Teddy and the Girl

By

DOROTHY BLACKMORE

Hugh Cameron glanced eagerly through his mail. Yes, there was the expected letter from his fiancée, so the day promised to be a good one.

He tore open the envelope and read to the end of the closely written page, his face setting into grim lines as he scanned the words.

"Dearest Teddy: How perfectly darling of you to send me this beautiful breakfast gown and cap to match. I am afraid I have rather neglected you lately on account of some one here, but when I come out this spring I will tell you all about it. I am going to wear my pretty gown and cap until we have our first breakfast together in the studio because I know you will love me in it while the lace is soft and new. Isn't that nice of me? This is just a scratch, dear, as I have so many Christmas notes to write—but yours was first. I can hardly wait until we meet again, but it won't be long now.

"With bushels of love,
"As ever,
LUCY."

The letter dropped from Hugh Cameron's nerveless fingers. So! The Lucy that he adored was nothing but a flirt and had been playing with him to her heart's content. Well, she would not get a chance to throw him over for the man in the studio whom she so violently loved.

Hugh laughed unpleasantly. "It was rather thoughtful of Lucy to mix her letters. Otherwise I might have had a lovely turn-down when she tired of me as an escort to operas, dinners, etc. I hope the devoted Teddy will appreciate her letter to me and her thanks for the bracelet I sent."

Cameron tore the letter viciously in half, then stayed his fingers. Lucy should have her letter back but not until he was well out to sea. Hugh started up! A quick boat sailed at nine o'clock the next morning and by using the telephone freely he could put his business affairs in proper shape for that sailing.

Cameron told his office boy that under no condition was he to answer any feminine voice over the telephone. Lucy might call him up and Hugh felt his resolve fade, as in memory he heard her low pitched voice ringing in his ear. No; he must neither hear her voice nor communicate with her in any way before he sailed.

During his hasty preparation Cameron had time to realize his loss. Even with her duplicity staring him in the face he knew that he loved her and would continue to want her until the end of his days.

When the great ship that was to take him to England weighed anchor Hugh felt that he had indeed sent himself adrift from the one woman he desired. With the pilot he posted a brief line to Lucy and enclosed her letter to the unknown Teddy as an explanation of his wishing to consider their engagement broken.

When this was done and the ship well on her way out to sea Cameron sank into his steamer chair, the embodiment of blank despair. The vision of Lucy's violet eyes, her wonderful happy smile with the dimple that played havoc with his heart and the tender affection in all her little mannerisms, kept Cameron's mouth grim and his eyes unseeing.

The deck steward had spoken his name twice before Cameron knew that the man was holding out to him a wireless message. They were two days out.

When Cameron had read the contents of the message his stolid Scotch heart was pounding heavily. The sun shone, the waters were blue and all the world seemed one glorious place.

Lucy was sailing that very day! She would reach Liverpool two days later than he himself. Whether there was an explanation to her letter or not it didn't matter. Lucy loved him; otherwise she would not rush across the ocean after him.

Hugh Cameron spent the rest of the journey in visualizing Lucy, but now she belonged to him, not to some unknown Teddy.

"I am a bally idiot!" Hugh told himself.

But the spirit of torment whispered convincing assertions to him.

"She had no right to call any man dearest—she is engaged to you."

"He might be her great uncle," Hugh argued weakly.

"Girls don't dress up in pink tea gowns because great uncles love them in them," the imps chided and Hugh again felt the cloud of doubt.

"And no note should come before yours," finished the voice in derision.

When Liverpool was reached Hugh landed and spent every moment there in mad pursuit of diversion. He wanted not to think but only to pass the time in some way until Lucy should speak to him.

He made numerous trips to the steamer office and spent hours wondering when the boat would dock.

Instead of the boat docking on Tuesday, it was a full day late, having been held up on account of fog. When the great ship moved ponderously in Hugh had a momentary shock. Lucy might possibly have left the boat at Fishguard. It was fifteen long minutes before Cameron recognized the long, cloud-like blue of the chiffon on Lucy's hat. She was waving frantically, but when they drew nearer Hugh saw that her eyes were wistful. He knew then that he had wronged her.

It seemed another endless time before she was coming down the gang plank.

She crept into the arms Hugh had unconsciously held out to her.

"Forgive me," the Scotchman said.

"Forgive you? Why, Hugh, you are an angel to ask that!" Lucy rested a moment in her returned happiness then said with her adorable smile, "Hugh—Teddy is my girl chum. Her name is Theodora."

"You have never spoken of her," Cameron said, but was scarcely conscious of speaking. Doubt and suspicion had passed from his mind and nothing remained to think of save the one fact that Lucy was in his arms.

"Teddy has had a more or less unpleasant experience," Lucy said, "and she doesn't want many people to know where she is, so you see I have never spoken of her. She is an artist and has an adorable studio."

"The studio in which you are going to have breakfast with the cap—"

"Hugh!" Lucy blushed hotly. Then she turned swiftly toward him and looked appealingly into his eyes. "Hugh—was it dreadful of me to come over here after you—you have asked me so often to—"

"Marry me? Yes, dear. The only dreadful thing you did was to call any one but me dearest—even now I am jealous of Teddy."

"You have no cause to be," Lucy confided.

REED AND HIS TEACHER.

Ex-Speaker Reed's boyhood was not particularly eventful. He was tall and slender, and had not the chubby face of his late years of prosperity and power. He was independent in his ways and decidedly outspoken—a trait which he inherited from his mother. He often got a birching from his teacher, for, in spite of being a good student, he was mischievous.

"If any one knows of any reason why these apples should not touch the lips of Tom Reed, let him speak now, or forever hold his peace," said the young rascal one day, right under the master's nose.

And he gave a bite at one of the great red checked apples in his hand.

Quick as a flash out came the birch and the teacher said:

"If anyone knows any reason why the rod should not warm the jacket of Tom Reed, let him speak now, or forever after hold his peace."

"I do," said Tom.

"Name it," replied the master.

"Incompatibility."

He did not get the whipping.

FORTUNATE.

"Did that aviator friend of yours have a successful season?"

"Very. He more than made enough to pay all his hospital expenses."

A SUGGESTION.

"What street had I better take to find the lady's father?"

"If you want my advice, you'll take Broadstreet."

IN THE BARNYARD.

"Why are they making all this fuss over the turkey trot?"

"Because it is considered a fowl amusement, stupid."

MAKES MARBLE FROM ASHES

But a German Engineer Will Not Divulge His Secret, Despite Offered Inducements.

All the world knows that ashes are the last solid residue of combustion and compose the essence of earthly materials, mineral salts, potash, soda, phosphates, etc. The uses to which ashes may be put have not been supposed various; they serve in the preparation of certain lyes, sometimes to improve the character of the soil, under certain conditions in the manufacture of brick, always with a view to furnishing some desired chemical property; but these applications of ashes are always secondary.

Recently a German engineer has invented a way to transform ashes into marble of exceptional beauty which is susceptible to the highest polish. He refuses to divulge his secret, though large inducements have been made to him by owners of marble quarries. It is a matter of chemical synthesis, of course, but it is said that his only visible apparatus is a small gas stove, together with a kettle and what resembles a copying press. With these implements, plus the secret he holds, he has manufactured a medium sized slab of marble in half an hour.—Harper's Weekly.

DELICATE THRUST

Carrie—Tom is so forgetful.
Ethel—Yes; it keeps me busy reminding him that you are the girl he is engaged to.

HE'D SETTLE ONCE FOR ALL.

One of the stories of Representative John A. Moon of Tennessee is of a rather illiterate candidate for the Tennessee legislature. When he was addressing a political meeting a man called out in a loud voice an inquiry about his position on the tariff.

For several minutes the speaker continued and did not appear to hear the question. Finally, however, others in the audience look up the query and became so insistent that he was compelled to answer.

"Ladies and gentlemen," said the speaker, "you have asked me my stand on the tariff question. I am decided. I am in favor of paying the thing off and having it out of the way."

HIS PACE.

Mary—Easy-going, is he?
Alice—Goodness, yes! Half an hour from batrack to front door.—Harper's Bazar.

OUT OF DATE.

"The Dillburys are old-fashioned people."
"Yes, indeed. They are always trying to make both ends meet."

INTELLIGENT GIRL.

Maud—Why do you always wear gloves when you are playing cards?
Alice—Because Jack told me I must never show my hand.

