Mothers Can Plan Children's Play On A Rainy Day

By David Taylor Marke

What do you do with your children on a rainy day? It is a problem, especially Johnny and Mary want to tear around the house, and always are underfoot.

Cornell University's "home-maker," Helen Stanick, in a recent broadcast, discussed this problem on her "This Is Your Home" program.

A mother, she points out, really has to be on her toes to think up new ideas that are kind of fun for everyone. That's quite a job when we come to realize how much else she has on her mind... unmade beds, breakfast dishes in the sink, the laundry... what to serve for lunch and dinner. Sometimes we think a juggler has an easy job compared to that of a mother on a rainy day.

The thing to do, Miss Stanick points out, is to think of ways for the children to have a good time and still allow mother time to do her work and carry out her plans for the day.

One way is to have Johnny and Mary help with household chores. Remember when you were a kid, you helped mother shell the peas, clear out old newspapers and magazines, or that old bin of tangled cottons, cords and clothes, or even help scrub the kitchen floor? Well, children today still love to feel they're "mother's little helper."

You might encourage Mary in culinary arts. Let her roll dough. And instead of making just a pie, encourage her to create figures. Of course, a little dough might be wasted, but think of Mary's pride when she creates a snowman, a dog or an elf—think of the fun. In addition, Mary gets the feel of the kitchen and cooking—and it's not Mother's domain alone.

Kitchens are such homey places after all... full of warmth and good food. It can be a special place for the child too. One corner of the kitchen would be a wonderful place to play store. And if you save those box tops and coupons, they'll make won-

Administrative Jobs Open At Owensboro

Vacancies exist at the Owensboro Army and Air Force Recruiting Main Station for two men with administrative experience, it is announced by Captain Howard T. Goodpaster, commanding officer.

Before the men are selected, they will undergo a typing test, and must attain a score of 35 words per minute or better.

After enlisting in the US Army, the men will have Owensboro as their initial duty station. However, before enlistment can be accomplished, all men chosen must be able to enlist in the grade of Private First Class or higher, it was stated.

For further information, all interested young men are asked to call at the Owensboro Army and Air Force Recruiting Main Station for an appointment with the commanding officer.

The Grand Canyon is more than 200 miles long, a mile deep and from four to 18 miles wide. The first man to travel through the Grand Canyon by boat was Maj. John W. Powell in 1869.

Another idea for a rainy day is finger painting. It's lots of fun for everybody. Red, blue, yellow, green smeared and streaked on paper can make wonderful signs. And you'll find, Miss Stanick says, that elbows, fingernails, and even the nose are useful in these paintings. Just make sure there are plenty of newspapers to protect the floor and lots of paper and paint for the children to use.

Aside from playing with their toys and games, this is a wonderful way for the parents to let their hair down, too. Playing with the children this way helps junior to see his parents as real people, she says.

Incidentally, playing with paints can be harmless when made from either flour, cornstarch or wallpaper paste. If you want some good recipes for making these, write to Cornell University's Family Life Department and ask for Creative Expression Materials. Or, drop a postcard to station WHCU, Ithaca, New York, including your name and address. This information is free.

County Building Bee Creates A New Park

By Don Williams
Charleston, W. Va. — Remember the old-fashioned house raising or corn shucking where the entire village turned out to help one another? Well, that's how Kanawha county got its new public park—in two days' time.

GOOD TIME HAD BY ALL
A carnival atmosphere prevailed. Pitchmen sold souvenirs; loud

speakers blared cheering music. And many of the thousands of spectators who flocked by special trains and buses to watch the operations became so enthusiastic that they doffed their coats and ties and turned to themselves. The result: A baseball diamond, picnic areas, shelters, fireplaces, playgrounds, dance pavilion and other recreational facilities, located on an 825-acre tract near the Kanawha airport in Charleston.

