MINING INTERESTS.

The Cook's Peak District.

While this is not considered essentially a mining region, yet there are two districts, one to the north and one to the south of Deming, which are of more than ordinary interest not only for the amount and value of the ore taken from them, but also for the natural curiosities to be found in them. It is the former of these that we aim to describe in this article. Cook's Peak is a lone mountain, or rather a small range of mountains, rising from the open plain about 20 miles north of Deming. This little range runs from the southeast toward the northwest, and the highest point or peak, rises rather south of the center of the range. The mineral belt is a strip about a mile in width extending from the base of the mountain on the east side over the top at the north of the peak to a point about 8 miles away at the base on the west. This district is exclusively a lead camp lying for the most part in a lime formation, these ores carry small quantities of silver and a trace of gold.

The first discovery of minerals in this district was in 1880, when two hardy adventurers who had traveled over a large portion of the great Rocky Mountain country hunting for a fortune, defied the hostile Indians who were then quite troublesome here and began work at the very summit of the ridge a short distance to the north of the peak. These men, Lon Irington and Ed Orr by name, made a rich strike at the grass roots and located a number of claims which they called the Montezuma mine. These properties have been owned and worked by various parties and, while the workings are not deep they cover a large extent of ground and have produced immense quantities of ore. The mineral here is found in pockets in the lime and in working out these pockets a large number of shafts have been sunk, reaching perhaps a hundred in number.

Aside from the mineral value taken from these mines they have an unusual interest for explorers and curiosity seekers on account of the many natural peculiarities they possess. All through these workings caverns of various sizes have been found many of them filled with the quaintest and most beautiful chrysal formations. Many hundred pounds of these chrysal specimens have been shipped east and sold at good prices but the rarest and most beautiful of these was only viewed by a few who opened up the room where it lay hidden by the Creator. The following description of this wonderful piece of nature's handy work was given by Mr. William Cotton, who discovered it, to a friend and by him to the writer; He said: "We were sinking on a narrow stringer when we broke through into a broad open room perhaps 50 feet across and 12 feet high, extending from the floor and roof were hundreds of spikes of the most exquisitely pure white rock ground and figured by some power more perfect and delicate than the hand of the most expert sculptor and in the center, as though it were the last dream of the gods, was a perfect tree rising from the floor of the cavern and extending to the roof, with limbs and foliage of the purest milky white and penciled as delicately as the fern and thrown over this, like a lovely bride, was a veil of the finest gossamer web; but so delicate was this child of the cavern that it could not stand the rude jostle of human work and the first view of it was the only one, after which it vanished like the mist. The first blast that was exploded after the room was opened crumbled it to dust and only the memory of it remains as no description can convey an idea of its beauty."

But to return to our story of the mines. The rush to the camp after the first discovery was not great like it usually is in such cases as the fear of Indians and the low price of lead at the time deterred any but the most venture some from going there; however, a few hardy miners staked their faith on the future of the district and took up claims in the vicinity of this find. In 1887 another big strike was made by Teal and Poe adjoining the Montezuma on the east and a little lower down the mountain. This strike brought more people into the camp and claims were staked out on all sides both on the mineral belt and off of it and prospect holes were dug by hundreds during the next few years many of them opening up good mineral deposits. The ores on the east side of the mountain were more easy of access at that time, so the most important work was done on that side of the range.

Following the Teal and Poe strike was that of the El Paso company some distance down the mountain. William Keith who worked them is said to have reaped big rewards for his labor. A. P. Taylor located several large claims which brought good profits. Clark and Cotton had some properties which proved valuable. While large quantities of rich ore have been taken from all these claims the development on any of been worked much for some years on account of the difficulty in handling a large flow of water which was encountered. Surrounding this are several claims which have been worked in a small way and will no doubt prove valuable with further development.

As we leave this side of the mountain and take up the mines on the west slope we will only treat of those that have been producers or had considerable development work done on them. Just beyond the summit, following the mineral belt in a northerly direction, is what is known as the Dr. Miller mine which has been worked for about 15 years by various parties and has produced large amounts of good ore. As we descend the mountain in the same direction we come to the White Oaks group, owned by Dennis Peoples, considerable development work has been done on these claims and they are considered among the valuable properties of the district, farther to the northeast we find the claim of Ed Orr; this claim carries more gold than any other in the camp, shipments often giving returns of $5.00 in gold. Near these properties on each side are many other claims which have been worked to a small extent and have yielded some good mineral values.

Returning to the Dr. Miller mine we find, in a southwesterly direction, the H. C. Tuckwood group of claims, which have had a large amount of work done on them; these properties were originally located by Peter Strey who earned a reputation for nerve by being the only miner who stayed in the camp the entire time during the Indian scares from 81 to 82. It was told of him that during these years he would take his rifle into the drift where he was working and at the first sound of them never reached any considerable depth. U. E. McDaniels was also one of the early locators who met with considerable success and is still in the camp and has some valuable holdings.

The property which is being most extensively worked at the present time is the Cleveland owned by the Nagle brothers.

At the eastern base of the mountain about three miles from the old Montezuma, more generally known as the old lead mines, is the Graphic mine which was located some 20 years ago by A. P. Taylor.

This property is in a porphyry and is the richest in silver of any mine in the district, some ore having been taken from it which ran as high as 1,500 ounces to the ton. This mine was sold by Mr. Taylor to Walter Hadley, who is said to have taken thousands of dollars worth of high grade ore out of it. Afterwards it was leased to J. B. Gilchrist who did the last work on the main opening putting it down to the depth of 625 feet, the greatest depth yet attained in the camp. The property also has the distinction of having the most machinery of any mine on the east side of the mountain, being equipped with a hoist, pumps and concentrator for treating the ores but it has not any one approaching, he would blow out his light and seize the rifle and ask who is that? when assured by the voice of a neighboring miner he would say: "Alright, I thought it might be an Indian."

Finally tiring of the lonely life in the mines, and having enough of this world's goods to make him comfortable for life, he sold out and went back to Minnesota to spend his old age in ease. Following the mineral belt farther down in the same direction we have a large group of mines owned by the Faywood Lead Co., these properties have probably produced more than any group of claims on the west side of the mountain, and considerable machinery has been installed by the company, among which is a fine large dry concentrating mill. J. P. Onstott was the original locator of these properties and worked them on an intelligent practical plan up to the time he sold out to the Faywood Co., thus demonstrating the real value of the holding.

Below this group are several holdings which were sold by Tyrill brothers that have been good producers. Besides those which we have made special mention of, there are many other good claims owned by poor people who only do the annual assessment work on them but, when capital can be interested in the district and transportation secured they will doubtless be heard from. This is, and always has been, practically a poor man's camp: the ore being near the surface and of a clean quality many men of small means have worked here and made good stakes from the proceeds of their labor. One old miner who has known the camp said to the writer: "I believe Cook's Peak is the best camp today, and always has been for a poor man, of any in the southwest and it is only a question of time when capital and railway facilities will make it one of the largest producers in the country."

Part II.

