TWO LARGE FAILURES.

Suspension of F. Shaw & Co., Tan-

And the Boot and Shoe Firm of C. W. Copeland & Co.

Boston, July 30 .- The firm of F. Shaw & Bros., 268 Purchase street, the largest tanning concern in the world, to-day made an assigument to F. A. Wyman. The cause of the suspension is the fact that the immeuse assets of the firm are so involved that they cannot be utilized to cancel present liabilities. An immediate cause of the suspension is the failure of C. W. Copeland & Co. Messrs. Shaw & Brothers are creditors of the former firm to the amount of about $100,000. The firm of F. Shaw & Bros, is rated at about $5,000,000, and the assets will reach fully that amount. Creditors may reasonably expect settlement in full and it is hoped that the embarrassed firm will oon resume on its former solid basis. It cannot be learned who are the beavies oreditors, but no other large houses are expect ed to be involved. treet came from the return of the firm's checks from the Clearing House indersed inc funds." An hour's time after the regular solutionent hour (1 o'clock) was asked and granted but although the funds at hand simost sufficed to cancel immediate obligations it was found to be impossible to permanently tide over the embarrasement.

Dover, N. H., July 30 .- The failure of Dover, N. H., July 30.—The failure of Shaw & Bros., created a profound sensation here. They did an extensive business with manufacturers in this section. Fayette Shaw is special partner with Charles W. Clement, manufacturer of boots and shoes, 159 Federal street, Boston, who has factories here in Dover, Brockton, Randolph, Rockland, Haverhill and Lynn. Clement commenced to manufacture shoes and slippers in Strong and Burt's factory here which has been idle some time. It was only after great inducements that Clement came here.

[LATER.]
The liabilities of Shaw & Brothers are $3,5000,000; nominal assets $5,000. The assets consists of tanneries in Northern Maine, New York, New Branswick, Quebec. The company owns one and a million acres of land in Maine. The cause of the suspension was the failure of Copeland & Co., who owe them $400,000 The remote cause of the failure was the suspension of the Pacific Bank a year ago. Shaw Bros., at the time the bank collapsed, held a number of boot and shoe firms above water who lost on the failure of the Pacific Bank. These firms they have been carrying ever since and perhaps they will be heard from in a day or two. [LATER.]

The creditors are chiefly Maine, Boston, and New York banks, and some of the largest hide and leather houses in Boston. The tanneries controlled by the concern will be kept to work up the stock on hand and will probably continue for its controlled. tinue for six months

Heavy Failure in the Boot and Shoe Heavy Failure in the Boot and Shoe Trade.

Boston, July 30.—The Journal says—The rumored extensive failure to which allusion has been made is announced to-day as that of the boot and shoe manufacturers Charles W.
Copeland & Co. The firm consists of Charles W. Copeland and Arthur W. Stedman, a branch firm being located in New York under the title of Stedman & Co. Mr. Copeland states that his liabilities amount to about three quarters of a million, and his assets of certain large claims which he will not at present specify, which, if they could be secured, would leave a surplus of $20,000. It was in view of these claims, and in order to protect their credlast. The factories are located in Brockton, Natick and North Abisgton. Copeland is not prepared to assign any special cause of the failure beyond the claims referred to, but it is learned from other sources it was largely due to the failure of Hofferman & Son, of New York, and Toler & Co. Relief was expected from these sources.

New York, July 30 .- Mr. Stedman, of Stee MEW YORK, July 30.—Mr. Stedman, of Stedman & Co., mentioned in connection with the Copeland failure, declined to give any information on the subject further than that L. & C. Wise, auctioneers, of 80 Read street, had taken charge of Charles W. Copeland's New York interest. The Messrs Wise said they knew nothing of the failure beyond what had been announced in tc-day's papers. The failure of Mr. Copeland will not affect New York merchants, as the business done was very merchants, as the business done was very small. No anxiety therefore is felt among the wholesale dealers of this city.

THE HILL INVESTIGATION.

