his property."

"This has proved not true in many instances, and complaints have come from all over the upper part of the city, especially from the upper west side and Riverside drive. Many of the complainants state that young boys who are often seen driving high powered automobiles seem to take a perverse delight in handling them in such a manner as to alarm pedestrians."

"Commissioner Waldo and his legal advisers are preparing a clause in the automobile law to remedy these conditions, and the legislature will be requested to pass a bill for that purpose."

CITIZEN.
HER HUSBAND KNOCKED HER DOWN WHEN INTOXICATED
Mrs. Bertha M. Davenport was given a divorce from Henry O. Davenport at Denver on a charge of cruelty. Mrs. Davenport stated that her husband frequently came home intoxicated, slapped her, knocked her down, kicked her and bruised her. They were married Feb. 13, 1909. Esther Kinney, aged 18, secured a divorce from Joseph Kinney, whom she charged with failure to support. Mrs. Dunn asked Mrs. Kinney's mother if she had more 16 year old daughters she wished to marry off. She replied that she had not. NEW MEXICO POLITICS AND POLITICIANS

Booming Walton.

The name of W. B. Walton has been proposed as candidate for governor on the Democratic ticket by the Clovis Journal. In the estimation of the Liberal there is not a democrat in the territory who would make a better run for the office than Mr. Walton. He is one of the few men in the party against whom nothing can be said. His record as a member of the constitutional convention, and since the convention adjourned has been straight and clear, and he has been mixed up in none of the schemes engineered by other members of the party to defer and defeat statehood. If nominated he would carry Grant county by a rousing majority, but it would not be large enough to elect him. Still it would be an honor to be the first candidate for governor of the state of New Mexico, even if defeated, and Mr. Walton's numerous friends, both Republicans and Democrats, would be glad to see him nominated.—Western Liberal.

Prohibition.

The prohibitionists are divided over two plans to be pursued in the first state campaign. Those who are more radical, believe in the nomination of a state ticket from top to bottom if either or both of the two great parties refuse to declare for state-wide prohibition. This plan will be urged by many Republicans, for the prohibitionists will draw their strength from the Democrats of eastern New Mexico. The more conservative prohibitionists favor concentrating the prohibition strength on the governorship and members of the legislature, submitting to each candidate for those offices on all tickets, the question: "Do you favor state-wide prohibition and will you vote and work for it?" Those candidates giving the most satisfactory answer, will then be given the prohibition endorsement. It is very likely, that both parties will declare for local option both county and municipal, although the leaders on both sides would rather ignore the liquor question altogether. The attitude of one party will be determined largely by the attitude of the other. The argument of the leaders is that the first campaign must be fought out on national issues and that prohibition is only a local issue. The campaign finds the prohibitionists without any real political organization.

To our Democratic friends. If Congress carries out the pending program the next day or two will bring the final triumph for Arizona's twenty-year campaign for statehood, and we shall be in the midst of a campaign for the election of state officers within the next few weeks.

We feel impelled, therefore, to offer a little free advice to those of our Democratic friends who may have charge of the Democratic fire works: Don't make yourselves ridiculous by inviting the populace to witness your grief and mourning for the loss of the judiciary recall. Don't try to make the people believe that you are consumed with indignation at President Taft because of his veto of the recall proposition. Save your crocodile tears.

For all of us know that you heaved a sigh of profound relief when you found that the President had more courage than you, and that because of his courage you have been relieved of a most disagreeable situation. All of us know that the judiciary recall proposition did not emanate from the citizens of Arizona—least of all from conservative, thinking Democrats—but from the headquarters of the Western Federation of Miners at Denver. All of us know that, because the members of the constitutional convention were mostly moral cowards, they accepted this proposition while at heart opposed to it. President Taft could not have conferred a greater favor upon the Democratic party of Arizona than when he assumed all the responsibility of knocking the judiciary recall out of the constitution.

So let's have no hypocritical heaving of bricks at the President.—Arizona Republican.