Judge Seaman Field was born in Jefferson county New York, in 1829, and at the age of 18 he moved to New Orleans, and later from there to Texas. At the beginning of the civil war he enlisted in the confederate cavalry serving to the close of the war, reaching the rank of lieutenant colonel. After the war he went to New York again where he engaged in business for about ten years, again coming to Texas and from there to New Mexico he settled in Deming in 1883 since which time he has been prominent in public life, and nearly always held some important office. At the present time he is a member of the board of regents of the New Mexico College of Agriculture and Mechanic Arts, chairman of the village trustees and chairman of the executive committee of the Adelphi Club of this city, and late brigadier general of the New Mexico brigade, Confederate Veterans.

He is now at the head of the insurance agency of Field and son, which is probably one of the best equipped and best managed insurance offices in the territory.

The Deming Ice and Electric Co.

While, as yet, Deming has not done much in a manufacturing line, the location, as regards railroads, mining camps etc., make this a natural point for such enterprises and we may confidently look for a number of important plants to be erected during the next few years. The way has been paved, and the start made by three of our enterprising citizens, Messrs. C. Reihls, H. M. Stecker and J. W. Pennewill, who have bound themselves together as a company under the name of the Deming Ice & Electric Co., and built the Deming Ice factory and Electric light plant. This institution was built in June last year and has been improved and enlarged until it now has a capacity of 15 tons of ice per day: while the business in the electric light department of the work has grown so that they have had to install a new dynamo of twice the capacity of the one used at the start, they have a light capacity now of 2,500 lights. They operate as a branch of the business here, the Silver City Beer and Ice Co., handling only at wholesale, and a branch at Hanover, it supplies the camps of Hanover and Santa Rita.

The plant is conveniently located on the north side of the railroad tracks near the big freight depot and has a spur track running to the door for convenience in unloading supplies and icing cars for the railway company. The company have in view, for the coming year extensive improvements consisting of the construction of a large Auditorium and swimming pool to be supplied with the waste water from the condensers in the ice plant, which is discharged at just the right temperature for this purpose, and furnishes a supply to keep fresh water running through the pool all the time. On the remainder of the ground owned by the company, grass, shrubs and trees will be started and a pleasant park installed, the water from the swimming pool being used for irrigating and beautifying the grounds, and it will only be a few years until the Deming Ice Works will be one of the most delightful spots in this region.

County Commissioners.

Last Saturday evening a special meeting of the board of county commissioners was called for the purpose of notifying the railway companies in the county to place fire guards along the lines of their road, in accordance with section 3904 of the compiled laws of 1897. Those present were W. C. Wallis, chairman; W. M. Taylor commissioner and B. Y. McKeyes clerk. Notices were prepared and certified copies served on the Atchison Topeka & Santa Fe Railway company, the Southern Pacific railway company, and the El Paso & Southwestern railway company. This action was necessary in order that any persons in the county who might be injured by fire started by the railway trains could have legal action against the company for damages. It is evident that the board of commissioners do not intend to let anything go undone which will benefit or protect the interests of the people of the county.

A Fence Wanted.

There is considerable complaint being made about the amount of stock that is being killed by the Santa Fe railroad on account of their track not being fenced. One man who has a fine herd of beeford cattle some miles east of town has lost several head this spring, notwithstanding the fact that he has hired a man at $30.00 per month for the last three months to ride the track and drive the cattle off. This is a serious loss as the company never pay anywhere near the value of such animals and the delay of getting the claims allowed nearly eats up the amounts paid when they are finally adjusted. There is a law requiring the companies to fence their tracks and in addition to this we understand several cattlemen in this county have offered to build the fence on the part of the line crossing their range if the company will furnish the material. With the conditions as they are something should be done to compel the companies to furnish better protection to the stock interests of the region traversed by their roads.

Birthday party.

On Thursday evening last grandma Allard reached her fifty-eighth birthday, and was reminded of the fact, by a surprise got up by her neighbors, who took possession of the Allard home and for a couple of hours made the good old lady forget that age was coming on. Mrs. Allard was the recipient of several handsome birthday gifts.

Battle on the Red Sea.

British Cutter and Gun-Running Dhow in Collision—Victory Rests With the Disciplined Crew of the European Boat After Fierce Engagement.

The story of a thrilling fight in the Red sea between a British gunboat and a large gun-running dhow with supplies for the mullah is told by a Reuter correspondent.

The Kitty, which had been patrolling the littoral for some three weeks, espied the dhow bearing on a course which would make the two boats pass within hailing distance. She promptly assumed the appearance of a helpless cripple, signals of distress were hung out and a Somali in her rigging waved his loin cloth to attract attention.

The stranger came on, decreasing the distance which separated the two boats until suddenly, when the dhow was some 300 yards away the Kitty broke out her flag and fired a blank shot across the bows of the dhow. The heads of twenty men could be counted upon the big dhow and as the sun glinted upon the barrels of their rifles the Kitty became aware that it was not improbable that she had tackled an ugly customer and a valuable prize.

Lieut. Bevan and Petty Officer Halstead were standing together when an answering shower of bullets rained upon them.

The big dhow drew off a little and, having both the wind and heels of the Kitty, slowly circled around her little antagonist, drenching with volleys, shredding her sail and piercing the frail timbers of her side. But the Kitty returned the salutations of her enemy with signal emphasis, striking her again and again.

Lieut. Bevan was soon master of the situation and in spite of the odds against her the Kitty made desperate efforts to board the enemy and end the fight.

A couple of dead hung across the stranger's gunwale and a wounded man lay by the tiller. She wore an air of submission and an Arab standing at the poop waved his hand and waited patiently for her arrival. An end of the fight seemed to have arrived when hostilities began afresh at close range, the Arab on the poop firing at Halstead. Lieut. Bevan bowled him over with a bullet through the arm and chest from his revolver. Further opposition was now useless and the Kitty came abreast, the men from the dhow throwing themselves into the sea to escape capture.

The prize was found to possess French papers and to have come from Jibuti. She contained some eighty modern French rifles, 10,000 rounds of ammunition, twenty-four barrels of powder and four tons of lead, all of which was confiscated by the British authorities, while the dhow herself was burned.

Lieut. Bevan and his crew of six have been informed by "my lords" of the admiralty that their splendid services have not been overlooked and £400 prize money has been divided between them.

Drunkards of the Animal World.

Many Beasts Will Intoxicate Themselves with Tempting Juices of Trees—Elephant, After Drinking to Excess, Is a Creature to Be Dreaded.

Although it has often been said, when speaking of drunkenness, that even the beasts of the field do not get drunk, it is, nevertheless, a fact that a great many animals do get intoxicated.

Take the elephant, for instance. He is particularly fond of the fruit of the Unganu tree, and although he appears to have some idea that it is not good for him he will go on eating, when he has once begun until he is wildly excited and so intoxicated that he will stagger from side to side.

Every now and then he will pull himself up, shake his huge head, and tear madly through the forest trumpeting at the top of his voice and terrifying every living creature. It is said that he will even dare and defy his most dreaded enemy, the tiger, when in this condition, but we have no means of verifying this.

It is well known, however, that an elephant is in a most dangerous condition when suffering from the effects of eating this beautiful fruit, and all who can take care to keep out of his way as much as possible.

