

Copyright is owned by the Author of the thesis. Permission is given for a copy to be downloaded by an individual for the purpose of research and private study only. The thesis may not be reproduced elsewhere without the permission of the Author.

Negotiating multiplicity: Macro, meso and micro influences on the ethnic identifications of New Zealand secondary school students

A thesis presented in partial fulfilment of the requirements for the degree of

Doctor of Philosophy

in

Social Anthropology

at Massey University, Manawatū Campus, New Zealand

Philippa Jane Butler

2018

Abstract

---

In New Zealand, the number of people who identify with more than one ethnic group is increasing. This is particularly true for adolescents and for those whose identifications include Māori or Pacific Islands ethnic groups. However, there is little understanding of what identifying with multiple ethnicities means for individuals. This research examined the multiple ethnic identities of senior secondary school students (aged between 16 and 18 years), by focusing on how they identified themselves, what decisions formed the bases of their identifications, and what influenced their identifications at three interconnecting levels: the macro (state) level, the meso (institutional) level, and the micro (family and individual) level.

A mixed methods research approach was employed, including a nation-wide survey and fieldwork in one South Auckland secondary school. The fieldwork methods were participant-observation, interviews with students who identified with more than one ethnic group, and a photo elicitation exercise. Through these methods, data were collected that gave a broad understanding of multiple ethnic identifications for New Zealand adolescents, and a deep and multifaceted explanation for one group of participants.

This research explored the ways that the participants negotiated their multiple ethnic group identifications, despite macro, meso and micro pressures towards singularity. It examined macro-level influences on ethnic group data collection and the ways that ethnic group identifications are shaped and constrained by data categorisation protocols. It looked at the meso-level influences of the research school on students' ethnic identities. The school focused on cultural identity and provided opportunities for students to participate in cultural activities and speak their languages. It examined the micro level influences of family and individual decision-making around identities, and the way that the participants maintained multiple ethnic group identifications, despite family experiences that might encourage them to focus more strongly on a single identity. This research explored the complex and nuanced ways that ethnic identifications are constructed at each of the three levels, for adolescents who identify with multiple ethnic groups.

Acknowledgements

---

I would like to acknowledge the support of the (now retired) principal and teachers of Kia Aroha College. Thank you for welcoming me and sharing your school's achievements with me. Thank you to Deazel, Julius, Mohi, Stacey and Uele for allowing me a glimpse into your lives. Your words are a gift, and I hope I have done justice to your stories. Thank you also to the survey respondents, and to the schools who helped to administer the survey.

To my supervisors, Dr Robyn Andrews, Professor Margaret Walshaw and Associate Professor Avril Bell, thank you so much for guiding me through this journey and for your always constructive feedback. I have learnt so much from you all.

To Mandia and Stan, thank you for providing a place to stay during my fieldwork trips to Auckland, and for being a willing ear for my excitement as I discovered new pieces of information.

To my colleagues and friends at the Institute of Education at Massey University, thank you for your endless support and for knowing when to leave me alone to write. Many of my colleagues were fellow travellers on the PhD journey—thank you for sharing the ups and downs with me. To Wendy in particular: our Monday morning catch ups were invaluable.

To my parents, thank you for your unfailing love and support, and for providing a bolthole in which to write, along with endless cups of peppermint tea. To my parents-in-law, thank you for your unconditional love and belief in me.

Finally, to my husband Jem and children William and Ellie, thank you for everything. I could not have achieved this without your support.

This thesis is dedicated to the two Michaels: to my father, Michael Butler, who has been proud of me my whole life, and to my father-in-law, Michael Kilty (1944-2018), who was proud of me for half my life. I am so sorry I didn't finish in time to celebrate with you both.

Table of Contents

---

Abstract.....	i
Acknowledgements .....	iii
List of Tables .....	xi
List of Figures.....	xiii
Glossary .....	xv
Chapter One: Introduction.....	1
Theoretical framing of the thesis.....	3
Macro level.....	5
Meso level.....	6
Micro level.....	7
The research context .....	9
Migration to New Zealand.....	9
The Clover Park context.....	9
Researcher positioning.....	11
My research .....	12
Anthropological research.....	13
Ethnographic fieldwork .....	14
Critiques of anthropology and ethnography .....	14
Crisis of fieldwork .....	16

Surveys and statistics in anthropology .....	17
My approach.....	19
Overview of the thesis .....	20
Chapter Two: Conceptualising Ethnicity .....	23
Introduction.....	23
Anthropological approaches to ethnicity .....	25
Constructionism and primordialism .....	27
Cognitive perspective .....	29
Classification and categorisation .....	31
New Zealand conceptualisations .....	35
New Zealander responses .....	37
Categorising and prioritising ethnic group data.....	38
Multiple ethnic identities.....	39
Hybridity .....	42
Markers of ethnic identity.....	45
Māori identity.....	47
Pacific Islands identities.....	50
Pākehā identity .....	54
Constructing ethnicity.....	57
Chapter Three: Methodology.....	59
Introduction.....	59
Research approach.....	59
Philosophical assumptions .....	62
Choice of participants.....	63

