They do not see the change." He laughed-you would have sworn it was some merry jibe. "It's funny,

Gregory, isn't it. His companion paused to flick the ash from his clear before replying.

"In a way it's funny, yes," he answered. "There is a comical side to everything, even this. A grim humor, I'll grant, but humor nevertheless. Your wife is dead. You want her back-and God won't let you have her. You've always had your way with your wealth and that magnificent brain of yours, which whisky cannot dull; with your magnetism, your strength and that beauty a god might envy. And now you're thwarted for the first time-that's what hurts you, Edward. You have had all things, always, and now one is taken away. You think your heart is dead, It isn't. It's sound and well and capable of many loves. But a new experience has come into your lifefeat. You will never be quite the same again, for resignation -surrender-works a mighty change in such as you. But the humor of it all lies in your babbling of a broken heart.

Yes, it is funny. The other man sat motionless with the glass still raised. Not a muscle quivered, but his eyes were fixed on the speaker with a strange intensity. "My God!" broke out the one addiessed as Edward, "I wonder if you are right. I wonder why eat here quietly and let you tell me this, it must be true-something within me must have told me that-or I'd have choked the words down your throat." He hesitated a moment, bewildered,

"What can you know of human hearts: of love or grief-you, to whom all men and women are but so much flesh and blood? You analyze them as a chemist divides some substance into elementary parts-or dissect them by a sort of mental surgery. We have always been comrades after a fashion, Gregory, but I never

"Yes, you hid it from us both," said Edward, dimiy, vaguely,-"and I think I understand." He arose and began to pace the room. His face was working now with some unfathomed conflict-the calm was gone. After a time he stopped before the other's chair and regarded him intently.

"I'll have to ten you now," he said, hoarsely, "You have the right to know. You thought that Margaret died of heart disease. All the world thinks so. It does not know the truth-but you shall. Read this."

Gregory took the letter from the other's hand and apread it out before him. He started as the first line met his glance and turned to his companion, "Go on," said Edward, "read through," and Gregory, with a white and silent face, turned to the page again. It ran as follows:

"My Husband-It is not for you or other men to judge me for the deed I am about to do. That is for God, who knows the frailties of women's hearts. Nor is mine the fauit that I have not the strength longer to fight the passion I have hid from you thus far. You are so strong, so independent of a life like mine; you will not miss me as a weaker man might do-nor will you blame me when you know the truth. I am casting away my life. In 1840 154,000 tons of beet root were crushed, from which 8,-000 tons of raw sugar were produced -about 5 1-2 per cent. In 1860 1,500,-000 tons were treated, and produced 128,000 tons of sugar-8 per cent. Last year 12700,000 tons were crushed and yielded 1, 00,000 tons of raw sugar-13 per cent. This increase of quantity, as well as percentage of product is due entirely to scientific treatment. The production of dry colors, chemicals and dyes in Germany shows a corresponding increase in production and dividend-paying capacity, which is due to the constant maintenance of laboratories or trained scientists, whose only purpose is to improve and theapen processes.

By pulling the third lever back against the side of the heel the links are loosened, allowing the hooked rear ends of the clamping levers to release their hold on the opposite side of the heel. The principal advantage of this sandal is that it does not heat the foot as is the case with rubber overshoes, and, as arrangement is made for adjusting the clamps to fit heels of different sizes, the sandal may be worn with shoes of any size.

Odenbach of St. Ignatius' College, in Cleveland, O., has invented an instrument to foretell the coming of distant thunder storms. the British Society of Arts some strik- utilizing the principle at the base of wireless telegraphy. The various parts of science in German factories are of the apparatus are a relay, a sounder, a coherer, a choking coll, two batteries, a recording chronograph and a copper collector on the roof, connected by a copper wire with the observatory. A lightning flash sends out in all directions rays of electro-magnetic waves. These strike the collector and descend through the wire to the primary circuit of the relay. Their way is blocked by the choking coil, and therefore they pass in great part through the coherer. The moment they do so this tube becomes a conductor for the primary current; the relay acts and closes a secondary circuit; the recording magnet moves a pen and makes it record; and at the same time the grounder in the secondary circuit clicks, shakes the coherer, and all is over until a second district flash sendy out a wave to be recorded in the same manner. The first form of the apparatus has been improved by using a in the metropoils. Bacteria in Low Temperatures. The researches of Prot. Dewar at the Royal Institution of London on low temperatures show that all bacteria are not destroyed, even at the lowest, Certain species live when subjected for days together to temperatures as low as 310 degrees F. The phosphorescent organisms cease to be luminous at the temperature of liquid air, but the chemical reactions producing the phosphorescence are only suspended, for the luminosity recurs when the temperature is raised. It cannot longer be assumed, then, that the temperature of space is sufficient to destroy all life, and it is not absurd to suppose that life can be transferred from one planet to another. If the bacteria will only choose cold meteorites they have a chance for life. But they must avoid the red-hot surfaces of such celestial carriers.