The sloth bear is another animal given to this failing. The natives of India are in the habit of hanging little vessels on the palm trees for the purpose of catching the juice. This juice is so attractive to the sloth bear that, although a poor climber, he will scramble up and go on drinking the juice until he is so drunk that he can only slip helplessly to the ground and lie there in a drunken stupor until the effects have passed off.

But the sloth bear is not the only animal who is so partial to this juice of the palm tree. The curious fruit, or fox, bats (family Pteropodidae) are particularly fond of it. This peculiar little combination of beast and bird, with its fox-like face, reddish furry body, and black, uncanny-looking wings, the delicate membrane of which is always quivering down to the very tips, will fly to these vessels in company with some hundreds of his companions and they will suck the juice until the ground below the tree will be dark with the bodies of these bats, who will lie there too helplessly intoxicated to move or defend themselves no matter what may turn up. The biggest drunkard of all is, perhaps, the palm civet. So addicted is this animal to the drinking habit that he has been termed the toddy cat. And a more helpless, foolish-looking creature than he is when he is thoroughly intoxicated with the palm juice it would be difficult to find. There are many other animals given to this failing, but all those I have spoken of live in India, and it may be that the heat which induces extreme thirst—a frequent excuse among men—is the direct cause of it.

Odd Tales of a Detective.

Some of the Many Queer Things He Is Asked to Ferret Out—Man in High Position Suspected by Crank of Intent to Do Wrong.

I have had some amusing experiences in my time, said a confidential inquiry agent of long experience in detective work in London, to a writer in Tit-Bits. One of the oddest of them happened only a few months ago.

One morning a fashionably dressed and attractive young woman called at my office and asked my assistance in what I quickly discovered was an affair of love and jealousy. She had reason to believe, she said, that a woman friend, whose description and address she gave me, was in the habit of meeting a certain gentleman, whose photograph she produced, and she asked me to keep a watchful eye on the woman's movements for a week and report results—which, of course, I promised to do.

She had not been gone more than half an hour when another young woman, equally attractive, called and confided an exactly similar story to my ears. As her tale developed I discovered, to my amusement, that she was the one whose movements I had been instructed to watch, and the woman whom she suspected of clandestine meetings was my client of half an hour earlier. The funniest thing, however, was that I frequently saw the young man of the photograph in a young woman's company, but his companion was quite a different person from either of my fair clients.

Social jealousy often puts a lot of work in my way. In one case I was asked by one of her neighbors to shadow a certain woman who lives in a west end suburb. She goes up to town almost every morning," my client said, "and nobody knows where or why she goes. I have reason to think that she keeps a milliner's shop in the west end, and I shall be so glad if you will find out for me."

Some years ago an old man who lives a secluded life in the west end came to me with a story of a suspicious character who passed his house at a certain time every day and who had several times glanced up "in a threatening way" at my client as he was standing looking out of his window. "I am sure the man meditates some harm to me," the cranky old gentleman said; "his expression is most sinister, and I want you to find out all about him."

I carried out my instructions and who do you think the dangerous man proved to be? None other than Mr. Justice—, one of the most respected of our high court justices, who passed my client's house on his way home from the courts every day.

Czar's Novel Experience.

The Czar of Russia had a new experience the other day which proved to him that there is such a thing as national spirit among the common people of Russia. As he drove through the streets of St. Petersburg the crowds cheered him to the echo and it is said that the sad-faced autocrat positively beamed with pleasure over the evidence of popular approval of him. The cordial outburst was undoubtedly due to the recent ukase announcing forthcoming reforms.

A Frenchman who struck a fog on his first day in London said he could understand why the sun never set on the British dominion. "Ma foi!" said he, "it does not rise!"

An Interesting Letter Concerning Peruna.

Miss Della Janveau, Globe Hotel, Ottawa, Ont., is from one of the oldest and best known French Canadian families in Canada. In a recent letter to The Peruna Medicine Co., of Columbus, Ohio, she says:

"Last spring my blood seemed clogged up, my digestion poor, my head ached and I felt languid and tired all the time. My physician prescribed for me, but a friend advised me to try Peruna. I tried it and am pleased to state that I found it a wonderful cleanser and purifier of the system. In three weeks I was like a new woman, my appetite had increased, I felt buoyant, light and happy and without an ache or pain. Peruna is a reliable family medicine."

Adia Brittain, of Sekitan, O., writes: "After using your wonderful Peruna three months I have had great relief. I had continual heaviness in my stomach, was bilious, and had fainting spells, but they all have left me since using Peruna."

MUNICH THE SCENE OF MUCH QUIET AND CHARM

Old and New Periods Mingle Lovingly in the Streets of the Old German City—Military Pomp and Display Are Features Seen on Every Side.

(Special Correspondence.)

The Germans say of Munich that it is the most "gemuetlich" city to be found in the length and breadth of the Fatherland ("gemuetlich" being an untranslatable word, containing in itself the essence of all things lovable.) And, indeed, there seems brooding over the modern city something of the restfulness and peace of the far-away days, when there were only a few monasteries clustered here in the midst of the wide-spreading plain, a welcome sight, one imagines, to many a way-worn traveler.

Americans of "globe-trotting" propensities rush into Munich, drive about for an hour at noon in the immense irregular Odeon Platz just outside the walls of the old Hofgarten, and from the barracks to its elevated "loggia" in the square, and back again, it is escorted by a squad of soldiers, who perform this duty with as much pomp and solemnity as if they were marching against a Napoleon. As the strains of martial music float down the various streets, there gather in the sunny square a crowd of listeners, who stroll about in refreshing idleness—friends meet for a chat—officers in beautiful uniforms and high-shouldered self-consciousness, mingle a little in the fine broad streets, visit the art galleries and museums, listen to an opera or two, and, taking the train for Vienna, tell any one who inquires that Munich is too modern-looking and too quiet to be interesting. Then you may know that they have not lingered long enough for the spirit of the place to get into them, and have never known the delight of exploring expeditions into the old Munich that lies hidden in and about the modern parts so greatly in evidence. One has often only to turn a corner, or pass under an inconspicuous archway, to find himself in a narrow, twisting street, on either side of which is an irregular row of quaint medieval-looking houses, peaked and tiled of roof, with small latticed windows through which one catches a glimpse, now of a child's flaxen head, now of a quiet, wrinkled face bending over some interminable work. Perhaps the street leads into a quiet, sunny "platz," with a bit of green park down the center, presided over by the statue of some dignitary with a lengthy name, or perhaps it turns into a lane still narrower, with open market stalls on either side, where rosy-cheeked, masculine-looking women in thick boots and huge woolen hoods sit in the midst of vegetable mountains and ply their indefatigable knitting needles. The vista may be closed by one of the gates of old Munich, many of which remain to tell of the walls and fortifications that encircled the city in the Middle Ages, and under this one passes, not to a moat and drawbridge, but into the streets of new Munich.

The fact that these places and their swords and spurs—students in the bright caps of their various corps parade in small companies, a band of blue caps stiffening into painful rigidity when passing a band of red caps or green or yellow caps, as the case may be, and relaxing again after a frigid salute, there being iron-clad rules and points of etiquette for all such momentous occasions.

