TUCUMCARI, QUAY COUNTY, NEW MEXICO, THURSDAY, MARCH 14, 1918

TEXAS HORSE THIEF CAPTURED IN QUAY

plains Saturday and Sunday when the Sheriff's office, assisted by the farmers of that country, were hot on the track of a horse thief from Texas.

Jim Sawyer was the thief's name, and he had stolen a horse from a doctor at Adrain, Texas. He stole the it. At 7:30 Rev. Brooks will again horse last Wednesday night and was tracked to Bard, where he stayed all night Thursday. From Bard he went south to Grady and thence proceeded westward. He was followed by a deputy sheriff and the doctor but they lost track of him at Grady and the Deputy Briscoe and others took un the hunt. The horse and man were located Friday night at the home of C. Q. Brady, where the man succeeded in cluding the officers. He remained until dawn when he left on foot and hid out during the day in an old shack until that night. He then went west again and stayed Saturday night in a house near Jordan. Sunday it is said nearly one hundred men in cars took part in the hunt, but they failed to land their prize. Sunday night the man showed up at the home of Geo. Curtis several miles west of Jordan. He left Curtis's Monday morning and was directed to the home of L. Turner, a deputy sheriff of Quay county. He walked about eight miles and when he arrived at Turner's he was taken into custody and Mr. Briscoe was notified. He went to the Turner home and with Mr. Turner they brought the bad man to Tucumcari and lodged him in jail, where he was turned over to the Texas officers and taken back home.

Sawyer had a lot of dentist's tools and a 45 automatic, which he used while at the Brady home Friday night. He shot six times at his pursuers and once or twice at the deputy sheriff glad to answer any questions in rehorse in the Brady barn. It was dark and the men took no chances but expected to capture their man the next morning, but he had made his escape. He swore he would not be taken alive and was a dangerous proposition to bump up against.

SNOW-WHITE TO BE PRESENT-ED BY SCHOOL CHILDREN

The grades of our Public School are to present the beautiful fairy tale of Snow-White in the form of an oper- Tuesday. Geo. F. Root. Snow-White who has mines Thursday on account of mater-aroused jealousy in the heart of her ial being short. They will soon be step-mother, the Queen, because she working again in the big shaft. is fast becoming such a beautiful woman, is taken out in the woods by Carl, the huntsman, to be killed by the order of the Queen. Carl, who has always loved her cannot kill her, and at the risk of his own life lets her go make their future home for another free. She wanders long and weary year. hours in the forest and finally reaches the Dwarfs home where she is treated kindly and given a home. The Forest children look out for her and perform many kind deeds among which is the warning of the Dwarfs, when the Queen, in disguise, laces a beautiful girdle around her so tightly that she falls dead. She is later brought to life by the Dwarfs. But the Queen, consulting her magic mirror, finds she is still alive and again comes disguised as a vegetable vender and persuades Snow-White to eat a poisoned apple. The Prince who has been searching in vain for his Fairy Princess comes while the Forest Elves are singing the Requiem and begs for the body of Snow-White. The Dwarfs finally consent but when the Prince picks her up, the poisoned apple falls out of her mouth and Snow-White is restored to life, and made Queen with much rejoicing. The children will present this pretty story in song and verse at the High School Gymnasium, Friday evening, March 22nd, at 8:15 p. m.

A special stage with suitable scenery is being erected and success is assured. The prices will be 35c and 25c and the proceeds will be divided by the children between their Junior Red Cross and Victrola funds.

Two of the splendid young people of the Cameron community drove over to Tucumcari Saturday where at 2:00 p. m. they appeared at the home of the Christian minister, departing soon after as man and wife. Mr. Henry Ray and Miss Dovie F. Buck are the names of the contracting parties. The best wishes of the News and the many friends accompany Mr. and Mrs. Ray on their matrimonial journey.

A BIG BOOK DRIVE

Two million books are needed by the Liberty War Service of the American Library Association to furnish reading matter to soldiers and sailors in camps l in America, on transports, on board naval vessels and overseas.

A big drive to get these books is to be carried on in Tucumcari during the week of March 18, and Miss Hester Loans and Dis-Harvey librarian of the Tucumcari Public School Library is arranging the details of the campaign.

