HIS BUSINESS ABILITY

Jack Bemis Knew Something More Than Aviation.

By CLARISSA MACKIE.

"No, Jack," said Mr. Farlane sadly but firmly, "I cannot permit you to marry Dell."

"But, Mr. Farlane," persisted Jack Bemis, quite as firmly, "what's the matter with me?"

"Nothing except your precarious means of livelihood."

"I earned twenty-five thousands last year."

"Yes—but how?"

"In cash prizes for long distance flights and for altitude. You congratulated me at the time, and said you were proud of me, sir."

"Ah, yes, but that was before I knew you wanted to marry my daughter," explained Mr. Farlane with a singular lack of logic.

Jack looked bewildered.

"I mean that an aviator's life is constantly in danger—think of the anxiety suffered by your wife every time you made a flight. If you will choose some other vocation you can ask me again."

"But I might not succeed in doing anything else."

"Then you are not made of the stuff I thought," snapped Mr. Farlane, who was exceedingly nervous over the matter, for he had had just concluded a distressing interview with his beloved daughter on the same subject.

"Thank you," said Jack slowly, as he picked up his hat. "Will you leave the matter open for a while?"

"You may have three months," said Mr. Farlane curtly, and he nodded coolly as Jack said good-by and left the house. "If Dell doesn't change her mind," he called after him with a wicked smile.

"Change her mind!" sniffed Jack scornfully, for only a few hours before Dell Farlane had promised literally to fly with him to the ends of the earth if he needed be.

"What other business could I enter?" he asked himself later in the day when he found time to brood over the matter. "In a place like Wellcot there is no opportunity for competition; every one is satisfied with the merchants and it would cost a mint of money to run any of them out of business—unless—unless" (a satirical gleam came into Jack's eye) "unless I gave my respected father-in-law-to-be a run for his money. The more I think of it there is just one business that appeals to me, and that is to open a small, first-class hotel and garage on that bit of shore front just outside of Wellcot!"

"There I can catch all the east-bound automobile parties and treat them so well that they will quite forget to stop at Mr. Farlane's famous Red Tree Inn. Father-in-law, look out for trouble!"

Mr. Farlane made several trips out to the point to survey the snug little cream brick inn and garage that went up as if by magic. When he heard that Jack Bemis was the owner and promoter of this nefarious scheme against his own prosperous business, he refused the young man admittance to his house.

"But, father, you wanted him to go into some safe business," objected the tearful Dell.

"It was not necessary to become my closest competitor!" declared the outraged hotel proprietor.

"You see, it's a business that does not require much experience—and Jack wanted to make money quick, and so he put everything he had in it. It's safe!"

"Doesn't require experience, eh? The boy's crazy!" Mr. Farlane flew around his library in angry indignation. "Don't I have to go down to my hotel every day to see that it is properly run—eh?"

"Yes, father. But Jack will hire a manager."

"Aha! And what will Mr. Jack do with himself?"

"I don't know. I suppose he might fly as a recreation—it is a gentlemanly sport, isn't it?"

"Of course, of course! Well, I shall never permit my daughter to marry a man that runs me out of business!"

"I'll tell Jack," murmured Dell, but there was a deep dimple in one round cheek.

"Jack, you mustn't run father out of business!" she warned when she met him the next day. "He isn't pleased."

"I wish your father would select some perfectly proper enterprise for me to engage in when I'm on the earth, for of course he cannot expect me to give up flying. You wouldn't would you, dear?"

Dell shook her pretty head. "Of course not! You know how fond I am of going up and how proud I am of you and what you've done for aviation. Father doesn't seem to understand that it's a career and that perhaps you are one of those born pioneers who have to take risks in order that others may fly safely in years to come!"

"Darling!" murmured Jack ardently.

"I'm proud of you!" went on the enthusiastic Dell. "I wish we could fly together—always!"

"If we didn't have to have to have your father's consent"—suggested Jack a little shamefacedly.

"Ah, but we must have that! We would never be happy unless we began right."

"I hope I'm beginning right now," said Jack gloomily.

"Father is rather scared and I never saw him that way before—so I think perhaps you may be on the right track," encouraged Dell.

"Wait until after my grand opening next month and we'll see! He won't love me any better."

"But he might respect your business abilities more!" retorted Dell quickly, "and that seems to be troubling him more than anything else just at present."

"If the Sandy Point Inn falls I'll have to fly and win some more prizes to make good, for I've sunk every dollar in that enterprise," said Jack.

"It will succeed one way or another," predicted Dell.

The opening day came at last and in response to Jack's broad advertising there came a host of pleasure seekers to partake of his hospitality.

To his mingled delight and chagrin the inn was a success from the start.

Farlane's Red Tree Inn, which was situated in the town of Wellcot, suffered heavily through loss of patronage. People much preferred to stop at Sandy Point and lunch or dine on the wide piazzas overlooking the bay, and the absurdly high prices charged by Jack Bemis seemed only to enhance its desirability in the eyes of the money-spending public.

At the end of a month Mr. Farlane sent for Jack Bemis.

"You're running me out of business!" he said fiercely.

"I'm sorry," said Jack. "I didn't know the confounded thing would be so successful. I was only trying to make good on your account."

"Huh!" snorted Mr. Farlane incredulously.

"I hate it!"

"Would rather fly, I suppose?" sneered the elder.

"Of course!"

"Dell says you're a pioneer—I've always thought you were a fool."

Jack laughed. "I must be a pioneer, for have I not started a new hotel where none was before?"

"You have. Want to sell out?"

"What do you mean?"

"I'll put some money in it and run it as an annex to the Red Tree Inn. You can be a stockholder and draw dividends and so forth—and fly if you want to!"

"Fly with Dell, too?" demanded Jack warily.

"Yes, she says she'll marry you anyway."

"It's a bargain, sir! I'm sorry I scared you."

"I wasn't scared, merely startled," retorted Mr. Farlane as he held out his hand to the young man, but their eyes met and into each pair there crept a glint of understanding.

Dell came into the room and saw their clasped hands.

"You dear!" she cried happily and ran to them.

BEST TO RELY ON YOURSELF

Only the Weak Are Constantly Making Confidences, and Little Benefit is Derived.

The men and women who go through life without making confidences are the strong ones of the world. They are their own tribunal; they stand or fall by their own judgments, accept good or evil fortune without inviting congratulation or pity, and deal with circumstances regardless of the praise or blame of others.

A personal confidence nearly always presupposes weakness. It is usually an appeal from one's own mind to the mind of another, either for support, for commendation or for sympathy. The maker, consciously or not, desires one of three things: to be confirmed in his own opinion, to receive the praise which he considers his due, or to make sure that some other realizes what he is called upon to suffer. He is not self-sufficient. He must verify his estimate of himself before he can rest on it.

A confidence also is often the simple result of a very human desire to fill the center of the stage, even though it be only for an hour, and before an audience of one. It is an almost pitiful effort to assert individuality, to rise out of the ranks, to demand attention. It is a weak expression of that nearly universal trait, which, when at its strongest, and combined with genius, gives us a Napoleon.

The person who makes a confidence is almost certainly doomed to disappointment, for the perfectly satisfying confidence requires the perfectly satisfactory confidant, and it is not often, with the best will in the world, that one nature can fully satisfy the demands of another.

It is as though nature meant us to keep our deepest experiences to ourselves, and with great precaution closes the door which she has inadvertently set ajar. Those who are wise accept the isolation which is indicated, and are satisfied to let their deeds alone bear witness to that which is within.—The Housekeeper.

Goat Proved Poor Sailor.

While a man temporarily abandoned his skiff along the banks of the Chester river in Pennsylvania the other day a goat jumped into the craft. The animal chewed the shore line. The skiff swung around in the current and was some distance away when the owner returned. The goat ran from stern to prow and back again until one of its hoofs punctured the craft. The skiff quickly filled with water and sank, taking the goat with it. The goat was drowned.

Be Modest.

Never seem to affect the character in which you wish to shine. Modesty is the only sure bait when you angle for praise. By modesty I do not mean timidity and awkward bashfulness. On the contrary, be inwardly firm and steady, know your own value, but take care to let nobody discover that you know it. Whatever real merit you have, other people will discover and people always magnify their own discoveries, as they lessen those of others.—Lord Chesterfield.

Only Passable.

"Is the soil about this part of the country pretty good?" asked the summer boarder.

"Well, it ain't good enough to raise a mortgage on," replied the farmer, as he opened a case of canned corn.—Judge.

New Deadly Weapon.

A revolver has been built into the handle of a new sabre to enable a man to use either weapon without changing the position of his hand.

CHUTNEY AT ITS BEST

MANY INGREDIENTS GO TO FORM DELICIOUS DISH.