Choice of research methods .....	64
The survey .....	66
Survey responses.....	69
Representativeness .....	71
The fieldwork.....	71
Field visits to Kia Aroha College .....	72
Interviews.....	76
Photo elicitation exercise .....	77
Data analysis .....	82
Ethical considerations.....	83
Chapter summary .....	87
Chapter Four: Categorising Ethnic Identities .....	89
Introduction.....	89
Ethnic group responses in the survey.....	90
Categorisation and prioritisation .....	102
Individual stories.....	107
Open versus closed ethnic group questions .....	110
Parental ethnicity .....	114
Reasons for identifications .....	118
Ancestral reasons .....	121
Cultural reasons .....	121
Associative reasons .....	123
Geographical reasons .....	125
Biological reasons.....	126

Complexity.....	127
Categorising identity.....	128
Chapter Five: Self-Identification and the Role of Family .....	131
Introduction.....	131
How the participants self-identify .....	132
Deazel.....	132
Julius.....	134
Mohi.....	135
Uele.....	136
Stacey.....	136
Bases of identity .....	137
Choosing ethnicity.....	139
Authenticity .....	142
Language as a marker of authentic ethnic identity.....	147
Family socialisation .....	149
Celebrating special occasions.....	152
Families as sources of knowledge.....	156
Language learning.....	158
Family expectations.....	159
Other socialising influences.....	161
Navigating multiple ethnic identities .....	162

Chapter Six: Kia Aroha College’s Influences on Identity .....	165
Introduction.....	165
Social reproduction and cultural responsiveness .....	166
‘As Māori’ .....	171
Kia Aroha College.....	174
The structure of the school.....	177
Physical spaces .....	177
Structure of the day.....	183
Learning philosophy .....	186
Student-teacher relationship.....	188
Student-peer relationship.....	190
Student-learning relationship.....	191
Student-self relationship .....	198
Student-wider world relationship.....	200
Home-school relationship.....	200
Celebration Day: Relationships in action .....	201
Impact on identity.....	205
 Chapter Seven: Conclusion .....	 213
Addressing the research questions.....	214
How do adolescents in New Zealand identify themselves in terms of ethnicity? .....	214
What decisions form the bases of their identity choices? .....	216
How are ethnic identifications influenced at the macro, state level?.....	218
How are ethnic identifications influenced at the meso, institutional level? .....	220
How are ethnic identifications influenced at the micro, individual or family level? .....	222

Value of a mixed methods approach.....	223
Contributions and implications of the research .....	225
Limitations of study.....	227
Final word.....	228
References .....	231
Appendices.....	245
Appendix A: Ethnic identity questions from the National Identity and Cultural Diversity Survey .....	245
Appendix B: Survey administration .....	247
Information letter in English and te reo Māori .....	247
Letter of invitation in English and te reo Māori.....	249
Poster in English and te reo Māori.....	253
Team profile .....	255
Appendix C: Letter requesting access to fieldwork site.....	257
Appendix D: Informed consent process .....	259
Student information sheet .....	259
Student consent form .....	261
Appendix E: Interview one questions .....	263
Appendix F: Interview two questions .....	267
Appendix G: Ethics letters .....	269
Low risk notification for survey phase.....	269
Full ethics application for fieldwork phase.....	270
Appendix H: Letter to students.....	271

List of Tables

---

Table 1:	Ethnic group and place of birth for individuals living in Clover Park, compared to Auckland and to New Zealand.....	10
Table 2:	Absolute frequency counts of ethnic groups identified in the National Identity and Cultural Diversity Survey.....	93
Table 3:	NICD Survey data re-categorised according to the Statistics New Zealand ‘total response output’ protocol.....	103
Table 4:	NICD Survey data re-categorised according to the Statistics New Zealand ‘single/combination output’ protocol.....	103
Table 5:	NICD Survey data re-categorised according to the Ministry of Education protocol.....	104
Table 6:	Comparison of responses to open and closed ethnic group questions .....	111
Table 7:	Parents’ ethnic groups .....	115
Table 8:	Comparison of single and multiple respondent and parent ethnic groups.....	115
Table 9:	Number of respondents who identify with a single majority group, a single minority group, and multiple ethnic groups .....	120
Table 10:	Reasons for ethnic identifications given by respondents who identified with multiple ethnic groups, a single minority group, or a single majority group .....	120