Methodist state mission at Cheyenne

Wright then expanded his assertion by charging that when people come to Wyoming from the East, "they drop the high standard of morals held in their Eastern homes," that residence in this state causes a decline in intellectual standards and that business standards are low.

The CHEVALIER

By C. B. LEWIS

If any one had told James Pennington, bachelor of 40 and living in a lake city, that he had within his breast the instincts and sentiments of a chevalier of old, the speaker would have been suspected as up to some confidence game. And yet he would have been right. James Pennington did not know himself. Those instincts and sentiments were lying dormant and waiting, like newly-planted Early Rose potatoes, for their chance to grow and expand.

Even the chevalier stunt comes to him who waits, and though it had lain in ambush for many long years, it finally appeared in the open. Business called him to Liverpool, and he went to Montreal to take one of the slow steamers to that famous port. Friends of his warned him against many perils, but strangely enough they forgot to warn him against the main one. His steamer had not sailed yet when he made the acquaintance of Miss Etie Clay. It was one of those little events that are always occurring aboard of a passenger steamer, even when she is fast to her dock. The lady dropped her handkerchief on deck and he picked it up and returned it, and lo! they were acquainted. It was not until several hours later, however, that the young lady gave him her confidence. Then she was rather forced to do so. The passage had been booked for her aunt and herself, and some dreadful accident must have detained the aunt at the last moment. Indeed, until the steamer was miles down the river, it was believed that her relative was on board.

The captain was of course appealed to, but he could do nothing. Owners and officers of ocean liners do not know aunts from uncles, and the tears and sobs of nieces have no effect on them. Miss Clay's Aunt Sarah must come on the next boat or give up the trip. Miss Clay herself must wipe her weeping eyes and prepare them ready to see whales and icebergs. She must confide in some one, and why not in Chevalier Pennington? As they sat together in the moonlight she did not hesitate to tell him that she had read romance, courage and nobility of character in his face at first glance. Mr. Pennington, in his home city, was carrying on the business of selling sand, lime and guano at wholesale and retail, and the compliments of the young lady at his side made his heart soft, determining him to buy some adjacent property and add the cement business. Days afterwards, when he came to think that moonlight talk on deck, he could remember that he told Miss Clay all there was to tell, even to his stealing eggs when a boy, and that though she had talked a whole lot she had really told him nothing.

It cannot be truthfully said that Mr. Pennington fell in love at first sight, or that he fell in love at all. He had got into the rut of the sand, lime and guano business, and he was not a man who cared for changes. Miss Clay did not seek to arouse his love. She wanted to look on him as her chevalier and knight for the voyage—the sturdy oak from the shores of Lake Erie to which the clinging vine might cling, and that's how that moonlight night settled things.

Almost within a day it was understood by all that Mr. Pennington and Miss Clay were old acquaintances, and that when the aunt was first missed, he had volunteered to jump overboard and swim back and tell her that she had missed the boat. He did not do any boasting in regard to himself, but Miss Clay, who seemed perfectly at home and made acquaintances right and left, called general attention to his many noble qualities. She was so persistent about this that the pursuer felt that he had made a great mistake in not seating the man at the captain's table.

The steamer did not collide nor founder nor attempt to stand on her head. She went ahead in a manner that called out encomiums, and everybody was happy. Mr. Pennington found himself in full charge of Miss Clay, and both of them rather liked the situation. The sturdy oak braced himself, and the clinging vine clung to it. At the end of the third day, however, something descended upon the decks of that ship with a flop. It was as if a farmer had thrown a summer squash against the port side of an old brindle cow. One of the lady passengers had missed three diamonds rings and a bracelet from her stateroom. They try to keep all such matters still on shipboard, which is the reason why they are speedily known to all.

There was talk, and talk of more talk, and then the theft was of course laid to a steward of the ship and nothing more done about it.