Mixture Really is Largely a Matter of Individual Taste, Though Some Staple Fruits Will Have to Be Included.

Delicious Sweet Chutney—Twelve apples, three bananas, three pears (slightly green), three quinces, twelve tomatoes (more green than ripe), eight small onions, four seeded raisins, one and a half pints vinegar, half a pint water, two cups brown sugar; spice a teaspoon of each, allspice, cloves, ginger, cinnamon, mace or vary the spices to suit the taste. Peel all the fruit and the tomatoes and put all except the bananas through the meat chopper; slice the bananas; add the vinegar, water, sugar and spice. Boil slowly for three or four hours until all are blended, then bottle. It is well to use an asbestos plate under the kettle, as it burns easily. Other fruits, such as peaches and grapes, may also be added. Firm peaches, such as "clings," are best, and grapes would have to be seeded.

English Recipe for Marmalade—Select, if possible, seedless fruit. Two dozen oranges (medium size), a dozen lemons and four grapefruit. Discard the peel from half of the oranges; cut into thin slices the peeled and the unpeeled oranges, also the grapefruit and four of the lemons, peel and all. Measure the fruit, and to each pint of fruit add a generous pint and a half of water. Set aside for 24 hours; then cook in the same water for about an hour, counting from the time it begins to boil. Set aside for another 24 hours; then boil slowly until clear. Measure, and to each quart add two and a quarter pounds of sugar. Bring to a boil and cook rapidly for about 20 minutes, stirring and skimming. Test a few drops on a cold saucer every few minutes; when it shows a tendency to jelly add the juice of the eight remaining lemons; bring to a boil and bottle. This will make firm, clear marmalade.

Candied Orange Peel—For a few days save the peel from the oranges eaten by the family. Cut in narrow strips enough to about half fill a two quart pitcher. Fill the pitcher with cold water to which has been added a teaspoon of salt. Every morning for a week drain off the water and fill with fresh water; after the first two mornings omit the salt. At the end of the week boil three cups of cane sugar with one cup of water until it strings from the spoon, then add the orange peel, already drained, and stir until it begins to sugar; turn immediately onto a large flat dish and leave to cool. It can be kept almost indefinitely in glass jars.

Lamb Fritters.

Chop a cup of cold lamb. Make a batter of one egg well beaten, two-thirds cup of milk, one-fourth teaspoon salt, and one and one-third cups of flour sifted with one rounding teaspoon baking powder. Add the chopped lamb and stir well. Drop from spoon into deep hot lard and fry a nice brown.

Cucumber Pickles.

To one gallon of good cider or white wine vinegar, add one teacup of salt and two-thirds of a teacup of ground mustard; place in a two gallon jar. Every time you gather the cucumbers wash and wipe dry, and drop into vinegar until jar is full. Do not seal ready for use at once; will keep an indefinite time.

Wire Dish Cloth.

Housekeepers have long since learned the value of the wire dish cloth, which is of the greatest help in cleaning pots and pans. A new dish cloth of this sort is mounted on a handle, similar to string dish mops, and so is more convenient to use.

Pumpkin Fritters.

One pint of pumpkin boiled and sifted, one pint of milk, two eggs, one half teaspoon salt, pinch of ginger, one teaspoon molasses, flour to make a batter stiff enough to drop on griddle as for buckwheat.

Tea Cake.

Half cup sugar, one tablespoon butter, one-half teaspoon salt, one egg, one cup sweet milk, two teaspoons baking powder and two and one-half cups of flour. Bake in moderate oven about 30 minutes.

VARIOUS SAUCES FOR FISH

Different Mixtures Are Required for the Different Species That May Be Served.

A hostess home from Spain brought with her a fish sauce which is popular with the Spaniards. Its foundation is a thick French dressing made of one tablespoon of vinegar to eight of oil. It is seasoned with a half teaspoonful of salt, a half teaspoonful of mustard and paprika enough to color.

Into this dressing is mixed the finely chopped whites and yolks—each separately—of three hard-boiled eggs, a dozen chopped olives and half a dozen chopped sweet red peppers.

Mayonnaise served in a small silver or china sauce boat is often passed with fried smelts, halibut, scallops and eels. This may have half dozen sweet pickles chopped in it or a tablespoonful of capers.

Some hostesses serve extra drawn butter in a separate sauce boat, with broiled mackerel or bluefish. This should be highly seasoned with pepper and may be colored with paprika, or should be nicely browned.

A nice sauce for shell fish is made by using the broth that comes from steaming, or a little of the clam broth that is jarred. Fry six small onions in butter, but do not color a deep brown, thicken with a tablespoonful of flour; then reduce to a creamy gray, with the broth. Season well with cayenne and a little salt. Just before serving stir in the yolk of an egg, a sherry glass of white wine, the same amount of cream and some chopped chives or capers.

TO BRAISE A GUINEA HEN

Excellent Dish May Be Made From Fowl if Necessary Time and Care Is Given.

A young, tender guinea fowl is not to be despised. When well selected and cooked, it is not very unlike a partridge. A young fowl can be told by pressing the breast bone at the tip; if it is pliant, the wings very tender, the legs smooth, free from feathers and a pale yellow color, buy it. A young fowl will require about one hour and fifteen minutes for braising—older ones double the time. Dress and truss as chicken. Melt a tablespoonful of butter in the pan; when hot, lay in the guinea, and turn on all sides until lightly browned; add a sliced carrot, small onion, bits of celery, a cup of tomato juice or stock; cover closely and cook very slowly and gently until tender. Salt lightly after it has cooked an hour. A casserole is better than a covered roaster for braising. Serve on a platter, garnished with watercress, the gravy in a sauce boat.—National Food Magazine.

Uses for Parsley.

You can flavor a lot of things with parsley. Cut it up fine and put in soup. It makes a different kind of soup altogether, and I am sure you will be pleased with the result. If you would like a few Swedish dishes in which parsley is used I would like to send them to you. I would like to send you my way of putting up parsley for the winter if you have it in the garden. Don't you ever put parsley in your gravies and stuffing for fowls? I use parsley at nearly every meal, both for cooking and garnishing. Wish you would try some of my Swedish dishes. They are plain but very good.

Drop Dumplings.

To have success in cooking drop dumplings in chicken pot-pie or stews, be sure the gravy is boiling when dropping them in, then cover closely at once and boil—not too hard—for ten or fifteen minutes, according to size. Do not move the kettle during the time. Set off to stop boiling before lifting the lid; serve on a warm platter and avoid piling one on top of another. This has been my experience, says a contributor to the Ladies' World, and I have had many failures before discovering what made my dumplings heavy.

White Mountain Cake.

One scant one-fourth cup of butter, one even cup of sugar. Cream till light and foamy. To two and one-half cups of flour add two level teaspoons baking powder and sift several times. Into the creamed butter and sugar put one-half cup of milk alternately, a little at a time, with the flour. Before putting in the last of the flour stir extra well, put in one teaspoon of vanilla and the stiffly beaten whites of four eggs. Mix as little as possible to stir through. Add the last of the flour. Bake in moderate oven.

Referred to Dr. Wiley.

There was a discussion between a Jersey editor and one of his office loungers as to table likes and dislikes. The question of coffee and how it should be prepared came up for consideration.

"I like my coffee thoroughly boiled and black as your hat," announced the lounge.

"I'm with you when it comes to liking a good strong cup of coffee," said the editor, "but I'll be dogged if I don't have a good creek on the way for the next guy in the city restaurant that puts demitasse in my coffee for me."—Saturday Evening Post.

IDEAS FOR HOME BUILDERS

BY WM. A. RADFORD.

Mr. William A. Radford will answer questions and give advice FREE OF COST on all subjects pertaining to the subject of building, for the readers of this paper. On account of his wide experience as Editor, Author and Manufacturer, he is, without doubt, the highest authority on all these subjects. Address all inquiries to William A. Radford, No. 178 West Jackson boulevard, Chicago, Ill., and only enclose two-cent stamp for reply.

It is sometimes quite a problem to design a house of medium size and moderate cost for a large family. If one is able to put up a residence of unlimited size with wings and eels and third-story additions, at the same time having no thought as to the cost, the task of the architect in providing suitable accommodations for all the members of a large household is comparatively easy. All he has to think of is the architectural effect; and, other things being equal, the larger the house the more beautiful and imposing it is from an architectural standpoint. Unfortunately, however, or rather fortunately, the great majority of home builders in this country have to count the cost and have to figure to get the required accommodations in a residence of medium size and cost.

And it is just this which has brought the science of house planning to such perfection during the past four or five years. Architects have made a special study of the requirements of the small or medium sized residence with the result that today American house planning has reached a degree of perfection never before equaled.

