From a letter dated March 22d, 1880, addressed to the Society's General Agent in Boston: "The Tontine dividend policy on the life of my son has just reached the dividend period, and I am astonished at the results. They are certainly much greater than I anticipated. Besides the insurance which has been carried on this life insurance which has been carried on this life during the past 10 years for the face value of the policy, he has now a return of 120 per cent. of premiums paid, in case of surrender of the policy, or a paid-up policy of 130 per cent. of the original amount issued." Another New England policy-holder writes:

"I take pleasure in recommending the Equitable Society and its Tontine system. My policy No. 42,077, on the Tontine plan, was taken by me April 12th, 1869. The results as shown in the acc panying statement are sufficient evidence of the profitable character of this class of insurance." Statement: Twenty-year Endowment policy for $2,500. Annual premium, $119.55. Total premiums paid during the Tontine period of eleven years, $1,315.05. years, $1,515.05.

Results: Present cash value of policy $1,540.44.

Present paid-up value $2,150. Or, the policy may be continued for nine years longer until the endowment matures, with an annual reduction almost extinguishing the premium: thus—

Another policy-holder writes to the Society' General Agent in Portland: "York, Maine, March 3d, 1880.
"I note with pleasure the result of my insurance by the Equitable Society under my Toutine policy, No. 49,919. I have paid $3,075.05, and for this you have carried an insurance of $5,000 on me for eleven years, and you now offer me cash $3,434.30, or $359.25 more than I have paid you. Souffers at life insurance should note these results and insure in the Equitable." These results will induce many desiring insurance to patronize the Equitable, a company already pre-eminently popular with the public.

The Double-Headed Convention-The Democratic and Greenback leaders who are working for fusion in this State have either come to the conclusion that the crowd at command isn't big enough for two conventions, or they fear that negotiations by telegraph cannot be safely managed.
Possibly the absurd Greenback hatred of the associated press as "a grasping monopoly," however, that the bargainers find some unexpected obstacles in the way of closing the contemplated trade and feel the necessity of having at hand a trained body of men who can do double service, and appear in either convention when a vote is to be taken or a great shout is needed to impress recal-

There is much opposition to fusion in both the Democratic and the Greenback ranks in Maine, and unless choked off it may find its voice in the conventions. The rout ast September and the conspiracy to steal the State which followed, disgusted many well meaning men with the corrupt coalition. Last winter they were loud in their denunciations of the unholy compact which sacrificed all moral and political principle to struggle to secure the spoils of office. They proclaimed that with their consent a combination should never again be entered into between organizations which had no forces not to further the success of the political and economic doctrines which they respectively professed or to promote the public interests, but to capture and divide official positions for which the public pay and which were established and are maintained for the public good. The purpose then formed has not been abandoned, and though the promoters of the coalition will probably succeed in controlling the two conventions, they will find it impossible to deliver the goods as by con-

A Stable of Manure, at 19 Green | party, but has loudly denied the fact. Now dlw* ity begin to bolt."

It is the fashion to unsparingly abuse Senator Kellogg, and those who know the least about him are the most unsparing in heir assaults. Senator Hoar, who does know, and who speaks with authority, took occasion in debate the other day to use these words: "I propose, Mr. President, to discuss legal and constitutional principles general and permanent in their application; but the personal attacks on Mr. Kellogg by the other side make it my duty to say that some years ago, in the performance of a duty assigned me by the House of Representatives. carefully investigated the complaints useful to students of Logic. made against his administration. I declare my belief that for wisdom, energy and integrity it is a conspicuous and honorable exception among the recent administrations of Lonisiana. He found her credit degraded and left it strong. He found her bonds selling at less than 25 cents on the dollar; he left them selling at more than 75 cents. He found the tax for State purposes alone at 211 mills on the dollar; he left a constitutional the debt." ver the canvass and makes the following gures: A statement approximating the acual division of the delegates on the quesion of the candidacy would be as follows: For Grant 267: Blaine, 261; Sherman, 72; Washburne, 12; Edmunds, 38. The States vet to elect and hear from are Alabama, with 20 delegates; Louisiana, 16; Minnesota, 10; Illinois, 42. If the delegations from Pennsylvania and New York should vote solidly or General Grant-of which there is not the slightest probability-he would have about 40 more votes than he is allowed above or a total of 307. He must obtain 68 additional delegates from the States still to choose, or he will not have a majority of the convention, even after giving him the whole vote of Pennsylvania and New York. Minnesota, one of the States that has not yet chosen delegates, will be against Grant and is expected to declare for Senator Windom. Blaine and Sherman are both expecting votes in Alabama and Louisiana, while Illinois is so evenly divided between Grant and anti-Grant that nobody can tell to ooses, including schools, at 142 mills on the dollar. Not a dollar was added to her pub-

THE Boston Advertiser thinks the only consistent thing the Illinois supporters of Mr. Washburne can now do is to "transfer their allegiance to General Grant." This is a remarkable proposition to advance. It is not true that the second choice of the Washburne men is the ex-President, or that because their personal preference is for Mr. Washburne they are bound to obey his wishes and vote for a man they do not want. In giving him their support they have not given him with it the authority to make a choice for them between other candidates. Mr. Washburne would probably be the last eturn.

Delegates will call for Convention tickets from heir respective stations except on Portland & Og "allegiance" to any of the gentlemen, who "allegiance" to any of the gentlemen who have been named in connection with the Chicago nomination.

Chicago is to be regretted. There was not the shadow of excuse for the bolt. The anti-Grant men had a majority of the delegates to the County Convention-two to one. There was no charge that they were not fairly elected. The only point made was that the minority should be given a portion about one-third) of the delegates to the State Convention. Down this way such a reuest would be considered unreasonable. The majority of a convention usually and roperly avail themselves of the full advanage their position gives them. For a mi ority to bolt because the fairly chosen maority will not forego this advantage is disereditable and disorganizing.