Then there is the coffee hour, four o'clock, when what little business that has been in progress during the day stops, while young and old, natives and strangers, apply themselves to the drinking of coffee and eating of "kuchen." There are hundreds of cafes scattered about the city, and by half-past four there is scarcely a seat to be had in any of them.

Once during the year, however, is the even-tenor of Munich life quickened (not to say upset,) by the carnival, when the city is given over to the students, and when the American discovers that these solemn individuals are only college boys in disguise. The barriers between the different corps melt away for the time being, and blues, greens, reds and yellows put their heads together to concoct the pranks that keep the city in a gale of laughter for the two days preceding Ash Wednesday.

Decked out in women's wigs, trailing skirts and wonderful hats, they promenade the streets, attended by devoted swains, casting languishing glances at passers-by, and enjoying the attention and fun they excite in their progress. On the afternoon of the Tuesday, one sees crowds of people, in holiday clothes and spirits, moving down every street in the direction of scenes, with the stamp of bygone centuries upon them, are generally come upon unexpectedly, only adds piquancy to their charm, and one gets quite into the habit of diving through likely-looking passageways and into courtyards, in the hope of something delightful "turning up."

The people, high and low, are fond of military display, and soldiers march about the streets on every available pretext. For instance, when the weather is fine, a military band plays the Maximilian Strasse, where the revelry of the carnival concentrates itself, and reaches its highest pitch.

Salt Lake Not to Disappear.

The fall of 11 feet 7 inches in the level of the Great Salt lake is chargeable, says the director of the weather bureau for that section, to deficient rainfall, and not to water being used for irrigation. He predicts that the lake will soon begin to rise.

KAFFIR BREACH OF PROMISE.

How the Act of Parents Prevented the Union of Children.

Considerable amusement has been afforded the inhabitants of Craddock, Cape Colony, by a breach of promise case in colored circles, which is described by the Westminister Gazette. The members of the party—mostly women—were arrayed in brilliant colors or pure white. Plaintiff, named Caroline May, wore a black dress with scarlet silk blouse and round her neck a gold chain, which hung in loops to her waist, where it was fastened with a sovereign pendant and trinkets. Defendant, a fine, swarthy, intelligent-looking fellow, bearing the name of Andrew Africa, was attired in gray flannels and spotless linen, with a coronation medal and ribbon on the lapel of his coat.

The aggrieved maiden told the court that she claimed $100 damages for loss of comfort and home life. Defendant had given her an engagement ring and arranged with her father as to the number of cattle he was to pay for her, and she, at defendant's request, left the domestic situation where she was employed. Africa wrote her many love letters. Her mother bought the wedding dress and outfit, which included the following articles: Plates and forks, cups and saucers, twenty pounds of butter, six pounds of fat, a butter pot, a sugar pot, pictures and frames.

Defendant asserted that as his father could not come to terms with the girl's father as to the number of cattle to be paid for the girl herself, impatient at the delay, broke off the match. Without the consent of both parents, according to native custom, they could not marry.

The resident magistrate accepted the defendant's version and dismissed the case. He said the trouble was really between the parents and not between the youth and the girl.

THE FIRST PUBLIC SCHOOL.

In Dorchester, in 1639, Citizens Were Taxed for Its Support.

The first public school in America to be supported by direct taxation "upon the inhabitants of the town," was established at Dorchester, Mass., in May, 1639.

In 1636 David Thompson had settled upon Thompson's island, off the coast of the colony town, and in 1638 he gave the island to the town on the payment of 12 pence yearly rental. Having transferred the island to the town, the town council met May 20, 1639, and adopted the following order:

"It is ordered the 20th day of May, 1639, that there shall be a rent of £20 a year imposed forever on Thompson's island, to be paid by every person that hath propriety in said island, according to the proportion that any such person shall from time to time enjoy and possess there, and this toward the maintenance of a school in Dorchester. This rent of £20 a year to be paid to such schoolmaster as shall undertake to teach English, Latin and other tongues, also writing. The said schoolmaster to be chosen from time to time by the freemen, and it is left to the discretion of the elders and the seven men for the time being whether maids shall be taught with the boys or not. For the levying of this £20 yearly from the particular persons who ought to pay it according to this order, it is further ordered that some man shall be appointed by the seven men for the time being to receive this, and on refusal to levy it by distress, and not finding distress, such person as so refuseth payment shall forfeit the land he hath in propriety in said island."

Here, the first teacher was the Rev. Thomas Waterhouse.

Sonnet.

Poor soul, the center of my sinful earth,
My sinful earth, these rebel powers that thee array,
Why dost thou pine within and suffer
death,
Painting thy outward wall so costly gay?
Why art so large cost, having so short a lease,
Dost thou upon thy fading mansion spend?
Shall worms, inheritors of this excess,
Eat up thy charge? Is this thy body's end?
Then soul, live thou upon thy servant's loss,
And let that pine to aggravate thy store;
Buy terms divine in selling hours of dross;
So shalt thou feed on Death, that feeds
on men,
And Death once dead, there's no more dying then.
—William Shakespeare.

JOKE ON THE WHITES.

Amusing Story Told in the Letter of a Kansas Soldier.

A Wichita boy serving in the Philippine army writes to his mother in the greatest indignation over a gigantic joke played by a colored regiment in the far away islands. This regiment is the Forty-ninth infantry. They were stationed at Sipa, one of the interior provinces. They told the natives that the colored race predominated in America; that the whites had been but recently released from slavery; that the colored people ran the United States government; that President McKinley was descended from a pure-blooded African chief; that the white folk in America were low down, lazy, pilfering trash, much given to stealing chickens; that the whites were not permitted to own property and that the negroes wouldn't associate with them on terms of equality at all.

By and by the colored regiment was moved elsewhere and the regiment to which the Wichita boy belonged took its place. The white soldiers found that they were looked upon with contempt by the natives and that everything told by the colored troops had been believed.—Kansas City Journal.

Miss Gannon, Sec'y Detroit Amateur Art Association, tells young women what to do to avoid pain and suffering caused by female troubles.

"I can conscientiously recommend Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound to those of my sisters suffering with female weakness and the troubles which so often befall women. I suffered for months with general weakness and felt so weary that I had hard work to keep up. I had shooting pains and was utterly miserable. In my distress I was advised to use Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, and it was a red letter day to me when I took the first dose, for at that time my restoration began. In six weeks I was a changed woman, perfectly well in every respect. ### The Bicycle in England.

Bicycling is said to be holding its own in England much better than in this country, perhaps partly because the roads are better and the distances smaller, and partly because the English do not tire of a new craze so quickly as Americans. THE early and plentiful rains all over New Mexico will add thousands of dollars to the wealth of our people this year.

PROGRESS is the word in educational lines in New Mexico. This year a higher standard will be required of teachers seeking certificates to teach in the territorial schools than ever before.

WHILE Rodey and Quay are working for statehood; the people of New Mexico will be working to make this the richest and most influential commonwealth in the Union.

ONE of the most effective ways of advertising is on envelopes used for business correspondence. It would pay every business man in this town to have an ad for the National sanitarium printed on his business envelopes.

THE New Mexico College of Agriculture and Mechanic Arts and the gasoline pump are two important factors which will work wonders in the development of our agricultural interests and the settlement of our vacant lands, during the next few years.

