VOL. III

Entered March 18, 1903, at Deming, N. M., as second class matter, under act of congress, of March 3, 1879.

The Beautiful Snow.

Oh, the snow, the beautiful snow;
Button your coat, and let 'er go;
No use to scold—it does no good—
Just fifteen dollars a cord for wood.
But—
You can say this much for the beautiful snow,
It takes us back to the long ago,
To the lightning bays and the gliding sleigh,
Full of good old timothy hay,
When your shoulder was covered with beautiful curls
That flowed from the heads of red-cheeked girls,
And for this alone we bless the day
That recalls the ride on the timothy hay.—Douglas Dispatch.

Charity.

A young lady in town, in the last stage of consumption is in need of food for herself and mother. Another lady who is sick at present and has a sick husband, needs clothes and food to tide them over for a short time.
Any contributions left with Dr. P. M. Steed or Cooke Chapman will be delivered.

Cooks Items.

Teams are here from the Mimbres to haul ore to the Florida station. Eight earloads will be shipped from Cooks this month.

Between the 9th and 11th, Cooks was in the grasp of winter. Snow fell to the depth of six inches.

The Cleveland mine has a forty horse power boiler at the R. R. station. It will furnish power for the pump to keep the mine free from water while further development work is being done.

Mr. Geo. L. Grover has just finished a new engine house and blacksmith shop on the Excelsior.

Postponement of Arizona Territorial Fair at Phoenix.

The Arizona Territorial Fair which was to have been held at Phoenix Dec. 4th to 9th inclusive has been postponed until December 26th, presumably due to washouts on the various railroad lines entering Phoenix at the present time.

The Southern Pacific announces a rate of $10.40 for the round trip, tickets being on sale daily from December 23rd to 28th inclusive, with return limit good until Jan. 2nd, 1906.

This is an exceptionally low rate and will undoubtedly induce a large attendance to the Fair as well as tourists and others who may wish to visit Arizona's capital city.

Stock Report.

Special to the Deming Graphic.
Kansas City, Dec. 13, 1905.

Cattle receipts last week were larger than expected, nearly 60,000 head, and the market on range cattle held about steady, stockers and feeders closing the week 10 higher. Some high class yearlings from the panhandle sold at $3.90 to $4.15, and choice Colorado yearlings sold at $4.00. A feature of the market was the strength maintained by country grades in the face of lower prices for fed steers. However, packers were heavy buyers of fat steers all week, and were willing to take more, as shown by the strong close of the week on fed steers account of smaller receipts Thursday and Friday. Killing steers from the range sold at $3.25 to $3.75, while country grades sold around $3.50, except for the choice yearlings mentioned above. Cows sold at $2.50 to $2.90, with some choice Colorado cows at $3.10, heifers at $3.40, canners at $2.00 to $2.35. Cattle supply today is again liberal at 15,000 head, market barely steady on fed grades, while stockers and feeders are strong and active. Some of the heavy feeders have stayed out thus far this fall, small operators taking the bulk of the stuff, but the big men begin to think they have made a mistake, and many of them are trying to complete arrangements for putting something on feed for the spring and summer market. This has made a strong stocker and feeder market for the last two or three weeks, and indicates that the general feeling in the country regarding future cattle markets is optimistic.

Rushing Work on Arizona & California.

Grant Brothers, who are constructing the Arizona & California railroad, which will be a portion of the new transcontinental line of the Santa Fe that is to pass through Phoenix, expect to have the road completed to the Colorado river by May 1.

The most difficult part of the job is constructing the tunnel through Granite Pass. The river reached, it will of course have to be crossed, and there will still be 100 miles of work to be done to connect with the main line in California. Grant Brothers are now using 300 men and are looking for more.

After passing through Granite Pass the work will be comparatively light. The nearest camp to the Colorado river now is fifty miles from that stream.

Grip Quickly Knocked Out.

"Some weeks ago during the severe winter weather both my wife and myself contracted severe colds which speedily developed into the worst kind of la grippe with all its miserable symptoms," says Mr. J. S. Egleston of Maple landing, Iowa. "Knees and joints aching, muscles sore, head stopped up, eyes and nose running, with alternate spells of chills and fever. We began using Chamberlain's Cough Remedy, aiding the same with a dose of Chamberlain's Stomach and Liver Tablets, and by its liberal use soon completely knocked out the grip." These Tablets promote a healthy action of the bowels, liver and kidneys which is always beneficial when the system is congested by a cold or attack of the grip. For sale by all druggists.

"Winter's Broke."

Yes, we had a short winter experience in Deming. Not freezing cold, but disagreeably so, with more snow than has fallen here in a dozen years. But after four days the clouds rolled by, and while we write, the sun is shining as brightly as ever, the snow has nearly disappeared, the ground is in fine condition for early grass on the range, and we are looking hopefully forward to another prosperous year in the Southwest.

The weather reports from all directions show that from Monday to Wednesday we had just about the best weather conditions in the United States.

Do You Want Strength?

If you want to increase your strength you must add to and not take from the physical. In other words, the food that you eat must be digested, assimilated and appropriated by the nerves, blood and tissues before being expelled from the intestines. Kodol Dyspepsia Cure adds to the physical. It gives strength to and builds up strength in the human system. It is pleasant to the taste and palatable, and the only combination of digestants that will digest the food and enable the system to appropriate all of its health- and strength-giving qualities. Sold by the Palace Drug Store.

Good for the Boy.

Logan Russell called at the Graphic office and informed us that he owns fifteen acres of land adjoining his father's dairy ranch, and will begin farming operations in the spring. He will make his debut as a granger by sowing alfalfa and raising onions. He isn't worrying about water, for he already has a well five feet in diameter, a Weber gasoline engine and pump with a capacity of 60,000 gallons a day. Logan is on the right track and is bound to win.

Baker's Photographs.

The center of attraction varies in Deming. Sometimes it is a circus tent, again it is the opera house, but just now it is Baker's photograph rooms on Silver avenue. It matters little where he hangs out his shingle, he always takes the town. And the reason therefor will at once be apparent by an examination of his work, which is equal to the best in any part of the country.

Job Work.

Letter Heads, Bill Heads, Envelopes, Business Cards, Visiting Cards, Marriage Certificates, Checks, Receipts, Dodgers, and Handbills printed in up to date style and on short notice at the Graphic office.

Society Notes.

Mrs. E. P. Dozier entertains at flinch this p. m.

Mrs. Raithel, of the Bank Hotel, gave a needle party last Saturday. There were present, Mrs. Field, Mrs. Cloasin, Mrs. L. M. Swope, Mrs. Chapman, Mrs. Kirtland and Mrs. Nordhaus. Choice refreshments were provided by the hostess and enjoyed by her guests.

On Tuesday and Wednesday afternoon, Mrs. U. F. Duff entertained her lady friends. Flinch was the order of business, after which her guests "passed from labor to refreshments," of which there was an ample store of the tempting sort. In spite of the inclement weather, there were a goodly number present on each occasion, and while dark clouds o'er-spread the sky, all was sunshine in the home of Mrs. Duff. Seventy invitations were issued, and about fifty were present, many being unable to respond in person on account of the storm that prevailed here for four days of this week. Up to date Mrs. Duff's flinch entertainments constitute the event of the season.

Good Paying Ranch For Sale.

Forty acres choice valley land, about ten acres in cultivation, nearly 400 bearing fruit trees, two acres in alfalfa, two room adobe house, another partly completed, 30 acres below the ditch, part of which is covered with forest timber, good water right, never failing ditch fed by springs. Small interest in another ditch. Good well of fine water. Ample adjacent stock range. Location in the Mimbres valley two miles above Oldtown, nine miles from railroad station and five miles from Faywood Hot Springs.

Price $1,000. Terms $500 down, balance to suit purchaser.

This offer only holds good for a short time. For further information, enquire at this office.

Colorado, Columbus and Mexican Railroad Company.

Notice is hereby given that a special meeting of the stockholders of the Colorado, Columbus and Mexican Railroad Company will be held at the office of said corporation, in the Village of Deming, New Mexico, on the 23rd day of December, 1905, at 2 o'clock p. m., for the purpose of considering matters of importance to come before the meeting.

Said meeting has been called by order of the President of said corporation.

B. Y. MCKEYES, Secretary.
Deming, N. M., Dec. 4, 1905.
[12-8-05-21]

Fuel Famine.

Deming had a combination of snow storm and fuel famine at the same time. On account of the condition of the roads, no wood could be brought from the mountains, and on account of the scarcity of coal cars, our dealers could get no coal from the mines, and for a day or two the family that had a couple of hundred pounds of coal or a basket of mesquite roots, was in luck. Two carloads of coal finally arrived which partly relieved the situation. But the cry is still for more.

Riding on a passenger train so close to an inland sea that the wild waves dashed over the car steps, has a kind of "Down went McGinniss" suggestion that as a passenger we would not enjoy. That is the last story, however, east bound passengers tell of their journey by the Salton fill.

While drilling for artesian water in Mora county, Roy Lackey struck an oil vein at a depth of 200 feet. The flow from the oil vein is said to be great and the discovery is said to be one of the most important ones ever made in New Mexico.—Independent.

It is stated that in November the earnings of the Atchison, Topeka & Santa Fe reached a new record. When the statement appears it will show larger results than any heretofore issued for any month in the history of the road.

We have a full fledged gun and general repair shop in town, and the proprietor, Mr. L. J. Small is doing first class work.

A Woman Hanged.

Mrs. May Mabel Rogers was hanged at the Vermont state prison last Friday for the murder of her husband. She playfully tied her husband's hands on the banks of a stream where they were spending a "pleasant hour." Once tied, she chloroformed him, and with the assistance of her paramour threw him into the river. She is the first woman that ever paid the death penalty in the state of Vermont and every effort was made to save her. A large number of prominent men and women exerted every effort in her behalf to prevent what they considered a disgrace to the state. The Governor refused to stay the sentence, however, as he felt that crime should be punished regardless of sex.

Additional Machinery.

Knowles & Roland have this week received a 5,000 lb. lathe from the American Tool Works of Cincinnati, and will soon have it in operation. This has become a necessity in order to meet the requirements of their growing business.

In addition to the new lathes, they have also added to their machinery a pumping jack and hoist for well work that is ahead of anything of the kind in this part of the territory. The firm is now well equipped for both repairing and manufacturing, and a year of business activity is before the proprietors of the new shop.

Unusual Weather.

"You old settlers say that every change in the weather is unusual." Yes, and that is what people in the East are saying "right now" of the present winter weather.

We received a letter a day or two since from Mr. Chas. Koontz, a Muncie, Indiana, banker, who spent last winter and summer in Deming. He writes: "Our weather is running a close race with our experience with New Mexico weather last fall, which is unusual for Indiana." The weather is "unusual" all over the country and ours is the best there is.

Torture of a Preacher.

The story of the torture of Rev. O. D. Moore, pastor of the Baptist church of Harpersville, N. Y., will interest you. He says: "I suffered agonies, because of a persistent cough, resulting from the grip. I had to sleep sitting up in bed. I tried many remedies, but without relief, until I took Dr. King's New Discovery for consumption, coughs and colds, which entirely cured my cough, and saved me from consumption." ## Honesty is the Best Policy.

That President Roosevelt is popular, and stands high in the estimation of even his political opponents, is an indisputable fact. And yet there are very few people in his own party or in the United States who have wholly approved of the President Roosevelt's acts.

It is well known that he offended the South by dining with Booker Washington and by his appointment of colored men to government positions in the Southern states. He offended the anti-imperialists by his policy in the Philippines. He makes the railroad magnates howl by his determined effort to secure, by congressional action, rate regulation. The trusts are offended because of his efforts to have, to a certain extent, their interests controlled by the national government. The coal combine resented his interference in the anthracite coal strike; the labor unions gnashed their teeth because of his reinstatement of the superintendent of the government printing office. Several leaders of his party are estranged because he favors tariff revision, and other measures.