PROPER GROWTH OF CALABASH

Plant Thrives Better When Reared in Hothouse Than It Will in the Open Air.

The fruits are allowed to remain on the vine, which is a relative of the gourds, till the outer parts are quite hard, for if gathered before they are fully ripe difficulty is experienced in seasoning. On the other hand, they must not be allowed to remain long enough to be subjected to frost, for a severe frost is likely to cause injury. Dry, sunny weather is more favorable to the development of fruit than wet weather, for though the plants will take plenty of water, more satisfactory results are obtained from watering by hand than from the plants being subjected to an excessive amount of rain. The past summer, with its long-continued heat, has been ideal for the successful cultivation of these gourds in England, providing they were well watered at frequent intervals. Seeds sown here on a slight hotbed and the plants allowed to grow till they have filled a frame which could be lifted off about mid-June, would probably give the most satisfactory results. If grown throughout the whole of their career in a frame or greenhouse, however, arrangements ought to be made for a free circulation of air at all times. Apart from the utility of the fruits of this plant, it is quite ornamental enough to receive attention from a decorative standpoint, either indoors or out.—Montreal Standard.

DANISH CURE FOR LAZINESS

Men Overfond of Rest Are Given So Much of It That it Becomes Monotonous.

The Danish government under the direction of Professor Kellers, a psychologist, is making an experiment in out-of-door treatment of its mental defectives on Tyloe island. Both lunatics and loafers came under the head of "defectives" in Denmark. Professor Kellers has for some time been a persistent advocate of the out-of-door treatment of lunacy. His chief contention is that the fresh air tones up the nervous system, while the varied natural objects are calculated to arrest the attention of the patients and dissipate the more distressing symptoms of monomania.

The method of "cure" of confirmed laziness in Denmark is somewhat Spartan. Either the men must settle down to regular habits of work, chiefly of a rural character, or the "rest cure" is pushed home to its logical result—they are forced to lie in bed for a term varying from a day to three or four days. By that time the ennui becomes simply unbearable and the men are glad to escape from the torture of sheer inactivity.

THOUGHTFUL CHILD.

Little Alice was terribly afraid of cats. One day she had been standing on the doorstep for several minutes, looking at a big black tomcat gallivanting on the fence. Finally she rushed into the house, looking very excited, and exclaimed: "Mother, I thought I'd better come in. That kitty was just so afraid of me, I felt sorry for it, and comed away!"—Woman's Home Companion.

CONSEQUENCES.

"Yes, my son was rather wild, but now he has settled down."
"I know a few of his creditors who wish he would settle up."

JUST LIKE THEM.

He (sternly)—I do not approve of hobble skirts.
She (petulantly)—That's because you're so narrow!

MILLION GALLONS OF WINE.

"A million gallons of sweet wines, mostly port wine, is the vintage of the Vina vineyard for the season of 1911. This is the largest output of the winery in the many years of its existence," says the American Wine Press in a recent issue. "This fertile vineyard, the property of Stanford university, comprising 3,500 acres of the best land in the Sacramento valley, is located on the Sacramento river and Deer creek, six miles from Corning, Cal.

"The large amount of money earned from the grapes and wine produced at the Stanford vineyard goes to support the Leland Stanford Jr. university at Palo Alto, and yet there is a strict rule, made by the president of the University, prohibiting the sale and use of wine within one mile of the university."

Particularly the Ladies.

Not only pleasant and refreshing to the taste, but gently cleansing and sweetening to the system, Syrup of Figs and Elixir of Senna is particularly adapted to ladies and children, and beneficial in all cases in which a wholesome, strengthening and effective laxative should be used. It is perfectly safe at all times and dispels colds, headaches and the pains caused by indigestion and constipation so promptly and effectively that it is the one perfect family laxative which gives satisfaction to all and is recommended by millions of families who have used it and who have personal knowledge of its excellence.

Its wonderful popularity, however, has led unscrupulous dealers to offer imitations which act unsatisfactorily. Therefore, when buying, to get its beneficial effects, always note the full name of the Company—California Fig Syrup Co.—plainly printed on the front of every package of the genuine Syrup of Figs and Elixir of Senna.

For sale by all leading druggists. Price 50 cents per bottle.

FOR GOOD MEASURE.

Tommy—Say, Pop, does a person ever get something for nothing?
Papa—Sometimes, and a prison sentence usually goes with it.

Puzzle of Living.

Religionists chided about their inability to agree on points of faith might point out that they differ only in incidentals and not essentials, whereas the scientists differ on everything. Take the science of living. A week ago you would have "died if you drank water with your meals." Now they say it doesn't do any harm at all. One variety says: "Eat meat, lots of it, to build good, rich blood." Another says meat is poison; that vegetables are the only food. A third declares meat and vegetables both increase debility, and that you will live twice as long on raw fruits and nuts. Some say "Talk with your meals, laugh; it makes the food digest." Others insist silence is never so golden as at the table.

Evidence.

"What makes you think our great public men don't work as hard as they used to?"

"By the photographs," replied Farmer Cortossel. "When I was a young fellow the big men in politics didn't take near as much time to get shaved and have their hair cut."

A WOMAN DOCTOR Was Quick to See That Coffee Poison Was Doing the Mischief.

A lady tells of a bad case of coffee poisoning, and tells it in a way so simple and straightforward that literary skill could not improve it.

"I had neuralgic headaches for 12 years," she says, "and have suffered untold agony. When I first began to have them I weighed 140 pounds, but they brought me down to 110.

"I went to many doctors and they gave me only temporary relief. So I suffered on, till one day, a woman doctor advised me to drink Postum. She said I looked like I was coffee poisoned.

"So I began to drink Postum, and gained 15 pounds in the first few weeks and am still gaining, but not so fast as at first. My headaches began to leave me after I had used Postum about two weeks—long enough, I expect, to get the coffee poison out of my system.

"Now that a few months have passed since I began to use Postum, I can gladly say that I never know what a neuralgic headache is like any more, and it was nothing but Postum that relieved me.

"Before I used Postum I never went out alone; I would get bewildered and would not know which way to turn. Now I go alone and my head is as clear as a bell. My brain and nerves are stronger than they have been for years." Name given by Postum Co., Battle Creek, Mich.

"There's a reason," and it is explained in the little book, "The Road to Wellville," in pkgs.

Ever read the above letter? A new one appears from time to time. They are genuine, true, and full of human interest.

ALFALFA ON DRY LAND

Three Conditions Under Which Farmers May Try Crop.

First, Where Sufficient Moisture Can Be Secured, in Locations Where Pumping Plant is Handy and on Deep Soil.

(By PHILIP K. BLINN, Alfalfa Specialist, Colorado Agricultural College.)

Alfalfa under dry farming conditions can not be expected to grow with the same measure of success that it does under irrigation, nor should the dry farmer expect success when alfalfa is sown in the same manner that is usually sown under irrigation; a different system of cultivation must be employed.

Alfalfa is a very drought enduring plant when it is once well established. If its roots can reach some deep sub-soil moisture, but it is a mistaken idea that the roots of alfalfa will penetrate through dry soil to reach moisture; it is impossible. It is essential at the very start, in seeding alfalfa, that there should be moisture in the sub-soil. It is useless to attempt to seed alfalfa on dry land, that has not been previously deeply plowed for several years, so that moisture has penetrated to considerable depth. If one contemplates seeding alfalfa, the best plan is to summer till the previous season with clean cultivation.

There are at least three conditions under which farmers could be advised to try alfalfa in the dry farming districts.

1. Along creek beds or water courses, where water or moisture from the underflow would supply the plants sufficiently to produce a fair crop.

2. In locations that might be watered with a pumping plant, or where the run-off from storms could be diverted onto fields, which were adequately ditched and furrowed to receive the water that might be available after heavy storms from land lying above. There are doubtless many such spots through the dry farming sections that could be well devoted to alfalfa.

3. On deep soil that has good moisture retention, and that has been deeply tilled to establish sub-soil moisture, alfalfa could be sown with a view to producing seed by seeding in wide rows, 36 to 40 inches apart, and sown very thinly in the rows. This has been a success in an experimental way at several points in the United States, and when the conditions are understood, there is doubtless a great field for some men situated to engage in alfalfa seed growing.