IT is understood that the mineral exhibit which is being gotten up for the St Louis Exposition will be exhibited at the Territorial Fair at Albuquerque this fall. This will add very materially to the fair as it will probably be the largest mineral exhibit ever shown in the territory.

EVERY town in New Mexico should help to make the educational exhibit at the territorial fair the best we have ever had. Hundreds of eastern people will be at the fair and the impressions they receive there will be what they will form their opinions of our social conditions on.

A Sunday school party going from El Paso to Cloud Croft encountered a cold rain and after a day of shivering and discomfort were glad to get home. Those resorts in the higher mountains are all right for a few of the hottest days of the summer but for all the year round resorts a place like Faywood takes the cake.

DURING the past few weeks hundreds of bright young men and women have graduated from the high schools and colleges of this territory; many of these will start out as teachers this fall and the effect on the rural districts will be noticed in all parts of the territory. The time has come when New Mexico will not take a back seat in educational matters for any state in the west.

WHILE the crops of New England are drying up for want of rain; the fertile regions of the Mississippi valley are flooded so as to give the farmers no seed time; the cattle of Montana frozen by hundreds in a may blizzard and cyclones are scattering death and ruin to various parts of the country, New Mexico is enjoying comfort and plenty and is giving to her less fortunate neighbors.

AN El Paso paper in commenting on the recent disaster at Clifton says: "The portion of Clifton affected by the cloudburst was not the resident section of the better class of people and it is not thought that any persons of prominence were drowned."

Can it be that the editors of El Paso do not consider the loss of human life of any consequence unless it is a person of prominence.

THE last legislature passed a law providing for the use of prisoners from the penitentiary to build a road over the mountains between Santa Fe and Las Vegas. As the two towns are connected by the railroad there is about as much use for the road as for a fifth wheel on a wheelbarrow. However, some 20 convicts were sent from the penitentiary last week to Las Vegas to commence work on the road.

Clifton Disaster.

THE long expected happened at Clifton Tuesday afternoon. A cloudburst brought a heavy flood down Chase creek, causing many deaths and an immense loss of property. The flood came down the creek about four o'clock in the afternoon, with a breast eight or ten feet high. There was no warning and many had no chance of escape. Chase creek canon is about 400 feet wide, with a steep slope up the hills on either side. The narrow guage road to Metcalf runs up the canon and the ground not occupied by the road is pretty well built up with business houses. When the flood came the people started for the hills but how many failed to get there may never be known to a certainty. The houses in the canon were wrecked and their contents washed away. The water did great damage in the company store; the high water mark being about eight feet above the floor. There is a great deal of made ground where Chase creek enters the San Francisco river, composed mostly of tailings from the concentrators. This washed out easily and a great deal of it washed away. The railroad turntable was put out of commission. The railroad to Metcalf was washed out for miles. All the ores used by both Arizona and Shanon companies have to be brought down over this road and even if there was no strike these companies could not do any reducing until the road is again in commission. No accurate estimate has been made of the loss but it will probably be far beyond a hundred thousand dollars.

Stolen and Otherwise

There are no railroad mergers in the republic of Mexico.

The rains in New Mexico this week assure good grass for the millions of sheep on the mesas of the territory.

New Mexico is in healthy financial condition. On the first of June the territorial treasury contained $353,095.34.

The Washington Star says that it is a lucky farmer who can depend on irrigation instead of waiting for rain.

Kansas will soon be all right and will harvest immense crops, and by fall will be loaning money to the people who are now sending aid to that state.

All the loafers and looters in the flooded cities should be put to work cleaning up debris, even if they must be chained and starved to make them labor for food.

The Salvation army is to invade the feud districts of Kentucky, under the auspices of a wealthy ex-confederate who promises to finance the expedition.

Oklahoma has five times as much money in the national irrigation fund as New Mexico can claim. New Mexico needs irrigation five times as badly as Oklahoma. But this does even up matters, by any means.

Mexico has decided to experiment in the matter of government ownership and control of the National railroad and the outcome will be awaited with interest in this country, where there are many who believe government ownership of railroads is a matter of vital importance.

New Mexico has no disasters to report. The people in every portion of the territory are prospering. With the best climate in the world, no floods, no cyclones, no crop failures, this country is a paradise in comparison with the water soaked communities of the Missouri valley region.

Valley farmers should make enough profit this year of abundant river water to pay for irrigation pumps for use in dry years. There is water at shallow depth beneath every farm in the valley and certainly pumping is not too expensive when it needs to be used to prevent crop failure and damage to orchards.

Rev. Skinner and his defenders contend that 90 per cent of the population of New Mexico are illiterate. The Las Vegas Advertiser says that Manuel C. de Baca, who made the canvas of precinct 26. of the old town last week reports that in that precinct he found 1,164 persons of all ages 927 of whom could read and write; 38 illiterate were found over the age of 10 years and 299 illiterate under the age of 10; 130 of these are under the age of 5 years. If some mathematical prodigy will take the pains to figure out this he will find a considerably larger per cent of intelligence in that precinct than the average accorded Massachusetts with its cultured Boston.—Citizen.

Required of Teachers

Santa Fe, June 10.—The territorial board of education decided that in the future all applicants for second grade teachers' certificates must pass satisfactory examinations in arithmetic, geography, orthography, reading, grammar, history, physiology, elementary pedagogy, and penmanship, while applicants for first grade positions must in addition pass examinations in civil government, elementary algebra, advanced pedagogy, elements of zoology and botany.

Irrigation Scheme.

The man who can improve the present way of irrigating by the ditch process, so that the cost will be less will be doing a good thing for his fellow men.

R. H. Greenleaf, who lives on North Fourth street, has improved on the old method of irrigation, so he thinks.

Mr. Greenleaf, who has an inventive sort of mind, has dug a well and put in a small pump, with a capacity of 1,000 gallons an hour. The apparatus is run by steam and can be operated at very small expense. Mr. Greenleaf will soon put in a reservoir for the underflow though one well is inexhaustible and he thinks he has solved the cheaper and more practicable way of irrigating. His scheme will be watched with interest. If it works he believes all the land on the mesa east of the city and up to the foot of the mountains, can be made garden spots.—Citizen.

For Those Who Live on Farms.

Fr. Bergin, Pana, Ill., writes: "I have used Ballard's Snow Lament; always recommend it to my friends, as I am confident there is no better made. It is a handy for burns." Those who live on farms are especially liable to many accidental cuts, burns and bruises, which heal rapidly when Ballard's Snow Lament is applied. It should always be kept in the house for cases of emergency 25c, 50c, and $1.00 at J. P. Byron & Son.

For Smuggling.

Last Thursday Deputy Customs Collector, W. K. Fall, of Columbus came before United States Commissioner, B. Y. McKeyes and made complaint against Suvria and Carlos Maiz for bringing horses across the line without paying duty. Commissioner McKeyes set the case for June 20, and as they were unable to give bonds of appearance they were sent to jail to await trial.

Ladies and Children Invited.

