Campus Mobilizes for Victory . . .

that fateful day, December 7, 1941, and everyone remembers what happened in the Pacific . . . Everyone in the Teachers College family—college students, alumni, faculty and even the youngsters in the Campus School—is energetically doing his part in the "all-out for victory" campaign . . .

The Campus School has mobilized its forces for an "all-out for victory" offensive . . . And cover girl, Doris Dickinson, first grader daughter of Coach and Mrs. Arthur D. Dickinson, is counting the stars in the American flag . . . And student teacher Berniece Braland, Kg. You Met the Defense Crisis

You, the readers of The Alumnus, helped your alma mater meet the defense crisis—a crucial teacher shortage—when you returned your nominations for future teachers, as requested in the January issue.

Returns have been pouring in, and hundreds of publications have been mailed to the teachers of tomorrow, needed to replace those taken from the profession by defense positions and the armed services . . .

We still need your help, however. The shortage has grown more acute since our last publication, so we are printing the blank again in this issue, on page 31. There is still time to do your part, but do it quickly in order that contacts may be made with the prospective teachers.

Crowds Expected in April . . .

THE CAMPUS WILL BE crowded the week end of April 24 and 25, as hundreds of Iowa teachers and school officials converge on College Hill for a series of three conferences . . .

Elementary principals will meet Friday, April 24, and elementary teachers will have their day on the following Saturday, April 25 . . .

All teachers of secondary school subjects, representing every academic department, will meet on both Friday and Saturday, and talk over their problems in one of the year's biggest conferences . . .

Drama students and teachers in Iowa's schools will have their annual Play Production Conference, Saturday. In the afternoon they will see the college theater's production of "The Wild Duck," by Henrik Ibsen. The play is also being given April 23 and 24.

Words Across the Border . . .

Two Teachers College debaters, Don Hackett, Waterloo, and Ed Turner, Garrison, journeyed into Canada during February to meet speakers from the University of Manitoba . . .

They exchanged words with the Canadians, February 17, on the question: "Resolved: That the United Nations should form a federation based upon the Roosevelt-Churchill Atlantic charter."

The meet was a return bout since Manitoba speakers visited Cedar Falls in the fall.

In Miss Lawther's Honor . . .

THE ANNA B. LAWTHER HALL, the newest residence hall for women at TEACHERS COLLEGE, was formally dedicated to Miss Lawther, retired member of the Iowa State Board of Education, Monday, January 12...

An oil portrait of Miss Lawther, painted by Alice Kent Stoddard, a Philadelphia artist, is now hanging in the lobby of the dormitory. Members of the Iowa State Board of Education and of the administrative staff of the college paid tribute to Miss Lawther at the ceremony.

Miss Lawther, who now lives in Dubuque, Ia., completed a quarter century's service to Iowa's institutions of higher education in July 1941.

* Two Teachers College students take advantage of the "speed-up plan" and courses designed to fit the needs of defense training. Fred Ritze, of Nora Springs, Ia., registers for courses needed for acceptance by the United States Naval Reserve, and Jean Paine, of Cedar Falls, Ia., who is finishing a four-year course in three years, receives her registration cards from Registrar Selmar Larson.

Speed-Up Plan Trains "Better Teachers Sooner"

THE "SPEED-UP" PLAN of instruction at TEACH-ERS COLLEGE is enabling Iowa's teacher-training center to turn out better teachers sooner, as all efforts are being made to meet the teacher shortage.

Prospective teachers may complete a four-year course in three calendar years and a two-year course in one and a half calendar years because of the plan, now being used widely although it has been in force for years.

The "speed-up" plan is made possible because TEACHERS COLLEGE operates on the basis of four, full 12-week quarters per year. The summer session, which begins June 3, is equivalent to the other three quarters of the academic year.

High school seniors, interested in becoming teachers, are urged to begin their college courses this coming summer.

Students with superior ability may shorten the length of time required for graduation by extra hours of study. They may receive a bachelor of arts degree in as little as two and a half calendar years or a two-year diploma in one and one fourth calendar years. Thus, a student starting his work on June 3 might be able to receive a two-year teaching certificate and be ready to teach at the end of the summer quarter in 1943.