WASHINGTON, July 30 .- Mr. Hill was examined at length as to the construction of different elevators and as to the alleged superiority of Hale & Co's machines. He considered

Hale & Co's elevator had merits not possessed by other elevators, the principal advantage be-Mr. Totten objected to the examination as irrelevant and Mr. Coleman said he desired to test the knowledge of the wirness in regard to elevators to show that he approved the report of the committee of experts without knowing anything about the merits of different elevators. He proposed to show that the witness had fraudulently given Hale & Co. a contract for elevators for the Chicago building and that he had acted independently of the specifications. Mr. Coleman offered in evidence a steam elevators in accordance with specifications, whereas it was afterwards decided to use hydraulic elevators without giving Crane an opportunity to put in another bid. Other correspondence was introduced as tending to show that Hale & Co. had a monopoly of the elevator business for the government under the present supervising architect.

A spirited colloquy sprang up at this point between counsel. Mr. Crane of Chicago was then examined by Mr. Coleman. His firm bid for the Chicago building elevators, but did not get the contract. He narrated all the circumstances attending the rejection of his bid and the acceptance of Hale & Co's. He appeared before the committee of experts and explained his bid and machinery. The committee, however, reported in favor of hydraulic elevator's and in favor of Hale & Co's contract. His firm built hydraulic elevators as well as steam and would have bid for hydraulic elevators had it not been for mispresentations. Mr. Hill paid Hale & Co. 100 per cent. more for putting elevators in the Chicago custom house than they were paid for elevators for the county buildings in Chicago.

The committee adjourned until tomorrow morning when witnesses will be examined in regard to the sealing apparatus in the custom house.

KUKLUX AGAIN.

Some of Their Recent Operations in Geor

GAINESVILLE, Ga., July 30.—There are several vigilance committees, or what were know in after war times as Ku Klux Klans, in operation about here, on the line of the railroads. A colored man named Banks was visited and given a good beating because he had pushed a white lady off the railroad track. A negro woman was soundly whipped below Harmony Grove recently, and she said it was all because she did not keep her cotton clean. A negro boy also living near Harmony Grove was whipped and shot in the cheek because he made so much fuss. The parties perpetrating these outrages are unknown, but they embrace a good number. A case of the same kind was tried in the Pulliance Districts recently. Mr. John Haynes with travelling threshers stopped one night at the house of Elisha Smallwood. After going to bed they were aroused by men calling at the gate. Smallwood went out and talked with the party. He then came back into the house and lit a lamp. Three masked men then came in. Haynes said laughingly that they were a queer looking set of men. One of the party drew a pistol, presented it at Haynes, and, without speaking, motioned him to be quiet. The other two then went to a bed where a son of Mr. Haynes was lying, dragged him out into the yard and whipped him unmercifully. Smallwood and a man named Furgerson, living in White County, are bound over to the Hall County Superior Court, Smallwood being held as accessory before the fact. The others were not arrested. O'Donnell took passage here by Donald Currie & Co's mail steamship Kmifferms Castle, which left Diatroth on the 6th inst. for Cape Town, where she transferred her passengers who were destined to Port Elizabeth, Natal and other coast ports to steamer Melrose. The report of the shooting of Carey caused intense excitement in the west end of London and in the Commons.

Later advices about the killing of James Carey show hewas shot while landing from the Melrose at Port Elizabeth. O'Donnell, his slayer, is in custody.

It appears that O'Donnell dogged Carey from London and both sailed in the steamer Kmiffim's Castle.

The Daily Telegraph says the government have little doubt that Carey was followed from Dublin. They believe the Fenians had taken most elaborate measures to prevent his escape. According to the latest accounts the murder occurred at sea. Carey was not killed outright but died shortly after he was shot. O'Donnell surrendered himself quietly. He was placed in irons and handed over to the police when the Melrose arrived at Port Elizabeth.

Proceedings in Parliament.