By fall two fishing ponds will be ready for use. The dams have been built and the pond beds dug. All that is necessary now is the rainfall. The state conservation commission will furnish the fish. They call it Coonskin Park. This seems appropriate, because Kanawha county lies in the mountainous area where Daniel Boone blazed pioneer trails. And the Coonskinners — wearing canvas duckbill caps instead of the homemade headgear of the early settlers—demonstrated the same pioneer spirit in building themselves a park. They billed the blitz project as "Operation Coonskin."

Wives and daughters of the workers turned their hands to feeding the hundreds of men and boys. Barbecued steers were served up wholesale. Food, milk and soft drinks were contributed. TWAS A SPEEDY JOB The job, including the construction of a mile and a quarter of trail-type park road, was completed on schedule. A dance was held at the pavilion on the evening of the second day. The physical work was done in two days. But weeks and months of planning laid the groundwork.

The wooded tract was acquired several years ago by the county. But county officials could not lay their hands on sufficient funds to develop the area. The Charles Gazette started the ball rolling. The newspaper plugged the plan for weeks with feature stories. Pledges of voluntary cooperation snowballed. A group of officials from Oneida county, N. Y., arrived on the second day of "Operation Coonskin" on a tour of airports in the east. The comment of G. Carl Morse, chairman of the Oneida County Board of Supervisors, was: "Astounding."

Benefit Payments To Vets Asked By President Truman

Washington — (AP) — President Truman asked Congress this week to begin benefit payments this month to dependent families of American servicemen, with a top limit of $150 a month for any family.

This would include deductions from the service men's pay as well as government payments. Mr. Truman sent the administration's proposals to both houses of Congress in a lengthy message from the Budget Bureau. Under the administration plan: 1. A dependent wife would receive $75 a month, plus $25 a month for each dependent child—but not more than $150 altogether.

Local Serviceman Finds Sportsman's Dream In Alaska

(By S-Sgt. William W. Willis) Anchorage, Alaska—This is an open letter to the sportsmen of Princeton. I know that we have many, many fishermen and hunters in our county, and thought that perhaps they would enjoy hearing about the wildlife of Alaska. I am stationed at Elmendorf Air Force Base, assigned to the Tenth Rescue Squadron. We are one of the many so-called "mercenary squadrons" due to the fact that we have saved a countless number of lives in this vast territory. Being in this type of territory, I have the opportunity of seeing a great deal of wildlife in its natural surroundings.

I will endeavor to describe a typical trip into this sportsman's paradise. Usually two men team up together. Besides having company you have someone to help in case of accident, or any unforeseen happening that may occur. We fix up our packs to a good, snug fit, include enough staples for a three-day trip, and of course our fishing gear. Another item that not everyone takes along is a rifle or pistol. I kind of like the idea of a firearm of some sort, up here in this country. We haven't had any chance meetings with "Mr. Brown Bear" as yet, but there is always the first time. As for myself, I like the idea of having Mr. Colt "Equalizer" along with me.

We are all packed and ready to go. Our next step is to hitch-hike a ride in one of the squadron's helicopters. Usually we don't encounter any trouble in securing a ride, as the helicopters are always going some place. Enroute to the helicopter's destination we will scan the terrain below us for a clearing, near a stream or lake. When we find a likely look-man should be discharged from active duty. The bureau also proposed that the serviceman should contribute as his share the lesser of two sums:

- 1. Either one-half of the total family allowance.
2. Or 60 per cent of his pay.
The message recommended that no family allowance be given in the cases of servicemen in the top three and one-half grades in all the armed forces who already received $87.50 a month allowance for quarters.

Pastures Should Be Seeded Early

By R. A. MABRY (County Agent)

Seed permanent pastures from now on through the first part of September. The earlier pasture seedings are made now the better chance they have of getting established for late fall pasture and with stand winter freezes and snows.