Boston Traveller: It may serve as estraining thought if every Grant, Blaine or erman boomer will remember every time e sits down to write that this world is full of scrap books, and that Mr. Tilden is a very sly old gentleman with a turn for liter-and Harriman got a thousand dollars apiece while the rest of the Greenbackers got cheated. They shouldn't be so eager to pool in two thousand dollars, nor so "fresh" as to believe it would be paid back. THE third-term men are disappointed at the loss of Nevada upon which they confidently counted. They expected delegates from West Virginia, too. THE Indianapolis Journal under its new proprietor, announces that it "will express no choice among Republican candidates until the choice of the party is made known." Fogg's Chronicle is making a vigorous fight in favor of Fogg's nomination to Con-

Recent Publications. Memoirs of Napoleon. By the Duchess l' Abrantes. (New York: D. Appleton and Co. Portland: Bailey and Noyes.) The impress eft upon the public mind by the memoirs of Madame de Rémusat, recetly published in his country, was exceeding'; strong and difered in many respects from that formed by istory and contemporary sketches of Napoeon and his court. The memoir showed the neaner traits of Napoleon, and the vanities of Josephine; the jealousies and schemes of the court were repugnant to the mind of Mme. de not blunted by the years that had elapsed since he memoir was first projected. It is with a noirs of Mme. Junot, Duchess d' Abrantes. She appears to have been a woman of sweetness and honesty of character, bright and energetic, and very charming with only enough vanity to know how to acquit herself gracefully at all times. Her memoirs are without bitternes and also without flattery. She admired the Emperor, and wrote of him with enthusiasm while she was not at all blinded to his faults. The very vivacity and naturalness of the me noirs attest their truthfulness

Madame Junot was descended from th Greek family of the Comneni, one of whom, Constantine, had settled in the island of Corsica; and her mother, Madame de Permon, was an intimate friend of Mme. Letitia Bonaparte. Thus Mme. Junot was able to give many particulars of the youth of Napoleon, and to draw comprehensive portrait of the emperor, from he obscure days of his childhood to the tragic nour of Waterloo.

Society presented curious scenes in those days; the episode of the rival beauties at Mme. de Permon's ball, seems incredible to this age of behavior-books. In this circle, General Junot, who, a young man had already won high favor with Napoleon, was one of the promi-nent figures; and the details of his marriage with Mlle. de Permon are exceedingly interesting. The Theory of Thought. By Noah K. Davis. (New York: Harper Brothers; Portland: Loring, Short & Harmon). This is a large volume containing a treatise on Logic by Prof. Davis of the Virginia University, It is, the author explains, not an elementary work in the sense of adaptation to immature minds, but simply as "it begins at the beginning, not taking any previous knowledge for granted." Part First is introductory, and concerns itself with definitions and rules: part second is of Concepts, third of Judgments, fourth of Reasoning, and fifth of Fallacies. It appears to be a carefully arranged work which will prove Certain Dangerous Tendencies in American Life, is the title of a volume of essays by an anonymous writer. (Boston: Houghton & Osgood; Portland: Loring, Short & Harmon). These papers are clear, practical and thoughtful, and show that the author has observed human nature in the only effective way by mixing freely among men. The Nationals, their Origin and their Aims, Three Typical Workingmen, Sincere Demagogy, etc., etc., give an restriction limiting the tax for all State puridea of the design of the volume, which is one to afford much food for thought and comment.

The nterest fund toward the payment of one inaim of the story is of course excellent; and the stalment of interest, and then repudiated plot, of the slightest, is so draped with the minor moralities and fringed with little pious plays on words, and so elaborately trimmed with simplicities that one hardly looks for it at all. The case is precisely this; those who already like Mrs. Whitney's stories will add this one to their favorite bookshelf; and those readers who somewhat resent her ingenious and injurious handling of the vocabulary, will not fail to credit her with the best of intentions. and some entertaining work.

Renan. THE CHURCH AND THE EPISCOPACY.

The Judaism of Peter and the Hellenism The first of M. Renan's Hibbert lectures delivered in St. George's Hall in London, described the difficulties which the Roman Empire encountered in the first century in dealing with religion. It became more and more evident that "Judaism under its Christian form" must prevail over dying Paganism. The Jew-

The first nucleus of Rsme's Jewish population had, in fact, been freedmen, mostly sprung from prisoners of war brought by Pompey from Jerusalem. They had clung to their religion in spite of their cruel bondage, and their synogogues at Rome had never broken off their relations with Jerusalem. The original colony had been reinforced by many emiand were started in life by their brethren as pedlars, or became adepts in the trade of begging. No Roman who respected himself ever set foot in the quarter, which was a sink of the most despised classes and the most disgusting Mr. SEWALL GOFF complains that Swan

well ordered synagogues, Bible studies, and lence, the bliss of resting with the just, helping the poor, purity of morals, the sweetness of domestic life, the cheerful acquiescence in death as a sleep, are the sentiments dwelt on with the same touching unction, humility and with the same touching unction, humility and sure hope as charactize the Christian epitaphs. There were born Jews who were men of the world, rich and apowerful, such as Tiberius Alexander, and the branch of the Herod family which settled and practiced their national religion at Rome.

A world of ideas was hatching in this longshore population, but was lost in the roar of the great city, and the proud patricians who promenaded the Aventine did not dream, when they deigned to look across the Tiber, what a future was preparing in those bovels at the foot of the Janiculum.

The second lecture has for its subject "The Legend of the Roman Church—Peter and Paul." It was as natural that Rome should hear of the gospel before the evangelization of the immediate provinces as that a towering peak should be gilded by the dawn much sooner than the valleys. Rome was the focus of the trade of the world, and the rendezvous of all eastern religions. About the year 50 A.

sooner than the valleys. Rome was the focus of the trade of the world, and the rendezvous of all eastern religions. About the year 50 A. D., Christian Jews from Syria entered the imperial city and communicated to their fellows the new faith that had made them happy. Nobody then thought that the founder of a new Empire, a second Romulus, was then lodging at the port on the straw. Others followed soon, and letters from Syria brought by the newcomers told of a movement which was incessantly spreading. A small group flocked together, everybody smelling of garlic, poor and dirty proletarians—these ancestors of the Roman prelacy—unknown, unmannered men, ciad in malodorous stable slops, with tainted breath, like that of ill-fed people. We know the names of a pious Jewish couple who were mixed up with these movements—Aquila, originally of Pontus, a tent-maker, like Paul, and Priscilla, his wife. They were the two most ancient members on the record of the Church of Rome, which, however, had all but forgotten them, and had shut them out from the Christian Pantheon. Legend, ever unjust, ever swayed by policy, had assigned the honor of the foundation of the Church of Rome to a name better befitting her proud pretensions. But we ought to see, not in St. Peter's, but in name better befitting her proud pretensions. But we ought to see, not in St. Peter's, but in the old Ghetto at the Porta Portese, the birthplace of Western Christendom. Some small chapel ought to have been reared to the two good Jews from Ponius who first syllabled upon the quays of Rome the name of Jesus. One main point to be noted was that the Church of Rome was not, like the churches of Asia Minardenia and Caraca plantal by Paul nor, Macedonia, and Greece, planted by Paul. It was a Jewish Christian foundation, directly sprung from the Church of Jerusalem, Here Paul would never be on his own ground; he Paul would never be on his own ground; he would see in this great church many weaknesses, which he would treat indulgently, but which could not fail to wound his exalted idealism. Attached to the circumcision and to the externalism, Ebionite in its taste for abstinences and in its doctrine, more Jewish than Christian as to the person and death of Jesus, as well as by the strong attachment to Millenarianism, the Church of Rome presented from its earliest days the essential characteristics which mark it throughout its long and marvellous history. A daughter of Jerusalem in the direct line, the Church of Rome would always bear an ascetic and sacerdotal stamp opposed to the Protestant tendency of Paul. Peter was always destined to be her real chief; and in the next place, inspired by the political

