OBITUARY.

Mrs. Anne M. Chenery died suddenly in Boston Monday, April 22nd. Only the week before she had returned from a visit to Belfast to make preparations for spending the summer at her home here, and she was then to all appearances in her usual health. The afternoon of her death she was writing a letter and had not completed it when she complained of feeling ill and laid down. Medical aid was summoned, but proved of no avail, and the sufferer soon passed away. News of the death reached the Belfast friends Tuesday morning and brought sadness to the whole community, where not only the deceased but the family of which she was the last survivor but one have long been loved and respected. Mrs. Chenery was the daughter of Governor William G. and Anne M. (Patterson) Crosby, and was Fellow. The funeral was held yesterday oorn in Belfast. Of the family of four sons afternoon at his late home, Rev. Geo. S. and two daughters, but one daughter (Sarah Mills officiating. Waldo Lodge of Odd Fel-F.) Mrs. John Hitchcock of Boston, surlows attended in a body and held services vives. Mrs. Chenery was twice married. December 25, 1861, she married Col. Alfred Johnson of this city. They had one child, who died July 16, 1869. Col. Johnson died November 14, 1869, aged 44 years. In 1873, his widow married Col. Richard Chenery, who died July 27, 1890. A son, Horace Chenery, survives. Although of late Mrs. Chenery had spent the winters in the South, or in travel, or with her sister in Massachusetts, her home had always been here and the summers were spent in Belfast. Last year she bought the Crosby estate between Franklin and Main streets, and had the old house, which had been used as an annex to the Crosby Inn, moved to its original location and the grounds and building restored as nearly as possible to their former condition. The property had been relinquished that Belfast might have, what it had so long needed, a first class hotel. The Crosby Inn erected there was burned, and as there seemed no prospect of rebuilding it Mrs. Chenery andertook, as a matter of sentiment, to restore the old home, but unfortunately did not live to see her plans fully carried out, and that duty will devolve upon her son. The remains were brought to Belfast Wednesday on a special car, accompanied by members of the family, and the funeral services were held Thursday afternoon at the late residence of the deceased on Primrose Hill. A request came by telegraph for Rev. James M. Leighton, pastor of the Unitarian church, to officiate, but he, too, had passed away, his death occurring only 24 hours after that of Mrs. Chenery. Rev. H. H. Woude, pastor of the Unitarian church in Castine, was then called upon, and the quartette of the Unitarian church daughter of the late Lewis C. and Lois Coombs) Murch. Her father was a promient business man here half a century ago heing engaged in the pump and block mak. ing business in the days when ship building was at its height. Miss Murch was a nurse by profession, following that occupation in early life in Belfast, and afterwards in Bangor and Ellsworth. When the profession of trained nurse came to the front she took the regular courses and perfected herself for that calling, which she subsequently followed in Boston. She was posof a strong character combined with a warm heart and affectionate disposition and leaves a large circle of friends wher ever she was known. She was public spirited and took a marked interest in the good of the unfortunate, but the press reports of her connection with a charitable institution in Charlestown, Mass., are incorrect. Her brother George and his son, Elmer F. Murch. accompanied the remains to Belfast, wher services were held April 24th at the home of her sister-in-law, Mrs. Frances H. Murch, or Bridge street. Rev. A. A. Smith officiated.

Mrs. Ruhy A. Drinkwater died at her hom in Northport April 25th, after a long illness She was born in Northport, Dec. 14, 1828, a daughter of Nathaniel and Ruby (Sylvester) Drinkwater. Her husband, William S. Drinkwater, who survives her, is a son of David and Rachael (Terrill) Drinkwater. The deceased and her husband were descendants of Micajah Drinkwater, one of the earliest settlers of Northport. Since the summer business began at Saturday Cove Mr. and Mrs. Drinkwater have kept a boarding house for the visitors, and their place has been very popular. Mrs. Drinkwater was devoted to her family and was a most faithful wife and mother. As a neigh bor and friend she was ever ready to assist in the hour of trouble, and her many good deeds are remembered with gratitude. She held, through a long and useful life, the affection and esteem of all who knew her. Three daughters survive her, Mrs. Fannie Lawry of New York, Mrs. Georgia Yeator of Minneapolis, and Miss Abbie Drinkwater, who lives at the old home. She eaves three sisters, Mrs. Julia Elwell of Northport, Mrs. Louise Hall and Mrs. Frances Yeaton of Boston. The funeral was held at her late home Sunday afternoon and was largely attended. Rev. A. A. Smith of Belfast officiated.