All ladies and children who cannot stand the shocking strain of laxative syrups, cathartics, etc., are invited to try the famous Little Early Risers. They are different from all other pills. They do not purge the system. Even a double dose will not gripe, weaken or sicken; many people call them the Easy Pill. W. H. Howell, Houston, Tex., says nothing better can be used for constipation, sick headache, etc. Bob Moore, Lafayette, Ind., says all others gripe and sicken, while DeWitt's Little Early Risers do their work well and easy.—Sold by J. P. BYRON & SON.

Vindicating Spinsterhood.
To laugh at spinsterhood nowadays is to display ignorance of women, and assuredly the very last way in the world to persuade her into matrimony. It is tolerably clear that when a woman wants to marry she generally manages to achieve her object. When she prefers a "bachelor" life it may be taken as equally certain that she is best securing her own happiness and probably that of others.—Lady's Pictorial.

Hunt for Century-Old Rum. Precious Liquid Buried on Mount Katahdin One Hundred Years Ago Being Eagerly Sought For by Descendants of the Man Who Hid It.

During the forenoon of July 4, 1803, Amos Patten of Bangor climbed to the top of Mount Katahdin, accompanied by two guides. They were the first white men who ever set foot upon the summit of Maine's highest mountain. In his diary of the trip Mr. Patten records that he gave three cheers for the United States of America, three more for the American eagle and then cried "Death to all traitors!" three times. After these ceremonies he sang "Yankee Doodle" in "a loud, clear voice," and when he had finished the patriotic exercises of the day he and his guides took "two stiff horns of new rum, engraved our names on a sheet of lead, wrapped the same about a gallon jug of rum and buried both under a cat spruce tree on the very top." At his death the patriotic mountain climber left an estate valued at $75,000 and a family of five sons, all of whom made repeated trips to the mountain to find the hidden record and the aging rum, which was doing no good to anybody. On July 4, 1853, sixteen Pattens stood on the mountain top and sang "Yankee Doodle," "Hail Columbia" and "The Star Spangled Banner." They also camped among the trees and made a thorough search for the jug of rum, which was fifty years of age and no doubt very mellow, but their labors were without reward. Twenty-five years later, on July 4, 1878, twenty-three Pattens, all of whom were descendants of Amos, toiled up the side of Mount Katahdin and spent two days in camp above the hardwood line. They repeated all the old songs with which the mountain was familiar and added "Rally 'Round the Flag," "Marching Through Georgia" and several others left over from the civil war, but though they looked and dug holes under every cat spruce tree on a five-acre lot at the summit, the seventy-five-year-old rum was not discovered. As 1903 is the 100th anniversary of the first ascent of the mountain, the descendants of Amos Patten will make still another trial to unearth the elusive rum, and will pass a week on the summit, singing patriotic hymns, making speeches and digging for a jug of liquor which is more precious than gold. There are forty-two male descendants of Amos Patten between the ages of 14 and 70, and of these more than thirty have pledged themselves to accompany the party. A fife and drum corps will go along, and if that century old rum can be found they are resolved to know just how it tastes.

Courage of the Red Man. Old Miner Tells of Pathetic but Useless Show of Bravery Made by Indian Chief—Gives Tribute to an Unflinching Foe.

"They can talk all they please about the cowardice and treachery of Indians but let me say they are the gamest fellows that ever breathed," says an old-time miner. "After they had been whipped and driven from plain to mountain range time and again, of course, they became treachers, but before they learned of the white man's tactics they were an unflinching foe. The prettiest sight I ever saw was during a fight a lot of us miners had with a band of Indians in Montana in the early '50s. We had been prospecting along the Yellowstone and had not found any tempting gold-bearing gravel, so we started to go about a hundred miles farther down the river. We hadn't gone far before we ran into a band of hostile Indians. From the first we knew there was a fight coming, but we pushed on. "Two days' travel brought us into the center of their rather shifting territory and we knew we were in for it. The redskins were camped across the river, but we knew there were others in the woods all about us. We built a raft and pushed out to a brush-covered sand bar to get out of the way. Indians generally make an attack in the night or early morning, but this band chose the time of sunset to strike at us. They piled into their rude canoes and floated down stream directly toward our camp on the bar, and you never saw a more fearless set of red demons in your life.

"Standing erect in the bow of the front canoe was the chief. He looked like a tall bronze statue. The light of the low sinking sun fell upon him, lighting up his face, arms, and bare chest. He was the noblest looking creature my eyes ever rested upon. I knew we had to kill him, but I was touched with pity at the thought. I couldn't raise my rifle to do it, but one of the boys did. The boat drew nearer. The Indian still stood with one foot in the bottom of the boat, the other resting on the curved top of the bow. He surely knew he would be killed, but he never moved. "A little puff of smoke and fire burst from the muzzle of the miner's rifle, and in an instant the chief's hands fell to his side. He raised his right arm again and pointed directly before him at the red sun sinking behind the mountain. The boat came on, and as it drew nearer we could see a red stream coursing down the bronze skin of the warrior. The rifle cracked again, the Indian raised his face to the sky and fell into the water. "It was a hard fight to drive the rest of the band away and we lost several of our men in doing it. It was a hard fight, but it was worth while to me, for the picture of the great nameless chief has always remained with me. He gave me the grandest exhibition of courage I have ever seen and I have respected the red man ever since."

Pine Lands of the South. Experts Maintain They Can Be Made Fertile and Profitable if Properly Cultivated—Good News for Mississippi and Louisiana.

In the early days of California, when its mineral wealth had turned the eye of the whole world in that direction, an enterprising American planted a small patch of ground near San Francisco in fruit and grain. He was the subject of much ridicule among the pioneers, says the New Orleans Times-Democrat, and one of the men most prominent in mining circles smiled derisively at the man who was trying to get money out of the earth with a spade instead of a pickax. "I wouldn't give $100 for all the crops that the Pacific coast will ever grow," are the memorable words he said, and in this he only echoed public sentiment. The sandy, semi-arid soil of California was regarded as unfit for cultivation. The country, it was predicted, would never be anything but a mining camp. Agriculture was out of the question. The soil was poor and rainfall deficient. But the prophet, like most others, has proved totally wrong. The mining interests of California have shrunk to small proportions; agriculture now contributes most of the wealth, and the state is one of the richest in the union in its farms, producing in the census year crops valued at $131,690,606 of the most varied character. In an address before the immigration convention, Prof. E. B. Ferris, assistant director of the branch experiment station at McNeill, Miss., pointed out how the same mistake had been made in regard to the pine lands of the Southwest. McNeill is fifty-seven miles from New Orleans on the New Orleans & Northeastern and in the heart of the pine belt. That belt has been viewed with disfavor by the farmers. It was good for lumbering, they said, but scarcely suitable for agricultural purposes, and most of the farmers have passed by and moved on to the rich river bottoms. It would be a great misfortune for the South were this so, for its pine lands take up a large portion of its area, nearly half of Mississippi and Louisiana. But Prof. Ferris shows very clearly that it is not so and that the pine lands, like the sandy lands of California, can be made most productive if it be gone about in the right way. This is good news, as the pine lands are occupied mainly by whites, while the river bottoms and alluvial lands are given over to the negroes. Whatever white immigration, therefore, comes to this section is likely to settle in the pine hills and it is well to know that we have so much land there open to settlement that will be profitable to the state. Automobiles in the United States. There are about 30,000 automobiles in use in the United States.

