FARM NEWS

Robert Cox was named president of the Nevils Farm Bureau for next year at the regular meeting Wednesday night. Mr. Cox has been a member of the Farm Bureau for some 10 years and during that time has attended most of the state conventions and all district and local conventions. He has served his local chapter in the capacity as vice president and as secretary. He knows what Farm Bureau stands for and how it operates. He succeeds Rufus G. Brannen. J. K. Williams was elected vice president to succeed Mr. Cox and Walton Nesmith was named secretary to replace D. B. Edmunds. Devaughan Roberts was given the Purina trophy for having won the fat stock show championships. A. C. Bradley and J. W. Cone made the presentation at the Farm Bureau meeting. R. P. Mitchell, county president, reported that Nevils had turned in 143 members to date. Mr. Brannen was stated that they would have 160 by next week. There were 25 new members signed up at a called meeting at Esala Wednesday night. This group had formerly been members at Pembroke, but wanted to organize a chapter of their own. Carl Iler and W. E. Cannedy predicted there would be some 50 members in the new organization. Mr. Iler was named temporary chairman with the understanding that they would meet again third Tuesday night in November and perfect an organization. The group served ice cream and cake but planned for a oyster supper at their next meeting. The Register group reported about 100 members renewed and planned to elect officers at their November meeting. Cecil Kennedy, president of the Register chapter, reported that the picnic area started on the school campus had been sodded to grass.

Following a short talk on AAA payments by G. E. Gay, several tractors were auctioned off to help the third grade put shades over the windows in their room. Mr. Mitchell reported that some 25 members of the Farm Bureau had made reservations for the state convention to be held in Atlanta November 7 to 9. GROWING SUMMER FERTILIZER NOT NEW through the winter months is not new in Bulloch county. This business of planting winter cover crops, summer legumes for grazing, and carrying on soil building and maintenance work started over many years ago here. However, the present day methods perhaps gained its most attention following the appearance of the boll weevil. It is true that more winter legumes will be planted this year than ever, especially blue lupines. However, the local farmers turned to winter legumes and peanuts for hogs immediately following the first world war. The boll weevil eliminated Sea Island cotton and hurt the short cotton materially. Something had to be done. The cotton growers started raising hogs and cows, planted a little tobacco, and lots of peanuts for grazing and a few peanuts for harvest. In the early thirties Austrian winter peas, the vetches, John H. Brown, the local farmer turned winter peas, were used for winter cover crop to control erosion and to provide grazing. Prior to this one Bulloch county farmer, W. H. Smith, had been named a Master Farmer because he had tried to maintain his soil fertility and produce good crops. Some 50,000 acres were devoted to soil building crops during these years. The AAA program made payments later on such practices and further stimulated them. The other Master Farmers, G. Brannen, and Delmas Rushing. The advent of machinery on Bulloch county farms has played a major roll in getting terraces built, land cleared, pastures prepared, winter legumes planted and turned. Tractors started finding their way on local farms about 1918 but as late as 1940 there were only 108 tractors here, while there are near 1,400 in the county today. The need for soil building and maintenance became even more necessary when the price of commercial fertilizer stayed high. In looking at the trends to use commercial fertilizer the indications are it will continue to stay high. Texas and that area is an excellent example of what is happening to the usage of fertilizer. In 1936 the entire state of Texas used about 80,000 tons of commercial fertilizer. Then last year that state alone increased to more than 500,000 tons of fertilizer. The other "no fertilizer" states are also increasing in a like manner. J. A. Bunch, Paul Groover, Henry Blitch, J. E. Hodges, and many other livestock-minded farmers had also learned the need for putting some of this land in grazing lands, a practice that is being adopted more and more in the county. Thousands of acres will be put to soil building crops this winter based on the results obtained through these some 30 years of practice by good farmers in the county.