Mrs. Annette Hurd died at her home in Northport April 30th after an illness of two weeks. Her husband was drawn as juryman and came to Belfast the morning of April 16th to attend Court, leaving Mrs Hurd apparently as well as usual. He had barely arrived here when a messenger from his home informed him that his wife was taken suddenly and dangerously ill. He was excused from Court and returned at once, with a physician. They found Mrs. Hurd unconscious and in a critical condition. She rallied somewhat a few days later, but passed away after two weeks of suffering. Mrs. Hurd was born in Belfast, in November, 1855, a daughter of Ambrose and Nancy Wellman. She was the wife of Phineas G. Hurd, who survives her with two sons, Leroy W. and Clarence E. She leaves a father, one brother, Nathan W. Wellman of Belmont, and one sister, Mrs. Emma F. Clark of Lincolnville. She was a very devoted wife and mother, a kind neighoor and a true friend. She was a member of Tranquillity Grange. The funeral will be held this, Thursday, afternoon, and the burial will be in the Hills Cemetery in Lin-

Henry Hudson Sides died at his farm on the Belmont road Monday morning, after a long illness. He was born in Belfast, in January, 1849, a son of the late Isaac Sides, who was for many years a prominent master ship-builder in this city. When Henry was a young man his parents moved to the farm on which they passed the remainder of their days, and on which Henry has since lived. Deceased was an enterprising and progressive farmer, and his produce was always of the best quality, especially his fruit. His wife, formerly Miss Cora Clark of Belfast, survives him with one daughter, and he leaves one sister, Mrs. Susan Mathews of Waldoboro, who was with him when he passed away. He was formerly an active worker in the grange, and was always ready to give an account of his methods and his reasons for practicing them. He was also an Odd at the grave in Grove Cemetery. Died in Islesboro April 19th, Rebekah Dodge, wife of Capt. Charles Dodge, Sr., aged 82 years. She leaves a husband, one daughter—wife of Labon Pendleton—and four sons, two of whom, Charles and Joseph, are prominent sea captains. She was a woman of excellent Christian character, and was held in high esteem by neighbors and friends. She had been married 64 years. Her husband is in feeble health. The funeral took place Sunday afternoon, April 21st, Rev. George E. Tufts officiating.

The remains of John Calvin Dickey, who died at his home in Dorchester, Mass., April 22nd, were brought to Bangor April 25th and interred in the family lot at Mount Hope, accompanied by his son, George B. Dickey of Dorchester, and a nephew, Orrin J. Dickey of Belfast. Mr. Dickey was formerly a resident of Bangor and well known throughout this section, where he lived many years. He was born in Northport on October 4, 1818, and was therefore little more than 83 years of age. He was the son of John Davidson and Betsey (Eames) Dickey, and his early life was spent on the farm at Dickey's Bluff, Northport. At the age of 18 years he came to Bangor and there began work as the clerk in Elder's restaurant, later becoming a partner in the clothing business with John Palmer, under the firm name of Palmer & Dickey. After a few years he leased the Central House, one of the leading hotels of Bangor in those days, with a large stable, and was proprietor for many years, buying the place, and later selling to remove to Hyde Park, Mass., where he went into the business of clothing, boots and shoes and various lines, retiring but a few years ago. Mr. Dickey had been in good health and last summer visited at his old home in Northport, in Belfast and in Bangor. He was a direct descendant of the first family of Dickeys to come to this country, and was always proud of the fact. He was always stately, erect and had a figure which was admired by all. About ten days previous to his death he was stricken with paralysis, from which he did not recover, passing away April 22nd. Funeral services were held at the home in and the quartette of the Unitarian church assisted in the service. The floral offerings were numerous and very beautiful, including violets, lilies, roses and orchids in tasteful combinations. The bearers were Messrs. Ben. Hazeltine, Herbert T. Field, Fred G. White and W. H. Quimby. Interment was in the family lot in Grove Cemetery.

Miss Susan A. Murch died at the home of her brother, George F. Murch, in Boston, April 23d, at the age of 64 years, 6 months and 20 days. She was born in Belfast, a daughter of the late Lewis C. and Lois and the called upon, stricken with paralysis, from which he did not recover, passing away April 22nd. Funeral services were held at the home in Dorchester Wednesday, and the remains were at once brought to Bangor, where the interment took place. The deceased is survived by his wife, Bernice Perry Smith of Gardiner, whom he married in 1845, and three children—George B. and Miss Maude A. Dickey of Dorchester, Mass., and Mrs. Blanche E. Smith of New York. He also leaves four sisters and a brother—Mrs. Sarah E. Jenkins and Mrs. Susan D. Mahoney of Belfast, Mrs. Hattie E. Banks of Dorchester, Mass.; Mrs. Nancy H. Rhoades of Rockland, and O. Adelbert Dickey of Northport.—Bangor Daily News.

Ezra Hawkes, a former city marshal of Portland, died in that city April 27th. He was 67 years old, a native of China, Me. He superintended the cutting of the stone for the Army and Navy building in Washington, and the Philadelphia Postoffice building, and during many years was a government inspector in the construction of buildings. He served three years as city marshal of Portland. His last public service was as a special liquor deputy under Sheriff Plummer.

The Newly Appointed Bishop.