In the Commons this afternoon Mr. Gladstone said that before any action was taken in regard to the second Suez Canal the House should have an opportunity of expressing its epinion on the subject. The government, he said, desired merchants and shippers to have ample time to consider the matter. The government do not intend an early renewal of negotiations as it is hopeless to consider the question fairly as long as it is entangled in politics.

In the Commons tonight Northcote moved negotiations relative to the Suez Canal she will decline to recognize any claim of the Suez Canal Company to such a monopoly as would exclude other undertakings designed for the purpose of opening a way between the Mediterranean and Red seas. The motion was received by the Tory members with loud cheers. Northcote begged for a calm discussion of the motion, which he said was not of a party character. He wished to do nothing to discredit the government, he only asked the House to express such an opinion as would relieve them from embarrassment arising from the practical recognition of the monopoly of the Suez Company by some member of the government.

Norwood (Liberal) offered an amendment declaring that it was undesirable to prejudice the action of the government and that the House declined to pass resolutions concerning further negotiations or proceedings in connec-tion with the canal.

Gladstone, amid great applause, cordially supported Norwood's amendment.

Northcote's motion was rejected and Mr. Norwood's motion in the nature of an amendment to the former, was adopted, 282 to 183.

CAPTAIN WEBB'S FATE.

Buffalo, N. Y., July 30 .- The post mor tem examination of the body of Capt. Webb, which was found near Lewiston ion Saturday, was made at Lockport yesterday. A dispatch from Lockport to the Express gives the following as the official finding of the examiners: "The examination was made this afternoan by Drs. Fdward Smith, of Lewiston; M. S. Lang, of Suspension Bridge, and C. N. Palmer of Lockport. They found the body in an active Lockport. They found the body in an active state of decomposition, but no bones were broken and none of the injuries except the wound three and one-half inches long in the cranium were sufficient to cause death. The cranium wound they decided was produced after death. All the blood presented a distinctly red color, showing that it was not deoxidized by asphyxia in drowning, but that death ensued prior to that condition. None of the characteristic symptons of death by drowning were present nor was there any local injury sufficient to cause death. It was therefore concluded that death resulted from the shock from the reactionary force of the water in the of contact. The shock was of sufficient intensity to paralyze the nerve centres, partially dessicate the muscular tissues, and forestal death by drowning. The conclusion was therefore reached that no living body can, or ever will, pass through the rapids alive. The river bed at the Whirlpool rapids is much narrowed and suddenly assumes great precipitancy. The water strikes the unyielding banks with great violence and by reaction meets with such resistance as to form in the centre a mountainous ridge of encroaching waters from 20 to 30 ous ridge of encroaching waters from 20 to 30 feet in height. Into this Capt. Webb was submerged after passing the first breaker, and instantly subjected to the immense pressure indicated upon his body. This caused his

Drummond of Portland. In the course of his address, according to the Lewiston Journal, he said:

We propose to put a constitutional prohibitory amendment into the State. It contains the prohibtory principle. There is no need to state it. The question that we are to discuss then is this principle in the constitution. No, that is not the question. We have gone past that. We have started to put it in. It has come where we must vote upon it. The question is as to votes. That is the question. I am here to talk as to your duties as to votes, not only to you men but to the women who direct and tell us how to vote.

I did—yes I will say something about it though I thought I wouldn't. I did hear doubts at the beginning as to whether this amendment was best. I thought that the question could safely be left to the people of the grand old State of Maine. I do not think it best now we are destined to have the battle. I think the time has been chosen none too early, none too late. It is a serious question to meet. If it is established now, it is established for all time, if lost then the work of twenty, thirty, forty years must be done over again. It is for me to say to every man with any regard for the church, for public morals or welfare for the best of everything to come forward and vote.

It is the cry that it is against the liberty of every citizen. It is said that men have certain inalienable rights against which we cannot legislate. It would be strange, wouldn't it, if man had an inalienable right to do wrong, perpetrate crime, lead their fellowmen into evil ways, degradation and ruln? It would seem very strange, but people have heard so much of the statement that they have nearly been led to believe it. Such is not the constitutional law. Man has liberty, it is true, against which we must not legislate. No man has a higher regard for that liberty of the constitution is so to do with our own property as not to injure the rights or property of others.