CHILDREN.

The sleeping echoes of her quiet room
Are never waked by bursts of childish glee,
And up the polished staircase never come
Light pattering of footsteps swift and free,
Alone she sits and in the twilight gloom
Dreams happily of what shall never be!

Sometimes her wistful fancy strews the floor
(Rich carpeted and neat) with broken toys;
Faints finger prints on window glass and door,
Hears echoes of shrill laughter and rude noise;
All that a tired mother might deplore
Would seem to her starved heart as priceless joys!

Till, from the world without, some sudden note
Of childish voices through her vision rings,
And sobe of anguish rise to her white throat,
Round which no dimpled arm in mischief clings;
Gone are the sweet dream-fancies, as may float
From earth to heaven the flash of angel wings,

And yet, no little empty crib is there
To mock the mother arms, outstretched in vain,
She hoards no shining tress of silken hair,
No tiny grave where buried hopes lie slain;
Only the deeper loss she has to bear
Upon whose heart no balm here has lain.

A Soldier's Gratitude

First Lieutenant Robert Emmett Kavanaugh was pacing up and down his narrow quarters in Fort Grady, Michigan, holding a telegram in his hand. He had read it twenty times, but at every second turn in his nervous walk he read it again. The telegram was dated Chicago, and this is what it said: "Leave Thursday for Florida; Uncle Frank ill. Stay indefinite. Norah Desmond."

Lieut. Bob Emmett and Norah Desmond were engaged. They were to be married as soon as a few accommodating superior officers would consent to be killed off or die in their beds and thereby give Bob a chance to write captain instead of lieutenant before his name on the official papers.

"Norah's going to Florida," he muttered to himself. "I haven't seen her for three weeks and won't see her for six months to come. Uncle Frank is one of the kind who never dies and who never gets well, and Norah'll stay down there until the old man is willing to let her go. She's more of a stickler for duty than Old Muggs, the commanding officer, and that's saying a lot. He won't give me a leave; I've had too many. Great Winfield Scott, but I would like to see Norah before she goes." And Lieut. Robert Emmett Kavanaugh sighed.

Bob Kavanaugh couldn't keep anything to himself, and in five minutes he was telling his woes to Capt. Percy Lanyard of the artillery corps. "Brace up, Kavanaugh," said Lanyard: "Muggs is going to send a general prisoner through Chicago to Fort Sheridan to stand trial. It isn't a very pleasant duty, but if you'll volunteer, I think Muggs will send you, and you can stop off on our way back from Fort Sheridan—it is only a few miles from Chicago—and see your blue-eyed Norah before she gets on the Florida limited."

Twelve hours from that time Bob Kavanaugh was sitting in a smoking car on a Chicago bound train, with a big Colt revolver strapped around him and an enlisted man, with a downcast look, sitting alongside of him. Bob Kavanaugh had a soft heart. The soldier at his side had seen eight years of service and had never been in trouble before. He had assaulted the "top" sergeant, a serious offense in the army, as may go without saying.

Part of a freight train went into the ditch ahead of the Fort Grady passenger train. Kavanaugh and his prisoner were delayed five hours. Finally the way was cleared and the train ran on to Chicago. It was Thursday, and in four hours Norah's train would leave for Florida. It was utterly impossible for the officer to get his prisoner to Fort Sheridan and to return in time to say good-bye to his fiancée.

"Norah's going to Florida," he muttered to himself.

Kavanaugh and his charge stepped from the train into the Chicago depot. Bob's heart was sore. "I must see her," he said to himself. "I can't stand it for six months." At that instant he saw at the depot cigar stand, making a purchase, Jack Bacon, a

"I took a shot at him."

Chicago club man, and an intimate friend. Kavanaugh hurried his charge over toward the young fellow. "Jack, old man, glad to see you. You have an hour or two to spare, I know you have; don't say no," and with this the lieutenant grabbed his friend by the arm, motioned his prisoner to walk ahead, and the three went on a half trot into the office of a hotel across the street. Kavanaugh threw a $2 bill before the clerk and ordered a room. He hurried the astounded Jack Bacon and the prisoner into the apartment on the second floor.

"Jack," said Kavanaugh, in a low tone, "as you love me, watch this man. I must see Norah Desmond. She's off for Florida. Take this gun and don't fail me," and with that First Lieutenant Robert Emmett Kavanaugh shoved a revolver into Jack Bacon's hand, bolted through the door out of the hotel and on to a trolley car. In twenty minutes he was with Norah Desmond, who was in the midst of the last hour of preparation for her Florida trip.

In twenty minutes more the door bell of the flat rang violently. The maid opened it, and in rushed Jack Bacon, flushed and fairly beside himself. "Bob," he yelled, "your prisoner skipped. He kicked open a door into the next room and jumped onto a low roof and then into the alley. I took a pot shot at him, but missed, and when I got down he was clean gone."

Bob Kavanaugh sank into a chair, his face pale. "Norah," he said, "this means court-martial and dismissal for me unless I can catch the fellow. It's a clean case of neglect of duty. It's all up, dear, if I don't get him, and if I'm kicked out of the army I don't know what I'll do. But this won't catch him. I'm off, but I'll be at the train to say good-bye, and Kavanaugh was out of the door and down the stairs four steps at a time.

Over on Halsted street in a room above a store a pretty, pale girl sat talking to a soldier in uniform. "It's all up, Polly," he was saying. "I hit the 'top' sergeant. He deserved it, but I was put in arrest and was to be tried, and it meant two years. I just cut away from a 'cit' whom the officer who had me in tow left me in care of."

"Oh, this is awful, Jim," said the girl, "and you'll be a deserter, too." "I won't get any more for that than I'll get for the other." Then suddenly changing the subject the soldier asked: "How's your mother?" "Better, Jim, but she'd have died if it hadn't been for Miss Norah Desmond. She's an angel. I had to stop work to nurse mother, and the money gave out and I got sick, and Miss Norah gave us a nurse and a doctor and did lots else. I think she saved my life, too."

"Norah Desmond, Polly? That's the name of the girl the lieutenant I cut from is to marry. He'll be disgraced and the girl will suffer. She saved you and your mother, did she, Polly. Get on your things, quick. She leaves for Florida. I know the train. The lieutenant'll be there, I know that. Hurry, girl."

Lieut. Robert Emmett Kavanaugh was kissing Norah Desmond good-bye. Just then from behind him came a voice loud and with something of a ring of humor in it. "Sir, all are present and accounted for." Kavanaugh turned like a flash. There stood Private Spencer saluting with his right hand, while his left was holding that of a very pretty girl.

"Spencer, you're a brick," said Kavanaugh, and nothing but army training kept him from slapping his inferior on the back. "I'll use every official friend I have to get you out of your scrape."

A year later in pleasant quarters at Fort Grady sat Capt. Kavanaugh and his wife. "Norah," he said, "First Sergeant James Spencer has applied for a furlough to go to Chicago to get married. Shall I approve the application?"

"Bob, if you don't," said Norah, with her eyes dancing, "I'll get a divorce."