Fr. O'Connell, the newly appointed Catholic bishop of Maine, has had remarkable distinctions in the responsibility conferred upon him. He is a young man for a bishopric, being but little over 40 years of age, and he is selected from outside the diocese in which he is to preside. He is of Massachusetts birth, and much of his service, as he rose to his present eminence, was in this State, where he is widely known and much admired. His career has been one of continually increasing honor and usefulness in the church, and with it all he has won the love of many, who rejoice at the culmination it has attained in his present appointment.—Boston Herald.

The funeral services of the late Rev. James M. Leighton were held in the Unitarian church Friday afternoon and were most impressive and affecting. A large concourse of people from all the walks of life was present to offer the last loving tribute to one who had endeared himseif to the whole community. The casket was at the foot of the pulpit and was surrounded by smilax, asparagus and delicate ferns, relieved by the bright blossoms of many of his favorite flowers, while the pulpit was completely covered with them, and a group of Easter lilies stood at each side. His hand held a bunch of trailing arbutus, one of our earliest wild flowers and one of his special favorites in the floral world. The services opened with a solemn organ selection, followed by the reading of a portion of the burial service by Rev. Henry H. Woude of Castine. Rev. Geo. S. Mills of the North church read the following beautiful stanzas, entitled "Away," by James Whitcomb Riley:

I cannot say and will not say That he is dead—He is just away! With cheery smile, and wave of the hand, He has wandered into an unknown land, And left us dreaming how very fair It needs must be since he lingers there. And you—O you, who the wildest yearn For the old-time step and the glad return, Think of him faring on, as dear In the love of There as the love of Here;

Mild and gentle as he was brave,— When the sweetest love of his life he gave To simple things: - Where the violets grew

The touches of his hands have strayed As reverently as his lips have prayed; When the little brown thrush that harshly chirred Was dear to him as the mocking bird:

And he pitied as much as a man in pain A writhing honey-bee wet with rain. Think of him still as the same, I say: He is not dead—he is just away!

Rev. S. C. Beach of Bangor then read Scripture selections, and prayer was offered by Rev. A. A. Smith of the Universalist church. Miss Blanche L. Sullivan sang "O eyes that are weary," by Brackett. The remarks which followed, by Mr. Woude, were most affecting, being inspired by a close personal friendship of more than a quarter of a century. Meeting at first in the Theological school at Meadville, Pa. the two become fast friends, and the intimate knowledge of Mr. Leighton's character which resulted from this friendship enabled Mr. Woude to speak words which found a ready response in the hearts of his hearers. His estimate of the worth and manliness. the true and affectionate nature, and the always courteous demeanor of his friend, was expressed in most eloquent language, emphasized by a depth of feeling which was only controlled by a great effort on the part of the speaker and which struck a responof the speaker and which struck a responsive chord in every heart. The beautiful piece, "Good-by sweet day," by Vannah, was sung by Mrs. E. S. Pitcher. Both this and the selection by Miss Sullivan were favorites of Mr. Leighton and were sung by special request of Mrs. Leighton. After a brief prayer by Mr. Beach the services closed with the hymn, by the church choir, "Nearer my God, to Thee."

A Tale of Shipwrecks and Disasters.

At New Orleans Mr. Pilsbury bought a schooner, sailed to Campeachy with corn, a famine prevailing there at the time, and then went to Laguna in Yuca-tan, and thence to New York with log-wood.

From that port he took freight for New Orleans, and in eight or ten days anchored on the Bahama Banks, near Georges Island. It was on Sunday. The weather was perfectly calm, and so remained until about six o'clock in the evening, when a light breeze sprung up from the eastward. The schooner got under way. Before eight o'clock the breeze had increased to a gale and, before twelve, to a hurricane. A great number of vessels were lost in it. For three days the schooner lay to under three days the schooner lay to under short canvas, until her position became so uncertain that it was impossible to the Creator in the human character. I tell on which side of the Bahama Chantell on which side of the Bahama Channel she was lying. Suddenly she found herself in white water. From the best observation the captain could make, he concluded he must be on the western side of the channel. It was now about eleven o'clock at night. The captain crowded on the canvas, steering northward and eastward—the wind

The captain, without a moment's hesitation, ordered the masts to be cut away in order to lighten her, and, if possible, keep her afloat until morning. The night was dark and terrific. The masts fell over, and the schooner wore to leeward of them; they broke the

We sought an explanation of a course of conduct marked by a fancy which seemed to us so extraordinary, and we held with Mr. Pilsbury a conversation, of which we preserved the following minutes:

In that position she lay for four then as at any time. But I fervently believe it to be a great principle, governing all organized matter, that, in passing through any grand solemnity—of life or of death—of marriage or of victory, or anything of a momentous character—the first and most natural desire of the heart is that the person should be comely and cleanly. The hurricane continued with tremendous and unabated force. All hope of reaching their port was abandoned. The captain concluded to bear up for Charleston in order to repair. He proceeded down the coast along the edge of the Little Bahama Rock Bank. At

The captain had about his person ceror the Little Bahama Rock Bank. At four in the afternoon the schooner was opposite Sail Rock, at which time it was discovered that there was a severe leak, by which three or four feet of water had been made in the hold, of which those on board had, until then, been ignorant.