A fund of a million and a half dollars was raised last September to build Camp Library Buildings at thirty-four camps, equip them, provide trained library service and to purchase such books as are not given. The buildings are finished, the libraries are being actively used and the service is being extended to branches in all Y. M. C. A. and K. of C. huts, Hospitals, Y. W. C. A. hostess houses, and to chaplins in smaller forts, posts and on naval Furniture and Fixtures...

Several hundred thousand books have already been given and more than 100,000 books have been purchased. There are many expensive technical books needed which will not be supplied by gift. In order that the fund may be used for these purchases, and for administering and extending the service, the public is now asked to men will be sent to this institution make large gifts of popular books. "A little boy and a little girl were friving through the country not long ago," commenced Daddy.

"Do you mean that Nick and I were the little boy and Httle girl?" asked

"No," said Daddy, "the little boy's name was Ned, and the little girl's name was Nelly. They were really not driving, but sleigh-riding, and the bells were jingling on the horses' harnesses and on the front of their sleigh were big feathery decorations. They look I like feather dusters, the children thought, but they made the sleigh look very fine and smart.

"They drove slong the white roads, for the snow was deep and not a scrap of real road showed itself. The fields were white, the bushes were covered with white, for only that morning there had been a slight snowstorm which had given an extra covering of snow to the whole country around.

"Sometimes they sang songs and sometimes they just looked about them. Everything was so beautiful and white and sparkling. How they loved it!

"After a time they passed a barn. Two horses were standing outside it, hitched to a big sleigh filled with apples and potatoes, which had been saved through the winter to be used when the supplies began to run short.

"The sleigh was going to take them to the big house not far away. When the two horses saw the horses that were pulling Ned and Nelly they bowed their heads as if to say, 'How-do-youdo, comrades.'

"And to the huge amusement of Ned and Nelly, their horses did the same, The children laughed aloud and the farmer called out, 'Do you want some nice red apples?' Of course they did, and not only did they have some, but their horses were given some apples, too, and once more they bowed. "I have never seen such polite horses,' said Nelly. "'I never have, either,' said Ned.

They Tried to Soothe the Horse.

"They thanked the farmer and drove once more, and the horses belonging "'What a funny time we have had," ness, but it is not draped. Just at the about them. They are usually made of They bowed a how-do-you-do, a thankyou for the apples, and a good-by."

"But to continue with the rest of their drive. On their way home one of the horses got very much frightened, and in some way escaped useful in lung trouble, asthma, croup, this kind. from his harness and ran off. But as he got loose from the harness the ized countries .- Adv. sleigh upset, for he had pulled against the other horse and had landed the children in a ditch.

"For such a polite horse it was a dreadful thing to do, but he had suddealy noticed a sawmill and heard the noise and though he had heard it many times before, it had been some weeks since the last time, and for some reason he was thoroughly frightened.

"The children picked themselves un They were not really hurt. And they tried to soothe the horse which had been left behind, for now he was afraid f the sudden and startling way things had happened.

"But he comforted the children, and the children comforted him. 'You'll have to take us back alone, said Nelly. "'Yes,' said Ned. 'Til try to fix the harness and the sleigh."

"But just at that moment the horse came running back, with the daddy of Ned and Nelly behind him in another sleigh. 'What has happened?' asked their Daddy, and at once, to his relief, he saw that they had not been really hurt at all.

"The faithful old Prince,' said their Daddy, 'knew that something was wrong, and wouldn't wait until I brought him to just this road which he wanted to come."

"The children explained to their Daddy what had happened, and they all decided that though Prince had become frightened, he would be more careful the next time. And he had certainly tried to make up for it by coming right back for them with their Duddy. And the other horse had remained with them. So they came to the conclusion that not only had they polite horses which bowed to their friends, but good, faithful and devoted

ROAD CONSTRUCTION POLICY FOR WAR TIME

Food Transportation Needs as Well as Military Necessity to Be Considered in Nation's War Time Road Building.

MAINTAIN ROADS ALREADY BUILT

Military and Economic Needs Must Govern 1918 Construction.

BUILDING PUT ON WAR BASIS

How the Federal Aid Road Is Administered-Improved State Laws One Result-Annual Expenditure of $300,000,000 Involved.