Next day two other rings were missing, and on the next a bracelet and $100 in bills. Then the passengers began to sit up and take notice, and every woman had suspicion in her eyes as she looked at her neighbor. There was a thief aboard, and with great unanimity it was declared that the thief must be a female. The stewardesses were given the "third degree" by the captain without avail, and then suspicion was turned loose on the passenger list.

How it came about that the demure Miss Clay was suspected no one could explain, but the finger was pointed at her, and before she got a hint of it the captain was being threatened with the law and lots of other things if she did not order her stateroom searched. The responsibility was great. If the stolen jewelry was not found there, Miss Clay had an action in law, and he would lose his command. As he sat in his cabin debating the matter in hand with himself, the young lady and Mr. Pennington sat side by side in their deck-chairs. She seemed to snuggle up to him closer than usual, and the sturdy oak was pleased and glad. They had talked of lonely lives made happy by such chance meetings as this, and he was about to ask her business opinion of adding cement to the other commodities when a message reached him that his presence was desired in the captain's cabin. He hastened away, and the first 20 words spoken to him caused him to wince his arm about his head and dramatically exclaim:

"Never, captain—never in this world! Why the shame of it would kill her! How dare they say such a thing—how dare they?"

"But if she is innocent, the search can do no harm, and I give you every assurance that it will be quietly conducted."

"But it shall never be entered upon, sir! Miss Clay's reputation is above reproach in all directions. Show me the man or woman that doubts her and I will make them kneel and ask her forgiveness."

"But two ladies claim to have seen her coming from one of the staterooms that was robbed," insisted the captain. "They may have been mistaken. I hope by a search to prove that such is the case."

"Captain," replied Mr. Pennington as he drew himself up and folded his arms. "I have known Miss Clay for years. In fact, we are engaged. You must not and you shall not shame her and me by any such search as proposed. I will protect her at any cost."

The speech was good, what there was of it. Had Miss Clay heard it she might have advised the orator to go on the stage instead of going in for cement. Being doped in his own cabin around the captain's fire. He said the search should be made, and when Mr. Pennington got ready to shed his last drop of blood, he was trotted away and locked up in his own stateroom. This had scarcely been accomplished when the demure Miss Clay came forward with a smile on her face and said that owing to the embarrassing situation she would be one of the first to ask to have her belongings searched.

"That girl is a trump!" was the mental ejaculation of the captain; and 10 minutes later the proposed search was being made.

Nothing whatever was found to incriminate Miss Clay. Nothing whatever was found to incriminate a search of trunks and handbags. Then everybody asked themselves and each other over again: "Who can it be?" The query was soon answered. Mr. Pennington was liberated from his dungeon vile, and had just promised the captain a suit for $50,000 damages on arrival in England when he instinctively thrust one of his hands into the side pocket of his pea-jacket. It was the pocket that Miss Clay had cuddled against for hours before. He felt a package and drew it out, but the captain reached for it and saved him the trouble of opening it. The package was made up of the missing jewelry. Of course Mr. Pennington protested. It would have looked better for him if chivalry had not forced him to prevaricate about Miss Clay. She promptly denied having known him for an hour before coming aboard. As for the engagement he had affirmed, yes it likely that she would marry any such man? She was not a worldly girl, but even she could see signs that he was a hardened criminal, and every one must suppose that he was making the trip for what he could steal.

Mr. Pennington went back under lock and key. There was no wireless in those days, and if there had been he had been caught with the goods on him. Among the passengers were seven Chinese Endeavor people, five Y. M. C. A.'s, four prohibitionists and nine missionaries going abroad to convert the heathen. They took turns at interviewing the prisoner and pleading with him to mend his ways. As for Miss Clay, she simply went to the door of his stateroom and rapped on it and called him a bad, bad man. At Liverpool he was turned over to the police, and though none of the passengers would press a charge, they found a way of keeping him in a jail for the next six weeks. He would not have been released then had not a detective said:

"Well, I've got her at last. She's as slick as they make 'em. Of course, when she knew there was a stir about the stolen stuff she unloADED on you. Cut it out after this, my friend. Go into cement, if you will, but let up on chivalry. It makes you a soft mark."