We question if a man can be found who will say he approves of everything Mr. Roosevelt has said and done as the chief of our executive department. Yet in spite of this general disapproval of his particular acts, he undoubtedly comes nearer being universally popular than any president this country ever had. At the North he is hailed wherever he goes with acclamation, from "swinging round the circle" in the great Northwest, to a Mothers' Congress in the national capital; and he presents the hopeful case of the first Republican President who could be received and hailed with enthusiasm by the people of the Southern States since the "late unpleasantness."

And why is this? Because he commends himself to the people of the whole community for his frank, straightforward, courageous honesty. He may make mistakes, as we believe he has in his position on the New Mexico and Arizona statehood question, but we believe, and the whole people believe, that he means to say and do the right thing as he sees it. It makes one feel better toward the human race to find this high regard and sincere approval for downright honesty and courage so general. Courage and sincerity, honesty in the discharge of his high duties,—like Caesar's wife, above suspicion—cover a multitude of mistakes from any individual standpoint.

A Good Report.

The annual report of Secretary of the Interior Hitchcock, just submitted, contains a big boost for New Mexico. It is of course impossible to reproduce all the good things that Mr. Hitchcock says, but the following extracts will be of interest:

The annual report of the governor, Miguel A. Otero, presents in a comprehensive manner the industries and resources of the territory, and shows that the past year has been one of exceeding prosperity. Disastrous floods occurred last fall, which were repeated in the spring of 1905. The rains, however, which at the latter period wrought so much flood damage, have resulted in the greatest harvest that the tillers of the soil in the territory have ever grown. It brought out the grass on the ranges, so that the sheep raisers have not only recouped their losses but have made large percentages of profit on investment, etc. Railroad building has been resumed in San Juan county, and over 200 miles of railroad across the central portion of the territory is nearing completion; preliminary work has been commenced on an east and west line from Folsom, in Union county, to Elizabethtown, in Colfax county, and the Arizona & Colorado Railroad Co. has completed the survey for a north and south line through the western portion of the territory, which has thus far been without railroad communication. Activity in farming and other industries is general.

Agriculture is progressing unfavorable conditions, and with profitable results. The number of farms in 1905 was 15,000 with an acreage of 6,200,000 and valued at $30,000,000; improvements valued at $3,250,000; farm implements, $150,000; vegetables $350,000; fruit $500,000 and other products $500,000. Five hundred thousand pounds of butter were made during the year and the number of eggs laid aggregated 1,000,000 dozen. Stock raising is a flourishing industry. There are in the territory 1,050,000 head of cattle, 5,875,000 head of sheep, 150,000 head of goats, and 100,000 head of horses. The wool crop approximated 20,000,000 pounds, and there were shipped out of the territory 200,000 cattle, 25,000 horses, 40,000 hides, and 2,000,000 sheep.

The assessed valuation of cattle is a little less than $6,000,000, and the railroads are assessed at $9,000,000, although the commercial value of the latter, according to the United States census bureau, exceeds $90,000,000. Thus on all classes of property the assessed valuation is but a small fraction of the true value, and even at a tax rate ranging from 3 to 6 cents on the dollar, the actual taxation is remarkably low, and much lower than that of the surrounding commonwealths.

That capital is seeking investments in New Mexico upon a large scale is indicated by the report of the territorial secretary which shows that during the past fiscal year there were 190 corporation filings, with a capitalization of over $111,256,200.

Arbitration Insufficient.

We talk of peace, and felicitate ourselves with the belief that our guns and war ships will soon be thrown in the junk pile; that henceforth all differences between nations are to be settled by arbitration. But Lieutenant General Chaffee, in a speech at a public reception in his honor at Los Angeles last week, says that the United States will again go to war. The following is a part of his address:

"Gentlemen, war will come again. There are plenty of men in this room who will see our country at war again. Not on our own soil, perhaps; you must remember that we have now become one of the nations of the earth. We have great interests to defend.

"When that war comes we must be intelligently prepared for it.

"Modern war is not what war used to be. No one is now fitted to command troops who is not a scientific and well trained man. Modern war must be scientifically treated to save human life.

"The Japanese are a military people, but we are not. We do not get on with military preparations as they do, but we should be ready for conflicts."

To a Higher Court.

Senator Mitchell, of Oregon, died at his home last Sunday of a complication of diseases, combined with the depressing effect of disclosures of land frauds with which he had been connected, and for which he was already convicted. His decline since the day he was pronounced guilty has been rapid.

An Emergency Medicine.

For sprains, bruises, burns, scalds and similar injuries, there is nothing so good as Chamberlain's Pain Balm. It soothes the wound and not only gives instant relief from pain, but causes the parts to heal in about one-third the time required by the usual treatment. Sold by all druggists.

THE GRAPHIC

DEMING, . . . NEW MEXICO.

"Business is war," says a magazine writer, and Gen Sherman told us what war is.

"Can a husband be cruel to his wife by too much kindness?" Well, few husbands are.

The principal thing noticeable about women's attire this fall is its multifariousness.

A Chicago pugilist is writing popular songs. Prize fighting is a fearfully demoralizing pursuit.

We knew it would come some day. Somebody wants photography taught in the public schools.

Sergius Witte, after looking over New York City, declared it a "clearing house of undigested nationalities."

Miss Susan P. Fowler of Vineland, N. J., has worn trousers for fifty years, and expects to die with them on.

As Rockefeller says, money is not the only thing in the world. There are mumps, measles and banana skins.

People say they might as well be hung for a sheep as a lamb, but that only shows lack of discrimination in appetite.

Kissing may be dangerous, as that doctor says, but you may have noticed that more people haven't died from it than have.

Courts uphold a Buffalo man who put a rattrap in his trousers pocket and caught his wife. Dissenting opinion filed by wife.

Diamonds have gone up again, but this is a hardship that isn't likely to bother the man whose last year's coal bill is still unpaid.

WHERE HOME IS

From "Down Country Lanes," by Byron Williams

I am weary of lock-outs and coal smoke,
Of railways and cobbles and noise;
I long to go back to the country
Where once I was "one of the boys";
To eat mush-and-milk with the natives
And swap stories down at the store;
To sleep on the fat feather bed-tick
That's built away up from the floor!

I am weary of dodging and crowding,
Of dandies and lackeys and such;
I long to go back to the country
Where "show" is not overly much.
To eat mother's doughnuts and flapjacks
And holler across our back lawn
At neighbors I knew when a youngster—
Those neighbors of thrift and of brawn.

I am weary of toiling and hoping,
Of toiling and hoping again;
I long to go back to the country
And slip to bed promptly at 10;
To sit in the old-fashioned parlor
And rest with all trouble discharged.

Sent Because of His Clothes.

In the early days, when the people sent their wisest men to make the public laws, a man of peculiar traits, but of sterling worth, was sent to the Massachusetts legislature from the town of Douglas. He wore an old-fashioned farmer's frock, which was sadly out of place in the legislative hall, where some of the fastidious statesmen from Boston and other cities vied with each other in the correctness of their attire.

Soon after the arrival of the Douglas man, one of the Boston representatives, seeking an opportunity to have fun at his expense, called out to him: "Have they no smarter men than you to send to the legislature from your district?"

The man from Douglas smiled innocently as he replied: "There's a heap o' smarter men up my way, but the devil of it is they hain't got no clothes good enough to wear down here."

She Felt Faint.

The young chaps in swiftness were talking unguardedly in an elevated car about their experiences with some girls. Cholly said: "Did you ever take a girl out to lunch when she felt a little faint?" "Er—no," replied Taffy. "Well, never do. I took Miss Buddy Hart into Sherry's. At first she declined, but then said she believed she did feel a little faint." "Did she eat anything?" "Did she eat anything?" She grabbed the menu, glanced over it, said she didn't feel very hungry, and ordered—"Well, what did she order?" "Oysters, bouillon, lobster cutlet, sweetbreads and peas, chicken, Maryland style; shrimp salad, biscuit glace, macarons, coffee and a creme de menthe. It cost me $10." "Well, you ought to be glad!" "Glad! What for?" "Why, glad she wasn't hungry."—New York Press.

New Ideas on Odd Fellows.

Among a lot of applicants for naturalization who appeared before Judge Chamberlain in the superior court at Nashua, Mass., a while ago was a good-looking son of Nova Scotia. He had been in this country ten or fifteen years, and appeared to be an unusually good subject for naturalization until the judge inquired if he belonged to any anarchistic or nihilistic orders. "Yes, your honor," was the astonishing reply. "What are they?" asked the judge. "The Odd Fellows." He got his papers.

Just rest in the old patch-work cushions,
And gaze at the pictures enlarged.

There's father and mother and William,
And poor little Ben who is dead—
And I—a fat little shaver.
With hair plastered close to my head;
And sister and Susan and uncle—
All hung in their black oval frames,
Suspended from nails in the plaster—
And under the pictures the names!

Yes, I'm weary of hoping and striving,
Of slaving all day in the din;
I long to go back to the country
And think it all over again;
To get a new grip on the throttle,
To get steam for the mountainous land,
To gain inspiration and courage
That comes from the firm, horny hand!

So at nightfall it's off to the sleeper,
That waits in the heart of the noise,
To speed to the land of my birthplace,
Where once I was "one of the boys."

Rather Apt Comparison.

The usual crowd gathered on the lake front the other day to watch the men engaged in sinking piles and preparing for the fill that is to be made. One after another the tall shafts of wood were swung into position and after some careful manipulation lowered into the ground point downward.

Among the interested group were several Irishmen, who had watched the proceedings for probably a half hour. They had indulged in various side remarks on the manner in which the work was progressing and seemed skeptical as to the skill of the men performing the undertaking.

Just then the foreman of the gang came close to the Irishman and stood directing the movements of the laborers. He immediately was the butt of some good-natured jests, to which for some time he gave reply for reply.

"Why, that ain't no work at all," called one Irishman. "I've done more hard work in one hour than you have ever done in your life."

"I guess that's right, but in this I use head work," replied the foreman, tartly.

"Humph, that's nothing," grunted the Irishman; "so does a woodpecker."—Chicago Chronicle.

Something to Be Glad For.

A popular comedian of heroic stature, one who has contributed much to the amusement of New York, has a wife who at one time was of doll-like proportions. Of late the lady has increased so much in weight that she has left the stage to her more slender sisters in the business, though she still hankers after the atmosphere of the footlights. Many an evening finds her in the comedian's dressing room, and not infrequently she is given to fault finding over some fancied shortcoming of her spouse.

On a recent evening she ensconced herself in her husband's dressing room while he was on the stage. When he put in an appearance she made known her cause of grievance in no measured terms. The conversation proved of interest to the occupants of adjoining rooms. In answer to some accusation, he answered: "Well, what of it? What were you when I married you?"

Every ear was alert for what was to follow.

"Well, what was I when you married me?" screamed the lady.

"Only ninety pounds and look at you now," and his big laugh filled the place.

Walk With Dickens

Blunderstone, the Home of David Copperfield, Typical English Village

(Special Correspondence.)

"I was born in Blunderstone, in Suffolk, or 'thereby,' as they say in Scotland," says David Copperfield in the first chapter of his autobiography. Being in the neighborhood of the thinly disguised village of Blunderstone recently, I made a pilgrimage to the delightful and picturesque spot Dickens selected for the early scenes of the best of all his books. One comes upon the correct name of the place for the first time on a signpost at the crossroads between Lowestoft and Yarmouth, a similar signpost to that which attracted Dickens himself when, in 1848, he stayed for a time at Yarmouth, as mentioned in his letters.