Is it not a license to do wrong. Our courts have said that our peop rendered for the State." When the cases come before Judge Bonney of Portland, he will say with all grace and snavity (because I think he likes to do it) "thirty days, sixty days, ninety days," to these various cases. For these various reasons, I think the struggle should be made. Another reason—I believe that this will have the tendency to take this principle out of the vortex of partisan politics, I believe I am not wrong in saying that the fealty of the average American citizen to his party, is greater than to bis religion. I hope to keep this out of the party. If one party adopts it the other will array against it. I want to see this question out of all parties.

Another trouble—the law was an experiment. It was built from principle, as is all common law. Common law was not made in a day. It is the growth of the daily needs of thousands of years almost. The prohibitory law has undergone numerous changes. It seemed to give it an air of instability. The principle has never been changed. The changes have been those of needs arising from the people itself. It is the principle that we want made permanent. I want the amendment adopted for that reason. We have thrown down the gauntiet in this fight. Be assured our enemies will take it up. We are to have the fight. If we go back it

We have thrown down the gauntiet in this fight. Be assured our enemies will take it up. We are to have the fight. If we go back it will be a failure. We are not to meet a mean foe. They will briog rum and money to defeat us. The question is one of victory or defeat. In my judgment if this amendment fails the next step wil be the attempted repeal of the prohibitory law itself. When the second Monday of September comes next year let every man consider what he will do and vote with the right. When that time comes there will man consider what he will do and vote with the right. When that time comes there will be listening ears all over the country. 'Tis a proud old saying of our own that "Maine leads the way." Let us in September send out, borne on every wind, scattered broadcast by the lightning flashes of the telegraph the glorious message, "Old Maine still leads the way."

Changes in New England Population.

The leading article in the August number of the Popular Science Monthly is by Dr. Nathan Allen, of Lowell, and relates to the changes going on in the population of New England. Dr. Allen has treated of this subject before, and his speculations have received attentive consideration from experts in social science at home and abroad. In this paper he does not advance any new theorles, but he brings to the support of his epinions some important new facts, in the nature of cumulative evidence supplied by the last national census.

At the beginning of this century New England contained a homogenous population, mostly engage in agricultural pursuits, living contentedly on their farms, in comformity with the natural and moral conditions of prosperity in the family relation, rearing a numerous progeny who contributed by their sturdy character, not less than by their industry, to the growth and prosperity of the New England Commonwealths. Within fifty years a great change has been wrought and the elements and causes of this change are succinctly set forth in the article before us.

The first cause referred to is the emigration from New England to other States. This emigration began early in the century and at first was chiefly to New York and Ohio. Later it helped to populate other States and has been a constant draft upon the New England population ever since. In 1840 the census reported nearly half a million natives of New England living in other States, and this number has been kept good ever since, the continued emigration more than repairing the losses by death. In 1870 the number of native New Englanders living in other States was 615,747, in 1880 it was 566,838; but in these later years the number unquestionably includes, many born in New England of foreign born parents. But there has been a great drain of the old New England stock, and the emigrants were naturally the more vigorous and enterprising of the

Then there has been a noteworthy interchange of population between the States. The last census reports 186,764 persons living in Massachusetts who were born in other New England States, and over $5,000 natives of Massachusetts living in these States. The significant feature of this exchange is the obvious drift away from agricultural occupations to manufacturing, mechanical, and clerical employments, the change from country, to town and city, life. The country towns remote from railroads, as is well known, are decreasing in population, and the number engaged in trades and transportation, in professional and personal sevvice, in manufactures and mechanics, increases relatively much faster than the number engaged in agriculture. Massachusetts has only one-tenth as many engaged in agriculture as are engaged in other pursuits while in Maine the proportion is one-third, and more persons in this State are engaged marked change in the physical character of the New England people.