The lecturer spoke of St. Paul's arrival in Rome about the year 61, as a great event in the world's history, and then gave an elaborate account of what he called the profound divisions which already, in the first century from the foundation of Christianity, sundered the disciples of Jesus—so profound, he said, that all the differences which divided orthodox folks, heretics, schismatics, in our own days were as nothing compared with the dissentions between Peter and Paul. The views presented were those arrived at by the so-called Tübingen school of ecclesiastical history and theology. The church of Jerusalem refused communion to all uncircumcised called Tubingen school of ecclesiastical history and theology. The church of Jerusalem refused communion to all uncircumcised Christians, however pious. Paul, on the contrary, preached that to uphold the old law was to insult Jesus, as implying the insufficiency of His merits for the believer's justification. Jerusalem with its Bishop James, with which church Peter was in close alliance, sent out opposition missions to counterwork those of Paul. Peter, whose rôle in the Judaism party was that of a kind of timid trimmer between the Ebionite and Pauline extremes, came to Rome with some such intent, and seemingly not very long after Paul's arrival there. The question of St. Peter's connection with the church he is traditionally said to have founded was treated at large. At the Reformation the Protestants made a kind of dogma of the denial that he had ever been there, thus disthroning the Pope at once, who claimed the head leadership of Christendom as the lineal successor of St Peter. For himself and those like-minded with him, M. Renan said, the point was simply a curious question of history and with him was a founded.

successor of St Peter. For himself and those like-minded with him, M. Renan said, the point was simply a curious question of history and nothing more. For the Roman Catholic assumption of St. Peter's arrival at Rome in A. D. 42 and his pontificate there of 23 or 24 years, he proved in detail that there was no tangible evidence; while, to mention nothing else, the silence of Paul's epistle to the Romans, (written A. D. 58) and of the closing verses of the Acts were quite conclusive against it. On the other hand, he marshalled a powerful array of arguments for answering in the affirmative the question as to Peter's having visited Rome after Paul. Peter's martyrdom is attested by extremely ancient evidence, and the somewhat later tradition which connects it with the Neronian persecution at Rome has all antecedent probability in its favor.

M. Renan, after deploring the mystery which overhangs so many of the facts of primitive Christianity, addressed himself to penetrate, as far as possible the veil which hides from us the circunstances of the death of Paul and Peter. It would never, he said, be wholly pierced. The likliest view was that both perished in the grand massacre of the Christians ordained by Nero.

He described the fête of Nero's gardens on that 1st of August, a day which he could only compare with that of Golgotha, in sufficiently realistic detail. The event was one of the most solemn in the history of Christianity. After remarking that the solidity of a building is in proportion to the virtue, the sacrifices, the devotion deposited on the foundation stone, he

After remarking that the solidity of a building is in proportion to the virtue, the sacrifices, the devotion deposited on the foundation stone, he added that fanatics alone can found anything. Judaism lives on still, because of the intense frenzy of its prophets and annalists; Christianity, by means of its witnesses. Nero's orgy was the great baptism of blood, which marked out Rome, now the city of martyrs, as destined to play a signal part in the history of Christianity, and to be its second holy city. It was the taking possession of the Vatican hill by a kind offtriumphal procession unknown till then. The hateful and brainless emperor did not see that he was founding a new order of things, and was signing for the future a charter whose provisions would be a matter of claim at the end of 1800 years.

that he was founding a new order of things, and was signing for the future a charter whose provisions would be a matter of claim at the end of 1800 years.

The third lecture was devoted to showing in what manner the Jewish Christianity of Peter and the Hellenism of Paul were reconciled and combined. Rome became the center of ecclesiastical authority. The following description of Clement and of his work is instructive: Lost, as it were, in the penumbra of a very remote age, and reminding one of the head of an old worn out fresco by Giotto, still recognizable by its golden aureole and by some vague traits of a pure and sweet glory, Clement was one of the grand figures of nascent Christianity. Everything leads us to believe that Clement was of Jewish origin. He seems to have been born at Rome, of one of those Palestinian families, which for a generation or two had dwelt in the capital of the world. The extent of his knowledge in cosmography and history argues a pretty careful education. It was generally admitted that early in life he had been in personal relations with the apostles, especially with Peter, although, perhaps, we were without any very decisive proof as to this. What could not be doubted was the very high rank he held in the wholly spiritual hierarchy of the church at his time, and the unique authority he enjoyed. His approval carried the weight of law. All parties laid claim to it and were anxious to shelter themselves under his authority. Probably he was one of the most energetic agents of the great work which was then on the point of accomplishment—the posthumous reconciliation of Peter and Paul, and the fusion of the two parties without whose union Christ's work could not but have come to nothing. He was the first type of a pope presented in Christ's history. His lofty personality, made greater still by legend, was, next to that of Peter, the holiest image extant of primitive Christian Rome. His venerable countenance was for all following centuries that of a mild and grave law-giver, a perpetual sermon of submission and respect. Already the idea of a certain primacy of this church was coming to light. The right of warning other churches and settling their differences was yielded to it. Like privileges—so at least it was believed—had been accorded to Peter among the disciples. But a closer and closer bond of union between Peter and Rome was forming. Serious dissensions were rending forming. Serious dissensions were rending the Church of Corinth. The Roman Church was consulted as to these troubles, and an-swefed by an epistle which has been handed down to us. It bears no name, but one of the oldest Christian traditions attributes it to Clement.