Under all dry farming conditions it is advisable to sow alfalfa in rows for intertillage, to conserve the moisture and to control the weeds, the width of the rows depending somewhat upon the probable moisture supply. Under conditions almost equal to irrigation, rows 18 to 20 inches apart have been successful, but on dry land which receives only the actual precipitation of 12 to 15 inches, rows 40 inches apart are necessary, the stand of plants in the rows must be very thin, for the overpasturing of the limited moisture supply will be just as disastrous as overcrowding a limited water supply with a great herd of cattle.

Cultivation is absolutely essential to all dry farming crops, and especially alfalfa, to hold the moisture and to keep clean of weeds.

There are several difficulties to be met in growing alfalfa in rows. First, securing a stand of plants, and fighting weeds, which can only be met by thorough preparation of the soil and good careful cultivation. Second, blowing and washing of the cultivated soil between the rows by wind and rains. Selecting the fields not subject to these troubles is a wise precaution, and it is advisable to sow the rows in the opposite way to the direction of the prevailing winds, but in the same direction that the water will run best.

GOOD BREEDING BIRDS HIGH

Eggs From Fowls May Be Secured at Quite Reasonable Figures at Season When Most Needed.

Good breeding birds in the spring of the year are scarce and hard to get. Such as have been kept through the winter being held at a high price and frequently can not be bought at all. It is certain that birds which have been selected and mated up for the use of the owner will not be readily disposed of at such prices as would make them a profitable investment for the buyer. Though eggs from these birds may be bought at quite reasonable figures, and the buyer will thus be enabled to secure the best of stock at a season when most needed and at prices which will permit of their profitable use.

Dairy Waste.

The greatest waste in the dairy is the waste of unsanitary feeding—pouring—stuffing expensive food into sows that are unsuitable for the production of milk.

ADVANTAGE OF DEEP TILLAGE

Drouth of 1911 Stirred Up Interest Among Farmers on Problem of Moisture Conservation.

The great drouth of 1911 caused a crop shrinkage of hundreds of millions of bushels. But it wrought a benefit that cannot be calculated. It stirred up an interest in deep tilling, and the conservation of moisture that will spread until every farmer knows how to protect his crops against the driest season. You hear deep tillage discussed at the farming congresses, says the Farm, Stock and Home. You read about it in every leading farm paper. It is the talk at the institutes and granges. It will not be many years until we are getting out of our poor soil all that it is capable of producing—and that, too, without "soil mining" or "soil robbing."

The introduction of deep tillage tools is another reason for the widespread determination to go deeper into the soil, at this time. Heretofore it has been exceedingly difficult for the farmer to till as deeply as recommended with the ordinary plows at his command. But such tools have proved that they not only till soil deeply but that they make a pulverized seed bed—all in one operation. The seed bed prepared by such tools is thus an ample reservoir to hold the early spring rains. It will absorb three times as much moisture as a shallow tilled field. The farther down the moisture goes the less the evaporation. The farther down the soil is pulverized the roots will go, thus getting all the drink they need even when no rain falls. We have plenty of moisture now. Heavy rains everywhere. We will have oceans of water all winter and next spring. It may make thoughtless people tired to think about water now—but the long-headed farmer knows that he will need water just as much next July and August as he did in 1911—and he will prepare to save it.

PLAN FOR SAVING RAINFALL

Plow the Field as Soon as Crop Has Been Harvested and Follow This Up With Drag.

Moisture conservation is not a sure cure for crop failures. Every farmer, though, knows what three or four inches of additional rain during a dry season will do, and when it is realized that it is possible and feasible to conserve moisture to that extent it begins to look as though the saving of moisture from one year to another would help some in case of short rainfall. Three or four inches of rain carried over from one season to the next means three or four hundred tons of water an acre in the subsoil—water enough to carry a growing crop through any ordinary dry weather. It is possible to carry even more than this from one year to another, says A. H. Leidigh, assistant professor of crops at the Kansas agricultural college. How can the rainfall be saved? Plow the field as soon as the crop has been harvested. If it is spring or summer, follow the plow with a drag. The rains will soak into the soil instead of running off the surface or evaporating. Fall plowing should not be dragged, as there is danger of the soil either packing or becoming dry and blowing. The extra expense of following such a plan ought not to cost more than a dollar an acre at most. Many places it could be done at a much smaller cost. It pays big interest on the investment even at the higher figure.

Critical Point of Poultry.

The critical period on the young turkey is generally at an end when six weeks old. In breeding, lice, dampness and improper food are the main causes for great mortality.

Overcrowding is Dangerous.

Overcrowding on roosts at night is one of the chief causes of a cold and its successor, roup.

Puckering of the fowls begins immediately after killing and should be rapidly done.

The success of turkey raising depends upon the kind of care given for the first five or six weeks.

Geese fattened wholly on pasture or with the addition of a little corn make a tender, juicy article of flesh not to be equaled.

Chickens will not scratch when they are overfed nor when there is no feed in the litter. The idea is to keep them scratching.

The successful feeding of poultry depends largely on the ability of the feeder to notice the condition of the chickens on feed.

WILL TELL OF JURY BRIBING

FRANKLIN TO BE STAR WITNESS AGAINST DARROW.

Confessed Briber Will be Allowed to Pay Fine in Return for Assistance to State.

Los Angeles, Cal.—District Attorney Fredericks announces that Bert H. Franklin, former McNamara detective, will be the state's star witness against Attorney Darrow, who is charged with bribery.

Fredericks further stated that Franklin will take the stand at the trial of Mr. Darrow and tell fully of his part in the alleged attempt to bribe jurors in the McNamara case.

For his complete confession and in the light of the fact that the George M. Lockwood bribery charge still hangs over his head, Franklin will be permitted to pay a fine of $2,500.

Coupled with the entering of a plea of guilty by Franklin was a decisive victory won by the Darrow defense when the Chicago attorney appeared before Judge Hutton in the superior court to have his case set down for trial.

Judge Hutton, following a conference with the judges of the district court of appeals and a careful study of the law governing the taking of evidence before a grand jury, reversed his former decision following that of the supreme court, and caused an order to be issued directing the district attorney to furnish the defense with a complete transcript of the evidence.

Judge Hutton declares that the defense is entitled to a full transcript of the testimony under his view of the law, and that if the district attorney can not furnish the evidence omitted from the transcript the case should be again taken before the grand jury.

DOCTOR SUDDENLY DISAPPEARS

Trenton (Mo.) Physician Answers Mysterious Night Call and Now Cannot Be Found.

Trenton, Missouri.—While on his way to answer a mysterious call to the outskirts of town, Dr. G. W. Belcher mysteriously dropped from sight and authorities here are working on the theory that he has been kidnaped. Doctor Belcher, it is said, was in a position to give evidence in a coroner's case now pending which might have involved a number of Trenton persons.

The doctor is 35 years old and is married. He had been out of the city and when he returned at night he found a call from the east part of the city. After he drove away nothing has been seen of him. The horse was found wandering along a road in the east part of town at 4 o'clock in the morning. In the buggy was the doctor's instrument case and in it was $65. This was taken as an indication that the doctor had not been slugged and robbed.

TWO WRECKS INJURE SEVENTEEN

Three Cars Turn Turtle on Illinois Traction System—Every Passenger Injured.

St. Louis, Mo.—Fourteen passengers were injured when a sleeper train of three cars on the Illinois Traction system was derailed and turned over in a ditch at Benld, Ill., 50 miles northeast of St. Louis.

A report from the company's division headquarters at Staunton, Ill., was that every passenger on the train, among them several women, were cut and bruised when the cars turned turtle.

Davenport, Iowa.—Three Pullman coaches of train No. 8 on the Rock Island left the track near Atkinson, Ill., early in the morning and tumbled over into a ditch.

The passengers crawled out through windows of the coaches and another passenger train, following picked them up and took them to Chicago.

Makes It Easy for Shoe Trust.

Boston, Massachusetts.—The criminal proceedings of the department of justice against five officials of the United Shoe Machinery company received a setback when Judge Putnam threw four of the five counts in the two indictments out of court. The remaining count, which the government may press against the five defendants, charges monopoly through the system of leases of patent machinery. They will plead to this charge next week.

Expect Trouble in Iowa.

Des Moines, Iowa.—The walkout of English miners is expected to be followed shortly by a strike of several hundred thousand American miners, including the 20,000 men employed in the Iowa field, according to Thomas Ray, president of an Iowa mining company. The wages scale agreement expiring April 1 will be taken up at the meeting of the miners of Iowa March 14.