England families. That there is such a decresse appears he thinks to the knowledge of all who are acquainted with New England ago and as they are now. Then large families of children were the rule, now they are rather the exception. Then several families in a neighborhood containing from 8 to 12 family with no children or with but one or two was unusual and considered unfortunate. Now the state of affairs is exactly reversed. Small families are the rule, large families the exception. Dr. Allen believes that this is owing to an unnatural and excessive development of the nervous system, at the expense of other powers and capacities, and that this excessive development is due to the changed occupations of the people.

The effect of the vast immigration of foreigners is next considered. Fifty years ago there were few foreign-born persons in the New England States, in 1830 there were only 9,620 in Masaachusetts. The whole number in the New England States according to the census of 1880 was 793,121, of whom over 860,000 came from Ireland. This does not include the children of foreigners. The foreign element, counting those born out of the country and their children born here, numbers at the present time Dr. Allen thinks, not less than 1,200,000 in New England or more than one fourth of the total population. The birth rate in the families of foreigners much exceeds that in the families of the native po, ulation, and he thinks that before many years have passed it will be true that three-fourths of all the births in New England will be credited to what it is not unfair to call the foreign element.

This is but a partial suminary of the important matters presented in this article of Dr. Allen's which has already received much attention from the press and from thoughtful minds, and is likely to cause a very serious discussion of New England ten-

IT is reported that one of the Texas ranchmen, Col. King, has sold his ranch and the cattle on it to a company of Englishmen for four million dollars. That is a considerable price for a farm and the stock on it; but Texas ranches are immense tracts of land and a grand scale is one of recent development well as of grain. Much of the money that has been invested in cattle raising has come from abroad, that being a variety of farming of large fortune in the older countries. Undoubtedly they are able to hold the vast tracts they purchase and they are interested in improving the breed of cattle for market purposes. The new methods of curing meat and preserving it make it comparatively unimportant where the slaughter-houses are essary that they should be established in close proximity to the consumers. OUR local columns contain a letter of Collector Dow to Surveyor Pullen and a statement by the Surveyor which will tend to allay any anxiety caused by the news that cargoes of rags, presumably infected with cholera germs are on the way to this city. The officers of the Treasury Department, from the Secretary down, show a commendable purpose to take prompt action with reference to the peril and to do whatever may be done to protect the country from the plague which is scourging Egypt. The Collector directs the Surveyor to notify the health officer of the city of the arrival of any dangerous cargo and not to allow the vessel containing it to come to any wharf or landing place within the city until that officer shall certify that the ship can discharge her cargo without danger. It remains now for the municipal authorities to be in readiness to do their part of the work with intelligence and energy. The first care, of course, must be for the public health and the next must be that no more than a necessary inconvenience is caused to trade.

"The Lounger" of the New York Tribune, who is George Alfred Townsend, reports the following conversation between himself and Mr. E. L. "The president of the National Association is Lucius Tuttle, of the Eastern Railroad, whom we think to be the rising man of that service, in this quarter at least." "Is the Eastern Railroad to be consolidated with the Boston & Maine?" "No; as a stock jobbing transaction to raise the price of the bonds, two of the largest operations of the largest operation." ators in the stock, under a permissive law, forced a vote to consolidate. But the measure did not produce the results expected on the stock market and legislative and legal interference will put off the consolidation for years. The decision made in Ohio s held to be a sound one in New England, that the ation of parallel lines is not right.

The Inside Bistory of Some Interesting Movements of an Earlier Day.

BY WILLIAM H. SMITH.