Students now in attendance are also urged to take advantage of the summer quarter and hasten their graduation. They may enroll for the 12-week session from June 3 to August 21, or the special six-week session from June 15 to July 24.

The six-week session is especially designed for teachers in service who are required to earn additional college credit in order to renew their certificates. During this session students may earn up to nine quarter hours of credit which is equivalent to six semester hours. The six-week session thus affords opportunity to earn renewal credit in a minimum of time and at slight expense.

Young men who have been accepted as candidates for the United States Naval Reserves are enrolling for additional mathematics courses. They will remain on the campus until graduation before leaving for midshipman training.

Military training was in the spotlight on the Teachers College campus during World War I. With the S.A.T.C. Battalion of 1918, in the front row, are Captain Alfred Sorensen, Adjutant L. I. Reed, now dean of men, and Major F. N. Mead, health director emeritus.

IN WORLD WAR I, 1917

ARMY PRIVATES RULED THE CAMPUS

OING TO COLLEGE AND being in the United States Army at the same time was the status of Teachers College men during World War I, who were enlisted in the Student Army Training Corps.

What is known to students of today as the Women's Gymnasium was used as barracks for men enlisted in the S.A.T.C. The mess hall was located in the Nursery School Building while the women's athletic field of today was used for military drills as well as for athletic contests.

One of the features of the school work which consisted of map making, mechanical drawing, surveying, trigonometry and a two and one-half hour drill, was the marching to classes at attention.

They Had Week End Passes

Work during the day was run according to a strict routine which began at 6:15 o'clock in the morning and ended with taps at 10 o'clock at night. The schedule for football players was different, however, in that they had practice from 4 p.m. to 5:45 p.m. daily. After the game on Saturday they were given passes along with other students until Sunday evening.

The work of campus organizations, the Y.W.C.A., the Y.M.C.A., and the Catholic Student Association, all made their contribution of gifts to men in the service.

Organizations Over-Subscribed Quotas

THESE ORGANIZATIONS COOPERATED to conduct two campaigns of national service. In October the Student Friendship War Fund for Y.M.C.A. was started, and the college rose to the occasion to oversubscribe by several thousand dollars their quota of $6,500. In February students organized classes for conducting war work. Boxes of books as well as different kinds of food were collected and sent to Iowa cantonments by campus organizations and the faculty women's club. Quilts for Belgian children were made in addition to other useful clothing for men in the service.

Soon after our entry into the war men of Teachers College sent a petition to President

HOME FRONT LAUNCHES OFFENSIVE

WAR II HAS BROUGHT a change to the campus, and to the young collegiates preparing for careers in education. Students are more serious, less carefree, than they were four months ago, for they are preparing to fight America's "all-out for victory" campaign.

Hundreds of Teachers College alumni and students are in Uncle Sam's armed services, in all branches and in all parts of the world. Others are continuing their education while awaiting their call.

Those on the College Hill home front have embarked on a war-time offensive, which includes both material contributions to national defense, as well as morale-building measures among students and faculty.

They "Speed Up" Courses

STUDENTS ARE TURNING usual leisure time hobbies and pursuits into war aid work, and faculty members are enlarging their year-round "speed-up" schedule of instruction with free evening classes open to the entire community.

Probably the first and most significant contribution to the war effort is the speeding up of training of better teachers than ever before to strengthen the nation's schools.

Maintain Democratic Ideals

IN THE WORDS OF President Malcolm Price, "Our job is to train teachers for the common schools if the democratic ideal is to be maintained during the present era and carried on to the next generation, so that after the war we will have a citizenry capable of going forward in the democratic way of life."

The naval bureau of aeronautics considered Teachers College as a possible induction center for 2,500 naval aviation cadets, but plans for its use were abandoned by navy officials. Iowa's teacher training center was one of several strategically located colleges surveyed for the initial induction and physical toughening program, looking toward the training of 30,000 pilots within the next year.