M. P. Brown, Jr., is preparing seedbeds for seeding fescue and timothy with a heavy disk without plowing. This practice should be used by any farmer who plans to reseed an old pasture field that does not have too heavy a cover for the tractor disk to penetrate with two or three diskings.

If fertilization of the pasture seedbed is planned, soil tests should first be made and fertilizers applied as needed as shown in test results.

WORM PESTS

Reports have been received from two farmers of heavy infestation of cornfields with corn worms. The worms are feeding on the foliage and bud of corn before it tassels.

It is difficult to control this pest after it has had a chance to get down in the bud and at the time the leaves are sprayed or dusted will not reach them.

The most effective control to date seems to be plowing in fall early spring while the insects are hibernating. Dusting free-

State Ton-Litter Show Scheduled August 26

The 15th annual Kentucky Ton Litter Show and Sale, with classes for 4-H club members and for farmers, will be held at the Bourbon Stockyards in Louisville Aug. 26.

Exhibits will consist of eight or more pigs from one litter and rings for single hogs and pens of three. Several hundred dollars in cash prizes will be awarded.

Rings include two weights—180 to 225 pounds and 226 pounds up. Ribbons will be given for the grand champion barrow or gilt and grand champion pen of three.

The show has been arranged through the cooperation of the stock yards and the College of Agriculture and Home Economics, University of Kentucky.

Conserve Soil To Feed Increasing Population Urged

(By OLIVER C. ALLCOCK)

James Claypool, Division of Soil and Water Resources, Frankfort, met with the local board of soil conservation district supervisors at their regular monthly meeting here last Wednesday.

Mr. Claypool discussed with the supervisors and representatives of the county agricultural agencies present, the importance of getting conservation programs established on the land and showed a number of pictures on good land use and soil conservation practices.

"Fifteen per cent of the nation's population live on the farm and furnish food for the other eighty-five per cent of our population, living in towns and cities," Mr. Claypool said. "Our population is increasing at the rate of about 2,000,000 annually. Therefore, it is of greatest importance that the soil be conserved to produce food and fiber for the nation's ever increasing population," he continued.

IMPROVED PASTURES

Lyle Leonard, Extension Conservationist, University of Kentucky, also was present at the supervisor's meeting last Wednesday. Mr. Leonard is helping promote the Green Pastures in Kentucky.

"I consider improved pasture one of the best conservation measures we have," Mr. Leonard said. "Pasture is the best land use for a large area of land in our state," he stated.

ACTIVITIES PLANNED

Representatives of the county agricultural agencies met with the district supervisors last week to assist the supervisors in planning a calendar of soil conservation activities for August, September and October. The conservation activities appropriate for establishment at this time of year were included.

THE GARDEN

By John S. Gardner, Kentucky College of Agriculture and Home Economics

For winter storing white potatoes, root crops and cabbage, the best place is a house cellar or an outside cellar or storage cave.

These "cool" crops need to be protected against freezing, and must have moist (though not too moist so) atmosphere, and also means for some ventilation. Most cellars have at least one window, to be used as an escape for moist and musty air, and an outside entrance. Even in severe weather, the two may be left open for an hour or so, noon-time, to effect a complete change of air, to make everything sweet again.

As to the caves many farmers have, the same is true. In the ceiling there is an outlet vent, but not always the air intake needed to set air currents in motion. This may be remedied by hanging an inner door, from the bottom of which a strip about three inches is sawed off, and hinged back. For ventilating, the outer door and the outlet vent in the ceiling are opened, and the hinged flap on the inner door raised. So arranged, the warm and moist air tends to escape, and fresh air, admitted at the floor line, rushes in. The double door should solve the problem of the vegetables freezing, as so often occurs at the door end of the structure.