DOCTORS FAILED RESTORED BY PERUNA.

Catarrh of the Lungs Threatened Her Life

Miss Ninetta Porter, Braintree, Vermont, writes: "I have been cured by Peruna."

"I had several hemorrhages of the lungs. The doctors did not help me much and would never have cured me."

"I saw a testimonial in a Peruna almanac of a case similar to mine, and I commenced using it."

"I was not able to wait on myself when I began using it. I gained very slowly at first, but I could see that it was helping me."

"After I had taken it a while I commenced to raise up a stringy, sticky substance from my lungs. This grew less and less in quantity as I continued the treatment."

"I grew more fleshy than I had been for a long time, and now I call myself well."

HIS THOUGHT.

Henson—He said he could never forget his alma mater. I wonder what he meant?

Henpeck—His mother-in-law, I guess.

Papa's Past.

Little Helen's mamma was discussing the drink question with a visitor and the child listened gravely to the conversation.

"Papa used to drink," she volunteered suddenly.

The visitor turned her head to conceal a smile, and mamma frowned and shook her head at the little one.

"Well, then," demanded Helen, "what was it he used to do?"—Lippincott's Magazine.

Obliged Anyway.

"The writer," says Senator J. L. Brady, "was complimented highly the other day. He received a booklet called 'Santa Fe De Luxe,' marked personal and the words three times underlined. It was a description of the new extra fare train. There was once an old colored man who was asked to change a $10 bill. 'I cannot do it,' he replied, 'but I am obliged to you for the suspicion.'"

A Curious Mind.

"You are acquainted with Digsforth, I believe?"

"Oh, yes."

"He likes to be well informed concerning matters that very few people know anything about."

"For instance?"

"He is familiar with the achievements of all the American immortals whose names appear on the revised list."

An Alarmist.

"Jibcock is a very disquieting individual."

"Indeed he is. Jibcock seems to have been born with no other purpose in life than to yell 'Fire!'"

Use Allen's Foot-Ease

The antiseptic powder to be shaken into the shoes for tired, tender, smarting, aching, swollen feet. It makes your feet feel easy and makes walking a Delight. Sold everywhere, 25c. For free trial package, address Allen S. Olmsted, Le Roy, N. Y.

His View.

"Tell me about Spain, romantic Spain."

"Well," said the motorist, "there are a few bad places as you come down the mountains, but in the main the roads are pretty good."

The Paxton Toilet Co. of Boston, Mass., will send a large trial box of Paxtine Antiseptic, a delightful cleansing and germicidal toilet preparation, to any woman, free, upon request.

Hard to Find.

"Here are some verses entitled, 'The Road to Arcady.'"

"Pshaw! Almost any poet can tell the way to Arcady, but none of them ever gets there."

The Remedy that revolutionizes and regenerates the victim of constipation is Garfield Tea, a herb combination.

Many a girl repents at leisure because she didn't marry in haste.

CHAPTER I.

A still and sultry dusk had fallen. Closing an oppressive, wearing day: one of those days whose sole function seems to reside in rendering us irritably conscious of our too-close casings of too-solid flesh; whose humid and inert atmosphere, sodden with tepid moisture, clings palpably to the body, causing men to feel as if they crawled, half-suffocated, at the bottom of a sea of rarefied water.

The hour may have been eight; it may have been not quite that, but it was almost dark. The windows were oblongs, black as night in the yellow walls of O'Rourke's bedchamber in the Hotel d'Orient, Monte Carlo.

I have the honor to make known to you the O'Rourke of Castle O'Rourke in the county of Galway, Ireland; otherwise and more widely known as Colonel Terence O'Rourke; a chevalier of the Legion of Honor of France; sometime an officer in the Foreign Legion in Algiers; a wanderer, spendthrift, free-lance, cosmopolitan—a gentleman-adventurer, he's been termed.

He was dressing for dinner. The glare of half a dozen electric bulbs discovered him all but ready for public appearance—not, however, quite ready. In his shirt sleeves he faced a cheval-glass, pluckily (if with the haggard eyes of exasperation) endeavoring to outmaneuver a demon of inanimate perversity which had entered into his dress tie, inciting it to refuse to assume, for all his coaxing and his stratagems, that effect of nonchalant perfection so much sought after, so seldom achieved.

Patently was the thing possessed by a devil; O'Rourke made no manner of doubt of that. Though for minutes at a time he fumbled, fidgeted, fumed, it was without avail.

His room itself was in a state of considerable disorder—something due mainly to O'Rourke's characteristic efforts to find just what he might happen to desire at any given time without troubling to think where it ought properly to be.

Something of this confusion, mirrored in the glass, was likewise reflected in O'Rourke's eyes, what time he paused for breath and profanity. "Faith, 'tis worse than a daw's nest, the place," he admitted, scandalized. "How ever did I—one lone man—do all that, will ye be telling me?" He flung out two helpless baffled hands, and let them fall. After a meditative pause he added: "Damn that Alsatian!"—with reference to his latest and least competent valet, who had but recently been discharged with a flea in his ear and a month's unearned wage in his pocket. "For knowing me ways," sighed O'Rourke, "there was never anyone the like of Danny."

For as many as three livelong days this man had been reduced to the necessity of dressing himself with his own fair hands—and that at least thrice daily, who did nothing by halves. And, somehow, mysteriously, his discarded garments had for the most part remained where he had thrown them, despite the earnest efforts of the femme de chambre to restore something resembling order from this man-made chaos. For servants all liked well the O'Rourke, improvident soul that he was, fresh-handed to a fault.

You are invited to picture to yourself O'Rourke as invariably he was in one of his not infrequent but ever transient phases of affluence: that is, a very magnificent figure indeed. Standing a bit over six feet, deep of chest and lean of flank, with his long, straight legs he looked what he had been meant to be, a man of arms and action. His head was shapely, its dark hair curling the least in the world; and, incredibly stained, a transparent brown, his features were lean, eager, and rendered very attractive by quick boyish eyes in whose warm blue-gray depths humor twinkled more often than not, though those same eyes were not seldom thoughtful, a trace wistful, perhaps, with the look of one who recalls dear memories of friends and sweethearts loved and lost. . . . For he had begun to live early in life and had much to look back upon, though for all that it's doubtful if he were more than thirty at the time he became involved in the fortunes of the Pool of Flame.

For the rest of him, barring the refractory tie, the man was strikingly well groomed, while his surroundings spoke for comfortable circumstances. On the authority of the absent and regretted Danny, who had long served the O'Rourke in the intimate capacities of jody-servant, confidant and chancellor of the exchequer (this last, of course, whenever there happened to be any exchequer to require a chancellor), there was never anyone at all who could spend money or wear clothes like himself, meaning the master. And at this time O'Rourke was ostensibly in funds and consequently (as the saying runs) cutting a wide swath. Heaven and himself only knew the limits of his resources; but his manner a Monte Cristo might have aped to advantage. His play was a wonder of the Casino; for the matter of that, his high-handed and extravagant ways had made the entire Principality of Monaco conscious of his presence in the land. And you fail in the least to understand the nature of the man if you think for a moment that it irked him to be admired, pointed out, courted, pursued. He was, indeed, never so splendid as when aware that he occupied the public eye. In short, he was just an Irishman.

So, then, it's nothing wonderful that he should seem a thought fical about the set of his tie. Now as he stood scowling at his image, and wishing from the bottom of his heart he had never been fool enough to let Danny leave him, and calling fervent blessings down upon the head of the fiend who first designed modern evening-dress for men—he found himself suddenly with a mind divested of any care whatever and attentive alone to a sound which came to him faintly, borne upon the heavy wings of the sluggish evening air. It was nothing more nor less than a woman singing softly to herself (humming would probably be the more accurate term), and it was merely the tune that caught his fancy; a bit of an old song he himself had once been wont to sing, upon a time when he had been a happier man. It seemed strange to hear it there, stranger still that the woman's voice, indistinct as it was, should have such a familiar ring in his memory. He frowned in wonder and shook his head. "The age peration in the twinkling of an eye; another mood entirely swayed him by the time he found himself gazing out into the vague, velvety dusk that momentarily was closing down upon the fairy-like panorama of terraced gardens and sullen, silken sea. His thoughts had winged back to that dear woman of whom that fragment of melody had put him in mind; and he was sighing and heavy of heart with longing for the sight of her and the touch of her hand.