Typical English Village.

The lapse of half a century and more leaves the village practically as

The Church.

Dickens found it, and as one approaches it one is struck by its ideal situation, hemmed in, as it were, by the chief high roads of the surrounding country, everything fresh and glowing in the summer picturesqueness, and the whole place nestling in peaceful seclusion. One can well imagine Dickens falling in love with it as he did, by rambling through the green lanes to such a charming village so perfectly English in all its characteristics.

Little David, as everybody who has read his personal history knows, was born in the Rookery, and there can be little doubt that the Rectory of to-day was the house which Mr. Copperfield "bought" and named the Rookery, because "he liked to think there were rooks about it." There are still elms in the garden, but the strong wind which made them bend "to one another, like giants who were whispering secrets," and causing the "weather-beaten ragged old rooks' nests burdening their higher branches" to swing "like wrecks upon a stormy sea," had given place when I visited it, to a light summer breeze which quietly fanned their leaves. There is another house—Blunderstone hall—which is made claim to being the rookery on account of the fact that Dickens' description of the interior of David's birthplace coincides more fully with it than it does with the Rectory. And, further, when Dickens was visiting the spot and called at the hall for the purpose of becoming acquainted with its interior, he made himself known to the old house-keeper who was in charge of the place at that time, and had her permission to enter.

David's Birthplace.

It is a fact that Peggotty's kitchen and the long passage leading from it to the front door, the dark storeroom "that is a place to be run past at night," and other features described in the book, were to be found at the Hall and not at the Rectory. However, that is the license of the novelist, and was often Dickens' way. On the other hand, there are other and weightier reasons for believing that the Rectory was the house Dickens had in view when making the "Rookery" the birthplace of David. As a matter of fact, the Hall can have no claim whatever from a geographical point of view. In the first place, the gravestones in the churchyard cannot be seen from any window in the Hall, whereas they can from the Rectory. The same applies to the sundial over the porch, which David saw from his mother's room. It is true, there are, or were, elms in each of the gardens, but no one remembers a pigeon house on a pole "with no pigeons in it" in the garden of the Hall, while such a piece of architecture is clearly recalled at the Rectory. And, again, it will be remembered that David met Mr. Murdstone and Mr. Quinion, after his mother's death, while he was "turning the corner of a lane near" his house, and after strolling with them he returned home. "Looking back," he says, "as I turned into the front garden, I saw Mr. Murdstone leaning against the wicket of the churchyard and Mr. Quinion talking with him."

This would not be possible from the Hall, but if any one will take up a similar position at the wicket gate, the Rectory will be seen, and one will recognize how particular Dickens was as to his minute geographical details. Another point in favor of the Rectory being the "Rookery" will be found in the badge of the front garden, which divided Mr. Murdstone on his horse in the roadway from David's mother in the garden, when they walked up and down conversing. Then, again, take that delightful little incident of Peggotty's, when David was packed off in Mr. Barkis' cart on his way to school. David and the carrier had gone some little distance when Peggotty burst from a hedge and climbed into the cart and presented David with "bags of cakes" and a purse containing three bright shillings which she "had evidently polished up with whitening." Dickens had studied the geography of the village so well as to make this little incident possible. The cart would have to travel the road on two sides of the field adjoining the Rectory, and Peggotty would have just had time to reach the second corner by taking a diagonal run across the field, which no doubt she did. This would not be possible in regard to the Hall.

Dickens' Faithful Geography.

Apart from the "Rookery," the chief interest in Blunderstone for Dickensians is the church. It has a round tower (not a spire, as mentioned in the book) in common with many churches in the district, and dates back to the Norman period. Its antiquarian interest is very great, but we are concerned with it just now from a Dickensian point of view. David's chronicled recollections of it hold good to-day. "There is nothing half so green that I know anywhere, as the grass of that churchyard," he says; "nothing half so shady as its trees; nothing half so quiet as its tombstones. The sheep are feeding there, when I kneel up, early in the morning in my little bed . . . and I see the red light shining on the sundial." The high-backed pews to which he refers in the same chapter have been removed, but the situation depicted in his early impressions, when he went to church with Peggotty, is easily recalled. The window near the high-backed pew, "out of which our house can be seen and is seen many times during the morning's service, by Peggotty, who likes to make herself as sure as she can that it's not being robbed, or is not in flames," is the same as when the good soul satisfied himself on those points. On any bright sunny day one can see the same picture as David saw, minus, perhaps, the sheep. "I look at the sunlight coming in at the open door through the porch, and there I see a stray sheep—I don't mean a snout, but mutton—half making up his mind to come into the church."

Although "it is only a story," as we tell the children who have been listening to a fairy tale, it all seems precisely true, as we stand there in the midst of it all. And if we cannot find "the grave beneath the tree . . . which Peggotty's own faithful care had ever since kept neat . . . which lay a little way off the church yard path, in a quiet corner," we seem to feel it is there all the same. We leave the church and turn toward the village. On the way we pass the pound and the spot under the trees where the pond was, and visit the old village inn, "our village ale house," in the parlor of which David was confident "that Commodore Truncheon held that club with Mr. Pickle." From here started Mr. Barkis, the carrier, who had his prototype in a Mr. Barker, the real carrier of Blunderstone at the time; and even to-day there is a good substitute for Peggotty's husband who takes the identical road to Yarmouth that Barkis did.

Save from Sea's Perils

United States Active in Safeguarding Welfare of the World's Mariners

(Special Correspondence.)

It is impossible to say when in the age of man guiding lights to prevent mariners from shipwreck first came into use. It is claimed that Virgil had knowledge of lighthouses, and that, according to him, one was placed on a tower of the temple of Apollo. Homer refers to lighthouses, and the Colossus of Rhodes, erected 300 B. C., undoubtedly bore in his up-lifted hand a signal light. But the famous Pharos of Alexandria, built about 285 B. C., is the first light of undoubted record. The lighthouse at Corunna, Spain, is the oldest existing one in the world. It was built in the reign of Trajan.

The lighthouse system of this country began with its commerce. The first lighthouse on this continent was built at the entrance to Boston harbor, on Little Brewster island, in 1715.

Of the 6,000 lighthouses in the world, 1,423 lighthouses and 46 lightships are in the United States. These are in charge of 1,525 lighthouse keepers, assisted by 2,879 laborers and crews.

The shape, size, height and material employed in the construction of lighthouses depend largely upon the location, character of the soil and the amount of money appropriated for their erection. Prior to 1840 there were only two forms of lighthouses—conical towers of rubble stone masonry and wooden frame towers, erected upon the roofs of the keepers' dwellings. The lighthouses of today are stately, sentinel-like structures and varied in form—models of architectural beauty, affording ideal healthful abodes "far from the madding crowd" to those in charge of them.

Varied Systems Used.

The systems and modes of construction used in building the lighthouses on our coasts and lakes are the iron pile system, of which old Minot's Ledge lighthouse was an example, and the Mitchell screw-pile system, used principally in southern waters, built on coral reefs, of which Thimble Shoal lighthouse is a fair specimen. The use of iron plates for building lighthouses on dry foundations met with little favor in this country at first; but in later years, when the excellence of iron as a material for building purposes became known, it came into larger use. Iron skeleton towers are used on land where the soil affords an inadequate support for a masonry foundation, and when great cheapness is required. An interesting specimen of these iron skeleton structures is the lighthouse on Paris island, South Carolina. It is the most economical structure of its kind. The light itself is simply a locomotive headlight in the form of a powerful parabolic reflector. The structure rests on six circular iron disks, anchored to a concrete foundation. The light is housed by day and hoisted at night to its place by machinery.

St. Augustine lighthouse, Florida, is a conical brick tower, 150 feet high, and visible to the mariner for a long distance. As it might be mistaken by day for any of the other high brick towers, the shaft is colored with black and white spiral bands, giving it the appearance of a barber's pole. It has a fixed white light, varied by a white flash every three minutes.

Penfield Reef lighthouse stands on a reef about two miles from land in Long Island sound, off Bridgeport harlight produced may be steady, revolving or intermittent, the differences being produced by machinery, lenses, reflectors, etc., and enabling the mariner to distinguish individual lights and thus identify the part of the coast he is near.

Lights Seen Afar.

The distance from which the principal lights can be seen is only limited by the horizon. They might be seen sixty, eighty or even 100 miles.

Thimble Lighthouse, Hampton Roads, Virginia.

If sufficient elevation could be gained from which to view them.

Instead of lighthouses, ships are sometimes used. These are employed where a lighthouse is necessary, but where it has not been erected because of the great difficulty or expense of such a structure. The lightship should have the permanency of a lighthouse, and to insure it is a matter of great difficulty.

There are forty-six lightships of various sizes on duty in the service, of which the best known is the one at Sandy Hook.

Several lightships are provided with fog signals, which are in effect locomotive steam whistles of great size and power.

Each lightship shows either one or two lights, each light being composed of eight reflectors. A fairly typical example of this class is the lightship at Pollock Rip, on Nantucket sound, Mass. This vessel is 120 feet long, and is of 410 tons burden. She is schooner-rigged, with a lighting apparatus upon each mast supplied with eight burners and reflectors. It has been found so difficult to keep this vessel from dragging her anchors that she is now fitted with as heavy moorings as she would have if she were a battleship. In spite of her brilliant lights and her powerful fog signals, she has been repeatedly run in to by passing vessels and damaged, as, for that matter, have also most of the other lightships in the service.

Famous Fastnet Lighthouse.

The most famous lighthouse of the world is that of Fastnet. It stands on a rugged and solitary rock, nine miles south of Crookhaven, at the extreme southwest corner of Ireland. It gives the first and last greeting to the transatlantic steamers as they pass to and from the Old World to the New. The rock is eighty feet in height, and the lighthouse towers another seventy feet above, yet in winter gales the Atlantic billows literally bombard the massive structure, and have even smashed in a portion of the lantern at the summit of the erection, the seas frequently sweeping over the rock with tremendous force. Some two or three years ago the stormy weather then prevailing prevented all communication with the rock for many weeks, so that the store of food was consumed, with the exception of some flour. At last a schooner managed to approach sufficiently near to enable a small quantity of food to be dragged through the sea to the hungry men; and, fortunately, the next day the storm moderated, and the stores were once more replenished. Except in very calm weather the Fastnet is surrounded by a fringe of foam, and the only means of landing is by the aid of a "jib," fifty-eight feet in length.

Colt Prompted by the Mare.

Long ago, on the island of Nantucket, while one Nathaniel Worth was showing his mare and colt to his son, who was visiting him, the colt suddenly kicked him, whereupon he began to belabor the mare.

"Why, father," exclaimed his son, "the colt kicked you, not the mare."

"I know it," was the reply, "but didn't you see her give him the wink?"

MODEST HOME OF JOHN ADAMS

Building Still Stands, in Charge of Quincy Historical Society.

Close by the house in which President John Adams first saw the light of day is the modest lean-to cottage where he went to live with Abigail, his wife, after their marriage in 1764, and where John Quincy Adams was born. The house is still standing in South Quincy at the corner of Independence avenue and Franklin street. The latter street was the old Plymouth highway in colonial days, so that the house was passed by those traveling to and from Boston.

At present this house is in the care of the Quincy historical society and is open to visitors. It contains many interesting articles owned by the Adams family and used during the period when the house was occupied by John and Abigail.

This house has a more than passing interest from the fact that it was there Abigail wrote the famous letters to her husband while the latter was attending the continental congress in Philadelphia. Alone with her son, John Quincy Adams, she passed many lonely days and nights waiting for the return of the husband and father and the close of the war that was to mean so much to them.