Lacking a storage structure, vegetables may be buried in mounds of earth. Ventilation may be arranged by leaving some earth off the tip of the mound, through which warm air will rise, if an air intake is provided at its base. When the site for the mound is selected, two shallow ditches are dug to cross at right angles under its center. These are covered with plank or stiff wire mesh, and mound or pit is then completed in the conventional manner. The open ends of the cross ditches are the cold air intakes, to be opened when fresh air needs to be admitted. These should be fitted with chicken wire, so that rats or other varmints cannot enter.

This ventilating system is particularly valuable in the early weeks of storing, when the "breathing" of the stored crops is most active. About Thanksgiving, the mound's tip should be completed with earth and a piece of tin or plank to shed rain, to be removed during ventilating times.

Crop Checking Half-Completed In The County

(By Willis S. Traylor)

Checking performance in connection with 1950 allotment crops and ACP practices is progressing in Caldwell county with about 700 farms out of the 1400 farms in the county complete.

Caldwell county reporters now at work measuring these crops are: Woodrow Ashby, Joel Boitnot, Byron Carter, A. S. Croft, W. R. Ethridge, Malcolm Franklin, James Jordan, James C. Martin, Charles Nelson, Lawrence Rogers, Aaron Rogers, Robert Seymour, Porter Tayloe, Eura Watson, G. T. Wallace, Lacey Watson, Earl Wood, Otis Clayton, Clifton Jackson, Joe Francis and Lawrence Sims.

These men have been well trained by the Kentucky State PMA Committee and are ready and willing to assist the farmer in getting a correct measurement on his farm. Accuracy of the acreage measurements is important to all farmers. For burley, fire-cured, and dark air-cured tobaccos, where measurements show underplantings of more than 25 per cent for three successive years acreage allotments for succeeding years will be reduced.

Spreading Nitrate Boosts Seed Yield

One way to get more grass seed is to spread nitrate. The Kentucky Agricultural Experiment Station doubled yields of Ky. 31 fescue and orchard grass seed by using 200 pounds of ammonium nitrate an acre.

Nitrogen top-dressings also increased the pasture production of both grasses. Untreated fescue and orchard grass produced only about 60 per cent as much forage as areas getting an application of nitrogen.

In wet seasons the use of 200 pounds of ammonium nitrate an acre made the grasses lodge, especially when top-dressing was done as late as April 1. Nitrogen also tended to lower the test weight of a bushel of seed.

For seed production, early spring applications of nitrogen fertilizer were found better than fall use, for orchard grass; while on fescue sods, fall and spring applications gave about equal results.

Clipping both grasses in the year preceding seed harvest tended to reduce seed yields, while burning the sod did not affect the yield of seed.

Seed yields were better when Ky. 31 fescue was grown in rows, and orchard grass in rows produced more seed two years out of three, compared to broadcast seedings.

A complete report of the experiments with Ky. 31 fescue and orchard grass will be found in Experiment Station bulletin 554.

Mildew Develops In Muggy Weather

When weather is warm and damp, watch out for mildew on clothing and household fabrics, shoes and leather goods, books and even on painted surfaces, is the warning from the College of Agriculture and Home Economics, University of Kentucky.

Molds which cause mildew commonly develop in muggy weather in poorly aired and poorly lighted places.

To dry the air in closets, burn a small electric light continuously there, or run an electric fan occasionally to stir up the enclosed air. Linen closets, too, should have attention.

Calcium Chloride, a chemical solid that takes up moisture, may be placed in an open container on the floor of the closet. When it has absorbed so much moisture that it becomes liquid, replace it with a fresh supply.

Keep cellars aired and dry, opening windows only when the outside air is cooler and drier than that inside. Musty odors will usually disappear when chloride of lime is sprinkled over the floor for a time, then swept up.

Soiled clothing and towels should be thoroughly dried before they are put in the hamper. For ironing, sprinkle only as many pieces as will be done in one day, or store a few pieces in the refrigerator.

Leather shoes and suitcases may be protected against mildew with a thin coat of floor wax.

To keep books in bookcases from mildewing, dust them at times with paraformaldehyde. Use it sparingly, as it is irritating to some persons.