Even as he watched, stark night fell, black as a pocket beneath a portentous pall of cloud. . . . Far out upon the swelling bosom of the Mediterranean a cluster of dim lights betrayed a stealthy coasting steamer, making westward. Nearer, in the harbor, a fleet of pleasure craft, riding at anchor on the still, dark tide, was revealed in many faint, wreath-like shapes of gray, all-studded with yellow stars. Ashore, endless festoons of colored lamps draped the gloom of the terraces; the facade of the Casino stood out lurid against the darkness; the hotels shone with reflected brilliance, the palace of the Prince de Monaco loomed high upon the peninsula, its elevations picked out with lines of soft fire.

The O'Rourke shook his head, condemning it all. "'Tis beautiful," he said; "faith, yes! 'tis all of that. But I'm thinking 'tis too beautiful to be good for one—like some women I've known in me time. 'Tis not good for Terence—that's sure; 'tis the O'Rourke that's going stale and soft with all this easy living. Me that has more than many another to live for and hope for and strive for! . . . And I'm lingering here in the very lap of luxury stuffing myself with rare food, befuddling myself with rarer wines—me that has fought a day and a night and a half a day atop of that on nothing and a glass of muddy water!—risking me money as if there was no end to it, throwing it away in scandalous tips like any drunken sailor! And all for the scant satisfaction of behaving like a fool of an Irishman. . . . 'Tis sickening—disgusting; naught less. . . . I'm thinking this night ends it, though; come the morning I'll be pulling up stakes and striking out for a healthier, simpler place, where there's something afoot a man can take an interest in without losing his self-respect. I'll do just that, I will!"

This he meant, firmly, and was glad of it, with a heart immeasurably lightened by the strength of his good resolution. He began to hum the old change that were to follow, the song in his heart shaped itself in words upon his lips.

"I'm Paddy Whack
From Ballyhack,
Not long ago—turned soldier—O
At grand attack,
Or storm or sack,
None than I will prove bolder—O!"

His voice was by way of being a tenor of tolerable quality and volume, but untrained—nothing wonderful. It was just the way he trolled out the rollicking stanza that rendered it infectious, irresistible. For as he paused the voice of the woman that had reminded him of the song capped the verse neatly.

"An' whin we get the route
Wid a shout,
How they post!
Wid a ready right-about
Goes the bould soldier-boy!"

O'Rourke caught his breath, startled, stunned. "It can't be—" he whispered. For if at first her voice, subdued in distance, had stirred his memory with a touch as vague and thrilling as the caress of a woman's hand in darkness, now that he heard the full strength of that soprano, bell-clear and spirited, he was sure he knew the singer. He told himself that there could be no two women in the world with voices just like that; not another than her he knew could have rendered the words with so true a spirit, so rare a brogue—tinged as that had been with the faintest, quaintest exotic inflection imaginable.

But she had stopped with the verse half sung. His pulses quickening, O'Rourke leaned forth from the window and carried it on:

"O, 'tis thin the ladies fair
In despair,
Tear their hair!
But—'Tis divvie a bit I care!
Cries the bould soldier-boy!"

The fell a pause. He listened with his heart in his mouth, but heard nothing. And it seemed impossible to surmise whence, from which one of all the rooms with windows opening upon that side of the hotel, had come the voice of the woman. She might as well have been above as below him, or on either side; he could not guess. But he was determined.

Now there was beneath his window a balcony with a floor of wood and a rail of iron-filigree—a long balcony, extending from one corner of the hotel to the other. At intervals it was splashed with light from the windows of chambers still occupied by guests belated or busy, like himself, with the task of dressing for the evening. The window to his left was alight; that on his right, dark. With half his body on the balcony, his legs dangling within the room, O'Rourke watched the opening on his left with jealous, breathless expectancy. Not a sound came therefrom. He hesitated.

"If that weren't her room, I'd hear somebody moving about," he reasoned. "'Tis frightened she is—not suspect in 'tis me. . . . But how do I know 'tis herself? . . . Faith! could me ears deceive me?"

With that he took heart of hope and broke manfully into the chorus, singing directly to the lighted window, singing the first line with ardor and fervor, with confidence and with hope, singing persuasively, pleadingly, anxiously, insistently.

"For the world is all befo-ore us—"
he sang and then paused. He heard no echo. And again he essayed, with that in his tone to melt a heart of ice:

"For the world is all befo-ore us—"
And now he triumphed and was lifted out of himself with sheer delight; for from the adjoining room came the next line:

"And landladies ado-ore us—"
Unable to contain himself, he chimed in, and in duet they sang it out to the rousing finale:

"They ne'er rayfuse to sco-ore us,
But chalk us up wid joy
We taste her tap, we tear her cap—
O, that's the chap
For me, cries she—
"Whirloo!
Isn't he the darlint, the bould soldier-boy!"

As the last note rang out and died, the next window was darkened; the woman had switched off the lights. He heard a faint rustle of silken ruffles. "'Tis herself," he declared in an agony of anticipation—"herself and none other! And I'm thinking she'll be coming to the window now—"

He was right. Abruptly he discovered her by the reflected glow from the illumination behind him. He was conscious of the pallid oval of her face, of a sleek white sheen of arms and shoulders, of a dark mass of hair, but more than all else of the glamour of eyes that shone into his softly, like limpid pools of darkness touched by dim starlight.

Inflamed, he leaned toward her. "Whist, darling!" he stammered. "Whist! 'Tis myself—'tis Terence—"
But she was gone. A low, stifled laugh was all his answer—that and the stiken whisper of her skirts as she scurried from the window. He flushed crimson, waited an instant, then flung discretion to the winds, and found himself scrambling out upon the balcony. Heaven only knows to what lengths the man would have gone had not the slam of a door brought him up standing; she had left her room!

So she thought to escape him so easily! He swore between his teeth with excitement and tumbled back whence he had come. Regardless of the fact that he was still in his shirt-sleeves he rushed madly for the door. On the way a shooting-jacket on the door, perhaps in revenge for neglect and ill-treatment, maliciously wound itself around his feet and all but threw him headlong; only a frantic clutch at the footrail of the bed saved him. Kicking the thing savagely off he flung himself upon the door and threw it open. His jaw dropped.

The lift shaft was directly opposite. Before it, in more or less patient waiting, stood a very young and beautiful woman in a gown whose extreme candor was surpassed only by the perfection of its design and appointment—both blatant of the Rue de la Paix; a type as common to the cognoscenti of Monte Carlo as the Swiss hotel porters. But O'Rourke did not know her from Eve.

"The divvie!" said he beneath his breath.

He was mistaken; but the young woman, at first startled by his unceremonious appearance, on instantaneous second thought decided to permit him to discover that twin imps, at least, resided in her eyes. And when his disappointment prevented him from recognizing them, her dawning smile was swiftly erased and her ascending eyebrows spoke eloquently enough of her haughty displeasure. Synchronously the lift hesitated at that landing and the gate clanged wide; the young woman wound her skirt about her and showed him a back which at any other time would have evoked his unstinted admiration. Then the gate shot to with a rattle and bang, and the lift dropped out of sight, leaving the man with mouth agape and eyes as wide.

A beaming but elderly femme de chambre on duty in the corridor, remarking O'Rourke's pause of stupefied chagrin, hoped and believed he needed her services. She bore down upon him accordingly.

"M'sieu' is desirous of—?"
He came out of his trance. "Nothing," he told her with acid brevity. "But, yes," he reconsidered with haste. "That lady who but this moment took the lift—her name?"

"Her name, m'sieu'? Ma'm'selle Voltaire."

"Impossible!" he told himself aloud, utterly unable to forge any connecting link between the lady in the lift and her whose voice had bewitched him. "But assuredly, m'sieu'. Do I not know—I who have waited upon her hand and foot these three days and to whom she has not given as much as—that." The woman ticked a finger-nail against her strong white teeth. "Ma'm'selle Victorine Voltaire," she asserted stubbornly.

O'Rourke fumbled in his pocket and found a golden ten-franc piece, surrendering it to the woman as heedlessly as though it had been as many centimes. "I'll be leaving the room in five minutes, now. And do ye, for the love of Heaven, me dear, try to set me things the least trifle to rights. Will ye now, like the best little girl in the world?"

The best little girl in the world, who was forty-five if a day, promised miracles—with a bob of a courtesy. But so disgruntled was O'Rourke that he shut his door in her face.