The college has set up its own Defense Council, which acts as a clearing agency for all men students having questions about military service. If men have doubts as to what courses offer best Homer H. Seerley requesting that military training replace physical education. The petition was granted, and a battalion was organized under the direction of I. H. Hart, present director of the Bureau of Extension Service. Mr. Hart had charge of military drills for several weeks until an Iowa State Cadet Colonel from Ames came to take charge. When he was drafted Dr. F. N. Mead, health director emeritus, took charge of the battalion until U.S. commissioned officers came.

ON OCTOBER 1, 1918, the Student Army Training Corps at Teachers College was organized, and 46 men enlisted in this branch of Uncle Sam's great army. The status of an enlisted man in the S.A.T.C. was that of a private in the army and he drew $30 a month.

There were no non-commissioned officers in this pre-officers training school but acting ones were appointed. Men were kept here until their order number was reached in the draft, and then they were sent to one of three places—the officers training school, the non-commissioned officers school or as a private in the depot Brigade.

Although it was necessary for different members of the faculty to serve in the capacity of coaches, athletics at Teachers College continued except in the spring of 1917 when spring sports were abolished temporarily.

J. O. Perrine, star athlete at the University of Iowa, who was physics instructor at Teachers College, took charge of the football team in the fall of 1917 and also coached the basketball team.

MID-WAY IN THE SEASON Coach Perrine was called to Pennsylvania State College to take charge of the radio department in drilling recruits in the naval signal corps. He was succeeded by Russell F. Glesener, former TEACHERS COLLEGE athlete and coach at TEACHERS COLLEGE HIGH SCHOOL.

Baseball was resumed again in the spring of 1918 with Van Oot, manual arts instructor at Teachers College, serving as coach.

Ivan Doseff was football and basketball coach from 1918 to 1921, when L. L. Mendenhall, present director of athletics, took office.

preparation for certain branches of the armed forces, the council members stand ready and willing to offer advice.

Coeds of Bartlett Hall, women's dormitory, have launched their victory campaign. Becoming conservation conscious, they have placed containers in all the corridors for residents to deposit their waste paper, tinfoil, metal containers, such as toothpaste tubes, and any scraps of metal.

Coeds Save Light and Gas

Moreover, they are careful to turn off that extra lamp when they're not actually using it, and they remember to turn off the heat when they're not in the room. They are taking better care of their clothes to make new textiles available for those who need them most.

Students are all doing their part in eating the right foods and getting more sleep, all as part of the national program for healthful nutrition and physical fitness. The Women's League conducted a campus-wide survey of all coed diets and suggested how meals could be made more nutritious.

Uncle Sam's soldiers and sailors are receiving words of cheers and latest news about their alma mater when they open letters from Teachers College coeds. Residents of the women's dormitories find it easy to write an extra letter to a man in service when they are writing their regular letters home.

Knitting Needles Are Clicking

RED CROSS KNITTERS are found in every corridor, and several nights a week they meet to work and plan together. In between times, they spend free minutes working on knit garments. As The Alumnus goes to press plans are underway for the establishment of a Red Cross workroom on the campus where students may sew and knit.

Red Cross classes are being conducted by faculty members in first aid, home nursing, and nutrition. Housewives on College Hill are learning the essentials of these subjects.

Campus organizations have planned a series of public forums to keep students informed on the status of the war and to consider possible postwar peace plans.

☆ Graduation and the alumni reunion hold the twin spotlight on College Hill on May 31, 1942.

Alumni and Graduates Share Spotlight on May 31

Teachers College Alumni and the class of 1942 graduates will have a joint celebration, May 31, 1942, on College Hill. That occasion will mark the 62nd annual reunion of alumni and faculty, and the 65th annual Commencement.

A new tradition will be made for Commencement, when the ceremony is conducted at 5 p.m. on the terrace south of the Commons. Heretofore, the graduation has been held in the morning.

Sharing the spotlight for the day will be the reunion dinner, to be held this year 12 o'clock noon sharp, in order to allow alumni plenty of time for informal visits afterwards and to attend Commencement in the late afternoon. All classes with numerals ending in "2" and "7" will be honored this year.

Class of 1892 Is Coming!

THE NEWEST CLASS to achieve their golden anniversary will be the class of 1892, which has 24 men and 36 women among its living members today. This class ought to have the largest representation present of any golden anniversary group thus far honored, A. C. Fuller, director of the alumni service, believes.