The Roman church which spoke through Clement was that of order, of subordination, of rule. Its fundamental principle was humility, submission—worth more than the sublimest gifts. Clement's epistle was the first manifesto in the Christian church of the principle of authority. A great outery was raised some years ago about a saying of a French archbishop and senator, "My clergy is my regiment." Clement had said the same thing long before, as M. Renan proved by a striking quotation from his epistle. He went on to show that the history of the ecclestiastical heirarchy was the history of a threefold abdication. The faithful at large first handed over their powers to the presbyters, the pres-

The Art of Carving.

The complaint proverbially urged by incom though they had been subjected to a railway accident. The edge of the knife should be of preternaturally dangerous sharpness, and the fork must not have been used too persistently as an impromptu instrument for the extraction pointed prongs and keen-edged, flashing blades, are indispensable for good carving. Personally I have preference for buckhorn handles, silver-bound and clamped-the round forms slight curve, and rather rough surface common to them affording a grip and purchase absent from the ordinary straight bevel-edged ones of ivory and bone. Bearing these facts in mind. and remembering that for carving joints the handles of the knife and fork are to be short and the blades and prongs long, and that for game and poultry the very reverse of this is necessary, greater firmness of blade and point in the latter being requisite, little further need

First then for the sirloin, that noble and unequalled specimen of bovine production. The fillet or undercut from this joint being always better when eaten hot rather than cold, should claim the carver's first attention. It must be cut transversely into thick slices like a tongue; as also should be the fat at the thinner end, a portion of which should go with each slice of opposed to the Protestant tendency of Paul. Peter was always destined to be her real chief; and in the next place, inspired by the political and hierarchical genius of old Rome, she was to become a veritable New Jerusalem, the city of the pontificate, of hierarchical and rubrical religion, of material sacraments justifying of themselves, the city of ascetics after the type of the apostolic bishop of Jerusalem, James Obliam, with his horny knees and the high-priestly plate of gold upon his forehead. She would be the church of authority. For her the only proof of apostolic mission would be a letter signed by the aposteles. All the good and all the evil which the Church of Rome would do to the universal church. In vain did Paul write to her his fine epistle to expound to her the mystery of the cross of Jesus and of salvation by faith alone. She understood next to nothing of it. But Luther, fourteen centuries and a half afterward was to understand it, and to open a new era in the secular series of the alternate triumphs of Peter and Paul. lean from the thicker. Of course the joint

the joint, must of course, accompany every portion, as in the case of the fillet, and it should be remembered that these two sorts of fat are very dfferent in quality; the under, or fillet, being of a far more juicy, delicate and tender quality than the upper, especially when hot. The upper, however, accompanied as it is by the crackly edge of skin, if we choose to call it so, is exceedingly toothsome, with a flavor peculiarly its own, highly prized by the Briton.

call it so, is exceedingly toothsome, with a flavor peculiarly its own, highly prized by the Briton.

The ordinary plan of carving the sirloin, however, recommends itself to most housewives as the better, from the fact that lean and fat go together necessarily with each slice. It is generally advised that, before slices are cut, the point of the knife should be inserted a short distance between the meat and the bone, both of the chine (or short upright bone) and the rib (or long bone). Then the knife has but to be passed dextrously down the face of the meat, and each slice comes away easily and clean from the edges. Only, of course, those helped first in this instance get the brown or well-done outside, and those later on the underdone or juicy. Therefore it is always necessary for the carver, as an act of common civility to ask those whom he is helping whether their preference be for well or under done.

Slices of roast beef from the upper side cannot well be cut too thin, when carved in what I call the ordinary fashion, excepting, perhaps, the first, or outside slice, which admits, from its crispness, of having a little more substance. The joint should be kept perfectly straight upon the dish—that is to say, at right angles with the line of sight of the carver—for nothing looks worse or more awkward than for the meat to be twisted all awry; and in fact no real facility is afforded by doing so, for, if the carver of does but stretch his arms out far enough to bring his right hand and wrist well above the joint, he will find that by holding the knife almost perpendicularly, and cutting downward, he has, with the support from the fork, all the purchase necessary. On no account, either, may he stand up, set his arms akimbo, or bow his back; all the strength requisite can be exercised from his chair, by inclining the body sufficiently forward. The muscular exertion is seldom greater than most ladies can supply, and they should not be deterred by any slight sense of fatigue in the early days of their carving career their hands and wrists without in any way disfiguring them.

During all pauses in the carving, the knife and fork should be placed on the knife rests, and never thrust and left under the joint; nor while the carver adds gravy to the plate of meat in front of him, with the spoon in his right hand, is it well for him to hold both knife and fork in a bunch, as it were, in his left. To do this gives a slovernly, hasty, eating-house sort of effect to the process, especially if, at the same time, the dish be tilted with the left hand, for the easier filling of the spoon. This is always an inelegant proceeding, calculated to endanger the purity of the table-cloth, by the sluicing of the gravy over the edge of the dish, or, even worse, the capsizing of the joint itself. A carver can not be too careful never to make a mess; and if every dish has, as it should, a well, there is no excuse for his doing so. A tiny crust of bread put under one end of the dish to cant it a little, in the absence of a gravy well, is at the most all that can be pardoned in the way of disturbing the equilibrium of the dish.

If a portion of the garnish of horse-radish is to ga with each halning, it must be dispensed gray well, is at the most all that can be pardoned in the way of disturbing the equilibrium of the dish.

If a portion of the garnish of horse-radish is to go with each helping, it must be dispensed with the points of the fork. The gravy spoon should always be put in a vessel of hot water and placed at the right hand of the dish, up to the moment of using. So essential, too, are hot plates to a perfect condition of roast meat that a second plate for a second helping is strongly to be advocated; and for the same reason, though a dignified calm should characterize the carver's behavior, there should be, on the other hand, no approach to dawdling.