"'Tis meself that's the fool," he said savagely enough, "to think for a moment that ever again I'll set me eyes on her pretty face—God bless it, wherever she may be! . . . For why should I deserve to—, the peniless adventurer?"

ARE YOU ON OPPOSITE SIDE?

Frank Crane Thinks the "Standing Minority Report" Necessary to Keep Mankind Honest.

Doubtless each of us knows someone in his circle of acquaintances who is intellectually contrary. Such a one delights to take on every occasion the opposite side.

If he is in a religious community he will take his stand firmly for atheism; if he is among scoffers he will argue just as valiantly for the church. He is a standing minority report. He is a crooked stick that will not lie in the woodpile. Like Goethe's devil he is the spirit who constantly denies.

This class of persons is a steady, normal crop in the field of humanity. We would not get along without them. They keep the kettle of things stirred, which otherwise would settle and spoil. These are they that keep the course of social life pure as a running stream and prevent it from becoming like a green, stagnant pool.

They supply ginger for political campaigns. They are the party out of power. They are the watchdogs of progress. Without them religion would harden into a cruel tyranny of superstition, falsehoods would be crystallized in power and ancient fraud live forever. They harass mankind into being honest.—Frank Crane.

O'Rourke Caught his Breath, Stunned.

of miracles is past," he muttered. "'twould never be herself. I've had me chance—and forfeited it. 'Twill not come to me a second time. . . ."

The singing ceased. Of a sudden O'Rourke swore with needless heat, and, plucking away the offending tie, cast it savagely from him. "The divvie fly away with ye!" he said. "Is it bent on driving me mad ye are? I'd give me fortune to have Danny back! Me fortune—faith!" He laughed the word to bitter scorn. "'Tis meself that never had the least of anything like that without 'twas feminine—with a 'm's' tacked onto the front of it!" And he strode away to the window to cool off.

It was like him to forget his exastune that the unknown woman's voice had set buzzing in his brain, and broke off to snap his fingers defiantly at the Casino. "That for ye!" he flouted it—"sitting there with your painted smile and your cold eyes, like the brazen buzzy ye are—Goddess of Chance, indeed!—thinking ye have but to bide your time for all men to come and render up their souls to ye! Here's once ye lose, madam; after this night I'm done with ye; not a sou of mine will ever again cross your tables. I'll have ye to understand the O'Rourke's a reformed character from the morning on!"
He laughed softly, in high feather with his conceit; and, thinking cheerfully of the days of movement and

HARD ON THE HEART

GERMAN PHYSICIAN FINDS FAULT WITH OUR ELEVATORS.

Advises Walking Downstairs, but Says Use Elevator Going Up, as It Undoubtedly Helps to Save the Organs of Life.

A German physician who has been visiting this country is said to have declared that riding in our swift elevators is the cause of the increase of heart trouble in this country. He holds the involuntary catching of the breath when the elevator starts or stops as responsible.

"Far from causing injury to the heart," says the independent, "elevators have spared that important organ much unnecessary strain. There is probably nothing harder on the heart than the going up many flights of stairs. The pumping of blood through tightly contracted muscles during the process of lifting the body up to a height is one of the hardest that the heart can have.

"Men who are suffering from heart disease have been kept at work and enabled to do their work longer because of the presence of the elevator than by any advance that there is in therapeutics. While the elevator is thus so important an adjunct for the heart so far as going upstairs is concerned, it is probable that most people would be benefited by walking downstairs occasionally.

"A distinguished German authority in the treatment of obesity has recommended walking downstairs rather rapidly as probably the best possible means of taking off the surplus tissue, and particularly that which collects in the abdominal region and is hard to move by ordinary forms of exercise, such as walking and the like. The gentle jolting motion tends to lead to the reabsorption of the fatty material that is accumulated. Some American physicians have tried the suggestion on a number of patients with reported success.

Besides this there is probably no better exercise for the ankle joints than that of coming downstairs. One of the most frequent sources of complaint of extreme fatigue and of achy feelings that are often supposed to be rheumatic is the yielding of the arch of the foot with a tendency to the development of flatfootedness. This has grown very common in recent years, mainly because of the small amount of brisk exercise of the feet that men take.

We do much standing, often standing even on long rides, but little rapid walking. The consequence is that the muscles which normally hold the joints of the ankle firmly together become flabby and allow the gradual disappearance of the arch and the relaxation of the ligaments of the ankle joints. Many people wear flat-foot braces for this, and in advanced cases such a crutch is probably necessary.

In most cases, and particularly at the beginning of yielding of the arch it would be much better if exercises were practiced to restore the strength and firmness and contour of the arch rather than support it by artificial means. The elevator has taken away the exercise for the feet that used to be obtained in going up and coming down the stairs. So far as it is of use in facilitating ascent in the high buildings it is an advantage. It would be probably much better, however, if it were not used so much for coming down.

Carefree Bohemians.

"How would you like to go to a Bohemian supper? Lots of literary people and all that."

"No; the Bohemians are too free and easy for me. Last time I went they ran out of cheese and spread the sandwiches with literary paste."

Thoroughness.

"When I take up an idea," said the egotist, "I cover it completely."

"You do more than that," replied the satirist; "you bury it."

REBELS' TRIAL IN PARIS

Working of a Conspirators' Institute Is Laid Bare in the French Capital.

Extraordinary things are coming out at the trial in Paris of seven revolutionists on the charge of having threatened and sequestered three of their comrades whom they suspected of betraying them, the one for the space of 53 hours, another for 43 hours, and the third for 12, with the result that their captives signed confessions. The story of two of these affairs having been related in some of the newspapers, the judicial authorities instituted an inquiry, with the result that warrants were issued for the arrest of nine men. Three only could be captured, as the rest had fled, but four of the latter surrendered.

Meanwhile, it had been ascertained that a third revolutionist had been drawn into a trap and also sequestered, his papers being even seized at his dwelling. When questioned he and his fellow-prisoners assumed full responsibility for what they had done, and soon the presiding judge remarked:

"You have, like us, a detective department, thanks to which you have been able to intercept correspondence, to shadow people, and to lay traps for them. You have employed the classic methods of the police, and you have also gendarmes, the jeunes-gardes revolutionnaires. You have, too, your magistrates, but there is this difference, that the accused are not assisted by counsel."

The person to whom this was addressed coolly replied that they left brutal methods to the regular police.

Did the man who had undergone the longest sequestration complain? "No, poor fellow; he was only too glad to get off so cheaply. It might perhaps have been different with the republicans of former days, who did not hesitate to use daggers and revolvers when they got rid of spies."—Paris Correspondence London Telegraph.

An Inventor.

When interested and disinterested persons tried to extract from Molly Hobart anything except praise of the man whom she had chosen from among her village suitors, they soon found that it could not be done.

"I went over to see Molly this afternoon," said Mrs. Ransom to her husband at supper one evening. "I declare she's right about one thing. Jake has plenty of invention if he is shackless in his ways. Do you recall that I asked her last time you and I were over to the farm what Jake was keeping those old wheels right out in the yard for, with most of their spokes gone?"

Mr. Ransom nodded. "Well, his wife chuckled, as she went on with her story," Molly told me then that Jake would find a good use for 'em, and he has. He's took and knocked away all the spokes that were left, and he's run those two hubs down onto two stakes out in his meadow, and tied a rope round each of 'em, and hitched the other ends to those two cows of his.

"And when I was over there today, there they were, walking round and round, free as you please, and the hub clipping round and round with the rope, and not a chance of their getting twisted nor tangled!"

"Molly says Jake has some thoughts of getting out a patent on his idea. Epose he could?"—Youth's Companion.

His Wife Knew.

"Strange," mused a north side man when he was more or less dexterously fishing clankers out of his furnace with a poker, he speared a bright, silvery furred mass about the size of a No. 8 shoe.

"Extraordinary, in fact," he exclaimed as he examined the metal, the identity of which he did not fix at once. He glanced with interest at his coal pile, for this N. S. man is of a sort of scientific turn of mind, and he was somewhat pleased with himself as he figured that some kind of ore had been mixed up with his coal, and his furnace acting as a smelter, had reduced the bright shiny mass therefrom. It held him that he had explained the matter so easily and he thought he would modestly show his wife how he had solved the strange occurrence.

"Look here, dear," he began. "I don't suppose you could tell me what this is, could you?"

"Yes," she snapped. "That's my aluminum shoe!"