Already planning to attend are the following members of the 1892 group: John Belz, George Mathes, Mrs. R. W. Gibson (Cora F. Spargur), Lulu Speer, Mrs. G. A. Stewart (Cora Taylor), all of Cedar Falls; Mrs. Bruce Francis (Ella Flater), Minneapolis, Minn.; J. Percival Huget, Shelter Island, N.Y.; Mrs. A. A. Palmer (Maude Humphrey), Waterloo; J. Edward Johnson, Sioux City; Mr. and Mrs. W. W. Wilson (Sophie Keeler), Traer; Jesse L. McLaughlin, Chicago.

Student Newspaper Editors Honored

Any member of any class graduating in 1892 or earlier will be awarded the 50-year gold medal provided he has not already received one, if he is present for the alumni dinner on May 31.

Former editors and business managers of the college newspaper, The Normal Eyte, and the present-day streamliner, The College Eye, will be honored guests at the dinner and reunion. The College Eye is celebrating its 50th anniversary.

Other honorees at the dinner will be members of the silver anniversary class of 1917, which has 396 living members, scattered over 35 states and in two outside provinces. The traditional anniversary dinner is in preparation for the "17-ers," and it is free to members of the class. "In-laws" and other members of the family are welcome, and tickets may be reserved for them. If the usual percentage of attendance holds this year, the silver anniversary reunion dinner will be the largest in history, according to Mr. Fuller.

Plans are also underway for a special chapel service on the morning of May 31. Alumni speakers will deliver brief sermons designed to be of special interest for the occasion.

The Commencement program will begin on the preceding Sunday, May 24, with the Baccalaureate service. The President's reception, at which Dr. and Mrs. Malcolm Price will receive graduating students, will be Sunday night. The festive Commencement dinner party will be on the eve of Commencement, Saturday, May 30, in the Commons.

Gladys Price, B.A. '38; Lois Morgan, Kg. '32; Helen Carpenter, Comm. '28; Kathryn Van Ness, B.A. '31; Muriel Northrup, B.A. '36; Beulah Flickinger, B.A. '35; Berneice Belz, B.A. '39; Loraine Lange, Cons. '31; Evelyn Spears, B.A. '34; Vera Peterson, B.A. '38, Esther Jones, B.A. '38.

Chicago Alumni Meet

By Louis A. Orr, B.S. '28

NE HUNDRED ALUMNI in the Chicago area heard President Malcolm Price at the annual alumni reunion at the Woman's Club in Chicago, November 15, 1941. It was one of the outstanding meetings of the Chicago area, not only in attendance but in spirit as well.

The alumni were cheered when they heard Dr. Price read a telegram assuring the Panthers of their second consecutive championship in the North Central Conference.

The group was favorably impressed with the new president's modesty, his willingness to serve this group of alumni, his attitudes toward student cooperation, and he left the Chicago group with the satisfaction of knowing that Teachers College is in most competent hands.

President Gertrude Steiner, J.C. '18, 23 Waltham St., Hammond, Ind., was in charge of the meeting. Superintendent L. L. Caldwell, B.A. '13, 1149 Forest, Hammond, gave some interesting comments on the effect of war preparations on our schools. Music was furnished by Nilo Hovey, former student, Hammond, Ind., High School.

New officers for the group are: Howard Cundy, B.A. '29, 120 Callan Ave., Evanston, Ill., president; S. L. Wilson, Hammond, Ind., vice-president; and Louis Orr, Ingleside, Ill., secretary-treasurer.

Alumni Hold Clinics

TEACHERS COLLEGE ALUMNI IN THE FIELD of industrial arts are promoting a program of industrial arts education in southeastern Iowa, as they hold a series of four clinic meetings a year.

Perle Rider, Man'l Arts '27, Clinton, Ia., High School, and George Mohr, B.S. '37, Davenport, Ia., High School, are president and secretary-treasurer of the group. Approximately 50 men meet to talk over shop techniques methods of instruction, and leadership activity.