Attention to simple details like these distinguishes the good from the bad carver, and renders the execution of his task rather a graceful act than otherwise. In carving the sirloin and similar ribbed joints a too pliant blade is not desirable. When, however, we are dealing with a round of beef lying flat before us, or the boiled silver side, or a piece of roast so-called boned beef, the knife cannot well be too yielding, nor, again, the slices cut too thin. Never either omit with these sorts of joints, where one has to cut directly toward the fork, to raise its finger-guard, for, if the knife slip, it will run straight over the bow of the prongs, to the imminent peril of the carver's hand. For, of course, in manipulating a piece of meat with the surface to be cut lying uppermost, the left or fork hand is higher than the right or knife hand—nearly the reverse of the position necessary in carving a joint standing upright. In this case the knife is held nearly perpendicularly, the fork nearly horizontally—just, indeed, the contrary to the manner of using the tools for a flat joint. While referring to these latter I may go on to say that with the aitch-bone, as with the round of beef, it may be desirable to cut rather a thick slice from the outside before beginning to say that with the aitch-bone, as with the round of beef, it may be desirable to cut rather a thick slice from the outside before beginning to help; but the habit is wasteful and should be adopted with judgment. These are not difficult joints to carve, if it be remembered always that a knife with a thin pliant blade is absolutely necessary. Of course a delicate morsel of the fat must go with each serving. The brisket of beef is not a joint very usually to be met with; but it has its merits and has only to be cut neatly across the bones to prevent its having a jagged, untidy look on its reappearance at table. What has been said concerning the carving of the sirloin of theef applies in all respects to the carving of the ribs, except that those having no undercut the carver's task is thus rendered less diversified. The beef tongue must likewise be carved precisely upon the same principles as the sirboin, when the joint is cut transversely like its fillet; the fat at the root of the tongue, of course, not being overlooked.

Superior Court. BEFORE JUDGE BONNEY.

FRIDAY .- At the May term, 1878, John H. Godlard was indicted for a felonious assault upon one Charles Lambert. His counsel filed a demurrer to the indictment and Goddard furnished bail in the sum of $5000 for his appearance at court at the ext term after the decision should be received from the law court. The sureties were his mother Lydia L. Goddard, his sister Annie W. Thompson, and her

L. Goddard, his sister Annie W. Thompson, and her husband Albert Thompson. At or before the January term 1879, the decision of the law court was received adjudging the indictment good, and overruling the demurrer. Goddard was then sick and could not be brought into court for sentence, At the May term he did not appear and his bail was defaulted and scire facias ordered to issue. At the September term, 1879, a demurrer was filed to the writ of scire facias, which was overruled and the counsel for respondent excepted. This forenoon the exceptions were withdrawn and the sureties surrendered Goddard in court. His counsel, Hon. W. W. Thomas, Jr., thereupon filed a pardon of respondent by the Governor, and thereupon Goddard was discharged from custody. The sureties were also relieved upon payment of costs, which were paid.

Michael Lee paid a tine of $100 and costs taxed at $34.01 on a nuisance indictment.

Dennis Kelley paid $30 and costs taxed at 11.57 for a single sale.

State vs. Living L. Hill. Indicted at this term for obtairing goods by false pretences. The allegation in the indictment in substance is that the respondent wishing to purchase a horse of John L. told Best that he owned the farm he lived on, that there was no mortgage or encumbrance on it and nobody had the scratch of a pen against him; that thereupon Best, relying upon these statements, let him have the horse and took Hill's note on three months time; that the representations and state-ments by Hill were false in that at that time there were two mortgages upon the property, aggregating $1500, and some accumulated interest. Hill did not pay the note at maturity and is now in insolvency. Testimony for the government nearly concluded. Coombs, Co. Att'y, agency of Wm. Allen, Jr., has been promptly and satisfactorily adjusted, although quite a complicated affair. The loss was about $2,000. The trustees of the Agricultural Society decided to postpone the meeting, advertised to take place in this city yesterday, to the De Witt House, Lewiston next Monday, when they will decide where the State Fair shall be held for the next five years. The damage on the Halifax House on India

Allen, Jr., and $1500 in the Springfield, $1500 in the London Assurance and $1100 in the American Central at the agency of Prentiss A strange looking craft arrived near the head of Long Lake Wednesday. It was a flatoottomed boat, some 40 feet long by 20 feet beam, with tall mast and sails, a cabin and sleeping room, and a huge capstan. This unique vessel had come to draw the big boom of the Portland Star Match Company to Lake Sebago, and commenced operations Thursday. A boy living on Centre street jumped on a jigger belonging to Ira S.Clay yesterday morning. The driver was not noticing the affair.

Any one interested in machines for weaving textile fabrics will enjoy seeing a loom which is running at the factory of A. F. Cox & Son npon Union street in this city. It is for the purpose of weaving all classes of narrow goods such as silk ribbons or sashes, suspender webbing, shoe goring, wicking, belting, hose, furniture webbing, tapes, &c., of any width up to twelve inches. The first patent for this machine was taken out in 1871 by parties in Biddeford who devoted much time and money in their efforts to make a practical machine. In 1878 it was put into the hands of parties in Massachusetts who have brought it to its present state of perfection, and there have been a large number of them in use in a manufactory of elastic webbing for over a year, the party who first tested them now having nearly one hundred in use. They have shown that they will produce 75 to 100 per cent. more goods per weaver than the otherwise best looms in use, and they are very simple in construction. Their chief peculiarities are in the method of moving the shuttle positively, and in running each loom entirely independent of the rest, instead of in connection with from eighteen to twenty others, as is usually the case in making narrow waves. There are many minor details which go to make up the machine in its completeness, but it needs to be seen to be appreciated. There have been several patents taken since 1871 and we understand patents have been obtained in England, France and Germany. The intention of the owners of the patents, part of whom live in Portland, and part n Biddeford, is to organize a company for operating under their patents. We should advise any one interested in the business welfare of Portland and who desires to see her manufacturing industries promoted, to go and see the looms in operation, where they are now making wicking, suspender webbing and silk

The Grand Trunk

AN INTERVIEW WITH TRAFFIC MAN-AGER SERGEANT.