NOTE.—She put the skillet in the furnace to burn off the dried particles of turkey head. No trace of the turkey could be seen.—Cleveland Leader.

WHERE DOCTORS FAILED TO HELP

Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound Restored Mrs. Green's Health—Her Own Statement.

Covington, Mo.—"Your medicine has done me more good than all the doctor's medicines. At every monthly period I had to stay in bed four days because of hemorrhages, and my back was so weak I could hardly walk. I have been taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and now I can stay up and do my work. I think it is the best medicine on earth for women."

—Mrs. JENNIE GREEN, Covington, Mo.

How Mrs. Cline Avoided Operation.

Brownsville, Ind.—"I can say that Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has done me more good than anything else. One doctor said I must be operated upon for a serious female trouble and that nothing could help me but an operation.

"I had hemorrhages and at times could not get any medicine to stop them. I got in such a weak condition that I would have died if I had not got relief soon. Several women who had taken your Compound, told me to try it and I did and found it to be the right medicine to build up the system and overcome female troubles.

"I am now in great deal better health than I ever expected to be, so I think I ought to thank you for it."—Mrs. O. M. CLINE, S. Main St., Brownsville, Ind.

Work Begets Work.

George W. Perkins, the New York financier, was talking about the scarcity of the $10,000 a year man—the man actually worth a $10,000 salary.

"The advantage of the $10,000 a year man," he said, "is not alone that he works splendidly—it is also that under him everybody else works splendidly. There's a Chinese proverb," he said, "that expresses exactly what I mean:

"If a farmer is diligent the soil will not be lazy."

A Poor Guesser.

Wedmore—Before I married, I learned to live on half my income.

Singleton—And found that it was a wise step, eh?

Wedmore—Yes, only a half was the wrong proportion—I should have made it an eighth.

PURELY FEMININE

DRAPE PRETTY FACES GRAY IS HIGHLY IN FAVOR

MODELS OF SPRING BONNETS FOR CHILDREN.

Fashions in Shape Resemble Those of the Grownups—Shirtings and Plaittings Are Employed in Great Profusion.

Two pretty spring bonnets are pictured here, such as will be worn during the coming season by little girls. So far as shape is concerned they are about like those worn by grown-ups. It is in the finishing that they differ. Little details of making and trimming class them as juvenile styles.

Both these bits of childish millinery are made on wire frames and are good examples of prevailing methods of making and trimming hats for children.

Light weight silks, silk muslins and chiffons are used for facings. Light colors are chosen and small flowers

All Shades and Tints Are Observed in the Dressy Costumes for Afternoon and Evening Wear.

Grays in all shades and tints are highly in favor this season, both in the province of the tailored suit and the more dressy costumes for afternoon and evening wear. A touch of black often appears; but no less frequently the collars and cuffs are made up in white, and the result is modish and charming. Collars of white broadcloth or satin, or other soft woolen materials, are impracticable for hard usage; they soil easily.

Paquin has designed a three-piece suit of dark gray velvet of the corduroy type. A little black is woven in with the gray, which gives a slight impression of shot effect in some lights. The short, loose coat is double breasted, fastening to the left. A straight collar of skunk encircles the neck closely, and falls in short ends over the shoulder. A bordering of skunk trims the sleeves. Heavy fastenings, fashioned from heavy cords made from and soft ribbons (with an occasional model showing velvet ribbon) make up the decorations. Frames are made small enough to fit. Many shirtings and plaittings are employed.

The choice of shapes for children is far more varied than in the past, and consequently their millinery is more quaint and pleasing than ever.

For midsummer, lingerie hats will hold first place probably, but such is the preference for lace and braids, just now, that it is not safe to make predictions.

JULIA BOTTOMLEY.

AVOID CONTRASTS IN COLOR

Too Few Women Seem to Realize the Charm There is in Simplicity.

Women, speaking generally, have been very slow to realize the charm of simplicity. The inestimable value of a few grateful lines, and the wisdom of trusting rather to the carrying out carefully of one good idea than to the over-elaboration of several schemes of decoration and contrasts of color, in one and the same unfortunate garment.

Most of us have come across, now and again, that weak-minded and irresolute individual who can never leave well enough alone, and who adds rosettes of velvet here and groups of buttons there, tucks and flounces, frills and furbelows, until all the original grace and elegance of the gown disappear entirely under a mass of extraneous and altogether unnecessary adornment. To these more or less meaningless trimmings, the great French dressmakers have always been strongly opposed, and it is really a matter of congratulation that their good influence in this respect should be making itself felt at last, more especially as the beautiful fabrics which have been prepared for the winter season, are so lovely in themselves as regards both color and texture.

Velvet Girdle.

The term "girdle" used to suggest rather bulky swathings of folded silk or satin, sometimes brought to a point high up in the middle of the back. We can even remember "girdle forms," four or five inches wide, pointed at top and bottom, front and back, which, velvet constitute the only other trimming.

The coat is lined with a beautiful white crepe meteor broadened in black velvet, which shows plainly when the fronts are thrown open.

The most pronounced feature of the tailored or semi-tailored costumes is the combination of two materials. Skirts of satin and velvet appear from beneath the tunics and coats of serge or wool; and skirts of white cloth and ratine are much used under coats of dark wool and velvet, the white being repeated in the collar and cuffs.

GIRL'S UNDER-BODICE

Cambric, madapolam and Jap silk are all suitable materials in which to make this little under-bodice. It is a specially nice pattern to wear under blouses. The neck and sleeves are trimmed with insertion and lace.

Materials required: One yard 36 inches wide, one and one-fourth yard insertion, two yards lace.

Natural Avoidance.

Mayor Gaynor of New York was defending his anti-suffrage views: "Woman has her place and man has his," he said, "and when I think of the confusion that would come from intermingling their places, I am reminded of an anecdote about Lady Holland. Lady Holland once said to Lord John Russell: 'Why hasn't Lord Holland got a post in the cabinet?' 'Well, if you must know,' Lord John answered, 'it is because nobody would work in a cabinet with a man whose wife opens all his letters.'"

FORCE MEXICAN WAR INTO UNITED STATES

MADERO AUTHORITIES CROSS BORDER AND ARREST TWO.

TAKE THEM BACK FORCIBLY

American Exodus From South Begins—Are in Predicament As Those Traveling Are in Greater Peril Than Those Staying Where They Are.

Austin, Tex., March 5.—That Mexican military authorities crossed the international boundary at Brownsville, Texas, arrested Jose Garcia and Arturo Margain on Texas soil and forcibly removed the men across the border, was reported to Governor Colquitt today by Captain J. M. Fox, in charge of the detachment of Texas rangers stationed at Brownsville. Captain Fox has been instructed to report further and Governor Colquitt has asked President Taft to order an investigation.

Are Leaving Country.

El Paso, Tex., March 5.—E. S. Plumb and two companions who left the city of Chihuahua at six o'clock last night by automobile, brought word that the purport of President Taft's proclamation requesting Americans in disturbed sections of Mexico to leave the country had been received there and that a considerable exodus was in prospect.

The skirmish yesterday between Pascual Orozco's force of rebels, which hold the city of Chihuahua, and Colonel Pancho Villa's federals, supplied impressive emphasis to the presidential warning. Citizens stand in fear of looting and other disorders from either side which may gain control of the city.

The Americans are in a predicament. They are as safe at home as in traveling south, and the only present means of moving north is by horse or automobile and the supply of both is scant. Orozco is doing his best to reassure all residents of their safety, natives and foreigners alike.

Villa has been in camp at Fresno, about 80 miles out of the city on the railroad, where he has locomotives and rolling stock. He moved his force, said to number 1,260 men, to a cattle ranch

Orozco Leads 600.

With Insurrecto Troop Trains, Gallego, Mexico, March 4.—Colonel Emilio P. Campa, at the head of 800 Vasquistas, who left Juarez yesterday afternoon, brought the three sections of his train to a halt here this morning and later exchanged messages by telegraph by Pascual Orozco, who announced that he was at the head of 600 insurrectos in the city of Chihuahua. Orozco urged Campa to move at once into the city, but the latter seemed to wish to proceed with such caution that he would avoid possible traps. There were rumors in camp that Orozco might be wavering back to his old Madero allegiance, but while Colonel Campa was inclined to attach little value to the gossip, he determined to proceed with all possible circumspection.

CLAIMANT NOT GEORGE KIMMEL.