That is the policy which David F. Houston, secretary of agriculture, bebeyes should be followed in highway construction during the war. It means that road building in the United States will be put on a war basis; that the highway which is vitally important from a military standpoint and for the movement of commodities will receive priority of consideration in projecting programs of construction.

In carrying out the policy thus announced there has been sent out by the office of public roads of the department of agriculture, schedule forms on Early Jersey and Charleston Wakefield, Suc-which the states are requested to set forth their proposed federal aid work 1,000, 12.00; 5,000 at $1.75; 10,000 up at $1.50. F.O. for the 1918 working season. These ELSO Satisfaction guaranteed. schedules call for a description of each road, the character, quantity and rail haul of the materials to be used, the probable cost, the amount of federnl funds desired, the specific purpose of the improvement, its bearing upon the war situation, and what effect a delay of the work until 1919 or later would have. With the information thus assembled and classified, an efficient road-construction program is assured. While it is impossible to make any definite statement regarding the transportation of road materials, the expectations are that the transportation situation will be improved and that the shipment of such materials for essential projects can be made.

Expenditure of $300,000,000.

Road construction and maintenance in the United States involve an annual expenditure of some $300,000,000, and there is scarcely a section of the country that is not seriously affected by a marked disturbance in road work.

In the administration of the federal aid road act of July 11, 1916, which provides for co-operation between the federal government and the states in and of roads and trails within and in the course of preparation in the case the construction of rural post roads partly within the national forests, very satisfactory progress has been made by the department of agriculture, according to a recent report of Secretary Houston. The office of public roads and rural engineering, which is intrusted with the burden of admin-

So far as it is practicable to do so, this department will urge the maintenance of the highways already constructed; the construction and completion of those highways which are vitally important because of their bearing upon the war situation or for the movement of commodities; the postponement of all highway construction relatively less essential or not based upon important military or economic needs. The department is preparing to suggest to the state highway departments the proposition of a schedule of work for the federal aid projects for 1918 in line with this policy.-Secretary Houston, in Communication to American Association of State Highway Offi-

ERATION OF FEDERAL AID ROAD ACT.

Probably the most significant result thus far of the operation of the federal aid road act bas been the enactment by a number of state legislatures of effective road laws. Legislative action in some states was necessary to meet the requirements of the federal act, but many of the states have gone further and have recast their highway policies. All the states have assented to the provisions of the act-42 by their legislatures and six by their governors. Thirty-three had a highway department within the meaning of the net upon the date of its approval; the remaining 15 have since enacted legislation creating highway departments which comply with the terms of the The highway departments in 18 states have been greatly strengthened, specific appropriations to meet the federal funds have been made by ten and comprehensive maintenance legislation has been enacted in nine states. Forty-two states now have satisfactory arrintenance laws. Nearly all the states have submitted definite schemes or programs of work for the en-L tire five-year period covered by the act, or for the greater portion of it. The formulation of carefully prepared plans for the full period in advance of construction tends to prevent waste-engineer in charge have been established in as many areas. Forty State Projects.

Under the provisions of the act 40 states have submitted 183 projects involving a total of approximately 1,730 miles, according to the secretary's re-Of this number 139, embracing 1.182 miles and calling for an es timated expenditure including federal, state and local funds of $7,947,114.50, have been approved. These projects involve federal funds to the xtent of $3,455,573.76, or 23.75 per cent of the total allotment, $14,550,000 to the various states for the fiscal year 1917 and 1918. Six projects covering 40 miles have been disapproved. Agreements have been entered into or are of 34 projects, aggregating 197.74 miles and involving $190,600,84 of federal funds and a total of $2,225,944.74.

The full effect of the federal aid road act cannot be measured by any comparison of funds expended in 1916 and made available for 1917, as many of the legislatures did not meet until early in the calendar year 1917. It is significant, however, says the secretary, that while the expenditure of state funds in 1916 aggregated $40,-969,000 it is estimated that the expenditure of state funds in 1917 will reach approximately $60,000,000, or an increase of nearly 50 per cent. These funds are distinct from local expenditures and indicate an advance in state participation in highway work.

TRANSPORT OF FARM PRODUCTS.