Speakers at the meeting February 7, 1942, in Muscatine, Ia., were Harold G. Palmer and N. O. Schneider, Teachers College faculty members; C. H. Brown, B.S. '30, Muscatine industrial arts instructor; R. M. Hammes, B.S. '35, Davenport schools, and Mr. Mohr.

Baseball Leads Spring Sports Parade

COACH WHITFORD HOLDS PRACTICE FOR 25 CANDIDATES

HEADING THE SPRING SPORTS parade at TEACH-ERS COLLEGE will be the 1942 Panther baseball team.

Even though the weather has not been suitable for the great national pastime, Coach Lawrence Whitford has been holding daily workouts inside since early in March.

Approximately 25 candidates answered the first call to practice, as Whitford began building his 1942 diamond team around the seven returning lettermen.

Must Find Replacements for Pitchers

COACH WHITFORD'S BIGGEST problem will be to find replacements for his two starting pitchers of last year, Lyle Dodd and Wesley Patterson, who won nine of the Panthers' ten games last year. Other star performers lost through graduation are Art Borwick, clever shortstop, Don Dilly and Paul Hafke, two hardhitting outfielders. Bob Bowen, regular infielder, and Lin Schaffer, utility infielder, will not be available because they have been called into the service.

Dick Nottger, hard hitting catcher-outfielder, who belted the ball at a .525 clip for a new Teachers College hitting mark, is expected to be the big gun in the Panthers' offensive attack again this spring. Forrest Hanifan, who hit .309 last year, will be available for duty either behind the bat or in the outfield.

Sophomores Are Promising Prospects

To fill the GAPS IN the pitching staff Whitford has been grooming Al LoBalbo and Dan Bock, two righthander holdovers from last year.

As relief pitchers last season Bock won one and lost one while LoBalbo was credited with one loss and no wins. The two men worked a total of only 16 innings. To support these veterans of last season Whitford has several promising sophomore prospects in Lorene Jaines, Hal Veenker, Paul Miller and Max Austin. Another pitcher prospect is Gene Steinkamp of football fame, a southpaw.

Around the infield the Panthers will have veterans at first and third but will have to rely upon sophomore material for the all important keystone combination.

In the outfield either Hanifan or Nottger will be in right field with sophomores fighting it out with Ken Dilly for the outer garden.

As THE ALUMNUS goes to press the baseball schedule is incomplete but ten games five of which are at home, have been tentatively scheduled.

Last year's Panther team won 10 and lost seven contests.

Thinclads Set for Spring

ALTHOUGH THE TRACK SCHEDULE is incomplete as we go to press, Coach Arthur D. Dickinson has been grooming his candidates for the spring events by holding daily workouts in the stadium.

Last year the Panther thinclads enjoyed a banner season winning the North Central Conference meet for the third consecutive year, as well as breaking two relay records at the Drake relays, placing first in the Viking Olympics and the Iowa State Collegiate Meet.

Only three letterwinners of last year, Bob Keyes, Jim Maas and Gordon Sorenson, are on hand to form a nucleus for this season's squad. Such stars as Jack Mayer and Bill Jenkins who placed in the A. A. U. meet in New York last summer have graduated, as well as John Clark, Vern Bredow and Jim Vaughan who won loop championships.

In an attempt to fill the gaps left by graduation Dickinson will be forced to rely upon sophomore material. Several of the sophomores who are the most promising are Clarence Hightshoe, Willis Colville, Ken Church, and Bill Phillips, who won a letter two years ago.

Panther Five Wins 10 Tilts

THE MOST IMPROVED basketball quintet in the state was the comment of several seasoned sports observers who watched Coach Oliver M. "Hon" Nordly's "iron men" win 10 of 19 contests.

With only two reserves from last year's team Nordly came through as usual with a team that played like champions the last seven weeks of the campaign.

After dropping five of their first seven scheduled games the Panthers hit a winning stride which saw them lose only four more games.

The Panthers offensive attack was built around Dick Seidler, 200-pound forward from Waterloo, who was the scoring sensation of the North Central Conference. Seidler was not only second in the individual scoring race in loop with a total of 137 points, but he also set a new school scoring mark for a single game when he bagged 26 points against North Dakota State and again against North Dakota University.