Wash fresh mildew stains with soap and water, then dry in the sun. To remove stains, use lemon juice and salt and then place the article in the sun, or use 1 table spoon of sodium perborate to a pint of lukewarm water. Let stand a minute or two, then rinse well. On colored fabrics, test a sample for fading before using bleaches on the garment.

Sanitation Plus Good Insecticides Will Reduce Pests

By DR. W. L. CASH (Health Officer)
Insecticides, no matter how effective, are no substitutes for cleanliness and sanitation, according to Robert S. Jacob, Caldwell county sanitarian. The constant practice of the basic rules of sanitation is important if the fight against harmful household insects is to be won.

However, sprays, such as DDT and Chlordane emulsions, are effective allies in ridding homes of insect pests. Certain precautions should be taken in handling and storing insecticides if they are to be used safely. The following are important:

- (1) Store out of the reach of children.
  - (2) Avoid applying on eating utensils and food.
  - (3) Wash hands when application has been completed.
  - (4) Do not spray oil solution near open fires.
  - (5) Remove dishes, food and drawers from pantries and cabinets before spraying, returning them only after spray has dried.
- Since flies, mosquitoes, roaches, fleas and lice are disease carriers, the need for destroying them is apparent.

Boy Makes A Flying Saucer That Flies

Charleston, W. Va. — Department of Defense officials please note.
There's such a thing as a flying saucer.

Joe Ward, 14-year-old son of a pilot, has one.
He made it himself.
And it flies.

The youth, who lives at Belle, about 10 miles east of Charleston, is a model airplane builder of years standing. Intrigued by the thought of a flying saucer, he started out to make one. He had no model to work from, obviously.

He wound up with a doughnut-shaped contraption made of balsa wood and silk and equipped with a motor, flaps, landing gear, wheels and propeller.

The boys of his gang scoffed at the idea that the contraption would fly. So did his father, who bet Joe two cans of gasoline that the saucer would be a flop.

The payoff came at a large cinder plant field near the Dupont plant. The saucer, attached to 50 feet of wire so that it would not be lost, not only flew but it looped, hovered, circled and dipped.

Joe now has plans for a larger, radio-controlled saucer that would put the skeptics to rout.

apparent. By "painting" window and door screens with insecticides it is possible to kill many flies and mosquitoes before they enter the house. The interior of houses should also be sprayed, with particular attention being paid to the places where insects normally rest—such as hanging light fixtures, window frames, and the under surfaces of tables, chairs and beds. For roaches a 2-4 per cent chlordane spray is recommended. It should be put around windows and doors, behind baseboards, sinks, refrigerators and radiators.

An insect-free summer is not guaranteed if these measures are taken, but spraying plus sanitation noticeably reduces the number of pests.

WE BURY OUR DEAD IN SOUTH KOREA: Shrouded bodies of U. S. soldiers are placed in a common temporary grave near Kumchon, South Korea, as Chaplain John G. Burkhalter (upper right) reads the burial service. This burial scene was made by Carl Mydans, Life Magazine photographer. The bodies of 21 troops were placed in the grave. They had been pinned down by artillery fire in a dry bed of a Kum River tributary until death ended their ordeal. (AP Wirephoto)

Anniversary Of Broken Dreams

The Second World War ended five years ago Monday with the surrender of Japan. In the days that followed here's what people were saying:

Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower, in Moscow: "I see nothing in the future that would prevent Russia and the United States from being the closest possible friends. If we are really going to be friends we must really understand each other."

President Truman: "This is the day for the democrats. This is the day when we can start on our real task of implementation of free government in the world where we are faced with the greatest task we've ever been faced with. . . I know we are going to do it."

Dr. Snymman Rhee, chairman of the Korean commission: "The Japanese surrender means the end of a long nightmare of terror and oppression in Korea. The Korean people will be forever grateful to the American people. . ."