"Rattiest" Movie A new movie is to be produced. And many of the stars of the Statesboro and Bulloch county. Casting for the movie has been going on for some time and production is expected to begin in January. Raymond Sumnerlin of Statesboro has been in charge of the casting for this section. But don't call Mr. Sumnerlin and ask him if you can get in the movie. For, you see, the stars of the movie will be rats... big rats. Little rats, from all sections of the county. Mr. Sumnerlin, of the State Health Department, together with a crew from the Communicable Disease Center in Savannah, has been trapping rats here for some time. They are carried to Savannah where they are being "trained" to appear before the camera. The movie is being made by the Army and will show the habits of rats as well as rat activity in a study to learn how to control them. The rats are being caught by hand in corn cribs, garbage dumps, hay lots, and wherever they run. "Some of our biggest stars" were found on the Statesboro city dump," said Mr. Sumnerlin. He urges citizens to be sure and see the "rattiest picture you've ever seen" when it is shown in this county.

Stripped Gears

Sometimes everyday happenings strip their gears and jump their tracks and in general go haywire. . . and you get the unusual. Recently, Rev. George Lovell, pastor of the First Baptist Church of Statesboro, was invited to preach at the church. Before the service, he together with members of the church, were standing outside the building talking and fellowshiping. A bunch of young people played around the building, running and being themselves. Services began. The preacher was in the middle of his sermon. He looked toward the front door and saw something there that caused one of the deacons to turn.

ALL'S FAIR

When people reach the autumn stage, some firmly believe they should act their age. They may try in planes or walk a mile or two, but the Samba and Rumba are strictly taboo. Let them dance to strains of "Missouri Waltz"; if they try to boogie woogie they must pay the cost. In creaking joints and muscular pain which they'll blame on lifting or the threat of rats. All heavy labor makes them wheeze, and just to pick up a broom brings on a sneeze. So, age is an alibi for many of us, to shrink from toil, confusion and fuss. But not so for Dan Lee, who is chippy and alert with his 89th birthday coming up in March, nor for his brother, Clate, in Savannah, who will be 90 in December, and sister, Mrs. Tom Brannen, who appears carefully groomed, hatted and as smart as any woman at this year's debutante. All six of the family are not seeking escape or alibi but serving their communities with energy and wisdom. Then in Bulloch county—sorter northwest of Statesboro, we find J. P. Cannon, 89, and still interested in the progress of his county and state. Mr. Cannon, for 52 consecutive years had children attending the neighborhood school. And on my customary Sunday afternoon drive, I saw Sid Parrish, a mere 80, frolicking with oak limbs while cutting' trails with oak limbs with Sid pitching and the dog retrieving. On up North Main there is Jennie Blitch (Mrs. Gordon), 84, who has made a remarkable comeback since her illness in the spring. Jane Eastland, of Atlanta, who recently visited Barbara Ann Jones, is a student at Washington Seminary. Jane, a member of the Phi Pi sorority, has been chosen by Emory University chapter of Sigma Chi as a candidate for "Sweetheart of Sigma Chi." Hal (Waters), who kept putting off trays to the golf club, under pressure from his mother made his way into Mr. Warner's studio accompanied by Margaret Sherman. Upon putting Hal through a test of his vocal capacity, Mr. Warner enthusiastically proclaimed wonderful possibilities for our local boy. Some day he would sing like Melchior, etc. Hal, in

Forestry Notes

By J. W. ROBERTS, Ranger During the past week fire-brakes were maintained for W. R. Altman, C. P. Clifton and the Forest Heights Country Club. We plan to follow practically the same route that was followed last year when the breaks were constructed. Also, we have requests from several landowners desiring new breaks. They will be constructed when our machinery is in the general vicinity of their land. I would like to urge all landowners that have fire-breaks constructed to either maintain or break them with private machinery or let us do this work for you. Grass leaves and straw fall in the breaks and they are not very effective if they are not maintained annually. Fire-breaks have been indispensable in Bulloch county in the past two years in the suppression of destructive fires. Probably no one realizes this more than we fire fighters. We would have had several major fires that could have burned thousands of acres and destroyed millions of young trees had it not been for fire-breaks.

Entered as second-class matter January 21, 1946, at the post office at Statesboro, Ga., under Act of March 3rd, 1879.