In the skeich of Hon. John Chandler lately published in the PRESS will be found s very bitter letter written by Maj. Gen. Hen_ ry Dearborn in regard to the standing of Gen. Morgan Lewis, of New York, as a military man. The cause of this bitterness was the fact that Gen. John Armstrong, an ex-United States Senator from New York and Secretary of War under Madison, had intrigued with Lewis during the attack upon Fort George, to get Gen. Dearborn retired from the command of the army of the United States, and at the same time try to injure the reputation of a brother officer of the same rank, viz., Chandler, who was at the time a prisoner of war in the hands of the British. This Lewis was the man who beat Aaron Burr in the race for the governorship of New York in 1804, after a bitter contest. in agriculture than in any other of the New | of which the result was the duel in which Engiand States. These changes in occupa-tion cause in the opinion of Dr. Allen a Alexander Hamilton lost his life at the hands of Burr. Lewis was a relative of Armstrong. Gen. He resided in that part of Pittsdecrease in the birth rate of the native New | ton that was afterward incorporated into the town of Gardiner. He was Secretary of War under Jefferson, and had been appointed Collector of Boston by Madison. He was families as they were fifty and sixty years an ardent Democrat and the personal friend of James Monroe.

When the war of 1812 broke out Madison personally solicited him to take the position of Major General, and as an inducement children each were not uncommon, and a and on account of the small amount of his worldly possessions, Madison appointed his son, Henry A. S. Dearborn, to succeed him as Collector. Gen. Dearborn was ill with a temporary sickness when the siege of Fort George took place, but such was the indomitable courage and endurance of the man that against the advice of his physician and staff, he was placed on horseback and super intended the embarkation of his troops. In the report of this affair, which was published in the papers of that date, Lewis represented him to be so sick as to be unable to take command again, and he also tried to injure General Chandler, whose father was a captain in Scammel's regiment in the revolutionary war when Gen. Dearborn was its major, and Gen. Chandler was a private under Dearborn when he was colonel. Gen. Chandler had married in the town of Nottingham a friend of Gen. Dearborn. They owned property in Monmouth, and were ardent Democrats in the same section of the State. Gen. Dearborn's friends alleged that the motive for this conduct of Lewis was to break down both of these men, and help his relative, Gen. Armstrong, who had the Presidential bee in his bonnet, to suceed Madison to the exclusion of Mohroe. Gen. Dearborn was relieved, and Armstrong, who hoped to have been made Lieutenant-General, had the direction of affairs, which ended in the capture of Washington, the burning of the capitol, and the expulsion of Armstrong from the Cabinet, which toppled over all of his political castles.

Gen. Dearborn was reinstated to his rank in the army and was to have led our forces to the attack upon Quebec, but the war ended and all military operations ceased. The letter of Lewis to Armstrong, containing the information that caused the trouble, may be found in the Eastern Argus of July 15, 1813. The proofs of Lewis's and Armstrong's intrigue are in the Argus of February 25th, 1817, and several succeeding numbers. If Neptune were near enough he would now be seen rising in the northeast about half past 11 o'clock in the evening. Saturn follows half an hour after midnight. Mars is only twenty minutes later. Jupiter puts in an appearance about a quarter after 3 o'clock in the morning, and Venus closes the list a half hour later. Shortly after 4 o'clock the planetary quartette may be seen making their shining way among the stars.

Mercury is evening star during the month, and presents but one feature of interest. He is in conjunction with Uranus on the 24th, at 10 o'clock in the morning, being nearly 1 degree south. As both planets are invisible, the event will have to be observed in the mind's eye. To those familiar with the movements of the planets the pictures visible to the eye of fancy are not always less enjoyable than those visible to the physical eye, while they possess this advantage that neither clouds nor sunshine can hide them from view. Mercury sets on the 1st at half past 7 o'clock in the evening; on the 31st he sets at twenty-two minutes past 7 o'clock. Uranus is evening star, and plods on his way uninterrupted by any event excepting his meeting with Mercury. The planetary kaleidoscope is not brilliant in coloring, nor abundant in variety as the August days roll on. But there is always August days roll on. But there is always interesting material to reward planetary study, even the record is comparatively uneventful. Those who rise in the small hours to behold the morning stars, note their devious steps among the hosts of heaven, and observe their near approach to the stars lying in the pathway, will bear testimony to the lovliness of the starry picture, admire the many phases taken on two or brother and loviness of the starry picture, admire the many phases taken on by our brother and sister planets, and be impressed with the power and wisdom of the Great Architect of Worlds who holds in place the planets and the swarming myriads of shining suns by the same universal law that rules the falling rain drops and the mist of the waterfall.—Providence Journal.

