All domestic animal life in Maine is absolutely dependent on our bay crop. A failure of this crop for three years would practically ruin the seventy thousand farmers

It is just as important for ourselve would nearly depopulate our state.
What other crop or crops raised in Maine can this be true of? The hay is to be well fed, and this same rule apcrop is of more important value, directly and indirectly, than all other crops combined. The immense seriousness of this which, from one seeding, may produce proposition is not one-half considered, as many as eight or twelve crops of hay understood or appreciated by the farming population of Maine. Hay is higher and yet, note this: The farms and farm lands on which hay is grown and farm lands on which hay is grown bed. When the land lies in the furrow, too much cannot be said in regard to ex tra cultivation and fallowing. In fact he summer fallowing of fields plowed the fall before would doubtless pay a better return in the many coming hay crops on such land if we could make it a more common practice. Now sults, should be sowed to oats or barley. this article is written on the subject of hay production, yet potato raising has affected the raising of hay, cattle, sheep and live stock so closely that a few words on potato production are necessary right here. It is a substantial feet that right here. It is a substantial fact that, when the potato area of the country produces a normal crop in all the potato states, the production is so great that the potato states are worth or choice fertilizer or fertilizing material per acre, a long-last-ing quality of fertilizer like bone meal and potash, or commercial fertilizer or fertilizer or fertilizer or detailed by the second of the country in a long-last ing quality of fertilizer or states, the production are necessary about $2.0 worth or choice fertilizer or fertilizer states, the production is so great that they are worth but very little. It needs it plant food, that does not expend its a failure in some parts to make higher life quickly, but slowly dissolves in the a failure in some parts to make higher prices in others; hence, it might be said that Nature herself gambles in potato growing, but she gambles but little in hay growing. When a farmer plants potatoes at a larger expense to himself than he can financially afford to lose, providing his crop is of no value, he is certainly gambling, because this often probably paid the bill for the cost of happens, and he has no right to hazard his financial standing in such a way.

The potato crop is the only crop the The potato crop is the only crop the years, applying a little top dressing farmer can raise of which it can truly when it commences to fall back after be said, that at times, the more of it be several years.

There is a crying demand for a keen and long-lasting investigation into the reason why clover fields all over southern Maine are not in evidence, the sam as they are in Aroostook and Somerse counties, Canada, New York and Ohio tural department will take up this ques tion, as it is a vital one. There are a million acres of bay lands in the south-ern section of the State of Maine which are sadly lacking in this great farmer's friend. As timothy invariably follows clover, in this direction we would have then, even a better market than now fo our timothy and redtop for market purposes. In spite of the advent of the au-tomobile and the great reduction in the number of horses, the price of bay is steadily maintained and advanced cause all the products of hay are in such high priced demand.

The business of conducting a farm fo found, and there is a great increase in the sole purpose of raising hay and ship clover production. The Boston dealers ping to Boston, if given ordinary business attention, will prove highly profit takes it. There is a constantly growing wider market for this, because the lowpriced lands of Maine can still compete n hay growing against the high priced tre and carriers.

Georgie Bassett a really angelic boy, had been selectfect conduct had earned for him the sardonic sobriquet "The Little Gentleman" among his boy acquaintances. (Naturally he had no friends.) Hence the other boys supposed that he had been selected for the wicked Mordred as a reward of virtue. He declaimed

"I hight Sir Mordred the Child, and I teach Lessons of selfishest evil, and reach Out into darkness. Thoughtless, unkind, And ruthless is Mordred and unrefined." The Child Mordred was properly rebuked and denied the accolade, though, like the others, he seemed to have assumed the title already. He made a plotter's exit, whereupon Maurice Levy rose, bowed, announced that he highted the Child Sir Galahad and continued with perfect sang froid:

"I am the purest of the pure, I have but kindest thoughts each day.

This elicited tokens of approval from the Child King Arthur, and he bade Maurice "stand forth" and come near the throne, a command obeyed with the easy grace of conscious merit. It was Penrod's turn. He steppe back from his chair, the table between him and the audience, and began in high, breathless monotone: "I hight Sir Lancelot du Lake, the Chil

His most repulsive speech the Child Sir Galahad lay within his ed, then, his own reputation and to They were Penrod's Aunt Clara and from Maurice's palm to the wrist. The two boys declaimed in concert:

stiffened and, uttering an irrepressible shrick of anguesh, gave a brief exhibition of the contortionist's art. ("He's twistin' my wrist! Dern you, leggo!") The voice of Mrs. Lora Rewbush was again heard from the wings. It sounded bloodthirsty. Penrod released his victim, and the Child King Arthur, somewhat disconcerted, extended his scepter and, with the assistance of the enraged prompter, said: Sweet child friends of the Tabul Round Simultaneously a thick and vasty gasp came from the audience, as from 500 bathers in a wholly unexpected surf. This gasp was punctuated irregularly over the auditorium by imper fectly subdued screams both of dismay and incredulous joy and by two dismal shrieks. Altogether it was an extraordinary sound, a sound never to be forgotten by any one who heard it. It vas almost as unforgetable as the sight which caused it, the word "sight" being here used in its vernacular sense, for Penrod, standing unmantled and revealed in all the medieval and artistic glory of the janitor's blue overalls falls within its meaning.