The house illustrated herewith is one of these designs. In size 29 feet 5 inches by 36 feet and costing $3,000 this house gives ample accommodations for a large family. The first floor is very little broken up, most of the space being given to the large living room, 13 by 28 feet; the dining room, 13 by 18 feet, and the large central stair hall connecting these two rooms. Thus more than three-fourths boards, shingles, etc., on all houses built during the past three or four years and has proved entirely satisfactory. When this form of siding was first introduced the claim was made for it that no painting would ever be required over it. Experience has proved otherwise, however, especially in cities where there is a great deal of smoke and dirt cement plaster walls require brightening up with paint the same as any other surface. There are special paints and preparations for this purpose which do double duty in this respect, acting both as a waterproofing coat and as an artistic coloring. Cement plaster does not require painting so often as clapboards it is true. One coat every five years should be enough to keep the building in first class condition in any atmosphere.

As a general thing the cement plaster siding is liked because it gives the impression of permanence and durability at a cost only slightly in excess of that for clapboards. At the same time it affords a slight protection against fire, even though wood lath is used. With metal lath the of the entire downstairs space is available for activities of the home life. The large porch, 26 feet 6 inches by 7 feet, forms a valuable addition also to this space.

The second floor, on the other hand, is divided into five bedrooms, each rather small, yet large enough for all practical purposes. Each bedroom has a clothes closet in connection.

The general design and exterior appearance of this house is of a type which right now is enjoying a great popularity. It is exceedingly simple, being square and plain and without ornamentation, yet the low hip roof, the grouping of the windows, the projecting sill courses and the general proportion of the parts unite to make this a very pleasing design.

Cement plaster on wood lath is the method of construction used for this design. Stucco siding has been used almost to the entire exclusion of clap-

USING MANURE ON DRY FARM

Essential That There Be Sufficient Moisture to Dissolve Out All the Plant Food.

The question whether fresh stable manure should be applied on land where the rainfall is so small as to make "dry farming" necessary cannot be answered unconditionally. One thing is very certain, ordinary stable manure, worked into the top soil, will in a very dry climate, make the land still drier, says the Northwestern Stockman and Farmer. Manure cannot benefit any soil unless there is moisture enough to dissolve out the plant food so that it can be utilized by growing plants of whatever is planted.

To merely spread it on the surface will make it do more to keep the moisture in the soil; but the plant food in manure will have a very poor chance to benefit the growth of any crop unless there is water enough to dissolve out the elements of plant food that will give value to manure. Where the land is under irrigation, however, the crops will get the benefit of all the manure put on the land.

It will be a better plan in using manure on such land to bulk it, and keep it wet by frequent applications of abundant water and forking it over often, till it is wet all through and kept so till it is in a pretty well rotted condition, and then it will be very beneficial, if well mixed with soil. And the working of thoroughly rotted manure into dry soil will help to retain the little moisture that rises from below.

To get the greatest good from the manure, it should be piled up in alternate layers of dirt and manure, kept thoroughly wet, and then mixed well all together and applied to the land. This can be spread on the land and harrowed in well with a disk harrow, and whenever anything is planted the best plan is to run over the land with a land roller that will compact the soil as much as possible. Well-rotted manure is always better than fresh on land that keeps dry most of the time. In a matter of this sort, however, the character of the soil and local conditions must govern to a large extent.

There is considerable difference in both the soil and the climate in the various parts of the country where the rainfall is very small, and every one ought to make some tests for himself to determine just what method is best. But of one thing every one can feel sure; that is, that the plant food in no sort of manure can be very beneficial to growing crops unless there is sufficient moisture to dissolve out the plant food and put it in shape to be assimilated by a growing crop.

But it is safe to adopt, as a rule, not to work into the soil in any dry section any very bulky manure. It will pay to take some trouble to bulk it up, and keep it so wet that it will get pretty well rotted. Even in humid parts of the country light, dry manure does very little good to growing crops, and it is impossible to incorporate into the soil any sort of fresh manure so thoroughly as to make the plant food easy to assimilate.

Farming Requires Brains.

Success in dry farming is not for the shiftless or the indolent. All farming requires brains to make it profitable. It involves hard work and plenty of it. Dry farming is largely a matter of conserving the moisture from year to year. But this does not present insuperable difficulties. By proper management a tilled field can be made a reservoir through the accumulation of moisture beneath the surface.

The moisture which falls as rain or snow must be made to penetrate its surface, and when once imprisoned its escape by evaporation must be prevented. Tillage is the means by which both these objects may be attained—breaking up the soil in the first place by deep plowing in order that the water may sink into it, and stirring the surface so that a mulch of loose powdered earth may keep the channels of evaporation closed.

Mules Naturally Timid.

Mules are timid creatures, possessing a great amount of curiosity in their make-up. They are affectionate, but have a habit unusual in domestic animals, that of resenting injury, and on account of this many become ugly and stubborn. A study of their disposition and a good line of treatment from the beginning will overcome these evil habits. It is much easier to take a mule colt and train it than it is to take an older mule that has been misused and overcome any bad habits or tricks rising from many years of abuse and poor management.

Setting a Hen.

Never set a hen in the hen house. Put her in the runs. Saw a hole in the side of a salt barrel, turn on end and fill half full of straw. When a hen brings off a hatch burn the nest material, scald the barrel and put it in a new place. Don't let hens with chickens run with the breeding stock. Keep the hen house clean. Paint the roosts with coal oil. Spade up the runs once a week and you will have luck with chickens.

SERIAL STORY

THE DIAMOND CIPHER

A BASEBALL ROMANCE

By W. A. PHELON

(Copyright, 1912, by W. G. Chapman.)
(Copyright in Canada and Great Britain.)

SYNOPSIS.

Secret Service Chief Wilkins, puzzled over the theft of the government's cipher, calls to his aid Detective Pinkwell. They think they have discovered a new cipher, when the office boy, Brockett, tells them it's "the Diamond Cipher" and starts for the ball park. Brockett, Chula Lon Kan, a Siamese, Ramon Solano, a Cuban, together with some twenty other youngsters, practice baseball playing until dark. One of Wilkins' stenographers is seen to pass a paper to a mysterious stranger. As outcome of Brockett's cipher, the ball player and Solano are engaged by government for mysterious mission. Yamamoto, mysterious Jap, calls on Brockett. Brockett falls into Yamamoto's trap, a fight follows. Brockett coming out on top. Messinger, McKane coming to the rescue. McKane was bearer of the mysterious cipher; is also a ball player. Yamamoto returns to headquarters and reports to Baron Zellers his failure to obtain the cipher; Miss Lawson, the stenographer, also reports to the baron. Brockett and Solano have encounter with the baron in which the latter comes out second best. Brockett and Solano arrive in Jersey City, make appointment to meet McGinnity, the "Iron Man" baseball manager. Brockett and Solano arrive in New York and run into a Chinese Tong war; rescued by a white man. The place of refuge found to be a trap; find themselves prisoners of Yamamoto. Kelly to rescue. Kelly turns $10,000 Jap money over to Brockett. Brockett and Solano have encounter with tough gang, but are protected by Kelly's men. On sleeper Cleveland-bound; the baron detected in act of rifling Solano's berth, jumps from train. At Detroit the messengers go to ball game, receive hieroglyphs in mysterious manner and depart for Chicago. Arriving in Chicago, the messengers are robbed by a "transom thief"; the baron again appears. The baron agrees to assist in recovering the stolen papers. The messengers find the stolen papers in the possession of a giant negro. After a fierce battle with negroes Brockett and Solano wake up in jail. The messengers and police visit the Tenderloin in search of the stolen property.

CHAPTER XX.

"Dis ain't no joke, no lie at all," went on the well-known voice. "Ah was in heah one night las' wintah, when dehe come an awful scream outside. Kee Lung, de Chinaman, goes to de dooh, an' in falls a niggah woman. She'd seen it. She'd seen a man standin' outside in de yard wivout no haid—just his body all complete up to de neck—a big, upstandin' feller in good clothes, he was. She done let out one yell an' fall agin de dooh. Den dehe was a chicus man, a mighty fine young man he was, too, what goes roun' de country in de summah, graft-in' wiv de big-top shows. He was jest a comin' in heah when he seen de same ting, exactly identical. Dat man mighty nigh tuhned hones' den and dehe, so he did."

"Don' yo' spouse, Sam," quavered a voice from an adjacent bunk, "as how all dis was a joke? Summun might have been foolin' an' projekkin' roun' jest to scahe folks silly, don' yo' think?"