The gale continued. The schooner was under close-reefed topsails, and vou should happen to survive. I present is the captain had about his person certain scans of gold. He did not consider that sums of gold. He did not consider the money at the time worth two cents on the dollar; but, before leaving the schooner for the boat—a desperate resort, as he then supposed—he called the men aft on the quarter-deck, and said, "Your wages have been paid. "It seems to me," we answered, "that the general instinct of which you speak will not cover, in its application, a case of such peculiar exigency. The victim that goes to an ignominious death, passes, nevertheless, through a sort of triumphal-archway, since it is always a motive to challenge the admiration of the gaping thousands who may witness his exit, by showing with how much fortitude he can die. The utmost hope of posthumous glory which you could have had was, that some ravenous shark might make a respectable meal ten or fifteen minutes she was along-side, and all had got safe on board the ship. She proved to be the bark "Jones," of Boston, commanded by the late Captain John C. Hardy of New-

So sudden had been the occurrence, that the watch, which had been imme-diately called on the notice of the boat s proximity, had not got on deck when the strangers boarded; and so much was the commander of the bark astonished by the whole affair, that he never asked Captain Pilsbury or his associates if they were hungry or thirsty. For three days they had lived on the smallest modicum of provisions. The half pint allowance of water that morning, out of the three gallons that remained to the boat's crew, had not been consumed, in consequence of the anxiety created by the appearance of the sail, nor had any sustenance been taken. Captain Pilsbury conversed with Captain Jones until dinner was ready, tak-ing nothing in the meantime but a sin-gle glass of water, for which he asked. The bark arrived safely in Boston.

Having no suitable garments of any discription, not even shoes and stockings, Mr. Pilsbury was compelled to remain on board all night. He then went to Cornhill, procured proper apparel, and having put up at a hotel where the eastern people generally congregated, he found numerous friends, many of whom are now dead.

He has been associated with the inhabitants of many nations; he has found good and kind people in all of them, and never, in any part of the world, been without a friend.

This concludes Mr. Pilsbury's seafaring experiences, and those who have read thus far may perhaps be interested in a brief account of his later career. He returned to Eastport and was a candidate for Representative to the Legislature and lost the election by one vote. He was then chosen by the legislature a member of the Executive Council. In that year he was the regular Demo cratic nominee for Congress. There was a split in the party, and the bolters nominated Anson G. Chandler. Mr. Pilsbury ran three times successively with a plurality of more than one thousand votes, the law requiring a majority of the whole; and finally the Whig candidate, Joseph C. Noyes, succeeded in his election.

Mr. Pilsbury then went to Ohio with the intention of engaging in business there, but concluding not to do so, went to New Orleans, where the firm of J. W. Zacherie & Co. prevailed upon him to go to Texas. This was in the days of the Texas Republic, under the Administration of Gen. Lamar. Later Mr. Pilsbury was elected to the Texas Legislature from his county, and on the expiration of his term was elected to the Senate. He resigned his seat in the Senate and was chosen chief justice of the County Court and judge of probate for the County of Brazoria, an office which he held between two and three years. He was then re-elected to the Senate and resigned the judgeship He served as senator one session, and in the year following proposals were made for annexation. In 1845 the Republic of Texas entered the Union of States. Shortly after the annexation Mr. Pilsbury was elected to the National House of Representatives, and subsequently re-elected a member of the 30th Congress.

A Klondike Failure.

Two years ago an expedition of Maine young men, numbering 25, started for the Klondike, backed by $25,000 of Maine capital. The prospectors all in-vested in the stock of the syndicate, and in return were to be furnished with transportation and 18 months' provisions, clothing and equipments, and to retain one-third and the company tworetain one-third and the company two-thirds of whatever wealth in gold or claims they acquired. At the end of 18 months they were to be furnished trans-portation back to Maine if they desired. The company lived up to its agreement, and the promoters, after exhausting the available funds, have had frequently to make personal contributions. The expedition turned out to be a flat failure. Most of the Maine men came home. Last fall the directors of the company sent a prospector to inspect the claims held in the company's name. He has just returned and his report is anything but assuring. The company being absolutely without assets, nothing remains but to wind up its affairs, which will shortly be done. In all, about $30,000 was sunk.—Portland Press.

The horse with wings is Pegasus, the steed on which the poet is supposed to ride. Time should be represented by an old man with a scythe."

A Bloodless Face Indicates Trouble.

Watery Blood a Menace to Health.

WE KNOW HOW PALE PEOPLE CAN GET RICH RED BLOOD.

COME AND LET US TELL YOU ABOUT VINOL.

When blood is watery and thin, or, as doctors would say, lacks red blood corpuscles, it is a sign that much is radically wrong.

We would advise everyone who has such symptoms to start at once to take a proper remedy to overcome this That remedy is Vinol, the greatest and most modern tonic and rebuilder. Vinol owes its virtue to the fact that it contains in a highly concentrated state the active curative principles extracted from cods' livers, the same ele-ments that have made cod-liver oil famous for wasting diseases.

