This question was asked in the 2016 peer-reviewed Open Data Barometer expert survey, with data covering the period to June 2016.

Open data could lead to improvements in government efficiency and effectiveness in a number of ways including: by enabling government departments to better plan and target resources; by allowing outside actors to scrutinise government use of resources and highlight areas for savings; by enabling outside actors to build new services on top of open data which deliver more effective public services; and by supporting collaboration between different government departments.

The score for this question is based upon an expert review of available online media and academic publications that attribute impacts of these forms explicitly to open data. The greater quantity, and the greater the credibility, of the materials identified, the higher the score given. Given the early stage of development of open data in most countries assessed, scores are preliminary, and should be used with care.

This question was asked in the 2016 peer-reviewed Open Data Barometer expert survey, with data covering the period to June 2016.

Open data could lead to improvements in government transparency and accountability in a number of ways including: through supporting journalism and data journalism which uncovers wasteful spending, corruption or other wrongdoing by government departments or officials; supporting the creation of applications which allow citizens to report on their experience of government services (for example, when a directory of schools or hospitals helps third-parties build a school or healthcare performance reporting application for citizens); supporting scrutiny of government decision making; and supporting greater citizen engagement in policy making.

The score for this question is based upon an expert review of available online media and academic publications that attribute impacts of these forms explicitly to open data. The greater quantity, and the greater the credibility, of the materials identified, the higher the score given. This question was asked in the 2016 peer-reviewed Open Data Barometer expert survey, with data covering the period to June 2016.

Open data could lead to impacts on environment sustainability in a number of ways including: through enabling greater scrutiny of pollution impacts or environmental impacts of government projects or private enterprise; through supporting greater attention to be paid to environmental factors in planning projects; through encouraging government buildings to make more efficient use of energy; through raising citizens awareness of their own environmental impacts; and through supporting campaigns on environmental issues.

The score for this question is based upon an expert review of available online media and academic publications that attribute impacts of these forms explicitly to open data, including both data published by government, and data published according to a government mandate (e.g. in cases of 'targeted transparency' mandates from government [Fung et. al. 2007]). The greater quantity, and the greater the credibility, of the materials identified, the higher the score given. Given the early stage of development of open data in most countries assessed, scores are preliminary, and should be used with care.

Fung, A., Graham, M., & Weil, D. (2007). Full Disclosure: The Perils and Promise of Transparency (1st ed., p. 300). Cambridge University Press.

This question was asked in the 2016 peer-reviewed Open Data Barometer expert survey, with data covering the period to June 2016.

All societies have certain groups who are marginalised. This may be on grounds of age, gender, race, tribe, caste, class, disability, geographic location, and levels of poverty. Whilst these groups are not prohibited by licenses or technical mechanisms from accessing and using open data, they may not always be able to have effective access to open data. It has been argued however that open data can lead to more inclusive policy making and government services.

This may happen through the direct use of open data by marginalised groups, or through the work of intermediary organisations who support marginalised groups to access and use data, or who use data to campaign for the greater inclusion of marginalised groups in decision making or in receiving the benefits of public services.

The score for this question is based upon an expert review of available online media and academic publications that attribute impacts of these forms explicitly to open data. The greater quantity, and the greater the credibility, of the materials identified, the higher the score given. Given the early stage of development of open data in most countries assessed, scores are preliminary, and should be used with care.

This question was asked in the 2016 peer-reviewed Open Data Barometer expert survey, with data covering the period to June 2016.

Open data may impact on the economy in a number of ways, including: through supporting the creation of new businesses based on open data; through supporting existing businesses to lower their costs or become more efficient (for example, using weather or transport data to better plan their operations); and through supporting better economic planning.

The score for this question is based upon an expert review of available online media and academic publications that attribute impacts of these forms explicitly to open data. This question was asked in the 2016 peer-reviewed Open Data Barometer expert survey, with data covering the period to June 2016.

Open data can provide an input for entrepreneurs to innovate and create new products and services, and to build new businesses.

The score for this question is based upon an expert review of available online media and academic publications that attribute impacts of these forms explicitly to open data, including in this question, both open data from government, and open data from other sources (for example, crowdsourced data such as open street map). The greater quantity, and the greater the credibility, of the materials identified, the higher the score given. Given the early stage of development of open data in most countries assessed, scores are preliminary, and should be used with care. The HDI was created to emphasize that people and their capabilities should be the ultimate criteria for assessing the development of a country, not economic growth alone. The HDI can also be used to question national policy choices, asking how two countries with the same level of GNI per capita can end up with different human development outcomes. These contrasts can stimulate debate about government policy priorities.

The Human Development Index (HDI) is a summary measure of average achievement in key dimensions of human development: a long and healthy life, being knowledgeable and have a decent standard of living. The HDI is the geometric mean of normalized indices for each of the three dimensions.

GDP per capita is gross domestic product divided by midyear population. GDP is the sum of gross value added by all resident producers in the economy plus any product taxes and minus any subsidies not included in the value of the products. It is calculated without making deductions for depreciation of fabricated assets or for depletion and degradation of natural resources. Data are in current U.S. dollars.

For the current 2017 fiscal year, low-income economies are defined as those with a GNI per capita, calculated using the World Bank Atlas method, of $1,025 or less in 2015; lower middle-income economies are those with a GNI per capita between $1,026 and $4,035; upper middle-income economies are those with a GNI per capita between $4,036 and $12,475; high-income economies are those with a GNI per capita of $12,476 or more.