As related in her letters, the house was besieged with weary soldiers every day on their way to Boston. As she wrote to her husband: "My house is in confusion; soldiers coming in for lodging, for breakfast, for supper, for drink. Sometimes refugees from Boston, tired and fatigued, seek an asylum for a day, a night, a week."

This old house, like all buildings erected in its day, is provided with ample fireplaces, but even those glowing hearths were not sufficient to keep the place warm during the terribly cold winter of 1775-1776, when Mr. Adams was away, and Abigail, writing to him, often had to stop in her correspondence because the ink had frozen and her fingers were numb with the cold.

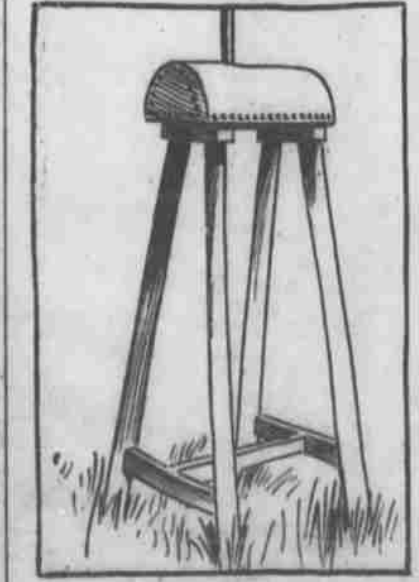

And yet, despite the difficulties under which she lived, it was in this house that Abigail Adams wrote at this time to her husband: "Let us separate from the king's party. Let us renounce them, and instead of supplication, as formerly, let us beseech the Almighty to blast their counsels and bring to naught all their devices."

Salutes and Corsets.

Among the odd official decisions published in Berlin is that of the Prussian railway administration on a point of etiquette advanced by a station master on the lower Rhine, who asked for a ruling as to whether the young women subordinates in his office should not recognize him first on the street, instead of waiting to be saluted, according to the prevailing custom. The government directed the station master to salute first.

The principal of the girls' high school at Seabrook inquired of the provincial government if she was authorized to forbid young women to wear corsets during gymnastic exercises. The government authorized their rigid prohibition.—New York Tribune.

Where the telephone wires are overland the speed of transmission is at the rate of about 16,000 miles a second; where the wires are through cables under the sea the speed is not more than 6,000 miles a second.

MAKES LIVING SHOOTING RATS

Hotels Among the Customers of a Man With an Air Rifle.

There is a rat catcher who visits Baltimore periodically to rid hotels, among other places, of the rodent pests. Among the hotels he has two regular customers and his advent is always the signal for the pleasures of the chase in a small way.

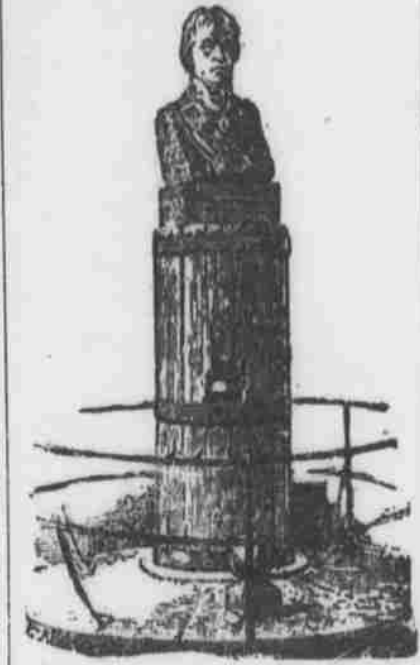

He has no method of charming rats, but goes after them just as any hunter in the big woods would stalk his game. He does not sit down in front of a rat hole and tense the rodents forth with the sweet strains on a tin flute. Instead he carries a small air rifle, and it does the work.

He makes straight for the basement, kitchen, baggage room and open plumbing, where rat holes will be found if they are anywhere. Having located his rat hole, which he seems to accomplish almost by instinct, he listens at the opening until his keen ear detects a scratching or a squeak.

He unerringly locates his quarry by this sound, inserts his rifle at just the right angle and fires. If he misses—but what's the use—he doesn't. Then with a long, hooked wire, he probes into the hole and draws his victim out.

Now and then he strikes a nest of young. In such cases it is usually an easy matter to hook nest and all and drag the pests from their palatial residence. His is a peculiar calling, but has its uses.—Baltimore News.

In the Grand Chamber of Windsor castle, the bust is mounted on a portion of the foremast of Nelson's flag ship the Victory, through which a cannon ball passed at the battle of Trafalgar.

Bath in Bubbles.

"To take a bath at Tiflis, in Russian Caucasus, is to court a never-to-be-forgotten experience," says one who knows. "The masseur who presides over the toilet of his patrons is a weird looking figure; his head is shaved, a rag is twisted round his waist, and his feet are dyed a beautiful red. You are seized by this individual, rubbed, pushed face downward on a marble slab, find his feet in your spine and his hands upon your shoulders. Then he grinds his feet up and down your back; they are round your neck, on your head—everywhere! Then he vaults lightly off and in a moment from a linen bag filled with soap, he has squeezed clouds of perfumed bubbles, and you are hidden in them from head to foot as completely as if you had fallen into a snowdrift. You are not absolutely bruised, but you are clean."

Rice at Weddings.

The Chinese have a curious legend as to how the custom of throwing rice at weddings originated. A famous sorcerer named Chao became jealous of the power of another sorcerer, a woman, and, conceiving a plan to destroy her, he persuaded her parents to bestow her upon his supposed son. The crafty Chao chose the most unlucky day for the wedding, the day when the "Golden Pheasant" was in the ascendant, so that when the bride entered the red chair the spirit bird would destroy her with his powerful beak. But Pech Blossom gave directions to have rice thrown out at the door, and she passed out unharmed while the spirit bird was devouring it.

But Found a Cure After Fifteen Years of Suffering.

A. H. Stotts, messenger at the State Capitol, Columbus, O., says:

"For fifteen years I had kidney troubles, and though I doctored faithfully, could not find a cure. I had heavy backaches, dizzy headaches and terrible urinary disorders. One day I collapsed, fell insensible on the sidewalk, and then wasted away in bed for ten weeks. After being given up, I began using Doan's Kidney Pills. In a couple of months I regained my old health, and now weigh 188 pounds. Twelve boxes did it, and I have been well two years."

Horseflesh Eaten in Germany.

There is in Greifswalder street, Berlin, a regularly installed horse slaughter house, which is under careful supervision. Estimating that an average-size horse will yield 230 pounds of edible flesh, there was derived from this source last year, says the United States consul at Berlin, 3,990,000 pounds of meat, which was sold for consumption in sixty-four shops which are specially licensed for that purpose. At Breslau, which has a population of about 500,000, against the 2,500,000 in Berlin and its suburbs, 3,800 horses were killed last year for human food, so that the proportion of horseflesh eaten per capita was much larger in Breslau than in Berlin. In southern Germany, and notably in Saxony, where the percentage of working people in manufacturing districts is exceptionally large, the consumption of horseflesh is still greater and is constantly increasing. The choicest cuts of horse meat sell in Berlin for from 35 to 40 pfennigs (4d. to 5d.) a pound. The liver is considered a delicate morsel and brings 10 cents a pound.

People on Other Planets.

That human beings exist and have worlds of their own up among the stars is the conviction of Prof. W. W. Campbell, director of the great Lick observatory in California, who was at the Auditorium hotel in Chicago recently, on his way home from Europe, where he observed the total eclipse of the sun August 30th. He thought the day might not be far distant when telescopic devices would enable the people of the earth to see what is going on in Mars.

PASSING OF PORRIDGE

Makes Way for the Better Food of a Better Day.

"Porridge is no longer used for breakfast in my home," writes a loyal Briton from Huntsville, Ont. This was an admission of no small significance to one "brought up" on the time-honored stand-by.

"One month ago," she continues, "I bought a package of Grape-Nuts food for my husband, who had been an invalid for over a year. He had passed through a severe attack of pneumonia and a grippé combined, and was left in a very bad condition when they passed away."

"I tried everything for his benefit, but nothing seemed to do him any good. Month followed month and he still remained as weak as ever. I was almost discouraged about him when I got the Grape-Nuts, but the result has compensated me for my anxiety."

"In the one month that he has eaten Grape-Nuts he has gained 10 pounds in weight, his strength is rapidly returning to him, and he feels like a new man. Now we all eat Grape-Nuts food, and are the better for it. Our little 5 year old boy, who used to suffer from pains in the stomach after eating the old-fashioned porridge, has no more trouble since he began to use Grape-Nuts, and I have no more doctor's bills to pay for him."

"We use Grape-Nuts with only sweet cream, and find it the most tasty dish in our bill of fare."

"Last Monday I ate 4 teaspoonfuls of Grape-Nuts and cream for breakfast, nothing else, then set to work and got my morning's work done by 9 o'clock and felt less tired, much stronger, than if I had made my breakfast on meat, potatoes, etc., as I used to. I wouldn't be without Grape-Nuts in the house for any money." Name given by Postum Co., Battle Creek, Mich. There's a reason.

Green Isle of Erin

Ramble Through the Cities and Fields of the Gem of the Northern Ocean

(Special Correspondence.)

Dublin is a sort of Washington city for Ireland, and when parliament is in session it gathers together there its "beauty and its chivalry," and it is said that gaiety reigns supreme. During our stay we turned our attention to the city itself and found it satisfactory. The river Liffey cuts the town in two, and the public buildings, which compare favorably with any in the kingdom, are on either side of the stream. The streets are broad and well paved and the mansions and rows, as the residences are called, are well built, and many of them magnificent. One of the most attractive things about the entire country over here is the moss-covered walls that shut out the public everywhere.

If any one likes looking through fine buildings, the royal exchange, Christ Church cathedral, the four courts, custom house, postoffice or national gallery, all of which are splendid buildings, will repay any interest taken or effort made—and one gets the "glad hand" in any of them, for the Irish people like Americans, and believe in demonstrating it while we are alive.

The Nelson pillar is 121 feet high. If you climb up you will be very glad if it afterward, for the view is very fine. The Wicklow hills, and the coast line, away below Bray's head, are easily discerned, and Dublin bay is wonderfully beautiful from there.

I looked in upon 30 Merriam row, where the duke of Wellington was born, and in the royal academy saw Patrick's bell and many other antiquities, drove through Phoenix park, and left Dublin with more regret than a year ago, but with a hope that I might make another "farewell visit."

For natural loveliness of scenery, mixed with stories of interest and unending charm, there is nothing in Ireland to surpass the tour to the lakes of Killarney, no matter which route one takes. At this season it is simply glorious. The hay is being stacked and small grains threshed out, and the golden fields and green water instead, but this device rarely avails, as milk is almost invariably given me, sometimes on the plea that their water is not very good.

Activity of Cork.

The county of Cork certainly lives up to one's expectations of it and seems to be rolling in plenty and improving in many ways. The whole county of Cork is under one government, the city of Cork being the center, and the lord mayor the head of the town council. It is the best lighted town in the kingdom and has a splendid street car service, from which we conclude that the two members of parliament from Cork represented their constituency tolerably well, as well as improved their own properties. Cork grows rapidly and is an up-to-date town. Queen's college, overlooking the sea, has an imposing situation. The building is after the old Tudor style and the residents of Cork are very proud of this fine old school. It is open to all without reference to their religion and embraces, besides the elementary branches of study, those of the classics, science, law, medicine and engineering, and has excellent apartments and halls for study.

We drove out to Blarney and while others of the party explored the castle and sought the far-famed stone, I walked about the village and sought an opportunity to get a look into a real typical Irish kitchen, which is the whole thing when one speaks of an Irish home.