With a New Elevator Steamer Lines Assured all the Year Round. Yesterday morning a reporter for the PRESS called at the Falmouth Hotel upon Mr. L. J. Sergeant, general traffic manager of the Grand Trunk road, to make some inquiries in regard whether the stories were true as to the proposed removal of the offices from this city to

Mr. Sergeant said that at the present tir every effort was being made by the various Atantic ports to increase their terminal faciliies; that where the greatest advantages were offered there, naturally, business would tend. Montreal has been making great efforts to inrease her facilities of late, and there was every reason to believe that the debt incurred by her citizens for that purpose would be assumed by the Dominion government. There is an mmense amount of trade that must seek outets from the West, and that trade is increasing every day. Formerly, as is well known. the Grand Trunk lacked a link to put her into Chicago under her own control. Now that link has been supplied. The immense carrying trade afforded by the Grand Trunk, now the largest road in this country under one ownership-say 1,124 miles,-must have the greatest facilities for transacting its enormous ousiness. During the past winter, out of the 60,000 tons of freight carried by this road, 90 per cent. was shipped via Boston, and yet a very large business was done by this port, which would have been enormous if there had peen sufficient facilities. We have in Portland an elevator capable of holding 160,000 bushels of different kinds of grain. This elevator, at no one time, is filled to its full capacity, because the different kinds of grain have to be stored there, and there may be less of one kind on hand at one time than another, and the empty space cannot be filled by mixing the diferent kinds of grain in the different bins. With only this one elevator, with its small caacity, there have been from 1500 to 2000 cars f freight blocking the company's tracks and awaiting a chance to be put into the elevator, thus causing delay to shippers and to vessels,

Now, says Mr. Sergeant, the Boston merhants are alive to the necessities of the occaion. They are making great efforts to induce the business of the road to their city. Last winter, of the lines of steamers from that port, he Leyland, Warren, Allan and Cunard, the Grand Trunk supplied a very large proportion of the freight for the three first named lines. The Boston merchants see what is needed and they mean to secure the traffic if they can get it. Portland will always remain a port of the and productive of unnecessary expense to the Grand Trunk, but its business here will always be limited to the facilities afforded. If your nerchants do nothing the probabilities are that the Grand Trunk will simply ship from this port what they are compelled to. If your merchants choose to build up the city to twice its size by making it a great shipping port, attracting commercial attention hither, with a large, first-class line of steamships plying weekly to London, Liverpool, Glasgow, Bristol and other great cities, and a large freight line also running once a week-without considering a firstclass line of large iron built clipper ships-and these vessels running all the year round, then they should arrange to erect an elevator on the wharf opposite the Grand Trunk freight depot of a capacity of 500,000 bushels. Such an ele vator can be built for from $120,000 to $125, 000. The Grand Trunk would be willing to pay a rental for such an elevator. With that onstructed there would be no delays, no block-ng of tracks by cars waiting to be emptied.

Then there would be no waste of time to the western shippers, no demurrage for ships awaiting a chance to load, all of which expense t be borne by the Grand Trunk There is still another feature of the matter Of course the shipments of grain, canned neats-Morris & Co. of Chicago do all their ousiness by our line-and other freight form the bulk of the business, but the exportation of Western cattle (from which the Dominion government has removed its prohibition as regards their exportation through the Canadas) will now be very large, and where the grand depot of traffic of the road is, there the cattle traffic will surely follow. With such lines of steamers established here by the Grand Trunk as have just been mentioned, Western cattle shippers would have their cattle sheds located here for the stabling of the animals for several days before they were put aboard ship, making extensive cattle yards, with the employment of people to take care of the beasts. Mr. Sargent seemed to think that our grain aerchants took little interest in creating a trade with Europe and thus giving employment to steamers and railroads in shipping grain. He says that almost all of the business done here for some time in that respect is the Grand Trunk's own business. Any way, he says, if your merchants, at this time, fail to display enterprise then rest assured the golden opportunity will be improved by others. With such offers as Boston makes, and with the determination she evinces, she will secure her ends at an expense of thousands, where Portland has only to put out a dollar to gather the fruits of her own energy. Mr. Sergeant says that during the coming summer a new enterprise will be started here by the Grand Trunk, on a limited scale, the loading of clipper sailing ships for Europe with grain. He thinks it not impossible that the scheme of making Sydney, Cape Breton, a port of call will succeed, and says that already the Cape Breton merchants are working in the matter and have got out their circulars

We understand that Mr. Hickson, the man ager of the Grand Trunk, will visit Portland shortly, and may possibly be induced to address our merchants. Mr. Sergeant, Mr. Porteous and Mr. Harris left the city yesterday noon. The following table of distances from Chicago to Portland may prove interesting:

Gas and Water for the Public Offices.

Advices from New York state that Post naster James has received and accepted an offer from the Gas Light Company to supply gas at its own risk. Similar offers were accepted Wednesday by the postmasters of New Bedford, Newport and Portland, where the offices are in government buildings. The Boston Gas Light Company offered to supply the building on the same terms, and several merchants agreed to pay the bills in case the government failed to do so. Mr. Kennard did not feel justified in accepting the offer, and says that when his predecessor agreed to such a proposition under similar circumstances, a few years ago, Secretary Bristow took him sternly to task for compromising the dignity of the government in thus accepting as a charity what Congress was abundantly able to provide or. If it was proposed to bridge over such lifficulty whenever an obstinate or neglectful Congress failed to make the necessary provision for carrying on the work of the departnents of the government, then there appears o be no reason for the issuing of such orders as were sent to Mr. Kennard. A gentleman at the building very pertinently remarked that 'we are to have darkness in Boston in order that they may get light in Washington."

story house on the east corner of Free and Center streets, reminds me of the early history of that vicinity and its prominent proprietors. The seven acre lot through which Centre street was laid out in 1742 was a part of a grant to Rev. George Burroughs, the minister of to the proposed movements of the road, and the town, who came here in about 1674. He graduated at Harvard College in 1670,-the class numbered only four. The town built him a house on this lot, on that part near the head of Preble street. At the sack of the town by the Indians in 1676. Mr. Burroughs and the most of his people who escaped, sought refuge on Bangs' Island. After they had secured themselves hastily they sent a party in the night and obtained a barrel of powder from one of the deserted houses, which the Indians had not discovered. On the 12th of August, Mr. Burroughs wrote from their retreat to Henry Jocelyn of Block Point for aid. This letter was sent to Boston and on the 20th George Munjoy was sent in a vessel with provisions for their relief. High upon the rocky slope of Bangs' Island, between the spring and White Head, on the northern shore, is the remains of what appears to have been a hastily constructed wall of slate stone, like a breastwork for defence. This may be a "landmark' of Mr. Burroughs' fort. There is another similar collection of stone on the opposite shore of the Island, but there is no fresh water near

After the peace of 1678. Mr. Burroughs and most of his scattered flock returned to Casco. and in 1680 President Danforth, in the resettlement of the town, confirmed the title of the seven acres with his buildings to the minister: he declined to receive any more land. or to receive compensation for what had 'previously been Itaken by other settlers. John Skillings had a house below what is now India street, and Mr. Burroughs desired to be nearer the meeting house, which stood on the point where the Portland Company's works now are. In 1683 they exchanged homesteads, and Skillings became the owner of the Center street lot. Mr. Burroughs probably continued here in the ministry until the burning of the town by the French and Indians in 1690, when he returned to Massachusetts. His melancholy fate is well known: he was hanged at Salem for witchcraft in 1692, after being scrudewed on the most prepresent condemned on the most preposterous test