"No, indeedy," answered the voice of big Sam. "Dehe was no joke 'bout dis at all. Yo' jest ax Kee Lung.

HE STROVE FRANTICALLY TO DRAG THE GIANT DOWN.

One time when dat hailess ghos' dome frighten de livin' soul outen some peop' comin' in heah, Kee Lung runs out wiv a lamp an' a smok'wagon. He seen de same ting—de hailess man—stannin' right to de side de doohway. Kee Lung frow a fit an' bus' de lamp all oveh hisseff tryin' to get back inside."

"Madre de Dios," came a new and trembling tone from the same bunk whence the voice of the negro had just issued, "I am ver' sorry I mek entrance here. I care not, not me, to see ghosts. Ay de mi—I haf de good reason!"

The air thickened again with the smoke of opium, and the voices died down to soft, uncertain whispers. Brockett wriggled from the bunk, and Solano was just extricating himself from the narrow limits of the smoking-den, when there came the sound of a sudden struggle only a few feet away. Thumping blows, hoarse cries of surprise and rage, and the cracking of the woodwork under agitated feet and hands made up a startling mixture of noises. Heads protruded from the half dozen bunks around the room; the Chinaman and the mulatto woman, rising from their chairs, came hurrying toward the scene of trouble—and then the curtains of one bunk were violently burst asunder. A writhing, fighting heap fell heavily to the floor, and a huge black man, extricating himself with a great heave of knees and shoulders, rose up gigantic in the smoky room. Round his knees clung a smaller man, striving frantically to drag the giant down. Big Sam, with a beastlike snarl, drove his massive fist upon the head of the clinging enemy, but did not break him from his hold. The smaller man tugged madly; big Sam, caught off balance, fell like a severed tree, and before he could rise something flashed in the blue murk of the room. Big Sam, with a hoarse gurgle, straightened out upon the floor. The little man sprang up, a knife in his blood-spattered hand, and reached quickly into the clothing of his victim. As he fumbled in the negro's pockets, the Chinaman struck him with a billet of wood, and the mulatto woman caught his knife-hand. The three dusky fighters rolled and grappled, upsetting the miserable furniture of the room, while another hideous uproar began outside the threshold, and a scream of "The ghost! The ghost!" mingled with insistent beatings on the panels.

Stepping clear as best he could

from the struggle on the floor, Solano tore away the bolt. A man and woman, white-faced, shrieking, stumbled into the room—and at their heels came Flynn and Hogan, large, convincing pistols ready in their hands. Flynn shot his fist against the ear of the Chinaman, while Hogan, in most unchivalric fashion, applied the gun-butt to the head of the mulatto woman. The writhing knot upon the floor resolved itself into its proper factors, and the little man whose knife had been driven into the body of big Sam rose, gaspingly. He drew his hand across his eyes to clear his brain and get his bearings—and then his gaze fell upon the face of young Brockett, not six feet away. Another frightful yell rang out, and, staggering straight at the man he thought he slew two nights before, the Filipino, Agular, fell shrieking to the ground.

"Seems to be quite a collection of choice ghosts around here, me lads," remarked Officer Hogan, while his partner was giving such aid as he could to the bleeding negro. "This little brown party seems to take ye for wan, an' it's meself as made a fine spook by the dooh. Flynn an' me was standin' in th' shadows, waitin' for youse two to give the signal, when we see these two well-dressed people comin' to th' dooh. As luck wud have it, I had taken off me hat an' was rubbin' me forehead with a handkerchief, when they chanced to spy me. Forthwith they tuk me for the ghost that loafs be night around these premises—the ghost as a gent without a head. All they cud see, I'm supposin', was me many frame up to the neck, an' they certainly wint nutty with th' horror av it. 'The ghost, the ghost!' they begin to yell an' beat upon the dooh. Ye opened it—an' we got in just in time to have a hand in an elegant little battle. It's glad I am I was a ghost, for this felly might have put up some argyment if he'd had his proper senses."

Hogan, as he spoke, snapped handcuffs on the well-dressed man who had come stumbling in when the door sprang open. The prisoner was still all unnerved, and offered no objection, while the woman who had entered with him cowered in a corner, also utterly overcome.

"A good catch this," exulted Officer

Hogan. "The man is Jerry Killien, wanted for half a dozen clever con-jobs, an' the woman is Bessie Donovan, a lovely little bit-av a panel-worker. I knew that Jerry smoked, but never knew this was where he came to do it. Cheer up, Jerry, old scout—I was the ghost. No other will harm ye."

Flynn looked up from the prostrate negro. "The black boy isn't so badly stuck," said he. "Give him a little care an' he'll be fit as a fiddle in a week or so. How about the little brown wan? It was the brown wan that stuck the black wan, wasn't it, boys?"

Agular was still unconscious. He tossed and moaned upon the floor, and Flynn, after satisfying himself that the Filipino was unharmed save from fright and a few blows on the head, tied him up with strips torn from the sheets of a bunk Hogan, bending over big Sam, drew from his pockets a bunch of miscellaneous trinkets, police slips and some crumpled currency.

"No sign av your belt here, lads," he announced, disappointedly.

"Look in the brown wan's pockets," suggested Flynn, and Brockett, thrusting eager hands into Agular's apparel, gave a shout of sheer delight as his fingers closed upon the well-remembered leather. Out came the belt and the boys, with shaking hands, opened its compartments.

"Everything present for duty, lads?" questioned Officer Hogan.

"Everything except about $200 of my money," replied the joyous Brockett. "The big fellow probably spent that celebratin'. I think I understand now just how a man feels when he has been pardoned on the morning of his hanging."

"I'm dommed glad," heartily spoke Officer Hogan, while both policemen wrung the youngsters' hands. "We've all done well this night, an' if we were drinkin' men it's sure some blowout we'd have for the occasion. What's that, me boy? Money? Ah, put it back. Put it back. The prizes we have gobbled this night are worth more to us than all the money ye could hand us, an' we were lookin' for no graft on this particular evenin'."

CHAPTER XXI.

The missing property safe in the hands of its rightful custodians—through sheer good fortune, not through skill or Sherlock Holmes sagacity—and only a limited space of time remaining for the journey to the Rio Grande, it was only natural that the young messengers should wish to hurry on their road. They did not interrogate either the wounded negro or the captive Filipino, much as they would have desired to do so, for neither was in condition to stand an interview. They did manage, however, to get this information, through the good offices of Flynn: that it was not the Filipino from whom the giant African had wrested the belt in the corridor of the hotel. How big Sam had fallen in with Agular, how the islander probed the secret of the negro's sudden affluence, and how he also learned of the more valuable contents of the belt—these were mysteries reserved for later solution. The boys were glad enough, under present circumstances, to regain their property and be on their way.

They were standing near the sergeant's desk in the police station on the following morning, bidding good-bys to the big officers who had done so much to aid them, when a little bunch of "harness bulls" came in, hustling a clump of intoxicated prisoners to the cells below. Two or three of the captives could hardly keep their feet; the group swayed and weaved from side to side like some huge, broken-legged animal, and the boys were almost trampled under the uncertain feet of the drunks and their guardians. As they broke ground to get free from the crowd, Brockett thought a hand sought his pocket, and, warned by the painful memory of recent happenings, snatched quickly at it. He caught nothing. Hurdled thrusting his hand into his pocket, he brought up a scrap of paper, dingy and thumb-marked, but criss-crossed with the sign of a familiar code.

Stepping over to the window he read, scrawled upon the dirty paper, these hieroglyphs:

"L TC A SH FA SH TC FA PO SH
SBH Pos T SH A TC W SH PO Lin R
BA TO SBH Pos E L SH E L SH.
R TC E TO KRE E Fin SH TC E W TC
Fin TO SH TO HR PO PO SB Fin W
TO SBH SH W HR E L TO W Fin R
TO HR TC E L."

"Some people have more luck than sense. Continue on route till further instructions," Brockett translated.

The adventures which had their climax in the opium joint gave Brockett and Solano plenty of material for discussion as they rolled out on a southwestern train. This time the messengers made no attempt to disguise their course, but went straight to the station, bought their tickets and climbed aboard. Instead of purchasing the red or yellow slips which license you to toss about in the berths of the Pullman, however, they decided to stay in the seats of the day-coach and get what sleep they could, while alternate three-hour watches were agreed on as the best way of fending off any possible trouble. "The man who really wants to get you," remarked Solano, sagely, "has a much better chance in a Pullman than in an ordinary day-coach, and you take ten times as many risks for your extra money."

