IF YOU CAN TRUST TEAM YOU MAY MUST
for Combs continues to say "I still am not going to the Legislature." The Courier-Journal continues to write to contend that this session has been as tightly controlled as the previous one.
The Associated Press continued, "The Administration rules committee in both chambers, controls which come up for a vote."
Morris, a veteran correspondent for the Courier-Journal Bureau, wrote Sunday "with only 11 more legislative days in the 1960 session of the General Assembly, only the 734 that have been introduced so far, have been enacted by both House and Senate. This means that bulk of proposed legislation will be tightly under Governor Combs."
Members of the Legislature, both House and Senate, we have more than a passing acquaintance, several are going along with Combs and his administration, in their time there has never been a governor that completely dominated the legislature and its action than Governor Combs.
Sunday editorial, the Courier-Journal indicated some at if the assembly is to fulfill its obligation to the people, and do it without unduly hurried consideration the last few days, it had better be about its task.
TAKING AND SPENDING ADMINISTRATION The significant legislation that Combs, through his legislature, has introduced so far, passed includes (1) the 3% bonus bill, which he has used to get his tax proposal and expense of the veterans; (2) the m for state employees, which is demagoguery on its subject is discussed elsewhere in this paper; (3) expanded on calling the constitutional convention; (4) expanded benefits, which is commendable.
Other legislation has dealt primarily with appropriation bills for salaries for most everyone, and money for departments and agencies. It has been a session. It is a taxing and spending administration. The could not let the legislators see the appropriation bill the passage of any of their legislation until he had sales tax, which produces about 125 million dollars. very generous. He permits them to pass anything to anything they say they want. The Governor told the to pass the tax increases after which he approved increases for sheriff, jailer, constables, and individual salaries for everyone, including the legislators. The point upheld by this administration here is what Douglas quoted as saying in the Owensboro Messenger: "he did not want to veto the bill giving legislators an $15 a day for their expenses. The Governor vetoed the lawmakers to say they insisted upon the payment."
Governor did a lot of talking about conflict of interest; with registration and purgation of voting lists; of absentee voting, etc. He talked about doing away with the account law and reorganizing the state departments. All this will amount to about as much as the of the Board of Claims and the Highway Advisory —which is exactly nothing because after their abolition about doing the same thing, in a little different way savings to the taxpayers—just favoring "his sisters somebody else's sisters."
all the talk during the recent political campaign any here—no taxes there; restoration and dignity there; retrenchment and reform; "no axes to grind, settle, no enemies to punish;" about local problems government and some rural and many other major that arouse the prejudice and emotions of the people has departed from principle in specific recommendations of Candidate Combs-Wyatt—the team you have developed into nothing more than higher taxes pending and will be concluded as "the team you

SAFETY AWARD—Pittsburgh Metallurgical Company of Calvert City Tuesday was given a safety award for 500,000 man-hours worked without an accident, representing six months up to June 7. The company still is without accident as they shoot for 1,000,000 man-hours mark. Once before they came within two days of reaching the 500,000 goal, and on another occasion missed by three days. Pictured from the left are William H. Wise, safety committeeman; Charles Bowman, safety committeeman; E. R. O'Dell, personnel manager and safety director; L. W. Loving, safety engineer, Aetna Casualty and Surety Company, Hartford, Conn.; John S. Barker Jr., plant manager; and J. L. Reid, Roy E. Barlow and Ray Foust, safety committeemen.

ASC News & Facts

Many Marshall county farmers are now using or have used the federal government's cost-sharing agricultural conservation program (ACP) to help them to control or solve their soil and water conservation problems. It was reported this week by Renée Rudolph, chairman of the county ASC committee.

He said that cost-sharing practices were established in 1959 on 281 farms or 18 percent of all farms in the county.

A total of 237 farmers of the county have already filed applications to participate in the program this year. Chairman Rudolph said that more applications can be handled, and that all farmers are eligible to apply and urged any who have conservation problems to obtain complete information at the county ASC office in Benton.

"Unfavorable weather conditions have slowed up some of the farm conservation work planned for this spring," Chairman Rudolph said, "but there is plenty of time to carry out many needed practices before the end of the year. We hope that farmers will check up on their conservation problems and file applications for needed practices at the earliest possible time so that they will be ready to start work as soon as weather conditions are favorable."

Under the ASC plan, the government pays about 50 percent of the cost of establishing most practices. A higher percentage is paid for certain practices which have a comparatively high initial cost or provide benefits which are spread over a period of years. One requirement to qualify for cost-sharing is that an application must be filed at the county ASC office before work on the needed practice is started.

Following is a summary of farm conservation work carried out in Marshall county in 1959 under the cost-sharing program:

Permanent vegetative cover was established on 188 farms, totaling 2069 acres. Lime only was spread on 815 acres on 48 farms. On 24 farms, 200 acres of grass-legume cover was improved. Thirty-six acres of tree cover were established on 17 farms. Twelve acres of waterway were established on 10 farms; fourteen farms established cover to protect water impounding dams, gullies and field borders on 377,000 square feet.

Six farms constructed drainage ditches to drain 237 acres. Fourteen farms seeded 171 acres of winter cover crop. Twenty-two farms constructed 22 farm ponds. Eleven farms installed 11 stockwater storage tanks below pond dams. Six farms installed 2207 feet of pipeline to storage tanks. Twelve farms installed 17 stock water storage tanks from wells.

One farm improved 6 acres of timber. One farm constructed 650 feet of diversion channel. Three farms constructed 3 wells for livestock water to protect vegetative cover.

Almost 80% of the total allocation was used to establish protective cover on land. A total of 7,325 tons of ag. lime was used on all practices requiring lime.

An additional $15,000 allocation was made to Marshall county in 1959 because of the East Fork-Clarks River Watershed. Final figures show that approximately $35,000 of the total county allocation of $71,000 was used in the watershed area to carry out conservation practices.

For 1960, the East-Fork project will be continued, and West-Fork Clerk's River Watershed has been set up. For these two, $16,000 additional has been allocated for the county. This additional money is for Marshall County as a whole, but $16,000 must be spent in the two watershed areas for conservation practices. Farmers in this area should be planning their seeding practices for this fall, and make their applications at the county office in July and August.