STRENUOUS LIFE IN NAVY.

Trophies and Athletic Equipment for Jackies of the Misouri.

The strenuous life in navy extending to the navy and at a quick pace. Some time ago Secretary Moody, as a result of a conversation with the President, promulgated an order authorizing the issue to any ship whose commander should report to the department that his crew has a well-developed athletic organization, of certain sporting paraphernalia appropriate to the character of certain games in which the men excel, and of a series of prizes or trophies for which they may contend. This has been acted upon by the battleship Missouri, with the result that orders have been issued for her equipment with two punching bags, twenty-four baseballs, four footballs, twelve bats, twelve broadswords, six sets of eight-ounce boxing gloves, six sets of fencing foils, twenty-four ball-players' suits, and an adequate supply of masks, gloves, protectors, etc., for all probable requirements. The suits are to have the name of the ship across the breasts of the shirts.

This move has been made, not only in the belief that athletic exercises are good for the men who indulge in them, but that the interest exerted by competition between the ships' crews in many sports will tend to take the place of less wholesome entertainments when the men are ashore. The pride of each ship in its own crack sportsmen will add to the esprit de corps and the hope is that the moral tone of the whole navy will be raised by the new plan in spite of occasional abuses which will doubtless be inevitable.—New York Post.

To Face a Concert.

When the low music makes a dusk of sound,
About us, and the viol of far-off horn,
Swells out above it like a wind forlorn,
That wanders, seeking something never found,
What phantom in your brain, on what dim ground,
Traces its shadowy lines? What vicer-born
Of fulfillment, fades in mere self-scorn?
Or grows, from that still twilight stealing round?

When the lids droop and the hands lie unstrung,
Dare one divine your dream, while the chords weave
Their cloudy woof from key to key and die—
It is one fate that, since the world was young,
Had followed man, and made him half believe
The voice of instruments a human cry?

A Physical Impossibility.

David Warfield was playing recently in "The Auctioneer" in a Western city, where the part of Levi attracted a group of giggling seminary girls. They admired his acting, and scribbling their names on a program, wrote underneath:

"May we see you apart?"
When the message was delivered, Warfield was taking off his "make-up." He seized a red pencil, one of his "props" in the auction scene, and dashed off the following reply on the same program:
"Many thanks. Don't come apart. Was born in one piece."—New York Times.

The Future City of the Southwest

The great cattle ranges which surround Deming and the immense herds of cattle which live and thrive on them, the vast mining camps whose natural source of supply is Deming, the rail roads centering here and others to come, the delightful climate, pure water, and healthfulness are all among the substantial factors in making this a beautiful and prosperous city. Look at the map and note the various avenues of trade leading into Deming.

The National colony and sanitarium for consumptives located here will alone bring thousands of people, the majority of whom will regain their health and remain here. The large smelters and other manufactories now under consideration will more than double the population; still these will not be a drop in the bucket to what will come. This is the place and the only place in southwestern New Mexico where a large and prosperous city can be built and every indication justifies the conclusion that it must come.

Laid to rest.

Last Friday the mortal remains of Leon Smith, brother of Mrs. C. H. Brown, of this city, whose tragic death in El Paso, we mentioned in last week's Graphic, were laid to rest in the Deming cemetery. From the report of the circumstances given by his relatives who went to El Paso to investigate the matter it appears that the young life was sacrificed to the carelessness of the trolley car motorman, as there was plenty of time for the car to be stopped after seeing a man on the track if he had been watching as he should and, it will probably never be known whether he fell in trying to get out of the way or was knocked down by the car which was running at a high rate of speed. The bereaved relatives have the sympathy of the community in their time of trouble.

JUNE TERM OF DISTRICT COURT.

A Large Amount of Business Transacted at the June Term—Judge Parker Tried Many Cases in less Than Two Weeks.

The June session of the District Court which was in session when we went to press last week, has done more business than any term ever held in our county. The following is a summary of the proceedings, in brief as we have not space to give details as to individual cases; The case of Territory vs Eugene B. Hulen brought from Dona Ana, on change of venue was continued; in the case of Territory vs Childers, a change of venue to Sierra county was granted, two cases of Territory vs A. M. Little for illegal renting houses for purposes of prostitution, he was convicted on one count and pled guilty on another; J. Rogers was convicted of Burglary and sentenced to nine months in the penitentiary; Eugenio Orono convicted of attempt to commit rape, was sentenced to four years in the territorial institution. A number of civil matters were disposed off, but as none of them were of general interest we will not mention them separately.

As the work of the Grand jury was especially complete we will give their report to the court at the conclusion of their work which will explain itself.

Grand Jury's Report.

Honorable Frank W. Parker, Judge of the Third Judicial District of Territory of New Mexico.

Sir:—

We the Grand Jurors for Luna County for the above term, respectfully submit to you, our report.

We have examined diligently into all offenses committed against the Territory in this county. We have found after examining the evidence given before the committing Magistrate, and subsequently corroborated before this body forty two true bills. We have found after examining the evidence that sufficient facts were not shown to justify a conviction before a trial jury, therefore have respectfully reported. No bills, four.

We have examined into the books of the various county offices, and herewith attached please find sub committee reports.

In conclusion we wish to express our thanks to your Honor, the District Attorney, and the officers, for the many courtesies you have shown us, and the assistance you have rendered us in doing our duty.

Respectfully submitted,

Geo. Shepard Foreman.

As we have but little space we will not report of sub committees in full but will say that they show the county offices examined to be in excellent condition.

Among the important matters which received the attention of the court was the question of the violating the Sunday closing law, several cases were brought up on information and fines imposed, it appears that public sentiment is reaching the point where soon the practice of doing business on Sunday will be discontinued. Another good move was the indictment and fining of a large number of the denizens of the "Park region," which some predict will cause their removal to a less public part of the town.

Cook's Items.

A. Wallis is attending court at Deming this week.

Chas. Gassaway is a Deming visitor this week.

Riley George is attending court in Deming a few days.

John E. Grover and his brother Fred went to Deming Monday of last week, John is on the trial jury.

Mrs. Grover and Miss Ruth are tending the store this week while the boys are gone away.

Our justice of the peace is attending district court these days, he being caught on the jury while in Deming.

Joseph Hitchens has a car of ore ready for shipment. It is a lead ore from the contention group.

Mr. Yager and wife are at Cooks preaching for a week. They travel through the country by wagon, and we hope they are doing much good.

Cook had 5 car loads of ore ready for shipment but, owing to the rain the teamsters had to leave their wagons down on the road and return home until the roads dry out enough to travel.

More rain has fallen in the last 4 days here than was ever known to fall in June, roads are washed out and are very soft. This rain is of great benefit at this time of the year.

Mrs. Frank Chaisson, Patterson, La., writes June 8th, 1901: "I had malaria fever in a very bad form, was under treatment of doctors, but as soon as I stopped taking their medicine the fever would return, I used a sample bottle of Herbine, found it helped me. Then I bought two bottles, which completely cured me. I feel grateful to you for furnishing such a splendid medicine, and can honestly recommend it to those suffering from malaria, as it will surely cure them." Herbine 50c bottle at J. P. Byron & Son.