These medicinal elements are dissolved in a delicious table wine so that Vinol is most palatable.

None of the vile-smelling obnoxious grease that characterizes cod-liver oil and frequently makes it an impossible remedy for those who should take it, is found in Vinol.

We could relate many instances where Vinol has done good and restored the roses of health to the pale cheeks of the sufferer

The following is a fair sample of the way people write in regard to Vinol:
"For several months I suffered lassi-"For several months I suitered lassitude and tired all the time. Also a sinking feeling in my stomach, which nothing would relieve, and I was pale and weak. As an experiment I tried Vinol and if I wrote pages I could not tell all it has done for me."—Mrs. A. K. I.A. Pringue, Ameshury, Mass. K. LA PRUSCH, Amesbury, Mass.

Because we know Vinol so well, and because we know so surely what it will do, and how it will accomplish the good it does in a scientific way, we unreservedly endorse and recommend it, and in every instance guarantee to refund ! to any one what they pay us for Vinol if they do not find it entirely satisfactory.

painfully up and down, bringing every article used in the town. Owing to its cramped space, there are no plazas or other vacant places, except the esplanade. The streets, criss-crossing in the most perplexing manner, have hardly width enough for two laden mules to pass each other. They are as void of every kind of vehicle as those of Venice, and almost as unsavory as its canals. The dwellings, built of the same material as the rock on which they stand, are all snow-white; and as walls and towers are also white, the general effect of the shadeless place in this sunny latitude, with the sparkling sea in front and the dazzling sky above, is blinding at noonday. Every morning nearly the whole population pours down the inclined plane with their beasts of burden, to work in the country, miles away, because, of course, on the barren cliffs there are no gardens or other vegetation. The churches of Bonifazio are worth visiting. Sainte Marie Majeure, with its wide porch and flying buttresses, is of Pisan construction. San Dominique, with its pieced octagonal tower, is of the Thirteenth century and belonged to the the Templars. San Francisco the newest of all was begun in 1398. If the weather permits, you should by all means visit some of the sea-wrought caverns in the chalky cliffs. The largest grotto, called La Dragonetta, is just beyond the light-house and easily accessible. It is in two parts, for their solution. one like an ante-chamber, its gigantic dome cut in half and fringed with stalactites. Through this the boat enters the second cavern, which is lighted from above by an aperture, said to be in the exact form of the outline of a map of Corsica. The effect of color here, from the deep, translucent blue of the sea, the bright red of the water-line, and the chalky whiteness above, is most striking. In this still and silent retreat, fish congregate by millions. It is not safe for mortals to venture far inside, not only on account of the crumbling walls, but because of the uncertain Mediterranean currents which may send huge billows rolling in at any moment. Steering out of this grotto, you soon reach the open Strait, which seems to be the bluest blue that can possibly be imagined. Presently you see directly in front a huge pyramidal rock, rising with double front to meet the rush of waters. This glorious facade, named Monte Pertusato, is a triumphant specimen of Nature's architectural skill. On either side are massive buttresses of lime and sandstone, furrowed by the waves; and between them rises the lofty span of a colossal arch towering up toward the white battlements of Bonifazio. This is the natural portal to a grotto of unparalleled magnificence, called Sotto al Francisco. You cannot get in with a boat, but rowing as near as safety will allow, you see wonderful stalactites hanging ing away into darkness in the very heart of the cliff. Farther around to the eastward, a long stretch of coast is in with a party of English ladies and gentlemen at Bonifazio, who were touring the Mediterranean in a private yacht; and very joyfully accepted an invitation to accompany them in a cruise around Sardinia,-the sister-island of Corisca. Though these two largest islands of the Mediterranean, next to Sicily, are separated only by a strait so narrow that a school-boy could leap across from one to the other,they are as different in scenery, climate, geological formation and the character of the people as if oceans divided them. Sailing down the eastern coast of Sardinia, you see bold headlands and ranges of cliffs, with little bays between them, varied by long stretches of lagoons and marshes-the same, probably, whose deadly miasmas have given the big island such an unenviable reputation that Europeans. The recent demand that the Democratic party shall return to the princi-ples of Jefferson is the subject of a notable article in the May Forum from the pen of Mr. Albert Watkins, who has no difficulty is showing that many who make this demand have an inadequate conception of all that it involves. His critical exposition of Jeffersonian principles will be read with as much in-terest as his estimate of the political character of Mr. Bryan.

The value of physical exercise ha been so industriously preached in this generation that it is time for something to be said on the other side. The tendency to excessive devotion to athletics in American colleges has found a keen and vigorous critic in Prof. Arlo Bates, of the Massachusetts School of Technology, whose article on the subject in the Max number of the Forum is a timely warning against the displacement of intellectual ideals by the new enthusiasm for sport.