Before beginning the night watches the youngsters traversed the whole train, passing through the sleepers on their way to the dining car, and satisfied themselves that none of their enemies had started on the same journey. No German nobleman, big, gruff, and devoted to his kaiser; no cat-like Japanese, no slinking Filipinos, were to be seen from smoker to diner, and, as none of the berths were made up early, there was no possibility of a concealed antagonist crouching behind the green curtains. After supper they returned to their red-plush perches, and spent three hours discussing the happenings at Chicago, or the adventures yet to come.

Solano fished from some inner pocket a tiny Anglo-Spanish text-book, and urged its importance upon his companion. "You may need to know a few words of the language before very long," he insisted, "and now is as good a time to begin learning as any."

"Why not let me carry the book?" responded Brockett. "Then, if a Mexican starts any conversation, I can simply dig up the book and read him the proper answer."

"Good idea," assented Solano, "except in emergency cases. Suppose a large, thick revolutionist, of the bone-head variety, asks you to give a quick account of yourself, and has a rifle pointed at you while he is asking? And suppose, also, that he gives you, in Spanish, a time limit of two minutes to make good? Are you going to resurrect the book, begin with the sentence, 'The dog of my uncle has bitten the left leg of the cow belonging to my father,' and go down the pages till you find the proper sentence for the exigency?"

Brockett chortled, to the intense annoyance of an elderly lady across the aisle, and seized the book. He immersed himself in its pages till ten o'clock, when it was time for the first watch to begin—a duty which had fallen to Brockett by the flipping of a penny. Closing the book, he leaned back against the plush, resolved to keep his eyes open and give Solano a fair chance for his three-hour nap—and discovered, as he gazed on his companion, that the Cuban had stolen an indefinite space of time upon him and was already sound asleep.

Nothing happened to disturb the travelers through the night, but the alternation of three-hour periods left them in a more or less drowsy, half-dazed condition when morning came. The train was bowling along through the half-fenced, half-cultivated fields of Arkansas; Solano was nodding in his seat, and Brockett was trying to absorb some more of the Anglo-Spanish sentences, when a slowing up, a hissing of slackened steam and a jarring stop announced arrival in the town of Little Rock. Gazing from the windows the boys were finding considerable amusement in the signs which Wireless to Synchronize Clocks.

All public clocks in the German empire will hereafter be synchronized by means of wireless telegraphy. A master clock in a new station now being constructed at the town of Fulda will actuate the radiotransmitter every minute. The tower over the station will be 300 feet high. A census recently taken of the public clocks in London shows the importance of such a project, because a total variation was found of twenty-one minutes, from slow to fast. Only 2 1/2 per cent of the timepieces gave the correct Greenwich time.

Difficulties of Reform.

"Reform," remarked Farmer Corn-tassel, "is something that has to be approached with great caution and perspicacity." "Yet you must admit that we need reform." "Yes. But it does that colt. Only every time I start to reform him he lames by breaking the spring wagon and gives the whole family nervous prostration."

Joy in Serving.

One has made a genuine discovery when one has grasped the fact that joy is a thing that is fast linked to service. Then one will cease indulging in idle, feverish dreams of millions and prominence. For the man who is not somehow serving humanity invariably gets a dark brown taste in his soul.

SOME PEOPLE HAVE MORE LUCK THAN SENSE. CONTINUE ON WAY UNTIL FURTHER INSTRUCTIONS.

told of racial segregation—such placards, for example, as those upon a restaurant, "White Side," "Colored Side," and other marks of sharp-distinction, when half a dozen long, lean, clay-colored Arkansans came tramping down the aisle.

The conductor preceded the group of Little Rock citizens, led them straight to the double seat where Brockett and Solano were reposing, and halted abruptly.

"These young men," said he, "are the only ones aboard who answer the description. Go ahead and make your own inquiries, sheriff—that's all I can do for you."

"You two boys," said the leader of the Arkansans, impressively, "had better speak right out and tell me the truth, now, and nothing else. Your names are Harry Brockett and Ramon Solano, ain't they?"

"Not exactly," parried Brockett. "My name is Thomas Jackson and my friend's name is Henry Hawkins."

"I don't believe you, young feller," dissented the sheriff, sternly. "There's nobody else on this train answers the description I've got here, and, furthermore—" with one quick clutch he twined his fingers in Brockett's collar, unbuttoned it, and jerked it from the shirt—"furthermore, boy, the laundry initials in this here collar is H. B. Reckon you're the parties, all O. K. Come with me quietly—it'll be easier for you if you do."

"What's it all about? What's this foolishness mean, anyhow?" demanded Solano.

"Oh, nothing. Nothing at all," laughed the sheriff, his stern features relaxing. "Only a wire from the proper authorities in Chicago to arrest and hold you two boys on complaint of some German feller—Baron Zellers, that's the name. Charge, stealing valuable papers. Will you come over to the lockup nice and quiet, boys, or must we carry you?"

Eat With Your Fingers

Devour your food "like a lion" and you banish indigestion. This advice, which controverts the well-known maxim of "eat your food slowly," is the considered opinion of three doctors as the best cure for inability to eat a square meal.

Such an unorthodox mode of dealing with dyspepsia was first suggested by a doctor in a spirit of frolic, but on talking the matter over with a Harley street specialist, and also with a family doctor with a large London practice, it was found that doctors scout the suggestion that there is anything funny in it at all.

"It is the most extraordinary thing," the specialist said, "but I find that the patient who is allowed to eat chicken by picking it up with his fingers is the far better able to digest his food than is the invalid who is worried by a knife and fork.

"A great deal of decorous formality in eating makes for bad digestion. Eat with fingers like a healthy savage and you will digest your food like the savage—at any rate, for a time, until the novelty has worn off."

"Probably after the novelty wears off the good effect will not be so marked, but to return to dainty feeding would then have the same effect as the other method had."

"The more like an animal you eat the more like an animal will your alimentary system behave itself and the better it will be for your general health."

"If a man takes his meat in his fingers he can pick it with more relish," the other doctor said. "Children, whose instincts are often very sound, love to eat their food held in their fingers, and they are right."

Deafness Cannot Be Cured

by local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed, deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; this case out of us are caused by Catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surface. We will give One Hundred Dollars for any case of Deafness (caused by catarrh) that cannot be cured by HALL'S CATARRH CURE. Send for circulars, free.

THE CHILDREN'S HEALTH

In observing the physical characteristics of her children, the careful mother soon learns that health is dependent on the regularity of the bowels. When the bowels become clogged with the stomach's refuse, loss of appetite, restlessness, irritability, and similar evidences of disorder are soon apparent. Keep the bowels regular and a healthy, happy child is assured.

At the first sign of constipation the mother should administer a mild laxative to carry off the congested waste from the stomach that is fermenting and forcing poisonous gases into the system. A simple compound of laxative herbs with pepsin is highly recommended as being very mild, yet positive, in its action, a teaspoonful at bedtime usually serving to bring an easy, thorough, natural movement next morning. This compound is known as Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin and is sold by druggists everywhere for 50c a bottle. A larger bottle, put up especially for the family medicine chest, costs one dollar.

The use of salts and violent purgatives and cathartics should be avoided. They are too harsh and drastic, tending to upset the entire system. Write to Dr. W. B. Caldwell, 203 West St., Monticello, Ill., for a trial bottle of his Syrup Pepsin, if you have never used it. He will be glad to send it without any expense to you. Adv.

WHY THE FIFTH MAN LEFT

He Wore a Wig and the Other Four Men at the Table Were Bald—and Talkative.

In the smoking room of a west-bound ocean liner two days out from an English port five men sat at a "small game" of poker. When the chips had been cashed in the men retained their places, and presently one of the party said: "That is funny; four bald heads out of a possible five," and then there was a discussion as to the causes of baldness, in which all took part except the unaffected man, who was a good listener for a while. He then bade the others good night. When he had gone the youngest of the group, who was less bald than the others, said: "Do you know why Mr. Blank made the getaway? He wears a wig, and is probably as bald as any of us." And for the rest of the journey Mr. Blank's head was the object of study—at a distance—for he never again appeared in the smoking room.

He Knew.

"Where there's a will there's a way," avers Taylor Holmes, appearing in The Million. "The way, however, varies, as in the case of a certain pickpocket, who was convicted and promptly fined.

"The lawyer of the pickpocket took the fine imposed upon his client very much to heart.

"Twenty-five dollars!" he expostulated. "Your honor, where is this poor, unfortunate man to get $25?"

"His honor did not know, or if he did he refrained from saying so, but the prisoner was less discreet.

"Just let me out of here for ten or fifteen minutes," he said, "and I'll show you!"—Young's Magazine.

Joke on His Clerical Brother.

Two brothers named Chalmers, one a minister and the other a physician, lived together in a western town. One day a man called at the house and asked for Mr. Chalmers. The physician, who answered the door, replied: "I am he."