Turns Gas on Automatically, In factories and other places where t is desired to turn on gas at given times for heating or lighting purposes it has heretofore been customary for an employe to go around and light the various burners before the working day begins, and where the gas is used for heating purposes, such, for instance, as melting the lead in typesetting and typefounding machines, delays in commencing work were liable to occur through neglecting to light the burners sufficiently early. Oddur Vigfus Sigurddson, a Danish inventor living in London, England, has patented a simple apparatus for automatically turning on the gas at the proper hour, an alarm clock being used to release the weight which opens the valve. As will be seen, the clock carries a lever support, with one end of the lever sustaining a weight and the opposite end confined beneath a hook on a vertical rod. As soon as the alarm mechanism of the clock is put in motion the rod moves sufficiently to release the lever from the hook, when the weight falls to the cushlon in the bottom of the casing, at the same time opening the main valve in the gas supply pipe to allow full force to the heating flame, which has previously been burning slowly, on the Terrific Fight With Raccoon. Charles Marshall and his son Har ley, farmers, living in Springfield township, Ohio, had a terrific battle with a huge raccoon while hunting, and as a result of the encounter Mr. Marshall is confined to bed with a badly lacerated face, throat and body from the 'coon's teeth. It is even doubted if he will recover, as a number of blood vessels were severed. When Marshall chopped down a tree in which the 'coon had taken refuge a hig dog charged on his 'coon ship, but the latter soon got the bet ter of the dog. Marshall rushed in to help the canine, when the animal, known as the swamp raccoon, pounc ed on him and began tearing his head and throat. Harley rushed to aid his father, but the 'coon bit him severely. The 'coon was finally killed. The father fainted from the loss of blood and the son had to procure a team to take him home.-New York Journal.

He Confessed. John H. Fow, ex-state representative, has a story which he tells to the point that there was no excuse for those independent Republicans who returned to the Quay fold; that political conditions are unchanged since last November. This is Fow's story; "A man jumped off a train at a station in the West one day, and asked for a lawyer. A young man stepped up and said, 'I'm a lawys... 'I want the best in the town," we-

plained the stranger. "Well, I'm the one,' persisted the attorney. "'What proof have you?" "'Proof,' shouted the lawyer, 'you

A nervous, irritable mother, often on the verge of hysterics, is unfit to care for children; it ruins a child's disposition and reacts upon herself. The trouble between children and their mothers too often is due to the fact that the mother has some female weakness, and she is entirely unfit to bear the strain upon her nerves that governing a child involves; it is impossible for her to do anything calmiy. She cannot help it, as her condition is due to suffering and shattered nerves caused by some derangement of the uterine system with backache, headache, and all kinds of pain, and she is on the verge children, she may be sure that her condition needs attention, and she cannot do better than to take Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. This medicine will build up her system, strengthen her nerves, and enable her to calmly handle a disobedient child without a scene. The children will soon realize the difference, and seeing their mother quiet,

You have hosts of friends in Chicago, and if you came to visit our city we would delight to do you honor. Gratefully yours,—Mas. Mai Brown, 57 Grant Place, Chicago, Ill.

How Mrs. Pinkham Helped Mrs. McKinny.

"DEAR MRS. PINERAM: — I feel it my duty to write and let you know the good you and your Vegetable Compound are doing. I had been sick ever since my first baby was born, and at the birth of my second, my doctor, as well as myself thought I should never live through it. After that menstruction never came regular, and when it came I suffered terribly. I also had womb and evarian trouble. A friend of my husband's advised him to get Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound for me. At first I had no faith in it, but now nothing could induce me to be without it. Menstruction has become regular, and I feel like a new woman. Your medicine is a God-send to suffering women. I hope this letter will lead others to try Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. Yours truly, Mrs. Miller McKinny, 28 Pearl St., San Francisco, Cal."