Sir Thomas Lipton, K. C. V. O., has written especially for The Saturday Evening Post, of May 11, an article on The Sports that make the Man. He places yachting high on the list, gives some interesting anecdotes of his own career as an amateur yachtsman. Sir Thomas is hopeful, if not confident, of "lifting" the America's Cup next autumn. He says, however, that if it were a certainty he would not cross the water; for there is no sporting interest in "sure things." This article will appear exclusively in the Saturday Evening Post, of Philadelphia.

The May instalment of the "Road to Frontenac" in Leslie's Popular Monthly is an exciting one, and shows the full dramatic power and charm of the story. Fashion Notes for May.

The postilion back, which has made such a hit, is a very possible innovation that may readily be added to the jacket that reaches only to the waist-line. The latter is easily made over at home. ### Forewarned, Forearmed.

The liability to disease is greatly lessened when the blood is in good condition, and the circulation healthy and vigorous. For then all refuse matter is promptly carried out of the system; otherwise it would rapidly accumulate —fermentation would take place, the blood become polluted and the constitution so weakened that a simple malady might result seriously.

A healthy, active circulation means good digestion and strong, healthy nerves.

As a blood purifier and tonic S. S. S. has no equal. It is the safest and best remedy for old people and children because it contains no minerals, but is made exclusively of roots and herbs. No other remedy so thoroughly and

Arbor Day Proclamation

Arbor Day Proclamation

In compliance with the law of the State, and conforming with a beautiful and established custom now prevailing throughout our Union, I hereby designate Friday, the tenth day of May, as Arbor Day; and I recommend that it be observed in the planting of trees, shrubs and vines for the adornment of the homes, the school grounds and the highways of the State, and in such other undertakings as shall be in harmony with the character of the day.

It is especially urged that the teachers and pupils of our public schools devote this day to the beautifying of the grounds occupied by them, and to exercises appropriate thereto.

Given at the Council Chamber in Augusta, this twelfth day of April, in the year of our Lord one thousand nine hundred and one, and of the Independence of the United States of America the one hundred and twenty-fifth.

The services at the North church last Sunday forenoon were attended by Waldo Lodge of Odd Fellows in a body. Fifty members were in attendance. The services included the usual devotional opening, with hymns by the congregation, a solo, "Beyond the shadows," by Mr. John Parker, and an able address by the pastor, Rev. Geo. S. Mills, from I Peter 3:8: "Finally, be ye all of one mind, having compassion one for another: love as brethen, be pitiful, be courteous." The model Odd Fellow, he said, would be the kind of man the apostle wanted the Christian to be. The Work of the U. S. Weather Burea

There is no other subject in which the people throughout the civilized world are so generally interested as they are in the weather, and there is nothing that exerts a greater influence on the affairs of men. Although the weather has occupied men's minds to a great extent since the earliest days of the race, and much scientific research has been made, it is only within a comparatively few years that any systematic paratively few years that any systematic attempt has been made to record and diffuse meteorological data or knowledge. Since the work was taken up by the leading commercial nations of the world, great advances have been made and great benefit has accrued, particu-

allied branches. The early Egyptians studied meteorology as a branch of astronomy, and Aristotle compiled a comprehensive work on the weather from their writings and his own observations. He discussed prognostics of rain, wind, storms and fair weather, but made no attempt to explain any of the phenomena. subject, but they added little to the knowledge imparted by Aristotle. The first step in the progress of meteorology towards becoming a science was the discovery by Torricelli, in 1643, of the weight and pressure of the atmosphere, and the consequent invention of the barometer. This was quickly followed by the invention of the thermometer, which gave a great impetus to the study of the weather. Other including the hygrometer, anemometer, rain gauge, etc.

The early part of the nineteenth century was fruitful in research and the publication of data bearing on the weather, the famous work of Dalton, the first to deal with the subject from a philosophical standpoint, appearing a few years earlier, 1793. Among the more notable works of the time are Humiell's Meteorological Essays and Observations (1823); Hadely's works on the Trade Winds (1835); and articles by Tyndall, Dove and others. The first official publication to attract attention was the Army Meteorological Journal in 1855, which gave an elaborate series of charts illustrating the temperature and rainfall in different seasons in every part of the United States.

The formation of meteorological sociof diffusing knowledge of the weather, and the establishment of weather bureaus by the various maritime nations assisted materially to the same end. In 1853 a conference of the great maritime nations was held in Brussels, at which plans for co-operation and research for investigating the phenomena of sea and air were proposed. The United States, Great Britain, Holland and France led in this work.

The early work of the weather fore easters in Great Britain was eminently successful, the report of the London Board of Trade showing that out of 100 storms predicted 94 occurred.

The United States government began establishing stations and displaying warnings on the sea-coast and the great lakes in 1870. The first storm warnings were sent to the lake ports Nov. 8th, preceding the storm several hours and iving many lives and much property.