Farm products will not be denied transportation facilities, according to a statement of the director general of railroads, issued after a conference with representatives of the United States department of agriculture. No "non-essential" agricultural products has been issued, nor is such an order contemplated. The director general believes that under the plan now being formulated it will be possible to provide adequate transportation for farm products this year. Farmers should place orders for cars when needed with local freight agents as has always been the practice.

AND NOW THEY ARE COOKING TOBACCO TO MAKE IT BETTER

For a good many years The American Tobacco Company have been conducting a series of experiments having as their object the improvement of smoking

And it is interesting to know that one of the greatest of their discoveries was one of the simplest, and that was, that cooking or toasting tobacco improved it in every way, just as cooking most foods improves

They took a real Burley tobacco, grown toast bread; moistened it to replace the natural moisture driven off by toasting; made it into cigarettes, called them "LUCKY STRIKE, the toasted cigarette," and offered them to the public, ever created for any tobacco product in a similar length of time.

The change produced by toasting is not ing. only most wholesome, but the flavor is greatly improved, just as cooking improves meat, for example, -Adv.

The person who is not overstrong. who complans about not having any appetite, would have an altogether different story to tell if he or she kept out of doors as much as possible. Fresh air and sparkling sunshine are doing more and have done more to keep humanity feeling fit than all the tonics and ellxirs in the world. Only a very foolish woman will dread cold weather, or disdain the joys it offers. On the other hand, if she would "keep up" and, incidentally, keep stronger and younger looking, she will go out every clear day, regardless of the temperature.

THE FIRST PERFORMANCE OF "THE GIRL UPSTAIRS" IS GIVEN WITH HUGE SUCCESS FOR ROSE - JIMMY WALLACE, DRAMATIC CRITIC, MAKES A DISCOVERY

Synopsis .- Rose Stanton, of moderate circumstances, marries wealthy Rodney Aldrich, on short acquaintance, and for more than a year lives in idleness and luxury in Chicago. The life palls on her, she longs to do something useful, but decides that motherhood will be a big enough job. She has twins, however, and they are put in the care of a professional nurse. Rose again becomes intensely dissatisfied with idleness, so over the protest of her doting husband she disappears into the business world to make good on her own initiative, gets a job in the chorus of a musical comedy in rehearsal and lives in a cheap rooming house. Her taste and intelligence soon get her a place as assistant to the producer. Her fashionable friends think she has gone

CHAPTER XIX. -13-

Success-And a Recognition. There is a kaleidoscopic character about the events of the ten days or so preceding the opening performance of most musical comedies which would make a sober chronicle of them seem fantastically incredible. This law of nature made no exception in the case of "The Girl Up-Stairs." There were rehearsals which ran so smoothly and swiftly that they'd have done for performances; there were others so ab-ominably bad that the bare idea of presenting the mess resulting from six weeks' toll, before the people who had paid money to see it, was a nightmare.

Of all the persons directly, or even remotely, affected by this nerve-shattering confusion, Rose was perhaps the least perturbed. The only thing that really mattered to her was the successful execution of those twelve costumes. The phantasmagoria at North End hall was a regrettable, but necessary, interruption of her more important activities.

She wakened automatically at halfpast seven and was down-town by half-past eight, to do whatever shopping the work of the previous day revealed the need of.

At nine-thirty-an unheard-of hour in the theater-the watchman at the Globe let her in at the stage door, and Rose had half an hour, before the arrival of the wardrobe mistress and her assistant, for looking over the work done since she had left for rehearsal the day before.

She liked this quiet, cavernous old barn of a pince down under the Globe stage; liked it when she had it to herself before the two sewing women came and later, when, with a couple of sheets sprend out on the floor, she cut and basted according to her cambric patterns, keeping shead of the flying needles of the other two. After her own little room, the mere spa-clousness of it seemed almost noble. In keeping with the good luck which had attended everything that happened in connection with this first venture of hers, she was able to tell Galbraith that both sets of costumes were finished and ready to try on on the very day he announced that the next rehearsal would be held at ten tomorrow at the Globe.

She persuaded the girls to wait until all six were dressed in the afternoon frocks and until she herself had had a chance to give each of them a final inspection and to make a few last touches and readjustments. Then they all trooped out on the stage and stood in a row, turned about, walked here and there, in obedience to Galbraith's instructions shouted from the back of the theater.