Saturday morning the hostler employed at Daniel F. Larrabee's stable, No. 61 India street, opened the stable office at 5 o'clock, and then went into the stable to take care of the horses. While he was gone some burglar entered the office and deliberately proceeded to work upon the safe which was locked, and of which Mr. Larrabee had the key, that gentleman being out of town. When the hostler returned, about an hour, he found the safe, which is an old fashioned pattern, had been hardly dealt with, the knob broken off and the door badly twisted and bent. The sum of $100 in eash had been abstracted, but jewelry had been left behind which had been placed in the safe for safety. The marshal was immediately notified and a team sent out of town for Mr. Larrebee, There is no clue to the burglar.

Yesterday afternoon Mrs. Mary F. Leighton who resides at Pride's Corner, about six miles from the city, went to Cumberland Mills to see about a house that she intended to purchase. Her husband and the hired mon stayed at home haying. The hay field is some distance off, but in sight of the house. Between 4 and 5 o'clock the hired man said to Mr. Leighton, "I guess Mrs. Leighton has got back, for I think I see somebody at the house." Mr. Leighton replied it was too early for her to get back as she had not been gone over an hour. When Mrs. Leighton went away she raised a rear window a little so if her husband or the man wished to enter the house they could, but locked the vari-Hadlock for piff. Frank for deft.

The Aroostook Murder. The North Star of Presque Isle gives the fol lowing account of the recent murder at Chap. man Plantation:

man Plantation:

In the southwest part of Chapman there have lived for some time one John Hanson, who came here from New Brunswick, and John Swanback, a German and soldier in the late war. Hanson was known here as a drunken, nolsy and profane man with a very ill temper. Swanback was generally supposed to be a somewhat quiet, inoffensive person, though some of his neighbors now claim that he also was cursed with a bad disposition. The two men, whose wives are sisters, had lived near each other and had had more or less trouble about line fences, the breaking in of cattle, difficulties not unusual with neighbors. Monday Swanback threw down some bars placed by Hanson across the highway, letting out the cattle of the latter, whereupon rianson took his gun, marched down to the fence to "maintain his rights." He was in a fury and threatened Swanback's life. The latter seeing Hanson armed, also took his gun and marched out to argue the matter that had caused the trouble. The talk was of that kind indulged in by infuriated men; the talk brought threats, when Hanson raised his gun, but Swanback being the quicker of the two fired, the ball entering near Hanson's heart and killing him instantly.

Sher.ff Barto visited the scene of the marder, arrested Swanback and brought him to this Real Estate Transfers.

PORTLAND GROCERS.

A Serious Blow Aimed at Portland Trade.

The wholesale grocers and flour dealers held their usual monthly meeting yesterday, at which a matter came up of great interest to Portland trade.

A grocer stated that he understood a bill would be offered to the New Hampshire Legislature requiring every traveling salesman to take out a license, every such license to cost $100 and to be non-transferable. The statement was made that such a law would prove a great blow to the trade of Maine and Massachusetts. This state does an immense trade with New Hampshire and especially the city of Portland. Such a tax would be almost a prohibition of this business. If a salesman fell sick his license could not be used by the man who took his place, and the same would be the case where a salesman went out of the business. Where a firm employed a number of salesmen the tax would be tremendous. It was said the Legislature of New Hampshire was composed for the most part of farmers who, it was feared, could not see what an injury they would do their own State by the passage of such a bill as well as other States.

Col. Higginson on Greek.

