He was quick, smart, and in- bacco, ready to be inserted in a nonteresting, end, furthermore, was altogother falthrul. When the Senator left town he provided Sam with a place in the treasury department at $45 a month, easy work, 9 to 4 o'clock. Sam's work consisted targety in putting ice in the water cooler. Having ushered the president, members of the cabinet, and senators to Mr. Hanna's corn-boof hash breakfast table, the boy thought his new duties beneath his dignity, and protested. PUG DOG REPLACES "DA MONK." Brooklyn Organ Grinders' Innovation

Excites Comment. Is the day of the organ grinder's monkey entirely gone? City ordinances, S. P. C. A. Influences and a probable scarcity in the monkey market have combined to do away with the conical little creature, which has proximity to the air ducts. When the always been a children's favorite. The question asked above was suggested by an unusual sight seen on lower Fulton street this morning, says the a slight taper toward the rear end, in Brooklyn-Times. An organ grinder with one of the old-style instruments, which always, in the reporter's boyhood days, not so long gone by, was accompanied by a "monk," passed by on his way to the upper residential districts, Instead of a monkey, however, he had with him a pug dog, which he led by a string. In answer to a question by the reporter the or-

According to cable telegrams Prof. Behring has just printed a book in Berlin proving that the bacilli of human and bovine tuberculosis are identical, the seeming difference between them resulting from the capacity of the bacilli to accommodate themselves to the organism in which they live. He also declares that he has rendered cattle immune to tuberculosis by vaccinating them when they are young. Further reports of these experiments will be anxiously awaited.

Divides the Poultry Roost.

The illustration shows a novelty which will recommend itself to the poultry keeper for two reasons-first, secause it will prevent the fowls from crowding each other off the roosts, and, secondly, owing to the provision it makes for bringing a vermin destroyer within close proximity to the fowl while roosting, without the latter touching it. These devices can be brought into use in connection with the roosting poles already in position in the henhouse, and consequently there is no expense for changing the

Prepares Solid Foundations. It is not entirely new to render loose soil, such as sand and gravel, stable enough for building purposes by impregnating it with thin fluid cement, which binds with the sand and forms a sufficiently hard concrete mass to serve as a foundation; but this process is always dependent upon certain conditions. Thus, for instance, the soil must contain no water, because the water fills out the interstices of the sand and renders the penetration of the cement difficult, and, in addition to this, the water still further dilutes the cement, which is thin fluid already, so that it is impossible for the cement to bind and form a good foundation. apparatus to exhaust the water from the soil simultaneously with the forcing into it of the liquid cement. WORK FOR BEAVERS

PLAN TO UTILIZE THEIR DAMS.

Colorado Game and Fish Commissioner Will Do as Much Work as a Man.

Among the many walting to see F. II. Newell, the chief of the geological survey, who is expected hers this week to look ever the Colorado field with a view to the establishment of national irrigation works, is Charles W. Harris, Colorado game and fish commissioner says the Denver Republican of July 16th. Mr. Harris has a plan which he believes will sprend the benefits of government aid over the entire Rocky mountain region,

"If the government will spend about $1,000,000 a year in the propagation and distribution of beavers, there will be plenty of water in every stream that comes down through the mountain valleys to the plains," said Mr. Harris last night. The beaver is an indefatigable dam builder. With trees and stones and mud he throws a barrier across a stream, which will resist the floods of spring, and all through the summer holds auspended several thousand gal-lons of water. This water is slowly seeping out through the bottom of the stream, under the dam, keeping the flow constant all through the summer. All summer, too, the beaver is at work, making the dam thicker and higher and stronger. Now, if you have 1,000 beavers at work in a stream, building dams, the amount of water which will be stored altogether will be enormous, And in the dry season, all this water goes down the stream. A small trickle may be coming down at the head of a chain of beaver dams, or there may be no water at all, but below the chain of pends you will find a strong flow of "Years ago there were millions of beaver in the mountains of Colorado, and no one ever complained of a shortage of water then, but the value of their pelts doomed them to destruction. There is a sufficient number of the auimals left to form the basis of a com prehensive scheme for replenishing the supply. Let the government start beaver farms, and let it provide also for the protection of the beaver dams and the colonies along the streams, and it need not be long before there are beavers at work in every valley. Many of the mountain valleys, which were once a succession of grassy meadows, made by the beavers, are now dry gorges, and the fertile soil, 'which backed in behind the dam has all been washed away again. To establish a new colony in the new surroundings would require that the beavers be fed "Such carelessness is little short of until they had framed their own envircriminal," thundered Dr. Price-Price, onment, so to speak, and had the roots angrily. "Oh, doctor," sobbed Mrs. Sassietydiet. But if the beavers were propa-Lieder's nurse girl, "do you blame me guted on a beaver farm, they could for the baby's illness?" or potatoes. Human ald might also be extended, to a degree, in the building care of its mother even for a mo This done, the beaver would attend to the rest. "I estimate that each beaver will do as much work in a year as a man could do in building dams and storing water. Now it would not cort more than $2.50 a head to raise the beaver. Their working life is about ten years. So for $2.50 the government can duplicate for ten years the work of a man. They can show no such result from

Mr. Harris is having a large number of photographs taken of the beaver colonies, which still remain in the state, showing how the water supply is conserved, and he is collecting also the testimony of the men living along the streams which were once always flowing, but which have formed the habit of drying up since the beavers were exterminated. He believes he can make a convincing showing, and that his plan, which on the face of it may look chimerical, will in the end appeal strongly to the minds of the government experts.
