Joe Adkins, Violin

A native of West Palm Beach, FL, Jeff Adkins is a young bass player who "...Already plays better than local bassists two and three times his age..."-Palm Beach Post. Jeff began playing at eight years old in a public school strings program and went on to study with Mik Groniger, principal bassist of the Palm Beach Opera. After Graduating from the Dreyfoos High School of the Arts,

Jeff won scholarships and grants to study both classical and jazz bass and chose to continue his studies at Lynn University's Conservatory of Music. His principal teachers there have been Shigeru Ishikawa and Timothy Cobb. Jeff is an active performer in South Florida and has performed at venues such as The Lincoln Theater, The Kravis Center, The Carefree Theater, and The Harriet Theater to name a few. As an electric bass player, Jeff has appeared in Miami with 1950's top-ten vocal Group "The Platters." In addition to performing, Jeff enjoys teaching younger bassists as an Artist in Residence in the BAK Middle School of the Arts and the Dreyfoos High School of the Arts in. Jeff will graduate this spring with a Bachelor's degree and plans to pursue a Master's at Lynn with Professor Timothy Cobb. In his spare time, Jeff enjoys fishing in the great Florida outdoors.