The United States Weather Bureau is a branch of the Department of Agriculture, and is in charge of Willis L. Moore of Washington. The country is a centre of distribution in each. To these centres all reports are sent and from them the warnings and forecasts are distributed. The New England centre is in Boston, with J. W. Smith forecast director. The reports of the Bureau are received from upwards of 3,000 stations, which on Jan. 1, 1901, were classed as follows: regular stations, 159; West Indian stations, 13; special river stations, 132; special rainfall stations, 48; voluntary observers, 2,562; army posts, 18; life saving stations, 9; Southern Pacific railroad, 96; Canadian service, 32: Mexican stations 30. The Bureau also receives through the Meteorological Office in London daily reports from many points from the north coast of Ireland to Portugal and the Azores, which give steamers about to sail for Europe the latest information as to the condition of the weather on the European coast.

There are 8 regular stations in New England-at Eastport and Portland, Me., Northfield, Vt., Boston and Nantucket, Mass., Block Island and Narraganset R. L. and New Haven Conn These are in charge of salaried officers and are supplied with maximum and minimum thermometers, barometers, wind and rain gauges, hygrometers, and apparatus for recording all the varied phases and conditions of the weather.

There are 90 volunteer observers, of whom 15 are in Maine. They are located at Bar Harbor, Bemis, Belfast, Carmel, Cornish, Fairfield, Farmington, Flagstaff, Gardiner, Kineo, Lewiston, Mayfield, North Bridgton, Orono and Rumford Falls. Voluntary observers are supplied with thermometers and rain gauges, but not with wind or humidity instruments or barometers.

Formerly the temperature was recorded from ordinary thermometers, three or more observations being taken daily and the averages computed. Now, by using maximum and minimum thermometers, but one observation per day is necessary. In the maximum thermometer the mercury column goes to the highest point reached and remains there until the instrument is "set." In the minimum an index goes to the lowest point and remains until

The rainfall is collected in a tank set in an open place. The tank is cylindr cal, 20 inches high and 8 inches in diameter. The water is poured from this into a tube 2.53 inches in-diameter, in force of wind is measured by 5-minute tests at different intervals.

Voluntary observers record daily the maximum and minimum, mean and range of temperature; time of begin-ning and ending of each storm; amount of snow-fall; depth of snow on the larly to navigation and agriculture and ground each day; direction of wind: and general character of the weather. The regular stations, in addition to these, report the maximum and minimum barometer readings; force and total daily movement of the wind; and humidity. The monthly reports include a summary of the above, the dates of frosts, sleet, thunder, auroras, halos, and any other facts that the Cicero, Virgil and others wrote on the Bureau can use for the benefit of commerce or agriculture, such as the begin ning of spring plowing, date of ice leaving the rivers, lakes and ponds, time of planting and harvesting the different crops, migrations of wild fowl and birds, greatest rise and lowest water in the rivers, etc. The system of disseminating information and warnings is fully as thorough and far-reaching as that of collecting the data, and every part of ventions came naturally into line, in- the country is promptly reached. The most important points are along the sea coast and on the great lakes, where the timely display of storm signals saves many lives and millions of dollars' worth of property every year. Two methods are employed, whistles and flags. The whistle system consists of a simple code of long and short blasts, indicating all the different kinds of weather. The flag system consists boldt's Isothermal Lines (1817); Dan-1 of five flags, which when used singly or in combination tell the mariner the probabilities of the weather.

In regard to other method of disseminating the forecasts and warnings the Bureau places the newspaper at the head of the list, and telegraphs to the press the fullest possible reports. The forecasts and warnings are distributed by many other methods, chief among which are the telegraph and the railroad and telephone. The Bureau also eties contributed largely to the means publishes more than 100,000 bulletins daily, chiefly postal cards, which are sent to postmasters to be posted in their offices. In many cities the forecasts are posted on letter-boxes and in flags are displayed on the outside of the cars. The new rural free delivery is being made use of to spread the weather forecasts and storm warnings among the farmers. The same division of districts prevails and the forecasts are sent out from the same centres as those which receive the reports of observers.

The Weather Bureau's observations and predictions are general rather than local, but even the general aspect may be modified by local conditions and the unexpected may happen. As a rule, however, the predictions of the Bureau are reliable and are relied upon, and many lives and many millions of dollars' are saved every year both in commerce and agriculture, by the timely Sold by A. The courts have decided that masters of vessels are in duty bound to heed the storm warnings, and divided into twenty-one districts, with marine insurance companies report a decreasing amount of losses of life and property due to the increasing efficiency of the Weather Bureau and the more careful heeding of its warnings.

Another important work of the Bureau is the system of river and flood warnings, which is being extended to all the principal rivers where a possibility of a flood exists. Losses from floods in 1900 aggregated $12,000,000 in the United States, and the amount saved by the warnings of the Bureau was even greater. Eight new stations were established in the country last year. This work applies, of course, only to floods caused by the natural rise of rivers, and not to the breaking of dams or log booms, as in the Johnstown flood of 1889, or the more recent disaster at Middlefield, Mass. The department keeps a record of the amount of snow on the hills, the water in the streams, and all other necessary data, and when the proper time comes, keep the people in the endangered sections thoroughly informed as to the conditions and probabilities.