In 1732 John Skillings conveyed a part of the Burroughs seven acres to William Cotton, who came from Portsmouth. He was a tanner and had his yard at the junction of Fore and Cotton streets. The vats have been dug through to make a sewer within a few years. In 1742 Samuel Skillings, son of John, laid out Center street through his lot which he called Love Hane. It was accented by the out Center street through his lot which he called Love! Lane. It was accepted by the town the next year, and retained it name until 1812, when from its central situation it received its present name. Wm. Cotton finally became the owner of the most of the Burroughs lot. His daughter Sarah married first William Thomes in 1763, who built on the Cotton estate, the two story house now standing on the south corner of Free and Center streets. After the death of Thomes, his widow married Elisha Turner in 1774, and probably continued to live in her house which escaped Mowatt's burning in 1775. It was built about the time of Thomes' marriage (1763) and is now a substantial dwelling, and is one of the "landmarks." Wm. Cotton became one of the deacons of the first church and died in 1784 aged 85, and his estate was divided

On this lot in 1804, Cobb huilt the present three stern boyes. built the present three story house. He was a Quaker and well known as a housewright. He Quaker and well known as a honsewright. He lived successively in Falmouth, where he was born in 1775, Parsonsfield, Windham, and died in Portland in 1832 aged 57.

Dr. Aaron Porter came from Boxford, Mass., and settled at Biddeford in 1773. He was a physician and acquired a good practice. He foresaw the Revolutionary struggle and prepared for it. In 1830 he thus wrote: "Medicines already began to be scarce for none had been imported from the British for several months. Having a little credit in Boston, and a little cash on hand, I improved both to the extent of my power, and procured medicines enough of the best quality to last ten years. Thus stored and having no family to support, (and by the way matrimony was scared out of the land—few or none dared to undertake it,) the land—lew or none dared to undertake it,) I was placed in easy circumstances for that day at least." Three years later (1777) Dr. Porter did "undertake" matrimony with a daughter of Richard King of Scarborough, and sister to Gov. William King. They had twelve children, all born in Biddeford. In 1810 Dr. Porter removed to Portland, and took twelve children, all born in Biddeford. In 1810 Dr. Porter removed to Portland, and took the house on Federal street, which was subsequently owned by Capt. John Williams. The lot is now included in the Park. His advertisement carries us back to the time when there were no street lights. He says, "A lamp will be at the door for the accommodation of those who may call in the night."

In 1813 Dr. Porter purchased of Edward Cobb, the builder, the three story house mentioned above on the east corner of Free and Centre streets. For an office, he erected a one story building on the corner, where a new story building on the corner, where a new similar building has lately been built. Here Dr. Porter had a 'arge practice, until age dis-abled him. He died in this house suddenly and alone, in 1837, aged 85.

He was tenactous of his opinions, and was often engaged in litigation to his cost. In company with Mr. Hill of Saco, Dr. Porter owned the township of Porter, adjoining New Hampshire, which was incorporated in 1807 and took its name from him. The well-remembered and respected, shipmaster Rufus King Porter was his son. A daughter was the second wife of the celebrated Lyman Beecher. D. D.

In 1843 Henry Homes of Boston, who married a daughter of Dr. Porter, deeded the house and lot to J. Fitz Henry Mussey, who was then a lawyer at Standish. By his death in 1846, it became the property of his father, John Mussey, Esq., who, although he is now in his ninetieth year, daily superintends the repairs and alterations.

MAY DAY IN DEERING PARK.

A Pleasant Reminiscence.

A few days since while looking over the files of our city newspapers we became interested in reading the accounts of a May day festival which was held in what is now Deering Park, in 1839, forty-one years ago.

The pleasant exercises were carried out by nembers of the Female Grammar School No. 2, which was then located in the present school ouse on Spring, near State street, and presided over by Miss Mary K. Farrington. There was the coronation of a May Queen, with appropriate addresses made by the attendant naids of honor and replied to by the queen, in which happy compliments were given and returned. A May pole was erected on that clear space within the thickest portion of the trees, tround which the young girls danced and sang after the English style. Miss Hannah Noble was the May Queen, and one special reason why she was selected was because, in addition to her good scholarship, she bore a strong resemblance to Miss Jane Carruthers, a sister of Rev. Dr. Carruthers, who had then recently resigned the principalship of the school and to whom the girls were strongly attached. There were some two or three thousand people present on foot or in carriages, and so interesting was the occasion that on account of various circumstances a repetition was called for and given at our present old City Hall, then our only public hall, and this also was a still greater success. The papers state that the boys were somewhat unruly in "the oaks," and disturbed the exercises, a thing which would not be likely to occur now-a-days for (to say nothing of better police regulations) the manliness of our boys have improved, we opine, in forty years, for as one of the old boys we fear that there was not that intelligent regard for personal behavior that now happily characterizes the boys of this day. To the late Benjamin C. Fernald, then the worthy teacher of penmanship in our public schools, were the participants indebted for originating the agreeable occasion. Of the number who took part in that festival we may say with Longfellow: "Some are married, some are dead."

The May Queen herself, with several of her maids of honor, have "passed over the river," while others who survive are scattered widely apart, some in distant California and elsewhere, a few here perhaps, and all have experienced "the chances and changes of this mortal life."

Greel v Institute.