It was dark out there and disconcertingly silent. The glow of two cigars indicated the presence of Goldsmith and Block in the middle of a little knot of other spectators.

The only response Rose got-the only index to the effect her inbors had produced was the tone of Galbraith's voice. "All right." he shouted. "Go and put on the others."

There was another stience after they had filed out on the stage again, elad this time in the evening gownsa hollow, heart-constricting silence, almost literally sickening. But it lasted only a moment. Then: "Will you come down here, Miss Dane?" called Galbraith.

There was a slight, momentary, but ing these words-a shock felt by everybody within the vanid of his voice. "Dane, come down here;" he had said: "Will you come down here, Miss Dane?" And the thing amounted, so the stage and in the wings didn't know what she had done, nor in what but they did know she was, from now on, something besides a chorus girl.

Rose obediently crossed the runway and walked up the aisle to where Galbraith stood, with Goldsmith and Block, waiting for her. She was fee!ing a little numb and empty.

Galbraith, as she came, held out a

I wouldn't ask for anything handsom-

The rest of it didn't matter to Rose -the more guarded but nevertheless cordial approval of the two owners, who had yet to make sure on the figures; and the details of settlement, which left her more than a hundred dollars' profit, even after she had deducted the hundred she owed Rod-The point-the point-settled by Galbraith's praise-was that she had succeeded.

It was, on the whole, a good bargain on both sides. But Goldsmith and Block came back next day and drove another bargain, principally to their own advantage.

"You've certainly got a good eye for "and here's a proposition we'd like to make. A lot of these other things we've got for the regular chorus don't look as good as they might. You'll be able to see changes to make in them that'll improve them maybe fifty per cent. Well, you take it on, and we'll begin paying you your regular salary new; you understand, twenty-five dollars a week, beginning today."

Rose accepted the proposition with a warm flush of gratitude. But, from the moment her little salary began, she found herself retained, body and soul, exactly as Galbraith himself was. They'd bought all her ideas, all her energy, all her time, except a few scant hours for sleep and a few snatched minutes for meals.

She gave her employers, up to the time when the piece opened at the Globe, at a conservative calculation, about five times their money's worth Even if she hadn't been in the company, she'd have found something like two days' work in every twenty-four hours, just in the wardrobe room. There wasn't a single costume outside tose's own twelve that didn't have t be remodeled more or less.

On top of all that, the really terrible grind of rehearsals began: property rehearsals, curiously disconcerting at first; scenery rehearsals that caused the stage to seem small and cluttered up, and, last and ghastliest, a dress rehearsal, which began at seven o'clock one night and lasted till four the next morning.

If you had seen them that morning. utterly fagged out, unsustained by a single gleam of hope, you'd have said it was impossible that they should give any sort of performance that night-let alone a good one. But by eight o'clock, when the overture was called, you wouldn't have known them for the same people. There was the feeling, on the edge of this first performance, that they were now on their own.

The appearance, back on the stage. of John Gulbraith in evening dress, just as the call of the first act brought them trooping from their dressing rooms, intensified this sensation. He was going to be, tonight, simply one of the audience.

Rose herself was completely dominated by the new spirit. Her nerves -slack, frayed, numb an hour agohad sprung miraculously into tune. She not only didn't feel tired. It person who's made the six weeks bearseemed she never could feel tired able, and, in a way, wonderful. I nev-it was all right. She was going on as if nothing had happened.

The other man was Jimmy Wallace himself. He released too, a little sigh of relief when he saw her off in her stride again after that momentary falter. But he hardly looked at the stage after that; stared absently at his program instead, and presently availed himself of the drauntic critic's license and left the theater.

As for Rose herself, in her conscious thoughts she didn't recognize the hope already beating tumultuously in her veins, that he would tell Rodney-that perhaps even before she got back to her dismal little room, Rodney, pacing his, would know.

It was so irrational a hope-so unexpected and so well disguised-that she mistook it for fear. But fear never made one's heart glow like that.

That's where all her thoughts were when John Galbraith halted her on the way from the dressing room after the performance was over.

"I know you're tired," he sald brusquely. "But I fancied you'd be tireder in the morning, and I have to leave for New York on the fast train. So, you see, it was now or never."