A Moving Land.

One of the broad slopes of Mont Gringuez, France, is reported to have detached from its foundations, and to have moved over a distance of nearly a quarter of a mile, carrying with it the soil, meadows and woods, and covering up in its passage roads and bridges that stood in the way. A chestnut grove has traveled 500 feet without suffering any apparent damage, but many small lakes have been formed by the damming of the waters.—Scientific American.

Doubts of Their Existence.

"Of course you admit that no self-respecting man would associate with a wife beater."

"Of course," replied Mr. Meekton, timidly. "But, do you know, I'd like to see one, just out of curiosity."

Tom Was an Amateur.

She—I'm afraid, Tom, dear, you will find me a mine of faults.

He—Darling, it shall be the sweetest labor of my life to correct them.

She (flaring up)—Indeed, you shan't!

A Big Head.

A young man in the country wrote to his city cousin: "I've grown a cabbage head six feet in circumference."

"Who is your hatter?" wrote back the city youth.—The Bits.

An Awful Alternative.

"I see where some doctor advises the silence cure for nervous women."

"He's a fool. Nine women out of ten would prefer to go on enjoying poor health."

Men and Girls.

"Are men as black," she queried.

"As they are painted, do you think?" In Yankee style I answered her.

"Are girls," I asked, "as pink?"

Not to Be Thought Of.

"What is the trouble, dear?"

"Charley Watson has just asked me to marry him."

"Well! Surely that isn't what makes you sad?"

"Oh, no! But I can't be a June bride now unless I wait a whole year, and if I asked Charley to do that he would ask me."

WILD NIGHT WITH WADDELL

Topsy Hartzel Describes Pleasant and Tumultuous Evening He Spent With Rubie.

"It was my fortune once," says Topsy Hartzel, of the world's champion Athletics, "to spend a pleasant and tumultuous evening with G. Edward Waddell, more generally known as 'Rubie,' and, at the same time in the zenith of his big league fame. Just once, and only once, I never cared for any more of the same, thank you."

"The Athletics were just swinging into the championship of 1906, thanks in a great measure to the glorious pitching of the Rubie, and he was one of the most popular citizens of Philadelphia. This particular evening he approached me and explained that we could have the time of our lives, if we would go to supper. We did, but the supper was interrupted by Mr. Waddell, happening to meet a man in the dining room whom he did not like, snote him over the head with a whitefish, a proceeding which seemed to be somewhat outside the limits of the menu."

"After supper Mr. Waddell said he would take me back of the scenes of a certain theater, where melodrama is the range. I had never been blind the curtain and was delighted, more so, when the stage hands, all recognizing Rubie, treated us with great honor and courtesy. The play was a wild western thing, checkful of shooting. As we came into the dim recesses behind the stage, one of the few quiet minutes of the show was taking place—the hero was just looking into the eyes of the heroine and telling her how much he loved her. Not a sound broke the tense silence—and just then Rubie, picking up a gun that was standing ready for the villain, pulled the trigger.

"It cracked the love scene, and the stage hands threw Mr. Waddell out. And I went with him.

"They are not gentlemen in there," said Mr. Waddell. "Let's go to the theater, where Howard Hall is playing. He's my pal."

"So we went to another house, and again we got behind the scenes. Rubie was popular—honest, he was. If you remember Howard Hall's old play, 'The Man Who Dared,' you will remember that a den of lions furnished the thrills. The cage was standing back in the wings, and Mr. Waddell,

A circular letter mailed to all directors and officials of the American and National leagues asking for expressions of opinion regarding the continued use of the new ball was received by Mr. Herrmann the other day.

EDITORIAL FLASHES

A Handy Book.

The Legislative Manual for 1909-1910 has just been issued by Nathan Jaffa, Territorial Secretary. It is a splendid compendium of useful data. The colored frontispiece and the halftones throughout the book are fine specimens of the printer's art. The excellent portraits of the territorial officers and judges of the Supreme Court add to the beauty and value of the book. We herewith thank the Secretary for a copy just received.—Carriazo Outlook.