The old mark of 25 was set by Don Green last year. In addition Seidler's sensational one-handed shots made it possible for him to set a new all time individual school scoring record of 222 points for the season. The old record of 197 markers was set by Fred Lofquist in 1939-'40.

In spite of the fact that Seidler was a heavy scorer, the Panthers were far from a one man team. When the Panther ace was cold either Bob Titsworth, Bob Hunt, Del Mully or Harry McFarlane would come through to keep the team's victory string in order.

The Panthers even did their part for the Red Cross Ambulance Fund, by meeting Grinnell College in the Men's gymnasium as part of a triple header basketball program. Playing before a full house which netted $1,565.20 the Panthers easily defeated their state rivals 48 to 31.

Bob Hunt, pivot man, who was one of the main cogs in Nordly's machine, will be the only member of the squad graduating in 1942. The other four regulars are only sophomores and

A Teacher Remembers the Nightmares of the First Year

By RALPH G. NICHOLS, B.A. '29

EDITOR'S NOTE: These are the nightmares of a new teacher during that fateful first year, when the profession offers the greatest challenge. In periods of alternate despondency and uplift, Ralph G. Nichols wrote these letters to a friend—but he never mailed them.

Instead he filed the letters away for no one to see. Now that he is established as instructor in speech at the University of Minnesota, he has unveiled them in the hope that perhaps some of the 17,000 readers of THE ALUMNUS may be interested. The editors welcome comments and reactions from readers of the letters.

August 28

Dear Frank:

Boy, BUT I'M HUNGRY. I drove my 1918 Ford down here at about five o-clock, and found it impossible to get any supper. I guess school teachers aren't supposed to eat anything, or if they are, their lunches must be carried with them.

By George, Frank, you should see where I am to teach. You know I got my job by mail, so the task of finding the school itself was no mean one. After several inquiries for the Blankship Consolidated School it was found on a certain cross-roads, surrounded by corn-fields. The building itself is quite new, perched on the edge of nowhere. Only three farm houses are in sight. What is a fellow to do when he needs a haircut?

When I got here I went right up into the building to ask the superintendent where I was to room and board, and got the surprise of my life. A janitor said I would find him in the book closet. As I opened the door of the closet I heard a man's voice say, "Yes, Lucille, this ninth-grade algebra is only a dollar ten."

Intending to impress and over-awe this ninthgrader with my dignity, I drew myself up and strode in. Just then Jack Dempsey decided to come out, and I was knocked backwards nearly a rod. I think my teeth rattled when I brought up against the wall across the corridor. I leaped to attention, thinking to apologize to my superintendent, and then drew back in dismay.

A Match for Jack Dempsey

Towering a full six inches over me in height was the largest girl I've ever seen. She wasn't Jack Dempsey, but I swear she could whip him with one hand. Lucille is a ninth grader. I tremble when I think of what my seniors will look like tomorrow.

Well, the superintendent told me where to room and board, and I can't complain of poor edibles for there weren't any. "Teachers aren't expected for meals until after school is in session." The room is a different proposition. Two little towheads were eating crackers in it when I arrived. And right now I can hear scratching noises behind the plaster. I hope the little beasties stay where they are.

Professor Walters used to tell us to go to bed early before the first day of school. It's only eight-thirty, but I'm going to bed. I'll write you again tomorrow night if I'm able to do so.

Good night, Nick

August 29

Dear Frank:

I'm ready to quit. I'm so tired I ache in every bone. School teaching is kind of a nightmare. I dimly remember about two hundred pairs of overalls covering the building like a blanket. In my first class instead of taking down my assignment, the boys scuffed their feet on the floor, and the girls giggled and commented on their new teacher, which was me.

Professor Goetch had warned us just what to do in this case. He said, "Pick out the largest boy in the class, give him a good shaking, and your disciplinary troubles will be over."

I looked for the largest boy—and then kept right on looking. He's big enough to be Lucille's husband. Finally I grabbed the smallest fellow, a little tubercular-looking fellow named Critmore, and shook him. Things did quiet down a little.