Question Whether Missing Arkansas City Banker Is Dead or Alive Not Determined.

St. Louis, March 5.—The Kimmel jury decided the issue of greatest public interest in the famous identity mystery and $25,000 insurance contest when it reported to Judge Amidon today its unanimous conclusion that the Kimmel claimant, an ex-convict, put forward by an insurance company of New York, was not George Kimmel.

But, the jury stated, it could not agree on the vital issue of the suit, whether George A. Kimmel was dead or alive in March, 1904, when the present suit was filed. This meant that the jury, as a whole, would not accept John B. Swinney's astonishing story of Kimmel's violent death in an Oregon forest, while returning from a buried gold expedition.

It also meant that the jurors could not decide whether, aside from Swinney's story, the evidence pointed conclusively to Kimmel's death, and thus entitled the plaintiff, the receiver of a Niles, Mich. bank, to collect $5,000 of Kimmel's $25,000 insurance from the insurance company.

The jury was then sent back to its deliberations and after adjourning the Lewis case, Judge Amidon announced he would receive the verdict in the morning if an agreement was reached

IS THE PAIN THERE?

"Every Picture Tells a Story"

Then Your Kidneys May Be Weak and in Need of Quick Attention

Backache is enough cause to suspect the kidneys. The kidneys are in the small of the back. Congested kidneys swell and throb. The back naturally aches. It hurts to bend or stoop or to sit down.

Kidney trouble may come on all unnoticed. A cold, a chill, a fever, a strain or irregular habits may start it. While sick kidneys can be cured in the beginning, it is a serious matter when dropsy, gravel or Bright's disease sets in.

Doan's Kidney Pills have made a reputation in the cure of backache, and kidney and bladder ills. The best proof is the testimony of the users. Here are two typical testimonials. Thirty thousand others are being published in the newspapers. A postage stamp will bring you reports of cases nearer home.

MRS. MARY I. REMINGTON.

A Resident of Gilroy, Cal.

Cured of Serious Case at a Critical Period.

"I suffered so severely from pain and soreness over my kidneys," says Mrs. Remington, "that it was a task for me to turn in bed. My kidneys acted very freely but secretions were retarded and scalded in passage. I was weak and much run down.

"After taking other remedies without benefit, I began using Doan's Kidney Pills and was completely cured. I was going through the critical period of a woman's life at the time, and after using Doan's Kidney Pills there was a miraculous change for the better in my health."

SHELDON SMITH.

Prop. Arlington House, Woodland, Cal.

Cured of Serious Case and Feels Like a Boy, Despite His 75 Years.

"Three years ago I was almost helpless," said Mr. Smith, "Kidney secretions scalded terribly and obliged me to arise ten to twelve times a night. My left limb became so stiff and sore I could hardly walk—just hobbled around with a cane.

"I had almost every complaint that diseased kidneys produce and Doan's Kidney Pills cured them all. At the age of 76 I feel like a boy, and enjoy health and comfort. Can anyone wonder at my gratitude?"

Fortissimo.

When a certain Baltimore matron returned home one afternoon not so long ago the first sight her eyes beheld was a badly damaged youngster of hers. Little Bobby's forehead bore a bump almost the size of a doorknob. "Heavens!" exclaimed the mother. "What has happened to Bobby?"

"Nuthin' much, mum," explained the new nurse. "You told me, mum, he might play on the piano if he wanted to. Well, mum, wasn't while he was sliding on the top, he slid a bit too far, mum; an' that accounts for the bump ye see, mum."

Belated Information.

Albert Morris Bagby was being congratulated at the Waldorf-Astoria in New York on the success of his "musical mornings."

"I impute my success," he said, "to the fact that I engage no talent that I don't know thoroughly. In entertainment, as in matrimony, knowledge is most important."

Then Mr. Bagby smiled and said: "Two ladies were talking the other day about the Chinese revolution. The younger lady said:

"Isn't it dreadful in China? A woman doesn't know her husband till she marries him."

"The other lady, a divorcee, answered bitterly:

"I didn't know my husband till I married him, either."—St. Louis Globe Democrat.

A Beautiful Decline.

Ollie James, the gigantic and genial congressman and senator-elect from Kentucky, was in conversation the other day with a Washingtonian when the latter made certain inquiries with reference to a mutual friend whom he had not seen for a number of years.

"And how does Col. Prescott spend his declining years?" he asked.

"Beautifully, sir; beautifully!" answered James. "He has a fine farm, sir. A string of trotters, sir. And a barrel of whisky 18 years old—and a wife of the same age, sir!"

POLITICAL LAWN TENNIS AT WASHINGTON

RAILROAD OUSTER SUIT FAILS

SUPREME COURT RULES JOINT OWNERSHIP IS LEGAL.

Missouri Pacific and Other Companies Not Acting in Violation of Anti-Trust Law in Missouri.

Jefferson City, Mo.—The suit of the state to invoke penalties or even ouster upon the Missouri Pacific, the Wabash, the St. Louis, Iron Mountain & Southern railroad companies, the Pacific Express and American Refrigerator Transit company, under the anti-trust law, was practically dismissed by the supreme court.

This suit alleged a joint ownership of stock between these companies which amounted to control, all in violation of the anti-trust law. It also alleged that the Wabash and the Missouri Pacific were controlled by a joint ownership of stock and were operating parallel and competing lines in violation of the law. The court holds that as the Wabash owns eastern connections it is not a parallel and competing line of the Missouri Pacific.

The court finds that the Pacific Express company has 60,000 shares of stock. Of this the Wabash owns 24,000 and the Missouri Pacific 12,000, and which does not constitute control of this property; that the Wabash has 331,110 shares of common stock and 140,000 shares of preferred, of which the Pacific Express company owns 20,000, the St. Louis, Iron Mountain & Southern 65,000 shares and $5,435,000 of debenture bonds, which ownership does not constitute control.

MONETT HAS ELECTRIC LIGHTS

Fight of Three Years With Old Company Ends in Victory and Light for City.

Monett, Missouri.—Monett's new municipal electric light plant has begun operations and Monett has now the first street light in three years, owing to litigation with the Monett Electric Light, Power and Ice company.

The old company had been in operation since 1893. The plant was allowed to deteriorate until the service was unsatisfactory. In 1899 the city council objected to the proposed increase in rates on street lights and being unable to make satisfactory terms with the company, on June 26, decided to give the citizens of Monett an opportunity to vote on a $35,000 municipal plant.

The election carried by a large majority. The company then appealed to the federal court for an injunction restraining the issuing of bonds, which was refused.

Next the Monett aldermen passed an ordinance restraining the company from extending their lines and new poles set were cut down by the city. The company applied for an injunction to restrain the city from interfering with their property, which was also refused.

In February, 1911, the bonds were sold, and a first class plant has just been installed.

All pipes, mains, branches and all property belonging to the company will be torn up and removed.

SUGAR SUBSTITUTE IS BARRED

Blissful Ignorance.

"Have you seen Joe lately?"
"Why, yes; I saw the old chap yesterday. And, what do you think?—he's going to be married!"
"Can it be possible? To whom?"
"He's going to marry Mary Merrie."
"What! Why, I didn't know they knew each other."
"They don't. That's why they're going to be married."

HANDS WOULD CRACK OPEN

"About two months ago my hands started to crack open and bleed, the skin would scale off, and the good flesh would burn and itch dreadfully. When my hands first started to get sore, there were small blisters like water blisters which formed. They itched dreadfully, it just seemed as though I could tear the skin all off. I would scratch them and the skin would peel off, and the flesh would be all red and crack open and bleed. It worried me very much, as I had never had anything the matter with my skin. I was so afraid I would have to give up my employment.

"My doctor said he didn't think it would amount to anything. But it kept getting worse. One day I saw a piece in one of the papers about a lady who had the same trouble with her hands. She had used Cuticura Soap and Ointment and was cured. I decided to try them, and my hands were all healed before I had used one cake of Cuticura Ointment. I am truly thankful for the good results from the Cuticura Soap and Ointment, for thanks to them I was cured, and did not have to lose a day from work. I have had no return of the skin trouble." (Signed) Mrs. Mary E. Breig, 2522 Brown Street, Philadelphia, Pa., Jan. 12, 1911.

Although Cuticura Soap and Ointment are sold everywhere, a sample of each, with 32-page book, will be mailed free on application to "Cuticura," Dept. L, Boston.