Strangely enough, that got her. She stared at him almost in consternation. "Do you mean you are going away?" she asked. "Tomorrow?"

"Of course," he said, rather sharply. "I've nothing more to stay around here He added, as she still seemed not to have got it through her head: "My contract with Goldsmith and costumes, Miss Dane," Goldsmith said. Block ended tonight, with the opening performance."

"Of course," she said in deprecation of her stupidity. "And yet it's always seemed that the show was you; just something that you made go. It doesn't seem possible that it could keep on going with you not there."

The sincerity of that made it a really fine compliment-just the sort of compliment he'd appreciate. But-the old perversity again—the very freedom with which she said it spoiled it for him.

"I may be missed," he said-it was more of a growl, really-"but I sha'n't be regretted. There's always a sort of 'Hallelujah chorus' set up by the company when they realize I'm gone."

"I shall regret it very much," said Rose. The words would have set his blood on fire if she'd just faltered over them. But she didn't. She was hope-

Under this new contract of mine that I expect to sign in a day or two, I'll simply have to have somebody. And then, of course, there's the costuming. That's a great game, and I think you've a talent for it.

"There you are! The job will be paid from the first a great deal better than what you've got here. And the would run to real money. Well, how about it?"

"But," said Rose, a little breathless-The Girl Upstairs'? I couldn't just leave, could 1?"

"Oh, I sha'n't be ready for you just am, and by that time you'll be perfeetly free to give them your two weeks' notice. They'll be annoyed, of course; but, after all, you've given door, them more than their money's worth already. Well-will you come if I write?"

"It seems too wonderful to be true," she said. "Yes, I'll come, of course." He gazed at her in a sort of fascination. Her eyes were starry, her lips a little parted, and she was so still she seemed not even to be breathing. But the eyes weren't looking at him. Another vision filled them. The vision-oh, he was sure of it now! of that "only one," whoever he was, 'that mattered."

"I won't keep you any longer," he said. "I'll have them get a taxi and send you home."

She said she didn't want a taxi. He didn't demur to her wish to be put on a car, and at the crossing where they waited for it after an almost silent walk, he did manage to shake hands and tell her she'd hear from him soon.

But he kicked his way to the curb after the car had carried her off, and marched to his hotel in a sort of baffled fury. He didn't know exactly just what it was he'd wanted. But he did know, with a perfectly abysmal conviction, that he was a fool!

CHAPTER XX.

Anticlimax.

It was out of the limbo of the unforeseeable that the blind instrument of Fate appeared to tell Rodney about Rose. He was a country lawyer from down-state, who had been in Chicago three or four days, spending an hour or two of every day in Rodney's office in consultation with him, and, for the rest of the time, dangling about, more or less at a loose end. A belated sense of this struck Rodney at the end of their last consultation.

"I'm sorry I haven't been able to do more," Rodney said-"do anything, really, in the way of showing you a good time. As a matter of fact, I've spent every evening this week here in "Oh, I haven't lacked for entertainment," the man said. "We hayseeds find the city a pretty lively place. I went to see a show just last night called 'The Girl Up-Stairs.' I suppose you've seen it." "No," said Rodney, "I haven't."

"Well, it was downright funny. I haven't laughed so hard in a year. If you want a real good time, you go to

The last part of this conversation took place in the outer office. Rodney saw the man off with a final handshake, closed the door after him, and strolled irresolutely back toward Miss Beach's desk.

It was true, he'd been taking it on rather recklessly during the past two months. But they'd been pretty sterile, those long, solitary evening hours. He'd worked fitfully, grinding away by brute strength for a while. and then, in a frenzy of impatience, thrusting the legal rubbish out of the way and letting the enigma of his great failure usurp his mind and his

"Telephone over to the University club," he said suddenly to Miss Beach, "and see if you can get me a seat for "The Girl Up-Stairs."

The office boy was out on an errand and in his absence the switchboard was in Miss Beach's care. She arose obediently and moved over to the switchboard, then began fumbling with the directory.

"Why, Miss Beach!" said Rodney, You know the number of the University club!"