Col. Higginson publishes in the current number of the Woman's Journal an unusu ally spirited an 1 sprightly paper comment ing on the Phi Beta Kappa oration of Mr. Charles Francis Adams, Jr. Col. Higgin-

I did not hear Mr. Adams's oration, but have read it, an can find in it little that is new beyond that vivacity of manner, and that constant reference to personal experi-ence which we have learned to expect from this able writer. It is really rather hard to say anything new on the subject. When I left college, some 40 years ago, our class orator denounced Greek in a style very much like that of Mr. Adams. He was a youth of some talent, long since dead, who never showed inclination for any serious pursuit and wasted time enough in a year to have learned two or three languages; but he thought it a cruel grievance to have to study Greek. Mr. Adams's arguments ald little to those of the late Dr. Jacob Bigelow or of Prof. W. P. Anderson, made long ago; nor were these stronger than those arguments collected by Rev. F. W. Farrar under the name of "Essays on a Liberal Education," and published in England in 1868. The whole subject has been before the public for many years, and I do not propose to enter upon it here; having said freely what little I knew about it in essays called "A Plea for Culture" and "On an Old Latin Text Book." both published in the Atlantic Monthly, and afterward reprinted in a volume called "Atlantic Essays." The view resented in these papers was quite antago-istic to that of Mr. Adams. For all the English arguments on the subject I have some sympathy; since Greek and Latin still rule too largely in the English universities, especially at Oxford In America the sit-a ion is wholly different. For the greater part of our colleges Greek is not a requisite. There are few such institutions at the south and west, I think, where it is required for admission. At Harvard College for nearly half a century the modern languages have been placed on a level with the ancient in been placed on a level with the ancient in collegiate study and have been taught as faithfully. Since Mr. Adams rules out the general opinion and practice as mere superstition there is nothing to fall back upon but personal experience, which he makes his strong point. I graduated at Harvard 15 years before him: I was then not quite 18, but I had studied in college two ancient and three modern languages. Of course the knowledge attained of these was very inade quate. Mr. Adams would call it a "smattering," I should call it an excellent founda-I should call it an excellent foundation. The Latin and Greek have been a source of pleasure all my life; the molern cases out of three, to render the moderate colloquial command of foreign tongues a very easy thing. This seems to me to have been a mild, liberal and eminently have been a mild, liberal and eminently practical beginning in the way of education. Nor was there anything remarkable in my particular case, and I had contemporaries who made better use of their time, and therefore acquired more than I did. Why is not our experience entitled to count for something, as well as that of Mr. Adams? When I read his accounts of his early life, I am almost led to doubt whether we hoth graduated at the accounts of his early life, I am almost led to doubt whether we both graduated at the same college. Perhaps he was writing about Oxford. In view of the prolonged discussion about Greek, one fact is curious. When the present elective system was introduced at Harvard, it was the impression of the scientific professors that it would help their departments, at the expense of the classical. The fact has been the other way. Latin and Greek, in fair competition, have proved The fact has been the other way. Latin and Greek, in fair competition, have proved the most attractive after all. The reason seems to me very simple. People come to college not merely for scientific, but for literary training. Literary training implies training in language; the English language rests largely on the Latin and the Latin largely on the Greek. In studying language we go down to the Greek, as in building a house we dig the cellar. This as a mere matter of language; then as a matter mere matter of language; then as a matter of literature it happens that more of the masterpleces of the world's literature are in Greek than in any other language. This will doubtless be disputed by Mr. Adams. He thinks Goethe superior to any Greek author, but unluckily rules himself out of court as a witness by admitting that he has court as a witness by admitting that he has never properly learned German and has for-gotten Greek. Nevertheless, he has a right to his opinion; and there are those also who to his opinion; and there are those also who honestly believe that Mr. Palmer's American statues and the little groups of John Rogers are worth the whole body of Greek sculpture. The best test of this opinion is to visit an art museum and make the comparison.

He Knew His Gait.

In case of literature, the best test is at least

A Powerful Stumbling Block to Hogs.

Negroes are sometimes very careful not to say anything to injure the reputation of a neighbor. A gentleman stopped at a cabin where an old negro woman lived, and while waiting for one of the children to get a bucket of fresh water entered into conversation with her concerning the crop prospects. "I did hab fo' or five fine hogs," said the old woman, "but da's dwindled down till I ain't got but one now."