The janitor was a heavy man, and his overalls upon Penrod were merely oceanic. The boy was at once swaddled and lost within their blue gulfs and vast saggings, and the left leg, too hastily rolled up, had descended with a distinctively elephantine effect, as Margaret had observed. Certainly the Child Sir Lancelot was at least a

He finished his speech unheard. The audience had recovered breath, but had lost self control, and there ensued something later described by a participant as a sort of cultured riot. The actors in the "pageant" were not so dumfounded by Penrod's costume as might have been expected. A few precocious geniuses perceived that the overalls were the Child Lancelot's own comment on maternal intentions, and these were profoundly impressed They regarded him with the grisly admiration of young and ambitious criminals for a jail mate about to be distinguished by hanging. But most of the children simply took it to be the case (a little strange, but startling) that Penrod's mother had dressed him like that—which is pathetic. They tried to go on with the "pageant." They made a brief, manful effort. But the irrepressible outbursts from the audience bewildered them. Every time Sir Lancelot du Lake the Child opened his mouth the great, shadowy house fell into an uproar and the children into confusion. Strong women and brave girls in the audience went out into the lobby, shricking and clinging to one another. Others remained, rocking in their seats, helpless and spent. The neighborhood of Mrs. Schofield and Margaret became tactfully a desert. Friends of the author went behind the scenes and encountered a hitherto unknown phase of Mrs. Lora Rewbush. They said afterward that she hardly seemed to know what she was doing. She begged to be left alone somewhere with Penrod Schofield, for just a little while. They led her away.

Evening.

THE sun was setting behind the back fence (though at a considerable distance) as Penrod Schofield approached that fence and looked thoughtfully up at the top of it, apparently having in mind some purpose to climb up and sit there. Debating this, he passed his fingers gently up and down the backs of his legs and then something seemed to decide him not to sit anywhere. 'He leaned against the fence, sighed profoundly and gazed at Duke, his wistful dog. The sigh was reminiscent. Episode of simple pathos were passing before his inward eye. About the most painful was the vision of lovely Marjorie Jones, weeping with rage as the Child Sir Lancelot was dragged, insatiate from the prostrate and howling Child Sir Galahad, after an onslaught delivered the precise instant the curtain be

And then-oh, pangs! oh, wo mani-she slapped at the rufflan's cheek, as he was led past her by a resentful janitor, and turning, flung her arms round the Child Sir Galahad's ever speak to me again as long as you Maurice's little white boots and tion. School. TEXT morning, when he had once more resumed the dreadful burden of education, it seemed infinitely duller. And yet what pleasanter sight is there than a schoolroom well filled with children of those sprouting years just before the teens? The casual visitor, gazing from the teacher's platform upon these busy little heads, needs only a blunted memory to experience the most agreeable and exhilarating sensations. Still, for the greater part the children are unconscious of the happiness of their condition, for nothing is more pathetically true than that we "never know when we are well off." The boys in a public school are less aware of their happy state than are the girls, and of all the boys in his room probably Penrod himself had the least appreciation of his felicity. fancy the delightful secret of self levi-

Only "Mercantile" Partnerships. The Democrat used the wrong term last week in an article relative to the re cording of partnerships when it said that and there is considerable discussion as to just what the term means. Some lawyers say that it does not apply to a partnership engaged in a manufacturing siness, but only to those who propose to engage in the business of buying and selling merchandise, though where the

Having seen some instances where lawsuits grew out of the question whether two men were partners in a certain line of business, the Democrat supposed that this law was designed to establish a method by which people might have some opportunity of knowing with whom they were dealing, for the protection perhaps of the parties on both sides of the transaction. For that reason there was a little carelessness in not when writing the article referred to.

It is likely that the courts will eventually be required to decide just what a "mercantile partnership" is.

About the make of our Royal Tailor Garments. You may have had sad experience with custom suits-had them get all out of shape and never get back again. Well, the Royal Tailored Suits won't do that. They are cut the right way of the cloth, and the cloth is well shrunk. They are perfect in fit-tailored accurately. The coats are padded with hair-cloth and can't get out of shape. The pants have continuous waistbands and belt straps. We can't say too much for the make, for it is perfection, and we guarantee that you will have no cause for dissatisfaction.