He was looking at her now with undisguised curiosity. She was neting, for a perfectly infallible machine like Miss Beach, almost queer. Without looking around at him, she said: "Mr. Aldrich, you won't like that show, Ifyou go, you'll be sorry." While he was still staring at her, young Craig came bursting blithely out of his office. "Oh, Miss Beach!" he said, and then stopped short, seeing that something had happened. Rodney tried an experiment.

'Craig." he said, "Miss Beach doesn't want me to see 'The Girl Up-Stairs.' She says I won't like it. Do you agree

A flare of red came into the boy's face, and his jaw dropped. Then, as well as he could, he pulled himself able. With all the money in the world, the act of catching it. He guessed said. "That's what I've felt about you together. "Yes, sir," he said, swung

It was after five, and he decided he

But all his carefully contrived environment hadn't the power, it seemed, to shift the current of his thoughts. They went on dwelling on the behavior of Miss Beach and young Craig, which really got queerer the more one thought about it. . . . He flung down his paper and went into the adjoining room. The large round table nearest the door was preempted by a group of men he knew, and he came up with the intention of costuming end of it, if you succeed, dropping into the one vacant chair. But just before the first of them caught a glimpse of him his ear picked up the phrase "The Girl Upstairs." y-"but don't I have to stay here with then a lawyer in the group looked up and recognized him, "Hello, Aldrich," he said, and the flash of silence that followed had a galvanic yet, anyway," he said. "I'll write when quality. The others began urging him to sit down, but he said he was looking for somebody, and walked away down the room and out the farther

He knew now that he was afraid. Yet the thing he was afraid of refused to come out into the open where he ould see it and know what it was, He still believed that he didn't know what it was when he walked past the framed photographs in the lobby of the theater without looking at them and stopped at the box office to exchange his seat, well down in front, for one near the back of the theater.

But when the sextette made their first entrance upon the stage, he knew that he had known for a good many

He never stirred from his sent during either of the intermissions. But along in the third act he got up and went out.

The knout that flogged his soul had n score of lashes, each with the sting of its own peculiar venom. Everybody who knew him, his closer friends and his casual acquaintances as well, must have known, for weeks, of this disgrace. His friends had been sorry for him, with just a grain of contempt; his acquaintances had grinned over it with just a pleasurable sait of pity. "Do you know Aldrich? Well, his wife's in the chorus at the Globe theater. And he doesn't know it, poor

The northwest wind which had been blowing icily since sundown, had increased in violence to a gale. But he strode out of the lobby and into the street unaware of it.

He found the stage door and pulled it open. An intermittent roar of handclapping, increasing and diminishing with the rapid rise and fall of the curtain, told him that the performance was just over.

A doorman stopped him and asked him what he wanted.

"I want to see Mrs. Aldrich," he said. "Mrs. Rodney Aldrich."

"No such person here," said the man, and Rodney, in his rage, simply assumed that he was lying. It didn't occur to him that Rose would have taken another name. He stood there a moment, debating whether to attempt to force an entrance against the doorman's unmistakable intention to stop him, and decided to wait instead. The decision wasn't due to common sense, but to a wish not to dissipate his rage on people that didn't matter. He wanted it intact for Rose.

He went back to the alley, braced himself in the angle of a brick pier, and waited. He neither stamped his feet nor finited his arms about to drive off the cold. He just stood still with the patience of his immemorial ancestor, waiting, unconscious of the lapse of time, unconscious of the figures that presently began straggling out of the narrow door that were not she.

What do you suppose happens when Rodney meets Rose at the stage door? It is a thrilling meeting they have-and the emotional stress takes them almost to the breaking point. The next installment tells you all about what happened.

Why He Came Home.

Roscoe Boone, a Muncie electrical contractor, went home late the other afternoon to find Mrs. Boone entertaining a company of women at cards He had forgotten about the party and besides it was the usual period of the day for him to remember about the evening meal. "Oh, Mr. Boone," said one of the guests as he stumbled upon the room filled with women, "did you come home to supper?"

"Oh, no; not at all," he replied gallantly, even if somewhat confusedly, "I just came home to see what time it was."-Indianapolis News.

American people are spending more for candy every year, according to figures compiled recently by the census bureau. They spent over $185,000,000 for factory-made sweets last year, which is an average of about $1.80 for every man, woman and child. Figures recorded 65 years ago show that the annual per capita consumption of candy was then about 18 cents.