"You've changed considerably since I last heard you preach," said the man, who appeared greatly astonished.

"Oh, it's my brother you want to see; he preaches and I practice."

60 YEARS THE LEADER

LADIES' FANCIES OF FASHION

WINTER WRAP DESIGNS

SIMPLICITY NOT A FEATURE OF THE NEW STYLES.

Prominent Idea is the Large Collars, Meant to Be Rolled Up About the Ears in Extreme Cold Weather.

The new wraps, designed for the coming winter, are long, loose, roomy affairs, whether they are to be used for general utility or for dressy wear. With all their apparent simplicity, they are carefully cut, and, in fact, anything but simple.

Heavy clothes, for ordinary wear, are used in the coats designed for comfort. Collars are large and arranged to roll up about the neck when needed. The two-faced fabrics will be popular again, providing reversible garments in some instances. A gray coat, having a reverse side in amethyst color may be worn either side out. Dark blue or black with reverse side in heather color is another chic combination. For street wear the sober colors are chosen; for the auto ride, and for many other occasions the brighter colors provide a better choice. These heavy coats are as warm, almost, as fur, and have certain advantages over these luxurious garments.

Evening wraps and those designed with an eye to grace and beauty, are much draped. The kimono coat holds its own along with the new wraps of satin and velvet. The combination of rich embroideries with dark solid color fabrics must be conceded to be most beautiful. Wraps of black satin lined with the same or contrasting colors, are draped much in the manner of the new skirts, and when fastened, display their lines to the best advantage, unfolding the figure gracefully.

Many brocaded linings are to be used. Royal blue with glints of bright gold, shades of copper and brown, rich purples and exquisite gray and white are alluring splendors in these fabrics. When considering garments of velvet, satin, etc., lined with brocades, it must be borne in mind that they are for grown-ups, for matrons, and not for the young maid. There is nothing about them to suggest girlhood. Slumper clothes, or at least those that seem simpler, belong properly to the merry maid, before she takes on the dignity of the matron.

LITTLE NEW IN LINE OF FUR

Chinchilla Squirrel the Only Novelty Worth Mention, and It Promises to Be Popular.

It may seem a trifle premature to talk about furs; but, although the weather is still quite summery, the large shops already have begun to display fur garments of every description, suitable for the chilly days of late fall and even for the regular winter season.

So far as can be judged at this time, there will be little new in the fur line during the coming season. Of novelty furs there is so far but a single achievement which deserves mention, the chinchilla squirrel. This is a gray squirrel so treated and tipped that it has the softness and much of the silvery coloring of chinchilla. It seems safe to predict that it will become quite popular.

The French designers of small furs have sent over charming sets in this fur, combined with gray silk or velvet or used alone, and it is also being used on coats and frocks, though it is not cheap enough to be used lavishly by the crowd or to be readily commoed.

HANDSOME ORNAMENT.

BABIES TO DRESS IN STYLE

Pannier Skirts and Hats With Ostrich Feathers Are the Fashion for Infants.

Baby's clothes are just as elaborate, just as much decorated and as carefully finished with regard to style as are mother's this year, and are also very expensive.

There are little velvet coats, with hats or bonnets to match. There also are combinations of mufflers, scarfs and hats to match.

There are diminutive chinchilla coats just like the larger ones for mother. And there are wee dresses which have a decided pannier effect. The showing in baby hats is almost as large in some stores as the regular millinery department.

The little hats are decorated with ostrich feathers, lace and other accessories which heretofore have been left to older styles.

Echoes of Fashion.

Many of the newest coat models in black taffeta and satin are cut away sharply from the bust into a long pointed tail at the back.

Nearly all thin or transparent fabrics are made with a slightly bouffant over-skirt suggestive of the pannier, but for those figures which cannot stand this arrangement around the hips there is the tunic, which though falling almost plain from the waist, is cut with a rounded edge just above the knees, slightly gathered into a lace insertion or trimming, and edged with silk fringe a few inches in depth. This gives the pannier effect, yet keeps the fullness away from the hips.

The Chiffon Pannier.

The chiffon pannier has certainly come to stay. By choosing a delicate contrasting color to the charmeuse which forms the frock, it can be made to give a delightful and unexpected effect.

In one importation is seen a pannier of pale primrose chiffon mounted on a skirt of pale blue charmeuse. This is draped at the back. The chiffon forms the upper part of the tunic, and the lace, which is inserted down the front, is finished with a row of tiny blue silk bows the color of the charmeuse.

A pannier of this type is nothing but a somewhat full tunic caught up underneath instead of being hemmed.

Bag for Shoes.

A woman who is hard on her silk stockings has learned to utilize the tops for bags for her shoes and slippers. When the runs and holes get undarnable the tops of the stockings are cut off midway of the leg and the lower edge sewed across in a French seam.

A shoe is kept in each of these stocking bags, which take up no room, cost nothing and act as an absorbent of dust. Sometimes the kind of shoes is outlined on the hem to make them more easily distinguishable.

Constipation and Catarrh

S. B. HARTMAN, M. D.

You are constipated. You have taken laxatives a great many years. You have tried to select a diet that would keep your bowels regular. In this you have failed and were obliged to go back to your laxatives again. This, I say, has been going on many years.

You also have a slight catarrh in the head and throat. You never imagined that the catarrh had anything to do with the constipation. Suppose I were to tell you that as long as you have that catarrh you will never get better of your constipation. Would you believe me? Well, whether you would believe me or not it is the truth.

For many years I have been wrestling with the problem of furnishing the public an internal catarrh remedy. Peruna has been the remedy that I have devised and it has certainly relieved many thousand people, yes hundreds of thousands of people, of chronic catarrh.

Constipation was my chief difficulty in treating these cases. I often felt that it would be better if a laxative element were added to Peruna. I feared to do so, however, first because of the number of catarrhal patients who needed no laxative, and second I was afraid of making such a radical change in a remedy that was already doing so well. This it was that I continued to prescribe with the Peruna a bottle of Manala to those who needed a laxative. At last, under circumstances explained in my booklet, I was constrained to add the laxative element to Peruna. This constitutes what is now known as the revised Peruna.

Now those who take Peruna will, first, find themselves promptly relieved of their constipation. Second, the catarrh will gradually disappear. And once the catarrh is cured the constipation leaves permanently. Then if you follow the advice given in my book, you will never have to take pills any more. Cathartics and laxatives you can ignore. You will be permanently relieved of both your catarrh and the constipation.

Peruna, Man-a-lin and La-cu-plia manufactured by the Peruna Company, Columbus, Ohio. Sold at all drug stores.

SPECIAL NOTICE.—Many persons inquire for The Old-time Peruna. They want the Peruna that their Fathers and Mothers used to take. The old Peruna is now called Katarra. If your druggist or dealer does not keep it for sale write the Katarra Company, Columbus, Ohio, and they will tell you all about it.

IT'S THE FOOD.

The True Way to Correct Nervous Troubles.

Nervous troubles are more often caused by improper food and indigestion than most people imagine. Even doctors sometimes overlook this fact. A man says:

"Until two years ago waffles and butter with neat and gravy were the main features of my breakfast. Finally dyspepsia came on and I found myself in a bad condition, worse in the morning than any other time. I would have a full, sick feeling in my stomach, with pains in my heart, sides and head.

"At times I would have no appetite, for days, then I would feel ravenous, never satisfied when I did eat and so nervous I felt like shrieking at the top of my voice. I lost flesh badly and hardly knew which way to turn until one day I bought a box of Grape-Nuts food to see if I could eat that. I tried it without telling the doctor, and liked it fine; made me feel as if I had something to eat that was satisfying and still I didn't have that heaviness that I had felt after eating any other food.

"I hadn't drank any coffee then in five weeks. I kept on with the Grape-Nuts and in a month and a half I had gained 15 pounds, could eat almost anything I wanted, didn't feel badly after eating and my nervousness was all gone. It's a pleasure to be well again."

REBELS ACTIVE ALONG BORDER

UNITED STATES TROOPS SENT TO SANDERSON, TEXAS TO PROTECT TOWN.

FROM MARAUDING MEXICAN INSURRECTOS

Many Americans in Mexico in Peril—Salazar Again at Head of Rebels Who Are Destroying Property in Mormon Colony.

Washington, Oct. 8.—Renewed activity of Mexican rebels on the Texas border was reported to the war department today by General Steever, who said he had advised that a rebel band was near Sanderson, Texas. He has dispatched a troop from Fort Clark to protect the Texas town and its inhabitants.

General Steever also reported that the rebels defeated the federal forces at Ascension, in northwestern Chihuahua, and had taken the town.