The Auto as a Trail Preserver.

On August 21 Santa Fe will dedicate a marker at the end of the Santa Fe trail. The historic highway has now been completely marked through the states of Kansas, Colorado and the territory of New Mexico, and the closing ceremony will be fittingly impressive.

It is probable that, had it not been for the automobile, the old Santa Fe trail would have been unmarked today. But the "Gasoline tourist," seeking the best route from Missouri and Kansas to the Rocky Mountains, found he could not improve upon the old water route chosen by the pioneers. So agitation was begun for the betterment of the old highway. Road work was done in all the states traversed by the trail, and today the path that is indelibly associated with stirring frontier times, is a model road for automobile purposes. Just as a finishing touch the auto tourists can now complete their pleasure by a little side trip up the Arkansas to Canon City, Colo., where they can take a ride over the wonderful "skyline drive" and the recently completed scenic highway to the top of the Royal Gorge.

In New Mexico there are still some road difficulties to be overcome before the auto tourist can make the trip to Santa Fe as comfortably and pleasantly as he can make it to Colorado. But New Mexico is making rapid headway in highway construction, and it will not be long until the Santa Fe end of the trail is as perfect as the rest.

The automobile is evidently something more than a mere bringer of good roads. It is a preserver of the historic highways of the nation. Those who speak at the dedication of the marker at Santa Fe next week should not forget to pay tribute to the modern invention that has made it possible to preserve the west's most historic trail for the benefit of posterity.—Las Vegas Optic.

High Life at Los Tanos.

Says the Santa Rosa Sun: "Los Tanos is in a furore over the action of one of the ranchers of the neighborhood who is accused of appropriating unto himself, the wives of two older farmers in the neighborhood. Suit for divorce and alienation of the affection of one of the wives has been instituted by one of the aggrieved husbands."

PREACHER DIDN'T LIKE THE WESTERN ATMOSPHERE.

"There seems to be something in the atmosphere of Wyoming that causes people to lower the standards they once held," was the jolt handed to Wyoming by the Rev. C. A. Wright of Lander, in an address before the

IT WAS NOT A HAPPY FAMILY.

H. Rusby to Dr. Wiley. Secretary Wilson said Dr. Wiley was without question the head of the bureau. Asked about his object in creating a pure food and drug inspection board, the secretary said he felt more power attached to a board's decision than to a man decision.

Crucify Him. "There are people who criticize me," said the secretary. "Even the president of the United States is sometime criticized and if I remember correctly there were those who shouted as the Savior passed by: 'Crucify him, crucify him!' So I wanted a board."

The witness was asked why he appointed a mixed board, consisting of two chemists, Dr. Wiley and Dr. Dunlap, and a lawyer, Solicitor McCabe. "It may be that it was not necessary to have a lawyer on the board because of prosecutions which must be passed on," said the secretary. "It may be that a farmer like me or you, Mr. Chairman, could take a case into court, but I don't believe we would do it very well."

"Has it worked out very well?" Unhappy Family.

"I think you gentlemen have gone far enough to ascertain that the family has not been as happy as it might have been."

The secretary asked about his phrase in a letter touching the Indiana litigation over benzoate of soda, in which he referred to Solicitor Mc-

Cabe and Dr. Dunlap as "our people on the board." "You are pretty aware that there was fiction on the board," replied the secretary. "It would have been an insult to Dr. Wiley to consult him in regard to the benzoate of soda." "Why," asked Representative Floyd of Arkansas.

Wiley Despised Benzoate of Soda. "Because he despised it and everything in regard to it. He felt that his work was reflected on when we appointed the referee board to reconsider the benzoate of soda question, but it was not."

The secretary declared he himself and not Solicitor McCabe was responsible for increasing the powers of the solicitor. He denied that in so doing he was getting back to the criticized one man power.