A large and appreciative audience filled the Congregational church at Cumberland Centre, last evening, to listen to the graduating exer cises of the class of '80, Greely Institute, and to witness the presentation of diplomas to the graduates. This institution, under the successful management of the principal, Mr. D. B. Fuller, assisted by Prof. S. K. Hitchings and Miss Clara A. Wilson, has enjoyed a very prosperous year. Mr. Fuller has 'the reputa tion of being a fine scholar and a successful teacher, and with Prof. Hitchings at the head of the scientific department this academy offers superior inducements to obtain a preparatory, or a thorough English and scientific

The graduating class, composed of three young gentlemen and three young ladies, showed the results of thoroughness of study in their orations and essays. There were many noble thoughts and ideas expressed by them that older and more experienced minds would have felt proud to have uttered, and all were imbued with a high moral tone and strong impassioned feeling that was highly commend-

Mr. E. B. Osgood's oration showed deep thought and study, and was delivered in a noble and impressive manner. He is a born orator. The oration of Mr. Roland H. Edward Warren on "What is true education. gave a good and careful digest of the subject, and pleased his listeners by an easy and quiet style of address. He was rewarded by a

The lady graduates, charmingly attired in white dresses, tastefully trimmed, had the sympathy and attention of the audience. Their essays were well chosen and interesting. Miss Annie M. Leighton showed clearly and scientifically the "evidence of design" in the "make up" and progress of this our earthy life. Miss Addie S. Dunn gave a pleasing picture of "Home life in Germany," a well written and prettily delivered piece. Miss Lena J. Pinkham in a strong and enthusiastic style adduced a lesson from the life of "Joan of Arc" that should be the "guiding star" of every young person standing on the "threshold of life. The Rev. T. S. Perry in presenting the diplo mas made it the occasion of some wise, well directed remarks that bore with them the stamp of genius as well as scholarship. The enjoyment of the evening's exercises was greatly enhanced by the presence of the Yarmouth Brass Band, under the directorship of Prof. E. A. Blanchard. They gave some very fine selections in their usual spirited and classical style.

The Hyers Sisters Combination commenced a week's engagement at the Gaiety last Monday evening in "Uncle Tom's Cabin." Previous to the play a new prologue, written by the authoress, was read, in which mention was made of the condition of the negro at the present time compared to what it was when the book was written. A nearlier feature of the play was written A peculiar feature of the play was the white characters being played by white actors and actresses, while the colored characters were represented by negroes. The play was handsomely presented on the stage, and the acting in the main was good. Mr. Sam Lucas gave an excellent presentation of Uncle Tom, showing that he can render the pathetic and sentimental as well as the humorous. The Phineas Fletcher of Mr. Edwin Wight was a fine piece of acting, and he received generous applause. Eva was beautifully presented by little Lottie Burke, and Miss Louisa E. Hyers was vigorously effective as Topsy. There was a small but excellent chorus, and some capital special plantation dancing and singing.

KENNEBEC COUNTY. One of the most extraordinary atmospheric phenomena occurred at China, Monday night. The night was calm and starlit. At a few minutes before 9 p. m., a moaning sound of a rising wind was heard, and sn inky crescent of cloud appeared in the north. As it cleared the horizon, extending from northwest to southeast, it assumed the exact form of the section of an eighth of an orange peed or of a ribbed of an eighth of an orange peel, or of a ribbed section of melon, the points being fixed east and west. Preserving this form it swept, borne by a rustling northeast wind, over the heavens, disappeairng in the south. This vast zone of darkness, moving at a tremendous speed, swept from horizon to zenith, spanned the sky and moved rapidly in an unbroken mass rapidly south, preserving its melon section intact.

Thereon the bidder passed and led
To where, apart from dust and glow,
They found a board with napery spread,
And gold, and glistering cups a-row.
"Eat," quoth the host, yet naught did show.
To whom his guest—"Thy board is wide,
But barren is the cheer, I trow.
—Where is thy feast, O Barmecide?" Bull's Baby Syrup. Price 25 cents a bottle.

"Eat"—quoth the man not less, and fed From meats unseen, and made as though He drank of wine both white and red. "Eat—ere the day to darkness grow. Short space and scant the Fates bestow!" What time his guest him wondering eyed, Muttering in wrath his beard below —"Where is thy feast, O Barmecide?" Time—'tis of thee they fable so.
Thou bidd'st us eat, and still denied,
Still fasting from thy board we go—
"Where is thy feast—O Barmeeide?"
—AUSTIN DOBSON, in Belgravia

A cow that wore a bell having been run over and killed on a railroad, the owner brought suit against the railroad, the owner brought suit against the railroad company for damages. It was proved that the engineer rang the bell and tried to frighten the cow off the track, but the farmer's lawyer also proved that the cow rang her bell and tried to frighten the engine off the track. and so the jury decided in his favor.—Port Jarvis Gazette.

An Old Doctor's Advice. It was this: "Trust in God and keep your bowels open." For this purpose many an old doctor has advised the habitually costive to take Kidney-Wort—for no other remedy so effectually overcomes this condition, and that without the distress and gripings which other medicines cause. It is a radical cure for piles. Don't fail to use it.

A Montreal paper prints Mr. Vennor's predictions for forty days, and the actual weather for the same, in parallel columns, and shows that he was correct, or nearly correct, five days out of the forty. And this is correct often enough for a weather prophet. We couldn't expect him to be correct forty days out of five. A man would have to devote a lifetime to the weather business before he could strike that high average.—Norristown Herald.

HUMORS OF THE BLOOD, SKIN, AND SCAL CUTICURA RESOLVENT is the most powerful Blood Purifier and Liver Stimulant ever compounded. In forty minutes after taking the first dose it may be detected in the saliva, blood, sweat, and urine, showing that it has entered the blood and been distributed throughout the entire system. In its passage through the circulating fluids its meets with the corrupt particles of matter which foster and maintain disease, with which it chemically unites, destroying and gradually eliminating them form the system. system.

Hence its power to forever expel Scrofulous, Cancerous, and Canker Humors, which unchecked fill the body with foul corruptions, and rot out the delicate machinery of Life.

CUTICURA, the great external remedy for all Humors of the Scalp and Skin, Ulcers, Sores and Discharging Wounds, is the most soothing and healing of outward applications. It speedily destroys fungus and parasitic growths, restores the oil glands and tubes to a healthy condition, and cures, when assisted by the CUTICURA SOAP, Diseases of the Skin and Scalp which have been the torture of a life time.

SKIN DISEASE.

Messrs. Weeks & Potter: Gentlemen,—Cuti-cura remedies have done me a power of good. I have been afflicted with skin disease for sixteen years. Some days it troubled me more than others, but at night the itching nearly drove me wild. I would scratch until the blood would run down my limbs. I would scratch until the blood would run down my limbs.

I have had several physicians. Some said they could cure me, but others said not.

I will say that before I used CUTICURA REMEDIES I was in a fearful state, and had given up all hope of ever having any relief.

But like a drowning man grasping at a straw, I thought I would try the CUTICURA REMEDIES, about which I had read so much.

They have performed a wonderful cure for me and of my own free will and accord I recommend them.

Yours truly,