Typical Irish Kitchen.

From the ceiling a cage hung and a bird twittered in a friendly tone, exchanging greetings with a hen that had brought her "brood of broilers" in out of the rain, and with them had huddled together in the middle of the place. There was an old picture on one side of the wall, as black as a Rembrandt and as homely as Henry VIII, which my hostess assured me was "her great-grandfather," who had once been "keeper of the pastures, alternating with fields of vegetables and flowers, with the hills covered with the heather in full bloom, presents a mosaic, and whether seen from car, coach top or carriage window, is like a moving picture, and for real beauty could not be exceeded anywhere. It is so replete with scenic charm that it cannot be described within the limits of an ordinary letter, but as some one has said, "It is a good thing to use your eyes" incessantly.

The Weather in Ireland.
The weather over here is very much like we have at home—at times—and we have seen the beauties of Ireland in a pouring rain, many times "chilled to the bone," hungry and cross, but we were nearly always jostled into a good humor, and our interest always exceeded any discomfort. The drive from Killarney to Glenariff is the finest in "his majesty's dominions," 'tis said, and 'tis true, for here nature has been lavish with its gifts and beauty confronts one everywhere. Upon the surface of the water the mountains are reflected, and upon the hills some ruin, with its ages of moss and ivy, recalls the tales of the O'Sullivans and O'Learys, and the whole scene is rich with associations, adventure and daring.

Not once have I been permitted to pay for a glass of milk during my pilgrimage. And this despite the fact, which would be detected by these shrewd folk, even did I not openly avow that I hail from the land where gold is supposed to be picked up in the streets. Finding it hurt their pride to offer payment, I ask for key of the castle" in the time of the MacCarthys. The story was interestingly told and all suited the place.

I shall not soon forget that old kitchen. The fireplace and old warped fender and bits of smoldering peat and the queer-looking little black pots, an old "dealtable," a wooden bench, a low stool or two and the bit of muslin curtain stretched across the one window, and the hen and her chickens chattering so sociably in the middle of the floor, made a homely picture. I inquired "where they slept" and was told that the beds were put upon the floor usually, but when it was "wet" they made "other arrangements," and in a tone without a shade of discontent.

The Explanation.

The photographer was delighted. "Seldom," he said, "have I had so good a sitter. The expression is exactly right, the command of the facial muscles perfect. You are, perhaps, an actor?"
"No."
"An automobilist?"
"Yes."
"Aha, that explains it. You have learned to submit to arrest and a large fine every time you go out, and still to return home looking as if you had enjoyed yourself."

Seeking Quiet.

"Did you take a rest this summer?"
"Yes," answered Mr. Cumroo.
"How did you arrange it?"
"Staid home and sent mother and the girls to the seashore."

From Alaska to Iceland.

At a meeting of the Geographical Society in Philadelphia this month the president, Henry G. Bryant, the well known explorer, made the announcement that two of the Bryant-Melville casks which were sent adrift several years ago in the Polar sea have been found.

The first was thrown overboard by the revenue cutter Bear on August 21, 1901, about eighty-five miles northwest of Wrangel Island, and recovered by Capt. A. G. Christianson on August 17, 1902, near the mouth of Kolyuching bay, on the coast of Siberia. In the course of one year less four days it had traveled 350 miles to the southeast and was probably influenced by local currents.

The other cask was placed on an ice floe northwest of Point Barrow, Alaska, in latitude 71.53 N. and longitude 164.50 W. by the steam whaler Alexander on September 13, 1899. It was recovered one mile east of Cape Banda Nupur, on the northern coast of Iceland, June 7, 1903.

Mr. Bryant said the position proved the existence of a current from Bering strait around the circumpolar basis to the Atlantic ocean.

Steel Shroud and Coffin.

During the inquest held at Philadelphia in the case of John Forkin and Joseph Garcia, laborers, who were killed at the Midvale steel works November 10th, it was testified that the two men had entered a pit and that 80,000 pounds of hot metal poured from a leak and completely absorbed them. Not a trace of the bodies was discovered.

The company has decided to take about 8,000 pounds of the steel from the place where the men were last seen and have it buried out of respect to the dead men.

"Tell me," said the flighty person, "do you believe that dreams go by contraries?" "Yes," replied the hard-headed one, "especially day dreams."

HOSPITALS CROWDED

MAJORITY OF PATIENTS WOMEN

Mrs. Pinkham's Advice Saves Many From this Sad and Costly Experience.

It is a sad but true fact that every year brings an increase in the number of operations performed upon women in our hospitals. More than three-fourths of the patients lying on those snow white beds are women and girls who are awaiting or recovering from operations made necessary by neglect. Every one of these patients had plenty of warning in that bearing down feeling, pain at the left or right of the womb, nervous exhaustion, pain in the small of the back, leucorrhoea, dizziness, flatulency, displacements of the womb or irregularities. All of these symptoms are indications of an unhealthy condition of the ovaries or womb, and if not heeded the trouble will make headway until the penalty has to be paid by a dangerous operation, and a lifetime of impaired usefulness at best, while in many cases the results are fatal.

The following letter should bring hope to suffering women. Miss Luella Adams, of the Colonnade Hotel, Seattle, Wash., writes:

Dear Mrs. Pinkham:—
"About two years ago I was a great sufferer from a severe female trouble, pains and headaches. The doctor prescribed for me and finally told me that I had a tumor on the womb and must undergo an operation if I wanted to get well. I felt that this was my death warrant, but I spent hundreds of dollars for medical help, but the tumor kept growing. Fortunately I corresponded with an aunt in the New England States, and she advised me to take Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, as it was said to cure tumors. I did so and immediately began to improve in health, and I was entirely cured, the tumor disappearing entirely, without an operation. I wish every suffering woman would try this great preparation."

Just as surely as Miss Adams was cured of the troubles enumerated in her letter, just so surely will Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound cure every woman in the land who suffers from womb troubles, inflammation of the ovaries, kidney troubles, nervous excitability and nervous prostration.

Mrs. Pinkham invites all young women who are ill to write her for free advice. Address, Lynn, Mass.

SHOWING THE WORLD'S PROGRESS

New Era of Machinery in Japan.

The birth and rise of a new mechanical science in Japan which will soon transform old world machinery into antiquities if European and American engineers do not gird up their loins and get a scientific standard in machine designing is the new yellow peril, as divined in the work on centrifugal pumps of the brilliant mathematician and mechanician, Mr. A. Inokuty, professor of mechanical engineering in the University of Tokio. As an essay in the application of mathematics to a technical problem of the highest practical utility, taking account as it does in the thorough manner of all physical phenomena involved by the best data available, and working from the basis of the maximum possible efficiency being desirable, this volume of 300 quarto pages is pronounced one of the greatest achievements ever attained in skilled calculations and meritorious of acceptance in the Occident as a standard authority. The style is eminently simple, direct and free of ambiguity in handling the difficult substance. Those who will not move beyond the simplicities of last century, declares an English authority, must certainly succumb to the new yellow science of mechanical engineering.

Lifting Jack.

Simple, strong and compact mechanical tools, capable of instant use when needed, are more in demand than ever. Inventors realize this, which, in all probability, accounts for the large number of such devices patented. We show in the illustration below a powerful lifting jack, the invention of a Tennessee man, which comprises about all that could be desired in such a small appliance. It is designed for use upon wagons and the like, and is readily adapted because of the great power incident to the structural arrangement of the parts for extracting posts, stumps or doing work of similar character. In this jack the usual standard and base are provided. Upon the top of the standard is a small handle to be grasped in supporting the jack when it is being operated. The hoisting means consists of a movable head sliding vertically in the standard.

Below the head is a runner, also movable on the standard, a lifting bar connecting the head and the runner, both being operated by means of a bell-shaped lever. On the bar connecting the head and the runner is an extension, which engages with a ratchet mechanism in the runner. By pressing the lever downward the bar is forced out from the notch of the ratchet, to which it is caught, until it is far enough released to grasp the notch next above, the head being firmly secured by an attachment directly underneath the lever. This apparatus can also be used for stretching wires or accomplishing a similar function.

Danger of Fire in Mines.

A rather unexpected danger in coal mines, as also in other places, has appeared. In an English mine an ordinary 100-volt, sixteen-candle-power lamp proved to be capable of causing smoke to rise within three minutes when imbedded in coal dust, and of producing flame within twenty-five minutes when laid on the top of the coal dust. In other experiments, heat was generated so rapidly that when the lamp was partly covered by coal dust, the bulb exploded in four minutes at 450 degrees Fahrenheit, and at a certain point combustion was begun in the dust and continued after removal of the lamp. Careless laying down of a lamp might start a fire quite unnoticed.

Valuable New Sugar Plant.

Housekeepers need not fear that the sugar supply will run out. The new sugar plant from South America which has been named eupatorium rebandium is pronounced by Beroni, the German chemist, to be of great industrial value. It grows from eight to ten inches high, and is found to contain from twenty to thirty times as much saccharine matter as sugar cane—the best.

DOES AWAY WITH POST HOLES.

Contrivance of California Man Screws Into the Ground.

The old-time fence post has served its purpose for so long that it is about time it was improved. It has always seemed natural that in erecting a fence post a hole should first be dug in the ground and the end of the post inserted in the hole, the remaining space being filled up again. A California man thinks this method antique and cumbersome and has invented an exceedingly simple plan which entirely eliminates this procedure. By the use of his method the initial digging of the hole is entirely unnecessary. The bottom of this post is spiral in shape, similar to an auger, being pointed at the end, and after being partly inserted in the ground is turned round and round until sunk sufficiently deep. To more easily accomplish this a dummy post with a double-headed lever, which first bores the hole in ground, can be used. The post shown in the illustration is made of two parts, the top being separated from the base. Along one side of the top portion is a vertical row of prongs to which an equal number of wires can be attached by clamping the prongs.

Screwed into the Ground.

Use of Windmill.

Will a windmill pump water from a spring 490 feet distance and on a level 40 feet below? What size of windmill and what size of pipe would be required? What would a steel tower for windmill cost? Can a windmill be used for threshing and also for grinding grain? Where should windmill be situated?

An 8-foot windmill with a 3-inch pump and 1½-inch delivery pipe would pump about 400 gallons of water per hour in a good wind. A 10-foot windmill with a 4-inch pump and a 2-inch delivery pipe would pump about 540 gallons per hour, in the circumstances here mentioned. If pumping water is all that is required, either of these sizes will be satisfactory.

The cost of a steel tower for a windmill may be obtained by writing to any of the windmill manufacturers.

On account of the height to which the water is to be lifted, namely 40 feet, it will be necessary to place the pump at the spring, or at a point not more than twenty-five feet vertically higher than the spring. On this account the windmill being situated at some distance from the barn, it can not conveniently be used for other power. In any event the windmill is not suitable for threshing, as it can not be depended upon to give a steady and constant power. It is adapted to such work as pumping and grinding grain.

Purification of Well Water.

Is there any drug or other material which would be useful in purifying the water in a well?

The nature of the impurity will determine to a certain extent the means that should be taken for the purification of the water. Filtration simply through fine sand is usually sufficient to remove suspended matter, though ineffective for rendering a water harmless that contains drainage or pollution of an excrementitious origin. For this latter class of water a filter containing animal charcoal is frequently effective, but such filters require constant attention—that is, cleaning at short intervals and renewal of the charcoal—or they become worse than useless. Probably for waters suspected of contamination of this character boiling is the surest method as well as the cheapest. This destroys all disease germs that might be present.

Sometimes quick lime is put into the well to sweeten the water, but the writer doubts if this is of more than temporary benefit.