List of Figures

---

Figure 1:	Instructions given to the participants before they began the photo elicitation exercise .....	78
Figure 2:	An example of an unsuccessful photo.....	79
Figure 3:	The grove of trees in the school grounds.....	81
Figure 4:	Ethnic groups of the 533 respondents who identified with a single ethnic group.....	94
Figure 5:	Ethnic groups of the 199 respondents who identified with multiple ethnic groups.....	95
Figure 6:	Comparison of number of respondents identifying with New Zealand ethnic groups solely or in addition to another ethnic group or groups.....	96
Figure 7:	Comparison of number of respondents identifying with Pacific Islands ethnic groups solely or in addition to another ethnic group or groups.....	97
Figure 8:	Comparison of number of respondents identifying with Asian ethnic groups solely or in addition to another ethnic group or groups.....	98
Figure 9:	Comparison of number of respondents identifying with European ethnic groups solely or in addition to another ethnic group or groups.....	99
Figure 10:	Comparison of number of respondents identifying with other ethnic groups solely or in addition to another ethnic group or groups.....	100
Figure 11:	Respondents who identified with Pacific Islands ethnic groups, mapped onto Ministry of Education and Statistics New Zealand categories.....	106
Figure 12:	Food laid out for a birthday celebration.....	155
Figure 13:	Uele’s mother weaving the kafa .....	158
Figure 14:	Te Whānau o Tupuranga .....	176
Figure 15:	The interior of Te Whānau o Tupuranga.....	182
Figure 16:	The exterior of Te Whānau o Tupuranga.....	183
Figure 17:	Kia Aroha College’s ‘Power Lenses’ learning model.....	187

Figure 18: Karakia in the school hall.....	193
Figure 19: Mau rākau lessons.....	195
Figure 20: Kia Aroha College marae.....	195
Figure 21: Side view of the school marae.....	196
Figure 22: The doorway into Te Whānau o Tupuranga.....	197
Figure 23: Julius’ story of learning at Kia Aroha College.....	197
Figure 24: Taonga in the trophy case.....	201
Figure 25: The school stage ready for the Celebration Day performances.....	204
Figure 26: Te Whānau o Tupuranga’s whakataukī.....	206
Figure 27: Doorway to learning and the future.....	229

Glossary

---

'Afakasi	'Half-caste', person with heritage from multiple ethnic groups
Ako	Teaching and learning, reciprocal learning
Aroha	Love, compassion
Fanau	Family
Fonuamalu	"A safe shelter", the Tongan bilingual unit at Kia Aroha College
Haka	Dance, performance, war dance
Hapū	Sub-tribe, kinship group
Hui	Meeting, gathering
Iwi	Tribe, nation
Kaea	Leader of a haka
Kafa	Tongan belt or tie
Kai	Food
Kapa haka	Māori performance group
Karakia	Prayer
Karanga	Ceremonial call of welcome
Kaumātua	Elder, person of status
Kaupapa	Philosophy, collective vision
Kia Aroha	Through love
Kia piki ake i ngā raruraru o te kāinga	Mediation of socio-economic and home difficulties
Kimiora	"Seeking life or well-being", the Cook Islands Maori and general unit at Kia Aroha College
Kīngitanga	The Māori King movement

Koha	Gift, contribution, reciprocity for being involved in research
Kōhanga reo	Māori-language early childhood centre
Kōrero	Speech, conversation
Koro	Grandfather
Kura	School
Kura kaupapa Māori	School based on Māori ideology, customs and philosophy, and using te reo Māori as the medium of instruction
Lumana'i	“Future”, the Samoan bilingual unit at Kia Aroha College
Ma'ulu'ulu	Tongan sitting dance
Māori	Indigenous person of New Zealand
Marae	Meeting place or courtyard, also often used to refer to the complex of buildings around a marae; home of a particular hapū or iwi
Mātauranga	Knowledge
Mau rākau	Māori martial arts
Mihi	To greet, acknowledge, thank; speech of greeting
Minus	Cook Islands potato salad
Pākehā	New Zealander of European descent
Palagi	“White” person
Pānui	Notices, announcement
Pōwhiri, pōhiri	Welcoming ceremony
Rangatiratanga	Chieftainship, autonomy, authority, leadership, self-determination
Reo	Language, Māori language
Ta'ovala, kiekie	Traditional Tongan skirt
Tangata whenua	People of the land, indigenous people
Tangi	Mourn, funeral (shortened form of tangihanga)
Taonga	Treasures
Taonga tuku iho	Cultural aspirations, heritage
Tau faka-Niua	Tongan sailors' dance

Te reo	The language, Māori language
Te reo Māori	Māori language
Te Whānau o Tupuranga	“Future generations”, the Māori whānau unit at Kia Aroha College
Teina	Younger sibling or cousin of the same gender
Tikanga	Values, beliefs, practices, protocols
Tuakana	Older sibling or cousin of the same gender
Tuakana-teina	Being a role model, helping peers and younger students, taking on leadership roles
Tupuranga	Growth
Tūrangawaewae	Iwi territory or homeland, place where a person has the right to stand
Wānanga	Meeting, discussion, conference; related to learning and the passing on of knowledge
Whakairo	Carving
Whakapapa	Genealogy
Whakataukī	Proverb, saying, motto
Whānau	Family, extended family
Whanaungatanga	Relationship, sense of family connection
Whare	House, building
Wharekai	Dining hall, part of a marae complex
Wharekura	Māori immersion secondary school
Wharenui	Meeting house, part of a marae complex