Pages of Objectives

RIGHT AFTER SCHOOL we had a teachers' meeting where the superintendent (we do hope first impressions aren't lasting) dictated pages and pages of objectives in education which we were to copy down. We wrote objectives for hours and then went to a supper consisting chiefly of tomatoes. I never eat tomatoes and I'm getting hungry.

When I opened the door of my room tonight three little towheads had a tube of toothpaste and were uproariously happy in making geometric configurations on the floor with the stream of paste which emerged as they scientifically pressed the tube. Inasmuch as it was my paste they were using, my first inclination was annihilation, but just then a line from one of Professor Goetch's lectures came into my mind.

The line was: "If it offend my neighbor to eat meat I'll eat no meat." The application seemed fairly plain. If I disciplined the little shavers, surely the landlady would be offended. The upshot of the matter was arbitration and three sticks of Spearmint.

Say, when I quit college I thought the day of making lesson plans had passed; but let me tell you of what each teacher here must do. Every Monday morning lesson plans for every lesson every day of the week have to be handed in to the superintendent. I teach five different subjects per day and there are one hundred eighty school days per year. It doesn't take more than fifteen minutes or so to figure out that all I have to do this year besides a little teaching is to write nine hundred lesson plans. Isn't it an alluring prospect? Well, it's eight-thirty and my bed time.

Sincerely, Nick

September 25

Dear Frank:

It is Sunday afternoon. I am here in my room because all dutiful teachers should stay in their communities during at least half of their week-ends. The past month of school has been an age in length, but the teachers have all fallen into the routine of the thing, and it isn't so bad.

The dusty highway in front of my window serves to provide the only source of interest. Across the road two aged and bewhiskered farm hands are engaging in a game of horseshoe. It appears to be the chief pastime in

The cherubs eating crackers

Blankship on Sunday. Just now they are hotly disputing the results of their last cast. A foot rule is brought forth by one claimant, and both players kneel over the equine footwear. I'd like to go over and watch the game, but they intensely resent anyone's intrusion upon their concentrated efforts. I wish there was some place to go or something to do. Professor Hoyt used to say you should accept invitations to visit the patrons on week-ends. I think the patrons know I'd accept, or they would ask me. Why are week-ends anyhow? Guess I'll see if I can take a nap.

So long, Nick

February 23

Dear Frank:

THREE LONG PENETRATING roars rend the air. Four agile figures in white perform like demons before a solid mass of humanity. Handkerchiefs, scarves and hats are waved and cast onto the floor, there to be stamped underfoot by irate owners. All the world is gone mad.

Some half dozen figures in abbreviated costumes leap and cavort about like young colts in a pasture. Another half dozen file sullenly through a door to the dressing room. Intense disgust is pictured on every countenance. The reason? Oh, merely that the Blankship captain had failed to toss a free throw which might have tied the game with Dysart.

Two weeks ago when we beat LaPorte City I was a hero. None was too proud to shake my hand and observe that I was doing a good piece of work in this community.

Tonight, none is humble enough even to glance in my direction. Such is the fortune of an athletic coach. Surely he leads a dog's life. Why, oh why, did I ever decide to teach school and coach basketball? I haven't a friend in the township. I'm going to start praying before every game, as Bo Mc-(Continued on page 19)

January 4

Dear Frank:

I CAME BACK FROM CHRISTMAS vacation today, and this time it is four little towheads who play contentedly on the thin and threadbare carpet. It's going to cost me more for gum now, I expect. Rag dolls, a harmonica, and innumerable blocks litter my room. By Gad, though, it isn't so bad. Seems kind of good to see the little shavers.

Frank, a funny thing has happened to me tonight. I've just realized that despite all my sworn intentions never to teach another year of school, I'll be back here next year if they'll have me.

What if they do want a fellow to win every ball game: It's their chief interest in living. What if they do ignore a fellow when he loses: They're just as cordial when he wins again.

It seems impossible that a fellow could miss anything as much as I've missed the blue overalls and red sweaters of my lusty aspirants to knowledge.

Teaching school is like riding bareback. It's uncomfortable as the dickens sometimes, but it's fun after all. Better get into the game next year, Frank, my boy. I know you'll like it.

As ever, Nick