If the water is strongly saline, none of the foregoing methods are of any avail; distillation must be resorted to in order to free it from the salts that are in solution. Household stills that can be used on the kitchen stove and yielding one to two quarts of pure water per hour are obtainable for the purpose. They cost from $10 to $15. Their use does not require any skill, indeed they need but little more attention than an ordinary kettle.

Where Laws Are Made

Britisher's Impressions of the Grave Statesmen in Halls of Westminster

(Special Correspondence.)

Chin on hand, I sit in the gallery contemplating for the first time in my life the legislators whose business it is to make the laws I endeavor to obey and to adjust the taxes I struggle to meet, says an English correspondent. And there is a curious feeling at the back of my brain that though this is my first visit to the house of commons I have seen all before, again and again, in some inverted fashion. You would expect a certain dignity from people who occupy such a building as the Royal palace of Westminster. Nor have I been disappointed. There are few more impressive sights on earth than that of a member of parliament emerging from the sacred interior in tardy response to the card of a constituent. The friendly member has shown me the place where Charles I. stood to take his trial; he has described to me in the central hall the majestic walk of the speaker when he proceeds to the other place. We have sat upon the terrace and seen disconsolate ladies forsaken by their hosts, who rush away with the word "division" on their lips and return having made one of those laws I hope to keep. Most dignified. All this I seem to have known before.

Received with Dignity.

Even the press is received with dignified fashion; for instead of hazing the chance of the ballot I go through the cloisters where colossal policemen salute me and the one who guards the lift to the press gallery (I am not known to the police) wants evidence. He recognizes the ticket, and the lift whisks me to a floor with tortuous passages, rooms suggesting vestries and filled with serious men at work with stylographs. And presently I tumble through a swing door—the house of commons—an attendant whose aspect swings vaguely between that of a head waiter and a prime minister—and I am handed into a little pew. Later on I learn that when the press gallery cannot recognize the man below who gets up and makes a historic remark this attendant is consulted. He always knows. Still the note of dignity is maintained. Two centuries ago I caricature is the actual reality. Mr. Balfour does stick his feet on the table and the speaker does not ask him to behave. Looking further round the benches, covered now with black-coated men of all ages, I see one in brown.

"Oh! Kier Hardie," says my companion. The picture might have jumped from the pages of a comic paper; and, therefore, it was impossible to avoid seeing my lawgivers through the atmosphere of caricature.

Unwritten Laws.

Curious traditions—schoolboy traditions—there are. And the real interest of members in the house seems concentrated upon those niceties of etiquette. Outside the strip that marks the position of the bar, you are not in the house, and members hover, toeing the line and retreating in all manner of ungraceful attitudes lounge the members, and the point seems to be to keep your silk hat on your head, unless you want to go to sleep or to address the speaker. Then you remove it. This is a most important point.

For no one but a member may wear a hat in the chamber, and the member must not wear it when he is on his feet. Moreover, there is another strip, at leg's length from the front bench member, over which he may not step when addressing the house. Chin on hand, I watch my legislators, who attach such importance to these traditions, and remember that their schoolboy shrieks of "Order!" are the echo of the protests of Eton at trousers not turned up, of Harrow at a rolled umbrella, of Oxford at an umbrella carried by an undergraduate in his gown. One reflects that there are many important things to settle; but that swing door that should open.

They are getting excited about it. It seems to be among the conventions of the house of commons that half the members should shout "Ear, ear!" (quite clean members) and the other half "Yaw, yaw!" Not an aspirate reaches the gallery. My eyes are fascinated by the continual incoming of members.

I gather that incoming members are expected to bow to the speaker as would have lost my ears for putting the house of commons into print. Today I am given a lift to a seat over the speaker's head and am presented with a programme. "Orders of the day" is the official designation.

Caricature is the Reality.

Chin on hand, I watch, and have seen it all before turned upside down as I had imagined. Quite familiar the modern oak picked out with gold, the green benches, the subdued light; familiar, too, the galleries where peers are penned, or friends of members gathered; familiar, too, the grilles pen over the press gallery, whence ladies can hear little and see less. Down below a man is droning something about a door somewhere in the building that opens that way when it should open this way. He is very precise and very dull. Point is, that door should, with the whole force of the greatest empire the world has ever known, be altered. He flounders and fumbles with phrases, but you can see exactly what he wants to say. The newspaper reports next day said: for him in a line or two. So we go on, with foolish little questions treated at great length * * * until, at last, impelled by that feeling that all this was quite familiar—somehow—I asked my neighbor: "Which is Balfour?" "Those," he replies. My eyes follow his discreet finger and find a pair of soles staring at me from the table on which the mace lies. Then it flashes across me I have seen it all before in caricature. The they pass to their seats. Few Englishmen can bow gracefully; none of those few has got into parliament. A nod and a dip make the outside limits of legislators who stroll into this assembly that for some hours has been doing nothing of importance. Were a speaker I would rise and throw the mace at a member who cut such a figure as the British legislator bowing to the chair.

Suspicious.

The millionaire octogenarian had wedded the beautiful young actress. "You say that you love," said the actress. "Then prove it."

"How can I?" asked the octogenarian anxiously.

"Why, I am an amateur at picking wild mushrooms. I will pick some, and if you eat them I will love you more than any one on earth."

But the wise old man shook his head. "I am afraid I would not remain on earth very long after eating the mushrooms you picked," he said simply.

At Shrine of Saint

Tomb of St. Anthony at Padua,
Italy, Is a Marvel of Beauty.

(Special Correspondence.)

Wandering through the art galleries of Europe, one constantly comes upon that favorite subject of Renaissance artists, the visions of St. Anthony. Murillo, above all others, loved to depict the Paduan saint. How tenderly his brush lingers upon those masterpieces, where the Christ child appears before the young Franciscan. How varied, too, are these scenes! St. Anthony, while reading, surprised by the holy vision; St. Anthony on his knees before the Child enthroned; and lastly, crowning ecstasy, the infant folded in his arms, while jubilant angels sing hosannas in praise.

One grows to have a deep tenderness for this rapturous, ardent young saint, and a visit to his shrine at Padua is more a pilgrimage than a mere sight-seeing tour.

Though Padua has not the attractions of many towns in Northern Italy; neither the ruins of Verona, the mosaics of Ravenna, nor the architectural freaks of Bologna; still it can boast a Roman descent, and no less a person than the stern Mantegna head-

Finally emerging on an open square, the immense basilica of St. Anthony stands before us. At first sight the architecture of this church impresses one as fantastic in the extreme, but, too, it holds the charm of fantasy. One might say that it looked like a bunch of inflated balloons, tugging at their tie ropes. Its seven domes, its slender towers, flying buttresses and jutting chapels, all seem to be held together, as it were, under protest. Many artists worked in the erection of St. Anthony's, and it covers a larger area than St. Mark's at Venice.

The vast, whitewashed interior is bare and chilling, and one hastens through to reach the chapel of the saint.

Tomb of St. Anthony.

Truly beautiful is the last resting place of St. Anthony. One long retains a memory of dazzling, white carved marble, of a roof picked out in gold, of votive lamps hung between rounded arches, and of immense silver angels, holding candles, that light the tomb. The walls of the chapel are completely covered with reliefs, showing the life of the saint, from his ordination, and the different miracles which he performed. The most celebrated is that where Anthony causes a young child to testify to its mother's innocence; a beautiful group but cold in execution. Attached to the shrine are numerous votive offerings, flaming hearts and crosses in silver and testimonials by those whom the saint has miraculously cured. On one side, too, is a pile of old crutches, in sorry contrast to the gorgeous shrine.

In a secluded corner of the great basilica is a picture, supposedly an authentic portrait of St. Anthony. The style is that of Giotto, and the painting has been attributed to him. Two figures kneel at the feet of the saint, who stands erect and extends his hand in blessing. The grouping is stiff and the coloring crude, but the expression of Anthony's face is mild and beatific, and as we move away, we feel that his blessing has extended down the centuries, even unto us.

A Great Rat Hunt.

An extraordinary sight was witnessed in the small hours of the morning recently by persons passing along the streets and boulevards in the neighborhood of the Eastern railway station, Paris, says the London Daily Mail. Thousands of huge rats, many of them as large as rabbits, were scampering along in terror. They were being bravely attacked by many cats, but the latter did not always come off best in the encounters, and numbers of cats were killed. People fled from the streets in terror, but the rats did not attack any human beings and rushed into the sewers wherever they could find an opening. It appears that the other afternoon, while a temporary wooden bridge was being demolished in the Boulevard Sebastopol over the tunneling for the new Metropolitan railway, an old sewer was brought to light. It must have

PASSING OF AUTOCRACY LOOKED UPON AS THE ADVENT OF GREAT NATION

AUTOCRATIC GOVERNMENT AS IT WAS IN RUSSIA YESTERDAY.

Absolute Power of the Czar.
Popular Representation a Farce.
Peasants Practically Slaves.
Personal Liberty dead.
Censorship of the Press.
Privacy of Mails Unknown.
Education a Make-Believe.

POPULAR GOVERNMENT AS IT EXISTS IN RUSSIA TO-DAY.

A limited Monarchy.
A Cabinet Responsible to the People.
A Parliament Chosen by the People.
Immunity of Person.
Freedom of Press.
Right of Habeas Corpus.
Freedom of Education.

The prediction that the czar would grant Russians a constitutional government, or something like unto it, has been verified. Count de Witte's

The peasants are rapidly being converted to belief in the creed that the land belongs to those who till it. Their education has gone so far that peasant congresses are held in which the large land owners, the state officials, and the priests are denounced as enemies. Even if peace shall be restored in the cities the increasing population will remain to be dealt with.

The reforms in government conceded by the czar ought to pacify, and probably will pacify, the educated classes. They will gain all that they can reasonably ask for. They should place themselves on the side of the government as against the social democrats and revolutionary socialists. The latter will not abandon their campaign for "land and liberty." It may be that the city workmen, who are imbued with socialist ideas, will refuse to be pacified. It is possible that their leaders will reason that further agitation will secure more concessions.

There is greater hope for Russia than there was last week, but one cannot say positively that the worst is over. The foreign bankers who have been at St. Petersburg to discuss the placing of a new loan have postponed negotiations. They are to leave St. Petersburg to-morrow. Manifestly they have not sufficient confidence in the stability of the government to lend it a large sum at this time. Notice was served on them some time ago by the revolutionists that future loans made while the autocracy was in power would be repudiated after it was overthrown. The bankers seem to think it may be overthrown.—Chicago Tribune.

DYNASTY OF THE ROMANOFFS

MICHAEL ROMANOFF
(1613.)

NICHOLAS II.
(1905.)

THE PRESENT:
NICHOLAS II.
(Eighteenth of the Line.)
ASSASSINATED:
PETER III.
(1762.)
IVAN VI.
(1764.)
PAUL
(1801.)
ALEXANDER II.
(1881.)

The Romanoff dynasty has ruled Russia for 392 years, or through nearly four whole centuries, marked by bloodshed, massacre, assassination, intrigue, conspiracy, and war.

In those four centuries the Romanoffs fought wars with nearly every people in Europe. They fought Sweden, subdued Poland, subjugated the Crimean provinces, overrun Livonia, dismembered Poland, and sent the Cossacks like a scourge across the Caucasus until they had conquered the center of Asia as far as the tomb of Tamerlane, and added all of Siberia to the realms of the czar.

In those four centuries the Romanoffs fought wars with Sweden, England, France, Italy, Prussia, Austria, Hungary, Turkey, China, and Japan. They fought with and against Napoleon. They helped Prussia against France, and in turn joined France in crushing Prussia. Three times they tried to conquer Turkey. Twice they tried to invade Persia. Their hand has been against almost every nation, and ruler, and people in Europe. They have been better hated and better feared than the members of any reigning family that ever held a throne in modern Europe.