The Bureau publishes a periodical called the Monthly Weather Review, in Washington, which gives the report of the entire country, together with much other timely and pertinent matter. This is used as a supplementary work in some schools and colleges. Monthly reports are also published at the various section centres, each giving the report of its own section in detail. The Bureau also seeks to spread a knowledge of meteorology by means of station libraries, lectures by Bureau officials, etc.

In addition to the weather reporters the Department has a corps of climate and crop correspondents, who make monthly reports of the conditions of the crops. There are 87 of these correspondents in Maine, 6 of whom are in Waldo county, as follows: George Allen, Burnham; B. F. Foster, Halldale; W. H. Moody, Liberty; E. C. Dow, Belfast; D. O. Bowen, Morrill; J. G. Harding, Waldo Station.

Bryanism and Jeffersonian Democracy.

In reality, he who runs may read more of the spirit of Jeffersonian Democracy in the Chicago and Kansas City platforms than can be found in any other platform of the Democratic party. Furthermore, in his political beginnings, when he knew or had read little else, Mr. Bryan crammed himself with lessons from Jefferson's life and was an ostentatious disciple of that eminent radical. Indeed, it is precisely this quality of Jeffersonism in Mr. Bryan and his platforms which is offensive to the conservative or old-school Democracy. It is left to Bryanism to illustrate the fact, which the Bourbon illustrate the fact, which the Boules. Democracy does not even yet comprehend, that Jeffersonian Democracy is not of joint with the times. If Jefferson should come back now to the country whose political institutions and polity he so largely shaped and inspired, he would meet the same sort of a reception, as, in Mr. Stead's opinion, would be given in Chicago to his great forerupper as a social leveller. forerunner as a social leveller.

Both Jefferson and Jackson lived in very primitive social conditions compared to those in which Mr. Bryan is undertaking to apply their political and social notions. They could, with confidence, appeal to the "plain people" then, because there were few of any other class to oppose or control them. They did not take into account the coming supremacy of organized capitol, much more potent in its control of the dependent "plain people" than Mr. Bryan's idealistic notions of individual liberty, because they had not dreamed of the revolutionary advent of steam and electricity, or the teeming population which has been their concomitant. Fisher Ames had said, in 1791: "Ages must elapse before the vast wilderness west of the Alleghanies can be peopled, and then God only knows how they can be governed." And Jefferson in his first inaugural address, contemplating only the northwestern territory as far as the Mississippi, said: "there is room enough for our descendants to the hundredth and thousandth generation." The same sudden creation of modern means of transportation and other me chanical appliances, which so utterly confounded the prophecy of Ames, has thrown out upon the banks of progress the let-alone individualistic policy of Jefferson and Jackson, where it lies obsolete and stale.

Jefferson and Jackson established a system of political equality, and then dreamed that this comprehended economic equality, or, at least, economic freedom. But so great has been the economic and social change since these great political buildows are supported that great political builders wrought that we are, in the words of Zola, "in a we are, in the words of Zola, "m a democracy ravaged by political equality and economic inequality." The great French radical could not have described more truly or aptly our present condition, if he had had his eye upon us instead of France, or perhaps European society in general, when he spoke these words. Though this condition is the basis of Bryanism and of party clear. basis of Bryanism and of party cleav age, yet it is so unconsciously; or, at the most, is vaguely perceived. We are in a state of economic anarchy. We pretend to be living in Jeffersonian equality though we have not adjusted our methods and institutions to chang-ing conditions for a hundred years.—Albert Watkins in the May Forum.

Most people do not make the beds for roses sufficiently deep, that is, the soil is not loosened to a depth sufficient to enable the roots to penetrate to the depth they desire in order to obtain the feed and moisture in the soil. In part shallow planting accounts for the short season of bloom we notice with some roses, the plants not having vitality enough to sustain the blossoms except for a short period, nor to produce a second crop when the first is gone. If the plot selected for roses is soil that has been cultivated for two seasons or more it may be safely spaded to a depth of two feet (unless a layer of hard clay is found at that depth, in which case the clay should be loosened, but not worked in with the top soil), and the fertilizer used worked in until it is thoroughly incorporated with the soil. The soil cannot be made too rich—that is, of course, within reason—for the rose plant is a gross feeder and the richer the soil the stronger will be the growth of the plant, and the more profuse the blossoming. If the soil is inclined to be sandy it can be enriched more heavily than if naturally heavy. Of the two natural soils that which is inclined to be heavy, with considerable clay in it, perhaps is best for roses, but it must be well broken up, made fine and loosened to a considerable depth, as suggested.

The best way to furnish the required drainage is to throw out the soil in the bed to the depth of three feet, and fill in the hole a foot or eighteen inches with stones, broken bricks, old rubbish of any kind, broken crockery, etc., and then put back the soil removed. This will supply ample drainage for any surplus water and still the drainage mate. plus water and still the drainage material will be so far below the roots of the plants that it will not draw off any moisture needed by them.—Geo.