Reports of wanton destruction of property in the Mormon colony are confirmed and large numbers of other Americans in Michoacan are said to be in danger from rebel bands.

El Paso, Texas, Oct. 8.—Inex Salazar has re-entered Mexico and is leading 600 rebels in the Casas Grandes district, according to letters shown today by rebel representatives here.

It is explained that since the failure of the campaign in Sonora, resulting in the arrest in the United States of nearly all the rebel chiefs who had broken with Orozco and entered the western border state, Salazar decided to return to the Orozco fold. For this reason he visited Los Angeles and after denouncing the party of Vasquez Gomez, he returned to Mexico as an Orozco revolutionist.

Juarez, Mex., Oct. 8.—Fighting has occurred at many different points in the Casas Grandes district, southwest of this point, according to American travelers arriving here today. Rebels were repulsed in an attack on Old Casas Grandes. Rebels took the towns of Ascension and Janos after sharp fighting, but were defeated by federals in a battle on the William Randolph Hearst ranch, southwest of Casas Grandes. It is reported that John Hayes, manager of the Hearst ranch and a native of California, was killed. American refugees coming from the district report that federals remain in the towns while the rebels roam at large over the ranches and mining properties.

FOUR MORE AMERICANS ARE KILLED BY REBELS

In Fight, Seditious Forces Are Forced to Evacuate and Fifty Are Killed.

San Juan, Del Sur, Nicaragua, Oct. 8.—The American forces lost two marines and two bluejackets, killed in the attack on Leon and Chinandega, which were occupied by rebels. Fifty rebels were killed and many wounded. The others have been disarmed.

Chinandega is the capital of the department of the same name, lying about 24 miles southwest of Leon. Both towns have been in the hands of the insurgents for weeks and the residents of both places have suffered much distress.

According to the advices received here, a large detachment of marines and bluejackets under Lieutenant Colonel Long proceeded from Corinto to Three Points on the National railroad, Chinandega to the northwest, Leon to the southeast and Chichigalpa, almost midway between. Chichigalpa was the scene of an engagement Friday, while the rebels were forced to evacuate the two other towns the following day. Details are lacking.

In a gallant assault last Saturday American marines and bluejackets drove the Nicaraguan revolutionary leader, General Zeledon, and his forces, from Coyotepe and Barranch's Hills, near Masaya, after 37 minutes of fighting, but in the action four privates of the United States marine corps were killed and a number were wounded.

Ex-Senator Peffer Dead.

Topeka, Kan., Oct. 8.—William Peffer, former United States senator from Kansas, and a man well known in this state, died last night. A complication of troubles and old age caused his death. He was recovering from a stroke of apoplexy and the amputation of a leg in a Topeka hospital recently. Nearly 50 years ago Senator Peffer moved to Kansas and established the Fredonia Journal. Since that time he has been active in politics, in newspaper work, and has written several well known books and poems. He was 81 years old at the time of his death.

WAS FEELING WRONG BUMP

Sagacious Phrenologist Mistaken in His Conclusions, as it Turned Out.

The learned professor was giving his public lecture on phrenology, and for purposes of demonstration he invited a boy to the platform, says the New York American. After a critical examination of the lad's cranium, he turned to the audience:

"Ladies and gentlemen," he said, "the protuberance on this little boy's head is remarkably well developed. It is the bump of philoprogenitiveness. In the present case it proves that the boy has an extraordinary love for his parents. (Addressing the boy:) isn't that true, Johnny?"

Johnny hesitated a moment, then said:

"Well, I get along pretty well with the old lady, but the old man ain't such a much."

"Why, how is that, my boy?" asked the professor.

"Well, if yuh want me ter let it out, the bump yer blowin' about is where pop hit me yesterday wif a belt buckle."

In a boarding house for bachelors, Amanda, typical "Mammy," looked after the guests' comfort in true southern style so well that one of the men thought he would take her away with him in the summer in the capacity of housekeeper. Toward spring he waylaid her in the hall one day and said: "Mandy, do you like the country?" Mandy reckoned she did. "Would you like to go away with me this summer and keep house for me?"

Mandy was sure she would. "Suppose I get just a bungalow. Do you think you could take care of it nicely by yourself?"

"Deed, no, massa! Reckon you all better get somebody else; I don't know nothin' about taking care of any animals!"—Harper's Magazine.

Vegetable Fiber for Shoes.

A Haverhill (Mass.) shoeman has obtained patents giving him the right to make vamps and tops of vegetable fiber which he has invented and perfected to be used in the manufacture of shoes. A few cases of shoes have been made of this material, which appears to be a good substitute for leather. The fiber is said to be particularly adaptable for warm weather wear because, being of a woven material, air can penetrate the vamp and top. The inventor also claims that a shoe made of this material is waterproof.

Business for Father.

The small daughter of a practicing physician, who evidently has an eye to business, told her mother, in no uncertain terms, that she must call at once on their new neighbor.

"And why must I call on her?" asked the mother, amused at the child's positiveness.

"Well, in the first place," explained the little lady, "they've got three of the scrannellest kids, and the mother herself don't look very strong."

WOMEN AS NATURAL ENEMIES

Writer Advances Some Good Reasons Why This Unfortunate Condition Must Exist.

"The average woman now begins that study of society which will merge ultimately with the marriage campaign. She makes many discoveries which she admits frankly to herself. She comes to many conclusions," says Inez Haynes Gilmore in Harper's Bazar, "which sink unnoticed into her subconscious mind. If marriage, for instance, is her natural career, then men are her natural prey.

"But unfortunately there are never enough men in her world to go round; and of those from whom she may hope to choose some are much more desirable than others. Naturally she prefers the desirable ones—i. e., the 'eligibles.' But—and here she runs against her first obstacle—every other single woman in her circle has come to the same conclusion. From the instant she realizes this she must declare war on every other member of her sex.

"Men must often wonder at that minute and merciless examination to which, on a first meeting, every woman submits every other woman. Men must often marvel at the power of quick observation which women always develop in these circumstances. This is only the swift interrogation with which a warrior surveys the arms of his opponent. Women are forever discovering new and complex weapons in the possession of rivals. And, perhaps, the most terrifying element in the situation is psychological—her sense of bafflement, in that she cannot judge of women for men any more than they can judge of men for her. Every other woman becomes her enemy. To succeed in her world she must play a lone hand and a cut-throat game."

BREAKING OUT ON LEG

Hilltop, Kan.—"About two years ago I began to notice a breaking out on my leg. At first it was very small but soon it began to spread until it formed large blotches. The itching was terrible and almost constant. Many nights I could not sleep at all. After scratching it to relieve the itching it would burn so dreadfully that I thought I could not stand it. For nearly a year I tried all kinds of salves and ointment, but found no relief. Some salves seemed to make it worse until there were ugly sores, which would break open and run.

"One day I saw an advertisement of Cuticura Remedies. I got a sample of the Cuticura Soap and Cuticura Ointment and began by washing the sores with the Cuticura Soap, then applying the Cuticura Ointment twice a day. I noticed a change and got more Cuticura Soap and Ointment and in a few weeks I was cured. It has healed so nicely that no scar remains." (Signed) Mrs. Anna A. Lew, Dec. 17, 1911.

BACKACHE IS DISCOURAGING

Until You Get After The Cause

Nothing more discouraging than a constant backache.

Lame when you awake. Pains pierce you when you bend or lift. It's hard to work, or to rest.

You sleep poorly and next day is the same old story.

That backache indicates bad kidneys and calls for some good kidney remedy.

None so well recommended as Doan's Kidney Pills.

Here's A California Case—
Mrs. E. Walsh, 1649 Tenth Ave., San Francisco, Cal., says: "The sharp, knife-like pains in my back were almost unbearable. I often had to cry out. Once while walking, I had a sudden attack and a doctor had to be called. Finally I used Doan's Kidney Pills and they made me well."

Women

From Forty-Five to Fifty Are Much Benefited by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

The "change of life" is a most critical period in a woman's existence, and the anxiety felt by women as it draws near is not without reason.

When her system is in a deranged condition, she may be predisposed to apoplexy, or congestion of some organ. At this time, also, cancers and tumors are more liable to form and begin their destructive work.

Such warning symptoms as sense of suffocation, hot flashes, headaches, backaches, dread of impending evil, timidity, sounds in the ears, palpitation of the heart, sparks before the eyes, irregularities, constipation, variable appetite, weakness and inquietude, and dizziness, are promptly heeded by intelligent women who are approaching the period in life when woman's great change may be expected.

These symptoms are calls from nature for help. The nerves are crying out for assistance and the cry should be heeded in time.

Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound is prepared to meet the needs of women's system at this trying period of her life. It invigorates and strengthens the female organism and builds up the weakened nervous system. It has carried many women safely through this crisis.

Mrs. Estella Gillispie

ONE CASE OUT OF MANY TO PROVE OUR CLAIMS.

St. Anne, Ill.—"I was passing through the change of life and I was a perfect wreck from female troubles. I had a displacement and bearing down pains, weak fainting spells, dizziness, then numb and cold feelings. Sometimes my feet and limbs were swollen. I was irregular and had so much backache and headache, was nervous, irritable and was despondent. Sometimes my appetite was good but more often it was not. My kidneys troubled me at times and I could walk only a short distance.

"I saw your advertisement in a paper and took Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, and I was helped from the first. At the end of two months the swelling had gone down, I was relieved of pain, and could walk with ease. I continued with the medicine and now I do almost all my housework. I know your medicine has saved me from the grave and I am willing for you to publish anything I write to you, for the good of others."—Mrs. ESTELLA GILLISPIE, R.F.D. No. 4, Box 34, St. Anne, Illinois.

TRAIN ROBBED NEAR POTEAU

KANSAS CITY SOUTHERN EXPRESS SAFES BLOWN OPEN.

Three Men Looted Mail Sacks Also and Flew to Mountains—Passengers Undisturbed.

Poteau, Oklahoma.—Kansas City Southern passenger train No. 4 was held up at 6:30 p. m. by three or more bandits on Tarby Prairie, three miles north of here.

Two safes in the express car were blown with nitroglycerin and the mail sacks containing a large quantity of registered mail were rifled.

The bandits boarded the train at the Frisco crossing, a mile northeast of Poteau.

When Tarby Prairie was reached, the train was brought to a standstill by the bandits, who themselves opened the air. The robbers did not molest the engineer or fireman, who remained in the cab under cover when they discovered the bandits aboard.

I. S. Kerr, an express messenger, and J. L. Williams, baggage man, were in the express car. Two bandits forced them behind a pile of trunks as they prepared to blow the safe containing local packages. The bandits took refuge behind the trunks also.

Part of one safe went through the roof of the car.

As the three bandits disappeared into the darkness toward Kavanaugh mountains, they fired three shots in the air.

There are various reports as to the amount of loot. It is said a bank at Havener had $7,000 aboard the train.

HIGH SPEED CAUSED DISASTER

Fast Connecticut Express Train Jumps Track, Killing Seven—Wreckage Burns.

Westport, Conn.—Seven persons, five of them women, were killed late in the day when the Springfield express, second section, running from Hartford to New York over the New York, New Haven & Hartford railroad, was wrecked west of this station.

The engine, driven at high speed, failed to take a crossover from one track to another. The train went into the ditch alongside the tracks, and the four Pullmans, which followed the mail and baggage cars, were demolished. The wreckage took fire, adding to the horror of the scene.

Martial Law at Negro Trial.

Atlanta, Georgia.—Four companies of militia will go to Cumming, Ga., immediately to impose martial law upon the whole of Forsyth county until such time as the trials of six negroes, accused of the murder of two white women, shall have been finished. Killed in a Duel.

Sweetwater, Oklahoma.—Paul Bodine, living near here, was shot and instantly killed by W. A. Givens, a neighboring farmer, who then went to the nearest telephone, notified the sheriff's office and returned home to await arrest. He pleads self-defense. The men met in the road in front of Bodine's house and both opened fire.

Locomotive Boiler Exploded.

Reno, Nevada.—N. L. Robinson, engineer, and C. C. Cool, fireman, both of Sparks, Nev., were killed when the boiler of the locomotive on a west-bound freight train exploded, 15 miles east of Inlay. Sixteen cars were piled up in the wreck.

BRITISH SUBMARINE WRECKED

Big Liner Struck Tiny Craft While Heavy Fog Obscured View.

Dover, England.—Run down by the Hamburg-American liner Amerika, bound for New York, the British submarine, B-2, went to the bottom with 14 of its crew of 15 men.

Lieut. Richard Pulleyne, the submarine's second in command, was the sole survivor.

A thick haze hung over the water and in the mist the Amerika failed to see the tiny craft.

The Amerika stood by after the collision and threw the lifebuoys overboard while a number of torpedo boats, after being informed of the accident by wireless, searched the sea for hours. None of the other members of the crew, however, was found and no sign of wreckage was discovered.

This is the sixth disaster to British submarines, each of them involving the loss of from 11 to 15 lives.

EX-SUITOR KILLS YOUNG BRIDE?

Daylight Murder in St. Paul Believed to be Work of Rejected Lover—Suspect Captured.

St. Paul, Minn.—Mrs. Anna Blazich, 35 years old and a bride of only one week, was murdered as she was entering her home in South St. Paul.

Mrs. Blazich was returning home from an errand about 1 o'clock and as she reached the house a man stepped from the side of the porch and fired a bullet into her head. Mrs. Blazich died a few hours later. The shooting was witnessed by several persons on the street.

Late at night a man, supposed to be the murderer and alleged to have been identified as Ivan Wiskie, a former suitor of Mrs. Blazich, was arrested in a clump of woods near the bank of the Mississippi river, several miles from the city. He was placed in jail.

Dropped in Unannounced.

Hammond, Indiana.—A 265-pound woman fell through the skylight of the Indiana Harbor State bank and landed on top of a gathering of bank directors who were holding their annual meeting. Mrs. Mary Bopa, living in an adjacent flat, uses the roof of the building as a place to dry her laundry. HORSE THIEF ALARMED GESE

UNUSUAL NOISE AROUSED MISSOURI FARMERS.

Negro, Captured With Animal, Given Preliminary Hearing at One O'clock, A. M.

Ferguson, Missouri.—A flock of geese, which may be descendants of those that saved Rome, set up such an alarming howling on Alfred Mueller's farm near here that Mueller and half a dozen neighbors were awakened. Mueller seized a shotgun and clad in a nightdress and slippers, ran into the yard. Several neighbors, similarly armed and dressed, joined him. From the barn they saw emerge the figure of a man, leading Mueller's horse. As the intruder placed his hand on the horse's shoulder, preparatory to mounting, he caught sight of the white clad band of farmers and sprinted into Mueller's cornfield.

The farmers set out in pursuit and several shots brought him to a halt. The neighbors held him in a circle of guns while the owner of the horse telephoned to a constable, John Mueller. On his arrival the party marched in a body to the home of A. L. Chamblin, justice of the peace. It was 1 a. m. when Chamblin convened court in his parlor to conduct a preliminary hearing. The witnesses, still in nightdress, stepped forward in turn and gave their testimony. At the conclusion, the prisoner, a negro, who said he was Ed Thomas of Memphis, was ordered held for the grand jury. He pleaded not guilty and said he had entered the barn to sleep. He is held in default of bail at Clayton.

TRIED TO "CUT" HIS BOARD BILL

Paroled Kansan Stabbed in Fight With Father-in-law Over Settlement.

Denver, Colorado.—Charles Ronaldson, 55 years old, and Joseph Volker, 21 years old, his son-in-law, fought in a darkened room with knives here while the wives of the two men screamed for help.

As a result of the fight, Volker is in a hospital with two dangerous stab wounds, and has slight chance for recovery. Ronaldson was stabbed in the leg.

The fight started over a board bill Volker is said to have owed his father-in-law. Volker, the police say, recently was paroled from the Kansas state reformatory at Hutchinson.

MEDICINE-MADE CHILDREN SICK

Ohio School Pupils Ate Tablets Scattered by Train Wreck—Doctors All Busy.

Mount Vernon, Ohio.—Several hundred children in this city are ill as the indirect result of a Baltimore & Ohio freight train wreck.

A large shipment of medicine in tablet form was scattered from one of the cars and children from all parts of the city filled their pockets.

The tablets found their way into the hands of nearly every child in the city by the time school was out in the afternoon. Very soon practically every physician in the city was kept busy treating the children. Several of the cases are said to be critical.

CUTS STUDENTS' COST OF LIVING

Missouri University Establishes Cafeteria to Compete With Columbia Boarding Houses.

Columbia, Missouri.—With a view of reducing as far as possible the cost of living for students at the University of Missouri, the university has established in connection with the University Dining club, a cafeteria. Nearly 700 students are getting good meals at a lower cost than they have been able to get them in Columbia in ten years. On the other hand the prices of meals in many Columbia boarding houses were raised this fall 50 cents a week.

Archbold Was Defiant.

New York, N. Y.—John D. Archbold, head of the Standard Oil, disregarded a subpoena served on him to testify before a special master in the suit of the Waters-Pierce company against the Standard. The special master ordered him entered as in default and said that he would be called upon for an explanation.