And yet these same Romanoffs, whose throne has been washed with the blood of a million murdered subjects, until its steps were as crimson as the velvet canopy above it, found Russia a horde of half oriental barbarians, to a modern nation, one of the recognized powers in the world. They developed commerce, established universities, gridironed the empire with railroads, fostered religion, cultivated art and science. Their ships ply every sea. Their railroads cross two continents. They are rivals with England and the United States in many lines of commerce. Their lawyers are recognized in the international courts of the world, their scientists are quoted in every laboratory, their literature is in every modern library, and their music is recognized among the classics.

The first Romanoff was Michael Feodorovitch who ascended the throne in 1613, after the assassination of Feodor I., last of the house of Rurik, which had ruled for 700 years. He crushed a rebellion and ruled until 1645 in comparative peace. He was succeeded by his son Alexis, who in his turn crushed a rebellion by hanging, burning, and torturing 7,000 prisoners.

Then came the son of Alexis, Feodor III., who ruled from 1676 to 1682. He left two sons, Ivan V. and Peter I.—half brothers. They ruled jointly, the real empress being Sophia, mother of Peter I. Sophia gave Russia the bloodiest reign history had ever known up to that time. It all ended in 1696, when Ivan V. died. Then Peter I. asserted himself, and put his mother in a convent.

The history of modern Russia really dates from the reign of Peter I., for he was that most famous monarch of all Russia, Peter the Great. He signalized his entry into power by beheading 5,000 of his enemies. He was a wonderful, enterprising, broad minded, cruel, bloodthirsty monarch, who hanged, burned, tortured, and drowned his subjects, until all Russia was one vast orgy of blood. And yet Peter the Great built St. Petersburg, established the commerce of Russia, introduced modern culture, and died after poisoning his own son.

Catherine I., wife of Peter the Great, succeeded him in 1725. She was as famous as she was infamous. She was succeeded by Peter II., and then by Anne, daughter of Ivan. Anne was the first ruler of Russia to banish prisoners to Siberia. She thus exiled 40,000 of her subjects, and sent 10,000 more to the scaffold.

Anne was followed by Ivan VI., who was exiled and then assassinated. A coup d'etat called Elizabeth, daughter of Peter the Great, to the throne in 1741, and she reigned through twenty years of intrigue and assassination.

Peter III. mounted the throne in 1762, only to be murdered by his wife's favorite in a few months. Then his wife, Catherine II., grasped the scepter and ruled, a dissolute empress, until 1796. Her son Paul succeeded her, and in 1801 he was assassinated.

Then came Alexander I., the emperor who burned Moscow to prevent its capture by Napoleon, and who afterwards marched his army to the gates of Paris, compelled Napoleon to abdicate, and sent him an exile to Elba. Nicholas I. came to the throne in 1825. He was a warlike ruler, and his armies fought on every battlefield of Europe for thirty years. During his reign 1,000,000 of his subjects perished in foreign wars.

Alexander II. began to rule in 1855. He was the most enlightened ruler of the Romanoff dynasty. He liberated the serfs, and is remembered as the czar who sent a fleet to New York during the civil war to check England's threats of recognizing the confederacy. He was assassinated in 1881 just as he was about to grant Russia a constitution.

Alexander III. ruled from 1881 until 1894 as a reactionary. He was succeeded in 1894 by the present czar, Nicholas II.

Count Sergius de Witte.

Born in 1818 in Caucasus, 1849. Descendant of family of Dutch emigrants to Russia. Graduated from mathematical sciences department Novorossiysk University, 1870. Successively traction director, exploitation director and director-in-chief South-western railways, 1877-1888. Director railway department, ministry of finance, 1889. President tariff commission, 1889. Minister of ways and communications, 1892. Minister of finance, 1892-1896. Financed and built Trans-Siberian railway. Reorganized Russian finances, establishing gold standard. Secretary of state to the czar, 1896. Privy councillor, 1899. President of council of ministers, 1903. Opposed war with Japan, 1904-1905. Head of Russian delegation to negotiate peace with Japan, 1905.

counsel has been heeded. The people are to be given some "inalienable rights"—the right of assembly, freedom of the press, and the writ of habeas corpus. The national assembly is to be converted into a real legislature with much greater powers than those given the duma. The suffrage is to be much extended. "This should pacify Russia, but it may come too late.

It is manifest that the policy of coercion could not longer be adhered to. The reports as to the unreliability of the army are more detailed and come from more points. One hears of soldiers who refuse to fire on the people, who desert, who mutiny. It is evident that the heaven of discontent is working among the troops, and that the right arm of the autocracy is weakened. The people are losing their fear of the soldiers as well as of the priests. Every sign of timidity on the part of the autocracy emboldens them.

No concessions the czar will consent to make will have much influence on the social democrats and the revolutionary socialists who have engineered the extensive strikes and demonstrations which are reducing the government to impotency. Their simple creed is "land and liberty." They demand for the peasants the ed its school of art. Padua, too, was one of the adopted homes of Dante, "Il Divino." It takes but little imagination, indeed, to conjure up the meeting between him and Giotto, which took place here in the early years of the fourteenth century. Giotto must have tarried many months in Padua, for he has left here masterpieces such as no true student of the Renaissance would dare neglect. His "Life of the Virgin," completely covers the walls of an unpretentious little church, called "Madonna dell' Arena." Faded, cracked by weather and by time, these frescoes still stand as one of the art wonders of the world.

Streets Unattractive.

True to the traditions of north Italian towns, the streets of Padua are flanked by low arcades; others are narrow, sunless passages, picturesque, but damp and forbidding as an avenue of tombs.

one saunters through the main thoroughfares, trending towards the great church, which has been the loadstone of our visit. The street scenes are delightful, as they are in all Italian cities. The people take to their homes only as a last resort, and at the close of a long day lived in the sunshine. We find the poor congregated at the market place, a broad piazza, flanked by a fine old building, called "Palazzo del Capitano." The signori, however, are never seen far from the marble porticoes of some cafe, where they sip vermouth and kill time. They never have pressing business, these gentlemen of Italy.

been the headquarters of all the rats in the neighborhood. They poured out into the streets in an enormous army. The workmen, several hundred in number, laid about them vigorously with sticks and spades, and killed no fewer than 18,000 of the rodents.

DANGERS OF FOOTBALL.

It Can Only Be Properly Played By Gentlemen.

Football has always been a gentleman's game, because no one but a gentleman can be trusted to play the game honorably and fairly and with due regard for the rights of his opponents. The spirit of the "slugger," in football, is the spirit of the thug and the assassin, and it is just as criminal to kick an opposing player in the back, or jump on his body, or "foul" him in some other way, for the purpose of winning the game or retaliating for some unintentional injury, as it would be to sandbag him in an alley to get his watch and purse or to avenge an injury.

The number of accidental injuries in football is not large enough to warrant giving up a game that possesses most valuable training features, which are not possessed by any other game. But the number of injuries that arise from malice, or passion, or brutal indifference to the rights of other players and the courtesies of the game, is sufficient to warrant the demand that the game shall be played better, or not at all.

No game can be "just as good as football," unless it makes the demands upon self-control, courage, strength and endurance that football makes. Football is a game that should be played by gentlemen, or it should not be played at all. No boy has learned the principle of football playing until he has learned self control.

Present day football is dangerous because it is dirty football. The only kind of football worth playing is clean football, and clean football is not dangerous—Pueblo Chieftain.

OLD FASHIONED FARE

Hot Biscuits, Griddle-Cakes, Pies and Puddings.

The food that made the fathers strong is sometimes unfit for the children under the new conditions that our changing civilization is constantly bringing in. One of Mr. Bryan's neighbors in the great state of Nebraska writes:

"I was raised in the South, where hot biscuits, griddle-cakes, pies and puddings are eaten at almost every meal, and by the time I located in Nebraska I found myself a sufferer from indigestion and its attendant ills—distress and pains after meals, an almost constant headache, dull, heavy sleepings by day and sleeplessness at night, loss of flesh, impaired memory, etc., etc.

"I was rapidly becoming incapacitated for business when a valued friend suggested a change in my diet, the abandonment of heavy, rich stuff and the use of Grape-Nuts food. I followed the good advice and shall always be thankful that I did so.

"Whatever may be the experience of others, the beneficial effects of the change were apparent in my case almost immediately. My stomach, which had rejected other food for so long, took to Grape-Nuts most kindly; in a day or two my headache was gone, I began to sleep healthfully and before a week was out the scales showed that my lost weight was coming back. My memory was restored with the renewed vigor that I felt in body and mind. For three years now Grape-Nuts food has kept me in prime condition, and I propose it shall for the rest of my days.

"And by the way, my 2½ year old baby is as fond of Grape-Nuts as I am, always insists on having it. It keeps her as healthy and hearty as they make them." Name given by Postum Co., Battle Creek, Mich. There's a reason.

DEFECTS IN RUSSIAN VESSELS.

Errors Contributed Greatly to Togo's Decisive Victory.

A French naval officer has been attempting to explain the collapse of some of the Russian line of battle-ships in the fight in the Sea of Japan. He said that, from their design, a number of ships had only a moderate degree of stability. They were top-heavy and some of them rolled so much on the voyage-out that the officers were afraid they would turn turtle. When a large amount of coal was taken on board, some even being carried on deck, the vessels were submerged to well below their ordinary water line and as a result the ships were crank and their water line armament in some cases submerged. This deep loading caused the vessels to roll, and, in the opinion of the French expert, holes made by the shells from the Japanese fleet were thus frequently under water, which, with the vessels in ordinary trim, would not have been the case. As the fire of the Japanese was naturally directed at the bows of the approaching Russian ships their forward compartments filled first and the ships went down by the head and capsized. —Boston Herald.

Long Search Well Rewarded.

The romantic story of how the Dr. Arnold Pann, one of the foremost lawyers of Vienna, laid the foundation for his wealth is related in the newspapers of that city. About a quarter of a century ago a local jeweler named Ott died, leaving a fortune of 7,000,000 florins. He was a bachelor, and he left no will, nor were the courts able to find out the name or whereabouts of any of his relatives. Arnold Pann devoted himself to the task of finding them. For months he followed clues in Austria and Germany and was finally rewarded by finding not one or two relatives but thirty. The money was handed out to him to be equally divided among the claimants, while he himself received 250,000 florins, a record fee.

De Brazza a Strange Personality.

Count De Brazza, the explorer, who was sent to Africa by the French government to reform administration abuses, and who lost his life there, had an odd-looking personality. A Paris correspondent says: "He had the strangest physiognomy I can remember ever to have seen, and the most serpentine form—tall, lithe, extremely thin. The profile was as the skeleton of an eagle, but the nose very long. The black eyes had I know not what that struck me as Hungarian and ophidian. The jet-black hair was cut close enough to resemble a skull cap. The complexion had the color of a not very fresh lemon under black gauze. The eye was evasive and one could not conceive him as ever having laughed."

Will Have No "Sunken Grave."

Harve Durand, a wealthy pioneer resident of Fond du Lac, Wis., has finished constructing his own grave as well as that for his wife. He is not superstitious and has had no premonition that the end is near, but he has a horror of what he terms "sunken graves." By building a brick vault several feet beneath the surface of the ground and placing a heavy slab of stone across the top, Mr. Durand believes that the graves will not sink, as the earth can be tampered over the slab after the caskets have been deposited in the vault. Mr. Durand erected a large granite monument bearing the names of himself and wife in the family lot at Rietz cemetery some time ago.

Taming of Fishes.

In proving that fishes can be tamed, a Swiss physician believes that he has made an interesting discovery in natural history. He was taking baths for his health in the Lake of Lugano, and near the bathing house lived a family of 100 or more loaches, which often swam into the bath house. To tempt these fishes he sat motionless in the water for an hour twice daily, holding a large piece of bread in each hand. Soon the smallest of the loaches ventured to nibble at the bread, darting back at the slightest motion of the hand, and day by day these were followed by older and older fishes until all came and ate freely and gradually gained courage, and circled around the experimenter as he stepped into the water. At last he could stroke and handle them, or splash violently without disturbing them as they romped about him.

Sanitarium for Consumptives.

One of the most extensive works in behalf of the poor of New York City ever undertaken is about to be started by the Department of Charities, in the form of a sanitarium for the exclusive treatment and care of persons suffering from tuberculosis. Plans for the sanitarium are complete, and the actual work of building will probably be started early next spring.

Situated on the highest hill on Staten Island, overlooking New York harbor, and with accommodations in its wards for 800 patients, the sanitarium is planned to be the finest of its kind in the world. For its construction alone $2,000,000 will be necessary.

Safety in Proprietary Medicines.

Replying to the charge that certain popular proprietary medicines contain narcotic drugs, an authority says:

"Some years ago one of the leading pharmacists of America, in connection with some official work, undertook to ascertain, by an elaborate inquiry in representative cities of the country, what percentage of physicians' prescriptions contained a narcotic drug of some kind. Out of 100,000 representative prescriptions, dispensed in drug stores in all parts of the United States, it was found that 70 per cent contained opium or some one of its preparations.

"Proprietary medicines are almost invariably accompanied by the most detailed and specific directions for use, while the directions accompanying physicians' prescriptions are generally very brief and sometimes illegible. It is also true that but a moderate proportion of proprietary medicines contain any poison or narcotic, and, when they do, it is generally in such small quantities or so protected by accompanying antidotes, as to carry with it no danger whatever."

Miscellaneous.

Why isn't a baby carriage known as a crycycle?

Why is it so much easier to be wrong than it is to be president?

Why do some people manage to talk a great deal without saying anything?

Why do so many of our coming men seem to be handicapped from the start?

The company that issues the map has the only curveless railway thereon.

The average man invariably makes a fool of himself every time he tries to act up.

Not soap, but ammonia should be used in the water with which windows are washed if clear bright glass is desired.

The smell of fresh paint can be removed by leaving in the room all night a pail of water containing several sliced onions.

No better way for dusting the walls of a room can be suggested than to cover a broom with a bay of heavy cotton flannel made with the fuzzy side out.

One of the late discoveries in the domain of economics is that the hairs in the ears of a steer are as good as the camel's hair for use in making paint brushes. Let the tariff on real camel's hair be made prohibitive at once.

WHO CANNOT BE CURED.

Backed up by over a third of a century of remarkable and uniform cures, a record such as no other remedy for the diseases and weaknesses peculiar to women ever attained, the proprietors and makers of Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription now feel fully warranted in offering to pay $500 in legal money of the United States for any case of Leucorrhoea, Female Weakness, Prolapsus, or Falling of Womb, which they cannot cure. All they ask is a fair and reasonable trial of their means of cure.

"I was a great sufferer for six years and doctored all the time with a number of physicians but did not receive any benefit," writes Mrs. George Sogden, of 447 Honda Street, Saginaw (South), Michigan. "I had given up all hope of ever getting better. Thought I would write you. When I received your letter telling me what to do I commenced to take your 'Favorite Prescription' and follow your advice. I have taken ten bottles in all, also five vials of the 'Pleasant Pellets.' Am now regular, after having missed two years and suffered with pain in the head and back. I was so nervous, could not eat or sleep. Now I can thank you for my recovery."

Don't hesitate to write to Dr. R. V. Pierce, chief consulting physician to the Invalids' Hotel and Surgical Institute, at Buffalo, N. Y., if you want good medical advice from a fully qualified physician as to your personal good health. Such letters are always answered free of charge and confidentially.

A medicine which has outlasted all others for women in the past third of a century and being recommended by all those who have used it, is a good remedy to tie to. Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription is purely vegetable and does not contain a particle of alcohol to destroy the blood corpuscles and weaken the system. Do not permit the dealer to insult your intelligence by suggesting some other compound which he recommends as "just as good," because he makes it himself.

The Key That Unlocks the Door to Long Living.

The men of eighty-five and ninety years of age are not the rotund well fed, but thin, spare men who live on a slender diet. Be as careful as he will, however, a man past middle age will occasionally eat too much or of some article of food not suited to his constitution, and will need a dose of Chamberlain's Stomach and Liver Tablets to cleanse and invigorate his stomach and regulate his liver and bowels. When this is done there is no reason why the average man should not live to old age. For sale by all druggists.

Why He Changed Faith.

A Southerner was telling of an old colored man in his neighborhood who first joined the Episcopal church, then the Methodist and next the Baptist, where he remained. Questioned as to the reason for his church travels, he responded:

"Well, suh, hit's dis way: De 'Piscopals is gemman, suh, but I couldn't keep up wid de answerin' back in de church. De Methodists, dey always holdin' inquiry meetin's, an' I don't like too much inquirin' into. But de Baptists, suh, dey jus' dip an' are done wid hit. I's a Baptis', I is.

Furious Fighting.

"For seven years," writes Geo. W. Hoffman, of Harper, Wash., "I had a bitter battle, with chronic stomach and liver trouble, but at last I won, and cured my diseases, by the use of Electric Bitters. I unhesitatingly recommend them to all, and don't intend in the future to be without them in the house. They are certainly a wonderful medicine, to have cured such a case as mine." Sold under guarantee to do the same for you, by the Palace Drug Store at 50c a bottle. Try them today.

Indigestion Causes Catarrh of the Stomach.

For many years it has been supposed that Catarrh of the Stomach caused indigestion and dyspepsia, but the truth is exactly the opposite. Indigestion causes catarrh. Repeated attacks of indigestion inflame the mucous membranes lining the stomach and expose the nerves of the stomach, thus causing the glands to secrete mucin instead of the juices of natural digestion. This is called Catarrh of the Stomach.

Kodol Dyspepsia Cure

relieves all inflammation of the mucous membranes lining the stomach, protects the nerves, and cures bad breath, sour risings, a sense of fullness after eating, indigestion, dyspepsia and all stomach troubles.

Kodol Digests What You Eat

Cocoanuts, as cheap as they can be bought anywhere in the country, for sale at the Racket Store. We understand Grover & Son have all there is in town and they will go with a whoop as soon this notice is read by the people of Deming.

One of the most attractive Life Insurance policies that has ever been offered in this community is now being sold by E. H. Maley, who represents the old Mutual Benefit Ins. Co., of New Jersey. He has placed several of these contracts recently but still has plenty more. As a Christmas present for yourself and your loved ones, there is nothing better than a good policy on your life.

The sheriff's efforts to capture the thief who broke into Mr. Geo. Watkins' house, have been successful, and the housebreaker is now boarding at the checker hotel. He is a Mexican, who has been doing section work for the Santa Fe, and was rooming in a car near the company's roundhouse. Many of the articles stolen were found in his possession, and the evidence against him is so conclusive that his conviction is certain.

The first carload of coal to relieve the fuel famine was received by W. R. Merrill last Sunday, and as some of his customers were without fuel, Mr. Merrill filled the snowstorm and delivered eight tons that day and loaned to the Crescent Lumber Co. what they needed to fill their most urgent orders. On Tuesday the Crescent Co. received another carload, and for a time the famine was relieved. But a much greater supply is needed to supply the city's demand, and more is expected in two or three days.

Re-Appointed.

Mr. Creight Foraker has certainly proved to the entire country his fitness for the position of U. S. Marshal of New Mexico, and the higher powers have recognized his ability by again appointing him to a position he has already held for eight years.

Our U. S. Marshal is a brother of Senator Foraker, of Ohio, is a Republican from center to circumference, and we are pleased to know that the past able and faithful discharge of his official duties has won the office for another term.

Mr. and Mrs. Jennings and son, of Henderson, Ky., who have been visiting at Judge Chapman's, returned last Saturday to their old Kentucky home. Mrs. Jennings is Judge Chapman's daughter.

Mrs. Kirkland, mother of Mrs. Dozier, starts on her return trip to Forrest, Miss., next Tuesday. Mrs. Kirkland has made many sincere friends in Deming who very much regret her decision to leave us now.

Mr. J. A. Mahoney has his holiday goods on exhibition, and Capt. Sutton, Major Stutsman and Col. Wells are now on duty as salesmen at Mahoney's old stand. "No rest for the weary" until the holiday season is over.

Col. McGrorty has returned from a three months' visit to his old home across the sea. On his return he made a brief call at San Antonio. The Colonel has crossed the ocean a number of times, and we are pleased to note his safe return again to Deming.

Mrs. William Harris, sister of Mrs. Frank Wyman, from Los Angeles, arrived in Deming this week and is a welcome guest at the Wyman home on Spruce street. Mrs. Harris is a resident of Cripple Creek, Col. She will remain in Deming during the holidays.

Mr. Cal Baker has this week delivered a carload of El Paso brick to Mrs. Connelly's lot near the school house. The brick, in color, reminds one of the Milwaukee brick, once so popular for residences in Chicago. Mrs. Connelly's residence, when completed, will be one of the best in Deming.

Mr. S. W. Mullinix, Division Master Mechanic of the N. M. & R. G. division of the A. T. & S. F., accompanied by Road Foreman of Engines, J. A. Ross, paid this metropolis a visit on Wednesday. This was Mr. Mullinix's first visit to Deming. He expressed himself as being much pleased with Deming and promised to come again ere long.

We wish to call the attention of our readers to Irvine & Raithel's advertisement on our seventh page. This firm excels in novel methods of disposing of their goods, and the beauty of it in their methods are successful. They have a fine and extensive stock, especially for the holidays. Their daily sales prove that our town is prosperous and will "absorb" about all that is offered for sale as "Christmas gifts." Call and try for a guessing prize.

A Fearful Fate.

It is a fearful fate to have to endure the terrible torture of piles. "I can truthfully say," writes Harry Colson, of Masonville, Ia., "that for blind, bleeding, itching and protruding piles, Bucklin's Arnica Salve, is the best cure made." Also best for cuts, burns and injuries. 25c at the Palace Drug Store.

A Certain Cure for Croup.

When a child shows symptoms of croup there is no time to experiment with new remedies, no matter how highly they may be recommended. There is one preparation that can always be depended upon. It has been in use for many years and has never been known to fail, viz: Chamberlain's Cough Remedy. Mr. M. F. Compton of Market, Texas, says of it, "I have used Chamberlain's Cough Remedy in severe cases of croup with my children, and can truthfully say it always gives prompt relief." For sale by all druggists.

Fire.

During the storm last Sunday night Mr. Henry Meyer's slaughter house, southwest of town, took fire and was entirely consumed, with everything connected with building. We understand the beef, dressed and hanging up for the next day's market, was also cremated. The origin of the fire is a mystery. Tramps may have gone there for protection from the storm and built a fire which spread beyond their control. The loss to Mr. Meyer was about $800, on which there was $300. insurance. The house will be rebuilt as soon as it can be done.

Give Your Stomach Rest.

Nothing will cure indigestion that doesn't digest the food, itself, and give the stomach rest. You can't expect that a weak stomach will regain its strength and get well when it is compelled to do the full work that a sound stomach should do. You wouldn't expect a sick horse to get well when it was compelled to do a full day's work every day of the week. Kodol Dyspepsia Cure is a perfect digestant and digests the food regardless of the condition of your stomach. Relieves indigestion, belching, sour stomach and all stomach disorders. Sold by the Palace Drug Store.
